1706, to have been possessed of this estate, and resided at it. He devised it to his grandson Peter, son of Roger Omer, by his daughter Anne. After the Omers, it came into the name of Twyman, from which it was conveyed about 30 years ago by the Rev. Wheeler Twyman, and Mr. John Twyman, his brother, to Mr. Farrer, proctor of Dorset's Commons, who devised it at his death to his son Josias Fuller Farrer, esq; who sold it to his uncle William Fuller, esq; a proctor of the commons likewise, who dying in 1790, gave it to his wife Mary, since deceased, for her life, and afterwards back to his nephew, of whom he purchased it for his life, with remainder to his grand-nephew, Josias Fuller Farrer, jun. in fee; so that Josias Fuller Farrer, esq; the father, is become the present possessor of it. It was lately inhabited by Mr. Basil Browne, gent.

" yn

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

T H A N E T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

“ yn Tbanet a v myles upward fro Reculver, and “ there is a village and a peere for shyppes but “ now fore decayed;” which shews it to have been built many years before; and it seems to intimate, either that there were then no dues paid for the maintenance and preservation of it, or that the trade to it was so small, that those dues were not sufficient to keep it in repair. However this be, it is very certain that this pier was not then near so large as it is now, and that the lands in this island were not in such a state of cultivation as they have been of late years, and consequently the droits paid for corn shipped, by which it now chiefly subsists, were not near so much as they are now. In Q. Elizabeth's reign, it is certain this pier was maintained by certain rates, paid by corn and other merchandize shipped and landed in it, which rates were confirmed by the several Lord Wardens of the Cinque Ports, who have from time to time renewed and altered the decrees, made for the ordering of this little harbour, under the management of two pier-wardens and two deputies, who were to collect the droits or dues to it, and inspect and provide for the necessary support and repairs of it (u). But it appears, notwithstanding this care for the preservation of the pier, that through neglect of the persons employed, it by degrees fell still further to decay, infomuch, that in the year 1662, complaint was made to James, Duke of York, then Lord Warden and Admiral of the Cinque Ports, that this pier and harbour was much ru-

(u) The oldest of these decrees is dated Sept. 1615, and confirmed by Edward, Lord Zouch, Lord Warden, Chancellor and Admiral of the Cinque Ports. In these decrees or orders, it is said, that they have been usually confirmed by the Lord Wardens for the time being, and time out of mind used by the inhabitants of Margate and St. John's, in the island of Tbanet. In 1629, some new additions were made to these orders, &c. by Theophilus, Earl of Suffolk, Constable and Warden. They were again ratified and confirmed in 1694, by Henry, Viscount Sidney, Constable and Admiral of the Cinque Ports. By virtue of these orders, &c. two persons resident in Margate and St. John's, were every year chosen on May Day, to take care of this pier, by the name of Pier Wardens; and two others called Deputy Pier-Wardens. It is the office of these wardens and their deputies, to collect the droits, as they are called, or the monies due to the pier; of which they are to give an account to the parishioners, and their successors in this office, within 20 days after the choice of new Pier-Wardens. It is likewise the office of the Pier-Wardens to inspect and provide for the repairs of the pier; but they cannot make any new works above the value of 5l. without the consent of the inhabitants.

(v) The title of the Act is, to enable the Pier-Wardens of the town of Margate, more effectually to recover the antient and accustomed droits for the support and maintenance of the said pier. The preamble to the act recites, that the antient town of Margate had, time out of mind, had a pier and harbour very commodious, and of great benefit and advantage to the trade and navigation of this kingdom, in the preservation of ships and mariners in storms and strefs of weather, and from enemies in times of wars; and also very conve-inated and decayed, and that the monies formerly collected and received for the repairs of it, had not been duly improved for that purpose, and that for a long time past there had not been any due account given, or elections made of successive pier-wardens yearly, as by antient customs and orders of former Lord Wardens ought to be. This state of the pier and a supposition, which was generally believed, that the pier-wardens had no power to compel the payment of the droits, or barbour-dues, went forward from time to time, and seemed to threaten the entire ruin of it; which induced the pier-wardens and inhabitants at last, in the 11th year of K. George I, to petition Parliament for an act to enable them more effectually to recover the antient and accustomed droits, for the support and maintenance of the pier; which act passed accordingly that year (v). Under this act the pier was maintained till the year 1787, when an application to Parliament being intended for the improvement of the town of Margate, the rebuilding and improvement of the pier was applied for at the same time, and an Act of Parliament passed that year, anno 27 Geo. III, for that purpose, as well as for ascertaining, establishing and recovering, certain duties, in lieu of the antient and accustomed droits, for the support and maintenance of this pier. Since this the old wooden pier has begun to be new cased on both sides with stone, and the whole is now nearly finished. When this is compleated it will certainly add to the increase of the trade of nient for the exporting and importing many sorts of commodities. That the safety of the town of Margate, and of all the neighbouring country depending upon the preservation of this pier and harbour; there had been towards the maintenance and preservation of it, time immemorial, paid to the Pier-Wardens, or their deputies for the time being, certain droits, commonly called poundage, or lastage; and other rates or duties, which had been confirmed by the orders and decrees of the Lords Wardens of the Cinque Ports; without the due payment of which, this pier or harbour must inevitably fall to decay, to the utter ruin of the inhabitants of this town, and of all the neighbouring country, and to the great prejudice of the trade and navigation of the kingdom. Lastly, that it was necessary to make more effectual provision, as well for the recovery of the said droits, rates, and duties aforesaid, and for the enforcing of due payment of them, as for the better securing the said pier and harbour: It was therefore enacted, that the antient droits should be continued and paid, and that to this end the Pier-Wardens should chuse collectors, who should be allowed for their pains in the collecting of them, not exceeding one shilling and sixpence in the pound, and should give security for the same, and that their accounts should be yearly audited by the Pier-Wardens, with divers other regulations, powers, and penalties, for the better carrying forward of the same. Lastly, that all sums of money collected should be paid to the Pier-Wardens, to be laid out in repairing and improving the pier and harbour, and not applied to any other use; and that the Pier-Wardens should have power to prevent all annoyances in the harbour.

nearly

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

this place, and the general benefit of the inhabitants of Margate, and country contiguous to it (w).

The rates, according to which the droits for the maintenance of this pier are at present settled, as well by the late act, as by the Commissioners impowered so to do, are by much too long to be inserted here (x).

Most of the shipping trade, which was once pretty large, before the harbour was so much washed away by the sea, and the ships began to be built too large to lay up here, has been long since removed to London, where the few masters who continue to live here, lay up, victual, and refit their vessels; however, there are still some ships of burthen, which resort hither for the importation of coals from Newcastle and Sunderland; and of deals, timber, &c. from Memel and Riga; besides this, the exportation of corn and other product of the farms in this island is very considerable from this harbour, as is the quantity of goods of every sort from London, brought in daily by the hoys for the supply of the shops and other inhabitants of this place and neighbourhood; to which may be added the several passage-boats, or yachts, as they are now called, which are neatly fitted up with cabins and other accommodations, and sail every day to and from London, constantly freighted with passengers, baggage and other lading belonging to them; and the number of persons, which the inhabitants boast are carried to and from this place in the vessels yearly, is almost beyond a moderate credibility (y).

As the passage from England to Holland is reckoned the shortest from this place, many great personages have embarked here from time to time for the Continent. In particular, in K. James I.'s reign, the Electress Palatine, the King's son-in-law, with the Electress Elizabeth his wife, embarked from this place for Holland. In later times K. William III. often came hither in his way to and from Holland; K. George I. twice landed here; and K. George II. and Q. Caroline his consort, with the young Princesses, came (w) There is a view of the old pier of Margate, as in 1736, in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, plate xvi, p. 123.

(x) These rates are printed at large, in Hall's New Margate Guide.

(y) Viz. 18,000, on an average.

(z) An objection has been made to the sea-bathing here, that the fresh waters of the rivers Thames and Medway, mixing with those of the sea here, lessen the saltness of the latter; but this can have but little force, when it is considered, that the mouths of those rivers are at the distance of near 30 miles, and are both salt for nearly that distance from their mouths; and besides, the waters of those rivers do not run on the ebb-tide half way down to Margate road; before the tide at flood turns them back again. Another advantage peculiar to Margate is, its being a weather shore, first on shore and staid all night at this place; and that successful and victorious General John, the great Duke of Marlborough, chose this place for his embarking, and landing again to and from the several campaigns he made abroad.

THE TOWN of Margate was till of late years a poor inconsiderable fishing town, built for the most part in the valley adjoining to the harbour, the houses of which were in general mean and low; one dirty narrow lane, called King-street, having been the principal street of it. It does not seem ever to have been in any great repute for its fishery or trade; and this appears more fully from the return made on a survey, by order of Q. Elizabeth, in her 8th year, of the several maritime places in this county, in which it was returned, that there were in Margate, houses inhabited 108; persons lacking proper habitations 8; boats and other vessels 15, viz. eight of one tun, one of 2, one of 5, four of 18, one of 16; persons belonging to these boats, occupied in the carrying of grain and fishing, 60.

There was a market kept here as long ago as 1631, of which a return to Dover was made every month; but this seems not to have continued long, nor does it appear by what authority it was kept at all.

From this state of insignificance Margate rose unexpectedly, and that no long time since, to wealth and consequence, owing principally to the universal recommendation of sea-air and bathing; and the rage of the Londoners at the same time of spending their summer months at those watering places situated on the sea coast; and when it came to be known that the shore here was so well adapted to bathing, being an entire level and covered with the finest sand, which extends for several miles on each side the harbour, and the easy distance from the metropolis, with the conveniency of so frequent a passage by water, it gave Margate a preference before all others, to which the beauty and healthiness of it, and of the adjoining country, contributed still more (z).

This induced numbers of genteel people, during the greatest part of the summer; or in other words, the southerly winds, which generally prevail in that season, blow off from the land; by which means the sea is rendered perfectly smooth, and the water clear to a considerable depth; whereas most of the places on the sea-coast in the English channel, from the North Foreland to the Land's End, are on a lee-shore during the whole of that time, and are incommoded very much by those winds; for those grateful gales, which produce fine warm weather, and render the Margate shore smooth and pleasant, never fail on occasion at the same time a continual swell and surf of the sea on the south coast of England; which not only makes the water there foul and thick, but annoys, spatters, and frightens the bathers exceedingly.

among

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

T H A N E T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

among which were many of the nobility and persons of fashion, to resort to Margate, as well for bathing, as for pleasure; but the houses were far from being sufficient to receive this increase of inhabitants, nor were there proper places of accommodation for them; this brought hither numbers of adventurers in building; a new town was built to the southward of the old one, on the side of the hill nearer the church, and the old town too was greatly improved and increased; a large square was erected in the former, called Cecil-square, on one side of which is a large assembly-room, with a public hotel adjoining (a). In the contiguous field there was afterwards built another square, called Hawley-square, and an entire range of genteel houses from one end of it to the other, most of which command a fine and extensive prospect over the sea. Near the harbour there are several commodious bathing-rooms, out of which the bathers are driven in the machines, any depth along the sands into the sea, under the conduct of the guides; at the back of the machine is a door, through which the bathers descend a few steps into the water, and an umbrella of canvas dropping over, conceals them from the public view. Upwards of 30 of these machines are frequently employed until the time of high-water; their structure is at once simple and convenient, and the pleasure and advantage of bathing may be enjoyed in so private a manner, as to be consistent with the strictest delicacy. Benjamin Beale, a Quaker and inhabitant of this place, in the earliest time of its improvement, was the inventor of them; but, like other ingenious persons, his invention proved his own ruin, though numbers have since acquired an affluent support from the use of them.

Besides the benefit of sea-bathing at this place, there are, if warm bathing is thought necessary, close to the harbour, two salt-water baths, on a very good construction, which may be filled in a few minutes, and the water brought to any desire of heat with the greatest facility.

On the 21st of June 1792, the first stone of a general Sea-bathing Infirmary, situated in West

(a) The assembly room, which is supposed to be nearly as large as most in the kingdom, is finished with much taste and elegance. It is 87 feet long and 43 broad, of a proportionable height and richly ornamented; adjoining to it, are apartments for tea and cards; under which, on the ground floor, is a billiard and coffee room, which join the hotel, and a large piazza extends the whole length of the building. The number of subscribers names to these rooms in the season, amounts generally, as it is said, to more than a thousand.

(b) There was a good engraving of the inside of the library, from a drawing of Miss Keate's, by Mr. Malton, of Conduit-street, London.

(c) The grant was made to Francis Cobb and John

Sea-bath Bay, and for which a very large subscription had been raised, was laid by John Copeley Letson, of London, M. D. assisted by the Committees both of London and Margate, with much parade and ceremony.

Near the squares above-mentioned is a theatre, established by Act of Parliament in 1786, at the expence of upwards of 4000*l.* and a public library with contiguous rooms, built in an elegant and magnificent style (b).

Margate at first, from this great increase of inhabitants, was but ill supplied with provisions from the neighbouring country, which had not sufficient for the purpose, and even what they did supply was but very precarious; to obviate this, a grant of a public market was obtained in 1777, to be held weekly on a Wednesday and Saturday (c); so that now this place is exceedingly well supplied with butcher's meat, poultry, fish, and all sorts of vegetables; and to add still further improvements to this town, an Act of Parliament passed in the year 1787, for the paving, lighting, and otherwise improving it, which has been since carried into execution; thirty-four respectable parishioners being appointed to superintend this very useful and necessary business (d). And now the inhabitants of Margate thought their town of sufficient consequence, to throw off the yoke of dependency on the town and port of Dover, and to exempt themselves from the jurisdiction of it; for which purpose they petitioned the crown for a charter of incorporation, which was strongly opposed by the town and port of Dover; and on a hearing of the merits of the petition, on April 26, 1785, before the King's Attorney-General, though he agreed that this town stood in need of a more regular police, yet he disapproved of the matter in question, and observed to them, if they persisted in their present mode, they had still the power of applying to Parliament, and recommended to their attention certain propositions previous to such application, to be taken into their consideration, and after their return and consulting their friends, they would at their own time, acquaint him with their determination; but this so far discouraged

Baker, gent. wardens of the pier, and their successors; to be holden in the town of Margate, for buying and selling corn, grain, flour, flesh, fish, poultry, butter, eggs, fruit, vegetables, and other provisions.

(d) The application to Parliament was, as well for rebuilding the pier of Margate, and for supporting and maintaining it, as for widening, paving, repairing, cleaning, lighting and watching the streets, lanes, highways, and public passages in the town of Margate and parish of St. John the Baptist, in the Isle of Thanet; and for settling the rates of porters, chairmen, carters, and carmen, within the said town; and for preventing encroachments, nuisances and annoyances therein; for which purposes the act passed accordingly that year.

them

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

them from the further prosecution of a charter, that all further intentions of it from that time fell to the ground.

The parish church too, from this great increase of inhabitants, especially during the summer months, was found insufficient, though a large building, to contain hardly more than one-half of them; the inconvenience of which induced the inhabitants, with the approbation of his Grace the Archbishop and the Vicar of this parish, in 1790, to petition Parliament for leave to build a chapel of ease within this borough, and an Act accordingly passed for that purpose that year.

In Love-lane, adjoining to the market, the Baptists have a meeting-house, to which there belongs in summer a numerous congregation; and in the middle of the north side of Hawley-square is a chapel, for the followers of the late Mr. Wesley.

A little above the old town northward, adjoining to the sea, is a small piece of ground, called the Fort, being formerly put to that use, and maintained at the parish charge; there was a large deep ditch on the land side of it next the town; at its entrance towards the east was a strong gate, which was kept locked to preserve the ordnance, arms, and ammunition; for here were two brass cannon, bought and repaired by the parish; here was likewise a watch-house; a gunner was appointed by Government, with a salary of 20*l.* per ann. and a flag hoisted upon occasion; and there were sent hither from the Tower, 10 or 12 pieces of ordnance, with carriages. This was not only a great safeguard to the town, but a means of preserving merchant ships going round the North Foreland and the Downs, from the enemy's privateers, which often lurk hereabouts, and being hidden behind the land, surprise ships sailing that way. But this appointment of a gunner has been for some time discontinued; the gate at the entrance of the port has been taken away, and the ditch has been converted into a small square of houses.

(e) Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 134 et seq.

(f) The fish generally caught here are skait, wraiths, small cod, haddock, turbot, whittings, soles, and other flat fish; mackerel and herrings in their seasons; lobsters, pungers, oysters, and other shell-fish; and likewise eels, of which, as old fishermen have asserted, such plenty has been caught here formerly, that they used to be measured by the bushel, but for these many years past they have been very scarce; the reason of this, perhaps, may be the great use that has been made for some years of the sea-wool hereabouts, not only in taking up such of it as is cast up by the sea to mix with the dung or lay on the land, but stripping the rocks of it, to burn and make kelp, of which notice has been already taken above, (a) by which the shelter and food of these fish and others of the like nature, which lie near the shore, were taken away; of which there was a complaint made to the Lord Warden so long ago as

(a) See p. 292.

Several pieces of ordnance are however still remaining, but they are in a state of no use.

On the opposite hill north-eastward of the new town, is built another hamlet of houses, called usually Hooper's Hill, on which there is a curious horizontal windmill, erected by Captain Hooper, for the purpose of grinding corn, upon a very large scale, and of such excellent mechanism as to render it worthy the inspection of the curious.

There was a branch of trade, that of malting; which was formerly so large, that there were about 40 malting houses in this parish; but this trade is now almost wholly gone to decay here, as it has been for several years throughout all the neighbouring country.

The hanging and drying of herrings has formerly been of great use to the poor of this town, a great many of whom were employed in the season, to wash, salt, spit, and hang them. But this trade would have been much more beneficial to the place, had these herrings been caught by the inhabitants, for then there would have been more employment for the poor, many of whom had little to do, but in spinning and twisting of twine to make nets with, and the knitting of nets, &c. But this fishery here has long since gone so much to decay, that those who depended on it were forced to sell their large boats, or let them run out; after which, those in which they fished were so small, that they dared not go out far to sea in them, nor venture out of the pier in a fresh gale of wind (e); of late years the affluence of the strangers resorting hither has diffused a general state of depravity and idleness throughout the poorer inhabitants of this place; and the fishermen who go out are but very few, who catch their fish merely to supply the luxury of the wealthy, to whom they sell their fish, with much sauciness, at a most extravagant rate (f).

Here is an establishment of the customs, under a surveyor, searcher, and other inferior officers.

the 35th of Elizabeth: That by the burning and taking up the sea-weed, the inhabitants of this island were annoyed in their health, and greatly hindered in their fishing; in consequence of which, a warrant was granted to the deputies of the mayors of Dover and Sandwich, to forbid and restrain the taking up and burning the sea-wool within the Isle of Thanet, by any one whatsoever; but this warrant seems not to have been regarded, perhaps from an insufficiency of the power of the Lord Warden to pursue the execution of it; and the same custom of taking it away at the free will of those who have a right so to do, has continued (and indeed there can be no reason why it should not) to the present time. The first Lord Conyngham, as lord of Minster manor, brought an action against the inhabitants of the part of the island within that manor, for taking away this sea-wool from the shore without his licence; which claim was tried at the county assizes, but his lordship failed in the establishment of it.

Among

Among the other improvements at this place, the schools ought not to be forgotten; there are two for young ladies, and two for young gentlemen, besides a private seminary, lately established by a clergyman; and a charity school has been not long ago instituted, for the education of 40 boys and an equal number of girls, supported by the voluntary subscriptions of the inhabitants, and much assisted by the liberal donations of the nobility and gentry, who resort hither in the summer.

Two fairs are kept here, one on June 14th, and the other on August 24th, yearly.

From the exposed situation of Margate to the north and east, it has frequently suffered by tempests and storms, setting in to the land from those quarters (g), particularly in the years 1755, 1763, and 1767, when great damage was done to the ships within the pier, and to the houses near the harbour, which from the force of the sea and its impetuosity were almost demolished.

In the summer of the year 1788, a female beaked whale came on shore at Margate; it was 27 feet in length, and in girth 17 feet. Mr. Hunter, surgeon, of this place, in dissecting the head of this fish, discovered four teeth just penetrating the gums in the lower jaw, which led him to conjecture that it had scarcely attained half its growth, and that its common length might be, when full grown, at least 60 feet.

ANTIQUITIES.

Between the hamlet of Garling and the sea, there were found in the year 1724, in digging a sea-gate, or way through the cliff into the sea, to fetch up sea-ooze, or woofe, for the manure of the land, 27 several instruments, lying all together, about two feet under ground; which makes it rather strange, that they were not before that time discovered by the plough. They were of mixed brass, or what is usually called pot or bell-metal, of several sizes and somewhat different shapes,

(g) The town and harbour of Margate are situated so directly open to the northern ocean, that a vessel taking her departure from thence and steering her course north half east, would hit no land till she came on the coast of Greenland, in the lat. of 75° north, after having run 1380 miles.

(b) Viz. in Spain, France, and at Herculaneum, in Italy.

(i) Antiq. Explique, tom. iii, p. 339. Count Caylas, in his antiquities, observes, that these instruments with and without rings are common in France, and are called Gallia Hatchets; he is for referring them to domestic use, as chisels with handles fitted into them perpendicularly; but observes, that whether employed for domestic use or military purposes, they cannot be of much service for want of strength. Ibid. p. 318, 321, 333. Montfaucon likewise observes, that the metal of which these instruments are made, seems not hard enough for such work; though the ancients used some kind of temper by which they made but both sides alike; the largest of them seven inches 1-quarter long, and 2 inches 3-quarters broad at the bottom; the lesser ones, were five inches in length, and two inches and one-half in breadth at the bottom; two of them had rings on one side about the middle, which was the thickest or deepest part. These instruments are usually called celts, and have been found in great numbers in various parts of this island, as well as on the Continent (b), and our learned antiquaries have differed much in opinion to what uses they were designed, though they seem to agree that they are either Roman or British; most probably the former. The learned Montfaucon has described that among them with a ring, among the Roman tools of building, and is of opinion that it was a chisel, with which they used to cut or hew stones (i). Mr. Hearne, after several arguments to prove that they were not military weapons, agrees in the same opinion (k), as does Dr. Borlase, which is in some measure corroborated by there having been one found in Herculaneum (l); and the latter thinks they were offensive weapons originally, indeed of British invention and fabric, but afterwards improved and used by the provincial Romans, as well as Britons (m). Mr. Thoresby supposes them to have been the heads of spears of the civilized Britons (n), and Mr. Whitaker that they were the heads of light battle-axes (o); and Mr. Gordon, in his Itinerar: Septentrional, p. 117, seems to have fancied them a kind of Roman securis or axe.

Again it has been conjectured with some probability, by a learned and ingenious gentleman, that these instruments were chisels of the Roman soldiers, with which they used to sharpen the stakes, called sudes and valli, which were a part of their travelling baggage, sarcina, since they used them in their daily encampments (p); and that as every soldier must have had one or more of them, this might be the reason why so many of them are found, at various periods, in different places (q).

Lastly, Dr. Stukeley ever druidical, undertakes brass as hard as iron; but, says Mr. Lewis in his History of Thanet, it was but viewing these tools, if such they were, found here, with some attention, to be satisfied that the metal of which they were made, though somewhat harder than common brass, was not so hard as iron, nor yet hard enough to hew any stone that was not soft and easy to be cut.

(k) Appendix to vol. i. of Leland's Itin.

(l) Count de Caylas Recueil d'antiquites, vol. ii, p. 318.

(m) Antiquities of Cornwall.

(n) Letter to Mr. Hearne in the appendix to the 1st vol. of Leland's Itin.

(o) Hist. of Manchester, p. 14.

(p) See Vegetrii de re militari, lib. i. c. 24, lib. iii, c. 8.

(q) Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 137.

takes

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

as usual, to shew that these brass cast instruments, called Celts, were British, and belonging to the Druids; that they were fixed occasionally on the end of their staves to cut off the boughs of oak and mistletoe; but that when not made use of for these purposes, they put them into their pouches, or hung them to their girdles by a little ring or loop.

See Mr. Lort's observations on Celts, printed in the Archæologia, vol. v, p. 106, where there are four plates of different kinds of Celts, found in various places, and one of these found here in Lewis's History of Thanet, p. 137.

At the beginning of the year 1791, as some labourers were digging to lay the foundation of three new houses behind the charity-school in Margate, about two feet below the surface they found the remains of several bodies, which were interred in graves hewn out of the solid chalk, and lay in the direction of north and south. None of the graves were more than six feet long. In one of the graves was found a coin, having on one side a head crowned, and on the reverse the figure of a man in a running attitude, having a lance in his right hand, the inscription not legible; but was found to be a coin of Probus. At the same time there were found a sword and a scabbard, both much decayed. The bones were found very entire, but on being exposed to the air soon crumbled into dust; and another coin was picked up at the same time in excellent preservation, a coin of Maximianus, having his head, and round it IMP. MAXIMIANUS, S. P. F. AVG. On the reverse, the figure of Jupiter standing, having in his right hand the thunder-bolt, and in his left a spear, JOVI CONSERVAT AVG. and underneath, XXI r. a compliment to the 21st legion; and not long afterwards there was found a coin, in good preservation, of Helena, the first wife of Constantius; on one side her head, with this inscription, FL. HELENA AUGUSTA, and on the other side, REIPUBLICÆ SECURITAS, found a female figure.

In May 1792, as some workmen were sinking a cellar; in one of the graves adjoining to the above they found a small Roman urn, the figure of which is here inserted, it was filled with ashes, but no bones or other remains were discovered beside it.

(r) As it was then usual in populous towns, to celebrate the anniversaries of their churches dedication with an accustomed fair, so even in the most private parishes were these yearly solemnities observed with feasting, and a great concourse of people; some poor remains of which are still continued in many of the parishes in this island under the name of fairs, which sr Henry Spelman supposes was first occasioned by the resorting of people to such a particular place for solemnizing some festival, and especially the feast of the church's dedication, or the wake; and that there-

CHARITIES.

Ethelred Barrowe, by her will proved in 1513, ordered her executor Wm Curlyng to maintain a yearly give-all, while the world endured, viz. every year a quarter of malt and six bushels of wheat and victual according thereto; to maintain this, a purchase was made of 15 acres and an half, and half a yard of land, with all appurtenances, lying at a place called Northdown in this parish; which is invested in trustees, and called by the name of St. James's land. This is one instance of the donations made to churches, for the more solemn celebration of the wake or feast of the church's dedication, or at least of some chancel in it; thus in this parish there used to be kept what the inhabitants called a fair, on St. John Baptist's day, the saint to which the church was dedicated (r); but I suppose there being no such fair on St. James's day, to whom the north chancel of this church is dedicated, or no provision made for the celebration of it, the testator, Ethelred Barrowe, ordered her executor to provide for an annual feast for ever on that day, which is still observed at a place in this parish, called Northdowne, and by the country people called Northdowne fair; only instead of a give-all, or a common feast for all goers and comers, the corn and meat are by the seoffees distributed to poor house-keepers. She likewise ordered by her will, that what money was left of hers, after her legacies paid, should be bestowed on repairing the chancel of St. James in the church of St. John (s).

Thomas Toddy, by his will proved in 1566, gave 30l. to purchase so much land as could be fore the word fair is derived from the Latin word serie, or bolyday. Thus in the next parish of St. Peter are still kept two fairs, one on St. Peter's Day, the saint to which the church is dedicated; the other on Lady Day, to whom the north chancel is dedicated by the name of our Lady of Pity.

(s) All these wills relating to this and the following charities, or extracts of them so far as relates to the charitable devises, are printed in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, col. No. xxxvii et seq.

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

. T H A N E T .

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

bought for that money, which land was to be let out for rent to the most value; and the same rent yearly, for evermore, to be distributed, dealt, and given unto the most poor and needy of this parish. Accordingly with this money were purchased 13 acres of land, lying at a place in this parish called Crowe-hill, which is invested in trustees.

John Allen, of Drapers in this parish, by his will proved in 1594, gave for ever, to be distributed to the poorest people of this parish, on Sbrove Tuesday, 200 of Winchester billets, and 2 bushels of wheat, to be baked into bread at the place aforesaid.

——— Johnson gave out of his farm at Garlinge, in this parish, (since given to Botblem hospital in London;) the sum of 6s. 8d. to be paid yearly to the churchwardens of this parish; of which 6s. to be distributed by them in time of Lent, to the poorest of the parish, and 8d. to be divided betwixt themselves.

Henry Sandford, by his will proved in 1626, gave to the poor people of this parish every Sunday or Sabbath day throughout the year, sixpenny worth of good bread, to be distributed by the discretion of the churchwardens and overseers, where most need should be.

Francis Buller, esq; of Kingston upon Thames in the co. of Surry, gave to this parish several tenements and half an acre of land, lying at Church-hill, the rents of which to be laid out by the seoffees, in binding poor boys apprentices to some sea-faring employment.

Michael Yoakley, born in this parish, by his will proved in 1707, endowed an hospital, or alms-house, the building of which was erected in the year 1709, at a place called Drapers, about three-quarters of a mile from Margate, whence it is called Draper's Hospital; consisting of ten dwellings, one of which is appropriated for an overseer, and the others for such poor men and women as are natives or inhabitants of the four parishes of St. John, St. Peter, Birchington, and Achal; who were to have warm gowns or coats of shepherd's gray for outward garments, firing, and a weekly allowance at the discretion of the trustees; which injunction is altered by the trustees, and each have now only an allowance of coals, a yearly stipend, and each a slip of ground for a garden. This institution being intended for the relief of indigence, not for the encouragement of idleness, the founder has in his will specified the qualifications of such as should be admitted (t); industrious, and of a meek, humble and quiet spirit (u). The stipend given by the founder being found not so fully adequate to his charitable intentions as formerly; owing to the increase in the price of provisions at this place, George Keate, esq; whose benevolence is too well known to stand in need of any encomium here, who usually visits this place every summer, has for several years promoted a subscription among the company, by which a considerable addition had been made to the comforts and conveniency of these poor people.

(t) In the middle of the building is a meeting-house for the people called Quakers, of which persuasion the paupers were to be, though that is not now particularly required, so that they otherwise answer the donor's description.

(u) Over the middle doors in each front is placed a square white marble, wherein, according to the directions of the founder, is cut the following inscription, to which he refers in his will, as containing the conditions and qualifications of the poor persons to be admitted into this alms-house.

At a place called Frog-hill, are two small cottages belonging to the parish, built on the waste of the manor of Dene, which was purchased of Alexander Norwood, esq; Lord of it in the year 1641, by Christopher Frenchbourn, who growing necessitous, in 1662, for a yearly pension paid to himself and his wife during their lives sold this land, containing four perches and an half, to the churchwardens, &c. of this parish.

The donation of 9 loaves and 18 herrings to 6 poor persons yearly, on Midlent Sunday; and of two yards of blanket to three poor persons, all of this parish, yearly, from Salmanstone Grange, has been already fully mentioned above, and is still continued.

DONATIONS TO THE CHURCH.

Mrs. Sarah Petit, relict of Capt. John Petit, of Dandelion, in 1720, gave 146l. towards the providing some additional ornaments for this parish church, which she laid out in the following manner. viz.

Two silver flaggons for the Communion double gilt, 41l. 8s. 10d. Double gilding the other plate, 6l. 1s. A crimson velvet cloth for the Communion, trimmed with gold orras 26l. 0s. 3d. Wainscot rails round the table 16l. Cushions, or squabs to kneel on, 5l. 8s. A Portugal mat to cover the floor, 19s. Laying the floor and other charges, 11l. A branch for the middle isle 38l. 17s. And by her last will in 1729, she gave 71l. for the ceiling of the north and south isles, and so much of the three chancels as were not ceiled at that time.

In much weakness, the God of Might did bless,
With increase of store,
Not to maintain pride nor idleness,
But to relieve the poor,
Such industrious poor as truly fear the Lord.

Of { Meek Humble and Quiet spirit. } according to his word.

M. Y.

GLORY TO GOD ALONE.

THE

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION.

THE PARISH of St. John is within the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the diocese of Canterbury and deanry of Westbere (v). The church, which is dedicated to St. John Baptist, stands about half a mile from the lower part of Margate south-

(v) In 1301 the Abbat of St. Augustine took upon him to ordain several new deanries, one of which was that of Minster, in which this church was included; but this causing much altercation with the Archbishop, they were not long after dissolved. Dec. Script. col. 1976. See vol. ii. of this history, p. 454.

(w) The north chancel is dedicated to St. James. The whole building of the church is low and of a considerable length, and seems to have been raised at several times. The roofs of the north and south isles and chancels are covered with lead; on that side which is outermost on the north side of the high or middle chancel, is a square building of hewn stone with battlements, and a flat roof covered with lead, and the windows guarded with a double set of iron bars. This most probably was intended and used formerly for the church treasury, or safe repository of the plate and valuable relics belonging to it. At the beginning of the last century, being then of no kind of use, it was employed as a store-house for gunpowder, shot, &c. for the use of the fort, and was repaired by the deputies; but in 1701 it was fitted up and has since been made use of as a vestry. The tower was somewhat too small for the former ring of bells which were in it, consisting of 6 very tuneable ones; they were by much the largest of any hereabouts, the other parishes having before lessened theirs by casting their old bells anew. Of these 6 bells, the 3d, 4th, and 5th were much the oldest; the treble and 2d having probably been new cast. On the treble was this inscription: Thomas Hench made me. On the 2d, T. N. R. P. 1615. Jacob bath made me. On the 3d, Virginis egragie vocor campana Marie. On the 4th, Miss de Celis babes nomen Gabrielis. On the tenor, Daundelion, I. O. S. Trinitate sacra fit bec Campana beats. The two last of these were at the west end of the middle isle. Just by the tower is a part taken off from the isle, even with the belfry, in which they cast the lead used about the church; even with this is a partition, which divides the west end of the south isle from the body of the church, which is made use of for a school-house. At the west end of the middle isle is the font of stone, it is octagonal, and on the several sides are cut the arms of England alone, and England quartered with France on 4 of the sides opposite to one another, and a rose on each of the other 4 sides; by which it is probable this font was erected in Q. Elizabeth's reign. Just by the font is a tombstone, without any inscription, having a cross on it, and the Greek X. (for $\chi\rho\iota\varsigma$) intermixed, which signifies its being for one of the priestly order, perhaps this might be the monument of St. Imarus, who was a monk of Reculver, and is said by Leland, col. vol. iv, p. 7, to have been buried in this church. Among other memorials in this church are the following: In the middle chancel, a stone with a brass on it, effigies and an inscription for Thomas Smyth, once vicar of this church, obiit Oct. 3, 1433. On a brass plate, the effigies of a priest in his habit, and an inscription for Thomas Cardiffe, vicar of this church for 55 years, obiit January 16, 1515. (See a print of this brass in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 123.) A memorial on brass for Nicholas Chewney, S. T. D. 20 years pastor of this church, obiit 1685, et. 75. A memorial for Frances his wife, obiit 1709, et. 79, and Jane their daughter, obiit 1678. On a brass plate, arms—Er-ward, on the knoll of the hill; it is a large building of flints, covered with rough-cast; the quoins, windows and door cases of ashlar stone. It consists of three isles and three chancels, having a low square tower, with a small pointed turret on it at the west end of the north isle, in which is a clock and six bells (w).

mine, a cross engrailed, an inscription for William Norwood, obiit 1605, et. 70, placed by his son Alexander Norwood. Another like for Alexander Norwood, obiit 1557, and his son Alexander, obiit 1583, and Joane his wife, obiit 1605. Another like in the middle chancel, covered now by the matting and seats, for Thomas Cleve, gent. obiit 1604. A stone with a memorial for John Coppin, esq; son of William Coppin, buried 1607, and being commander of the king's ship Mary, was by the Dutch shot through the leg on Sept. 28, in 1652; and being commander of the king's ship St. George, in 2 several actions received several wounds from the Dutch in the years 1655 and 1666, one of which in the latter, proved mortal, and he died 2 days afterwards, et. 59 years and 13 days. Arms—Party per pale, 3 bears heads coupé. Just before the vestry door is the figure in brass of one of the vicars in his sacerdotal habit, which is now covered by the step before the rail of the communion table. In the south chancel, a plain mural monument for Henry Crisp, 2d son of John Crisp, of Cleave, the eldest son of John Crisp, of Queaks, esq; and elder brother of Sir Henry Crisp, kt. This Henry married 1st, Amye, daughter of Alvreda Randolpb, esq; who died without issue; and 2dly, Mary, daughter of Thomas Colepaper, of Aylesford, esq; by whom he had 3 sons, Richard, Henry, and Thomas, and Anne, Martha, and Mary, daughters, obiit 1588, et. 47. Arms at the top—Or, on a chevron sable, 5 horse shoes or, quartering Denne, argent, 2 leopards heads or, on 2 flusques sable. On a shield below in a lozenge, sable, on a bend engrailed gules, a crescent argent; for difference. On a mural monument are the effigies, kneeling, of Paul Cleybrooke, of Nash Court in this parish, esq; and Mary his wife, daughter of Richard Knatchbull, of Mersham, esq; and an inscription to their memories. He died 1622; she died 1624, W. C. their son, erected this monument. Arms—Argent, a cross pattee gules, impaling azure 3 crosses fitchie, between 2 cotizes or. In the south chancel is a stone, on which have been the figure of a man, and inscription in brass long since obliterated; but above are remaining the arms of Cleybrooke, with the crest, a swan's head between 2 wings. On the north side of the chancel hangs Paul Cleybrooke's helmet, with the crest, &c. On an altar tomb underneath, a memorial for William Cleybrooke, of Nash Court, esq; obiit 1638, and for Sarah, 2d daughter of Manasseh Norwood, of Dane Court, gent. and wife of William Cleybrooke, of Nash Court, esq; obiit 1662, et. 62. An inscription and effigies on a brass plate for Nicholas Canteys, obiit 1431. A memorial for George Somner, gent. of Canterbury, who being commander of a detachment of horse was slain in the conflict at Wye, obiit May 30, 1648, et. 51. Arms—Ermine, 2 chevrons voided, impaling ermine, a cross; underneath are 2 lines cut out with a chisel, by order, as it is said, of the rulers then in power. In the north chancel, an inscription on a brass plate, and the effigies in armour of John Daundelion, gent. obiit 1445, the arms torn off. Another for Peter Stone, obiit 1442, and for John Sefowille, and Sawen his wife; he died 1475. A memorial for Henry Pettit, gent. late of this parish, obiit 1599. A mural monument for Dionis Pettit, late widow of Henry Pettit, gent. of this parish; she died in 1607. On a brass plate under the pews of the north isle, an inscription for Rachel, wife of John Blousfield, and daughter

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

T H A N E T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY

This church was one of the three chapels belonging to the church of Minster in this island, daughter of Thomas Craner, gent. by whom she had one son George, who died in 1600. Another brass plate for Joane, wife of William Parker, son and heir of Francis Parker, of this parish, obit 1613, and left issue 4 sons, Francis, Gregory, William, and Stephen. A mural monument for Valentine Petit, of this parish, gent. and Mary his wife, daughter of Thomas Clyve, sometime of the same; he died in 1626, she in 1609. A mural monument at the east end for Henry Pettit, of Dentdelyon, gent. he had issue Elizabeth, Richard, and Henry; by Elizabeth his 2d wife, daughter of Richard Best, of St. Laurence, Canterbury, gent. obit 1661, et. 33, and also for Anne, daughter of Thomas Finch, of Coptree, esq; wife of Henry Petit, of Dentdelyon, gent. by whom he had issue Anne, Henry, Valentine, Henry, Thomas, John, and Valentine; she died in 1656, et. 31. Arms on the left side of the monument, 1st and 4th, Petit, viz. Argent, on a chevron gules, between 3 griffins heads erased sable, crowned, or, 3 bezants; 2d and 3d, Dandelyon, viz. Sable, 3 lions rampant between 2 bars dancette, argent. In the middle, a shield of 8 coats, 1st, Petit; 2d, Dandelyon; 3d, Finch; 4th, Cleve; 5th, Azure, a chief or; 6th, Petit; 7th, Cleve; 8th, Finch. On the right side in a lozenge, 1st and 4th, Finch, 2d and 3d, Cleve. A mural monument at the east end for Capt. John Pettit, of the ancient family of Dentdelyon, in this parish, obit 1700; Sarah his wife, daughter of Major Somner, who died at Wye, fighting for his king and country, erected this monument. In the middle isle on brass plates, inscriptions for Richard Notfield, obit 1416. For John Parker, obit 1441, and Joane his wife. An inscription for Roger Morris, one of the principal attendants on the royal navy, obit 1615. At the west end, an inscription on a brass plate for Luke Sprakyn, gent. and Mary his wife, he died in 1591. A memorial for Elizabeth wife of Thomas Thwayts, obit 1582, and for Esther Barrow, obit 1513. In this church are likewise the following monuments and grave-stones. A handsome mural monument for William Payne, esq; of this parish, descended from the Paynes, of Spottenden; he died 1717, et. 55, erected by his sister Anne in 1729. Arms, 6 coats, 1st, Per saltier argent and sable, a lion rampant, counterchanged; 2d, Argent, a cross patee gules; 3d, Argent, on a bend sable, 3 fishes hauriant of the field; 4th, Azure, a fess wavy between 3 goats heads erased or; 5th, Azure, a chevron between 3 gerse or; 6th, as the 1st. Underneath is a memorial for him and for Ann Dowdeswell his sister, who died in 1763, et. 100. Arms—Payne, Cleybrooke, and Dowdeswell. A memorial for Michael Bowell, of Snow-hill, London, obit 1771, et. 47. A neat mural monument for Robert Brooke, merchant, and Sarah his wife, daughter of Gilbert Knowler, of Hearn, esq; he died 1767, et. 83; she died 1731, et. 35, erected by their daughter Anne Brooke. Arms—Gules, on a chevron argent a lion rampant sable. Within the altar rails, a memorial shewing that in the vault underneath are deposited the remains of Anne Brooke, daughter of Robert Brooke, merchant, and Sarah his wife, above-mentioned; she died 1787, et. 83. Arms as above, in a lozenge. A memorial for Susannah, wife of John Jacob, A. M. vicar of this parish; she died 1755, et. 55, and also for the said Rev. John Jacob, obit Dec. 21, 1763, et. 68. A memorial for Thomas Grant, gent. obit 1714, and Sybil his wife, obit 1720, et. 77, and William, father of the above, who died 1658, et. 56. Arms—Two swords in fess, between 3 crowns. A memorial for Anne, wife of Dudley Diggs, obit 1720, et. 63. A memorial shewing that in a vault lies Daniel Marfb, at-and very probably was first begun to be built as early as the year 1050, and was made paro- torney-at-law, obit 1775, et. 59. A memorial for Elizabeth, wife of Dr. John Forbes, M. D. obit 1779, et. 40, and for the said Dr. John Forbes, obit 1780, et. 60. A memorial for William Fox Parry, esq; son of William Parry, esq; vice admiral of the red, obit 1776, et. 30. The stone placed here by William Locker, esq; captain of the royal navy, who married his sister. A memorial shewing that under the right hand pews lies Dame Elizabeth Rich, relict of the late Sir Robert Rich, bart. obit 1780, wife of James Walker, M. C. of this place, who erected it to her memory, et. 48. A memorial for John Leapidge, esq; of East Ham, in co. Essex, obit 1789, et. 77. Arms—Argent, on a chevron sable, 3 cinquefoils of the 1st, between 3 holly leaves proper, impaling azure, a chevron between 3 fleurs-de-lis or. A memorial for George Meard, esq; obit 1761. What is remarkable is, that though this white marble grave-stone is but 4 feet by 2, there is room by his will, vested in the 3 per cent. to keep it in repair. A memorial for the Hon. Gertrude Agar, obit 1780, et. 51 years. A memorial for Captain David Turner, of Nash Court, obit 1710, et. 38. A memorial for David Turner, obit 1718, and also the Rev. David Turner, A. M. rector of Elmsted, obit Sept. 24, 1765, et. 62. A memorial for James Brown, esq; of this parish, he married the daughter of Capt. David Turner, obit 1776, et. 30. Arms—A griffin passant; an escutcheon of pretence a chevron between 3 sur de molins, in chief a lion passant. A memorial for James Newman, esq; obit 1720. A memorial for Captain David Turner, of Nash Court, obit 1719, et. 38. A memorial for Edward Diggs, obit 1726, et. 53, and Susanna his wife, obit 1689, et. 44. A memorial for Dudley Diggs, gent. obit 1716, et. 82, and Mary his wife obit 1689, et. 44. For John Glover, gent. who died at London in 1685, et. 56; Susanna his wife, obit 1713, et. 75. A memorial for Captain Thomas Wilkins, obit 1757, et. 73. One for Humphry Pudner, gent. obit 1671, et. 65, and Mary his wife, obit 1691, et. 81; and Sarah their daughter, wife of Capt. Michael Wilkins, obit 1716, et. 68. Memorials for several of the Turners; and for Peter Tomlin, obit 1700, et. 78, and Rennet his wife, 1707, et. 80; Arms—On a fess, 3 right hands couped at the wrist between 3 battle axes, impaling 3 battle axes.

In the church-yard, among many other tombs and memorials, is a plain brick tomb for Tho. Stevens, esq; obit 1790, et. 24; he was the only son of Philip Stephens, esq; Secretary of the Admiralty, who was killed in a duel near this place, by one Anderson, an attorney, of London, at the second discharge of the pistols. On a handsome monument encompassed with iron rails, inscriptions for Elizabeth, wife of John Tomlin, daughter of Rich. Lester, and Ruth his wife obit 1711, et. 38; also for Rich. Lester, obit 1712, et. 76; also for John Tomlin, obit 1716, et. 58, also for Ruth Lester, obit 1717, et. 74 years. At the west end for Rob. Brooke, esq; obit 1767, et. 82; for Anne, his third wife, obit 1784, et. 76. On the south side the above, for Ruth Tomlyn, who was married to Robert Brooke, son of John and Mary Brooke, in 1712, by whom she had five children, of whom survived, John, Elizabeth, and Ruth; the latter died in childbed in 1722, et. 29. Sarah, third daughter of Gilbert Knowler, of Hearn, gent. and second wife of Robert Brooke, esq; by whom he had six children, of which four are living, viz. Anne, Sarah, Robert, and Mary; she died in childbed in 1731, et. 35, and lies in this vault. On the north side here, for the above John Tomlin, son of John and Anne; he died 1741, et. 25. Elizabeth, daughter of Robert and Ruth Brooke, died

died

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

cbial sometime after the year 1200, when the church of Minster, with its appendages, was appropriated, in the year 1128, to the monastery of St. Augustine near Canterbury, and was at the same time assigned, with the chapels of St. John, St. Peter, and St. Laurence, with all rents, tythes, and other things belonging to them, to the sacrifice of that monastery; and it was further granted, that the Abbat and Convent should present to the Archbp. in the above-mentioned chapels, fit perpetual chaplains to the altars of them, to the amount of the value of 10 marks; besides which, they were to retain the manses and glebes belonging to them; but that the Vicar of the mother church of Minster should take and receive, in right of his vicarage, the tenths of small tythes, viz. of lambs and pigs, and the obventions arising from marriages and churchings forbidden at these chapels, the inhabitants of which, preceded by their priests, were accustomed to go, with much ceremony, in procession to Minster, in token of their subjection to their parochial mother church (y).

In 1375, Simon Sudbury, Archbishop of Canterbury, granted a commission to Thomas Baketon, canon of the church of Lincoln, and Wm Byde, canon of the church of Sarum, in a cause of augmentation of this vicarage (x). After this, the appropriation of the church of Minster, with its appendant chapels, and the advowsons of the vicarages of them, continued with the Abbat and Convent till the dissolution of the monastery in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, when they died 1731, et. 15; John, son of the same, died at Coimbra in Portugal, in 1732, et. 18, and was buried here in 1733; also Mary, daughter of the same Robert and Sarah his 2d wife, obiit 1732, et. 18 months; and at the east end, in memory of Sarah and Mary, daughters of Robert and Sarah Brooke; and also of seven children, sons and daughters of Robert and Ann Brooke, who died in their infancy. On a large tomb, arms—Loxengy, on a chief a lion passant guardant; and memorial for Mrs. Elizabeth Baker, obiit 1765, et. 69; and for Mr. Beaton Cowell, obiit 1760, et. 42; and for Elizabeth, wife of Stephen Baker, jun. obiit 1761, et. 35; on a tomb fenced in with iron rails, arms—Parted per pale and fess, in the 1st quarter a lion rampant. A memorial for Edward Bing, citizen and apothecary of London, obiit 1765, et. 31; and his sister Ann, obiit 1766, et. 23, both natives of this island; Mr. Edward Bing, father of the above, obiit 1785, et. 73. On the south side of it, memorials for Anne, wife of Benj. Solly, of Garlinge, obiit 1787, et. 49; also the said Benjamin Solly, obiit 1783, et. 49, leaving issue Thomas and Elizabeth. Another tomb and memorial for Alexander Alexander, L.L.D. (master of the Academy at Hampsted, and a person of considerable literary abilities,) obiit 1788, et. 43. Another such tomb and memorial for Wm Troward, esq. late surgeon of the dock-yard at Deptford, obiit 1783, et. 68; and for Richard Troward his brother, obiit 1787, et. 65. An elegant tomb, surrounded with an iron balustrade, and memorial, for Stephen Sackett, obiit 1786, et. 86; and also for Elizabeth Cobb, wife of Francis Cobb, jun. obiit 1787, et. 20; and for Elizabeth, wife of Mr. Francis Cobb, sen. obiit 1790, et. 66.

Vol. IV.

4 Y

were surrendered, together with the rest of the possessions of the monastery, into the King's hands.

After the dissolution of the monastery, and the change brought by the Reformation, this parochial chapel of St. John Baptist became entirely separated from the mother church of Minster, the Vicar of this parish having no further subjection to it in any shape whatever; but by this same change he was likewise deprived of several of those emoluments he had before enjoyed in right of his vicarage; for all the great and small tythes of this parish were, as has been mentioned above, appropriated to Salmestone Grange, in this parish, formerly belonging to the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine; so that the endowment of this vicarage, at that time, consisted of a payment of two bushels of wheat, to be paid yearly at Midsummer, and a pension of 8l. to be yearly paid out of the above grange; besides which, he had a vicarage-house, with a dove-house and garden, containing an acre and three roods; and eight parcels of glebe, containing together 14 acres, 1 rood, 20 perches.

The advowson of this vicarage, as well as the great and small tythes of this parish, as part of Salmestone Grange, being thus vested in the Crown, application was made to K. Edward VI. for some augmentation to it, which seems to have been granted, though the King died before his intentions towards the doing of it were completed; however, this was very soon afterwards done by his successor Q. Mary, who by her let-

A memorial for Mrs. Jane Wallis, obiit 1745, daughter of Dudley Diggs, gent. and Anne his wife, and wife of Henry Wallis, surgeon, who died 1734. A memorial on the south side of the church, for Edward Diggs, mariner, obiit 1791, et. 63. On a tomb-stone, at the north side of the church, are several memorials for the Gurneys, of Shottenden; arms—Paly of 6, parted per fess counterchanged, impaling a saltier engrailed. On a plain grave-stone, a memorial for John Perronet, of Shoreham, in Kent, obiit 1767, et. 34; and one for James Coleman, obiit 1775, et. 36; and for Thomas Coleman, minister of the gospel, obiit 1792, et. 58. Before the reformation, besides the high altar at the east end of the middle chancel, there were altars in this church dedicated to St. George, St. John and St. Anne, and very probably others for other particular saints; on or over them, in niches, stood the images of the several saints, before which were burned wax tapers; to the maintenance of which, people used to contribute when alive and leave legacies at their deaths. Adjoining to the church-yard on the south side stood antiently two houses, called the wax-buses, in which were made the wax lights used in the church at processions, &c. These were burned down in 1641; since which a lease of the ground has been demised by the churchwardens to build upon, at the rent of twelve-pence.

(y) Decem. Script. Thorn, col. 1960, 2002. See a full account of the presentation to these chapels and the rights and dues of them, under Minster, above, p. 329, et seq.

(x) Regist. Sudbury, Lambeth Libr. fol. 9 a.

ters

ST. JOHN'S, MARGATE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

ters patent, dated November 6, in her first year, granted to Tho. Hewett, Cl. Vicar of this parish, in augmentation of the maintenance of him and his successors, all and all manner of tythes of lambs, wool, pigs, geese, flax, wax and honey, and other small tythes whatsoever, yearly, and from time to time arising, growing, and being in and throughout the whole borough of Margate within this parish; and also all oblations arising on the four principal days and feasts yearly within this parish; and also all tythes, personal and paschal, from all the parishioners within it, in each year, and yearly increasing and arising, to have, hold, take and enjoy, all and singular the aforesaid tythes and oblations, and all the aforesaid premises to him and his successors for ever; to hold of her and her heirs in pure and perpetual alms, in lieu of all services and demands whatsoever, without any account, or any other matter whatsoever from thenceforward to her, her heirs, or successors, in any manner to be rendered, paid, or given (a). This vicarage is valued in the King's books at 8l. (b) In 1588 here were communicants 500, and it was valued at 50l. In 1640 here were the like number of communicants, and it was valued at 85l.

In 1709, on the enquiry made into the clear yearly value of all rectories, vicarages, &c. under 30l. per annum, this vicarage was returned to be of the clear yearly value of 49l. 12s. 6d. (c) It is now a discharged living, of the same clear yearly value as above-mentioned (d). The advowson of this vicarage coming into the hands of the Crown on the dissolution of the Abbey of St. Augustine, continued there till K. Edward VI, in his first year, granted the advowson of the vicarage of Minster, with the three chapels appendant to it, one of which was this church of St. John Baptist, among other premises, to the Archbishop of Canterbury; since which this advowson has conti-

(a) See this instrument printed in Lewis's History of Thanet, col. No. xxxv.

(b) Viz. Endow in terr. gleb per ann. 14s. 10d. In decim. personal. oblat. et al profic. 7l. 5s. 2d. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 54.

(c) Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 145.

(d) Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 54. The yearly payments out of this vicarage in 1736, were, Tenths 16s. Procurations to the Archbishop when he visits, 2s. 6d. Quit-rents to the manor of Minster for 12 acres of Penny-gavil land, 3s.

(e) Lewis's Hist. of Thanet.

(f) He lies buried in the middle chancel of this church, where his inscription on brass still remains.

(g) He likewise lies buried in the same chancel, where his figure and inscription on brass still remain.

(h) There was one of this name who probably was this vicar, incumbent of the chantry of Reculver, who at the time of the dissolution had a pension of 6l. which he enjoyed in 1553. See Willis's Hist. of Mitred Abbeys, vol. ii, p. 104. On the death or deprivation of Hewett, it seems this nued a part of the possessions of that see, his Grace the Archbishop being the present patron of it.

In 1640 the vicarage house was enlarged by the addition of two new rooms; and in 1709 two other rooms were added to it for its strength and commodiousness. In 1657, the site of the vicarage was inclosed with a chalk wall, which was built by the kind benefactions of the parishioners. In the parlour window was painted the arms of Manwood, impaling Coppinger.

Margery, relict of John Ivory, of this parish, by will proved 1485, gave three roods of land at Fynchton in this parish, to the Vicar of it, for masses, &c.

CHURCH OF ST. JOHN BAPTIST.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

VICARS.

- (e) John, styled Beneficiary here, in 1414.
 (f) Tho. Smyth, obiit Oct. 3, 1433.
 (g) Tho. Cardiff, 1460, obiit Jan. 16, 1515.
 (h) Tho. Hewett, in 1553.
 (i) John Wood, in 1564.
Wm Lesley, Cl. adm. 1567.
 (k) Rob. Jenkinson, Cl. adm. April 13, 1577, obiit May 1601.
 (l) Philip Harrison, A. M. admitted June 10, 1601, obiit August 1607.
 (m) Humpb. Wheatley, A. M. adm. 1607, obiit Oct. 1631.
 (n) Peter Criche, A. M. adm. Nov. 3, 1631, obiit 1635.
 (o) John Banks, A. M. adm. Mar. 7, 1635, relig. 1647.
 (p) John Laury, adm. 1647, obiit 1655.

vicarage was sometime vacant, and was served by Gervas Lynche, A. M. who was curate here in 1561. In Archbishop Parker's acts of visitation, he is said to be Presbyter, non conjugatus, doctus, residens et hospitalis, non predicans nisi in propria Curat. et unum habens Beneficium.

(i) Parish Regist.

(k) He was buried in this church on May 13, that year.

(l) He was buried here on Aug. 14, that year.

(m) He was buried in this church on Oct. 26, that year.

(n) He is said to have been drowned, with his parish-clerk, as they were both going to London from hence in a hoy.

(o) He resigned this vicarage on being collated to the rectory of Icychurch, in Romney Marsh.

(p) From this time to the king's restoration, there seems to have been no settled minister here; in the churchwardens accounts, mention is made of one Mr. Ayerff preaching here seven lord's days, and Mr. Wilkinson two, &c. During which times one Mr. Powles seems to have been vicar, for whom the parishioners paid the tenths to the state out

ST. PETER'S.

T H A N E T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

The Crown,
sede vac.

(q) Thomas Stevens, S. T. B.
adm. Sept. 18, 1660, obt.
Dec. 1662.

The Archbishop.

John Overyng, adm. Sept. 4,
1662, obit 1665.

(r) Nich. Cbeuuey, S. T. P. admitted April 24, 1665,
obit 1685.

(s) Gilbert Innys, A. M. admitted Dec. 9, 1685, resigned 1692.

(t) Geo. Stevens, A. M. admitted Sept. 3, 1692, resigned 1697.

(u) John Johnson, A. M.
1697, refig. 1703.

(v) John Warren, A. M.
1703, refig. 1705.

(w) John Lewis, A. M. 1705, obit Jan 16, 1747.

Jacob Omer, Feb. 1747, obit
1749.

(x) John Jacob, A. M. 1755, obit Dec. 21, 1763.

Wm Harrison, A. B. June 16, 1764. Present Curate.

ST. PETER'S

LIES the next parish south-eastward from St. John's, being so called from the dedication of the church of it to St. Peter. This parish is within the liberty and jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, and is an antient member of the town and port of Dover, and though united to it ever since K. Edward I.'s reign, yet so late as in that of K. Henry VI., it became a dispute, whether this parish was not in the county at large; to take away therefore all doubt of it, that King, by his letters patent, united it to Dover, to which out of the church fefs. In the year 1657, Mr. Edward Riggs is said to have come hither from Deal, for whose encouragement a collection was made that year for building the chalk wall round the vicarage green. In the parish register of that year he is called vicar, and in the churchwardens accounts of the disbursements of the year 1658, is an entry of a payment for making a gate in Mr. Riggs's wall.

(q) He had been vicar of the neighbouring church of St. Peter, and was buried in this church on Jan. 2, 1661.

(r) He had been vicar of St. Nicholas at Wade, from whence he was ejected or forced to remove some time after 1654. He was a learned man, and wrote several books. He lies buried in this church.

(s) He was vicar of Chifflet, and was encouraged to take this vicarage by the principal inhabitants of this parish, who obliged themselves to pay him yearly an augmentation of 40l. In 1692 he resigned this vicarage for the curacy of Maidstone.

(t) His successor has given him this character in the parish register. Optimus et doctissimus Scotus. In 1697 he resigned this vicarage for that of Sbrivingham, in co. Bucks.

place, in like manner as St. John's above-mentioned, it is subject in all matters of civil jurisdiction. The Mayor of Dover here too appoints one of the inhabitants to be his deputy, who is chosen either yearly, or once in two or three years, at the Mayor's pleasure; and to the charges of the Sessions formerly held at Margate, this parish and Birchington used to contribute their proportion.

The manor of Minster claims paramount over the greatest part of this parish; the landholders holding of it, by a certain rent called Penny-gavel, which amounts to the yearly sum of 25l. 3s. 0½d. (y) Subordinate to this manor is that of situated in a valley, at a small distance westward from the church of St. Peter. It was once accounted a manor, and was a gentleman's seat in very early times, giving both seat and surname to a family of this name, who bore for their court armour—Gules, four fleurs de lis or. But the custom of gavelkind having divided this estate between two branches, one of them leaving an only daughter and heir Margaret, married to John Exeter about the end of K. Henry IV.'s reign (z), she in her own right, being then a widow, held this manor at her death, in the 4th year of K. Henry VI.'s reign, as appears by the Escheat rolls of that year; after which the fee of it became vested in Nicholas Underdowne, who died possessed of it in 1484, anno 2 Richard II., as appears by his will proved that year, leaving by Dionise his wife, two sons, Nicholas and Richard; to the former of whom he devised this manor, which at length one of his descendants in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, passed away by sale to Richard Norwood, who afterwards resided here (a), as did his descendants down to Richard

DANE COURT,

After his resignation, this vicarage was for some years held by sequestration and served by curates.

(u) Afterwards vicar of Apledore and of Cranbrooke. See Cranbrooke, vol. iii. of this history, p. 55. His life is in Biog. Brit. vol. vii, p. 3.

(v) He was likewise rector of Trottesclive, in the diocese of Rocheſter, and was afterwards a prebendary of Exeter.

(w) He was likewise vicar of Minſter and rector of Acriſe, and maſter of Eastbridge Hoſpital, Caſterbury. He was author of the Hiſtory of the Iſland of Thanet, and of ſeveral other books. See his life in Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 2927.

(x) And vicar of Tilmanſtone. He lies buried in this church; he died æt. 68.

(y) See an account of this rent, under Minſter, above, p. 318 (z).

(z) Philipott, p. 387.

(a) He left a ſon Alexander Norwood, of Dane Court, who died in 1557, as did his ſon Alexander Norwood in 1587, leaving by his wife Joane, daughter of Kempe and widow of Roger Howlet, 3 ſons; Jeſeph, who married Margaret,

ST. PETER'S.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

Norwood, of Dane Court, gent. who possessed it about the beginning of K. Charles II.'s reign, and he devised it to his second son Paul Norwood, who about the year 1666 alienated it to Richard Smith; but he dying unmarried, it came by descent to his nephew Robert (only son of his only brother Robert) Smith, who passed it away by sale in 1686, to John Baker; and he afterwards alienated it to Robert Hammond, who sold it to his brother Thomas Hammond, of Deal, brewer (b), and he left several sons, the survivors of whom seem afterwards to have become his heirs in gavelkind (c), and they joined in the conveyance of it to Peter Bridger, who left two daughters his coheirs, upon a partition of whole inheritance, this estate of Dane Court was allotted to Sarah the eldest daughter, to be holden in severalty in lieu of her undivided moiety of her father's whole estate, and she marrying Gabriel Neve, attorney-at-law, he enjoyed it in her right, and afterwards sold it to Mr. Richard Sacket, of East Northdowne, who by his will devised it to his grand-daughter Sarah, the wife of Robert Tomlin, who is the present possessor of it.

CALEYS GRANGE,

commonly called Callis Court, is an estate in this garet, daughter of Naylor, of Renville; Manasses, to whom he devised Dane Court, and Alexander; which Manasses Norwood, of Dane Court, married Elizabeth, daughter of Richard Badcock, of Robbester, and dying in 1636, æt. 70. was buried in this church; by her he had a son Richard, of Dane Court, and 3 daughters; Mary, married to Stanley, Sarah married to William Cleybrooke, and Susan; which Richard Norwood married Anne, daughter of Paul Brooke, of Nash Court, by whom he had two sons, Alexander and Paul; to the latter of whom his father devised Dane Court, and a daughter Mary. They bore for their arms—Ermine, a cross engrailed gules; in the 1st quarter, a wolf's head erased gules. There is a pedigree of them in the heraldic visitation of co. Kent, anno 1619.

(b) Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 171.

(c) Thomas Hammond died in 1688, and by his will proved in 1683, devised to Richard his son, (by Abigail his wife) his manor or capital messuage called Dane Court, in St. Peter's, in Thanet, with all its appurtenances, to hold to him and his heirs for ever; and if he died before the age of 21, or without lawful issue, then to Robert his son and his heirs for ever; Peter, George, John and William, his other sons, or his two daughters, Abigail and Mary.

(d) Dec. Script. col. 2203.

(dd) At the time of the dissolution of the monastery, Thomas Hungerford, of Sandwich, was lessee of this estate, at the yearly rent of 25l. 16s. 8d. by a demise from the Abbat and Convent for the term of 20 years, dated an. 29 Hen. VIII.

(e) On the abolition of Deans and Chapters, in the reign of King Charles I, this estate was surveyed in 1649, by order of the powers then in being, in order for the sale of it, when it was returned: That the estate called Callis Grange, alias Callis Court, together with two-thirds of all the tythes of corn arising and growing within the parish of St. Peter, and all profits and commodities to this parsonage belonging, was by estimation worth coibs annis 203l. 6s. 8d.

Memorandum. That Sir Isaac Sidley, knt. and bart. and parish, which was part of the antient possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine near Canterbury, and was by them appropriated to the use of their sacristy. This estate, which consisted of 59 acres and one rood of land, and two-thirds of the great tythes of this parish (d), continued in the possession of the monastery of St. Augustine till the final dissolution of it, which happened in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII.'s reign, when it came into the King's hands (dd), where it did not remain long, for the King in his 33d year settled this estate by his dotation charter, among other premises, on his new-founded Dean and Chapter of Christ Church in Canterbury, where the inheritance of it remains at this time (e). On the Dean and Chapter's becoming possessed of this estate, they demised it on a beneficial lease for three lives, which demise they afterwards changed into a term for 21 years. The Mayor and Commonalty of the City of Canterbury are the present lessees of this estate, in trust, for certain charitable uses bequeathed by Mrs. Eliz. Lovejoy, the former lessee of it (f).

PRESENT STATE OF ST. PETER'S.

The parish of St. Peter is as pleasant and healthy a situation as any in this island, the Sir John Sidley his son, by indenture dated the 29th Nov. anno 22 James I, 1624, from the then late Dean and Chapter, held all these premises with their appurtenances for 3 lives, paying yearly 25l. 16s. 8d. at the rent reserved of 200l. per annum. The lessees were bound to keep the premises in repair and the chancel of St. Peter's church, towards which the lessor was to allow sufficient great timber out of Thornden wood. The premises were then come to the lessees in trust of Edward Abye, of the Middle Temple, esq; and Lea his wife.

(f) Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, widow of the Rev. George Lovejoy, master of the King's School, in Canterbury, by her will proved in 1694, gave the term of years, of which she was possessed by lease from the Dean & Chapter of Canterbury of certain tythes at Callis Grange, in St. Peter's parish, to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of Canterbury, in trust, after several special restrictions therein mentioned, to repair the chancel of the church of St. Peter, and her husband's and her monument in it; to pay the clerk 20s. yearly; to pay the vicar of this parish 40l. per annum, clear of all deductions; to pay a schoolmaster 20l. clear yearly sum, to teach 20 poor children of this parish to read, write, and cast accounts; and if such be wanting, the number to be made up from the parish of St. John; to pay certain yearly sums to the several hospitals of Jesus, Kingsbridge, Cogax, Harbledowne, and Manwood, in and near Canterbury. The overplus of the clear remaining profits to be disposed of by them in pious and charitable uses, as is therein mentioned, according as they in their discretion should think fit. Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, col. p. 97, No. xlvi. In the year 1777, the rack rent of this estate was 450l. per annum. In 1790 it was advertised by the Mayor and Commonalty to be let for 14 years, and was so to John Kirby, for 630l. per annum. This estate consists of a glebe of 39 acres and 2 roods of land, and the tythes of 1670 acres of land in this parish. The arms of Lovejoy were—Azure, 3 bars dancette or.

with

ST. PETER'S.

THANE T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

lands open and uninclosed, the soil a dry chalk, with frequent hill and dale interspersed throughout it. At Sowell Hill, in the northern part of the parish, the land is reckoned to be the highest in the island. The village stands on a pleasing eminence, surrounded with trees, which is rather uncommon in these parts, having the church on the north-west side of it; at a little distance southward from which, is a small neat chapel, built by the sect of Methodists. Several genteel families reside in this village, situated about the middle of the parish; which is about two miles and a half across each way, and is bounded by the high chalk cliffs on the sea-shore towards the north and east. It seems formerly to have been more populous than it is at present, for there were in the year 1563, as appeared by Archbishop Parker's return to the orders of the Privy Council, 186 households within this parish. Besides the village above-mentioned, there are several other small hamlets and houses interspersed throughout it, viz. towards the south, Upton, Brompston (g), Dumpton (gg), and Norwood. On the north-west side of the parish is Sacket's-bill, so called from its being the estate of an antient yeomanry family of this name, several of whom lie buried in this church; one of whom, John Sackett, as appears by his will, resided here and died possessed of his estate in this parish in 1444; on it there has been lately built a handsome house, by Mr. King, for his summer residence. In the northern part of the parish is the hamlet of Reading-street, southward of which is a small Forshall, and then Sowell-street. In the eastern part of the parish, close to the cliffs, is Hackendon Downe, or Banks, where several antiquities have been dug up, as will be further mentioned below; and the hamlet of Stone, formerly the residence of the Pawlyns, and then of the Huggets, where a few years ago sir Charles Raymond, bart. built a small pleasant seat for his summer residence, which was not long afterwards sold to the late sir Harry Harper, bart. and since to Wm Breton, esq; who is the present owner of it. Not far from hence there formerly stood a beacon, which used to be fired to alarm the country in case of an invasion; a few years since some remains of the timber of it was dug up on the top of the Beacon-bill, about 55 rods nearer to Stone than the present light-house.

About a mile and an half north-eastward from the church, at the extremity of the chalk cliff, is a point of land called the North Foreland, (supposed by most to be the Cantium of Ptolemy;) so called to distinguish it from the other Foreland, betwixt Deal and Dover, usually called the South Foreland; it is a promontory, or cape of land, that reaches further into the sea, and is somewhat higher than most of the land herabouts. On the top of it was formerly a house, built of timber, lath, and plaister work, with a large glass lanthorn on the top of it, in which a light was kept to direct ships in the night in their course, that they might keep clear of the Goodwin Sands, which lie off this point, and on which ships are apt to strike before they are aware, on account of their endeavouring to keep clear of this land, which extends so far into the sea. This house being by some accident burnt down in 1683, there was for some time a sort of beacon made use of, on which a light was hoisted; but about the latter end of the last century there was built here a strong house of flint, an oblong, on the top of which was an iron grate, quite open to the air, in which was made a blazing fire of coals. But about the year 1732, the top of this light-house was covered with a sort of lanthorn, with large sash lights, and the fire was kept burning by the help of bellows, which the light-men kept blowing all night. This invention was to save coals, but the sailors complained of it, as being very much to the prejudice of the navigation, many vessels being lost on the Goodwin Sands for want of seeing it, and was so little seen at sea, that as some of the sailors asserted, they had in hazy weather seen the Foreland before they saw the light; whereas, before the lanthorn was placed here, when the fire was kept in the open air, as the wind kept the coals constantly a-light, the blaze of it was seen in the air far above the light-house; complaint being made of this, the Governors of Greenwich Hospital ordered sir John Thomson to view it, who ordered the lanthorn to be taken away, and the light-house to be made nearly the same as it was before, the light to continue burning all night and till day-light; since which, a few years ago, it was again repaired, and two stories of brick were raised on the former building. The height of it at present, including the small room in which the lights are kept, is somewhat more than 100 feet; this room, which may be perhaps best described as a dome raised on a decagon, is about ten feet in diameter, and twelve feet high; it is coated with copper, as is the gallery round it, to prevent fires. From the gallery there is a very extensive view, of which a conception may be formed from these lights being visible in clear weather at the Nore, which is ten leagues distant; in each of the sides of the decagon, towards the sea, is a patent lamp, kept burning all night, with a reflector and magnifier, the latter being very large. The whole building is white-washed, except the light rooms on the top; and

(g) Brompston is now the joint property of Henry Jeffard, esq; and Mr. John Grey.

(gg) Dumpton, great part of which extends into St. Laurence, belongs to the earl of Hardwick.

ST. PETER'S.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

all the rooms in it are used by the man and his family, who take care of it (b). To the repair and maintenance of this light-house, every ship belonging to Great Britain, which sails by this Foreland, is obliged to pay two-pence for each ton; and every foreigner 4d. It is under the direction of the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House.

Here were two fairs formerly kept every year, one on June 29, being St. Peter's Day; and the other on March 25, being Lady Day; but they have for several years past been changed to the 10th of July, and the 5th of April.

BESIDES the hamlets above-mentioned, there are two larger villes in this parish, viz. King's-gate and Broadstairs or Bradstow; the former of which, is situated in a little valley, close to the northern shore of the sea, leading to which there is a breach in the cliff made for the conveniency of the fishery in K. Charles II.'s reign, and formerly called by the inhabitants Bartholomew's-gate, from a tradition that it was finished upon the festival of that saint. It is now denominated King's gate, which name, the inhabitants say, was given it on account of that King's landing here with the Duke of York, on June 13, 1683, in his way by water from London to Dover; on which change of name, the following Latin distich was made on the occasion, by the proprietor of the land (i):

KING'S - GATE,

Olim Porta fui Patroni Bartholomæi,

Nunc, Regis Jussu Regia Porta vocor.

Hic exsederunt Car. II. R.

Et Ja. dux Ebor. 30 Junii 1683.

Antiently the land here reached much farther into the sea than it does at present, a great deal

(b) A print of this light-house, as in 1736, is inserted in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 166; and as it is at present in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1793, p. 1167. In the 3d year of Q. Anne, a licence and authority was granted to Robert Osbolaston, of holding, erecting, changing and renewing the light houses and lights upon the North and South Forelands, for 17 years, at the rent of 20l. Orig. anno 3 Anne, rot. 29.

(i) Viz. Mr. Toddy, of Joffe, near this place.

(k) An account of the decorations within side of this house, and of the several antique marble columns, statues, busts, vases, &c. is given, and were first printed about the year 1777, in a pocket volume called the Kentish Traveller's Companion.

(l) The most considerable of these buildings are the Bead House, having the appearance of a Roman chapel, with gothic windows and a cross at the summit, now used as an inn and house of entertainment. The Temple of Neptune, Arx Ruochim, a small castle on King Hen. VIII.'s plan of Deal, Sandown, &c. castles. Harley Tower, built in compliment to Thomas Harley, esq; Lord Mayor in 1768. Whitfield Tower, in compliment to Robert Whitfield, esq; formerly owner of this estate. The Convent, representing an antient of it having been lost in the memory of man, and the sea still continues to encroach on it. This pleasant little ville formerly consisted mostly of fishermen's houses, who got their living here by that craft, going off to ships in diltreís, or carrying them fresh provisions, beer, &c. when they passed this way in their return from a voyage, which they called by the name of foying; but it has been long since deserted of these people. It continued a place of but poor account, till the late Henry, Lord Holland was induced, from the precarious state of his health, to try the air of this place, for which purpose he built a delightful seat here, under the direction and model made by sir Tho. Wynne, bart. (since created Lord Newborough,) to represent Tully's Formian villa, on the coast of Baia. On the front of the house, towards the sea, is a noble portico of the Doric order; the wings are faced with squared flints of curious workmanship. The back-front consists of several buildings, exactly answering to each other, upon the opposite sides of the garden, the whole being connected with much desirable convenience. In the house were a great number of antique marble columns, statues, busts, and vases, purchased in Italy at a very considerable expence, all which have been lately removed. In the garden, at the upper end of the long walk, is a beautiful column of black Kilkenny marble, erected to the memory of the late Countess of Hillsborough, and called Countess's Pillar, with an inscription to the amiability of that excellent lady, who died in 1767, at Naples. The house itself has a pleasing singularity in it (k); but the objects round it create a disgust in the childish taste displayed in a number of fantastic Gothic ruins, built thick together over the adjoining grounds (l). Lord monastery, containing the remains of a chapel and 5 cells, which afford a comfortable asylum for 5 poor families; there is a cloyster before it, and at the east end is a grand gate way and porter's lodge, containing some good apartments. Nearer the sea cliff is a singular building of the rude gothic kind, erected on the larger of the two tumuli, called Hackendon Banks, which are conjectured to particularize the spot where in a sharp contest between the Danes and Saxons, many on both sides were slain, and were buried here, of which a more ample account will be given below, in p. 364. Countess's Fort, quite in ruins, designed for an ice-house, but never finished; and lastly, the castle, by far the largest of all the outworks, made on the plan of those erected by King Edward I. It was intended originally for stables, coach houses, &c. and served for that purpose till very lately, when the north-west side was converted into a dwelling for the proprietor of it. Most of these are hastening fast to ruin, to which the materials with which they are built, being mostly chalk cut into squares, with some few flints, greatly contribute; and the small garden behind the house, in which the beautiful column above-mentioned is erected, is wholly overspread with filth and rubbish.

Holland

ST. PETER'S.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

Holland purchased this estate of Robert Whitfield, esq; and at his death in 1774, it passed by his will to his second son, the Hon. Charles-James Fox (m), and he conveyed his interest in it to John Powell, esq; who dying without issue, his sister, then the wife of Wm Roberts, esq; became his heir and entitled to this estate, and their son Arthur, who has since taken the name of Powell, is the present possessor of it.

About two miles from King's-gate southward, adjoining to the sea, lies the ville of usually called by the inhabitants Bradstow, and so named from the Saxon words Bradsteow, i. e. a broad place. This ville is of late become so considerable as to form a small town; many new buildings have been erected within these few years here, for the residence and other accommodations of families in the summer season, who wish to have the benefit of sea-bathing, and yet be retired from the inconveniency arising from so public a place as Margate. At the upper end of the village, next St. Peter's, is a small meeting-house, belonging to the General Baptists. In the way leading to the pier, are the ruins of a stone-arch, or portal, walled on each side with flints, to which were formerly fixed strong gates and a portcullis, to prevent any incursions being made here by privateers, &c. to plunder the inhabitants. These gates were long since either taken away, or worn out by great length of time, and the stone work is fast running to decay, there being no care taken to repair it (n). At a small distance above the gate, there was antiently a chapel, dedicated, as tradition goes, to the Virgin Mary, under the appellation of Our Lady of Pity, though more usually Our Lady of Bradstow; in this chapel was her image, which was held in such veneration, that the ships, as they sailed by this place, used to lower their topsails to salute it. At a small distance north-eastward, is the little pier of Broadstairs, when, or by whom first made, is not known. It is built of timber, to make a barbour here, to lay up the fishing boats, which go from hence to the north-sea, and other small craft.

BROADSTAIRS,

For the support and maintenance of this pier, the inhabitants of this parish had decrees authorized by the Lord Wardens of the Cinque Ports, by which they were empowered to choose every year two officers, called by the name of pier-wardens, to look after the repairs of the pier, and collect the droits and duties payable to it; the last of these decrees was confirmed and allowed in 1616, by the Lord Zouch, Lord Warden, &c.

(m) See Quekes in Birchington, above, p. 332.

in the title of which it is said, that the rates here mentioned have been time out of mind.

It appears by an indenture, dated in 1564 and 1586, that this pier and the way leading to it, was the fee estate of the family of Culmer, of this place; and that leave and privilege of using the said way was granted and confirmed by Mycbell Webb and Margaret his wife, late wife of Alexander Culmer and George Culmer, one of the sons of the said Alexander, to the inhabitants and parishioners, as well fishermen as others; on condition of their rendering and paying to the said George Culmer, his heirs or assigns for ever, half a man's share of every boat appertaining to the said parish, of all such profits, &c. which should happen to them by wrecks of the sea, or by any other casualty, or means whatsoever, by them, or any of them, saved, gained, or taken up there, or near adjoining. And also in consideration of 10l. paid to George Culmer, they had granted and confirmed to them all that the pier of Bradstow, with all the right, &c. of the said George Culmer, to hold for ever for the good of the whole commonwealth with them, on their paying to the wardens of the pier for the maintenance of it, such dues as have been accustomed; only that George Culmer and his heirs, living in his house at Bradstow, shall pay only one half-penny for every load, being 10 seams, of lime that he should load; that the inhabitants should have room on Geo. Culmer's land to frame timber, &c. for the repair of the pier. That a rule of Government be kept up for ever on the feast of Christmas, and St. John Evangelist in the afternoon, in the parish church of St. Peter, and there be chosen two wardens, one at least to be a fisherman, who should gather up the duties for the maintenance of the pier, and if any damage should happen, to repair it on notice given, within two years at farthest, on pain of voiding the agreement; and lastly, that the great gates entering in at the same pier, made and there placed by the said George Culmer, should not be spoiled or hurt by the fishermen.

It appears by the return made to the order of the Privy Council, for an enquiry into the state of the several maritime places in this county, anno 1565, being the 8th year of Q. Elizabeth's reign, that there were then at Broadstayer, under the government of the Mayor and Jurats of Dover, houses inhabited 98; boats and other vessels 8, three of two tons, two of eight tons, one of 10 tons, and two of 12 tons; and persons appertaining to these boats, only occupied in the trade of fishing, 40.

There are at this time about 90 families now resident in the ville of Broadstairs, who are chiefly

(n) A print of this gate is in Lewis's Hist. of the Isle of Thanet, p. 164.

employed

ST. PETER'S.

T H A N E T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

employed in the Iceland cod fishery, and who make a considerable trade from the oil drawn from the livers of the fish, which are brought home hither in casks for that purpose; their residence here is on account of this harbour, which has been, besides the common rendezvous of boats and vessels employed in the mackerel and herring fisheries, and it affords shelter to smaller ships in gales of wind, when in distress on the Goodwin Sands, or otherwise, when they cannot receive it from any other harbour on the coast; but about 30 years ago, the harbour having been greatly decayed by length of time and frequent storms, became so much damaged, in particular by one in 1763, and then again by that tremendous one which happened in January 1767, that it was almost entirely demolished and rendered useless, insomuch that the rates, together with the usual contributions of the inhabitants for the repair of it, were far from being sufficient for that purpose; the charge of rebuilding it, according to a moderate estimation, on a survey then taken for this purpose, amounted to upwards of 2000l. This obliged the inhabitants, though some years afterwards, to solicit the contribution of the public towards the rebuilding of the pier, and at length in the 32d year of the present reign, an Act of Parliament has been obtained for the rebuilding of it, under the management of certain Commissioners, with proper powers for the improvement and better maintenance of it, and removing and preventing obstructions and annoyances therein.

Near this place, on the 9th of July, 1574, a monstrous fish shot himself on shore on a little sand, now called Fishness, where, for want of water it died the next day; before which his roaring was heard above a mile; his length, says Kilburne, was 22 yards; the nether jaw opening 12 feet; one of his eyes was more than a cart and six horses could draw; a man stood upright in the place from whence his eye was taken; the thickness from his back to the top of his belly (which lay upwards) was 14 feet; his tail of the same breadth; the distance between his eyes was twelve feet; three men stood upright in his mouth; some of his ribs were 14 feet long; his tongue was 15 feet long; his liver was two cart loads, and a man might creep into his nostrils (p). There were four whales, or monstrous large fish, towed ashore by the fishermen on this island a few years ago, one of which had been found floating on the sea dead, and was brought to Broadstairs, and measured about 60 feet long, and 38 feet round the middle; its forked tail was 15 feet wide, its lower jaw 9 feet long; it had two rows of teeth, 22 in each row, about two inches long; the upper jaw had no teeth, only holes for the lower ones to shut in. It had only one nostril. It had two gills, and the lower jaw shut in about three feet from the end of the nose. It is said this fish sold at Deal for 22 guineas.

(p) Kilburne, p. 215. A bone of this fish is still preserved at Little Nash, in St. John's parish, but it is greatly impaired in size from being exposed so long to the air.

ANTIQUITIES.

Many brass coins of the Roman emperors have been found near Broadstairs, on a fall of the adjoining cliff, after much rain and frost at different times; but they have been so much worn and defaced, as not to be distinguished what they were.

Near the cliffs, about midway between the light-house and Kinggate, are two large barrows, or banks of earth, called by the country people Hackendon, or Hackingdown Banks (p), already noticed above. The tradition is, that these banks are the graves of those English and Danes, which were killed in a fight here; and that as one bank is greater than the other, the former is the place where the Danes were buried, who are said to have been defeated. It is not improbable that this battle referred to in history, was that fought A. D. 853, when the Danes having invaded this island with a considerable force, were attacked by Earl Alcher with the Kentish men, and Earl Huda with those of Surry, and an obstinate battle was fought, in which the English at first got some advantage, yet were at last defeated; great numbers were killed, among which were the two English Generals; and the battle being fought so near the sea, a great many on both sides were pushed into it and drowned (q).

One of these barrows was opened on May 23, 1743, in the presence of many hundred people; a little below the surface of the ground several graves were discovered, cut out of the solid chalk and covered with flat stones; they were not more than three feet long, in an oblong oval form, and the bodies seem to have been thrust into them almost double; a deep trench was dug in the middle, and the bodies laid on each side of it; two of the skulls were covered with wood-coals and ashes. The skeletons seem to have been of men, women, and children, and by the smallness of the latter, these were conjectured to have been unborn.

Three urns made of very coarse black earth, not half burnt, one of them holding near half a bushel, were found with them, which crumbled into dust on being exposed to the air. The bones were rather of a large size, and for the most part perfectly found. In June 1765, the

(p) In ostro Francorum lingua Hacken est Securis, an Ax, Hatchet.

(q) See vol. i. of this list. p. xxxviii.

smaller

ST. PETER'S.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

smaller barrow was opened by order of Lord Holland, who had purchased the land of Mr. Read; the appearances were similar to the former, but no urns were found.

In memory of this battle, Lord Holland erected a fantastic house, or monument, with an inscription, on the larger of the two banks.

CHARITIES.

Richard Culmer, by his will proved in 1444, gave to the poor people of this parish six acres of land, lying at Brodasteyr Lynch, in two pieces; the rent of which to be distributed for ever yearly, among poor people most needy in the parish, on Good Friday, for the health of his soul and his friends. This land is now rented at 4l. 2s. 6d. per annum.

The following are the gifts of charitable persons unknown:

One piece of land, called the Parish Chalk Land, containing two acres, let at 10s. 8d. per annum.

One acre of land, called the Wine Acre, let for 5s. 4d. per annum.

Half an acre, lying at Bradstow, let for 5s. per annum.

Elizabeth Lovejoy, relict of Geo. Lovejoy, Cl. and head master of the King's school at Canterbury, by her last will, dated 1694, gave 20l. to a school-master to teach 20 poor children of this parish; and if there were not so many here fit to be taught, their number to be made up and supplied out of the neighbouring parish of St. John (r).

Hannab Taddy, by her last will, dated 1726, gave to the poor widows of this parish for ever, the yearly interest of 120l. to be laid out in the purchase of lands; and 3l. in money, to be distributed to the poor at the time of her death (s).

There is paid to the use of the church, in money 2d. out of land lying at Swillingdown-bill (t).

(r) See above, p. 360 (f). The will is printed in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, col. p. 93, No. xlvii.

(s) See an extract from the will, ibid. p. 97, No. xlviii.

(t) Robert Lashby, clerk, vicar of this parish, by his will, proved 1493, ordered that his seoffees should enfeoffe the wardens of the church of it, or such other persons as the parishioners of the same should choose, of and in one tenement, with its appurtenances in this parish, at Chirchbill, which he lately purchased of John Sackett, to hold to them and their heirs and assigns for ever, for the maintaining and upholding of this church.

(u) The high or middle chancel was beautified about the year 1730, at the expence of Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, lessee of Callis Grange, in this parish; who, out of the profits of that estate, ordered this chancel as well as hers and her husband's monuments in it, to be repaired as often as should be needful; and the sum of 20s. to be paid yearly to the clerk, on the day of the anniversary of her death, viz. March 29, as an encouragement for him to take due care of the monuments.

The donation of nine loaves and 18 herrings yearly, on Midlent Sunday, to six poor persons, and of 2 yards of blanket yearly, to three poor persons of this parish, from Salmanstone Grange in the parish of St. John, has been already fully taken notice of under that parish, p. 342 (pp).

THE ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION.

THE PARISH of St. Peter is within the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the diocese of Canterbury and deanry of Westbere. The church, which is dedicated to St. Peter, stands on a rising ground. It is a small structure which has something pleasing in the appearance of it. It is built, as the rest of the churches are hereabouts, of flints, covered with rough-cast, and the quoins, windows and doors cased with asblar stone, only the porch has more workmanship used about it; above are stone battlements; the roof is covered with lead, and the portal or door-way has a mitred arch of wrought stone. It consists of a nave with a small isle on each side of it, a large middle chancel, and a smaller one on the north side of it, part of which is now made into a vestry. The middle chancel, which is beautiful, is ceiled in compartments, the framing of which is enriched with carved work, as is the cornice round it. The church is elegantly pewed with wainscot, and has a very handsome desk and pulpit. In the middle isle are two handsome brass chandeliers, which were purchased by subscription; and there is a neat gallery at the west end, well contrived for the convenience of the inhabitants, and the whole is kept in excellent order, and more than usual neatness. At the west end of the middle isle, under the gallery, is a handsome font, of white marble, the gift of John Dekewer, esq; as appears by the inscription, erected in 1746; below the inscription are the arms of Dekewer (u). At the west end of

At the west end of the south isle is a room taken off for the school house. In this church were antiently, besides the high altar in the middle chancel, 3 other altars dedicated to St. James the Apostle, St. Mary of Pity, and St. Margaret. Before these altars, on which were the images of these saints, were wax-lights constantly burning, for the maintenance of which there were several fraternities and legacies left. The font stands at the west end of the middle isle. It is a large leaden basin, placed on a pedestal of brick, plaistered over, which is so ingeniously done, as to look like hewn stone. Several antient monuments and inscriptions are in the body and chancels of this church, the principal ones of which are in the middle or high chancel: viz. a monument against the east wall for James Sipton, vicar of this church, obiit 1665, et. 63. On a white marble table against the south wall, for George Lovejoy, first school-master at Islington for 11 years, then of the king's school at Canterbury, for 19 years, obiit 1685, put up by Elizabeth his wife. He lies buried within the altar-rails. Arms—Azure, 3 bars dancette or, impaling chequy,

ST. PETER'S.

THANET.

CINQUE FORTS LIBERTY.

the north isle stands the tower, which is a sea-mark (v). There were antiently five bells in azure and or, on a fess 3 leopards faces of the 2d. On a white marble against the north wall is an account of the charities given by Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, as follows: Elizabeth, the widow of the Rev. George Lovejoy, cl. by her last will and testament, gave to the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of Canterbury, her lease of Callis Grange in this parish, upon trust, to pay yearly the sums following, viz. To the vicar of this parish, 40l. To a school-master to teach 20 poor children gratis in the parish, 20l. To Jesus Hospital, Canterbury, 5l. To St John's Hospital, in Canterbury, 10l. To Kingsbridge Hospital, in Canterbury, 5l. To Cogan's Hospital, in Canterbury, 4l. To St. Steven's Hospital, near Canterbury, 5l. To Harbledown Hospital, near Canterbury, 5l per annum. She also gave by her will to the school and hospital at Iffington, 200l. and to the school at Witcomb, in Buckinghamshire, 100l.

She wainscotted and adorned this chancel, and gave plate for the communion table in her life time, and two silver flagons for the same by her will on the 29th of March, A. D. 1694, and in the 63d year of her age. She died of an apoplexy before she sealed or finished her will, so that it took no effect as to her real estate, but after many suits and controversies was judged good as to her personal estate; and 20s. she left yearly to be paid to this parish clerk to keep both monuments clean. Leonard Diggs, of Chilham Castle, esq; one of her executors, proved her will, and according to it caused her grave-stone to be laid, and this monument to be erected to her memory. On a small flat stone is a memorial for Mr. Leonard Rowntree, minister, obiit 1624. In the north chancel, on an altar tomb, an inscription for Manasses Norwoode, of Dane Court, and Norwoode, esq; obiit 1636, et. 70. Arms—Ermine, a cross engrailed, impaling 6 coats, viz. Paley of 6 wavy. 2d, Two pales surmounted by 3 eagles on a bend. 3d, A fess ermine, between 6 annulets. 4th, A lion rampant, over all, a saltier engrailed. 5th, Kemp. 6th, A chevron between 3 buckles. In the middle isle, a brass plate for Richard Culmer, carpenter, and Margaret his wife. He died 1485. Another for Nicholas Elstone, and Alice his wife. He died in 1403. At the west end of the south isle is a memorial for Agnes, wife of Edward Tilman, obiit 1692, et. 93. In the north isle an altar tomb for Michael Webb, obiit 1587. A brass plate for Philip Smith, obiit 1451. Another for John Sacket, of this parish, obiit 1623, et. 59. On a plain stone, a memorial for Alexander, son of Alexander Norwoode, of Dane Court, esq; obiit On a black marble for Cornelius Willes, A. M. 19 years vicar of this parish and prebendary of Wells, obiit February 23, 1776, et. 52, and of three of his children, who died infants. Crest, on a wreath, A vulture. On a like stone for the Rev. John Deane, A. M. 41 years vicar of this parish, obiit March 11, 1757, et. 70. A memorial for Daniel Pamflet, gent. and Mary his wife; she died 1698, et. 52. He died 1719, et. 75. An antient tomb for Mrs. Elizabeth Omer, obiit 1709, et. 30. A handsome mural monument and inscription for the Rev. Roger Huggett, M. A. late vicar of the king's free chapel of St. George in Windsor, and rector of Hartley Waspall, in co. of Southampton, eldest son of Roger Huggett, of Stone, in this parish, who was sole heir of the Pawlyns, an antient and respectable family of that place. He died at Hartley, on July 27, 1769; where he was also buried. This monument was erected by John, his only surviving brother, and for Mary Huggett, wife of the said John Huggett, obiit 1780, et. 43; and also for the said John Huggett, who was bred to the sea service, and died in 1783, et. 63. Arms—Gules, a chevron between 3 flags it, which some years ago were cast into six, the great bell being made into two (w). This heads or, impaling parted per pale, sable and gules, a griffin passant, countercharged. A handsome tomb for Mr. Henry Huggett, gent. sole heir of the Pawlyns, of Stone; he died leaving 5 sons, in 1751, et. 70. Sarah his wife died in 1737, et. 53. Arms—Huggett, impaling Omer. On a tablet on the side of the above tomb, an inscription, shewing that in a vault underneath this tomb, lies Mrs. Mary Broke, of Stone, obiit 1719, et. 65; erected by her nephew and executor Robert Huggett. On the opposite side, a tablet for Robert Huggett, of Stone, son of the above-mentioned Robert and Sarah Huggett, obiit 1763, et. 53. A handsome mural monument and inscription, shewing that in a vault underneath, lies Mary, wife of John Dekewer, esq; of Hackney, in co. Middlesex, who died without surviving issue, one son and one daughter lying interred with her, obiit 1748, et. 53. In the same vault lies the above-mentioned John Dekewer, esq; an especial benefactor to this parish, obiit 1762, et. 76. Arms—Vert, on a cross or, 5 fleurs-de-lis sable, between 2 caltrops and 2 lions rampant, impaling argent parted per fess, 3 escallops, 2 and 1, in chief, gules, in base 3 piles wavy sable. A handsome tomb for John Dekewer, jun. son of the above John and Mary, obiit 1740, et. 33. Arms, of Dekewer as above. In the same vault are others of this family. A beautiful mural monument of white marble, on which is the figure of a child sitting, weeping and leaning on an urn, erected to the memory of John-Alexander Dekewer, son of John Dekewer, of Hackney, esq; and Elizabeth his wife, obiit 1778, et. 10 years. Arms as before. A mural monument for the Rev. Mr. Thomas Reynolds, obiit 1754, and Susanna his wife, obiit 1783, et. 46, the daughter of Thomas and Susanna Gray, of this parish. A memorial for Faith Noble, wife of Captain Robert Noble, of this parish, obiit 1764, et. 64. Also the above-mentioned Robert Noble, commander of one of the mast ships of the navy, obiit 1771, et. 83. Arms—On a fess, between 2 lions passant, 3 fusils. Besides these there are memorials for Gray, Read, Witherden, White, Simons, Cooke, Culmer, Wild, Jeken, Tilman, and Kerby. On a large black marble in the middle of the chancel, a memorial for Grace, wife of James White, gent. of Chelham, daughter of Gratian Lynch, gent. of Grove in Staple, obiit 1740, et. 70; also Grace her daughter and wife of Thomas Hawkins, obiit 1746, et. 52. Arms—White. A brass plate in the north isle, for John Sacket, of this parish, obiit 1623, et. 59. At the west end of the north isle is a large white stone, much obliterated, for Michael Pawlen, obiit 1662, et. 37; Anne his wife, died et. 76, and Anne their daughter, 1629, et. 13. In the church-yard are many handsome tombs and grave-stones, of persons of different trades and occupations, residents of this parish.

(v) In the tower is a great crack on the east and west sides of it, from the top almost to the bottom, where it opened near an inch, and more than two at the top, so that the tower by it inclines to the northward; and it is wonderful, that when it was so rent it did not fall; the fissure is filled up with stone and mortar. As tradition reports, it was occasioned by the earthquake in Q. Elizabeth's reign, in the 22d year of which, Mr. Camden tells us, there was a great one felt in this county.

(w) On the bells are these inscriptions: 1st, Thomas Swain made me in 1777. 2d, Robert Catlin fecit 1747-3d, Robert Catlin fecit 1746. 4th, Elijah Mockett and John Staner, churchwardens, 1777. Thomas Swain fecit. 5th, Robert Catlin cast us all, 1746. 6th, The Rev. Mr. John Deane, vicar; Thomas Crump, Robert Huggett, churchwardens. R. C. fecit 1746.

church

ST. PETER'S.

THANE T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

church was one of the three chapels belonging to the church of Minster, in this island, and very probably was made parochial sometime after the year 1200, when the church of Minster, with its appendages, was appropriated, in the year 1128, to the monastery of St. Augustine near Canterbury; it was at the same time assigned, with the above-mentioned chapels, with all rents, tythes, and other things belonging to that church and those chapels, to the sacristy of the monastery; and it was further granted, that the Abbat and Convent should present to the Archbishop in the above-mentioned chapels, fit perpetual chaplains to the altarages of them; but that the Vicar of the mother church of Minster should take and receive in right of his vicarage, the tenths of the small tythes, viz. of lambs and pigs, and the obventions arising from marriages and churchings, which were forbidden at these chapels, and were solemnized, &c. at the mother church only.

As to the chaplains of these chapels, though they were to receive no more than 10 marcs of these altarages, yet they were not excluded the enjoyment of the manses and glebes given to these chapels when they were first consecrated, which made some addition to their income, and enabled them to keep a deacon to assist them on the great and principal festivals. The inhabitants of these three chapelries, preceded by their priests, were accustomed to go in procession to Minster, in token of their subjection to their parochial or mother church (x).

After this the appropriation of the church of Minster, with its appendant chapels, and the advowsons of the vicarages of them, continued with the Abbat and Convent till the dissolution of the monastery in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, when they were surrendered, together with the rest of the possessions of the monastery, into the King's hands.

After the dissolution of the monastery and the change in the service of the churches wrought by the Reformation, this parochial chapel of St. Peter became entirely separated from the mother church of Minster, the Vicar of this parish having no further subjection to it in any shape whatever;

(x) Dec. Script. Thorn, col. 1960, 2002. See a more ample account of the presentation to these chapels, and the rights and dues of them under Minster, above, p. 328, et seq. In 1301 the Abbat of St. Augustine ordained several new deanries, one of which he named the Deanry of Minster, in which this church of St. Peter was included; but this raising great contests between the Abbat and the Archbishop, and the Pope deciding in favor of the latter, these new deanries were entirely dissolved. Dec. Script. col. 1976. See vol. ii. of this history, p. 454.

(y) He is besides duly to officiate here, and be ready to administer the holy communion, on the first lord's day in every month, endeavouring effectually to press and exhort but by the same change he was likewise deprived of several of those emoluments he had before enjoyed in right of his vicarage, and all the great tythes of this parish, being appropriated to Callis and Salmanstone Granges, formerly belonging to the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, as has been already taken notice of above; the endowment of this vicarage consisted only of the small tythes of this parish, the payment of two bushels of corn yearly at Midsummer, from Salmanstone Grange, and a pension of 10l. to be paid yearly out of Callis Grange; besides which he had a vicarage house, orchard, garden, and two parcels of land.

The small tythes of this parish being chiefly arable land, with the other emoluments of the vicarage, by reason of the great increase of every necessary article of life, falling far short of a reasonable maintenance, Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, in the year 1694, further augmented it with the sum of 40l. per annum, to be paid half yearly out of Callis Grange above-mentioned; in consideration of which augmentation, the Vicar is obliged, without accepting any dispensation, to be constantly resident on this vicarage, with sundry other injunctions mentioned in her will (y).

This vicarage is valued in the King's books at 9l. and the yearly tenths at 18s. (z)

In 1588 here were 146 communicants. In 1640 here were 300 communicants, and it was valued at 70l. but it appears by the return made in 1709, to the enquiry into the clear value of church livings, that this vicarage was worth only 30l. clear yearly income, before Mrs. Lovejoy's addition of 40l. per annum.

The advowson of this vicarage coming into the hands of the crown, on the dissolution of the Abbey of St. Augustine, continued there till K. Edward VI, in his first year, granted the advowson of the vicarage of Minster, with the three chapels appendant to it, one of which was this church of St. Peter, among other premises, to the Archbishop of Canterbury; since which this advowson has continued parcel of the possessions of that see, his Grace the Archbishop being the present patron of it.

In 1630 the churchwardens and assistants re-his parishioners to a due preparation, reverend, and constant frequenting and receiving the same; and also duly and publickly to examine such children as are taught in the school, and such others as are willing to come, in the church catechism; and lastly for ever, yearly on the anniversary of the day of Mrs. Lovejoy's interment, or the first Sunday after, to inform his auditors of the contents of her will, and recommend the duties of charity to the rich, and of gratitude, honesty, and contentedness to the poor.

(z) Viz. Endow in decem predial et personal, oblat et al profic per annum 9l. prox et Synod, 21. 4d. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 53.

ported,

ST. PETER'S.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

ported, that here were belonging to the vicarage a mansion, with a well house, one orchard, one garden, and one acre of land thereto adjoining, and one parcel of land, called the Vicar's Acre, lying within the lands of Capt. Norwood, who paid to the Vicar, in consideration of it, five shillings a year; but no care being taken to preserve the bounds of this acre, the place where it lay was forgot, and the rent paid for it disputed, and at length quite discontinued (a).

CHURCH OF ST. PETER.

PATRONS,
by whom presented.

VICARS.

	Henry Ase , in 1444.
	(b) Robert Lafyngbye , obiit 1493.
	(c) John Lawson , in 1559.
The Archbishop.	Wm Christmas , in 1569.
	(d) Leonard Rowntree , Cl. March 1578, obiit 1624.
	John Cbenell , A. M. adm. April 2, 1625, resigned 1633.
The Crown, hac vice.	(e) John Bludworth , A. M. presented July 8, 1633, refig. 1634.
	(f) Tbo. Stevens , Cl. S. T. B. adm. Dec. 11, 1634. 2d induction May 2, 1641.
The Archbishop.	(g) James Shipton , A. M. Oct. 1, 1662, obiit 1665.
	Luke Proflor , A. M. adm. March 19, 1665.
	(h) Nicholas White , A. M. adm. April 16, 1666, obt. 1715.
	(i) John Deane , A. M. Aug. 15, 1715, obiit 1757.
The Crown, hac vice.	(k) Cornelius Willes , A. M. March 28, 1757, obiit Feb. 23, 1776.

(a) See a copy of this return in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, col. p. . . . No. xxxv.

(b) He lies buried in the choir of this church. Will, in Prerog. off. Cant.

(c) Wills, Prerog. off. Cant.

(d) He lies buried in the middle chancel of this church.

(e) Rym Fœd. vol. xix, p. 539.

(f) For his 2d induction he took out the seals. He continued here till some time after 1653, when he was deprived, as is reported, for incontinency, and the cure was served by one William Wingfield, till the restoration.

(g) He was buried under the altar in this church.

(h) He was collated by Archbishop Sheldon, who obliged him to take out a licence to preach, in which is the following clause: Teq; insuper nihilominus monemus per presentes, ut sacras literas pure et sincere tractes easq; cum prudenti simplicitate populo diligenter expones et ne in sermonibus tuis contentiones vel suscites vel spargas neve alterationem sive innovationem quascunq; in doctrina vel ceremoniis preter eam quam

The Archbishop. John Piggott, A. B. April 10, 1776. Present Vicar.

ST. LAURENCE.

THE parish of St. Laurence lies the next southward from that of St. Peter last described, taking its name from the saint to which the church is dedicated. The ville of Ramsgate, within this parish, is within the liberty of the Cinque Ports; but the rest of the parish is within the hundred of Ringslow and jurisdiction of the Justices of the county.

The manor of Minster claims paramount over that part of this parish which lies within the county at large (l); subordinate to which are the following places within the bounds of it.

THE MANOR OF MANSTON, which is situated at the western extremity of this parish, was the seat and inheritance for many generations of a family of the same name. Richard de Manston, as appears by the rolls in the Pipe-office, was one of the Recognitores Magnæ Assise, an office of no small trust and importance, in the reign of K. John. Sir William and sir Roger Manston his brother, lie buried in the Grey Friars in Canterbury (m). The effigies of Roger Manston, habited in his surcoat of arms — Gules, a fess ermine between 3 mullets argent, and his spurs on, kneeling on a cushion, his hands joined and uplifted, his hair cut short, and having a beard, was formerly with the effigies of several other distinguished personages, in one of the windows of Ashford church in this county (n). Wm Manston was sheriff of this county in the 14th year of K. Henry VI, and kept his shrievalty at this seat. He married Julian Hils (o), by whom he had Nicholas Manston, esq; who died in 1444, anno 23 of that reign, leaving by Eleanor his wife, daughter of Edmund Haut, one daughter Joane, who became his sole heir, and regia majestas auctoritate publica hactenus fecit, suadeas. Quod etiam te futurum propria manus tue, subscriptione testatus es.

(i) He rebuilt this vicarage, which was old and much gone to ruin.

(k) He was that year made a prebendary of Wells.

(l) In the 7th year of King Edward I, Hugo de Souden claimed the possession and the usual liberties of a manor in this parish; but the Abbat of St. Augustine, lord of the paramount manor of Minster, claimed the same right and privileges of a manor here, and it was adjudged for the Abbat, as appears by the Iter of J. de Reygate, and his Societes, Justices Itin. in that year.

(m) See Weever, p. 238, and Battely's Somner, p. 57.

(n) See vol. iii. of this history, p. 263 (o). The arms of Manston, as above, are on the roof of the cloysters of Canterbury Cathedral, carved on the stone-work of it.

(o) They both lie buried in this church.

entitled

ST. LAURENCE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

entitled her husband Thomas St. Nicholas, esq; of Thorne, in the adjoining parish of Minster, to the possession of this estate (p); their son Thomas St. Nicholas left a son Roger St. Nicholas, of Thorne, above-mentioned, who died in 1474, and was buried in the chancel of Thorne at Minster. His son Roger St. Nicholas left an only daughter and heir Elizabeth (pp), who entitled her husband John Dynley, of Charlton in the co. of Worcester, esq; to the possession of it; by her he had two sons, Henry and Edward, the eldest of whom succeeded to this manor, which he afterwards alienated about the middle of Q. Elizabeth's reign (q), together with Powcies and Thorne in Minster, to John Roper, of Linsted, esq; afterwards knighted and created Baron of Teynbam, anno 14 James I, (r) and in his descendants this estate continued down to Henry, Lord Teynbam, who about the year 1705, by bargain and sale, inrolled in chancery, conveyed it by the description of the messuage or tenement, called Manson Court, and the scite of the manor of Manson, with its appurtenances, containing 152 acres in this parish and Minster (s), to sir Henry Furnese, of Waldershare, bart. who died possessed of it in 1712; after which it came in like manner as Powcies in Minster, above-described (t), to his grand-daughter Anne, wife of John, Viscount St. John, whose grandson, the present Right Hon. George, Viscount Bolingbroke, (his father having succeeded to that title), alienated it in 1790 to Mr. Gibbon Rammel, of Nash Court, and Messrs. Smith and Wotton, who are the present owners of it.

The mansion has been for a long time converted into a farm-house. The remains of the chapel of it are very considerable, and being overrun with ivy, make a very picturesque appearance, particularly on the north side.

(p) They both lie buried, as does Thomas their son, in this church. Joane Manson, of Herne, by will proved 1487, desired to be buried in that church; her son John Manson, buried in the chapel of St. Pancrase, in the cemetery of St. Augustine's, without the walls of Canterbury. He wills a certain sum for the finding of a chaplain in the church of St. Laurence, of Thanet, for her said late husband's soul, &c. Anthony and Henry Lowryck her brothers. Will, Prerog. off. Cant.

(pp) See more of this family, under Asb, vol. iii. of this history, p. 682.

(q) There was a writ of partition prayed for anno 23 Elizabeth, by Henry Dinley, alias Dingley, and Henry Dingley, alias Dinsly, of divers messuages and 560 acres of land in St. Laurence, Minster, Monkton, and St. Nicholas at Wode, two parts of which were allotted to the 1st Henry, and one-third to the last Henry; the particulars of which may be seen in Coke's Ent. p. 413.

(r) See Philipot, p. 387, 388.

(s) It appears by the schedule on the partition of this estate to have contained 237 acres, let at 95l. per annum, quitrent to Minster manor 2l. 19s.

VOL. IV.

5 B

OSSUNDEN GRANGE,

as it is vulgarly called, the proper name of which is Ozengell, lies about a mile south-eastward from Manson Court, midway between that manor and the church of St. Laurence. This grange, or parsonage, consisting of the tythes of corn and grain of about one moiety of this parish, was part of the antient possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, Canterbury, and was early appropriated to the sacristy of that convent, with which it continued till the final dissolution of it in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, when this estate, among the rest of the possessions of the monastery, came into the King's hands; where it did not stay long, for the King in his 33d year settled it by his dotation charter on his new-founded Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, part of whose inheritance it continues at this time (u).

The Dean and Chapter demise this estate on a beneficial lease, for a term of years, the present lessee being Charles Dering, of Barham, esq; usually called Newlands, and so named to distinguish it from Aldlond, or Oldland Grange, in the adjoining parish of Minster, is situated about a mile northward from St. Laurence church. It was part of the antient possessions likewise of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, near Canterbury, and was very early appropriated to the sacristy of that Abbey. This grange, or parsonage, consisted of the tythes of corn and grain of the other moiety of this parish; and of 126 acres of land, according to the antient measurement of it (v), at the dissolution of the abbey in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII's reign (w), when it came into the King's hands, where it remained till K.

NEWLAND GRANGE,

(t) See Powcies, in Minster, p. 323, for a more full account of the descent of this manor.

(u) On the abolition of Deans and Chapters in the reign of K. Charles I, this parsonage was surveyed soon after the king's death in 1650, by order of the powers then in being, for the sale of it; when it was returned, that Ozingell Grange, with the tythes of hay and corn to the said parsonage or rectory appertaining, was worth, coibs annis, 171l. 6s. 8d.

MEMORANDUM. Sir Henry Palmer, knt. sir John Fotherby, knt. and Robert Moyle, esq; by indenture 1630, granted by the late Dean and Chapter, held these premises with their appurtenances, during the natural lives of sir John Fotherby, Dame Mabella Finch, wife of sir John Finch, and Charles Fotherby, esq; son of sir John Fotherby aforesaid, paying yearly 21l. 6s. 8d. but that the said premises were worth upon improvement, over and above the said rent, 160l. per annum. The said rent was thus apportioned; to the Grange, 11. 16s. 8d. The tythes 20l. Total 211. 16s. 8d. Parl. Surveys, Augtn. office.

(v) Dec. Script. col. 2202.

(w) King Henry VIII, in his 32d year, by indenture demised, inter alia, to Thomas Spilman, of Canterbury, gent.

all

ST. LAURENCE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

Edward VI, by indenture, June 12, in his first year granted it, among other premises, in exchange, to Thomas, Archbishop of Canterbury (x), since which it has remained parcel of the possessions of that see, his Grace the Archbishop being at this time entitled to it (y).

It is demised by the Archbp. on a beneficial lease, the present lessee being the widow of Mr. Gilbert Bedford, who is the occupier of it.

THE MANORS OF UPPER AND NETHER COURT, were so called from their respective situations in regard to each other; the name of the former is now almost forgotten, and there is only a faint tradition of the site of it.

The manor of Upper Court was in early times the estate of a family, which took its name from their residence in this parish, whence it was called the manor of St. Laurence, alias Upper Court; and one of them, Robert de St. Laurence, held this manor in the reign of K. Edward I, as one knight's fee, of the Abbat of St. Augustine, as of his manor of Minster; from this family, it not long afterwards passed into that of Criol, and on the aid paid in the 20th year of K. Edward III, for John de Criol, knt. was charged for it as one knight's fee, which Ralph de St. Laurence before held in manner as above-mentioned; in which name it afterwards continued down to sir John Criol, who held it in the beginning of K. Henry VI.'s reign. His son sir Thomas Keriel, (for so he spelt his name,) was Knight of the Garter, a man of great note in the history of that time, for his valiant behaviour in the French wars, who was at length slain in the second battle of St. Albans, in the 38th year of K. Henry VI, asserting the cause of the House of York (z); about which time, but probably before his death, this manor was alienated to John White, merchant, of Canterbury, afterwards knighted, who held it at his decease in the 9th year of K. Edward IV, as did his descendant Robert White in the 12th year of K. Henry VIII, holding this manor, together with ten acres of land in the adjoining manor of Minster, of the Abbat of St. Augustine, by knight's service (a). From one of his descendants this manor passed by sale to Roger Bere, or Byer as the name was sometimes spelt, who died seised of it in the 4th and 5th of Philip all those 31 quarters and a half of corn, and 63 quarters of barley, which the farmer of the rectory or grange of Newland, late belonging to St. Augustine's Monastery, was bound to pay the king as a parcel of his rent for the same, to hold for 21 years, at the yearly rent of 21l. Inrolm. of leases, Augtn. office.

(x) Deeds of Purchase and Exchange, Box Kent, F. 33, Augtn. office.

(y) Robert Spracklyn, esq; was lessee of this estate under the Archbishop in 1643, at the yearly rent of 21l. 10s.

and Mary (b), and was succeeded in it by his son John Byer, who in the very beginning of the next reign of Q. Elizabeth, alienated it to Tho. Johnson, and he died seised of it in the 8th year of her reign, in which year Paul Johnson his son had livery of it (c). He left two sons, John and Timothy, which latter was of Fordwich (d); John Johnson the eldest son, succeeded him in this manor, and resided at Nether Court in this parish, in whose descendants it continued till it was at length, about Q. Anne's reign, sold to Edw. Brooke, of Nether Court, gent. long before which the mansion of this manor had been demolished, though part of the ruins of the chapel belonging to it were then remaining (e); but he being possessed of Nether Court adjoining, where he resided, and the mansion of Upper Court being demolished, the site of it became forgotten, and the lands of the two manors so blended together, as to be with difficulty distinguished; since which they have continued in the same unity of possession, as may be further seen below in the description of Nether Court, being now, both of them, the property of Thomas and John Garrett.

THE MANOR OF NETHER COURT

is situated about a quarter of a mile southward from the village of St. Laurence; it was anciently part of the possessions of the family of Sandwich, in which it continued in K. Edw. III.'s reign; in the 20th year of which, at the making of the Black Prince a knight, Master Nicholas de Sandwich paid aid for it as one fee, which sir Nich. de Sandwich, knt. before held in the parish of St. Laurence, of the Abbat of St. Augustine, Canterbury. After this family was become extinct here, this manor came into the possession of that of Gosball, or Goshale, of Gosball in Ash parish, with whom it remained till about K. Henry IV.'s reign, when it was carried in marriage, by a female heir, to one of the family of St. Nicholas, one of whose descendants, Roger St. Nicholas, who died in 1484, leaving a sole daughter and heir Elizabeth, she entitled her husband John Dynley, of Charlton in the co. of Worcester, to the possession of it (f), whose eldest son Henry afterwards alienated it to Maycott, from whom it was not long afterwards sold to Lucas, and he in the very beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, (z) See more of him above, under Sarre, p. 306. The arms of this family were formerly in one of the windows of this church.

(a) Rot. Esch. ejus an. (b) Ibid. (c) Ibid.

(d) See vol. iii. of this history, p. 603.

(e) They were pulled down about 60 years ago, and the materials carried away for the building of a barn wall just by. Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 186 et seq.

(f) Philipot, p. 388. See vol. iii. of this history, p. 682.

passed

ST. LAURENCE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

passed it away, with Upper Court above-mentioned, to Tho. Johnson, who died seised of them both in the 8th year of that reign, as appears by the Escheat rolls of it (g), in whose descendants, residents at this manor, both of them continued down till they were, about Q. Anne's reign, sold to Edward Brooke, gent. who rebuilt the mansion of Nether Court (b); after which this manor became divided into moieties, one of which became vested in Mr. Mark-Sellers Garrett, and the other in the name of Moses, whose two children John and Mary Moses, the latter of whom married Thomas Abbot, of Ramsgate, esq; of the heirs of Moses, this moiety was purchased by Mr. Mark-Sellers Garret above-mentioned, who thus became entitled to the entire fee of these manors, and died possessed of it in 1779; since which it is now become vested in his two sons and devisees, Tho. and John Garrett, gentlemen.

A Court Baron is held for this manor.

CLYVESEND,

or Cliffsend, is a manor which takes its name from its situation, at the end of the chalk cliff which comes from Ramsgate, lying at the south-west bounds of this parish, and extending partly into that of Minster. This manor was antiently part of the possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, and was, with their other estates in this neighbourhood, in their own occupation; one of the monks of their convent residing here constantly for the management of it. In the 12th year of K. Edward II.'s reign, anno 1318, one of them, Henry de Newenton, residing here, was, on a quarrel taking place between the Abbat and his tenants of his manor of Minster, besieged by them in this manor-house, and then imprisoned for six days, and afterwards sold, says

(g) There is a pedigree of this family in the heraldic visitation of the co. Kent, anno 1619, beginning with John Johnson, of the island of Thanet, who by Sibill Crouch left Paul Johnson, of Fordwich, who married Mary, daughter of Peter Heyman, of Sellinge, esq; by whom he had 8 sons and 4 daughters. Of the sons, John was of Nether Court; Timothy the 2d, was of Fordwich, where mention is made of him; Henry the 3d son, married Mary, daughter of John Honeywood, of Elmsted; and Silas Johnson, the 7th son, married Sarah Aussen, and was buried in St. Mary Bredin, in Canterbury, in 1633. John Johnson, the eldest son, of Nether Court, married 1st, Mary, daughter of Stephen Ellis, of Kennington, esq; and 2dly, Jane, daughter of Mr. Henry Crispe, of Quekes, knt. He left issue 2 sons, John and Paul, and one daughter. John Johnson, the eldest son, was of Nether Court, and married Judith, eldest daughter of Adam Spracklyn, of Ellington, esq; by whom he had 3 sons, of whom John the eldest was born in 1599, and 5 daughters. They bore for their arms—Quarterly, per fess indented sable and or; in the 1st quarter, a pelican vulnerating itself or.

(b) Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 187.

(i) Dec. Script. col. 2034. See Pat. 11 Ed. II. p. 2, de Manso Abbatis apud Clivusend. Tan. Mon. p. 205.

Thorne, to one Walter Capell, for 4s. (i) In this state this manor continued till the dissolution of the monastery in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, when it came into the King's hands.

It is now the property of the Right Honourable Earl Cowper.

Cliffs-end is a small hamlet, in which there is another considerable farm-house, which belongs to the Governors of Bethlehem Hospital in London, and several cottages.

PRESENT STATE OF ST. LAURENCE.

The village of St. Laurence, having the church on an hill on the west side of it, is neat and small, being pleasantly situated in the south-east part of this parish, and commands one of the most extensive prospects in this island, as well towards the sea as the neighbouring parts of the county. This parish is about three miles from east to west, and two miles from north to south. The lands in it are more enclosed than the more northern parishes above-described. It is very populous, and has in it several small hamlets, or knots of houses, besides those particularly mentioned above; among which, in the western part of it, are Manston Green, and Sprating Street (k); on the northern, Hains (l), and Lymington; on the eastern, Halliscandane, and Herson; and towards the south, Great and Little Cliffsend, Cbilson (m), Courtstairs; and adjoining to the sea, Pegwell, which is a small manor, usually styled Pegwell alias Courtstairs, and is an appendage to that of Sheriffs Court in Minster parish, as has been taken notice of above, in the description of that estate (mm).

Adjoining is Courtstairs, alias Pegwell Bay, where the inhabitants catch shrimps, lobsters, soles, mullets, &c. and a delicious flat-fish, called a prill, much sought after. From this bay to

(k) Here is a farm, which once belonged to Hills, and then to Fineux, whence it passed in Q. Elizabeth's reign to Mr. Roger Manwood, chief baron of the Exchequer, at which time it consisted of 120 acres of land, rented at 20l. per annum. Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 177. It now belongs to Messrs. John and Thomas Weston.

(l) Sir Edward Master, of Canterbury, knt. by his will proved 1690, gave to Mary, daughter of his son Edward Master, and her heirs, his messuage or tenement, with its appurtenances, and 172 acres of land in this parish, St. John Baptist, and St. Peter's in Thanet, at or near a place called Hayne. Will, Prerog. off. Cant. Abraham Terry, of Faversham, by will proved 1729, gave to his son Abraham, his messuage, land and appurtenances, at and near a certain place called Hayne, in St. Laurence. Will, Prerog. off. Cant.

(m) Now the estate of Messrs. Cooper and Curling.

(mm) At a small distance from the church to the eastward, are the remains of a small chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, now converted into a cottage. There was a chantry founded in it, for the support of which several lands hereabouts were given, which at the suppression of these chapels in K. Edward VI.'s reign, came into the hands of the crown, and became a lay fee.

a place

ST. LAURENCE.

T H A N E T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

a place called Cliffs-end, instead of chalk, the ground next the sea is a sort of blueish earth, somewhat like Fuller's Earth; it is about 16 feet above the sand, and in it are seen strata's of culver and other fish shells, lying in a confused manner, one on the top of the other. This earth has been carried away frequently by people, as Fullers Earth, in great quantities, to dispose of as such; but on a trial it was found very deficient, and not partaking of any quality belonging to it.

By the return made by Archbishop Parker, in 1563, to the Privy Council, it appears that there were then here 98 households; but this place, owing to the prosperity of Ramsgate, has greatly increased for many years past, insomuch that in 1773, here were in this parish, including Ramsgate, which contains more than two-thirds of the houses and inhabitants of the whole parish, 699 houses, and 2726 inhabitants; and in 1792, there were found 825 houses and 3601 inhabitants; which is a great increase for so short a space as 9 years (n).

A fair is held here yearly, on August 10, for toys, pedlary, &c.

In this parish lived one Joy, who in K. William's reign had such a reputation for very extraordinary strength of body, that he was called the English Sampson, and the strong man of Kent, and was taken notice of by the King, Royal Family, and the Nobility, before whom he performed his feats. In 1699 his picture was engraved, and round it several representations of his performances, as pulling against an extraordinary strong horse, breaking a rope, which would bear 35 hundred weight, and lifting a weight of 2240lb. He was drowned in 1734.

In the month of March, 1764, between Ramsgate and Pegwell in this parish, a part of the cliff, 70 feet high, on the surface of which was a corn field, gave way for about 20 yards in length and five yards in breadth, and fell into the sea. On the eastern part of this parish, in a valley adjoining to the sea is so called from the way here which leads to the sea, through the chalk cliff; the inhabitants, like those of other places, are fond of having it famous for its antiquity, and have fancied the name of it to have been derived from Romans gate, that is, from its being used as a port, or

THE VILLE AND TOWN OF RAMSGATE,

(n) From a survey communicated to Mr. Boys, by the late and justly so filed worthy, vicar of this parish. See Mr. Boys's Collections for Sandwich, p. 832.

(o) In the great and antient charter of the cinque ports, Ramsgate, Stonar, and Sarre, in the isle of Thanet, are said to be members of the Town and Port of Sandwich; but in the landing place, by the Romans; but besides, that its name was never so written in antient writings, it may well be doubted, whether during the time of the Romans frequenting this island, there was here any way or gate at all to the sea; and it seems plain, that it was dug first through the cliff, as the rest of the sea-gates were in this little island, for the conveniency of the fishery, no Roman coins, &c. have been known ever to have been found here, as they have at Bradstow, where the Romans, if they had any at all, might have a station in this island.

The ville of Ramsgate, though in the parish of St. Laurence, yet maintains its own poor separately, notwithstanding which, it is assessed to the church in common with the rest of it; but the inhabitants have claimed the privilege of choosing one churchwarden from among themselves, and raising only a proportion of the church fees. It is within the liberty of the Cinque Ports, being an antient member of the town and port of Sandwich, and within the jurisdiction of the Justices of the same; but in K. Henry VI.'s time, there being some dispute concerning it (o), that King, to take away all controversy relating to it, united it by his letters patent to that town and port, within whose jurisdiction it still continues.

The Mayor of Sandwich appoints a deputy, or constable here; and the inhabitants are allotted by the commissioners of that corporation, what proportion they shall pay towards the land-tax, raised by that port. This ville, pleasantly situated in a vale of no larger extent than itself, was antiently a small poor fishing town, consisting of a few houses, and they poorly and meanly built, some of which are still remaining. Since the year 1688, through the successful trade which the inhabitants were concerned in to Russia and the East country, it began to be very much improved; the old houses were many of them raised and made more commodious dwellings, and abundance of new ones built, after the modern taste, still nearer to our own time. And since sea-bathing has been thought indispensably necessary, both to kill time and preserve health, Ramsgate has been much resorted to during the summer season. It was originally built in the form of a cross; but some few years since, a new handsome street and other buildings have been added to it, and it has now many elegant and commodious houses in it, numbers of which are converted into lodgings, besides which here is an assembly room, several good inns, and old Latin customal, cited by Lambard, Ramsgate and Stonar are omitted, and only Sarre mentioned as belonging to Sandwich, though not of the soil but for the goods; but Ramsgate is expressly mentioned in the charters of King James and King Charles II. See Jenke's charters, p. 126. Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 175.

other

ST. LAURENCE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

other pleasureable accommodations for the use of the company, who resort hither. Warm salt-water baths have, on a very good construction, lately been completed; and a very neat chapel of ease has been erected in the centre of the new street, in consequence of an act passed in 1785; which chapel was consecrated by Archbp. Moore, on Friday July 8, 1791; at a small distance from it below, the Presbyterians have a good meeting-house; and at the lower part of the town the Anabaptists have also a meeting-house. By the authority of Parliament likewise, this town has been well paved, lighted, watched, and otherwise improved, and a market established, which is well supplied with meat, poultry, fish, and vegetables. And in 1786, an Act passed for establishing a Court of Requests in Ramsgate, and other parishes therein mentioned, for the recovery of small debts.

The poor state of this place in the reign of Q. Eliz. may be seen from the return made in the year 1565, being the 8th of that reign, by the commissioners appointed for that purpose, of all the maritime places in this county; which was, that it was under the government of the town and port of Sandwich, and had in it houses inhabited 25, boats and other vessels 14; three of 3 tons, three of 5, two of 8, one of 10, three of 12, two of 16; men appertaining to these boats for carrying of grain and fishing, 70; but how great must the increase of inhabitants and wealth of late years in this town appear, when even 20 years ago, (and great additions and improvements have been made to it since,) the return was, of the houses in this town inhabited 443, empty 44, inhabitants 1810 (p).

The bounds of the liberty of the Cinque Ports at this ville in 1560, as entered in the records of Sandwich, were as follows:

The sea lyeth on the east side of our liberties,

(p) In 1747, the money raised for relief of the poor was 224l. 18s. 2½d. In 1787, 608l. 2s. 0d. Boys's Col. p. 832.

(q) Boys's Collections, p. 832.

(r) Philipot, p. 387. There is a pedigree of this family in the heraldic visitation of the co. Kent, anno 1619, which begins with Nicholas Spracklyn, of St. Laurence, who married Isabel, daughter of Robert Oxenden, by whom he had 4 sons and 1 daughter; of whom Robert the eldest, was of Ramsgate, gent. and died in 1590, leaving issue 4 sons and 5 daughters; of whom Adam the eldest, was of Ramsgate, kn. and died in 1610, æt. 58, having married Katharine, daughter of John Esday, of Hytbe, by whom he had 7 sons and 10 daughters; of whom Robert the eldest, was of St. Laurence, and Adam the 2d son, was of Fordwich, gent. which Robert, of St. Laurence, esq; died in 1646, æt. 69, having married Margaret, daughter of Robert Moyle, of Buckwell, esq; by whom he had 7 children; of whom Adam the eldest, married in 1631; Catharine, daughter of Sir Robert Lewknor, of Acrise, kn. He resided at Ellington, but afterwards came to an unfortunate end; for having wasted his estate by his riotous living and frequent quarrels and disorderly behaviour, he became subject to and on the south side from the sea towards the west, a way called Thomas Tarye's way, leading by a close called Nynne Close, and so leadeth by a close called Beysannts, and so down through Ellington, and so the way leadeth towards the south part of Ramsgate mill, and so down to a way that leadeth between Herstone and Ramsgate, and so on that way up the end of Jellyngham-bill, and so on almost to the sea cliff, a way of six feet broad (q).

Within the bounds of this ville and jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, lies about half a mile westward of the town of Ramsgate, and almost at the eastern extremity of the village of St. Laurence. It was formerly a gentleman's seat, being for many generations the residence of a family of the same name, several of whom lie buried in St. Laurence church; but the inscriptions on their tomb-stones, and on their plates of brass in it, have been long since obliterated and torn away. About the latter end of the reign of K. Edward IV, this family was succeeded by that of Thatcher, a family of great antiquity in this island, as well as other parts of Kent; and after they were extinct here, this seat passed in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, into the name of Spracklyn, several of whom lie buried in the chancel of St. Laurence church, where their inscriptions on their monuments and gravestones yet remain (r). In which family it continued down to Adam Spracklyn, esq; who resided here (rr); but came to an ignominious death in 1653, as is further noticed below; after his death, his interest in this estate became vested in his son Mr. Spracklyn, of Peter-House College, Cambridge; but the possession of it, by the incumbrances to which it was made subject by outrageous fits of passion and ragings, in one of which, having conceived a very great prejudice against his wife, he murdered her on the 11th of December, 1652; for which fact being apprehended, and Ellington being within the ville of Ramsgate, and consequently within the liberty of the Cinque Ports, and jurisdiction of the Town and Port of Sandwich, he was carried there and tried at the sessions of that town on April 22, following, when being found guilty and hung on the 27th of that month, his body was carried to St. Laurence church, and there buried near his wife. See a full account of the murder in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 183. He seems to have left issue several children, one of whom was Mr. Spracklyn, of Peter-House, in Cambridge, who afterwards was possessed of his father's interest in this estate. They bore for their arms—Sable, a saltier ermine between 4 leopards faces. See Lewis's Thanet, p. 186.

ELLINGTON,

(rr) See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, f. 123. Robert Spracklyn, father of Adam above-mentioned, on the marriage of his 2d son Robert in 1644, with Rebecca, eldest daughter of Richard Laminge, esq; settled on him 40l. per annum out of his messuage or capital mansion, and 110 acres of land in this parish, as appears by St. Augustine's Court Rolls.

his

ST. LAURENCE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

his father in his life-time, seems to have come to Mr. Troward, in whose descendants it continued down to Mr. Wm Troward, (son of Edward,) of Manston Green in this parish, who died possessed of it in April 1767, intestate and without issue, upon which it came to his two nieces and heirs at law, Susan, wife of Robert Buck, of London, mercer; and Mary, the wife of Robert-Gunsley Ayerst, of Canterbury, Cl. (the two daughters of Sarah his sister, who married Alban Spencer, gent.)

Mrs. Buck's moiety of this estate was settled on her husband in fee, who surviving her, devised it to sundry of his relations of his own name in Yorkshire, in tail, and they are now in the possession of it.

Mrs. Ayerst's moiety was afterwards alienated to John Garrett, the tenant of this estate, who by his will devised it to his nephew Mr. John Garrett, who now possesses and resides at Ellington.

OCCURRENCES.

On the 29th of May, 1726, being Whitsunday, a very great storm of thunder and lightning began here about twelve o'clock at night, and about two there was a crack louder than ordinary, being so near that the noise of the thunder was heard as soon as the lightning was seen; the lightning or fiery exhalation which came out of the cloud, fell into the chimney of a dwelling house at the east end of it, which it threw down, together with the gable head, making its way in the following manner: in the garret it divided itself into three streams, as it were; one went down to the bottom of the house, rending up the boards of the floors to make its way; a second passed right forth into the other dwelling adjoining, where it was extinguished in the cellar; and the third ran in an oblique line down the stairs into a closet or scullery in the kitchen; the whole leaving behind it a strong smell of sulphur. In the chimney was a swallow's nest with young ones, which were all struck dead; and in a closet in the fore chamber were fifteen pewter plates, which were so far melted as to be useless; a copper saucepan had a hole made in the bottom of it; and some earthen ware was all broken; but though in the several lodging rooms of the house, which were very small, there were men, women, and children in bed, by Providence, they all escaped unhurt (s).

(s) See Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 176, where is a plan of the house and the several directions of the lightning in it.

(t) It was the opinion of a very able seaman and elder brother of the Trinity House, Captain Conway, that if an harbour was made here only for the reception of ships of 200 tons and under, it would prevent nine-tenths of the damage in the Downs; as he supposed all such wait-

Another such storm of lighting broke into a house at Church-bill in this parish, in 1730, and did a great deal of damage.

RAMSGATE PIER.

THE PIER OF RAMSGATE lies at the eastern part of the town; it was at first made of timber, to make a barbour for the shipping and defend the town against the ocean. It is not known when it was first made, but it must have been before K. Henry VIII.'s time; for Leland, in his Itinerary, vol. vii, p. 137, says, "Ramsgate a iiij myles upward in Thanet, wher as is a Smaul Peere for shyppeis."

Before the present modern pier was built, this barbour was scarce capable of receiving vessels of 200 tons burthen at any state of the tide; but the foreign trade of the place having increased in the late wars, the inhabitants were desirous to have as much of their shipping as they could laid up at home, and fitted out here to promote the further trade and benefit of it; accordingly about the very beginning of K. Geo. I.'s reign, this pier was considerably enlarged, and the barbour thereby rendered more commodious (t). For the maintenance of this pier, orders and decrees have from time to time been made by the Lord Wardens of the Cinque Ports, by which the inhabitants were empowered to chuse pier-wardens, to look after the repairs of it, and to collect such droits, or rates, as by these decrees and ancient immemorial custom were payable for shipping and goods brought into it; one of these orders is dated in Q. Elizabeth's reign, Henry Brooke, Lord Cobham, being then Lord Warden; and the last of them in 1616, Edward, Lord Zouch, being then in that office; but the title of them shews, that the rates then confirmed had been from time out of mind (u).

The several schemes and attempts to have a new barbour made from Sandwich into the Downs, for the preserving of ships in distress, speedily fitting them for sea, and preserving the lives of numbers of the King's subjects, has been already fully mentioned above, in the account of Sandwich; the last of which was in 1738, when on an address from the House of Commons, the King ordered a survey and estimate on this business to be forthwith made; but the great expence of it, at a time when the nation laboured ing for a wind to proceed westward, would take shelter in it.

(u) By a paper among the writings of this pier, it appears that in 1575 the payment of these rates were disputed by some contentious persons; but on the Pier Wardens applying to Henry Howard, Earl of Northampton, at that time Lord Warden, they obtained his injunction for the payment. Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 175 et seq.

under

ST. LAURENCE.

THANET.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

under the heavy burthen of a war with both France and Spain, occasioned it to be then laid aside. This in 1744 brought forth a petition from divers merchants and commanders of ships, and others, to the House of Commons, in opposition to the plan then in agitation for making a commodious harbour from Sandwich into the Downs, for the reception and security of large merchant ships and men of war; setting forth, that a more convenient harbour might be made at or near Ramsgate, capable of containing a greater number of merchantmen, and ships of war of 60 or 70 guns, on account of the advantageous situation of the place and setting of the tides, where no back-water would be wanted, and there would be besides a saving to the public of several hundred thousand pounds.

But nothing appears to have been further done towards it, and the whole affair seems to have lain dormant, till the public was roused by a violent storm, which happened on Dec. 16, 1748, during which, a great number of vessels being driven from their anchors in the Downs, and being forced upon the south coast of the Isle of Thanet, several found safety in the little harbour of Ramsgate.

This seems at once to have opened the eyes of the public, and caused them to be turned upon Ramsgate, as a proper place for the reception of ships in distress from bad weather in the Downs. In consequence of which, another petition was presented in 1749, to the House by the merchants of London, owners and masters of ships, in favour likewise of the harbour here; and a counter-petition from the Mayor, Jurats, &c. of Sandwich, setting forth the great injury it would be, not only to the haven of Sandwich, but to the adjoining country, the marshes of which would by that means be drowned; upon which, after a thorough examination of the whole, the House resolved, that the merchants of London had fully proved the allegations of their petition, and a bill was ordered in, for enlarging and maintaining this harbour of Ramsgate (v), which bill received the Royal assent in the course of that session (w); since which, some small intervals excepted, this pier has been carried on and new built, on a most magnificent construction, of stone, at the expence of several hundred thousand pounds; and notwithstanding the great care and attention which has been paid to the completing of it, by the trustees, who have from time to time taken the advice and opinion of the most skilful seamen, pilots and engineers, to render this harbour as useful and adequate to the purpose it was at first intended for, yet much dispute has arisen, and the public clamour has been great of the inutility of it, and its being a work carried on solely for the purpose of self-interested views, and Parliament has been applied to, to interfere in the management of it, though in vain.

However, this clamour seems of late to have in some measure subsided, and the apparent use and benefit of it seems to be at this time in general acknowledged. The pier has been built of Portland and Purbeck stone, and extends near 800 feet before it forms an angle, and is 26 feet broad at the top, including the parapet; its depth increases gradually from eighteen to 36 feet; the south front is a polygon, its angles 5 on a side, each 150 feet, with octagons of 60 feet at the ends, and the entrance 200 feet. But after this noble piece of masonry had been erected at so considerable an expence, the harbour, which contains 46 acres in its area, as the work of the piers advanced, the space inclosed and the waters rendered more quiet, and in that respect more fit for the purposes of an harbour, became filled with silt, or mud, having no rivulet or back water to clear it out again. This increased so much, that had not some effectual remedy been found, the harbour would have in a few years been entirely filled up and become a dry land, instead of a receptacle for shipping. The remedy proposed by Mr. Smeaton, the engineer, appointed to it by the trustees, was an artificial backwater by the means of sluices. This was effected in 1779, by forming a basin at the upper end of the harbour, by means of a cross wall, in which were six sluices, the operations of which were amazingly powerful, and they entirely cleared away the fullage from it down to the chalk, besides carrying out of the harbour's mouth great quantities of sand. From which time Ramsgate harbour began to put off its forelorn appearance of a repository of mud, which it had made for 15 years before, and to give the public the greatest probability of its future utility, and its answering every purpose that it was at first designed for. A storehouse has been erected contiguous to the basin for the reception of goods, that should be obliged occasionally to be put on shore, while the vessels were repairing; and a dock for occasionally repairing such vessels.

After the basin and cross-wall had been erected, it was found that this harbour became subjected to such a degree of agitation and inquietude, from the waters tumbling in in hard

(v) And likewise for preserving that of Sandwich, and for granting for this purpose the sum of 200l. yearly, out of the profits and dues of Ramsgate harbour, towards amending and preserving that of Sandwich; which payment was a compromise to quiet the opposition made to this act by the Mayor and Corporation of Sandwich.

(w) The duties payable to this harbour, are from all vessels passing through the Downs.

gales

ST. LAURENCE.

T H A N E T.

CINQUE PORTS LIBERTY.

gales of wind, as to render it more eligible to vessels of burthen to submit to the risque of riding it out in the Downs, than come into this harbour in such an unquiet state.

This inconvenience too has been at length happily remedied, by an advanced pier of stone, which has been carried out from the east pier head to the length of near 400 feet; which at the same time has rendered the approach into the harbour more safe and easy than it was before; insomuch that now all the difficulties seem to be removed that have occurred in the progress and execution of this long desired establishment; and the general opinion now appears to be, that this harbour, though an artificial one, is yet not improperly chosen.

The number of ships and vessels which have taken shelter in Ramsgate harbour in stormy weather, have been,

In 1780 - 29	1785 - 213	1789 - 320
1781 - 56	1786 - 238	1790 - 387
1782 - 140	1787 - 247
1783 - 149	1788 - 172

and in the year 1791, in the month of January, there were 130 fail of ships and vessels at one time in this harbour, driven in by stress of weather, among which were four West Indiamen, richly laden, from 350 to 500 tons; and if we suppose that the whole, or the greatest part of these ships would have been riding in the Downs during the stormy weather, there can be no loss to judge what difficulties and dangers those must have experienced, who did ride it actually out there. Within these last 17 months upwards of 600 fail of ships and vessels have taken shelter

(*) This is the evidence produced by Mr. Smeaton, in his printed Historical Report of Ramsgate Harbour, (from which great part of the above account is taken) to shew the saving of such a number of ships and vessels, of property to the amount of several hundred thousand pounds, and a great number of valuable lives, which otherwise would have been driven on the flats and rocks, and in all probability lost.

Mr. Smeaton has given in his report, a plan of Ramsgate Harbour, and of the Downs, to shew the facility of ships making this harbour in a storm.

(y) When this Bill was brought forward in the House of Commons, it was asserted, that there were then vested in the trustees for the use of this harbour 40,000*l.* in the 3 per cents—10,000*l.* in the 4 per cents, besides a floating balance of 30,000*l.* in hand; the sum required to perfect the proposed works was 119,000*l.*—and that in addition to the above, the trustees, &c. would have a surplus income, were even two-thirds of the duties reduced, of 1,510*l.* yearly, besides annuities on lives of 1,100*l.* per annum more, which would soon fall in.

The duties payable to the maintenance of this harbour are lowered from 6*d.* per ton, on ships between 20 and 300 tons, to one-third; from 2*d.* per ton on larger ships to 1*d.* (ships to pay whether passing on the west or east side of the Goodwin Sands, which was not so before); duty on every chaldron of coals and every ton of stones from 3*d.* to 1½*d.*

in this harbour, of which above 300, (and the vessels in the Downs, have scarcely ever exceeded that number,) were bound to and from the port of London (*).

The acts which have passed for the making and preservation of this harbour, under which the trustees have acted, are the 22*d.* of K. George II, the 5*th.* of George III, for enlarging the powers of the former, and the 33*d.* of Geo. III; which last repeals the two former acts, and besides enlarging and regulating the powers given in them, was passed principally for the reduction of one half of the duties then paid towards the support and carrying forward the works of it (y).

C H A R I T I E S.

Wm Walker, by his will in 1618, gave 40*s.* to be paid yearly out of certain tenements and lands, to be distributed to 20 poor people of this parish and the town of Ramsgate, and to be equally divided between them yearly for ever, on Candlemas day; which premises are now vested in Jacob Sawkins and James Smith.

Alexander Long, by will in 1700, gave the annual sum of ten shillings, to be paid out of an estate at Ramsgate, to be distributed in three-penny loaves of baker's bread to 40 poor people of Ramsgate, on Easter Eve, yearly for ever; which estate is vested in Mr. John Buckett.

Captain Robert Parker, by his will in 1705, gave 7*l.* a year, to be paid out of an estate at Dumpton in this parish, to be distributed yearly, 20*s.* thereof for a sermon on every Good Friday, and the remaining 6*l.* to be laid out yearly in

The sums received and paid on account of Ramsgate Harbour, are as follows:

Sums raised to Midsummer 1791
by the rates and duties . . .	389,594	12 2
Ditto by annuities granted under the 1st and 2d acts . . .	87,521	5 4
Dividends of the trust monies in the funds	14,300	0 0
Other small sums	687	18 8½
	£. 492,103	16 2½

Sums expended to Midsum. 1791.
In the works at the harbour . . .	231,283	13 7½
In discharge of annuities, salaries and contingent expences . . .	156,578	8 0
In poundage to collectors . . .	25,216	4 3½
Purchased in the funds 40,000 l. which cost	37,379	10 0
Bad debts	420	17 3½
	£. 450,878	13 2½

Balance partly deposited in the Bank of England, and part remaining in other hands . . . 41,225 3 0

In this act the power of the justices of Sandwich, for the maintenance and preservation of that haven are enlarged, as may be more particularly seen above in the account of it three-

ST. LAURENCE.

T H A N E T.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

three-penny loaves of baker's bread, for the use of the poor of this parish and of the town of Ramsgate, equally to be divided between them, at his tomb in the south chancel of the parish church; half thereof on every Good Friday, and the other half equally on every Whit Sunday and Christmas Day; and when no sermon should be preached on Good Friday, the money given for that, to be distributed as the bread; which estate is vested in the heirs of Mr. John Fagg.

Thomas Evers, by his will in 1716, gave the sum of fifty shillings, to be paid yearly for ever, out of his estate at Dumpton, to be laid out on three-penny loaves, to be distributed yearly to the poor of Ramsgate and St. Laurence, on Ascension Day; but if a sermon be preached on that day, 10s. to be deducted for the preacher; which estate is now vested in Mr. Thomas Ashenden.

Martin Long, by will in 1749, gave 60s. out of an estate at Pyfing in this parish, 20s. of which to be paid yearly to the poor of St. Laurence, on Lady Day, and 40s. yearly to the poor of Ramsgate, on the same day; which estate is vested in the Rev. Wm Abbot.

Ann Roberts, by will in 1753, gave the sum of 3l. 3s. 4d. bank stock, the yearly produce of which is 1l. 17s. 2d. for the clothing of the poor; two thirds of the annual produce to poor antient widows at the town of Ramsgate, and the other third to poor antient widows of this parish; which money is vested in the name of Martba Hawkesley.

Elizabeth Turner, by will in 1770, gave 800l.

(z) The church itself is a handsome building, of field stones, rough-casted over, as the rest of the churches in this island are, and seems to have been built at several times; of the two side chancels the north one is said to have been built by the Mansons, of Manslon Court, in this parish, many of whom lie buried in it, though most of their monumental inscriptions are perished through length of time. Waver has however preserved two of them, being those of Roger Manson, and Julian his wife, and of Thomas St. Nicholas, who married Joane Manson, and had by her Thomas, entombed here likewise. There was likewise here a brass plate, having the effigies of a man and these arms-quarterly, 1st and 4th, A fess ermine, between 3 mullets. 2d and 3d, on a cross engrailed a cinquefoil, and underneath an inscription for Nicholas Manson, esq; obiit 1444. A brass plate, now torn off, for . . . Sayen Nicholas, esq; and Jobane his wife; she died 1499; and just by, on a flat stone a brass with the effigies of a woman and these arms-Ermine, a chief quarterly; the inscription gone. A monument fixed against the north wall, for Frances, wife of Thomas Coppin, of Westminster, and daughter of Robert Brooke, of Nadon, in co. Suffolk, esq; who died during her stay here at Manslon, in 1677, æt. 54. Arms-Parted per pale, azure and gules, 3 boars heads couped or, a chief of the last. On a stone near this monument and adjoining to that of Nicholas Sprackling, are four shields of arms, 1st, A cross engrailed, a rose in the centre; 2d, A cross engrailed; 3d, A fess between 3 mullets, impaling the 1st coat; 4th, As the 3d, quartering the first. Part of this chancel is now made into a very handsome vestry. In the high chancel are several memorials for the family of Sprakeling. One for Robert

4 per cent. bank annuities, the annual produce of which is 21l. to be distributed to ten widows of captains and mates of ships belonging to Ramsgate, two guineas to each, yearly on Christmas Day; which money is vested in the name of Mr. John Quince.

John Simpson, in 1773, gave 100l. in money, the annual produce of which is 5l. vested in the trustees of Ramsgate harbour, the same to be distributed yearly on December 23, to the poor of the ville of Ramsgate.

The donation of 9 loaves and 18 herrings yearly on Midlent Sunday, to six poor persons of this parish; and of two yards of blanket yearly to three poor persons likewise of this parish, from Salmanstone Grange in the parish of St. John, has been already fully taken notice of, under that parish above, p. 342 (pp).

THE ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION.

THE PARISH of St. Laurence is within the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the diocese of Canterbury and deanry of Westbere. The church, which is dedicated to St. Laurence, consists of three isles and three chancels, having a tower steeple in the middle of it, standing on four pillars, the capitals of which display the rude conceits of the artist. This tower, on the outside, is encircled with a string of very plain octagonal small pillars and semicircular arches, in the true Saxon taste (z). There are five bells in it (a).

Besides the high altar in this church, there

Sprakeling, esq; eldest son of sir Adam Sprakeling, knt. who left 2 sons, Adam and Robert, and 3 daughters; obiit 1646, æt. 69. For Margaret, daughter of Robert Moyle, esq; and wife of Robert Sprakeling, esq; by whom she had 7 children, of whom survived 2 sons and 3 daughters as before mentioned, obiit 1623, æt. 49. For Margaret Sprakeling, one of the daughters of sir Adam Sprakeling, knt. deceased, obiit 1620. A brass plate and inscription for Adam Sprakeling, gent. 2d son of sir Adam Sprakeling, knt. deceased, obiit 1615, leaving 2 sons, Robert and Henry, and 2 daughters, Katharine and Rebecca. Another brass plate and inscription for sir Adam Sprakeling, knt. son of Robert Sprakeling, gent. who left issue 7 sons, Robert, Adam, John, Henry, Henry, Charles and Thomas, and 10 daughters there named, obiit 1610, æt. 58. On a flat stone a memorial for Dame Katherine Sprakeling, daughter of John Esday, of Hith, gent. wife and widow of sir Adam Sprakeling, knt. by whom she had 7 sons and 10 daughters, obiit 1627, æt. 67. Between the north and middle isles is a plain monument fixed to a pillar for Robert Sprakeling, eldest son of Nicholas Sprakeling, gent. which Nicholas Sprakeling had 4 sons, Robert, John, Leonard and Luke, and a daughter Alse; Robert Sprakeling had 4 sons, Nicholas, Adam, Luke and John, which Adam made this monument; he had 5 daughters, and died 1590. Below is the figure of a man lying, scratched in the marble, with a pen in his hand, writing, Garde promesse fidelement. Arms-Sable, a saltier between 4 leopards faces or, impaling or, a chevron gules between 3 bulls passant sable. In this church is an antient grave-stone of one Umsfry, but the arms are gone as well as the inscription, if it ever had any. Formerly the bell ropes used to hang were formerly others dedicated to St. James, St. Catherine, St. Thomas, and the Holy Trinity; be-hang down between the chancel and nave of the church, but a bell-loft is now made which is ceiled underneath. In the body of the church there have been built several galleries, (which make a most unsightly appearance,) to make as much room as possible for the numerous inhabitants of this parish, who had increased to four times the number that they were 60 or 70 years ago; but the inhabitants of Ramsgate are now accommodated with a chapel of ease, lately built in that ville, as has been already noticed. Besides the above there are the following, of a more modern date. In the south chancel a mural monument for Sarah, wife of Mr. Adam Spencer, obiit 1745, et. 57, who with her 3 children were deposited in a vault near it; she had 9 children, of whom 4 only survived; also for the aforesaid Mr. Adam Spencer, merchant, obiit 1757, et. 68. Arms—Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Argent; 2d and 3d, Gules, a fret or, over all, on a bend sable, 3 escallops of the 1st, impaling barry of 6, azure and gules, a chief ermine. A mural monument for Margaret, wife of Martin Read, and daughter of John and Mary Curling, of Cbilton, obiit 1753, and 2 of their children who died infants; also for the above Captain Martin Read, obiit 1792, et. 83. Arms—Gules, a saltier or, between 4 leopards faces proper. A mural monument for Capt. Martin Long, obiit 1751, et. 65, erected by his sister Elizabeth, who left 10s. per annum to keep it clean. Mrs. Elizabeth Long, sister of Capt. Martin Long, obiit 1753, et. 58. Mrs. Catherine Abbott, widow of Mr. William Abbott, and sister of Capt. Martin Long, obiit 1779, et. 87. Arms—Sable, a lion rampant argent.

In the south isle, a mural monument for Mary, the wife of John Gibson, of Ramsgate, and daughter of George Curling, of West Hatch, in Essex, esq; obiit 1785, et. 26. Arms—Quarterly, 1st and 4th, Gules, a bend argent between 3 holly leaves proper; 2d and 3d, Azure, 3 curlews argent, two and one. A white tablet for Martha, widow of Darell Sberte, jun. of Wadburst, in the county of Suffex, esq; and daughter of for Robert Kemp, bart. late of Appeston, in co. Suffolk, obiit 1789, et. 77. A white tablet at the west end for Dorothy, wife of Mr. William Abbott, obiit 1728, et. 42, and 2 of their daughters both named Dorothy, and their son Adam, obiit 1735, et. 22; also the above-mentioned Mr. William Abbott, obiit 1755, et. 70. A black tablet for Dame Anna Holmans, obiit 1741, et. 40, daughter of Thomas Fisher, gent. also for Ann Holmans, obiit 1768, et. 64, daughter of Thomas Garrett, lord of this manor, both wives of Nicholas Holmans; also the aforesaid Nicholas Holmans, obiit 1775, et. 77. A mural monument for Mary, wife of Mr. John Coxen, obiit 1737, et. 58; and one son Thomas; also the said Mr. John Coxen, obiit 1764, et. 82. A black tablet for Capt. Stephen Hooper, of Ramsgate, who was lost on a voyage from Jamaica, et. 41 years, in 1767; also for Anne his wife, obiit 1786, et. 57. A black marble tomb for Capt. Thomas Redwood, obiit 1754, et. 84; also Thomasine his wife, obiit 1755, et. 84. Arms—Three fleurs-de-lis on a chevron between 3 keys. In the great chancel, a memorial for Mrs. Ann Bookey, relict of Capt. Wm Bookey, of the East India Company's service, obiit 1770, et. 50. In the vestry a black tablet for the Rev. Robert Tyler, A. M. 26 years vicar of this parish, obiit June 10, 1766, et. 65; also Mrs. Mary Tyler, his widow, obiit 1779, et. 85. In the north isle, a mural monument for Mrs. Dorothy, relict of Mr. Thomas Tomson, obiit 1768, et. 66; she left one surviving son Richard. A white tablet to the memory of several of the Tomsons. A mural monument for the Tickners. A memorial for Peter Johnson, A. M.

which there were kept wax-lights, the expence of which was maintained by voluntary son of Henry Johnson, gent. and Fellow of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, vicar of this church, obiit April 18, 1704, et. 75. Arms—Parted per fess dancette, a vulture. A mural monument of black marble for Capt. John Richardson, obiit 1776, et. 72; also Mrs. Mary Sbaston, widow, his sister, obiit 1775, et. 79; also Mary Cock, his niece, obiit 1737, et. 57. A mural pyramidal monument for Mr. Wm Regerston, of London, obiit 1782, et. 60. Arms—Parted per pale or and argent, a lion rampant sable, impaling, argent, a talbot bound sable; on a chief 3 crosses fitch or. On a plain stone, Capt. John Pettit, died; the rest is covered by the pews; arms—On a chevron gules, 3 bezants, between 3 griffins heads sable, crowned or. A tablet in the south cross for Anna-Eliza, eldest daughter of the Rev. William-Worcester Wilson, D. D. obiit 1792, et. 36. A memorial for the Rev. Peter James, M. A. late of Greenwich, and Rector of Ighbam, obiit 1791, et. 53. A memorial for Captain Edward Williamson, obiit 1792, et. 51. A memorial for Joseph-Royal Loring, Lieut. of the Royal Navy, obiit 1792, et. 41, second son of Capt. Joshua, and Mary Loring, of Roxburgh, in N. England. The following are plain slabs, mostly at the east end of the church; for Mrs. Elizabeth Kelly, daughter of Dr. Kelly, of Winchester, and sister of Dr. Kelly, Regius Professor, of Oxford; also Martha Kelly, sister to Elizabeth, wife of Lieut. Charles Kelly, of the Royal Navy, obiit 1788, et. 68; arms—A castle between 2 lions rampant; for Matthew Brooke, A. M. Fellow of King's College, and Rector of Walton in Herts, and Vicar of this parish, obiit 1739, et. 74; arms—On a fess 3 martlets, a bordure engrailed, impaling a chevron between 3 covered cups. For Capt. Matt. Brooke, obiit 1747, et. 48; arms—Brooke, impaling 3 talbot bounds, 2 and 1; for John Gillow, obiit 1682, et. 31; for Mary Gillow, wife of the above, obiit 1682, et. 33; arms as before. For Tbo. Gillow, of Walmer, obiit 1673, et. 49; arms—Gillow. For Matthew Bookey, son of M. and A. Bookey, obiit 1747, et. 48. Memorials for several of the Tomsons, Abbotts, Pamsfleets, Harnets, Law, Joad, Moses, Parkers, Quince, Carraways, Redwood, Evers, Curling, Whites, Napletons, and Hoopers; for Geo. Garrett, esq; obiit 1775, et. 63. A mural monument for Jane, second wife of Wm Hooper, obiit 1782, et. 54; also William and Jane, two of their children, removed from a vault at the other side of the path. A mural monument, with inscription, that in a vault hereto adjoining, lie John and Thomas, sons of Tbo. and Mary Abbott, they both died in 1747, infants; also Capt. Thomas Abbott, obiit 1750, et. 60; also Elizabeth Curteis, wife of Mr. Samuel Curteis, of London, brewer, and daughter of Captain Thomas and Mary Abbott, obiit 1761, et. 19, and their son, an infant. A white monument and inscription, that in the vault lies Ann, wife of Mr. Thomas Abbott, daughter of Thomas Halsley, esq; of Great Gaadesden in Hertfordshire, obiit 1728, et. 20; also Thomas and Mary Halsley, son and daughter of the said Thomas and Ann Abbott, who both died infants. Arms—A chevron between 3 pears, impaling, on a pile, 3 griffins heads erased.

At the west end of the church-yard, a mural monument for the Stocks. Arms—Parted per chevron, ermine and argent, impaling Ermine, on a chevron 3 pears, on a canton a crescent. On the south side the church-yard, mural monuments for Goatley. Arms—Ermine, a goat's head erased, impaling, on a chevron 3 mullets, between 2 crescents in chief, and one escallop in base; one against the south side of the church for the Austens and Coxens. Arms—A chevron between 3 lions paws erased. A monument at the west end of the church-yard for Brotherly and Quince; an adjoining one for the Masted

and

ST. LAURENCE.

T H A N E T.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

gifts and legacies. In the west window of the church were formerly painted these five coats of arms, viz. Criol, who owned Upper Court, being—Or, 2 chevrons and a canton gules. Septvans, azure, 3 wheat-screens or, an annulet for difference. He dwelt in this parish, and lies buried under a monument in Asb church. Of St. Nicholas, who married Jane Manstone—Ermine, a chief quarterly or and gules; in the first quarter an annulet for difference. Of Chiche—Azure, 3 lions rampant argent, a bordure of the second; and of Manston—Gules, a fess ermine, between 3 mullets (b).

This church was one of the three chapels belonging to the church of Minster in this island, and was very probably made parochial sometime after the year 1200, when that church, with its appendages, was appropriated in 1178, to the monastery of St. Augustine, near Canterbury; it was at the same time assigned with the three chapels, and all rents, tythes and other things belonging to that church and these chapels, to the sacristy of the monastery; and it was further granted, that the Abbat and Convent should present to the Archbishop, in the above-mentioned chapels, fit perpetual chaplains to the altarages of them; but that the Vicar of the mother church should take and receive in right of his vicarage, the tenths of small tythes, viz. of lambs and pigs, and all obventions arising from marriages and churchings which were forbid at the chapels, and were solemnised, &c. at the mother church only (c).

In the year 1275, Robert, Archbishop of Canterbury, consecrated the semetry of this church, and granted it the right of sepulture, with the restrictions, that the tenants or occupiers of land, who were parishioners of this chapel, should be buried at their mother church of and Holman; another adjoining for Libered and Joad. At the west end of the church-yard are two mural monuments, one for Thomas Garrett, obiit 1744, et. 78 years; also Stephen his son, obiit 1749, et. 48; and Mary Casby his daughter, obiit 1751, et. 57; also Mary, daughter of the above Mary Casby, wife of George Ranier, obiit 1751, et. 33; likewise Thomasine Garrett, wife of the above Thomas Garrett, obiit 1753, et. 78; and Ann Bax, daughter of the late Mary Casby aforesaid, obiit 1755, et. 31; also Sarah Brown, obiit 1763, et. 54; also Thomasine Smith, daughter of Mark Sellar and Ann Garrett, obiit 1773, et. 20. Arms—On a fess, a lion passant. The other monument is for Mark Sellar Garrett, obiit 1779, et. 61; also for John Garrett, obiit 1779, et. 66. Arms—A lion passant.

These are the principal monuments and grave-stones in this church and the church-yard of it, though there are many others of lesser note.

(a) On the bells are the following inscriptions: 1st, Thomas Garrett, John Tickner, churchwardens, S. K. 1729. 2d, Sam. Knight, fecit, 1724. 3d, Sam. Knight, fecit, 1724. George Norton and John Hooper. 4th, Mr. Edward Troward, Daniel Ranier, churchwardens, R. P. fecit, 1704. 5th, Mr. Edward Troward, Daniel Ranier, churchwardens. Richard Phelps made these five bells, 1704.

(b) In 1538 William Saunders, mariner, died here, and Minster, as the parishioners of this chapel were before wont to be buried; and that none of them should be buried in the burying-place here, without the express leave and content of the Vicar of Minster, notwithstanding they, by their last will and testament chose, or by any other title ordained their burial to be in the burying place of the chapel; but that children and poor people, who were parishioners of it, and not tenants or occupiers of land, might here be buried with this proviso, that all obventions, oblations, or legacies arising, or being on account of such sepulture, or bodies being buried in the yard of this chapel, should fully and wholly be divided between the Vicars of Minster and this chapel of St. Laurence; that no prejudice be done by this ordinance to the mother church of Minster, as to marriages and churchings which should be done for the future at the mother church of Minster, as they were wont before this ordinance (d).

These obventions, oblations and legacies, arising from funerals, were to be faithfully laid up and kept by the Vicar of this chapel and his chaplains, till they should be equally divided between him and the Vicar of Minster, which was ordered to be done every month, unless they should be required of the Vicar of Minster, or his chaplain or proctor to be divided oftner. But a composition, we are told, was made between the patrons and several incumbents, which was confirmed by the Archbishop, which was, that the incumbents of these chapels or dependant churches should pay only the tenth part of all their real profits to the incumbent of the mother church: which composition was, it is said, duly observed about the year 1370 (e).

Although the chaplains of these chapels were by his will proved that year, left to the high altar of this church for his tythes and oblations there, by him negligently forgotten or withholden, 2s.—to the reparations of the church, 40s.—to the mending of the highway between Ramsgate and the parish church, 40s.—to be distributed in this parish church in the day of his forthfare, among priests and clerks 10s.—and to be there distributed among poor people to pray for his soule and all christian souls 10s.—and in the day of his tringital among priests and clerks 10s.—and other 10s. among poor people—and on the day of his anniversary among priests and clerks 10s.—and other 10s. among poor people.

Adam Spracklyn, of the precincts of Christ Church, Canterbury, gent. by his will proved 1727, devised one little orchard, containing 13 perches and an half, lying at Southwood, in St. Laurence, to John Sawkins, of Canterbury, gent. and his heirs, in trust, to permit the sexton of the said parish of St. Laurence, and his successors, sextons of the same, to receive the rents and profits of it; upon condition, that he and they should constantly keep up and maintain, in the usual manner, the grave of one Thomas Trice, who was buried in the church-yard. Will, Prerog. off. Cant.

(c) See Dec. Script. col. 1690, 2002. See Minster, above, p. 329. (d) Dec. Script. Thorn, col. 1922.

(e) Warton's Defence of Pluralities, p. 101, 102, edit. 2d. Perhaps this was rather an agreement made between

the

ST. LAURENCE.

THANET.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

to receive no more than 10 marcs of these altar-rages, yet they were not excluded the enjoyment of the manſes and glebes given to theſe chapels when they were firſt conſecrated, which made ſome addition to their income, and enabled them to keep a deacon to aſſiſt them. On the great and principal feſtivals, the inhabitants of the three chapels, preceded by their prieſts, were accuſtomed to go in proceſſion to Minſter, in token of their ſubjection to their parochial or mother church (f).

After this, the appropriation of the church of Minſter, with its appendant chapels and the advowſons of the vicarages of them, continued with the Abbat and Convent till the diſſolution of the monastery in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, when they were surrendered, together with the reſt of the poſſeſſions of the monastery, into the King's hands.

After the diſſolution of the monastery, and the change in the ſervice of churches wrought by the reformation, this parochial chapel of St. Laurence became entirely ſeparated from the mother church of Minſter, the Vicar of this pariſh having no further ſubjection to it in any ſhape whatever; but by the ſame change he was likewiſe deprived of ſeveral of thoſe emoluments he had before enjoyed in the right of his vicarage, and all the tythes of corn and grain within this pariſh being appropriated to the two granges, or parſonages of Newland and Ozingell, and the ſmall tythes of it to that of Salmestone, as has been already mentioned above. The endowment of this vicarage conſiſted only of the yearly ſtipends of ſix pounds paid out of Newland Grange, and of 10*l.* paid out of Ozingell Grange, a vicarage houſe, barn, and two acres of glebe. But this income, by reaſon of the increaſe of every neceſſary article of life, falling far ſhort of a reaſonable maintenance, Archbiſhop Juxon, in conformity to the King's letters mandatory, in 1660, augmented this vicarage with the addition of 40*l.* to be paid yearly out of Newland Grange (g).

This vicarage is valued in the King's books at 7*l.* and the yearly tenths at 14*s.* (h) In 1588 here were communicants 656, and it was valued the two vicars for a certain ſum of money to be paid by the vicar of this chapel to that of Minſter, in lieu of the moiety of the obventions, &c. to be paid to the latter. See Lewis's Hiſt. of Thanet, p. 181.

(f) In 1301, the Abbat of St. Auguſtine ordained ſeveral new deaneries, one of which, named the Deanry of Minſter, in which this church of St. Laurence was included; but this raiſing great contentions between the Abbat and the Archbiſhop, and the Pope deciding in favour of the latter, theſe new deaneries were entirely diſſolved. Dec. Script. col. Thorn, 1976. See vol. ii. of this hiſt. p. 454.

(g) Lewis's Miſſ. Collections. Kennet's Impr. p. 256.

(h) Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 52. (i) Prynne, p. 906.

(k) He and his ſucceſſor are mentioned in the wills in Prerog. off. Cant.

at only 20*l.* In 1640 here were 650 communicants.

The advowſon of this vicarage coming into the hands of the crown on the diſſolution of the Abbey of St. Auguſtine. continued there till K. Edward VI, in the firſt year of his reign, granted the advowſon of the vicarage of Minſter, with the three chapels appendant to it, one of which was this church of St. Laurence, among other premiſes, to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, ſince which this advowſon has continued parcel of the poſſeſſions of that ſee, his Grace the Archbiſhop being the preſent patron of it.

In the year 1700 the vicarage houſe was new built, and made a handſome and commodious dwelling, by the then Vicar of this church.

CHURCH OF ST. LAURENCE.

PATRONS,
by whom preſented.

VICARS.

	John ———, in 1275.
	(i) Edmund ———, in 1300.
	(k) Nicholas Foks , in 1501.
	Edward Mynge , in 1543.
	(l) Wm Marſh , A. M. 1561.
The Archbiſhop.	John Caldwell , Cl. A. B. Jan. 7, 1567.
The Crown, by laſe.	John Kingſton , Cl. March 6, 1595, reſig. 1606.
The Archbiſhop.	John Cole , Preſb. July 4, 1606, reſig. 1614.
	Thomas Turner , A. M. July 18, 1614, obiit 1629.
	Wm Dunkin , A. M. May 16, 1629.
	(m) Peter Johnſon , A. M. in 1654, ejected Aug. 1662.
	John Young , A. B. Dec. 4, 1663, obiit 1699.
	Matt. Bookey , A. M. March 20, 1700, obiit March 16, 1740.
	(n) Robt. Tyler , A. M. May 31, 1740, obiit June 10, 1766.

(l) In Archbiſhop Parker's acts of viſitation at this time, he is ſaid to be a prebiter, married, learned, and reſident, hofpitable, and a licenſed preacher, and having two benefices.

(m) He died in 1704, and was buried in the north chancel of this church. Having taken preſbyterian orders Oct. 26, 1654, he removed from the rectory of Marſfield, in diocēſe of Cbicheſter, to this vicarage, probably on account of the eſtate of Nether Court, which he poſſeſſed in this pariſh; but in 1662 he quitted it on account of his not being epiſcopally ordained, and reſuſing to own the invalidity of his former ordination by taking epiſcopal orders.

(n) He was rector of Tunſhall, and vicar of Sittingbourne, and lies buried in this church.

Richard

STONAR.

T H A N E T.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

(o) Richard Harvey, A. M. 1766, relig. June 1793.

(p) Ricb. Harvey, jun, A. M. June 17, 1793. Present Vicar.

STONAR.

STONAR is the last parish to be described in this island; it lies adjoining southward to St. Laurence, on a peninsula, surrounded on the west, south and east by the waters of the river Stour; and indeed by the new cut lately made at the northern part of it, is now entirely separated from the island of Thanet, and is become, in some measure, an island of itself. This place was written Eastanore and Eastanores, in ancient records, which name signifies the eastern border, shore, or coast (pp), though some have supposed it to have been so called for distinction sake, from another parish in this county, near Faversham, but westward of it, upon the sea coast, simply called Ore, which formerly belonged likewise to the Abbat of St. Augustine, as this Ore did. In the time of K. Edward I, the tenants, or inhabitants of Stonar, withdrew themselves from the protection of the Abbat of St. Augustine, the Lord of this place, and united themselves to the port of Sandwich; and it is enumerated among the members of that port, in an ordinance of K. Henry III, in the year 1229. This occasioned many legal disputes between the Abbat and the people of Stonar, and between the Abbat and the Corporation of Sandwich, the latter of whom undoubtedly did, till very lately, exercise jurisdiction in Stonar; but since the year 1773, when judgment upon record was entered up in the Court of King's Bench, at Westminster, by the Mayor and Jurats of Sandwich, confessing that Stonar was not within the jurisdiction of Sand-

(o) In 1772 he was collated to the vicarage of Eastry, which he held with this vicarage by dispensation.

(p) Son of the former vicar.

(pp) Thus that double shore, famous the one for Cymene, the other for Cerdice's landing there, is, in our elder historians, Ethelwerd and Florence of Worcester, written Cymenes Oran, and Cerdices Oran. See Somner's Ports, p. 98.

(q) Stonar is mentioned likewise as within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports, and a member of the town of Sandwich, and as having been immemorially so time out of mind in the charters of King James and King Charles II. See Jeake's Charters, p. 120, 126; and it is mentioned as a member of Sandwich in all the most ancient records of the Cinque Ports in the Tower and elsewhere, and it was always accounted so till the year 1771, when the mayor acting as coroner within the parish of Stonar, a motion was made against him in the Court of King's Bench, at the instigation of Lord Viscount Dudley, proprietor of the manor of Stonar, and in 1773, at a common assembly held at Sandwich, it was agreed that judgment upon record should be forthwith entered up in the Court of King's Bench, confessing that

VOL. IV.

5 E

wich, but in the county at large, this place has been totally detached from Sandwich and the Cinque Ports, and is now esteemed to be in the hundred of Ringslow, and within the jurisdiction of the Justices of the County at large (q). The manor of Minster claims paramount over this parish, subordinate to which is which was part of the ancient possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine near Canterbury, and was given to it by K. Cnute, some little time before he gave Sandwich to the priory of Christ Church; and this grant was afterwards confirmed by K. Wm Rufus, who granted to St. Augustine and Abbat Wido, that they should in future enjoy all their rights and customs at Eastanores (r).

THE MANOR OF STONAR,

In the year 1090, being the fourth of the above reign, there was a great dispute between the Citizens of London, and the Abbat and his tenants of Stonore, the former claiming the seignory of this place as a sea port, subject to that city; but the King favouring the Abbat, it was adjudged by the Justices, that no one in future should claim any thing here, but that Abbat Wido and his Convent should possess this land and the whole shore to the middle of the water, freely and quietly, without any dispute whatsoever; and that the Abbat should freely possess all rights and customs belonging to this manor (s), and upon this judgment there were duplicate charters of the same King (t); and it was confirmed afterwards by the several charters of K. Henry I, K. Stephen, K. John (u), and K. Henry III; (v) which charter of K. Wm Rufus first above-mentioned, granting that the Abbat should hold firmly and honorably all his rights and customs at Eastanores, as well in the water as the land, was confirmed by K. Edward III, in his 36th year, by his letters of inspeximus.

Stonar was not within the jurisdiction of Sandwich, but in the county at large, and that 100l. be paid for Lord Dudley's costs and expences. Boys's Collections, p. 724.

(r) Annal. Sci Aug. Mss. f. 67. This is certainly the grant of William Rufus and not of the Conqueror, who died at Roan, in Normandy, on the 5th of the ides of Sept. anno 1087. Whereas Abbat Scotland, Wido's predecessor died so late as the 3d of the nones of that month. Wido could not therefore have been then Abbat.

(s) Dec. Script. Thorn, col. 1793.

(t) The two charters above-mentioned are printed at large in Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, col. No. liii, liv, p. 110.

(u) Rot Cart, anno 5 Johannis, m. 23, pro tota terra de Stanores et toto littore usq; in medietatem aque. These grants were afterwards confirmed to the Abbat and Convent by the Popes Lucius and Eugenius. Regist. Mon. Sci Aug. cart. 9. 11.

(v) Dec. Script. col. 1793. The charters of K. Henry I. and King Stephen are printed in Lewis's Hist. col. No. lv, lvi, p. 111.

In

STONAR.

THANET.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

In the year 1104, anno 11 Henry I, the Abbat obtained the grant of a fair, to be held yearly within his manor of Stonar, for five days together, before and after the feast of the translation of St. Augustine which was on May 26; and K. John in his 5th year, granted to the Abbat and his successors the privilege of a market at Stanores, with all customs, forfeitures, and pleas belonging to it (w); and K. Richard I, in his 5th year, likewise confirmed the same (x). About which time and afterwards there subsisted continual quarrels between the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, and the Prior and Convent of the Holy Trinity, afterwards Christ Church, in Canterbury, respecting their possessions, maritime customs, and various other rights at Stonar, Sandwich, and other neighbouring places; to compromise and put an end to which, they entered into a composition in 1242, anno 27 Henry III, by which the Abbat and Monks and the Prior and Chapter of Canterbury, agreed, inter alia, that the Prior, &c. should have all their maritime customs in the haven of Sandwich, on both sides of the river agreeable to the tenor and operation of their charters, as they used to have; allowing, however, to the Abbat, &c. their accustomed rule and usages in Stanores, and their lands there; and all their usual maritime customs appendant, granted by charters to their possessions beyond Hennebrigge, towards Clivesende, Ramefgate, Margate, Wesfgate, and other places in Thanet; and the Prior and Chapter permitted the Abbat and Convent, with their proper domestics, to pass free of expence in the ferry boat over the river; but that this privilege should not extend to their tenants (y).

The Abbat of St. Augustine had a Court here, wherein he claimed a right of judging and punishing in cases of life and death; but the exercise of this jurisdiction was not, it seems, at all pleasing to the men of Stonar; they therefore refused to hold their lands and tenements in Stonar, of the barony of the Abbat, and the better to defend themselves against him, they had united themselves to the port of Sandwich; but the King then took the Abbat's part and gave the cause for him, from which time they were Intendentes Abbati, though it seems very unwillingly; for in the year 1266, the men of Stonore and Sandwich, through malice to the Abbat, burnt two water-mills belonging to the Abbat, one at Stonore and the other at Hepesfleete (z).

A Fleming having been murdered by some of his countrymen upon the sea shore at Stonar, above high-water mark, in 1270, the Abbat's

bailiff there made pursuit after the murderers, with hue and cry, and finding the brother of the deceased and four of his friends with the body in the ville of Stonar, he apprehended them and committed them to prison; three days after there was a Court held there, by the Abbat's steward, before whom they were arraigned of the murder, and pleading not guilty, they put themselves for trial upon the vill of Stonore; upon which Simon Wigbert, the Mayor of Sandwich, with many others of that place, came into court and demanded the prisoners for trial at the Hundred Court of Sandwich, alledging that the Abbat neither had, nor ought to have any such court or privilege of trying offenders, and that whatever he did of that sort must be to the prejudice of the Prior of Christ Church, and of the community of Sandwich. To whom it was replied, that the Abbat could do no injury to the Prior in this business, because, before the Prior had any right in Sandwich, the Abbat of St. Augustine had Stonar, with all its liberties, by gift and grant of sundry Kings of England, and by confirmation of the then King, to hold it as freely as any King had held it heretofore; and it was further set forth, that it had been already settled between the two churches by composition, that the land above high-water mark towards Stonar was to belong to the Abbat; and the Community was told that the Abbat did not wish to do any thing contrary to the liberty of Sandwich, being himself a Combaron of that place, and their Peer; and it was requested of them, not to obstruct or disturb him in the exercise of those privileges which he had been used of right to enjoy in Stonar. Upon this the clamour abated, and the men of Stonar were charged to make diligent enquiry, and to bring in a true verdict, who acquitted the prisoners; and the steward made proclamation accordingly (a).

In the 8th year of K. Edward I, the Abbat made complaint that the Stonore men had united themselves to the port of Sandwich; and on a dispute concerning the pasturage of certain sheep in the Abbat's marsh, had abused his servants, who had attempted to impound them; upon complaint of which, the King directed his writ to Stephen de Pencestre and John de Lovetot, to enquire into the premises by a jury of knights, &c. to be impannelled by the sheriff; who gave it for the Abbat, viz. that the town of Stonore was of the foreign, and no member of the Cinque Ports, and gildable to the King; they likewise set a fine of 40s. upon the men for their assault and battery; and 40s. more for default of suit and (w) Rot. Cart. 5 Johannis, N. 219. Regist. Mon. Sci Aug. cart. 196.

(x) See this charter printed in Lewis's Hist. col. N. lvii, p. 112. Regist. Mon. Sci Aug. cart. 210.

(y) Dec. Script. Thora, col. 1888.

(z) Ibid. col. 1915.

(a) Dec. Script. Thorn, col. 1919.

STONAR.

T H A N E T.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

service to the Abbat; not long after which K. Edward granting a new charter to Sandwich, Stonore claimed again to be a member of that port, and offered to maintain one of the five vessels allotted to be found by that port at their own proper charges, whenever Sandwich should be summoned to man out their ships; but this it seems was not then granted (b).

About this time the Mayor of Sandwich and others were attached by Robert de Stokbo, sheriff of Kent, to answer to a plea of trespass for assaulting the sheriff's bailiff, on an execution of the King's writ within Stonore; some pleaded to the jurisdiction and refused to answer, except in the Court of Skipway; but all of them failed in their defence and were committed to gaol (c).

In a composition between Nicholas, Abbat, and the Convent of St. Augustine, and the men of Stonar and Sandwich, in the year 1283, under the mediation of Stephen de Penchebster and Roger de Northwood, it was agreed that the men of Stonore should acknowledge to hold all their tenements in Stonore of the Abbat and Convent, and their successors for ever, paying to them their due services in fealty, rent, relief, suits of court, and other due customs, and that they should be amenable to the Abbat's Court; and that the Abbat and Convent should exercise all jurisdiction in Stonore, the same as was granted by the royal charters.

On the other hand, the tenants of Stonore and their heirs, being mariners or merchants, and engaged at sea or elsewhere in traffic, should not be fined for non-attendance at the Abbat's Court, whilst so engaged, from the date of the summons till the Court was ended, unless they themselves pleaded, or were impleaded; provided nevertheless, that the rest of the tenants, when duly summoned, should come to the Court at Menstre in person, or by Essoiner or Attorney of the Court; that the tenants of Stonore residing there might feed their own sheep, but not other people's, in the Abbat's marsh within Hennebergh, paying annually for the herbage, on the eve of St. John Baptist, at the rate of a farthing a head; but out of Hennebergh they might not claim pasturage. The Abbat and Convent and their successors might likewise feed their sheep in the same marsh, and erect mills and other buildings at pleasure; and if they should think proper to inclose the marsh or any part of it, the tenants then should have no pasturage in such inclosure; but if the wall of such inclosed ground should be thrown down by the sea, the tenants should have pasturage as before. None of the Commonaltie, either of Stonore or Sandwich, should hereafter enter upon the Abbat's marsh, for the purpose of digging there, or of carrying away the soil from thence without his consent; nor should any of them collect and carry away the beach from the sea-walls between Stonore and Chyvesende; nor take lastage of ships, except in the common stream, between the times of high and low water; nor should any of them thereafter, on any account, presume to obstruct the Abbat's bailiffs at Stonore, or prevent the Abbat from doing justice upon his tenants at Stonore, and other offenders, and collecting his customs there; that such distresses as the Abbat's bailiff should levy in Stonore, and in the marsh within Hennebergh, should remain in the marsh and not be driven away; for which concession of the Abbat, the other party should pay 100 mares, but by the intercession of the Bishop of Wells, he consented to take only 10 casks of wine, of the value of 30 mares (d).

Notwithstanding the various verdicts and judgments from time to time given, that this place was within the Abbat's barony, and the jurisdiction of the county, yet the men of Stonar, as it appears, chose rather to be subject to that of the Mayor of Sandwich, (which Tborne terms a yoke of slavery) thinking it a much easier one than that which the Abbats would have had them wear (e); the usages and several powers claimed by the Mayor of Sandwich, are recited at large by the other chronicler (f).

K. Henry VI. confirmed to the Abbat the former grant of a market at Stonar, by two several charters (g).

The manor of Stonar, with its appurtenances, remained part of the possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, till the general dissolution of it in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, when it came into the hands of the crown, where it staid till the 4th and 5th year of K. Philip and Q. Mary, when it was granted, together with the appendant advowson of the church, to Nich. Crispe, esq; for life, with the reversion to his

(b) Harris's Hist. of Kent, p. 300.

(c) Boys's Collections, p. 661.

(d) Dec. Script. Thorn, col. 1933. In the year 1369, Thomas Crabbere, and others of Stonore, were attached to answer to the Abbat of St. Augustine, for forcibly taking away from the Abbat's serjeant a distress which he had taken in Stonore for customs and services due to the Abbat. They pleaded to the jurisdiction; but the verdict of the jury was, that Stonore was in the county, and they were fined 40 mares for the trespass. Dec. Script. Thorn, col. 2143.

(e) In a Mss. register of this Abbey, the tenants of Ston or seem to have been at this time acknowledged by the Convent as Portsmen; and it appears to have been a custom for every man in Stonore to give the bailiff a bridle upon his marriage, or six-pence in lieu of it. In the same book (now in the Dean and Chapter's library, at Canterbury), Stonore is said to consist of 404 acres, and to be part of the manor of Minstre.

(f) Dec. Script. col. 2144.

(g) Rot. Cart. ab an. 21, ad an. 24, N. 11, and ab an. 27, usque 39, N. 11.

brother

STONAR.

T H A N E T.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

brother John Crispe, in fee (b), whose only son fir Henry Crispe, of Quekes, knt. dying without issue in 1648, it went by his will to his first-cousin Henry Crispe, of Quekes, esq; (i) (son of his uncle Henry), who dying possessed of it in 1663, without surviving male issue, this manor came by the entail made of it, to his nephew Thomas Crispe, (eldest son of his next brother Thomas Crispe, of Goudburst,) afterwards of Quekes, where he died in 1680, leaving four daughters his coheirs, the eldest of whom, Maria-Adriana, married to Rich. Breton, of the Elmes in Hougham, esq; entitled him to her fourth part of this estate; and he afterwards having bought the shares of the other three sisters and coheirs, became possessed of the whole fee of it, which he afterwards alienated to fir George Rooke, knt. of St. Laurence, near Canterbury, Vice Admiral of England, and Privy Counsellor. He died seized of this manor in Jan. 1709 (k), leaving by his second wife Mary Lutterel, one son, George Rooke, of St. Laurence, esq; who inherited this estate and married the Honourable Frances Ward, eldest daughter of Wm Lord Dudley, who survived him, and by his will became possessed of this manor, which on her death without issue in 1770, she devised it by her will to her nephew, the Hon. John Ward, afterwards on the death of his father, Lord Viscount Dudley and Ward (l), and he alienated it in 1787 to Mr. Charles Foreman, of London (m), who dying without issue in 1791, bequeathed it by his last will to his nephew Mr. John Foreman, in

(b) This estate, consisting of the marsh called Stonar-marsh, alias Stonmarsh-leys, with a certain pasture adjoining, called Le-chapel-leyse, and other pastures and salt and fresh marsh adjoining, with certain coney-boroughs in the same, was demised to John Johnson, alias Anthony, by the Abbat and Convent for 50 years, anno 29 Henry VIII, at the yearly rent of 23l. and 20s. for 40 couple of coneyes; and it was at the time of the above grant to Crispe, demised by the crown to the same John Johnson, alias Anthony, gent. for 21 years, by lease dated in 1554, at the yearly rent of 23l. it was valued to the grantee at 621l. the whole sum paid was however 637l. 13s. 4d. at which time the survey of this estate was, that the marsh contained in fresh and salt marsh, over and above 12 acres covered with the salt bache, 390 acres, valued after sundry rates at 32l. 5s. 4d. per ann. viz. 140 acres and an half of fresh marsh at 3s. 4d. per acre; 24 acres of salt marsh at 12d. per acre; 26 acres of salt marsh, overflowed at every spring tide at 12d. per acre, and 140 acres of salt marsh at 8d. per acre; the clear yearly value of the premises 23l. the tenure in chief by knight's service. See Harleian Mss. No. 607, 358, 608, 11.

(i) He was usually called Bonjour Crispe. See an account of his being carried away into France and kept prisoner there—under Quekes, in Birchington, p. 334 (r)

(k) He was son of fir William Rooke, of St. Laurence, near Canterbury, knt. descended of the Rookes, from Horton Monks, in this county, who died in 1691, æt. 70, and was buried in St. Paul's church, in Canterbury. He was sheriff of Kent in 1684, and married Jane, daughter and coheir of Thomas Finch, of Coptree, esq; who died in 1711, tail general (n), and he is at this time the proprietor of this manor, with the advowson of the church of Stonar appendant to it.

To the northward of the scite of the ancient town of Stonar, about the place which was anciently called Hennebrigge, and is now known by the name of Littlejoy, is a large tract of land, which was formerly a warren for rabbits, and granted by that name to the Abbat of St. Augustine; but the rabbits have been long since destroyed, on account probably of the damage done by them to the pasture of the adjoining marshes.

ANTIEN T AND PRESENT STATE OF STONAR.

STONAR was in the time of the Saxons of much greater account than it has been at any time since; the increasing prosperity of the opposite port of Sandwich, and the change in the river Wantsume, with some other casual misfortunes, occasioned the early ruin of it. In the time of the Romans, this place, as well as the rest of the flat country adjoining to Richberough, was entirely covered with water and made part of that haven (o).

Most of our antiquaries and historians have, by common consent, joined in placing the Lapis Tituli of Nennius, so noted for Vortimer's intended monument, and for his last encounter with the Saxons, at this place of Stonar; but in this they seem to have been led more by the resemblance of the name, that of Lapis Tituli in by whom he had fir George Rooke, knt. above-mentioned; Ursula married to fir Thomas Hardres, Mary and Jane, and 2 younger sons, Captain Thomas Rooke, who died in 1701, and Finch Rooke, who being killed in a duel in 1656, was buried by his brother in St. Paul's church, Canterbury. Sir George Rooke married 1st Mary Howe, of Cold Ereswick, in Wiltshire, who died in 1699; 2dly, Mary, daughter of Francis Lutterel, of co. Somerset, who died in 1702, and was buried at Horton, by whom he had an only son George as above-mentioned, of whom she died in child-bed; and 3dly, Catherine, daughter of fir Thomas Knatchbull, bart. who surviving him died in 1755, having re-married the Rev. Dr. Henry Moore, by whom she had a son.

(l) He bore for his arms—Oblique, or and azure, a bend ermine.

(m) It was then estimated to be of the annual value of 880l. and was sold for 22,000l. Lord Dudley laid out much in building several edifices of brick for the use of the farm-yard of this estate.

(n) With remainder in like manner to his other nephew Mr. Luke Foreman, with remainder in fee to the Rev. Mr. James Carpenter Gape.

(o) Camden and Dr. Plot were of opinion, that the Portus Rutupensis was rather at Stonar, having a high ridge of beach lying before it, which was certainly brought thither by the flowing up of the sea, this being then the sea shore and port where ships lay which came ad urbem Rutupine, which lay higher up, as Teplum does to Exeter, and Edburgh does to the Port of Leith. Dr. Plot's Mill. Pag. 225. Camden's Brit. p. 244.

L. L.

STONAR.

T H A N E T.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

Latin, and Stonar in English, sounding not much unlike (p); but this seeming agreement of the name falls to the ground, when it is considered that it was constantly written Eastanores, till long after the Norman conquest; and besides, that this place being a low and flat level, but lately covered with water, and still apt to inundations, was surely a very unfit place for erecting an eminent and conspicuous monument, which was intended to be visible to a remote distance; a design which required the advantage of a lofty situation.

Kilburne and Lewis tell us, that antiently this town was not within the island of Tbanet, but one entirely of itself, being encompassed all round by the sea and the estuary called the Wantsume; and that the mouth of the Richborough Port was, after the waters of it had contracted themselves into narrower bounds between this place of Stonar and Ebbsfleet, northward of it, where the Wantsume ran into the sea, till by the sands this channel was choaked up (q).

From the advantage of its situation, after the waters had deserted Hepesflete, now called Ebbsfleet, for some time the common landing-place in the island of Tbanet, situated northward from Stonar, this place succeeded to it, and became a town and port likewise of considerable note. At this port, St. Augustine and his followers are said to have landed in the year 597, and to have remained till sent for by K. Ethelbert; though by others, and with much more probability, at Ebbsfleet, as has been mentioned before. Here Turkill, the Dane, is said to have landed in the year 1009, and to have fought the English, and afterwards to have burnt the town (r), which was, however, not long afterwards rebuilt, and notwithstanding the increasing prosperity of its opposite rival, remained a port sometime after the Norman conquest, as appears by Tborn's

(p) Nennius, cap. 45, tells us, there were 3 battles fought by Vortimer with the Saxons, and cap. 46 he says Tertium bellum in campo juxta Lapidem Tituli qui est super ripam Gallici maris statutum; and a little further, Ante mortem suam ad familiam suam animadvertit ut illius sepulchrum in portu ponerent a quo exirent (hostes) super maris ripam. In this description Nennius by no means places it in Tbanet, where and at this place of Stonar, had this third battle been fought, the author who mentions those former like encounters in Tbanet, would not have gone to a new description of the place in this unwonted new expression without mention made of Tbanet at all. See Somner's Roman Ports, p. 94. Battely's Antiq. Rutupinæ, p. 16. But if, as some authors assert, Stonar was separated by the channel of the Wantsume from the island of Tbanet at that time, this objection will of course fall to the ground.

(q) At which time, to inn the lands, says Lewis, and the better to secure them from being overflowed by the sea at spring tides, walls were cast up here which are still visible, and are now the road-way from Cliffend and Ebbsfleet to Sandwich; but these walls are no proof of this, but seem Chronicle, who says, that in the year 1090, the Londoners claimed the lordship, or seignory, of Stonar, as a sea port subject to that city, against the Abbat of St. Augustine, his men and homagers.

In the last year of K. John, anno 1216, Lewis, the Dauphin of France, landed here, where having refreshed his army he marched to Sandwich, where he was joined by the rebellious Barons of his party (s).

In the reign of K. Edw. I., there was a great inundation of the sea here, to enquire into the cause of which, and to prevent the like in future, there was a solemn inquisition taken at this place, by Commissioners appointed by the King for that purpose. There was a John de Stonore, who was appointed in the 14th year of K. Edw. II. one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, in the room of John Bacun; and another of the same name, who was one of the friars preachers, and an eminent divine in the year above-mentioned had, together with Robert de Braybrock, and Robert de Hattcombe, brothers likewise of the same order, the King's safe conduct, on their intentions to go and preach the gospel to the Saracens (t).

K. Edward III., on Oct. 11, in his 33d year, anno 1359, lodged here at Stonar, in a house formerly Robert Goviere's, and was attended by many of his nobles and great men, then waiting to embark at Sandwich for foreign parts; on which day the Chancellor in the King's chamber delivered up the great-seal, and had another delivered to him to use during the King's absence. He staid here till the 28th, when he embarked before sun-rise, and with his nobility and other attendants set sail for Calais (u). In the 39th year of the same reign, there happened hereabouts another terrible inundation of the sea for the space of above three miles in length, viz. from Clivefend to Stonore; insomuch that the town of Stonore to have been thrown up not on account of this supposed channel, but to secure the lands northward of them from the spring tides and casual inundations from them. However, to preserve them, it was ordered, so late as anno 1283, in a composition between the Abbat of St. Augustine and the Prior of Christ Church, that no one of the community of Stonore or Sandwich, should for the future gather or carry away any stone or sea beach, in the walls between Stonore and Clyvesfende, nor should take up ballast for their ships, but in the sea in the common floods betwixt the highest and lowest water.

(r) The author of the life of Queen Emma says, that Turkill the Dane, being arrived in the Port of Sandwich, drew up his army in order of battle against the English, at a place called Scoraston; but what else, says Dr. Battely, in his Antiq. Rutupinæ, p. 17, is Scoraston, than by transposition Eastanore; and Eastanore and Estanore, those skilful in the Saxon language know to be the same.

(s) Rapin's Hist. of England, vol. i, p. 278.

(t) Pat. ejus an. ps. 1 ma.

(u) Rym. Fœd. vol. vi, p. 141.

STONAR.

THANET.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

was almost destroyed by it; and it was feared that unless some speedy assistance could be had, all the low lands or marshes in the hundreds of Ryngeslee, Wyngbam, Preston, and Downbamford; that is, all the levels from the sea to Wyngbam, Canterbury, &c. would be overflowed. Wherefore the King commissioned sir Ralph Spigurnel, Constable of Dover Castle, and others, to enquire into the true state of this matter, and to endeavour to secure the houses, lands, &c.

But what is said to have been the entire ruin of this town, was the firing of it by the French, in the 9th year of K. Richard II, anno 1385, who being invited over by the treachery of sir Simon de Burley, knt., Constable of Dover Castle and Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, to invade the kingdom, first plundered, and afterwards set this town on fire and burnt it (v). Some of the foundations of these buildings were remaining not many years ago, and the traces of them are still visible among the corn.

After this the town of Stonar never recovered its former state, and the waters having forsok this place, it remained no longer a port, but became insignificant and almost desolated, the remaining inhabitants consisting of a few fishermen, and lookers after the cattle and husbandry business of it.

Leland, in his Itin. vol. vii, p. 127, gives this account of it in K. Henry VIII.'s time; "Stonard," says he, "ys yn Thanet, sumtyme a prety town not far from Sandwich. Now appereth alonly the ruine of the chirch. Sum ignorant people cawle yt Old Sandwiche."

At present there are three houses in it, only one of which is situated where the town of Stonar antiently stood; about twenty rods from which, near the road, on a little rising bank, stood the church, of which there are now no remains left above ground. Some salt works have been lately carried on here, of a curious construction (w).

It appears that some part of the land at Stonar

(v) Of this attempt it seems the Abbat of St. Augustin, had intelligence, and accordingly got his tenants together at Northbourne, and marched with them armed to the relief of his other tenants in this island. But coming to Sandwich, he was by the Lord Warden's order refused a free passage into the island, and so was forced to march round by Fordwich and Sturry and come into the island at Sarre. This taking up a good deal of time, gave opportunity to the enemy to execute their design; but no sooner had they an account of the Abbat's coming against them but they retired to their ships and left the rest of the island untouched. Dec. Script. col. 2181.

(w) The sea water is drawn, during the summer months, into broad shallow pans of great extent, where having continued until its watery particles have been exhaled by the sun, it is conveyed into large boilers and chrystalized in the usual manner by evaporation. The salt thus prepared, is found to partake of the qualities of bay-salt, and to answer all its purposes; having this advantage, that being was formerly bounded and taken into the parish, and assessed to the relief of the poor of St. Clement's, in Sandwich (x).

This parish is very small, being about two miles from north to south, and about one mile at the broadest from east to west. It is encircled on three sides by the river Stour; and on the north by a cut across the land, in length about a quarter of a mile, from one part of the river Stour to the opposite one, having proper flood-gates across it, to be worked at certain times only, according to the direction of the Act of Parliament, passed in 1775, for the purpose of draining more effectually those levels adjoining the river Stour, usually called the General Vallies, and for other purposes (y).

At the south end of this parish was a ferry over the river Stour, which belonged to St. Bartholomew's Hospital; in lieu of which, a bridge was built in 1755, by an Act passed for that purpose; a full account of which has already been given under Sandwich above.

The high road from Sandwich over this bridge, crosses this parish northward. The appearance of the whole of it is very inhospitable and dreary, the middle of it is covered with sea-beach. It is nearly a flat, without a tree to shelter it, and consists, almost all of it, of a continued level of marshes, much of which is bounded by the ouze of the sea adjoining to it, and consequently it is much subject to intermittant fevers, and is a very unhealthy situation.

There are no parochial charities.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION.

STONAR is within the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the diocese of Canterbury and deanry of Sandwich (z). The church has been many years ruined, and at this time no remains of it are left.

It is a rectory, valued in the King's books at 3l. 6s. 8d. and the tenths at 6s. 8d. (a) perfectly transparent, it excels it in the beauty of its appearance.

(x) See Boys's Collections, p. 281.

(y) This bill was opposed strenuously by the mayor, jurats, and people of Sandwich, at a very great expence, on a supposition that the new made cut would in process of time be a means of diverting the channel of the river Stour entirely from the town of Sandwich, and so become the total ruin of it.

(z) In 1301, Thomas Fyndon, then Abbat of St. Augustin, ordained several new deanries, consisting of the several churches of the patronage of his convent, one of these he named the Deanry of Minster, in which this church of Stonar was included. But this raising great disputes between the Convent and the several Archbishops, and the Pope deciding in favour of the latter, these new deanries were entirely dissolved. See vol. ii. of this Hist. p. 454.

(a) Viz. in decim predial. personal. oblat et al profic spiritual per ann. 10l. Prox. 7s. 6d. Bacon's Lib. Regis, p. 44.

In

STONAR.

THANET.

RINGSLOW HUNDRED.

In 1569, it is entered in Archbishop Parker's Acts of Visitation, that there were neither households nor communicants in this parish (b). In 1640 it was valued at 40l. and here were then no communicants.

This rectory has always been appendant to the manor of Stonar, and as such, is now of the patronage of Mr. John Foreman, the present possessor of the manor.

THE CHURCH OF STONAR.

PATRONS, or by whom presented.	RECTORS.
Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine.	(c) Walter , anno 29 Edw. I. Richard Taple , obiit 1486. (cc) Andrew Bensted , 1486. (d) John Allen , December 18, 1528. (e) John Braborne , 1540. John Salisbury , 1550.
John Crispe, esq.	Robert Harte , March, 1569. Rich. Webbe , April 9, 1571.
The Crown, hac vice.	Blaze Winter , August 23, 1581, obiit 1617.
Henry Crispe, esq.	Thomas Turner , A. M. June 10, 1617, obiit 1630. (f) George Stancombe , A. B. Jan. 9, 1630, obiit Aug. 10, 1647. Edward Fellows , A. M. obiit 1663. Blaze White , A. M. August 15, 1663.
The Crown, by lapse.	Tho. Lamprey , A. M. July 6, 1752, obiit Sept. 2, 1760, who was the last that was presented to this rectory.
After the death of Blaze White above-mentioned, there was not any Rector presented to this church in his room; but in 1701, Owen Evans, M. A. Rector of St. Paul's, Canterbury, and chaplain to sir George Rooke, the patron, obtained the sequestration of this rectory, and had an allowance made him by the patron of 16l. per annum, as a composition in lieu of all tythes whatsoever, both great and small. This stipend he received till the year 1734, when Geo. Rooke, esq.; the then patron and owner of the manor, refused any further payment, and the Rector made no further demand of it, though he lived till the year 1742, after which it continued vacant till the year 1752, when Mr. Lamprey obtained the Great Seal to the presentation of this rectory, and soon afterwards made a demand on the proprietor of the lands for the tythes then due, and all arrears of tythes likewise; on the refusal of which, an issue was awarded from the Court of Chancery, which was tried at the Lent assizes for this county, in the year 1756, before Mr. Justice Forster and a special jury; when a verdict was found for the plaintiff, viz. Mr. Lamprey, the Rector; and a right to tythes so far as 16l. a year; which not being deemed a proper verdict, a new trial was obtained, which came on on at the Lent Assizes in 1757, before the Lord Chief Justice Wilkes and a special jury, when on a full hearing a verdict was given for the defendant, viz. the Hon. Mrs. Rooke, then patron and owner of the lands of Stonar; at which the Chief Justice expressed much satisfaction, more than the jury thought decent, as coming from a judge who ought to have behaved more impartially on the occasion. Since which there has been no further steps taken to recover the tythes of this rectory by Mr. Lamprey, who is still living, nor it is supposed there ever will.

(b) Lewis's Hist. of Thanet, p. 201.
(c) Prynne, p. 906.
(cc) Register Book of St. Augustine's Abbey, in the treasury of Christ Church, Canterbury, f. 19, marked Q.
(d) He was Dublin Elect. Ibid. Register.

(e) He and his successor are mentioned in the visitation books.
(f) He had afterwards, on the ejection of Dr. Meric Casaubon, the sequestration or possession of the vicarage of Monkton, and was buried at Birchington on Aug. 18, 1647.

T H E
HISTORY of CANTERBURY:

COMPREHENDING

ITS ANTIENT AND PRESENT STATE,

ECCLESIASTICAL AND CIVIL;

T H E

VILLE of CHRIST CHURCH,

AND OTHER

DISTINCT JURISDICTIONS;

With the MANORS and ESTATES belonging to the

ARCHBISHOPRIC.

REFERENCES

TO

THE PLAN OF CANTERBURY.

- PRECINCT of the Archbishop's Palace, bounded by a strong black line.
- A The great gate
 - B The great hall, a garden.
 - C The porch, now a dwelling-house
 - ¶ Methodist meeting-house.
- Precinct of the cathedral bounded by + + +
- D Deanry.
- I
 - II
 - III
 - IV
 - V
 - VI
 - VII
 - VIII
 - IX
 - X
 - XI
 - XII
- Prebendal houses, according to the number of their respective stalls.
- E Bowling-green.
 - F The cloysters
 - G Sermon-house.
 - H Library
 - I Plumbery, once the grammar-school.
 - K Cathedral church-yard,
 - L Cemetery-gate.
 - M Oaks.
 - N Green-court.
 - O Green-court-gate
 - P Christ-church-gate
 - Q Strangers' house and hall, now two preachers' houses, and the auditor's, used for the register-office.
 - R Waterhouse
 - S Foreigns, or stable-yard

- T Mint-yard. { a School and Upper-master's house.
b Under-master's house.
 - U Mint-yard gate. c Old Mint.
 - * Preachers' houses.
 - + Minor-canons' houses.
- Precinct of St. Augustine's monastery, bounded by a strong black line.
- V Great gate and fore court
 - W Cemetery-gate.
 - X St. Pancrase's chapel
 - Y Ethelbert's tower.
 - Z Scite of an opposite tower

CITY AND SUBURBS.

- 1 Riding-gate.
- 2 Dungeon-hill.
- 3 Wincheap-gap.
- 4 Castle.
- 5 Postern.
- 6 Breaches in the wall.
- 7 Westgate and bridge.
- 8 Postern.
- 9 Breach where three arches in the wall were demolished in 1769, and new bridge over the Stour.
- 10 North-gate and church.
- 11 North-gate burying ground.
- 12 Postern.
- 13 Burgate.
- 14 St. George's gate.
- 15 Harris's alms-houses.
- 16 City boundary.
- 17 St. Paul's church.
- 18 St. Paul's burying ground.
- 19 St. Martin's church and yard.
- 20 St. Thomas's chapel, scite of.

* 5 F

21 Jesus

- | | | | |
|----|--|----|--|
| 21 | Jesus (or Boys's) hospital | 48 | St. Mildred's church and yard. |
| 22 | St. John's hospital. | 49 | Maynard's hospital. |
| 23 | St. Radigund's bath. | 50 | Work-house. |
| 24 | St. Dunstan's church and yard. | 51 | New Methodist meeting-house |
| 25 | County gaol. | 52 | Anabaptist meeting-house |
| 26 | St. George's church and yard | 53 | Quakers meeting-house. |
| 27 | White friars-gate | 54 | St. Mary Magdalen's (or Burgate) church. |
| 28 | Shambles. | 55 | St. Mary Bredin's, or Little Lady Dungeon. |
| 29 | Corn-market. | 56 | Dancing-school-yard. |
| 30 | New church of St. Andrew. | 57 | Presbyterian meeting-house. |
| 31 | Assembly-rooms. | 58 | Rodau's town. |
| 32 | St. Mary Bredman's, or Little Lady High-street church. | 59 | Place of Dungeon, or Dane John manor house. |
| 33 | The old chequer inn. | 60 | Abbot's mill. |
| 34 | Town-hall. | 61 | Cattle-market. |
| 35 | All Saints church and yard. | 62 | Borough of Staplegate. |
| 36 | East-bridge and hospital. | 63 | Dean's mill. |
| 37 | East or King's bridge and mill. | 64 | Jews' synagogue. |
| 38 | Cogan's hospital. | 65 | Cock mill. |
| 39 | St. Peter's church and yard. | 66 | Doge's chantry. |
| 40 | Canterbury wells. | 67 | Theatre. |
| 41 | Holy Cross (Westgate) church and yard. | 68 | Lady Wotton's green. |
| 42 | St. Alphage church and yard. | 69 | Black friars. |
| 43 | Butter-market. | 70 | Grey friars. |
| 44 | Fish-market. | 71 | Smith's alm-houses. |
| 45 | St. Margaret's church and yard. | 72 | King's Arms printing-office. |
| 46 | Chapel church-yard. | 73 | Bridger's alms-houses. |
| 47 | Worthgate, walled up, and county sessions house. | 74 | Kent and Canterbury hospital. |
| | | 75 | The public walks in Dungeon field. |

THE HISTORY
OF THE
CITY and COUNTY
OF CANTERBURY.

THE CITY of CANTERBURY is situated in the eastern part of the county of Kent, fifty-six miles distant from London, south-eastward, and sixteen miles from Dover and the sea-shore, to which the great high-road from London, leads through it.

Its geographical situation is in latitude 51 degrees, 17 minutes north, longitude 1 degree, 15 minutes east, from Greenwich observatory. It adjoins westward to the hundred of Westgate, northward to the jurisdiction of Fordwich, and towards the south and east, to the hundred of Bridge and Petham.

It was called by the Romans, Durovernum, either from the British word Dour, which signifies water, or as Camden supposes, from the British Durwbern, a rapid river; both words, however, well adapted to the situation of it (a). Bede, and others, call it Dorovernia, and Dorobernia, which is said to be its old name. The Saxons called Kent, Cant-guar-land, that is, the country of the Kentish men; and this city, Cantwara byrg, i. e. the Kentish men's city (b), a name agreeing with that of Caer, Kent, (the City of Kent,) as Nennius and the Britons called it from the Saxon name. The Latinists afterwards modelled it to Cantuaria, and the English to its present name of Canterbury, which it has been in general called by, from about the time of the Norman conquest (c).

THE ORIGIN of the City is said by Jeffry of Monmouth, the author of the British History, to be much older, even than Rome itself; for he writes, that one Rud-budibras, or Lud-budibras, a King of the Britons, founded this city almost 900 years before our Saviour's Incarnation (d); but as this writer is exploded, and his story deemed fabulous by most of our antiquaries, and especially by Camden, I shall pass on to more probable evidence, that Canterbury existed at the time the Roman empire first extended itself into Britain, which appears by their continuing the name by which they found it called by the Britons, the Roman Durovernum being, seemingly, no other than the Latin rendering of the British Durwbern; that it existed in the time of the Roman empire here, is plain from the mention of it in the Itinerary of Antoninus, now more than 1500 years old, corroborated by the present remains of those roads leading from two of their noted havens, Dover and Limne, to this city; by their workmanship and materials in the churches, walls, and gates of it; and the number of coins, earthen ware, utensils and tessellated pavements, found from time to time within the city and the near neighbourhood of it. What the general state or condition of it was in the times of either the Britons or Romans, is not known; as there is no history or record to shew it; but no doubt it was then of considerable account; for even at the beginning of the Saxon heptarchy, it was esteemed the head or chief city of the kingdom of Kent, and the King's residence (e); thus Venerable Bede calls it the chief city of K. Ethelbert (f). Another writer styles it the head of the empire (g); and in the close of a charter of Ke-

(a) Lbuid, a natural Briton, says, that Durywbern in his language was plainly aqua ex alneto fluens; but Falbot writes that a Welshman rendered Darvernum to him Dour arguern, quasi aquæ juxta paludem aut Mariscum, and thence he deduces it. See Burton on Antoninus, p. 185. Leland, in his Itin. vol. vii, appendix, p. 144, conjectures that the river Stour was in the Britons time called Avona, and that the Romans called this city corruptly Duravennum, for of Dor and Avona, it should rather be called Doravona or Doravonum; of which see more below.

(b) Cantwarenaburge. Bede, p. 117, edit. Wheeloc. Richard of Cirencester calls this city, Cantiopoli. See Madox's Firma Burgi, p. 2.

(c) Lambard Per. p. 313. Camden, p. 238. Battely's Somner, p. 1.

(d) See Higden's Polychron. p. 198, 213.

(e) Battely's Somner, p. 1.

(f) Eccl. Hist. l. i, c. 25.

(g) Matth. Westm. ad an. 596.

ANTIEN T STATE OF THE CITY.

nulph, K. of Mercia, in the year 810, it is dated in the famous city, which of ancient name was called Dorovernia (b). Canterbury continued the royal residence of K. Ethelbert, till about the year 596, when having embraced Christianity by the persuasions of St. Augustine, he gave him his palace here, as a residence for him and his successors, and retired himself to Reculver, where he built another palace for that purpose; but the King continued possessed of the city in demesne, excepting as to that part, and certain privileges, which he had granted to St. Augustine, in which manner the Crown afterwards continued selfed of it; and in K. Edward the Confessor's time, though in divers other parts of it, several privileges had been granted to religious as well as lay persons, yet the royalty and chief seignory of it continued in the crown (i), and did so at the Norman conquest, as appears by the following entry of it in the survey of Domesday, taken in the year 1080, being the 15th year of the Conqueror's reign, in which the state of it, as well in the reign of K. Edward as at that time, is thus accurately described:

In Civitate Cantuarie habuit Rex Edward, 50 & 1 burgens reddentes gablu' & alios 200 & 12. sup' quos habebat saca' & soca' & 3 molend de 40 sol. modo burgens' gablu' reddentes sunt 19. De 32^{obs.} aliis qui fuerant, sunt vastati 11 in fossato Civitatis. & Archieps bt. ex eis 7. & abb S. Augustini alios 14 p exabio Castell. & ad huc sunt 200 & 12 burgs. sup quos bt rex saca' & soca' & 3 molend reddt 100 & 8 sol. & theolonium' redd 68. sol. Ibi 8 acre pti que solebant e'e. legator; regis. mo. reddt de Censu 15 sol. & mille acre silvæ infructuosæ. de qua exeunt 24. solidi? Int totu. T. R. E. valuit 51 lib. & tntd qdo Haimo Vicec. recep & mo' 50 lib. appciat'. Tam' qui ten' bc' reddit 30. lib. arfas & pensatas. & 24. lib ad numeru' Sup b' oma' bt vicecom' 100 & 10 sol.

Duos dom' duor; burgsu' una' foris alia' int' civitate. qda monachus ecclie cantuar abstulit. Hæ erant positæ in calle regis.

Burgses habuer' 45. mansur' ext' civitate' de qbs ipsi habet' gablu' & csuetud, rex aut' hab saca & soca. Ipsi que' burg'ses habebant de rege 33. acs tra in gilda' sua' Has dom & hanc tra' ten' Rannulf de Colubels. Habet etiam qt. 20. acs tra' sup' bæc. quas tenebant burgens' in alodia de rege. Tenet quoq; 5. acs tra' que juste ptinent uni ecclie. De bis omibz revocat isde' Rannulf ad pteñore' epm. Baiocensem.

Radulf de Curbespine bt. 4. mansuras in Civitate quas tenuit queda' ccubina Heraldî, de quibz' est saca & soca regis. sed usq; ne' non habuit.

(b) Somner, p. 1.

(i) See Madox's Firma Burgi, p. 14.

(k) These Burgesses seem to have been such as exercised free trade, according to the liberties and privileges granted

Isde Radulf ten alias 11. masuras de epo baioe in ipsa civitate que fuer Sbern biga & reddt 11. solid & 2 den & 1 obolu.

Per tota civitate cantuarie bt. rex saca & soca, excepta tra ecclie S. Trin & S Augustini, & Ed. devæ reginæ & almod cñd & Esber biga & Siret de Cilleba.

Concordatu est de reñis Callibz que habent p. civitate introitu' & exitu' quicunq; in illis forisfecerit, regi emdabit. Similit' de Callibz' reñis extra civitate' usq; ad una leuga' & 3 partrias & 3 pedes. Si qs ergo infra has publicas vias intus civitate, vel ext' foderit vel palu' fixerit, sequit' illu' pposit regis ubicunq; abierit & emenda' accipiet ad opus regis.

Archieps. calu'niat' forisfactura' in vijs ext civitate' ex utq; parte ubi terra sua e'. Quidam pposit Brumann' noe T. R. E. capit c'suetudines de extraneis mercatorib; in tra S. Trinitatis & S. Augustini, Qui postea T. R. W. ante archiepm Lanfranc & epm. Baiocense' recognovit se injuste accepisse & sacramto facto' juravit qd ipse ecclie suas co'suetudines qetas habuer R. E. tepore. Et exinde utraq; ecclie in sua tra habuer' cosuetud' suas, judicio baronn regis qi placitu' tenuer.

Which is: In the city of Canterbury, K. Edw. has 50 and 1 burgesses (k) yielding rent; and other 200 and 12, on which he had sac and soc; and 3 mills of 40 shillings; now the burgesses yielding rent are 19. Of 32 others, which were, 11 are destroyed in the ditch of the city, and the Archbp. has of them 7, and the Abbat of St. Augustine other 14, by exchange of the castle, and as yet there are 200 and 12 burgesses, on which the King has sac and soc, and 3 mills yielding 100 and 8 shillings, and toll yielding 68 shillings. There are 8 acres of meadow, which used to be of the King's officers, now yielding of rent 15 shillings, and a thousand acres of wood yielding no pannage, from which there is payable 24 shillings. In the whole, in the time of K. Edward the Confessor, it was worth 51 pounds, and as much when Hamo the sheriff received it, and now it is valued at 50 pounds, yet he who now has it pays 30 pounds, tried and weighed, and 24 pounds numbered; of all these the sheriff has 100 and 10 shillings.

Two houses of two burgesses, one without, the other within the city, a certain monk of the church of Canterbury took away. These were placed in the King's highway.

The burgesses had 45 mansions without the city, of which they had rent and custom; but the King had sac and soc. Those burgesses also had of the King 33 acres of land in his Guild. These houses and this land Rannulf de Columbels holds. He has also four times 20 acres of land more than these, which the burgesses held in fee simple of the King.

to them by the king, for which they paid him a gablum or yearly rent of tribute money, which in process of time became a fee farm rent, or an annual composition in a stated sum of money.

He

ANTIEN STATE AND CIVIL JURISDICTION.

He holds likewise 5 acres of land, which of right belong to a certain church; of all these the same Rannulf vouches the Bp. of Baieux as his protector.

Radulf de Curbespine has 4 mansions in the city, which a certain Concubine of Herald held, from which there is sac and soc of the King, but to this time he had it not.

The same Radulf, other 11 mansions of the Bp. of Baieux in the city itself, which were Sbern Biga's (l), and yield 11 shillings and 2 pence and 1 halfpenny.

Through the whole city of Canterbury the King has sac and soc, except the land of the church of the Holy Trinity, and of St. Augustine, and of Queen Eddeve, and of Alnod Cilt, and Esher Biga, and Siret de Cilleba.

It is agreed concerning the highways which have entrance and exit through the city, whoever shall commit an offence in them, shall make a fine to the King; in like manner of the highways without the city, as far as one league, and 3 perches, and 3 feet. If any one therefore, within these public ways within the city or without, shall dig or put down a post, the King's Reeve shall follow him wherever he shall go, and receive the fine to the King's use.

The Archbp. claims forfeitures in the ways without the city on both sides, where the land is his; a certain Reeve, named Bruman, in the time of K. Edward, took the customs of the foreign merchants in the land of the Holy Trinity, and of St. Augustine, who afterwards, in the time of K. William, before Archbp. Lanfranc and the Bishop of Baieux, acknowledged that he had received them unjustly, and swore upon his oath, that those churches possessed them quietly in the time of K. Edward, and from that time both churches had those customs by judgment of the King's Barons, who held Pleas.

At this time, it appears by the same book, the Archbp. had possessions in Canterbury, which are thus entered in it, under the general title of his lands.

(l) Biga, that is, the provider of the king's carriages.

(m) When the king was seized of a city or town in demesne, he had a compleat seisin of it, with all its parts and adjuncts. He was lord of the soil, viz. of all the burgage houses, sheds, stalls and buildings erected on it; of the profits, if any, of aldermanries, the herbage and productions of the earth, profits of fairs and markets, pleas and perquisites of courts; in a word, of all issues, profits, and appurtenances of the city or town, which had not been aliened by the king, or his ancestors; for sometimes the crown thought fit to grant some part of it, or some of the profits to private persons, or religious houses, by which means it happened, that the property was divided into parts, and became severed from the corpus civitatis. See Madox's Firma Burgi, p. 14.

(n) Before, as well as after this, I find it paying aid as the king's town, viz. anno 14 Henry II. Madox's Exchequer, p. 409 anno 1; Johan. p. 507, in King Edward I.'s reign, p. 509.

(o) That is to say, rendering a yearly rent for ever and the succeeding kings of England and their grantees have been from time to time seized of it in inheritance, in right

In civitate Cantuarie habet Archieps. 12. burgenses, & 32 mansuras, quas tenent clerici de villa in gilda sua, & reddunt 35. sol. & un mold de 5 sol.

Which is: In the city of Canterbury, the Archbishop has 12 burgeses and 32 mansions, which the clerks of the ville hold in their gild, and they pay 35 shillings, and one mill of 5 shillings.

It appears by the above record, that the sheriff of the county was intrusted with, and managed the King's interest here, the same as he did the other manors and demesnes of the King, and accounted yearly for the profits of it (m), as did afterwards the King's praefects and bailiffs, as will be further noticed below; in which state it continued, till K. Henry III, in his 18th year, granted it to the citizens (n), to hold to them and their successors for ever, at the yearly rent of 60l. in fee ferm (o); by which tenure it has continued to be held ever since.

THE CIVIL JURISDICTION.

THIS CITY being thus part of the King's demesnes, was, from the earliest accounts, under the government and direction of an officer appointed by him, styled at different periods the King's Praefect, Provost, and Keeper of the City, and this both before the Norman conquest and some time afterwards, though at that time, as appears by the extract from Domesday above, the sheriff of the county had the custody of it; but this seems to have been only temporary; for in after times, the King appointed one or more bailiffs for the custody of it, who not only presided over the civil jurisdiction of it, but in the manner of stewards accounted yearly to the King, for the several profits and issues arising from it (p).

Somner has shewn, that at least from the last year of K. John, two bailiffs were yearly appointed by the hands of the townsmen for the time being; from the time of such a grant in fee ferm, the crown was esteemed to be seized of it by way of seignory, and the tenure of the town itself, as well as the particular burgage tenements in it so put to fee ferm, was that of burgage. See Madox's Firma Burgi, p. 15, 21. Anno 4 Ed. I, it appears by the Pat. Rolls, that the liberties of this city, which had been seized into the king's hands, were restored anno 18 Edward I. The king's officers of the exchequer seized the liberties of this town of Canterbury, for not accounting for their rent at the exchequer; ibid. p. 161; and again anno 34 Edward I. See Madox's Excheq. p. 701, 702, 703. In the first year of King Edward I, the citizens of Canterbury were grievously amerced by the Justices Itin. for the escape of felons out of the churches of Canterbury, during the vacancy of the Archbishopric, contrary to former custom. Pat. 1 Ed. I, ps. 2, m. 18. Prynne, p. 125.

(p) Anno 780, in certain charters of Cbrist Church, in Canterbury, mention is made of one Aldhunc, the king's Praefect of this city. In 956, in a subscription to a deed, among the witnesses, mention is made of one Hlothewig Portgeresa. In the Danish massacre here under K. Ethelred,

anno

CIVIL JURISDICTION.

pointed by the King for the above purpose (q), and continued so to be, till K. Henry III, by his charter in his 18th year, granted the town to the citizens in fee farm as above-mentioned, and infranchised them with licence and power yearly to chuse in it bailiffs for themselves; and in his 40th year he granted to them another charter of divers liberties and franchises (r), all which were allowed in the Iters of J. de Berewyk and his sociates, Justices Itinerant, in the 21st year of K. Edw. I; and in that of H. de Stanton and his sociates, Justices Itinerant likewise at Canterbury, in the 6th year of K. Edward II; all which was proved on a quo warranto, in the 19th year of K. Richard II, who confirmed the same by his letters of Inspeximus that year, and granted his exemplification of them accordingly.

By this exemplification it appears, that in the Pleas of the Crown, anno 21 Edward I, before J. de Berewyk and his sociates, Justices Itinerant at Canterbury, upon a quo warranto issuing, in respect of these liberties, the citizens pleaded, that K. Henry, the King's father, granted and confirmed to them by his charter, that they and their heirs should have and hold of him and his heirs for ever, the said city of Canterbury in ferma, for 60 pounds sterling yearly to be paid; and as to the return of writs, assize of bread and ale, pillory, tumbrel, and gallows, they pleaded that the said K. Henry granted to them, that they and their heirs for ever, should have return of the King's writs, touching the city and the liberties of the same, as well within the suburb, as within the city; and as to the liberties of holding Pleas of the Crown, and having market, fair, gallows, and weif, in the city, they pleaded that the said K. Henry granted to them all liberties and free customs, which they had in the time of K. Henry his grandfather before mentioned, in as ample a manner as they had at any time possessed the anno 1011, Alfred, or Alfred, styled Præpositus Regis, was one of the personages of note then taken prisoner. Afterwards one Bramannus is mentioned in Domesday as Præpositus of the city. In succeeding times, about King Henry I.'s reign, being in the time of Archbishop Anselm, one Calveal is mentioned as a witness in a deed by the name and title of Portreva or Portrewe. Battely's Somner, p. 178.

(q) See Battely's Somner, p. 179, where there is a list of the names of several bailiffs, extracted from the charters in the archives of Christ Church, to which charters they were witnesses.

(r) Thorn, anno 1227, col. 1881. Both these charters are in the city chest, in the chamber of it. Anno 27 Ed. I, Adam de Vaux, and Thomas de Beaveys, two citizens of Canterbury, came into the exchequer, and for themselves and the whole community of the city made fine to the king in 100l. to have a confirmation of these charters of liberties granted to them by King Henry III; and they bound themselves pro se et ceteris civibus to pay the same. Madox's Firma Burgi, p. 139. Madox's Exchequer, p. 290, 291. Rot. Cart. No. 5, de confirmatione libertatum, &c. In the same; and they further pleaded, that they and the citizens their ancestors had fully used the aforesaid liberties, from the time of the aforesaid K. Henry, the great-grandfather of the then King (Edward;) all which was found by the Jury, and allowed by the Justices in their said Iter.

In which Iter, on a question arising, whether the boroughs of St. Martin and of Fyspole, were within the liberties of the city (s), the Jury found, that the borough of St. Martin should in future be subject and answerable with the rest of the citizens, in all those matters which belong to the crown; and that the coroner of the city should execute his office of coroner within that borough; and they further found, that all resident and dwelling in that borough, ought to come four times in a year to the hundred of Burgate, at the summons of the bailiffs of the city, to present those things which belonged to the View of Frankpledge. And in like manner that they ought to come to the Portmote of the city, as often as the citizens should cause a Common Meeting, to be summoned by the blowing of the horn of the city; and they found that the performing the said suit had been withdrawn for some time to the King's damage; therefore it was adjudged, that the above borough should for the future perform the said suits, and should be distrained to the performance of them, and that the King should recover his arrearages of the same. And as to the tenants of Fyspole, that they should perform the suit which they had been accustomed to perform (t).

After this, it appears, that the city continued to be governed by bailiffs with little alteration, though the citizens obtained some further addition to, and allowance of their liberties in the first year of K. Henry IV, in the 2d and 9th years of K. Henry V, and the 3d year of K. Henry VI, (u) in the 26th year of which reign, the King granted to them an ample charter of city chest is a charter of the same, dated anno 26 Edw. I; and two charters likewise, anno 22 Edw. III, confirming former liberties, with the addition of some new ones; and a grant anno 10 Edw. III, for the mayor to take recognizances of debt.

(s) In the year 1268, being the 42d year of King Hen. III, there had been an agreement made between the citizens and the Abbat of St. Augustine's, to put an end to the disputes which had arisen between them concerning the bounds of their respective liberties and franchises in respect to the Borough of Longport, which will be mentioned at large below, under the description of that Borough.

(t) See Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 3, No. vi, where these letters of inspeximus are recited, extracted from the bundle of records and king's writs in the Tower of London, of the 19th year of King Richard II; and in the city chest is a copy of this exemplification under the great seal, and likewise a charter of liberties granted by King Richard II, in his 3d year.

(u) All these charters are in the city chest. That of 9th Henry V, are letters patent of certain liberties to the marshal and steward and clerk of the market.

further

CIVIL JURISDICTION.

further liberties and privileges, among which were those of choosing a mayor instead of bailiffs, on Holy Cross Day, yearly, and to be a Corporation, by the name of Mayor and Commonalty; the Mayor to be sworn into his office on the Michaelmas day, to have his serjeants at mace, to have the return of all writs, foreign officers not to intermeddle; the city and court to be governed by the Mayor, who with the Commonalty, should be capable of purchasing lands, and to sue and be sued. The Mayor and his successors to take knowledge of all Pleas, to be Justices of the Peace, after the expiration of their mayoralty. And he granted, that no Justice of Peace of the county should enquire of things done in the city. Mondays and Thursdays to be the Courts days; the power of levying fines before the Mayor, and licence of concord; none of the Commonalty to be compelled to answer without the city; the Mayor, in his absence, might make one of the Aldermen his deputy. The Mayor and Aldermen only, to make and alter rules and constitutions, and to raise taxes on the citizens. The Mayor might punish any of the citizens, who came not to his commandment; to have one coroner; no officer of the county to intermeddle within the city or liberty of it.

And the same King, by another charter in the 31st year of his reign, granted, of his especial Grace, to the Mayor and Commonalty, a full confirmation of all former charters of liberties granted to them, as well as of his own charter last-mentioned with a special clause, that the liberties granted in such charter should not be any ways subject to the Act of Resumption then lately passed (v); and he further by it granted that the citizens should choose a Mayor, who should be a citizen, according to their old custom, or in the same manner as the citizens of London; that the Mayor, with the advice of the Aldermen, should choose yearly a bailiff or sheriff, who should be bound to answer at his Exchequer for the see farm, and other issues, profits and revenues of the city, and should make an attorney; conuzance of pleas to be taken before the Mayor in the Guildhall; all manner of pleas and actions within the precincts of the hamlet of Staplegate in this city, parcel of the ville of Westgate, without the city and within the aforesaid liberty of the Archbishop of Canterbury, always excepted.

And further, that the Mayor, and one learned man, and 4, 3, or 2, of the Aldermen, being called to the Mayor, jointly and severally should be Justices of the Peace, to hold the sessions within the city for the same and the liberties thereof; and therein to enquire of the clipping and forging of money, and of all statutes, &c. for the peace and good government of all people within the city; and of all felonies, forestallings, regratings, &c. therein to hear and determine of all matters, which Justices of the Peace should hear and determine; provided always, that the Mayor and the said learned man should be of the Quorum; that they should have the keeping of the gaol of Westgate for prisoners, and should be Justices of the gaol delivery; the Mayor and his successors to be Justices for the making of musters, &c. that the said Mayor and Commonalty should have one fair, to be holden on August 4th, and the two days next following, with all liberties and free customs to them belonging, provided it should not be to the nuisance of the fairs nigh to the same, or to the jurisdictions and liberties of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Priory of Christ Church, or the monastery of St. Augustine, by any manner of means.

After which, K. Edward IV, in his first year, confirmed all the above-mentioned charters by inspeximus, reciting especially those of K. Henry VI. at full length; and then, HE CONSIDERING that the city of Canterbury being one of the antientest cities of the realm, set in the best place for the prospect of strangers, the Metropolitan See of it, in which church the Blessed Martyr, St. Thomas, and his cousin Edward, late Prince of Wales, lay buried; and the fidelity and laudable service, wisdom, industry, and courage of the Mayor and citizens of Canterbury, to him and his progenitors, Kings of England, especially to himself of late, to their no small charge and jeopardy; therefore for these and many other causes, he granted and confirmed to them all former charters, liberties, and customs, especially those of K. Henry IV. and VI, to hold to them and their successors for ever. Moreover, bearing of the grievous and lamentable complaint of the then Mayor and citizens, that this city and the inhabitants of it were fallen into great poverty, as well by the great and chargeable payment of the see farm from it of 60l. as by their great and chargeable costs and expences in resisting his enemies invading the realm in those parts near it, and other necessary charges happening to the city; and that the fewness of the inhabitants in it were so much impoverished and wasted, that they must leave the city, though God forbid it, clearly depopulated, except they were graciously succoured; which he, of his abundant grace, being willing to do, and to further this city, released and remitted to the Mayor and citizens 16l. 13s. 8d. of the said see farm, yearly for ever; and that they should have allowance yearly at the Exchequer for the remaining 43l. 6s. 8d.

(v) Act anno 28 Henry VI. Rot. No. 5. See Davenant's Treatise of Grants and Resumptions, p. 160:

CIVIL JURISDICTION.

to be paid yearly, viz. 30*l.* thereof to the heirs of William, son of John Cundy (w), and 20 marcs to the 6 brothers and sisters of Herboldown, to them severally granted and confirmed of old time by his progenitors.

And he further granted to them, in help of the said payment of 43*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* all fines, issues, and amerciements at their sessions, held from time to time, and likewise authority for the Mayor to take fines and the concords thereof. And for the greater tranquillity, profit, and increase of the citizens, he of his better grace, granted and confirmed to the Mayor and citizens, that in future, the city, with the suburbs without Northgate, and the suburbs without Riding gate, Burgate, Newingate, Quiningate, Wergate, and Westgate, of the city; and that parcel, hamlet, or village of Winecheap, with other suburbs; and all the precinct of the city, suburbs, and parcel aforesaid, which were of the liberties, and within the liberty of the city at that time, or of old time had been. The hamlet of Staplegate within the city, parcel of the village of Westgate without the city, then of the fee of the Archbp. and his castle of Canterbury, always excepted, which city and suburbs, except before excepted, were then in the county of Kent, should in future be one whole county by itself corporate, in deed, name, and district, and utterly separated from the said county, and should be named and called the County of the City of Canterbury, for ever (x). And he granted that the bailiff of the city should be sheriff of it, and take the oath of sheriff accordingly; that the Mayor should certify such nomination under his seal into Chancery; the sheriff should hold Monthly Courts on a Thursday; that all writs should be directed to him, and he should have the return thereof as such, and should make up his account before the barons of the Exchequer yearly. The coroner should have (w) Several portions of the fee farm of this city had been granted out at times by the crown to different persons.

Among other instances of it, King Edward I. granted 30*l.* per annum to one Cundy, for his good service to the crown, to be paid out of the farms of the city, which grant is in the city chest; and in 1525, John Alcock, mayor of this city, gave by his will 20 nables for the buying in of 7*l.* 10*s.* parcel of the city's fee farm, which was yearly paid to the heirs of John Lucas. Battely's Somner, p. 183; and William Rutland, citizen and alderman of Canterbury, by his will, anno 1532, gave towards the purchasing of 7*l.* 10*s.* parcel of the fee farm of this city, which was yearly paid to the heirs of master John Lucas, the sum of 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.*

(x) At the time of the survey of Domesday, this place, like Rochester and many other towns, was accounted a hundred of itself, by the name of the Hundred of Canterbury, and it probably continued so till this charter of King Edw. IV. made it a county of itself, exclusive from the jurisdiction of the county of Kent, in which it was before comprehended; but although the hamlet of Staplegate within the city, parcel of the Ville of Westgate, without the city and the castle of Canterbury only were excepted from this new jurisdiction over the county of the city; none dwelling within the city should be compellable to be a collector or assessor of any tax or subsidy but within the city, and that upon shewing the charter in any Court, they shall allow thereof, &c. And he granted that the Mayor should be escheator, and to take the oath before the Mayor, his predecessor, and two of the Aldermen at the least; and that the Mayor and Commonalty should have in help towards the said payment of 43*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* all the issues and profits of the above office; and likewise the goods of all felons, fugitives, outlawries, &c. without any count whatsoever, the lands then being in the King's hands, and so coming in future always excepted; and further, that the sheriff dying or removing, the Mayor should make a new choice. To which charter were witnesses, Thomas, Archbp. of Canterbury, Primate of all England and Legate of the Apostolic see, and many others. It is dated on August 2*d.* in the year above-mentioned, and indorsed on the back, by the same King and of the date aforesaid, by authority of Parliament, and for 10*l.* paid in the Hanaper (y).

After which, K. Henry VII, in his 13th year, and K. Henry VIII, in his 3*d.* year, confirmed all former charters, liberties and privileges to this city; and the latter King granted to it his letters patent, in his 13th year, usually styled Novæ Ordinationes, for the better government of it (z); made to the Mayor and citizens, upon their humble petition to the King, on account of the frequent controversies and contentions within the city, among the indwellers of the city upon the election of a Mayor and other officers of it, and many other enormities of long time used within it, by which many inconveniences had arisen and were likely to arise, if good and due remedy was not in time provided and established; and being willing to provide such county, yet the Archbishop's Palace, the Ville of Christ Church, and other religious foundations claimed likewise an exemption from it; all which are mentioned in the succeeding charters and in the further part of this history.

(y) This and the two following charters are likewise in the city chest. In the 6th year of King Henry VII, the mayor and commonalty of the city of Canterbury, made claim of cognizance of an indictment for felony committed within their liberties, before the judge of assize and gaol delivery of the king's castle of Canterbury, Thomas Dawers by name; upon which the judge ordered their indictment to be amended, and instead of the felony being averred to have been committed within the liberties of the city, viz. in the parish of Northgate, for it to run thus, and that the felony was made in Westgate-street, in the county of Kent, for that the said felon was there taken cum manu opere, and was accordingly so arrested manu opere.

(z) These letters patent have usually been given to King Henry VII, but the style in the preamble, of defender of the faith, and supreme head of the church of England and Ireland, fixes it to his son and successor King Henry VIII. It is in the city chest.

due

CIVIL JURISDICTION.

due remedy for the speedy reformation of these evils, and the better administration of justice within the city, he ordained and established certain ordinances, institutions, and rules, to be observed within it in future; and in the first place, that instead of a Mayor and six Aldermen, there should be ever after, a Mayor and 12 Aldermen; and that every one of the said 12 Aldermen, and none other, should be eligible to be chosen Mayor; and whereas before there had been used to be 36 persons of the Common Council, he ordained that there should be but 24 of the Common Council in future, being freemen of the city; and for the peaceable and quiet election of Mayor, the Mayor and Aldermen should in future nominate at the usual place, two of the said Aldermen, to be put in election for that office, and that the Common Council and freemen of the city, should choose one of those two Aldermen to be Mayor for the year ensuing; and if any Alderman should die or depart from his office, the vacancy to be filled up by the Mayor and other Aldermen remaining; and in like manner the vacancy of a Common Councilman to be filled up by those of the same body remaining; that all fines, issues, profits, &c. should be received by the chamberlain and applied to the open profit and use of the city; that the Mayor should have yearly out of the chamber of the city, for the sustentation of his office of Mayoralty, 20l. and no more; and that the chamberlain should yearly acquit and discharge the Mayor and Sheriff, and the city itself of the payment of the fee farm, and of all other charges to the city, Mayor or Sheriff for the city, by any manner of means happening; except that the Mayor should bear and support the costs and charges in meat and drink for the common clerk, the serjeants to the maces, and the keepers of the prisons of the city, and for every of them. And he further decreed and ordained, what should be the custom of the Court as to sureties, pledges, &c. and that the election of officers, viz. of chamberlain, common clerk, attorneys, commonly called common pleaders; serjeants at mace, keepers of the gaol, and tollingers, should be made by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council; and that they should be sworn and continue in their respective offices, so that without some reasonable cause they should not be put away; and that the chamberlain should yearly make account before the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, or such Auditors as should be deputed by them. After which an act passed anno 34 and 35 of the same reign, for a confirmation of all liberties, granted by the King or any of his progenitors to the Mayor and Aldermen of Canterbury, which, nevertheless, the King might resume upon cause. Q. Elizabeth, in her first year, confirmed all former charters, privileges, and liberties to this city; during whose reign it became so populous and flourishing, that soon after the accession of K. James I, the Mayor and citizens petitioned the King, that on that, as well as on other accounts, he would be pleased to grant them a new charter, with a confirmation and extension of their freedoms and liberties; on which, in his 6th year, he was graciously pleased to grant them a new charter (a), in which he fully confirmed all their former liberties and privileges; and he further made new, erected, and created them into one body corporate and politic, by the name of the Mayor and Commonalty of the City of Canterbury, which should remain a free city of itself; and that they should have power to purchase lands and tenements of any sort whatsoever and wheresoever to them and their successors for ever. That all acts and deeds of the city should be done in the name of the Mayor and Commonalty. That they should have a Common Seal, which they might break, change, and new make at their pleasure. That there should be one citizen, nominated Mayor (b), and 12 citizens, Aldermen of the city, one of whom should in due course be chosen chamberlain, who should administer the oath to those admitted to the liberties of the city, as before used; and that there should be 24 citizens named the Common Council of it, out of whom the Sheriff should be chosen, as before accustomed; which Aldermen and Common Councilmen should be aiding and assisting to the Mayor in all matters and business at all times. That the nomination and swearing in of the Mayor should be on the days and times, and at the places before usual, and the nomination, election and swearing in of the Alderman, Chamberlain, Sheriff, Coroner, 24 Common Councilmen, Town Clerk, and all other officers and ministers of the city, should be from time to time made before the Mayor, at the usual times and places; provided, that no alien should bear office in the city, and that the Mayor, when out of office, should be one of the Aldermen in room of him elected to succeed him. And he ordained, that on the vacancy of an Alderman, the Mayor should propose to the Aldermen then present, one of the Common Council to be an Alderman, who should for such election have the majority of voices of such Aldermen; and if he should not have such majority, that then the senior Alderman in precedence then present should propose another such person for their choice, to have such majority; and so on, until some one such should be nominated by such majority, to be Alderman of the city; and that on the vacancy of a Common

(a) This charter was drawn by sr Henry Hobart, the Attorney General.

(b) Thomas Paramere, then mayor, was continued so by this charter.

Councilman,

CIVIL JURISDICTION.

Councilman, the Sheriff, the Recorder if present, or the senior Common Councilman then present, should in turn propose to the rest of the Common Council then present, one other citizen or freeman, to be elected such Common Councilman by the majority of voices, in like manner as on the vacancy of an Alderman as above-mentioned, and at the usual times and places. And that the Mayor and Aldermen, of which the Mayor should be always one, should make laws, decrees, statutes, &c. for the public good and common profit of the city, and should have power to enforce them by imprisonment, fines, and amerciaments, or by both, on the breakers of them; which fines and amerciaments should belong to the Mayor and Commonalty and their successors, provided that such laws, &c. were not repugnant to those of the realm. And that the Mayor, Aldermen, Sheriff, Chamberlain, &c. of the city, should hold and enjoy respectively, in their several offices, places and wards, view of frank pledge and all belonging to it; and all other exemptions and releasements, as they had before used and enjoyed; and that every citizen should have and enjoy his antient privilege and custom, as had been before time lawfully used and accustomed; that the Mayor and Aldermen, of which the Mayor should be one, should have power to elect a Recorder (c), who should be sworn in before the Mayor, and should hold his office during pleasure; and he further granted, that the Mayor, the Recorder, and all such Aldermen as had served the office of Mayor, should be Justices of the Peace, and conservators and keepers of it; and that they, or any four or more of them, whereof the Mayor and Recorder to be two, should hold the quarter session, and make a general goal delivery; and that the Recorder and Aldermen so acting as Justices, should take an oath for the due execution of such offices before the Mayor for the time being. And whereas by the charter granted by K. Henry VI, in his 26th year, the Mayor and Aldermen had power to assess and tax the goods, &c. of the inhabitants of this city for the necessities and profits of it, the King confirmed the same power, so that the Mayor be always one; and that they might levy the same by distress; and he further granted, that no stranger should keep a shop, or sell any goods whatsoever by retail within the city, unless it be in the times of fairs or markets holden in it, without the licence of the majority of the Mayor and Aldermen, of which the Mayor to be one, in writing under their seal, under pain of such penalties and forfeitures as they, by the statutes of the realm, might inflict and impose; and that no citizen should be compelled to appear on any juries, before any Court holden without the city, cases of high treason alone excepted; and that the Mayor and Town Clerk might take recognizances for debts, &c. and that the Mayor and Aldermen, of which the Mayor should always be one, might elect a Town Clerk (d), who should hold his office during pleasure, and might be removed by them accordingly; and that the Mayor and Commonalty should have power to purchase lands and tenements, not holden in chief, or by knight's service, to the clear amount of 40*l.* yearly, beyond reprises, the statute of Mortmain, &c. notwithstanding; and that any one might sell the same to them from time to time; and that the Mayor should appoint and have within the city a sword-bearer, who should be attendant on him, and carry or bear before him, one sword or blade covered, every where within it, and the liberties and precincts of the same. And he granted and confirmed to the Mayor and Commonalty and their successors, all their lands, tenements, liberties franchises, wastes, void places, waters, ways, commodities, &c. and hereditaments whatsoever, which they had used or enjoyed at any time by inheritance, or by any letters patent or charters whatsoever, or by any right, title, or custom, use or presumption, although the same or any of them had been forfeited, or left, or had been evilly used, or not used, or discontinued, to hold by the like services and tenures as heretofore; and yielding and paying to him, his heirs and successors, such fee farms, rents, and services, as they had been accustomed and ought to be paid for the same; and he further confirmed to them all liberties, jurisdictions, &c. and that they should hold and enjoy all the same, without molestation, or interruption, within this city, the liberties and precincts of the same.

(c) Sir John Boys, kn. was made the first Recorder in the charter.

Provided always, that this his present grant or confirmation should not in any wise extend to the palace of the Archbishop of Canterbury, or to the hamlet of Staplegate, or to the site and precinct of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Christ in Canterbury, nor to any other place whatsoever, being without the liberties of the city of Canterbury, or give place to, or any way be extended to the prejudice or diminution of any right or title of any liberties, franchises, exemptions, or jurisdictions of the Archbp. or his successors, or the Archbishopric, or of his Hon. Chancellor Edward, Lord Wotton, his Lieutenant of the County of Kent, the city of Canterbury, and the county of the same, or of the Lieutenant of him, his heirs, and successors, within the county of Kent, the city of Canterbury, and the county of the same, for the time being, or of the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Christ in

(d) Robert Railton, then Town Clerk, was appointed Town Clerk in the charter.

Canterbury,

CIVIL JURISDICTION.

Canterbury, or of the late dissolved monastery of St. Augustine, near Canterbury, or of his Cinque Ports, any thing contained in these presents to the contrary notwithstanding.

And he granted, that the Mayor and Commonalty should have these his letters patent, under his great seal of England, in due form, without fine or fee to him in his Hanaper, or otherwise, &c. In witness whereof, he had caused his letters to be made patent; witness himself at Asberidge, the 8th day of Sept. in the year of his reign of England, &c. the 6th, and of Scotland the 42d (e). Signed, Cartwright, and underneath, Taxat: finis pro Confirmacoe prior: Libtat ad xv lib.

T. ELLESMERE, Canc.

The above charter of K. James I. continued in force for the government of this city till the 36th year of K. Charles II.'s reign, anno 1684, two years before which, that King had issued his proclamation for the resumption into his hands of all corporation charters throughout the kingdom; in consequence of which many were surrendered, and others were taken away, under various pretences. The Mayor and Commonalty of this city refusing to surrender their charter, were served with a quo warranto, as appears by an entry in the Burghmote book of a meeting held on Dec. 13, 1683, of the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Councilmen, to consult what return they should make to it, which it seems they did not then determine on; but that in another Meeting, held in January 1684, being intimidated, they declared both their inability and unwillingness to contest the quo warranto brought against the city. And on the 11th of April following, at another Meeting, the surrender of the franchises and liberties of the city to the King's use, was sealed by an order of Burghmote for that purpose; and in the August following the charter of K. James I. was surrendered by the Mayor, ex officio, with the consent of the majority of the Court of Burghmote; and on Nov. 8th following, being the 36th year of the same reign, anno 1684, the King granted them another charter, in which the chief alterations seem to have been the grant of a fair on March 1, yearly, in the field called Le Dane John Field, or in some other convenient place within the liberties, for the buying and selling of cattle, with a Court of Pye Powder to it; the liberty of chusing a Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council, or any other officer dwelling in any privileged place, within or near the liberties or precincts of the city; for the Recorder to chuse a deputy, to remain during his pleasure, and then, what it appears this new charter was chiefly granted for, a proviso, that the King and his successors, at his and their pleasure, might remove the Mayor, Recorder, Sheriff, Town Clerk, and any of the Aldermen, or Common Council from their offices, by any order under the seal of the Privy Council, as often as he or they should think fit; and that then, in convenient time, others should be chosen and appointed in their room, according to the tenor of this charter; in which Wm Rooke, esq; was nominated Mayor, and several of the Aldermen and Common Councilmen, and other officers belonging to the Corporation, were removed and others nominated in it (ee); they being severally displaced, as having opposed his measures.

This charter was received at Canterbury on Nov. 12th, that year, with much apparent solemnity and demonstration of joy; and being read at the Court Hall, the Mayor and Aldermen named in it were sworn, with the usual ceremonies on such occasions (f). But upon the death of K. Charles II, which happened on Feb. 6th, following, 1685, K. James II, in his 2d year, anno 1687, caused the above charter likewise to be surrendered up to him, and gave the city another new charter; by which the liberties of it, as well as the Corporation, were still further new modelled to his purposes, and such persons only were put into the government of it, as he could best confide in; by it he removed Henry Lee, esq; from the office of Mayor, and several of the Aldermen, and appointed John Kingsford to be Mayor, who acquitted himself so much to the King's satisfaction, that he was, at his nomination, continued in the office for the next year. But the King finding the danger he was in from such arbitrary proceedings in the month of October following issued a proclamation, by which he restored all those corporations which had had new charters

(e) The expences of obtaining this charter were to the city, 369l. 7s. 8d.

(ee) Thomas, Earl of Thanet, was nominated Recorder; Sir Anthony Aucher, knt. and bart. Sir William Honywood, bart. the aforesaid William Rooke, Henry Lee, William Kingsley, esqrs. John Eliot, M. D. Joseph Roberts, esq; Thomas Endfield, gent. and others therein named, were appointed Aldermen; Sir Paul Barrett, knt. serjeant-at-law; Herbert Randolph, jun. esq; Leonard Lovelace, gent. and others therein mentioned, Common Councilmen; and the above-mentioned Leonard Lovelace, Town-clerk and Coroner.

(f) In an entry made concerning the bringing down of this charter, it is said that on the day above-mentioned, the charter was met upon Boughton Hill, about five miles from Canterbury, (being brought down by Col. Rooke, who succeeded as mayor,) by between 5 and 600 horsemen and 40 coaches of the principal gentry of the country, and the most eminent persons of the corporation, and so conducted to the Westgate of the city, where they were received by 6 companies of foot, who made a guard for them to the town-hall; and after the charter had been read, and the mayor and aldermen sworn, the mayor entertained the whole company with a collation in the afternoon; and all manner of demonstrations were shewed of a dutiful and loyal acknowledgment of the king's most gracious favour to the city.

CIVIL JURISDICTION.

granted to them, since the year 1679, to their former charters proceeding that time, and to all their liberties, free customs, &c. By virtue of which the charter of K. James I. was restored to this city, and the citizens elected Mr. Henry Gibbs, to the office of Mayor for the remainder of the year; and the Aldermen and Common Councilmen took their places as they stood at the time of the surrender, and according to their former elections, and according to the tenor of that charter, by which this city has continued to be governed to the present time. In Trinity Term, in the 8th year of K. George III, the Mayor and Commonalty of the city of Canterbury made a claim in the Court of Exchequer, of their liberties, immunities, and franchises, granted to them by charter, in the proceedings of which, it is recited as follows:—And Wm de Grey, esq; Attorney General of the said Lord the King, that now is, who for the same lord, the now King, prosecuteth in this behalf, present here in Court, in the same day, in his own proper person and by the barons here, being asked and demanded, whether he would say any thing for the same lord, the now King, in the premises; having seen and inspected the aforesaid claim of the said Mayor and Commonalty, and having also seen and inspected, as well the enrolment of the said charter of the aforesaid late Henry IV, late K. of England, made to the aforesaid Mayor and Commonalty, concerning the Inspecimus of the liberties aforesaid and the enrolment of the charters of the aforesaid K. Henry VI, late K. of England, granted to the said Mayor and Commonalty; and also the enrolment of the charter of the aforesaid Edward IV, made to the said Mayor and Commonalty, concerning the donations, grants, liberties, franchises, privileges, immunities, customs, confirmations, and acquittances aforesaid; and also the enrolments of the letters patent of the late K. Henry VII,

1 Henry IV. 26 Henry VI. 31 Henry VI. 1 Edw. IV. 13 Henry VII. 6 Jac. I.

(g) Here is the same mistake of the king, who granted these letters patent, which, as has been mentioned above, from the titles given to him in the preamble to them, of supream head of the church, and defender of the faith, must have been those of King Henry VIII, to whom those titles were first appropriated and were first used by him.

(h) Michaelmas Term, anno 12 George, B. R. the king, v. the Mayor, &c. of the city of Canterbury, on a mandamus to restore a recorder, they returned, that he was an officer at pleasure, and that upon due summons to chuse another they did so, and thereby the former was removed; and this was held by the court to be a good return. See Strange's Reports, vol. i, p. 1674.

(i) The sword was obtained by Thomas Paramor, who was mayor that year, not without a great expence to the city. Battely's Somner, p. 18.

King of England (g), whereby he granted to the said Mayor and Commonalty, all issues, fines, amer-ciements, and other profits arising within the said city; and also the enrolment of the charter of K. James I, late K. of England, concerning the authorities and liberties therein contained, and in the Court here to them allowed.

Therefore the same Attorney General doth not deny, but confesseth the claim of the aforesaid Mayor and Commonalty, to be in all things true, in manner and form as the aforesaid Mayor and Commonalty, in their claim have alledged and claimed. WM DE GREY.

Then follows the recital of the charters and the several forms of recital usual in the Court of Exchequer on such claims; after which it concludes thus:—Therefore the same Attorney General doth not deny, but confesseth the claim of the aforesaid Mayor and Commonalty to be in all things true, in manner and form as the same Mayor and Commonalty in their claim aforesaid have alledged and claimed; and the premises having been seen by the barons, and mature deliberation had thereupon among them,—it is considered by the same barons, that all the aforesaid liberties, granted to them by virtue of the aforesaid charters and letters patent, be adjudged and allowed to the aforesaid Mayor and Commonalty, and their successors, by virtue of the premises.

In conformity to the above-mentioned charter, granted to this city by K. James I, the corporation at present continues to consist of a Mayor, chosen on Sept. 14, and sworn in on the day of St. Michael; a Recorder, 12 Aldermen, and 24 Common Councilmen, including the Sheriff and Town Clerk. The Mayor, Recorder (b), and those who have served the office of Mayor, are Justices of the Peace; a Chamberlain, Coroner, and other inferior officers. It has the privilege of a sword granted at the time of the charter by K. James I, in 1607 (i), and a mace (k). A Court of Burghmote for the business of the city, which is held on every fourth Tuesday (l); and it continues to hold a general Court of quarter sessions, and Court of

(k) It was ordered in parl. as appears by the rolls of 20 Edw. III, that no man within cities or towns or elsewhere, do carry maces of silver, but only the king's serjeants; but that they carry maces of copper only, and of no other metal, except in the city of London, where the serjeants may carry their maces of silver within the liberties of it, before the mayor, in the king's presence. Cotton's Records, p. 46.

(l) By the charter of King Henry III, the city burghmote may be assembled once in 15 days; but the ordinary business of the city not requiring such frequent meetings, this court is hardly ever convened oftener than once in a month. It has been held immemorially on a Tuesday, and is called by summons by the blowing of a horn. This custom of assembling burghmotes by the sound of a horn, is very antient, being mentioned in an exemplification of a record now in the city chamber, dated so far back as the 13th century.

It

BOUNDS OF THE CITY AND LIBERTY.

over and terminer, with power of life and death, pleas of trespass, and other liberties, as mentioned in the charter, in like manner as other cities and counties of the like sort.

The arms of the city are—Argent, three Cornish choughs proper, 2 and 1; on a chief gules, a lion passant guardant or (m).

The common seal of the city of Canterbury has on one side the above arms of the city, and on the reverse a castle, with this inscription round it: Istud est Sigillum Comune Civitatis Cantuarie.

The seal belonging to the office of mayoralty has a castle garnished with 3 lions passant, with this inscription round it, viz. Sigillum Majoris Civitatis Cantuarie.

THE BOUNDS OF THE CITY AND LIBERTY.

THE BOUNDS of the city and county of Canterbury have been at several times perambulated by the chief magistrates and commonalty of it. Tborn (n) gives an account of one made in the 46th year of King Edward III, as being made partially and much to the detriment of his monastery and several others. It is as follows:

In the same year (viz. anno 46 Edw. III,) on the Monday next before the feast of St. Augustine, a perambulation was made by Nicholas de Baa and William Cornwaille, then bailiffs of the city of Canterbury, by Nicholas ate Crowche, John Sebeldwyck, Thomas Everard, Wm. Brone, Henry Lincolle, John Thycce, Edmond Horne, and Richard de Hoo, citizens and aldermen of the city, and by others, very many of the commonalty of the same, claiming the lands and tenements within their perambulation, as being within the liberties of the said city.

First, they passed along the metes and bounds of the same liberties from the cross of Shestynge, as far as the gate of a certain pasture called Pol-dreslese, and so they perambulated the whole of that pasture, to the disherison and usurpation made there upon the rights of the lords and other tenants, who were of the foreign of the country. Item, they passed along the metes and bounds of the same liberties at Fyspole, over the lordship of the Abbat of St. Augustine's, and there fixed and placed a new wooden cross, as one of the metes and bounds of the same liberties, to the disherison and usurpation there made for a great space over the lordship of the Abbat and Convent, and of all the tenants of the whole hundred of Donbarnford, in the hands of the Lord Abbat in ferme with other hundreds, of the demise and grant of the king, and so there unjustly and without licence they rode over the land of Thomas de Gardewynton, called Lilefdenne, on the east side of a certain pond called Fispoles-pond, passing along there the metes and bounds by the moiety of the pond. Item, in perambulating they passed along their metes and bounds of the same liberties from a certain bound called Wodestake, by perambulating unjustly the whole wood of Gwodrycheswode, wholly without their liberty. Item, they perambulated and passed along their bounds and usurped upon the lordship there of Gloucestre, in the hundred del Hwytstaple. They passed along Well, about xx acres of the land of the Hospital of St. Laurence, near Canterbury, and of other tenants of the country there at Hwytesfeldesbegge, without the limits and precincts of the same liberties, and there they perambulated unjustly the greatest part of the land in the hundred of Bregge, at the nook or corner of Hwytesfeldesbegge.

In the reign of King Henry VII, about the year 1497, there was a perambulation taken of the bounds of the liberty of this city, which was recorded as follows,

FIRST, the libertie and franchise of the citie begynnith at the end of the Bridge of Westgate, to the breedth or wideness of the King's Stowere (o), the Archbishop pleaded, that it was not his doing; and the tenants pleaded, that the citizens had built on the Archbishop's ground according to antient usage, which was out of the city's libertie. The bailiffs pleaded, that the river was part of the fee ferm which they held from the king, which entitled them to 150 feet in breadth without the walls for the city ditch. Upon issue joined, the jury found for the king, and of course the Archbishop was found guilty of the encroachment. Which trial was before the Justices Itinrant in the reign of King Edward I, at Canterbury.

The river without Westgate has often been farmed out by the city, and particularly to one Westland, who paid 6s. 8d. anno 8 Henry VI, for the fishery of it; and in a very old lease is the following clause: Saving to the mayor and commonalty the right of coming on the ground and fishing in the Stour; and the same clause is now inserted in the lease of part of the city ditch granted to Mr. Dtan. And in a suit between the Prior of Christ Church and the city, it was pleaded, that the river adjoining to and without Westgate was part of the fee ferm held from the king.

and

It is a court of record, and is composed of the mayor for the time being, or of his deputy in his absence, the aldermen and common council, a majority of whom, the mayor being considered as one, is necessary to form a court.

(m) It appears that this city formerly regarded St. Thomas Becket as its patron and tutelur saint, and therefore borrowed and retains at this day a part of its arms from those borne by him, which were three Cornish choughs proper; and as a farther instance of it, they caused these verses to be cut about the rim of its old common seal:

*Quibus immensus Thomas qui corruiit ensis
Tutor ab offensis urbis fit Cantuarie.*

(n) Col. 2147.

(o) To prove the Stour or King's River to be included in the city's liberty, there is a record in the council-chamber of a suit commenced by the bailiffs against Archbishop Peckham and his tenants, for encroaching on the city's ditch, without Westgate, and building on it; by which the current of the water was impeded, the adjacent meadow overflowed, and the walls of the city damaged by it. To which

BOUNDS OF THE CITY AND LIBERTY.

and beyond, of old usage, with the ground under the wall, with a parcel of meadowe land between the Stowere and the causeweye at the Posterne, by an old deke unto the bridge there; and from thence beyond the king's highway, leading to the Water-lock unto Shafford's-mill; and from thence between the meadow and Shafford's-mill, and the meadow of St. Austen, next to the Water-lock unto the king's Stowere; and so right by the Stowere unto Hold-mill; and by the same Stowere unto Sholdfortbe; and from Sholdfortbe by the Stowere unto Hards-mill (p), and from Hards-mill, by the Stowere unto Cbanfell or Chantry; and by the same Stowere leading towards the Fulling-mill of Stourrye, unto a certain deke leading from the said Stowere unto the king's highway which leadeth from Canterbury unto Stourrye, unto a certeyne willow-tree there being. And whatsoever is on the right hand of the aforefaide marks and boundes by circuitynge is of and within the libertie of the city of Canterbury, together with all the Stowere, and one meadow pertayning to the citizens of Canterbury, on the right hand of the Stowere, parcel of the cities fee farms, be within the libertie of the city of Canterbury.

And furthermore from the said deke and willow tree by the said highway leading from Canterbury to Stourrye, unto a certain ayshe standing on the left hand on the said king's highway, upon the bank of a deke called the Polders (q), and so right beyond the Polders unto a certain well by Milfield (r); and from the said well right unto the north end of the wood of Tborolt-wood (s), unto the crosse and gallows of the libertie of Fordwich (t); and from that crosse by the king's highway, leading towards Stodmarsh

(p) The family of Hardres held the manor of Broadak from the reign of King Henry IV, to that of King Henry VIII; which manor includes that part of the river where the mill stood, which was near Horsethwa bole.

(q) The Polders are proved to be within the city liberty, by a record in the city chamber, anno 1 Henry VI.

(r) The well or spring is still to be seen at the end of the field near the stile, by the foot-path leading from the Old Park to Fordwich, where a boundary stone is now placed.

(s) Tborolt wood is now grubbed up; it lay to the south-west of the wood called Cbequer's Wood, and is adjoining to the Old Park; all of which is proved to be in the city liberty by a record in the chamber, which mentions a fine of 40s. being levied on one Thomas Groome, for stealing deer out of the Lady Woolton's Park, and by an old subsidy book, it appears to have been taxed to Burgate Ward.

(t) The crosse and gallows stood at the upper end of Well-lane, near the Mote Park Wall; as appears by the map.

(u) King's Tree is still standing within the park, about 12 rods from the corner of the wall next to Trendley Park.

(v) Burwarke is described in the map of Fordwich.

(w) Hawling, or Elbery Marsh, where a stone is now placed.

(x) Organ-lane leads from the south end of Holdridge wood under the park wall unto Fishpoole Bottom.

(y) Home-pits and Gooderish-field are still known by the same names, and are described in the city map.

unto King's-tree (u); and from King's-tree unto Burwarke marke (v), at Hawlinge (w), beyond the Moate, and all the lands of the Moate unto Organ-lane (x), at Fish-poole, and whatsoever is on the right hand of the said markes and boundes be of and within the libertie of the city of Canterbury.

And the circuite of the said libertie goeth from the said Organ-lane by the midds of the pond of Fish-poole; and because the walk cannot there be made, but through the water, beyond the midds of the said poole, the said poole is gone about by a way they go to Pyntkin; and from Pyntkin unto Glassincroft; and from thence unto the uttermost part of the field of Homepits, and so going about a certaine field called Goodrish field (y), and to a certaine marke called King's Marke, by Cbal-dank Elme (z), unto an elder tree, standing betweene the lands of John Ijaaks without the libertie, and John Diggs within the libertie, and from thence unto a certaine crosse (a) or mark on Sbegdank, near Gillindank, or Ginny-bottom (b), and then unto Hengrove and Heatben-land, and from thence unto the Heythorne standing in the field behind the manor of Edmond de Staplegate, of Natyndon (c); and then by the street of Natyndon unto the crosse and a lane nye Winsole, leading towards Moreton or Doddingdale, unto the crab-tree there, circuytinge or going about all the lands of Moreton, or Doddingdale, and then unto Hanne-fielde towards Heppingtone, in which field be . . . acres of land appertayning to the manor of the hospital of St. Jacob, and . . . acres belonging to the manor of Dungeon; and from Hanne-fielde by Stoupington (d), unto Holloway-lane (e), and then by the said lane or King-streete unto the gate of

(z) Cbal-dank is the dank or bottom on the right hand of the road in Goodrish or Gutteredge Bottom, and the Elm is in the south-west corner of the field of John Ijaaks and John Diggs. In the Chamberlain's account is this entry, viz. two men were sent to John Ijaaks, of Patricborne, and John Diggs, of Barbam, to request them to agree on a spot where a gallows should be placed at or near Cbal dank Elm; the reason why such request was made to them was, because it was known that the city boundaries divided their estates.

(a) The city boundaries were formerly marked out by wooden crosses, as they are now by stones, thus marked C^CC and numbered.

(b) Gillin-dank is in the same bottom or valley as Cbal-dank. In a subsidy roll for Riding-gate ward, made in the beginning of King Henry VII's reign, 10 acres of Gillin-dank and 64 acres of Sbegdank are rated.

(c) Edmond de Staplegate served the office of bailiff in 1346, and then resided at Natyndon, now called Nackington; and by a court roll 17 Henry VIII, it appears that a fine was levied in the Mayor's Court, of certain lands in the parishes of St. George and Natyndon infra Libertates Civ.

(d) The Parchment book of Wills in the city chamber, No. 1, fol. 37, proves Stuppington, near Eldring Bank, to be within the libertie.

(e) In the chamberlain's account, anno 17 Edw. IV, there

BOUNDS OF THE CITY AND LIBERTY.

the hospital of St. Jacob, and whatsoever is on the right hand of the aforefaid markes and bounds be of and within the libertie of the citie aforefaid, and so the circuyte of the libertie of the aforefaid city goeth by the king's highway from the hospital aforefaid back to the end of the stone wall of the said hospital (f) towards Tanynton, and from thence back towards Canterbury unto a certaine lane in Wincheape on the west part of the said way of Wincheape; which lane leadeth right over the meadows there, as it is known by the markes and bounds, unto the king's Stowere which cometh from Chartam unto Canterbury; and so by that Stowere unto the island of Brittain; which island pertaineth to the citizens of Canterbury, and a parcel of the king's Stowere; and from Brittain unto the deke of the city without the walls, unto the king's Stowere leading by Westgate-mills unto the bridge where first it began; within which circuyte is contained the libertie of the city of Canterbury, with the parish of Westgate; whatsoever is within the walls, that is to say, of the lands and tenements within and without the walls, nothing else but the king's Stowere with the ground as is aforefaid.

And also, that there were contained within the markes and bounds of the libertie of the city aforefaid, 3784 acres and an half of land, viz.

In the ward of Burgate,	1520 $\frac{1}{2}$ acres.
In the ward of Northgate	1400
In the ward of Newingate and Ridingate,	412
And in the ward of Worthgate,	452
<hr/>
Total number of acres	3784 $\frac{1}{2}$

A perambulation of the bounds of the city of Canterbury, made on the 30th of Sept. 1728.

THE LIBERTY of the city of Canterbury beginneth at the end of the bridge of Westgate, for the breadth and wideness of the King's Stoure, and beyond the usage, with the ground under the wall of the said city, with a parcel of meadow between the Stoure and the caufway at the postern, by an old dike unto the bridge there; and from thence beyond the King's highway, unto a water-lock at Shafford's mill, (now Dean's mill,) and to the meadow of St. Austen, next to the water-lock, (Quere, it not being mentioned in the map) and so, right by the Stoure, we went to the first meadow beyond Shalloak and passed along by what is called the back river till we came to the joining of the back river with the Stoure, and from that joining we kept by the Stoure, till we came opposite to Clackett's-lane, (which is the lane just by Mr. Charles Knowler's half way house to Sturry), which we measured from the joining to this place, and is 82 rods—ordered A MARK there, as being as nigh the place as we could find, where Holle-mill stood; from thence we kept by the Stoure into Shelford land, lying by the Stoure, ordered A MARK there, as being as nigh the place as we could discover where Hardres-mill stood; from thence by the Stoure we went to Chancery-bead, ordered A MARK; from thence we crossed the Stoure to a certain dike near a small ozier-ground, and from the aforefaid dike we kept up the road leading to Sturry, to a certain ash there, standing on the left hand of the king's highway, on a bank called Polder's Bank, and so straight from the ash on Polders we went to a certain well, which is now almost filled up, being near Millfield, which field is the broomfield adjoining to Fordwich, and from that certain well to the upper end of Millfield south, right along the hedge, where there is a mark almost decayed, so ordered A MARK; from thence we went to Thurbolt-down, and leaving a large oak on our left hand, standing on a bank on Thurbolt-down, just by a rivulet, which runs between Thurbolt-down and Thurbolt-wood—(N. B. The wood is down, and only gors grows): we came to a stone just at the entrance of Thurbolt-wood, by this rivulet, standing on the right hand; and from thence we went straight till we came to another stone at the upper end of Thurbolt-wood, adjoining to the road to Stodmarsh; and from thence we went into that road and to what is called the cross and gallows of the liberty of Fordwich, which is at the upper end of a lane leading to Fordwich called Toell-lane; and from thence to a certain stone in the wall in Stodmarsh road, right against Bretbren-clofe, which we measured, between the cross and the stone, 17 rods; and from the stone in the wall to a certain large tree standing within the Mote-wall, called King's Tree, we measured straight from the stone to the tree eleven rods, and from thence through a certain wood called Mote-rough, and from thence to a rivulet at the furthest part of the Mote adjoining to Eldbridge-marsh—ordered A MARK; and from thence straight to a large oak within the wall nigh unto a lane called and from thence straight to Fish-poole, but as it would not permit to walk there, we turned over a gate into a wood adjoining to Fish-poole, and kept to the right hand near unto the Reed Pond, we kept turning on the right till we came into Bekeborne road, which we crossed and went to the field called Homepitts, kept by the hedge is an entry of a charge of erecting a gallows at Holloway-street, or lane, to hang a murderer on.

(f) In the Burghmote book, page 3 and 4, it is recorded that the mayor rode before the Queen (Elizabeth) bearing the mace until he came to the end of the stone wall of St. Jacob's Hospital, which being the extent of the city libertie, he then resigned his post to the sheriff of Kent.

BOUNDS OF THE CITY AND LIBERTY.

on the left and came to where there had been a marked tree stood; between the Homepit field and Godrick alias Gutteridge field, that tree being grubbed up—ordered a MARK there; we kept up Godrick-field till we came into Bridge road, and so to Milestone-hole, just by the turning up to Milestone farm, where a mark had been, but was gone, so ordered a MARK there; then we crossed Bridge road and kept on an angle to Sbegdowne, where our directions said there was a mark, but we could not find it, so querer where to put a mark? from thence we kept on to where there had been an bawthorne, as a mark, standing behind the manor of Staplegate, (which Mr. Fox now occupies), and the bawthorne being gone, ordered a MARK there; then we came into Nackington road, and passed for William Willis's house to a hole called Winsole; and from Winsole we turned on the right hand till we came to a certain field called the Hundred Acres, in which stands a stone near the foot path leading to Heppington; and from that stone we turned on the right hand, which brought us into Hollow-lane to a mark tree, and so down that lane to St. Jacob's Hospital on our left hand and came into Wincheap coming to Canterbury, at a certain house, which we went through (which now one Jarman useth), which house is about 3 doors from what is called the Cock and Bull, and came into the meadow joining to the Stoure, called Bingley; then we crossed the Stoure to a certain ozier ground, formerly known by the name of the island of Brittany, and so by that Stoure into the dike of the city, without the walls of the city into the King's Stoure leading by Westgate-mill unto the bridge of Westgate, where we began.

The following is an account of the last survey of the boundaries of the city and liberties of Canterbury, taken in April 1791, with the assistance of the owners and occupiers of the lands and premises, through which they run, or adjoin to—According to the old custom in describing the marks and bounds of this antient city, they begin at Westgate Bridge, and include the whole breadth of the river Stour, along the back of North-lane to the bridge above Dean's-mill; and then crossing the river, take a direction by the rails that part the foot-path from Dean's meadow; the meadow being in, and the foot-path out of the liberty; the said rails being placed there in lieu of a dike that formerly was a boundary, but is now filled up; and crossing the said foot-path about 20 feet from the scite of the old postern, where, until this year, there was a wooden foot bridge, which divided the middle branch of the Stour from a garden belonging to the Mayor and Commonalty, in the occupation of Mr. John Brown, and includes the said garden or island, but leaves out the middle branch of the river, until it comes to the lowermost point of the said island, it then includes the whole breadth of the main or principal river to Barton-mill; and from thence to Claris's Island, and so on, still including the breadth of the river, for upwards of half a mile below the said island, to the corner called Chantry head, where the river divides itself into two branches; and from the said corner across the meadows by a ditch unto the king's highway leading from Canterbury to Sturry, to a large ash tree, and crossing the road from thence along the hedge by the end of Millfield, to a boundary stone at the lower end of a field called the Lower Ten Acres, of the Old Park lands, belonging to for Edward Hales, bart. and now in the occupation of Mr. John Austen; and so by the hedge and ditch to the north end of the rough grounds called Scotland-bills; and from thence up a hollow that divides Scotland-bills from Cbequers-wood, to a stone by the king's highway without the wall of Earl Cowper's Park, called the Mote; and then leading along the highway under the said wall towards Stodmarsh, by the Mote Farm House; and by the end of Well lane, where the cross and gallows of Fordwich formerly stood, to the gate that leadeth into Trenly Park; 17 rods from which gate, within the Mote Park stands King's Tree, an antient boundary; and from the said gate by the corner of the park, right down the hollow of Mead's-ruff, to a mark-stone at the north-east corner of Elberymarsh, by Holdridge Wood; and along by the brook under Holdridge Wood, and enclosing the Mote lands by Organ-lane, unto Fishpole Bottom; and crossing the king's highway that leads from Canterbury to Littlebourn, southward, through the boggy hollow ground, close under the side of Paternoster Wood, crossing the Patribourn road, under the garden of Paternoster-house to Homepit-field, in the occupation of Mr. Thomas W. Collar; and from thence along the eastern extremity of Gutteridge-field unto the mile-stone, a few rods eastward up Dover road, beyond Gutteridge Bottom; and from thence to a stone by an elm tree at the north-east corner of Sbegdowne, and the south-east corner of Dover Close, in the occupation of Mr. Fox, of Nackington; and circuiting through Sbegdowne, enclose the Hengrove and Heatben-land, and so on to an elder tree in the land of the said Mr. Fox; and then to a stone in the garden at the corner of the farm yard of Nackington; and through the said farm yard into the high road leading from Canterbury to Hithe; and then along the said high road to the south-east corner of and including the gardens and pleasure grounds of Richard Milles, esq. of Nackington, and from thence by the end of Murton-lane, across the two fields in a south-west direction to Winsole chalk-pit, about eighty eighty rods from Murton farm house; and from thence in the same direction to a stone in the hedge adjoining to the foot-path that leads from Murton to Heppington, near the angle of the hedge in Hanne field; and then right across two fields to the stone in Holloway-lane, which leadeth from Stuppington to Almes-bole; and then by the said lane to the smith's forge at the corner of St. Jacob's Hospital, in Wincheap; and along the said wall to the Turnpike House; and then back again by the street of Wincheap to Cock and Bull Lane; and down the said lane and across the meadow at the end thereof to the end of a ditch, unto the river Stour; and along the said river, including the Island of Brittain, round the point below Bingley; and from thence across the field to the city ditch, without the city wall; and including the said ditch to the bridge of Westgate, from whence the Perambulation began.

BOUNDS OF THE CITY AND LIBERTY.

IT APPEARS that there were formerly many disputes and controversies between the Mayor and Commonaltie and the Prior and Convent of Christ Church, concerning the limits and boundes of their respective jurisdictions in and about this city, which occasioned a composition to be entered into between them in the 7th year of King Henry VII, which being made into an indenture, was interchangably sealed with their respective seals; by which, to put an end to all such quarrels and to promote future tranquillity and peace, it was agreed, that the Mayor and Commonaltie, their heirs and successors should not from thenceforth cause and in no wyse challenge, proclaim or demand any privilege, libertie, franchise, jurisdiction, ministracion of justice or execution thereof within the following limits and boundes.

THAT is to say, from the church of Northgate by the Ambery Wall, as the wall leadeth unto the corner of the same Ambery, nor from the said corner right by a line over the way, unto the wall of the Palyce of the Archbishop, nor from the church of Northgate aforesaid, as the wall of the said cytie standeth, unto the church of St. Michael, nor from the said church unto the gate called Christ Church Gate, otherwise called the Church Gate, nor from thence as the close of the stone wall leadeth unto the said Palace of the Archbishop, except in the tenancies and houses lying from the gate called St. Michael's Gate, otherwise called Burgate, unto the said gate called Christ Church Gate, and from the said gate unto the Palace of the Archbishop, of which the doors and windows then were, or thereafter should be, opening unto the street. And it was likewise covenanted and agreed between the said parties, that the Prior and Convent and their successors should from thenceforth cease and in no wyse challenge, claim nor demand any privilege, libertie, franchise, jurisdiction, ministracion of justice or execution thereof, in the said tenancies, nor houses lying from the said gate called St. Michael's Gate, otherwise called Burgate, unto the said gate called Christ Church Gate; nor from thence unto the said Palace of the Archbishop, of which the doors and windows then be or thereafter should be opening unto the street, nor in any other places within the limits or boundes of the said cytie, other than be contained within the limits and boundes aforesaid; saving unto the Prior and Convent and their successors, all the lands and tenements, possessions, rents, reversions and firmes, with the appurtenances, and their lawful ways thereunto within the limits and boundes of the said cytie, to hold, possess and enjoy the same in like manner as they and their predecessors have had theretofore, or ought to have, in right of their church; saving also to them all such franchises, liberties and privileges, as they had or ought to have within the manor of Calcott, and the burrowe of St. Martin's, not hurting the mayor and commonaltie of a fine or rent of 12d. by the year of the said burrowe; nor the said Mayor and Commonaltie, their heirs nor successors, of any libertie, franchise, or privilege, which they had or ought to have in the same or any parcel thereof whereunto the Mayor and Commonaltie might have, and the Prior and Convent have no title.

And also it was covenanted and agreed between the said parties, that if it should happen hereafter, that any tenant or fermour of the Prior and Convent and their successors within the city, or within the said tenants tenements, or houses, or any of them, should do or suffer any thing whereby by the law he was or should be to lose or forfeit his moveable goods, that notwithstanding it should be lawful to the Prior and Convent and their successors to enter into the same tenants tenements and houses, and in every of them, and every parcel, of the same, for all rents and firmes due unto them, to distreine such goods, and them to bear and carry away, retheyne, and keep unto the time that they should be thereof, and every parcel thereof, truly contented and paid; and if any such farmer or tenant of the Prior and Convent or their successors had, or thereafter should have any of their goods or chattels by the name of a score, it should be also lawful for them from time to time to take and seize the same goods and score, as their own proper goods, and them to retheyne, and keep to their own use and behoof, without lett, interruption, challenge, or claim of the Mayor and Commonaltie, and their heirs or successors. It was also covenanted and agreed between the parties by these indentures, that the Mayor and Commonaltie, by the king's licence, should by their deed, sufficient in law, give and grant to the Prior and Convent, all the lands and tenements, that they had in right of the city,

BOUNDS OF THE CITY AND LIBERTY.

city, lying in length on the east side within the wall of the said cytie, from the said church, called St. Michael's church, by the said wall toward Northgate, containing in length 38 perches, one fote and 3 inches; and on the other side of the west part, containing in length 37 perches, and 4 fote 3 inches; and in bredth at the south hedde 38 fote 4 inches; and at the north hedde 37 fote and 8 inches; and also all the walls and towers of the Mayor and Commonaltie from the said church of Northgate unto the said church of St. Michael, to hold to the Prior and Convent and their successors for evermore. And the Prior and Convent, for themselves and their successors, covenanted and granted, that they from thenceforth should sufficiently make, maintain, and repair the said wall and towers, from the said church of Northgate unto the said church of St. Michael, for the defence of them and of the said cytie, as oft as need should thereto require; and the Mayor and Commonaltie, their heirs and successors, should nothing do nor cause to be done to the hurt, harm, or lett of, or to the same; and of all such reparations the Mayor and Commonaltie should from that time be clearly discharged. And it was covenanted and agreed between the said parties by these presents, that the Mayor and Commonaltie, their heirs and successors, should nothing challenge, or demand of the Prior and Convent, nor of their successors, for or toward any making or reparation to be done upon any other walls, gates, or towers in other places of the cytie at any time from thence to come; and it was also covenanted and agreed between the parties, that the Prior and Convent and their successors should have free libertie to make a peffern or gate through the said wall between the church of Northgate and St. Michael, and a bridge over the dyke of the cytie adjoining thereto, and the same peffern and bridge peaceably to have, use and enjoy to the Prior and Convent and their successors, making, maintaining, and keeping the same peffern and bridge at their proper costs and charges; and it was also covenanted and agreed, that if it happened the Prior and Convent and their successors thereafter to build any houses or tenancies, with doors and windows opening into the street between the Northgate and the Ambery Corner, or upon the said ground which the Mayor and Commonaltie should by the King's licence grant unto the Pryour and Convent, and thereupon let the same house to farme, to any other person, that then the Mayor and Commonaltie, their heirs and successors, should have the like privilege, franchise, libertie, and jurisdiction in the same houses, as they should by this agreement have in the said tenements between the said gate called St. Michael's Gate, and the gate called Christ Church Gate aforesaid; saving to the Prior and Convent and their successors such right, title, and interest of and in the possession and inheritance, rents, and services which they had, or thereafter should have in the same or any part thereof (g).

(g) See Harleian Mss. No. 1197, 20.

To this indenture was annexed a schedule, more particularly to explain the clause in it relating to the Manor of Caldicot, and the Borough of St. Martin; which the reader will find fully noticed below under the description of that manor.

A LIST OF THE CITIZENS RETURNED TO PARLIAMENT.

SOME ACCOUNT has been given already, in the general History of the County of Kent (b), of the first writs directed to Sheriffs for the summoning of Knights, Burgeses, &c. to Parliament. The first of these writs that has been found is of the 49th year of King Henry III, and though there were several Parliaments in King Edward I.'s time, before the 18th year of his reign, yet there is no testimony left upon record of any writ or summons to them till that year, in which, as may be seen by the writs directed to the Sheriff, two or three Knights were to be chosen for each county, but no Citizens or Burgeses are mentioned till the 23d year of that reign.

In the time of K. EDWARD I.

Years of the reign, &c.	Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
23d. Parliament at Westminster.	Henry Daniel, Reginald Hurell.
26th. At York.	Henry Daniel, Simon Vertiler.
28th. At Westmin.	Nullum responsum Bailivi dederunt.
29th. At Lincoln.	Roger Manniant, Thomas de Maddingley.
33d. At Westmin.	Stephen le Spicer, John Payable.
34th. Council at Westminster.	Adam de Bishopsgate, John Payable.
35th. Parliament at Carlisle.	Stephen Bishop, John Fierne.

In the time of K. EDWARD II.

1st. Parliament at Northampton.	John Payable, Stephen le Spicer.
2d. At Westmin.	Stephen Boteler, John Payable.
4th. At Westmin.	John de Pickering, Edmond le Spicer.
5th. At Westmin.	The same.

(b) Hist. of Kent, vol. i, p. cvii.

6th. Parliament

CITIZENS IN PARLIAMENT.

Years of the reign, &c.	Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
6th. Parliament at Westminster.	Clement Ampellor, John de Uffington.
6th. At Westmin.	William Botelure, Thomas Penkell.
7th. At Westmin.	Ralph Piffonger, John Maynard.
8th. At Westmin.	Simon Bartlet, Bartholomew Hertford.
12th. At York.	John de Ramsfey, John de Uffington.
12th. At York.	Cedula amissa.
15th. At York.	John de Bishopsgate, Henry Starchy.
16th. At York.	Roger de St. Martin, Richard de Hadley.
19th. At Westmin.	Thomas Chiche, Elias de St. Martin.
20th. At Westmin.	William Gilenyn, Thomas Dureham.

In the time of K. EDWARD III.

1st. At Lincoln.	Stephen de Hoo, Thomas Puilli.
1st. At Westmin.	William Golemyn, Thomas de Aurcham.
1st. At York.	Theobald Godington, Thomas Everard.
2d. At New Sarum.	Lapicius Rogers, Thomas Pokell.
4th. At Winchester.	Richard de Morton, William Christmaffe.
4th. At Westmin.	Edmund de Pouche, Thomas Pankell.
6th. At York.	John Pankell, Richard Spicer.
7th. At York.	Lapicius Rogers, John Harleberg.
8th. At York.	Lapicius Rogers, —————
9th. At York.	John de Morton, William de Waure.
9th. At Westmin.	Thomas Cobeham, William Waure.
10th. Council at Nottingham.	William atte Gayle, William Distinton.
11th. Parliament at Westmin.	Geoffry Barham, William Barham.
11th. At Westmin.	Robert Lappyng, Richard Chellesfeld.
11th. Council at Westminster.	Richard de Chellesfeld, William de Dustynton, John Wilde.
12th. At York.	John de Rumfey, John de Uffington.
12th. At Northampton.	Robert Lappyng, Richard de Morton.
13th. Parliament at Westminster.	Edmund Cokyn, John Ellys.

VOL. IV.

5 L

Years of the reign, &c.	Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
13th. Parliament at Westminster.	Richard Frogenall, Robert Chilton.
14th. At Westmin.	Richard Morton, John de Hoke.
14th. At Westmin.	Simon Bartlet, John Bishopsgate.
15th. At Westmin.	Edmund Cockayne, John Ellis,
17th. At Westmin.	Thomas Chircke, Elias Mercer.
18th. At Westmin.	John de Hoke, Thomas Darent.
20th. At Westmin.	Edmund Cockayne, John Ellis.
21st. At Westmin.	John Ellis, Elias Everard.
22d. At Westmin.	John Ellis, Thomas Everard.
25th. At Westmin.	John Sk——k, William de Maydestan.
25th. At Westmin.	John de Wye, William de Goldsmyth.
26th. At Westmin.	John Monk, William de Maydestan.
27th. Council at Westmin.	Simon atte Bourne, John de Chaning.
29th. Parliament at Westmin.	John Wyn, Roger Digg.
31st. At Westmin.	Thomas Everard, Roger Digg.
34th. At Westmin.	The same.
34th. At Westmin.	John Ellis, Richard de Morton.
36th. At Westmin.	Nicholas Crouch, Thomas Everard.
37th. At Westmin.	Thomas Everard, Stephen Hoo.
38th. At Westmin.	Thomas Everard, William Broome.
39th. At Westmin.	Thomas Seldwich, Thomas Everard.
42d. At Westmin.	Thomas Everard, Richard de Hoo.
43d. At Westmin.	John Dece, William Broune.
45th. Council at Winchester.	Edmund Horne, —————
46th. Parliament at Westminster.	Thomas Perral, William Brown.
47th. At Westmin.	Andrew Oswell, John Tebbe.
50th. At Westmin.	William Welles, John Tebbe.

In the time of K. RICHARD II.

1st. Parliament at Westminster.	William Hardres, John Crekyng.
---------------------------------	-----------------------------------

2d. Parliament

CITIZENS IN PARLIAMENT.

Years of the reign, &c.	Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
2d. Parliament at Gloucester.	John Crekyng, John Puryton.
3d. At Westmin.	John Tebbe, William Hardres.
7th. At New Sarum.	William Hardres, John Swimme.
8th. At Westmin.	William Ellis, Edmund Horne.
9th. At Westmin.	Henry Lincolne, John Crykyng.
10th. At Westmin.	Thomas Holt, John Swimme.
11th. At Westmin.	John Mendham, William Ellis.
12th. At Cambridge.	John Crykyng, John Winrupole.
13th. At Westmin.	Henry Lincolne, Thomas Ikham.
16th. At Westmin.	John Sextayne, Richard Sernaye.
17th. At Westmin.	John Proud, Robert Farthing.
18th. At Westmin.	William Ellis, William Hickham.
20th. At Westmin.	Edmund Horne, John Proud.
21st. At Westmin.	Edmund Horne, Robert Farthing.

In the time of K. HENRY IV.

1st. At Westmin.	John Sheldwich, Thomas Lane.
3d. At Westmin.	John Sheldwich, Thomas Cowper.
5th. At Westmin.	Thomas Chute de Borton, John Sextane.
8th. At Westmin.	Edmund Horne, Richard Walter.
8th. At Gloucester.	John Sextane, Richard Walter.
12th. At Westmin.	William Ikham, William Rose.

In the time of K. HENRY V.

1st. At Westmin.	John Lane, William Emery.
2d. At Westmin.	Thomas Lane, John Sheldwich.
3d. At Westmin.	Henry Lynde, John Sheldwich.
5th. At Westmin.	John Sheldwich, Henry Lynde.
7th. At Gloucester.	Edward Horne, Richard Walter.
8th. At Westmin.	William Bennet, William Ikham.
9th. At Westmin.	Thomas Langedon, Thomas Norman.

In the time of K. HENRY VI.

Years of the reign, &c.	Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
1st. Parliament at Westmin.	Robert Bartlet, William Chilton.
2d. At Westmin.	John Dykman, Henry Cottenham.
3d. At Westmin.	John Sheldwich, William Rose.
4th. At Westmin.	John Dunnington, Robert Bartill, esqr.
6th. At Leicester.	John Sheldwich, Henry Lyнды.
8th. At Westmin.	John Fowler, Richard Everton.
9th. At Westmin.	John Sheldwich, Richard Pratt.
11th. At Westmin.	Walter Sergeant, William Stirrop.
11th. At Westmin.	John Sheldwich, John Dunnington.
14th. At Westmin.	Walter Sergeant, William Stirrop.
20th. At Westmin.	John Sheldwich, John Dunnington.
25th. At Cambridge.	William Oseburn, William Sey.
27th. At Westmin.	Thomas Walter, William Bold.
28th. At Westmin.	John Winter, John Mulling.
29th. At Westmin.	William Bennet, John Mulling.
31st. At Reading.	Thomas Walter, William Selowe.
38th. At Westmin.	Roger Ridley, Nicholas Fraunke.

In the time of K. EDWARD IV.

7th. At Westmin.	John Fogg, Roger Brent.
12th. At Westmin.	Roger Brent, John Rotheram.
17th. At Westmin.	Richard Haute, Roger Brent.

All the Writs, Indentures, and Returns from the 17th year of K. Edward IV. to the 1st year of K. Edward VI. are lost, except one imperfect bundle, No. 33 Henry VIII, in which Colchester, Canterbury, and Rochester, are missing, and those of Canterbury are missing afterwards, till the 7th year of K. Edward VI.

In the time of K. EDWARD VI.

7th. At Westmin.	John Twine, William Copyn,
------------------	-------------------------------

In the time of Q. MARY.

1st. At Westmin.	The same.
------------------	-----------

1st. Par-

CITIZENS IN PARLIAMENT.

Years of the reign, &c. Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
 1st. Parliament at Oxford. John Twine,
 William Copyn.

In the time of K. PHILIP and Q. MARY.

1st and 2d Parl. at Westmin. Robert Boxtton,
 ————
 2d. and 3d. At Westmin. William Roper, esq;
 William Rastal.
 4th and 5th. At Westmin. Henry Cryspe, knt.
 William Roper, esq;

In the time of Q. ELIZABETH.

1st. At Westmin. William Lovelace, esq;
 ————
 5th. At Westmin. William Lovelace, esq;
 Robert Alcock, gent.
 13th. At Westmin. W. Lovelace, Sergt. at Law.
 Robert Alcock, esq;
 14th. At Westmin. Anthony Webb, Mayor,
 W. Lovelace, Sergt. at Law.
 27th. At Westmin. John Rose, Simon Browne, Aldermen.
 28th. At Westmin. Simon Brome, John Rose, Aldermen.
 31st. At Westmin. Simon Brome, Barth. Brome, Aldermen.
 35th. At Westmin. Richard Lee, esq;
 Henry Finch, esq;
 39th. At Westmin. John Rowe, esq;
 Henry Finch, esq;
 43d. At Westmin. John Boys, esq;
 John Rogers, gent.

In the time of K. JAMES I.

15f. At Westmin. John Boys, knt.
 Matthew Hadd, esq;
 12th. At Westmin. John Finch,
 ————
 18th. At Westmin. John Finch, esq; Recorder,
 Robert Newington, esq;
 21st. At Westmin. Thomas Scot, esq;
 Thomas Denn, esq;

In the time of K. CHARLES I.

15f. At Westmin. (i) John Fisher, esq;
 Thomas Wilsford, knt.
 1st. At Westmin. John Finch, knt.
 James Palmer, esq;

(i) This Parliament was afterwards adjourned to Oxford.

(k) During the usurpation,

Parliaments at 1654. Thomas Scot, esq. Frances Butcher.
 Westminster. 1656. Tho. St. Nicholas, Vincent Denn, esq.
 1659. T. St. Nicholas, esq. Ro. Gibbon, esq.

(l) In 1648, a new writ was ordered for Canterbury in the room of sr Edward Master, knt. deceased. Journal of the House of Commons, vol. vi.

(m) Whitworth, in his succession of Parliaments, gives different returns, viz. in 1660, sr Edward Master, Thomas Lovelace.—1166, the same.

Years of the reign, &c. Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
 3d. Parliament at Westmin. J. Finch, kt. Record. Speaker.
 Thomas Scott, esq;

15th. At Westmin, Edward Master, esq;
 John Nutt, esq;

16th. At Westmin. (k) Edward Master, knt. (l)
 John Nutt, esq;

In the time of K. CHARLES II.

12th. At Westmin. Anthony Aucher, knt.
 1660. (m) Heneage Finch, esq;
 13th. At Westmin. F. Lovelace, esq; Record. (n)
 1661. Edward Master, knt.
 31st. At Westmin. Edward Hales, esq;
 1678. William Jacob, M. D.
 31st. At Westmin. Thomas Hardres, knt.
 1679. Edward Hales, esq;
 32d. At Oxford, Lewis Watson, esq; (o)
 1681. Vincent Denn, esq;

In the time of K. JAMES II.

1st. At Westmin. William Honeywood, bart.
 1685. Henry Lee, esq;

In the time of K. WILLIAM and Q. MARY.

1st. At Westmin. William Honeywood, bart.
 1688. Henry Lee, esq;
 2d. At Westmin. The same.
 1690.
 7th. At Westmin. William Honeywood, bart.
 1695. (p) George Sayer, esq;
 10th. At Westmin. George Sayer, esq;
 1698. Henry Lee, esq;
 12th. At Westmin. The same.
 1700.
 13th. At Westmin. The same.
 1701.

In the time of Q. ANNE.

1st. At Westmin. Henry Lee, esq;
 1702. George Sayer, esq;
 4th. At Westmin. Henry Lee, esq;
 1705. John Hardres, esq; (q)
 7th. At Westmin. Hon. Edward Watson,
 1708. Thomas D'Aeth, jun. esq;
 9th. At Westmin. John Hardres, esq;
 1710. Henry Lee, esq;
 12th. At Westmin. Henry Lee, esq; (r)
 1713. John Hardres, esq;

(n) A new writ ordered in the room of Mr. Lovelace, deceased. Journals, vol. viii.

(o) Whitworth, sr Thomas Watson.

(p) Henry Lee, esq. presented a petition, but had leave to withdraw it. Journals, vol. xi.

(q) He was a major of the militia, and governor of Sandown Castle.

(r) A new writ in 1711, ordered in the room of Henry Lee, made a commissioner of the Victualling Office. Journals, vol. xvii.

CITIZENS IN PARLIAMENT.

In the time of K. GEORGE I.

Years of the reign, &c.	Names of the Citizens in Parliament.
1st. Parliament at Westm. 1714. (s)	Sir Thomas Hales, bart. John Hardres, esq;
7th. At Westmin. 1722.	Sir Thomas Hales, bart. Samuel Milles, esq;

In the time of K. GEORGE II.

1st. At Westmin. 1727.	Sir Thomas Hales, bart. Sir William Hardres, bart.
7th. At Westmin. 1734.	Sir Wm Hardres, bart. (t) Thomas May, esq; (u)
14th. At Westmin. 1741.	Hon. Thomas Watson, (x) Thomas Best, esq;
21st. At Westmin. 1747.	Thomas Best, esq; Mathew Robinson, esq;
28th. At Westmin. 1754.	Sir James Creed, knt. Matthew Robinson, esq;

In the time of K. GEORGE III.

1st. At Westmin. 1761.	Thomas Best, esq; (y) Richard Milles, esq;
7th. At Westmin. 1768.	Richard Milles, esq; William Lynch, esq; (z)
14th. At Westmin. 1774.	Richard Milles, esq; Sir Wm Mayne, bart. (zx)
20th. At Westmin. 1780.	C. Robinson, esq; Recorders Geo. Gipps, esq; Alderm. (a)
24th. At Westmin. 1784.	The same.
30th. At Westmin. 1790.	Sir John Honeywood, bart. George Gipps, esq;
36th. At Westmin. 1796.	The same (aa).

(s) 1715, fr Francis Head presented a petition on this election, referred. Journals, vol. xviii.

(t) Sir Wm Hardres, bart. was returned, but on petition, fr Thomas Hales was declared duly elected, as was Thomas May. Journals, vol. xxii. The numbers on the poll were, For Sir William Hardres 711 Samuel Milles . . . 575
Sir Thomas Hales . . . 701

(u) He afterwards took the name of Knight.

(x) On his succeeding to the Earldom of Rockingham, on his brother's death in 1745 a new writ ordered, and fr Tho. Hales, bart. was elected in his room. Journals, vol. xxv.

(y) The numbers on the poll were,
For Richard Milles, esq; 806 Sir James Creed . . . 691
Thomas Best . . . 788 Sir William Mayne 686

(z) Afterwards made K. B. and Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Turin.

(zx) Afterwards lord Newhaven.

(a) The numbers on the poll were,
For George Gipps . . . 634 Sir H. Dashwood . . . 150
Charles Robinson . . . 617 Michael Lade . . . 28
Lord Newhaven . . . 560

(aa) The numbers on the poll were,
For John Baker - - 777 George Gipps - - 739
Samuel E. Sawbridge 754 Sir John Honeywood 716

But upon a petition from the electors, against Baker and Sawbridge, for bribery, a committee of the House of Commons, after eight days investigation, declared the election void. In consequence a new writ was issued; when on a

The number of Freemen is about 1560, viz. resident about 892, non-resident about 662.

THE CASTLE.

THAT there was a castle here before the conquest, appears from the survey of Domesday, taken in the 15th year of the Conqueror's reign, in which it is said, that the King had this castle in an exchange made with the Archbishop and the Abbat of St. Augustine, who had for it, the latter 14, the former 7 burgages (b). Before this, there is no mention made of any castle here, not even by our ancient historians in their relation of the several sieges of this city by the Danes, in which, as to every thing else, they are very particular. The most probable opinion therefore is, that the present building was one of those many castles or fortresses built by William the Conqueror, for his better subduing and bridling of those parts of the kingdom that he most suspected, to several of which, it has a very similar appearance (c). It had a bayle or yard adjoining to it, of upwards of four acres, surrounded by a wall and ditch (d). The passage from the city to it was antiently by a bridge, and beyond that a gate, built at the entrance of the Castle-yard (dd), and on the opposite side towards the country was the ancient gate of the city called Wortb-gate, the remains of which were nearly entire till a few years since; the appearance of it carrying a greater show of antiquity than the castle itself, in the perfect circular arch of long British or Roman bricks of great strength and beauty (e); through this gate the passage seems to have led in the time of the Romans over the Stone street way to the Portus Le- fresh election the numbers at the close of the poll were,

For John Baker - - 485 Sir John Honeywood 195
Sam. Elias Sawbridge 470 George Gipps - - 185 and the two former again returned; but a protest being delivered against their eligibility under the above declaration of the committee, and another petition to the house of commons from the electors, the second committee confirmed the ineligibility of Baker and Sawbridge, and resolved that Honeywood and Gipps ought to have been returned—they accordingly took their seats.

(b) See above, p. 390. (c) Battely's Somner, p. 18.

(d) Part of these walls were taken down within these few years, to prevent the mischief threatened by their fall; by the account of the workmen employed on this occasion, these outworks were never so well built as the tower itself, and were become rotten and mouldered to rubbish; whereas those of the castle remain firm, and as solid as stone.

(dd) Battely's Somner, p. 18. I find this castle gate mentioned in the will of William Bennet, anno 1464.

(e) This arch had been repaired some years ago, out of veneration to its antiquity, by Dr. Gray, an eminent physician of Canterbury, at his own expence. It was supposed to be one of the most entire Roman arches in the kingdom. The ground had risen to within 8 feet 8 inches of its point. It was made entirely of British or Roman bricks, set edge-ways, each 15 inches and a half long, and one and an half thick; the diameter was 12 feet 3 inches and a half, and the base within, 12 feet 6 inches.

THE DUNGEON HILL at CANTERBURY.

To James Simmons of Canterbury Esq., adjoining ground has been laid out and *by whose Liberality the Dungeon and Improved for the Public Benefit.

This Plate is respectfully inscribed by the Author.*

A View of the Castle & of the ancient Northgate, at Canterbury.

THE CASTLE.

manis, and afterwards as the public passage of the city to Asford and elsewhere, until it was divided by another course, and the gate reserved solely for the use of the castle, and as such it continued till the time of K. Edward VI, or, as others say, until Wyatt's insurrection in Q. Mary's reign, when it was stopped up, for the better security of the castle from any assaults in those critical and dangerous times.

K. Henry II. seems to have increased the extent of this castle and its fortifications, for he caused certain land of one Azelisba, which she held of the Prior of Canterbury, to be taken in to fortify the king's castle here; for which certain lands in Canterbury were assigned to her in exchange, by Richard de Luci, Chief Justice at that time (f). In K. Henry III.'s reign, this castle appears to have continued of some consequence; in the 12th year of which, Hubert de Burgh, Earl of Kent, had, by charter, the custody of it committed to his charge; and in the same reign, Lewis, the French Dauphin, arriving in the Isle of Thanet, and afterwards at Sandwich, having landed his forces without resistance, came to Canterbury, where he received both castle and city under his subjection.

There was as early as K. Edward II.'s time, a common prison or gaol, kept in this castle, which was, according to Lambarde, the principal gaol of the county (g). It was removed from hence, probably about the latter end of Q. Elizabeth's reign, before which the assizes for this county were held at this castle, in the years 1565, 1569 and 1577 (h).

From the above time this castle seems to have been neglected, and to have fallen to ruin, and no further use was made of it; the remains of it at present are only the outward quadrangular walls, seemingly of not half their former height, built with rubble stone, and a great many Roman bricks interspersed among them; they are of an extraordinary thickness, with quoins and small circular windows and loop-holes, cased with ashlar stone.

Mr. King, who accurately surveyed this castle, makes the following observation on it: "Whoever", says he, "looks at this antient structure attentively, will easily perceive, that the present entrances have been forced, and could never have been there originally; and that there was once indeed a grand entrance similar to that at Rochester, and that the whole of the fortification was in the same style;" and this he shews by giving the following short and general description of the present state of it.

"This castle," he continues, "is 88 feet in length and 80 feet in breadth, and the two fronts, which are of the greatest extent, have each four buttresses; whereas the others have only three; and the walls are in general about eleven feet thick. But as this tower is so much larger than that at Rochester, there are two partition walls instead of one, and in these are, in like manner as at Rochester, the remains of arches of communication."

In this castle, as has been mentioned above, is a well just like that castle too, within the substance of the wall, and descending from the very top of the castle; and in the pipe of this well also, as it passes down by the several apartments, are open arches for the convenience of drawing water on every floor. There is also in this castle, as in the other, a gallery in the wall, of which a part is laid open, and visible to the eye; but the staircases are so much ruined, that one cannot ascend here to examine every thing with the same accuracy, as at Rochester. Nor can one precisely determine whether there were more than two staircases, though I suspect, from the appearance of the walls, that there were; and that only one went down to the ground floor. In all other respects, the mode of fortification seems to have been precisely the same, for there were only loop-holes and not one window under any of the arches in the walls on the first floor, and only a very few loop-holes on the ground floor. And the state apartments may clearly be seen to have been in the third story, where alone are found large and magnificent windows, as at Rochester; and in the upper apartments next the leads are other smaller windows; but there are no windows lower than the grand apartments.

The present entrances on the east side are most evidently modern breaches, made through

(f) Madox's Exchequer, p. 138.

(g) In the 1st year of K. Edward, William de la More, master of the Knights Templars in England, was imprisoned in the Castle of Canterbury, under the jurisdiction of the Sheriff of Kent. Rym. Fœd. vol. iii, p. 83.

In the wills in the Prerog. Office, there are frequent entries of legacies left to the prisoners of the Castle of Canterbury, and of Westgate, from the year 1461 to 1585; soon after which this castle seems to have ceased to be a prison, and about the year 1592, or perhaps a year or two before, the present gaol of St. Dunstan's was substituted in its room; on which account that gaol gained the name of the castle; for Leonard Cotton, gent. in his will anno 1605, gave a legacy to the prisoners in Westgate, Canterbury, and the prison called the Castle, without Westgate; and what confirms this still further is, the will of Thomas Petit, of St. George's, 1626, who gave 50s. to be distributed towards the payment of the fees of the poor prisoners which are in the common gaol of the castle of Canterbury, situated in the parish of St. Dunstan's, without the walls of the city.

In former times the Jews were frequently imprisoned in this castle, and during their confinement in it they employed themselves in cutting on the stones numbers of the verses of the psalms in Hebrew, many of which remained on those of the north east stair-case in Dr. Plot's time, anno 1672.

(h) Kilburne, p. 400, 402.

THE CASTLE.

the places, where probably were two arches in the wall, leading to small loop-holes, and indeed the present modern entrances to most of the old castles have manifestly been obtained merely in the same manner.

But on the north end there appears, at a considerable height, a large old arch, like a doorway or portal, now bricked up; and this, on examination will be found, to have been most unquestionably the original grand entrance; for under it is a very considerable projection of solid stone work, which seems to have been the foundation of some stair case, or strong adjoining building, and there are also on the walls of the castle, marks of the upper part of the stairs descending from this portal; but these must be carefully distinguished from those left by the gabel ends of some houses, that were built against this side of the castle some years ago, and are now pulled down. These marks however of the remains of steps ascending to this portal, are by no means the only indications of its having been the original entrance; for the whole plan and formation of the structure within proves it. At the back of the arch thus bricked up, is a very large arched door-way of stone within the castle, of very curious workmanship; and directly under it is a steep stair case leading to a dungeon, the situation of such kind of prisons appearing usually to have been under the entrances to most castles, and it was so at Dover particularly, as well as here and at Rochester; and both these circumstances are farther proofs that this was the great portal. The inhabitants of Canterbury indeed have an idea, that this arch was broken through for the use of one of the houses, which, as is mentioned above, was formerly built against this side of the castle; but the largeness of the arch, the regular stone work round it, the symmetry with which it is finished, and the rich stone arched door-way within the castle directly against this arch, shew their mistake in this matter; and that it was, in reality, much more ancient than those houses, may also be concluded from the very circumstance of its being bricked up so carefully; for although it seems highly probable, for many reasons, that it might be so stopped up at the time the houses were built, yet it is in the highest degree improbable, that they should have taken the trouble of doing so, when the houses were pulled down, and when so many other breaches and cavities in the castle were left open without any such care being taken. He therefore concludes, that here and here only was the original entrance, approached by means of a flight of steps, and a draw bridge, as at Rochester; and that the fragment of the foundation of those steps and of the outward entrance, now remaining at the corner, was found too strong to be destroyed, when the adjoining houses were built (i).

The southern wall of the Bayle, or Castle-yard, is the ancient wall of the city, in which at the south-east corner of the castle was the ancient Worthgate, above-mentioned; the wall and ditch on the east side of the bayle remained till lately, but in 1792 the most considerable parts of the boundary wall of the castle were demolished, and several buildings were erected on the scite, so that a very small portion is now left, and the ditch is mostly filled up, the only part now visible being that, which was likewise the city ditch, between the new road and St. Mildred's church.

By the late alteration of the public road by Wincheap to Ashford, it is now made to go in a strait line from Castle-street, over the middle of the Castle bayle or yard, and so on through the scite of the ancient Worthgate, which has been pulled down for the purpose, into Wincheap, being probably made in the same tract that the road went in very ancient times before that gate was closed up (k).

Within the Castle-yard, on the opposite or eastern side of the above road, is the Sessions-house for the eastern part of the county of Kent, built partly on the city wall above-mentioned, in 1730; in which all public business for this part of the county is transacted.

I have met with a few names of the Governors or Keepers of this Castle.

Hubert de Burgh, on June 25, anno 17 John, was made Governor of Canterbury Castle (l), and anno 12 Henry III, had a grant of Dover Castle, and of these of Canterbury and Rochester; during his life, with the fee of 1000 marcs per annum; and the same year was constituted Governor of those castles for the term of his life (m); but in the 16th year of that reign he was, at the instigation of Peter de Rupibus, Bishop of Winchester, removed from the custody of them, and Stephen de Segrave was appointed in his room (n).

Nicholas Moels was made Governor of Canterbury and Rochester Castles in the 43d year of King Henry III (o).

(i) See Mr. King's Observations on Ancient Castles, in Archæologia, vol. iv, p. 392; vol. vi, p. 298.

(k) This new road runs close by the west end of the Sessions House, between it and the Old Castle, and thence through the scite of the ancient Worthgate, across the castle or city ditch, by Barnack Cross into Wincheap-street. With the view of accommodating the public with this passage, the Corporation of Canterbury conveyed their piece of land called Colton-field, adjoining the castle, to Mr. Balderston, in exchange for his land, which now forms the above road. The ancient arch of Worthgate was removed as entire as possible into the garden of a neighbouring citizen.

(l) Dugdale's Bar. vol. i, p. 693. (m) Ibid. p. 695.
(n) Ibid. p. 696. (o) Ibid. p. 619.

ANCIENT AND PRESENT STATE.

Robert Wateran was made Governor of both castles in the 45th year of that reign (p).

William de Eschetesford was Warden of this castle in the beginning of King Edward I.'s reign (q).

Sir William Pecche, of Lullingstone, knt. had a grant in the 2d year of King Edward IV. of the custody of this castle; for as the record informs us, the King granted to him then the whole county of Kent, together with the castle of Canterbury, and appointed him Sheriff of Kent; and he granted to him 40 pounds yearly, until he shall have given him so much in special tail to him and his heirs male (r).

The property of the castle, with its yard and appurtenances, seems to have continued in the crown till about the latter end of King James I.'s reign, when the King granted it in fee, to hold of the manor of East Greenwich in common socage, to Mr. Watson, in whose descendants of the same name it continued for more than 100 years, and till at length it was sold by one of them in 1732 to Mr. Fremoult, of Canterbury, whose son the Rev. Samuel Fremoult died possessed of it in 1779, upon which it came by his will to his nephew Mr. Samuel Balderston, of this city, gent. who in 1797, conveyed it by sale to Mr. Tho. Cooper, the present possessor of it (s).

The whole of the precinct of the castle is within the jurisdiction of the county of Kent.

THE ANTIEN AND PRESENT STATE OF THE CITY.

THE CITY OF CANTERBURY is situated in a pleasant valley about two miles wide, surrounded by hills of a moderate height, and easy ascent, with several springs of fine water rising from them. Besides which, the river Stour runs through it, the streams of which, by often dividing and meeting again, water it still more plentifully, and forming islands of various sizes, in one of which the western part of the city stands, contribute to purify the air, and make the soil fertile. Such a situation could hardly be destitute of inhabitants, nor was any spot more likely to unite numbers together to form a city, than one so well prepared by nature as well for defence as cultivation.

That the present city stands in great measure on the same spot that the antient one did, may be plainly proved by the druid beads and celts,

(p) Dugdale's Bar. vol. i, p. 672.

(q) Regist. Abb. Scæ Radigund, cart. 727.

(r) Pat. ejus an. p. 2.

(s) Mr. Balderston, a few years ago, alienated a considerable part of the precincts of the castle, which included the eastern wall and ditch, to Messrs. Fenner and Flint, of Canterbury.

(t) The curious and numerous collection of Roman coins in the possession of Mr. Fauisset, of Heppington, near this city, was almost all dug up in the close vicinity of it. These and the many remains of Roman antiquity, as coins and vessels in great plenty, which have been dug up in it (t); by their several buildings still remaining, and by the tessellated pavements, of curious workmanship, which have been at times found at the depth of 8 or 10 feet in the very centre of it, the certain work of that nation. A fine Roman vase, of red earth, of elegant shape and pattern, with the inscription, TARAGET DE TEVE, was found near this city in 1730, and a brass lacrymatory with it, and a gold pendant with a stone and two small pearls, were likewise found near it (u).

Whoever would search for the Roman antiquities of this city, must seek for them, says Mr. Somner, from 6 to 9 feet under ground, where their discoveries will probably abundantly satisfy their labour. Among several other instances of Roman works found under ground within the city, was a strong and well couched arched piece of Roman tile or brick, five or six feet below the floor of a house in Castle-street, which stopped the progress of the workmen in sinking a cellar about the year 1630.

Mr. Somner mentions some pits discovered about the place where the the market is now kept, which probably were Roman cisterns. At the beginning of this century, in digging a cellar in St. Alphage parish, the workmen came to an old foundation of Roman bricks, so strongly cemented, that they could not break it without much difficulty. It was indentwise, broad four feet four inches, deep about four feet, and about eight feet under ground. Several of the bricks were taken up whole, 17 inches and an half long, and 11 inches and 3-quarters broad; and a Roman pavement of mosaic work was discovered in digging a cellar in St. Margaret's parish. Several other remains have been found, as far as the depth of nine or 10 feet under ground; but as they cannot be ascertained to be Roman, the further mention of them is deferred till I come to treat of the river Stour.

However, I shall add to the above a still later discovery made in 1739, near Jewry-lane; where, in digging a cellar, there was found, not more than three or four feet below the level of the street, a fair mosaic pavement of a carpet pattern, the tessellæ of burnt earth, red, yellow, black and white; their shape and sizes different, some near an inch over, others very small, laid on a were so numerous, that his father, who collected them, sorted out one most capital series of them from the rest; and the remainder, which would have been esteemed an exceeding good collection in the hands of any one besides, and together filled more than a bushel measure, he caused to be melted into a bell, which now hangs on the roof of his son's house above-mentioned.

(u) See Gough's Camden, p. 256.

bed

ANCIENT AND PRESENT STATE.

bed of mortar, of such hardness, and so thick, that with care it might have been preserved entire, but for want of that, it was broken into three or four pieces, some of which were afterwards carried away and joined; what was saved of it was perhaps three feet broad and five long; but party walls prevented the size of the whole from being ascertained.

When this city was first inclosed with a wall, is no where to be found; but the many British bricks still to be seen in different parts of it are no small token of its antiquity. These bricks were in particular to be seen in the wall on the south side near to where Riding-gate stood; at the remains of the gate now pulled down called Wortbygate, leading from the Castle-yard to Wincheap; at the place in the city wall, where Queningate once stood, at a few yards distance northward of the present postern opposite to St. Augustine's Abbey; and on the bank on either side of the river behind St. Mildred's church, in the remains of the wall there, where there is a course of these bricks quite through the wall.

That this city was walled in the time of the English Saxons, may be proved from several records, among the archives of the cathedral (v); that it was walled before the Norman conquest, is evident by the testimony of Roger Hoveden, who, in his account of the siege and surprisal of the city anno 1011, by the Danes, in the time of king Ethelred, mentions many of the English having been cast by them headlong from the wall of the city, which being taken, was, with the cathedral, burnt and utterly wasted, in the rage of which, the city wall, as being its best security against a like surprisal, was not at all likely to be spared by that destroying enemy (w). However this might be, it seems afterwards to have been again repaired, and Archbp. Lanfranc, in the Conqueror's time, was a great benefactor for that purpose; and William of Malmesbury, who wrote in K. Stephen's reign, tells us, that in his time the walls of it were whole and undecayed, inclosing it round about. After which there are several instances of the attention paid towards the support of them, Q. Alianor, on her son's, King Richard I.'s absence, when he was taken a prisoner on his return from the Holy Land, gave orders in her son's behalf for the better strengthening of this city, in regard to the ditches, walls and other fortresses belonging to it (x); and K. Richard II. gave 250 marks for the same purpose; in which reign Archbishop Sudbury, after this royal example, at his own expence, rebuilt the western gate of the city, as well as the wall, called the Long Wall, between that and Northgate, and intended, had he lived, to have done the same by the rest of the wall round the city, much of which was at that time in a tottering and decayed state, insomuch, that Sir Simon de Burley, then Constable of Dover Castle, and Warden of the Cinque Ports, advised, that the rich jewels of Christ Church and of St. Augustine's, should be removed for more safety to Dover Castle (y).

(v) In King Ethelbert's charter of the scite of St. Augustine's Monastery, anno 605, the ground for that purpose is described to lie under the east wall of the city of Canterbury.

(w) See Battely's Somner, p. 4.

(x) See Queen Alianor's charter, that the assistance of the Monks towards the repair and work of the city's fortification should not be drawn into a precedent, printed in Somner's Appendix, No. ii, and the letters of Hubert de Burgh, chief justice in the reign of King John, to the same purpose, No. iii.

What cost it had in reparation afterwards bestowed on it, was chiefly raised in K. Henry IV.'s reign, by the general tax of the whole city, as appears by the book of murage, in the city chamber. Towards the sustaining of this charge, the citizens having begun to strengthen it with a wall of stone, as well as by a ditch, and as an encouragement for them to proceed, as well then as in future, the king in his 10th year, considering that the city was situated near the sea, and was as a port or entry to all strangers coming into the realm by the same parts, by his Writ of Privy Seal, granted to them a licence to purchase lands and tenements, to the value of 20l. within the city, in mortmain, to hold to them and their successors, in help towards the building and making the same wall and ditch, for ever; and he also granted to them, that they might arrent and build up all lands and places voyd and waste within the city, and hold the same to them and their successors in help and relief of the charge, and in maintenance of the premises and other charges to the city happening in the fortifying of it, for ever. The charge of this work may be best judged and estimated by the compass and circuit of the wall, which was measured in the 3d year of the above reign of K. Henry IV. by Thomas Iekham, an honorable citizen, and an Alderman of this city (z), and a note taken of it, was registered in the records of the city chamber. The total measure of the wall, as cast up at the end of it, being 569 perches and the 4th part of one (a). But it is miscast, for exclusive of the

(y) Lamb. Per. p. 316. Weever, p. 225. Battely's Somner, p. 6. In the city chest there is an order, dated in the 19th year of King Richard II.'s reign, issued from the Court of Chancery to the bailiffs and citizens, for the speedy repair of the walls of this city.

(z) He was alderman of Burgate Ward, and dying in the 3d year of King Henry V, was buried in Christ Church. Others of his name and family were benefactors to St. Peter's church in this city, where they lie buried.

(a) The measurement, as registered in the records of the chamber, is as follows, viz. First from the little gate called gates and the bank of the river, the whole is 572 perches and a quarter, to which add the six gates and the bank of the river 10 perches, the whole compass of the city is, as Mr. Somner has made the sum total, in his Appendix, as below recited, 582 perches, and the fourth-part of one, besides Quyningate, which was a very small one (b). By this record, it may be perceived, that the whole wall between Westgate and Northgate, was not then built as it was afterwards; for on either side the river, the wall, as appears by the record, clearly breaks off, so that there is an interjected distance of 18 perches long between the one and the other wall, and indeed it easily appeared to but a slight observation, that so much of the wall as stood, and was made up in that, then, as it seems, unwalled part, namely, between the postern and the waterlock next Northgate, through which, in three arches with a portcullis, the river, till of late, passed from Abbat's Mill, was in the stone work much different from the rest of the wall, and shewed not in any part the least wreck or decay, as the other doth. This, therefore, was an exception to what Archbishop Sudbury is said to have built, and was, no doubt, made afterwards (c).

Quynin-

WALLS, &c. OF THE CITY.

In the city wall there were built 21 turrets or small watch towers, orderly placed, though now, as well as the wall, all decayed and in ruins (d).

These walls were of chalk, faced and lined with flint, excepting between Westgate and Northgate, where they are faced with squared stone.

Quyningate unto Burgate, xxxviii perches, and the gate Burgate contains one perch.

Then from the said gate Burgate to Newingate, xxxvii perches, and the gate Newingate contains one perch.

Then from the said gate Newingate to Ridingate, xlviii perches, and the gate Ridingate contains one perch.

Then from the said gate Ridingate to Worgate, lxxxiii perches, and the gate Worgate contains one perch.

Then from the gate Worgate to the water which is behind St. Mildred's, lxi perches, and the bank of the river there contains iv perches.

Then from the bank of the river to Westgate, cxviii perches and an half, and the gate Westgate contains one perch.

Then from Westgate to the end of the wall, which is called Long Wall, containing lix perches and a quarter of a perch.

Then the water which is called the Stour, from that wall to the wall which is called Waterlocke, contains xviii perches and an half.

The wall from that place to Northgate contains xl perches, and the gate Northgate contains one perch.

Then from the gate Northgate to Quyningate contains lix perches, which is towards the Priory of Christ Church, Canterbury. The total sum is dlxxxii perches and a fourth part of a perch.

Mr. Somner has added this measurement in his appendix in Latin, No. iv, but has given a different sum total, viz. dlxxxii perches and the 4th part of a perch; which is the right sum total of it.

(b) Battely's Somner, p. 8.

They were about six feet thick, the parapets and battlements well coped with mason's work, as were the tops and loop-holes of the towers. The walls, except where the river runs at the foot of the wall, are incircled with a ditch, at first 150 feet, though now to all appearance not near so wide, and from the incroachments on it is distinguishable only from Northgate, round the east and south sides of the city, as far as the postern beyond Wincheap Gate; the whole of which is now either built on with tenements, or converted into gardens, under leases from the city, to whom it all belongs (e). The wall on the west part of the city, a little westward of St. Mildred's church-yard, has several large breaches made in it, the work of the Parliamentarians, about the year 1648; in one of which, however, they seem to have been stopped by a course of Roman bricks, quite through the wall, of which notable feat further mention will be made hereafter. This part of the wall being built on low ground, among the meads at but a small distance from the river, has never had any ditch, nor indeed any occasion for one. There were in the above wall, till of late years, six gates, answering to the same number of wards, viz. Burgate, St. George's-gate, Ridingate, Wincheap-gate, built in the room of the ancient Worthgate, Westgate, and Northgate.

BURGATE was formerly called St. Michael's-gate, from a church of that name once near it. This gate was rebuilt of brick, with stone quoins, in 1475; the principal benefactors,

(c) Somner, p. 8. Upon the upper part of the wall, over these arches, was a pathway across the river, being the only dryshod communication between the east and western parts of the city, when the river had overflowed its banks both at Kingsbridge and Westgate. This wall, together with the arches, which were pointed and of rather an uncommon construction, were pulled down in 1769, and the materials made use of towards the widening of the passage over Kingsbridge.

(d) The walls are in general in a ruinous state, excepting that part of them which extends along the precincts of the cathedral, near the postern gate, opposite Lady Wotton's Green, which has been handsomely repaired at the expence of the Dean and Chapter. On the tower near the postern above-mentioned, are three shields of arms carved in stone, viz. those of England, of the City, and of the Priory.

(e) Somner says, that both the city wall and ditch were even in his days much neglected, little more than half the wall being then inditched, the rest being either swerved or filled up, and in many parts builded upon; the wall itself in some places easily scalable, what with piles and stacks of wood in some, and houses and the like in other parts of it. What a shame, he continues, that a little profit should banish all care of this kind, and that the greediness of a small advantage should be a means, as it then was, of betraying the city at once both to danger and deformity; but, he says, he might forbear to censure, for he despaired of its regard in those days. How much more applicable is this remark in these times, in which the private profit of some few is, with too many, more alluring than the common good.

THE SEVERAL GATES.

whose names were on it, being John Franingam (f), John Netbersole and Edmund Minot. It was pulled down a few years ago, to make the passage more commodious; the high road from Sandwich to Deal leading through it.

ST. GEORGE'S-GATE, formerly called Newingate, and before that, Ose-bill-gate, from its leading to that place, was built for a more direct passage into the heart of the city from Dover, instead of Ridingate, the more straight and ancient way. It was built about the year 1470 (g), and is a very handsome structure, seemingly in imitation of Westgate, with two noble towers of squared stones. The large reservoirs which hold the water that supplies the city, being in the upper part of it, has preserved this gate from destruction.

Riding Gate, Canterbury.

RIDINGATE was antiently written Radingate, by which lay the portway or military way of the Romans, between Dover and Canterbury, the street leading along which into the city, being

(f) John Freyngham, esq; mayor of this city in 1461, gave by his will, among other benefactions, 20l. to the repairing of St. Michael's gate, or paving the Bull Stake.

(g) A few years before this, Roger Ridley, who was mayor of the city in 1452, gave by his will, now in the Register of the Archdeacon's office, among other benefactions, at this time called Watling Street, a name given to one of their four famous ways or streets, which crossed this kingdom. This gate, a very ordinary structure, was pulled down a few years ago,

5 mares towards the new building of St. George's gate; and William Bigg, who was otherwise a benefactor to this city, and was mayor of it in 1460, gave by his will, remaining in the Prerog. office, 10l. towards the making of this gate as the work went on.

THE SEVERAL GATES.

to make the opening more convenient for passengers (b). The antient Roman gate here, appears to have had two contiguous circular arches, turned with British or Roman brick of those times, remains of which were lately to be seen, though the ground had been so much raised, that a stone at the top of one of the piers, from which one of those arches sprung, was but breast high from the road, and the arch itself was in part cut away to give the necessary height to the late gate of much more modern construction (i).

WINCHEAP-GATE was probably erected for public use, in the stead of the antient Worthgate, when it was found inconvenient, that the public road of the city should lead in a strait line so close by the castle, through the midst of the bayle of it; the antient Worthgate being after this, as it should seem, reserved only for the use of the castle, and the public road changed and made to take a circular course round the outside of the castle wall and ditch, where it continued as such till within these few years, when Worthgate was again opened for that purpose, as more commodious; but the ward of the city still bears the name of Worthgate ward.

This gate of Wincheap was taken down with the others above-mentioned, a few years ago, for public convenience.

NORTHGATE is no more than a wide square space, through which the road leads to the Isle of Thanet, under the church of Northgate, and named so from its situation in the northern part of the city.

At this gate, the Mayor and Corporation used to receive the king, in their formalities, when he passed through, after landing at Margate, from the Continent, as was frequently the case; and the Recorder making his speech of obedience and duty, the Mayor presented him with the keys.

WESTGATE was built by Archbishop Sudbury, in K. Richard II.'s reign, in the room of the antient one, which was become ruinous, over which there was built a church. This gate, situated at the west end of the city, through which the high road passes towards London, is the largest and best built of any the city has, making a very handsome appearance, standing between two lofty and spacious round towers, erected in the river, on the western side of it. It is built of squared stone, and is embattled, portcullised, and machecollated, having a bridge of two arches, belonging to the Archbishop, over the western branch of the Stour, adjoining to it. Over this gate is the common gaol or prison, both for malefactors and debtors within the jurisdiction of this city and county of it, and has been so from the time of the building of the present gate. But certainly so from the gift of K. Henry VI; for then, as K. Edward IV, in his charter, recites, he granted to the city by his charter, the keeping of his gaol, at the Westgate of his city of Canterbury, for prisoners imprisoned within the city and suburbs, for whatever crime or cause they should be taken, to be detained in it by themselves or their officers. See Battely's Somner, p. 14. The gates themselves of this, as well as of the other two gates left standing, have been lately taken away by the city, as supposed to be of no further use. The arms of Archbishop Juxon, with those of the See of Canterbury, were carved on these gates here, as well as on those of St. George's and Burgate; they having been all new made and set up by that Archbishop, at the Restoration, in the room of those destroyed and burnt by the Puritans, in 1648.

(b) In 1790, a very spacious arch was erected and the terrace walk, formed on the rampart of the city wall, continued over it, at the sole expence of Alderman James Simmons.

(i) Within about 40 feet westward from Riding-gate, on a square stone in the wall, was the date 1586, and below, the letters I. E. M. for John Easday, Mayor, whose public spirit Mr. Somner mentions very honorably for this repair of the city wall at his great cost, though a man of but indifferent estate, in hopes of setting a good example; but the stone has been lately stolen away and his example is by no means likely to be followed.

Besides the gates above-mentioned, there was another, though not a principal one, called Queningate, which has been stopped up for a great length of time, and was so, as appears by the remains of it, at the time the present city wall was built, probably in Archbishop Lanfranc's time, soon after the conquest (k). Besides these, there are three posterns in the city wall, one opposite the chief gate of St. Augustine's monastery; the other at St. Mildred's churchyard; and the third by the river Stour, running by Abbat's Mill.

THE CITY is divided, for the Civil Government of it, into six Wards, each named from one of the six principal gates above-mentioned. The whole city, as appears by the survey of Domesday, as mentioned above, being in the Conqueror's time esteemed but as one hundred, called the Hundred of Canterbury. Each of these wards had an Alderman, who presided over it, and kept within his ward, a Court, holden every three weeks,

(k) This gate stood almost, though not quite, opposite the chief gate of St. Augustine's monastery. It was probably so called from Queen Berta, wife of K. Esbelbert, who might frequently use it to pass on to St. Pancrase Chapel to her devotions. There is a part of the north side of the arch built of British narrow bricks, and the stone from which it sprang mixed in, as part of the materials of the city wall, still very plainly visible on the west side of the garden (once the city ditch), in the occupation of Mr. Macarue, and a few yards southward of the next tower on the north side of the Dean and Chapter's postern.

THE WARDS AND ALDERMANRIES.

weeks, called a Wardmote. Their office, from their name, was called an Aldermanry, which seems was not, as now, elective, but held by persons in fee, as an inheritance (l), and descended by will as to the next heir at law; some of them continuing in one name and family for several generations; as that of Burgate, in the Chiche's; of Northgate, in the same family, and the Polres and Pollers; of Ridingate, in the Handloe's; of Newingate, in the Diggs's; of Worthgate, in the Cokyn's, and afterwards in the Tierne's; and of Westgate, in the Browne's (m). In the 2d year of K. John, Baldwin de Werewal had a charter for this Aldermanry of Westgate (n), but it appears by the pleas of the crown, before the Justices Itinerant, in the 21st year of K. Edward I, anno 1293, in relation to the sergeantrys in this city, that William de Lynstede, rector of the church of Stureye, then held the Aldermanry of Westgate of the king in capite, by the sergeantry of one fore sparkawke, and that it was worth ten marcs; and in like manner John, son of John Handlo, held the Aldermanry of Redingate of the king in capite, which was worth yearly two shillings, performing nothing further to the king yearly from thence; and in like manner Edmund de Tyerne held the Aldermanry of Worthgate, worth yearly two shillings, of the king in capite, performing nothing further yearly to the king from thence; and in like manner Thomas Chiche held the Aldermanry of Burgate, which was worth 40 pence yearly; and Stephen Chiche held the Aldermanry of Northgate, which was worth two shillings yearly; and John de Holt held the Aldermanry of Newingate, which was worth two shillings yearly, performing nothing further to the king from thence yearly; but by what right each of them held the same, was not known; upon which, on writs of quo warranto, the said Stephen Chiche, and the others, except master William de Lynstede, pleaded, that the aforesaid Aldermanrys were belonging and annexed to the ferme of the city, viz. 60 pounds, which they paid to the king for the city yearly; all which was accordingly found by the jury; and the aforesaid master William de Lynstede pleaded, that he held the aforesaid sergeantry of one William de Godstede, paying to him from thence yearly 100 shillings, which William, last mentioned, pleaded, that he held the said sergeantry of the Commonaltie of the city, paying from thence yearly 40 pence to the ferme of the city, and this from time which was beyond the memory of man (o). All which was allowed by the jury before the said Justices, J. de Berewyk and his sociates Itinerant, at Canterbury as aforesaid (p).

These Aldermanries were at first held of the crown in capite, and continued so till K. Henry III. granted the city to the citizens, to hold in fee ferm, as has been noticed above, to hold in capite by burgage; from which time these offices being annexed, and appertaining to the fee ferm above-mentioned, became vested in the citizens, of whom they were held in like manner afterwards, and continued so till these offices were in course of time all bought in, or otherwise became the property of the city; from which time they became eligible by the Mayor and Commonaltie, with this difference, that in future they were held only by those who were freemen and inhabitants of the franchise; whereas before they were held neither by one, nor the other, to the great inconvenience of the city; but this does not appear to have been until about the time of the new ordination, made by K. Henry VIII, which appointed two Aldermen to every ward, making in number, twelve, as they continue at this time.

The six wards above-mentioned, were divided into twelve parishes, as they remain at present, in which are the several churches of All Saints, St. Alpbage, St. Andrew, St. George, St. Mary Bredin, St. Mary Bredman, St. Mary Magdalen Burgate, St. Mary Northgate, St. Mildred, St. Margaret, Holy Cross Westgate, and St. Peter; by which names the twelve parishes are called. Besides these there were formerly five other churches, within the walls, viz. of St. Edmund, St. John, St. Mary de Castro, St. Mary Queningate and St. Michael Burgate, all long since demolished, and the profits united to the other churches; and there are now in the suburbs the three parishes and churches of St. Dunstan, St. Paul, and St. Martin; the first of which is not within the bounds of the city; all which will be further mentioned below, under the ecclesiastical account of this place.

THAT THERE were cities or towns in Britain, Cæsar acknowledges in great measure, in his commentaries, by comparing the frequency of their buildings to those of the Gauls, who, it is

(l) See Madox's Firma Burgi, p. 14.

(m) Battely's Somner, p. 53.

(n) Philipott, p. 93.

(o) This Aldermanry of Westgate was the most of consequence of any of them. Thorn tell: us, col. 1926, that it was in the beginning of the above reign, by grant from the crown, in the possession of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, who in the year 1278, being the 6th year of it, gave it to Nicholas Doge, to hold of them for ever, paying yearly into their treasury, 10l. sterling, in lieu of all services, saving the suit of the Burghmote of Canterbury, which for that reason he was bound to hold. After this, in the 10th year of King Richard II, one Henry Garnate died seized of it, and devised it to Sara his wife; after which it came to the Brownes, who were the last that held it before it fell into the possession of the city. See Battely's Somner, p. 53. Anno 1 Richard III, an act passed for the city of Canterbury, touching the Aldermanry lands and Aldermanry of Westgate, and other things in the city of Canterbury, &c.

(p) Ibid. appendix, No. vi.

known,

A SKETCH of the Two Shores of England & France and the Course of the Rivers with the Names of several of those Places most noted by the Romans & Saxons in which the Bounds of the Shores and the Point of the Compa's are taken from Dr Halley's Chart which adds to the Authority of Ptolemy's Calculation who gives to the Cantium 54 Degrees of Latitude.

ANTIEN T HISTORY.

known, had at that time many towns (q) throughout their country (r); and although they might not be such as our writers feign and describe to have been built with strong walls, towers, and gates, yet they were at least such as they might conveniently dwell together within, defend themselves from the incursions of the enemy, and carry on their traffic with advantage; and such as these Cæsar acknowledges to have found here (s).

The first mention we have of this city, by name, is in Ptolemy's Geography of Britain, who lived in the reigns of the Roman emperors, Trajan, Hadrian, and Antoninus Pius, and wrote it in the Greek language. He says, in the most eastern part of Britain, are the Cantri, and among them these towns, πολις Λονδίνιον, Δαρούων, Ρουτέπια, that is, Londinium, Daruenum, and Rutupia. The second of which certainly is meant for this city of Canterbury (t). Antoninus, in his Itinerary of Britain, writes it Durovernum, and places it as one of the Roman stations or forts (u), situated on one of their grand military roads, from the furthest part of Britain, thro' London hither (v), and so on north-eastward, ad Portum Ritupis, or Richborough, xii miles. From this station of Durovernum likewise ran two other military roads, the greatest parts of which are still visible; the one eastward from Ridingate over Barbam Downs, ad Portum Dubris, or Dover, xvi miles, still called the Watling Street road; and the other from Worthgate, south-south-eastward, over the road, called Stone Street way, ad Portum Lemanis, or Limne, xvi miles (w). In Peutinger's Table, written about the time of Theodosius the Great, it is called by the same name, and the mark of a considerable town, as Canterbury was in those times, is set to this station; and this is all the geographical notice taken of this city, in the time of the Romans.

It has been the opinion of some, that after the defeat of the Britons, on their encounter with the Romans, the very morning after Cæsar's arrival on his second expedition into this country, Durovernum or Canterbury, was taken (and might possibly be kept till Cæsar's return) by the 7th legion. It might afterwards be converted into a station, as they treated several other towns of the Britons, as Camulodunum, Verulamium, Isurium, and others of the capital ones, of the several states (x).

The Saxons accustomed themselves to place their chief residence, or villa regia, on the spot where these Roman stations had once been; in consequence of which, this place, as has been already observed, was esteemed by them the head, or chief city of the kingdom of Kent, and the king's residence, villa regia; hence it is styled by Bede, the chief city of K. Ethelbert, and by another writer, the head of the empire; and although that monarch about the year 596, quitted his residence in it in favor to St. Augustine, and it remained no longer a royal residence, yet it still retained its consequence of being the chief city of the kingdom of Kent, and became soon afterwards, in preference of all others, the metropolitical city of Britain, to which, and its two superb monasteries, munificently endowed, and held in high reputation for their riches as well as sanctity, it in great measure owed the whole of its future eminence and prosperity. But these circumstances, at the same time, made it the continued object of rapine and plunder, on every foreign invasion and domestic war; besides which, from the more than ordinary quantity of timber in the several buildings, and the closeness with which they were throughout the whole built together, it was continually subject to the calamity of fires.

Being situated at no great distance from the two islands of Tbanet and Sbepey, the usual places of landing, as well as the usual winter abode of those merciless pirates, the Danes, this city twice felt the misfortune of so near a neighbourhood to them; for in the year 851 they landed with a great army from 350 ships, and wasted it, Ceolnoth being then archbishop (y); and again in 1009, in the time of autumn, another army of the Danes, innumerable, came to Sandwich, and thence to Canterbury, which they had taken imme-

(q) The words urbs and oppidum, were promiscuously used by Cæsar, Cicero, Varro, and the most approved authors.

(r) Cæsar de Bello Gallico, lib. v and vii.

(s) See Battely's Antiq. Rutup. p. 77.

(t) This is certainly a convincing proof how much those conjecturers dream, who place the city of Rutupia here at Canterbury.

(u) Richard of Cirencester mentions it as a stipendiary town.

(v) The Watling street way is said to have gone from Dover by the west of London to St. Albans, and thence having crossed the Fosse in a crooked line through Shropshire, by Wraken Hill unto Cardigan, by the sea side. See Burton on Anton. p. 95.

(w) See Antoninus, iter ii, iii, and iv.

(x) Dr. Horsley is of opinion, that Cæsar's first march on his 2d expedition in the very night after his landing, was about 12 miles in quest of the enemy, who retiring to a river, ventured there to engage with the Romans, but were defeated. He thinks it probable, that as this river could by no means be the Tbames, for that was too distant and great, and Cæsar called it by its name when he spoke of it; he thinks therefore, that the fight must have been on the banks of the river Stour, to the north of Durovernum, or Canterbury, towards Sturry and Fordwich, where, within a mile of it, strong lines of fortification, thrown up for a considerable length, are still visible. See Britannia Romana, p. 14. See more of this in vol. iii. of the History of Kent.

(y) Simon Dunelm, col. 120.

ANTIEN T HISTORY.

diately, had not the citizens, by giving a large sum, in time, obtained their peace, which having done, these plunderers immediately departed and sailed for the Isle of Wight (z); but in the year 1011, when these banditti having over-run and wasted all Kent again, laid siege to it, and having entirely surrounded it, provisions in it falling short, and great part of the city being burnt, they took it by assault, on the 20th day, when rushing impetuously over every part of it, they set fire to the remainder of the town, and the church and priory of the Holy Trinity, having first plundered them of all their valuables, the abbey of St. Augustine being alone left standing, and then massacred the inhabitants without distinction of age, religion, or sex; for having decimated them, out of the number of near 8000, there remained alive only four monks, and scarce 800 of the inferior class of people. But the Archbishop Alphege, (whom they afterwards murdered at Greenwich), Godwin, Bishop of Rochester, Leafryne, Abbeys of St. Mildred, and Alward, the king's Bailiff, consisting of both monks and clergy, men as well as women, they carried away prisoners with them. A horrid spectacle, says the antient historian in his relation of this event, to the beholder; the face of an antient and most beautiful city all brought to ashes; the dead bodies of the citizens, who had been either murdered by the sword, cast into the fire, hung up, or thrown headlong from the walls, strewed thick about the streets and roads, dying both soil and river black with blood; to which might be added, the weeping and howling of the captive women and of children, led away with the venerable Archbishop in fetters (a).

But Lambarde, who gives a far different account (b), says, that there were left alive here, of the monks four, and of the lay-people 4800; by which it appears, that this city and the adjoining country (the people of which had probably fled hither for succour) was at that time very populous, having to lose on this account 43,200 persons; on which account there were some, who affirmed it had then more store of buildings than London itself; and indeed it seems that they must have been very rich here, for but two years before they had, by the advice of Siricius, then archbishop, bought their peace with the Danes, at the enormous price of 30,000 pounds in ready money (c). Besides these misfortunes, various have been the times in which this place has suffered by the calamity of fires. The first of which that I find noticed, is by the author of the additions to the Chronicle of Asserus Menevensis, who says, that about the year 754 it was much wasted by fire. In the year 776 it is said to have been burned down (d); again in the year 918, Ælfeda, the mighty Lady of Mercia, besieging and burning the city itself, spoiled, killed and drove out the Danes, who then possessed it; in revenge for which they afterwards, about the reign of K. Ethelred, anno 1011, besieged and burned the city (e), as has been mentioned above; and yet, notwithstanding these misfortunes, Stow says, that at the time of the conquest, it exceeded London in its buildings (f).

In the time of Archbishop Lanfranc, who came to the see in 1070, the church, then dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was consumed by fire, as was almost the whole of the city in K. Henry II.'s reign, anno 1161 (g). Not long after which, in the year 1174, a fire broke out in this city, the rapidity of which was increased by an amazing great storm of wind, by which great part of it, with most of the churches was destroyed, and at last the church of the Holy Trinity itself was wholly burnt down (h). Again in 1180, another fire happened, by which the city was much damaged (i); and in the year 1247, St. Mildred's church, with great part of the city, was again destroyed by fire (k); notwithstanding all which calamities, it still, through favor of the several kings of this realm, particularly in having by the statute of the 27th year of K. Edward III., the staple of wool appointed at it (l), and by the patronage of the several archbishops (m), being in general their most frequented residence; the ad-

(z) Brompton, col. 887.

(a) Henry Hunt. lib. vi; R. Hoveden, p. 431; Matth. Westminster, and Flor. Wigom. See Simon Dunelm, col. 168; Chron. Brompton, 888; Gervas, col. 1649. Chron. Thorn, col. 1781, all whom tell the story of this calamity so much in the same words, that they seem to have copied it from one another. See Osbern's account of it in the life of Archbishop Odo, much more copious, inserted below.

(b) Lamb. Per. p. 317.

(c) Gervas, of Canterbury, col. 1290.

(d) Leland's Col. vol. ii, p. 278, ex chron. Mart. Scotti.

(e) Lambarde ibid. (f) Survey, B. iii, p. 215.

(g) Matth. Paris, p. 82.

(h) Hen. Hunt. lib. vi, Chron. John Brompton, col. 1100.

(i) Eleventh Cal. June, Gerv. col. 1457.

(k) Leland's Col. vol. i, p. 266.

(l) The Commons prayed the King that the staple might be appointed at Worcester, Nottingham, Hull, St. Buttolphs, Stamford, Lynn, Ipswich, and Canterbury; but the king answered, "At Canterbury only one, to be in the honor of St. Thomas." Cotton, p. 82.

(m) Camden says, Brit. p. 239, that by the bounty of its prelates, especially Archbishop Sudbury, it did not only recruit, but on a sudden grew up to such splendor, as even for the beauty of its private buildings to be equal to any city in Britain; but for the magnificence of its churches, and their number to exceed the best of them. In that reign, viz. of King Richard II., the men of this city seem to have become of good ability, for in the 10th year of it, they contributed to the king's necessities 50l. and again in the 21st year of it, the Bailiffs and good men of the city, lent the king 100 marcs. See Rym. Fœd, vol. vii, p. 544. vol. viii, p. 9.

ANCIENT HISTORY.

vantages arising to it from the number of religious houses in it, especially its cathedral, from the shrine of St. Thomas Becket in it, which from its reputation of sanctity, brought hither multitudes of pilgrims and devotees of all ranks, with whom the town was almost daily crowded; the frequent meetings of kings, princes, and noble personages here, as well of our own, as of foreign countries, and from its being the great thoroughfare to the continent, recovered from time to time from its misfortunes, with still further improvements. The beauty of its situation certainly contributed not a little to this. William of Malmshury, who wrote in the reign of K. Stephen, accordingly describes it as a city, which, though of moderate size, was yet famous for its good situation, the richness of the neighbouring soil, the entireness of the walls inclosing it, although it had so often experienced the mischances of war, its convenience of water and wood, and its abundance of fish, by reason of its nearness to the sea (n).

Besides the magnificent foundations of the Priory of the Holy Trinity, or Christ Church, and of St. Augustine, here were five priories, nine hospitals and other smaller endowments, such as ebantries, and the like; all which will be further mentioned in their proper places.

Till K. Edward IV.'s reign, this city seems to have remained unpaved; but the bad state it was then in was such, that it was become a nuisance, not only to all those who resorted hither, but to the inhabitants themselves; which obliged the Mayor and Commonalty of it to petition the King, for power to pave the principal streets of it; in consequence of which, an act of parliament passed in the 17th year of that reign (o) to give them a power and authority to do it, at the expence of the inhabitants residing in them (p).

Leland, who wrote in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, gives this description of the city, in his Itinerary, as it remained in his time.

"The town of Cantorbyri," says he, "ys waulled, and hath v gates, thus named, West-

(n) W. Malmsh. Prolog. ad Lib. 1^m. de Gest Pontif. Angliæ.

(o) See Cotton's Records, p. 703. In the chest of the chamber of this city is an exemplification, made anno 18 Edw. IV. under the great seal, of this act.

(p) This petition sets forth, that the city was one of the eldest cities of this realm, and was most in sight of all strangers of the parts beyond the sea, resorting into the realm, and departing out of it; and because of the Glorious Saints, that there lay shrined, was greatly named throughout Christiandome; to which city was also great repair of much of the people of the realme, as well of estates, as other, in way of pilgrimage, to visit those saints; and it was so, that the same city was oftentimes full, fowle, noyous and uneasy to all the inhabitants of it, as to all other persons resorting thereunto, whereof oftentimes was gate, Noribgate, Burgate, now cawled Mibelsgate, St. George's Gate, Rider's Gate; the which John Broker, mayr of the town, did so diminisch, that now cartes cannot for lownes passe thorough yt. Wortbegate, the which leadeth to a streate cawled Stone Street, and so to Billirca, now Curtopstreat. In the towne be xiiii paroches chirches, and the cathedral chyrch of blak monkes. Without the walles be iii paroches chyrches. The monastery of S. Augustine, blak monkes: S. Gregories, blak chanons: Monasterium S. Sepulcbri, ubi olim Templarii postea sacræ virgines. The hospital of S. John, of men and women of the foundation of the bishops of Canterbury. The hospital of S. Laurence, for women alone of the foundation of the Abbates of S. Augustine. An hospital within the town on Kinge's Bridge, for poore pylgremes and way faring men. Zenodochium Pauperum sacerdotum, Zenodochiolum; quoq minorum intra muros fundatoribus urbanis. Cænobia fratrum intra urbem videlicet dominicanorum, Augustinensium Franciscanorum (q).

And a little further,

"Cantorbiry,"

"for the most part of the towne stondeth on the farther side of the river Sture, the which by a probable conjecture, I suppose, was cawled in the Britans tyme, Avona. For the Romayn cawled Canterbury, Duravernum corruptely. For of Dor and Avona, we shuld rather say, Doravona, or Doravonum. The river yn one place runneth thorough the cite walle, the which is made there with ii or iii arches for the curle of the streame. Lanfranc and Sudbury, the which was hedded by Jakke Strawe, were great repayrers of the cite. Sudbury builded the Westgate, and made new and repaired to gither fro thens to the north gate, and wolde have done lykewise about al the town, yf he had lyved. The mayr of the town and aldermen, ons a yere cum so-spoken much disworship in divers places, as well beyond the sea, as on this side the sea, which could not be remedied in any wise; but if the city might be paved, to which the most part of the inhabitants of the city, having burgeses houses, or tenements in it, were willing and agreeable, so that there might be authority had, to compel others of the like sort to do the same. Please it therefore your wisdoms, the premises considered, and that as the Mayor and Commonalty had no lands or tenements, or other yearly revenues in common, of which they might make or sustain any such payment, to pray the king that he, by the advice and assent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled, &c. &c. Part of this act is printed from a fragment of it in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. xxvi.

(q) Vol. vii, appendix, p. 135.

"lemply

ANCIENT HISTORY.

" lemply to his tumber, to " pray for his fowle, yn me" mory of his good deade.
 " The most auntyent build" ing of the towne appe-
 " reth yn the castel, and at
 " Ryder's Gate, wher ap-
 " pere long Briton brikes,
 " with out the town at St.
 " Panrace's chapel, and at " St. Martine's, appere also " Briton brikes. Ther hath bene sum strong for" tres by the castel, wher as now the eminent
 " dungen hill risith.

" The water of Stur breketh a lytle above
 " Cantorbiri, into ii armes, of the one cummeth
 " be West Gate, and the other thorough the cyte,
 " under S. Thomas hospitale, and meteth agayne
 " yn the botom; beneth the cyte, a this side
 " ford, being half a (r).

Thus far Leland—who makes no mention of any appearance of decay or poverty in this city, in his time; and indeed I have been induced to believe from every hiltorian I have met with, that, till the suppression of its religious foundations (s), and the removal of Becket's shrine from hence, Canterbury continued in wealth and prosperity; and I know of but one authority to the contrary, which perhaps might have been exaggerated to forward the purpose of it; this is the preamble to the act of parliament, passed in the 6th year of the above reign (t), for the improvement of the river Stour, and rendering it navigable up to the city; in which it is recited, that this city was one of the antient cities of the realm, and that through it there had been, and then was great recourse of ambassadors and other strangers from the parts of beyond the sea; where likewise the bodies of the Holy Confessor, and Bishop St. Austin, the apostle of England, and also many other holy saints had been honourably humate and shrined (u); was then of late in great ruin and decay, and the inhabitants thereof impoverished, and many great mansions in it desolate; which ruin, decay and desolation, could not of like be reformed, or amended, unless the said river should be so rendered navigable as above-mentioned.

(r) Itin. vol. vii, appendix, p. 144.

(s) Lambarde, p. 319, 321.

(t) Stat. 6 Henry VIII, ch. 17. This being a private act, is not printed in the Statute Books. See Battely's Somner, p. 21.

(u) It is remarkable that the mention of St. Thomas Becket, the favorite and tutelur saint of this place, is wholly omitted, and St. Austin is mentioned in preference to him, contrary to the custom of that time.

(v) Anno 32 and 33 Henry VIII, it was intituled, an act for repairing Canterbury, Rochester, and divers other towns. See Lamb. Per. p. 321.

This is the only mention I have ever met with of the desolation and impoverishment of this city, so early in the beginning of King Henry VIII.'s reign; for I have (and I cannot but repeat it) always read, that whilst the beauty of holiness remained here, Canterbury continued in the smiles of prosperity, forgetting the casualties it had so often felt, both by the fire and the sword; but that when the storm of reformation burst on its religious houses, and brought on their dissolution, the source of its high estimation and wealth in great measure fell with them, and from great opulence and reputation, multitude of inhabitants and beautiful buildings, this city fell suddenly to extreme poverty, nakedness and decay, insomuch that to re-edify its decayed houses, it required an act of parliament to be passed almost immediately; but this was not till the 33d year of K. Henry VIII.'s reign (v). However, at whatever time this decay happened, the city remained in this forlorn situation for some years, apparently without remedy, till about the end of the reign of K. Edward VI, when, strange as it might be, the persecution of the same tenets, which had been so lately in great measure the cause of its ruin, began to give some hopes of its being raised to prosperity again, though by no means equal to its former state. This was occasioned by the persecution of the Protestants, by the Duke of Alva, under Philip II, of Spain, in Brabant and Flanders, which began at about this time, and as it was carried forward from time to time in those countries, as well as afterwards in France, continued to give new life and vigour to the trade of this kingdom, by the communication of the paper, silk, woollen, and other valuable manufactures, almost peculiar at that time to those countries (w), and till then in vain attempted elsewhere. These manufacturers, usually called *Walloon*s, then at first fled to England from the cruelties exercised on them on account of their religion in the Spanish Netherlands, and on the accession of Q. Elizabeth to the crown, and the establishment of the Protestant religion, came in bodies up to London, and being received kindly by the Queen, who granted them her protection, they dispersed and settled in different parts of the kingdom (x). Those who were weavers

(w) The Spaniards were the first inventors of knitting silk stockings. In the year 1547, silk knit stockings were first worn in France, by King Henry II. Queen Elizabeth was in 1561 presented with a pair of black knit silk stockings by her silk-woman, Mrs. Montague, and afterwards she never wore cloth ones again. William Rider, an apprentice on London Bridge, was the first who knit worsted stockings in England, a pair of which he presented to William, Earl of Pembroke, in 1564.

(x) See History of Kent, vol. iv, under Sandwich.

THE SILK MANUFACTURE.

in silk and stuffs, made choice of Canterbury for their habitation, where they might have the benefit of the river and an easy communication with the metropolis (y); for this purpose they had the Queen's letters of licence, in her 3d year, directed to the Mayor, for such of them as should be first approved of by the Archbishop, to remain here for the purpose of exercising their trades, so that they did not exceed a certain number therein mentioned, and as many servants as were necessary to carry on their business; and this to be without any pay from them, hindrance or molestation whatever. Those who were permitted to settle in Canterbury, consisted of only eighteen housekeepers, besides children and servants; who, on their arrival, joined in a petition to the Mayor and Aldermen, for the grant of certain privileges for their convenience and protection (z). And the Queen, as a further mark of her favor, in 1568, granted to them the undercroft of the cathedral church, as a place of worship for themselves and their successors (a). After which the persecution for religion still continuing abroad, the number of these refugees multiplied so exceedingly, that in 1634 the number of communicants in the Walloon church was increased to 900; and there was calculated to be of these refugees in the whole kingdom 5213, who were employed in instructing the English in weaving silk, cotton and woollen goods; in combing, spinning, and making different kind of yarns, worsted, crewels, &c. &c. At the beginning of K. Charles II.'s reign, anno 1665, there were in Canterbury 126

(y) The clearness of the air here gives a great advantage over those of Spital fields, in respect of such colours as suffer most by the thick air and smoke of London.

(z) It consisted of only 4 articles; 1st, for the free exercise of their religion, with a church and place of burial; 2^d, that to keep out such as might give public offence; none might be admitted to settle among them without sufficient testimonials of their probity; 3^d, that their schoolmaster might be permitted to instruct their children, and such others as desired to learn the French language; 4th, enumerated the different branches of the weaving business, by which, they proposed to maintain themselves.

Their congregation then consisted of a minister, a schoolmaster, a director of the manufacturers, 12 housekeepers and three widows, besides children and servants. See Battely's Somner, appendix, No. xxxi. Gostling's Walk, p. 216.

(a) In following their particular mode of religious worship, being the same as was used by the Protestants abroad, they have remained undisturbed, excepting in the attempt made by Archbishop Laud for that purpose, as appears by his certificate dated January 2, 1634, on the king's instructions to him on his metropolitcal visitation; in which, among other matters, he says, that he conceived, under favor that the Dutch churches in Canterbury and Sandwich were great nurseries of inconformity in these parts, and he desires the king to remember, that he had complained to him and the Lords at the Council Board, and had desired that both the French, Italian, and Dutch congregations, who were born subjects, might not be suffered to live any longer in such a separation as they did, both from church and state; and that he had, according to his judgment for the best, commanded his Vicar General to begin fairly to call them to conform to the English church, &c.—To which the king wrote in the margin, that he desired the Archbishop to put him in mind of this when he was in council, and he would redress it. After which, the Archbishop wrote in his return to the king's instructions for the year 1636, among other matters, that he had received information that the Walloons and other strangers in his diocese, especially at Canterbury, did come orderly to their parish churches, and there received the sacrament, married, &c. according to his injunctions, with that limitation which the king allowed. See Rym. Fœd. vol. xix, p. 588, vol. xx, p. 109.

(b) John Six was the first master; John Du Bois and James Six, wardens; John Bout, Gideon Despaigne, Float Paton, Peter Le Houcq, John Leopins, James Mannake, Paul Des Faruacques, Henry Despaigne, and Philip Loper, were the first assistants of this fellowship.

(c) Besides these they manufactured watches, cutlery wares, clocks, jacks, locks, surgeon's instruments, hardware, toys, &c.

(d) In 1695, there was a grant made to the French refugees who resided in England, of 15,000*l.* which was continued yearly towards the maintenance of their poor; but in King George I.'s reign, this was reduced to 7000*l.* which sum is continued to be paid at this time.

manufactory

THE SILK MANUFACTURE.

manufactory here has greatly decayed, the most part of it being removed from hence to Spital-fields, in London, there being now not more than 10 master weavers, and about 80 communicants remaining (e); so that there are now only a few looms continued in employment in this city; though there are numbers of the descendants of these first settlers still remaining, most of whose names have been however changed as far as possible to the English pronunciation, and they have for a long time past intermixed with and followed the same promiscuous trades and occupations as the other inhabitants of it; the parishes of St. Alpbage and Northgate being still in a great measure inhabited by them.

These descendants of the Walloons maintain their own poor; they still use the undercroft of the cathedral for their place of worship. They have a minister, who is episcopally ordained, but they do not use the liturgy of the church of England, having a prescribed form of prayer and administration of the sacraments, the same as is used by the Calvinists in Holland; and they receive the communion sitting at a long table.

At first they maintained their own ministers, but since the year 1695 they have had an allowance from the crown, which continued so long as the ministers were of the French refugee descendants, but now they are supported wholly by the congregation; besides which, they have some estate in land and money, and their people contribute something towards their support (g).

I cannot quit this subject of the Walloon and refugee manufactory of Canterbury, without paying a due tribute in praise of an ingenious and public spirited manufacturer of this place, Mr. John Callaway, the present master of the weavers company here. The modern invention of spinning jennys and mules for weft, and the great improvement of spinning cotton twist for warps, by the water machinery of the famous Mr. Richard Arkwright, has been the principal means of improving all sorts of cotton goods whatsoever. The beautiful printed muslins and chintz have

(e) The names of the present officers of the Weavers Company are, John Callaway, master; Thomas De Lafaux and Samuel Lepine, wardens; Peter Delafaux, John Halbet, James Delafaux, Thomas Ridout and Peter Gambier, assistants.

(g) Abraham Didier, of Canterbury, merchant, by his will in 1688, gave to the Elders and Deacons of the Walloon congregation, in Canterbury, of which he was a member, one annuity or rent charge of 20s. to be issuing and taken out of a piece of meadow land, containing two or three acres in Ickham, purchased of one Dixon, widow, and others, and before belonged to one Swinford, to hold to them and their successors for ever, to the use of the poor of the said congregation for ever, payable yearly, and to be laid out in fuel or burning wood by his son Abraham Didier, his heirs or assigns, about Christmas Day yearly, and to be distributed among such deserving poor and needy people of the said congregation as they should think fit, with power of disbeen brought to such great perfection, as to be worn by women of the first rank in this kingdom; which, together, have been the principal means of reducing the silk manufactory, not only in Canterbury, but in London and in Ireland too, to its present decayed state. During the unhappy American war, such was the falling off of the silk trade, that many skilful workmen were reduced to so low a condition, as to apply for relief at the general workhouse. This distress of the silk trade determined Mr. Callaway to travel into the west and north of England, in search of something new for the employment of these deserving distressed people; and this his ingenuity effected, after a long and expensive journey; for he found the means of mixing Mr. Richard Arkwright's level cotton twist to his looms of silk warps, by which contrivance he introduced to the public a new manufacture, which afforded employment, and consequently subsistence, not only to these poor unemployed workmen in Canterbury, but in other parts of England likewise. This beautiful new article of fabric, was called Canterbury muslins, and the manufacture of it spread so rapidly, and the demand for it became so great, that from the time of its invention, which was about the year 1787, it has employed all the weavers in this city, and many hundreds more in London, Manchester and in Scotland, where they still retain their first name of Canterbury muslins.

Nor did Mr. Callaway's public spirit stop here; for at the expence of upwards of 3000l. he afterwards erected a cotton mill, on the river, at Sboal-oak, near this city, which gives employment to 50 women and children, under the care of two foremen. This mill likewise supplies the weavers with the best of cotton twist; but the flourishing hopes of the silk, the cotton and the woollen trade of this city, has felt a severe check, though perhaps not less than the other manufactures throughout this kingdom, by the present unhappy war with France (b).

In the year 1789, I saw in Mr. Callaway's

treas, &c. on non-payment; and he gave the said meadow to his said son Abraham and his heirs, subject to the said annuity. Peter de la Pierre, or Peters, M. D. of the Black Friars, in Canterbury, by his will in 1697, gave 20l. to the poor of this congregation.

Mary Lyzy, of All Saints, Canterbury, widow, by her will in 1725, gave to Mr. James Six, the elder, Mr. Nicholas Pilow, Mr. Samuel Six, Mr. John Legrand, Mr. Stephen and Mr. William Six, and others, the Elders of the Walloon congregation, of which she was a member, and to their successors and assigns for ever, for and towards the maintenance of the poor of the said congregation, all those her two messuages or tenements, with the gardens and appurtenances in St. Alpbage parish.

(b) At present the number of men, women, and children, employed here in silk, cotton and wool, such as combers, spinners, weavers and windsters, is about a thousand.

THE HOP PLANTATIONS.

silk looms, the richest and most beautiful piece of silk furniture for the Prince of Wales's palace of Carlton House, that was ever made in this, or any other kingdom.

Happily for Canterbury, it has felt but little, if any injury from the frequent decays of its manufactures; it has found another, and that a permanent and much greater resource of wealth, in the cultivation of hops, the plantations of which cover many hundred acres of land contiguous to it (i). In them, the labouring poor, both men and women, find a constant employment throughout the year; as the aged and infirm do in the manufacturing of the bagging, in which the hops are put. The lands are continued in a superior state of cultivation, and their annual value raised higher than those for corn or any other produce; the woods of the neighbouring country for many miles round, here find a sale for their growth of poles, at a very advantageous price, the planters themselves, which are almost every inhabitant of the town and neighbourhood, find resources from the lucrative produce of these grounds; and the return of money from London, at the latter end of the year, upon the sale of the hops is so great, that it is felt by all ranks of people, and diffuses a universal plenty and prosperity, not only to the city itself, but to the neighbourhood around it. This traffic of the hop trade is so much the predominant pursuit of every individual, that it is no wonder it should have the general preference here to all others; so that, except the manufacture above mentioned, a small one of worsted, and the article of brawn, which last is not inconsiderable, there is no other trade but what the inhabitants carry forward, for the supply of the necessaries of life, and the mutual support and accommodation of one another.

THE HEALTHY AIR, and pleasant situation of this city, has been already taken notice of; but the houses in it, from the length of time since they had been rebuilt, were grown antient again, and from want of any improvements being made to them, were become unsightly, and the whole city was perhaps esteemed the most so of any in the kingdom. At length, the necessity of improvement became obvious to every one, and a general emulation for it took place among the citizens, and under the authority of parliament in 1787, the city was new paved, and all an-noyances were removed. It was lighted with upwards of 240 lamps; a watch was appointed for the safeguard of the inhabitants, and the houses throughout it were altered to a chearful, and more modern appearance; and most of the shops were fitted up in a handsome style, in imitation of those in London; and the improvements would have been carried still further, had not the short tenure by which most of the houses in it are held under church leases, (which are in every place the bane of all industry) deterred the lessees from hazarding more on such uncertain property; and had not this stopt their ardor, this city would in all likelihood have been second to few others in the kingdom.

(i) The plantation of hops in the eastern division of Kent, pays in general, a 4th part nearly of the produce of the whole kingdom to the hop duty. In the circuit of two miles and an half round Canterbury, it is computed there are between two and three thousand acres of hop ground. This plantation is called the City Grounds. The hops growing here are of a very fine rich quality, and if well managed are of a good colour; they are highly esteemed by the London brewers for their great strength;

All this was scarcely finished, when still further alterations took place, for in 1790, the road to Absford, which at the entrance into the city at Wincheap, was both dangerous and inconvenient, was changed, and a new one made in a strait line through the Old Castle-yard and the antient Wortbgate, and at the same time the Dunjeon-bill and field (k) was, with much labour, levelled and planted with trees, and beautifully laid out in walks, for the use and amusement of the public, and this at the expence of upwards of 1000l. by a private, but liberal minded citizen, James Simmons, esq; banker, and an alderman of this city, to whom the corporation have granted it for this purpose, for his life, rent free; and the great high road at another entrance into the city, at St. George's-gate from Dover, being narrow, with several dangerous turns, an act of parliament was obtained that year, entirely to alter the course of it, by making a new one, in a strait line from that gate for more than a mile and a half through Barton-field; on each side of which several genteel houses are already built; and the commissioners are further impowered, by the aid of a turnpike, to keep in repair and improve the high road from hence to the further end of Barbam Downs, where the Dover turnpike ends.

THIS CITY is very populous, containing with its suburbs, by estimation, more than 9000 inhabitants, which are still increasing (l). Its citizens are wealthy and respectable; many gentlemen of fortune and genteel families reside in it, especially within the precincts of the cathedral, where there are many of the clergy of superior rank and fortune belonging to it; and through-doing more execution in the copper than those of any other district.

(k) See some account of the Dunjeon field and bill, below.

(l) Mr. Duncombe, in a letter published in the Gentleman's Magazine for the year 1770, p. 565, says, from the calculations he makes in it, that the number of inhabitants in this city and suburbs may fairly be computed at 9000; the number of houses appearing by a then late survey, to be 987 within the walls, and 851 without; in all 1838 houses.

out

PRESENT STATE, &c.

out the whole place there is a great deal of courtesy and hospitality.

For the amusement of the inhabitants and neighbouring gentry, there is a theatre erected not many years since, and a public assembly room, in the High-street, which will be further mentioned below; and there are horse races yearly on Barbam Downs, at which the King's plate is run for, and which, from their nearness to this city, are called Canterbury Races; these are attended by most of the Kentish gentry and a great number of people from the neighbouring parts; and this city being their usual rendezvous, it brings a vast concourse of them to it for the time, when there are assemblies, concerts, plays and other entertainments, during the whole time of the race week.

There are in this city and its suburbs, several meeting houses for religious worship for the inhabitants, who are of different persuasions; such as those of the Methodists, Anabaptists, Quakers, and Presbyterians, of all which, the followers of the first especially, are not a few; besides which the Walloons and French refugees have their meeting for worship in the undercroft of the cathedral, as has been mentioned above; and in the suburb of Westgate, there is a synagogue for the Jews, who are very numerous, especially in this part and about St. Peter's, the number of them being estimated at more than 400 (m).

The city is plentifully supplied with all kind of provisions, for which there are two market days weekly, on a Wednesday and Saturday, both days for poultry, butter and garden stuff, much of which is brought from Sandwich hither; and the latter for butcher's meat, cheese, corn, hops and all sorts of cattle; besides which there is a good fish market held daily throughout the year. Besides the markets above-mentioned, there were antiently others, set apart for other commodities, in different parts of this city. Without Burgate, in St. Paul's parish, was, of antient time, a wheat market, at, or about the corner on the left hand without the gate, as appears by the old rentals of Christ Church, relating to their tenements there; and in a deed or charter of lands given to St. Augustine's, by one Dunwaldus in 760, mention is made of a vill, then situated in the market, at the Quenegate of this city; at the red wall, by the palace back gate, where there was another market, commonly called, and still remembered by the name of the rush market; in St. George's street, about the Augustine's Friars

(m) At the further end of this suburb, on the right hand, at the entrance of the road to Whitstaple, is a burial place for the Jews; and another, not far from it, for the Quakers.

(n) See Battely's Somner, p. 80.

(o) Archbishop Courtney obtained of King Richard II. the grant of four fairs at the four principal feasts of peregrination in the year, viz. one on the Innocents Day; another gate, there was a cloth market kept; in the High-street, beside St. Mary Bredman's church, was antiently kept a fish market; this fish market seems to have been of long continuance at this place; in a deed of Christ church, anno 1187, mention is made of the parish of St. Mary's, called the church of the fishmongers, in Canterbury, as it is again by the same name in a lease before that time, made by Odo, Prior of Christ church; and Mr. Somner conceived this to be the church intended by these deeds, and so as it was in his time from the bread market by it, called St. Mary Bredman's church; it was more antiently called St. Mary Fishman's church. At Oatenbill, eastward, beyond St. George's Gate, now the city's place of execution, was formerly a market for the sale of oats; as at the same place before salt was sold, whence it was called salt bill; it had a market cross to it; for there is mention made of the cross at Oat-bill. Not far from hence, that is, by the nunnery, at the meeting of the four wents, or ways there, was another market, or the former continued thither, whence the field over against the nunnery southward, now almost all over digged for chalk, called the lime kilns, was antiently called market-field; and lastly, not far from hence, without St. George's-gate, as formerly, so there are now, bought and sold all sorts of cattle; whence, as is conjectured, the market took its name of rether cheap, which is in English, the drove market; and to shew the antiquity of it, the reader will observe, that the rederchepe is mentioned as a boundary in the 2d charter of K. Ethelbert to St. Augustine (n).

There was a fair, granted by the charter of K. Henry VI. annually held in this city, on the 4th of August and the two next following days; but it has been long since discontinued and laid aside; but there are several yearly fairs, for toys and pedlary, held in the several parishes of this city and its suburbs, mostly on the days of the fairs, to which the respective churches are dedicated.

Besides these, there are two principal fairs held yearly on April 5. and on October 10. in the precincts of the ville of Christ church, of late dwindled down to toys and pedlary ware; but the latter of them is the largest and most frequented, and is usually called Jack and Joane fair, from its being esteemed a statute fair, for the hiring of servants of both sexes, for which purposes it continues till the second Saturday or market day of the city has passed (o).

on Whitsun Eve; another on the feast of St. Thomas Becket, being July 7. and the fourth and last on Michaelmas Eve; to hold for nine days next following every of them, and to be kept within the site of the Priory. The fair above-mentioned on July 7. was called Becket's Fair, being the day of the solemnity of that Archbishop's Translation from his tomb to his shrine, and as such, was fixed on for this purpose,

Besides the intercourse with London and the several towns adjacent to this city, daily by land carriage, there are hoys, which sail from and return weekly to the ports of Whitstaple and Herne, for the conveyance of passengers and the heavier kinds of merchandise of all sorts; and from both of them, as well as from that of Fordwich, about two miles off, by the navigation of the river Stour from Sandwich, this city is supplied with plenty of seacoal for fuel.

This city and the adjacent country, as to the Customs, is within the Port of Faversham; but there is an establishment of the Excise here, under the management of a collector, supervisor, and other inferior officers.

In 1729, an act passed for establishing a General Workhouse, for the better relief and employment of the poor within the several parishes of this city, under the management of two guardians chosen yearly from each of them; one of whom is elected their president, and under their management the business of it is conducted. Besides these, there is a deputy president, a treasurer, chaplain, clerk, surgeon, master, mistress and schoolmaster. The poor maintained in the house, and out of it by weekly pensions, are very numerous; but the expence of the whole, which is levied by a tax or assessment on the rents, owing to law suits and other mismanagement, is become very heavy on the inhabitants.

Through the benevolent endeavours of the neighbouring gentry and clergy, a General Hospital, after the example of other counties, has been erected in the Borough of Longport, within the suburbs of this city, on part of the precincts of the antient monastery of St. Augustine, purchased of sir Edward Hales, bart. the expence of which, amounting to upwards of 4000*l.* has been defrayed by their voluntary subscriptions, on which likewise its future annual maintenance must depend. The first stone of it was laid on June 9, 1791 (p), when it was named THE KENT AND CANTERBURY HOSPITAL; and the building was so far finished and furnished, that on April 26, 1793, it was opened for the reception of in-pa-purpose, as the means of gathering together a greater multitude hither, for the celebration of this anniversary solemnity. For, as sir Henry Spelman observes, fairs began by the flocking of Christians to the place for solemnizing some festival, such as either the feast of the church's dedication, or other like solemnity; and so it is easy to conjecture to what saint the place has been commended, by the fair day; and the fairs were greater or less as the church and town were in estimation; but however small these fairs at Canterbury grew in process of time, as not to be at all considerable, yet, most certainly, they were once of greater request, and might justly boast of as great resort as any elsewhere, the decay of them arising from the defacing of the shrines of this saint, and the demolishing of the religious houses in and about the city, which were the magazines of reputed holy relicts, the inducements to all sorts of people tients, and for administering medicines and advice to out-patients; but this was not for more than what one half of the hospital was capable of containing, owing to the general fund not being at the time equal to a further expence (q), tho' it is hoped the charity and liberality of the public will very soon carry this institution to its full extent.

A Court of Conscience, for the recovery of small debts under 40*s.* by an act of parliament passed in 1752, is held every Thursday in the Guildhall of this city, which has cognizance over this city and the liberties of it.

THE appearance of the city of Canterbury, from whatever part you approach it, is beautiful, and equals the most sanguine expectation. The magnificent tower of the cathedral, for symmetry and proportion hardly to be paralleled, strikes the eye as the principal object of admiration; after which, it is directed to the tower of K. Estelbert, and the other stately ruins of St. Augustine's monastery, the steeples and towers of the several parish churches, the towers of St. George's-gate, and of West-gate, the Old Castle, the river Stour, meandering through the fertile meads, the rich plantations of hops on every side, the fine appearance of Hales Place, the view of St. Martin's bill and church, and lastly the surrounding hills encircling the whole, all together combining to form a prospect so pleasing, as is hardly to be exceeded any where for the extent of it.

THE city of Canterbury is of an oval shape. It is within its walls about half a mile from east to west, and somewhat more from north to south. The circumference of its walls is not quite a mile and three-quarters; it has four large suburbs, situated at the four cardinal points. The western part of the city may be called an island, being incircled by two branches of the river Stour, which divides just above it, and unites again at a small distance below it, the road through the city passing over two bridges, the one at Westgate, the other at Kingsbridge. Here are several corn and other mills on the river. Besides the streams of the Stour, the city is supplied with plenty of in those times for their frequent visiting of them. See Battely's Somner, p. 124, 135. Kennet's Parochial Antiq. p. 613. See Pat. 7H. VI, pro iis feriis habendis infra scitum prioratus.

(p) By sir Edward Knatchbull, bart. George Gippi, Esq; Dr. Wm. Carter, and Mr. William Loftie.

(q) The annual subscriptions on the opening of it amounted to only 39*l.* 16*s.* 0*d.*—At the end of the year 1793, the moneys which had been received for the use of this hospital, from the first institution of it, were 5,361*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* of which there had been expended, including the building and purchase of the land, 5,295*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.* and from the first institution to May 30, 1794, there had been admitted to the benefit of this hospital, 99 in-patients and 73 out-patients; and on Dec. 31, 1796, the number of in-patients and out-patients admitted amounted to 838; when the total annual receipts were 573*l.* 6*s.*

DESCRIPTION OF THE CITY AND SUBURBS.

excellent water, which flows from two springs rising, the one among the ruins of St. Augustine's monastery, and the other on St. Martin's Hill; for the dispensing of which there are several public conduits in the principal streets of the city (r), and there is a strong chalybeat water in the western part of it (s). Within the precinct of the cathedral, the inhabitants there enjoy likewise the benefit of most excellent water, brought in pipes from two springs, which arise in the North Holmes, about a quarter of a mile north-east of the city.

From the river the ground rises with a gentle ascent towards the east. The parish churches and the remains of the several religious houses are interspersed in different parts of the city; at the north-east part of it is the precinct of the cathedral, being in size something more than three quarters of a mile in circuit, and nearly of a quadrangular form; adjoining to the north-west side of it is the precinct of the Archbishop's palace.

There are four principal streets, where, as well as in the other parts of the city, though the houses are in general ancient, yet the fronts of them have been so far modernized, as to make a cheerful and slight appearance. The High-street, through which the way leads from London to Dover, crosses the middle of the city eastward, and is a fine street, of considerable width, being half a mile in length, in which are the church of Holy Cross Westgate (t), Kingsbridge hospital, All

(r) As a public reservoir for the use of the inhabitants of this city, Archbishop Abbot built a handsome conduit or water house of stone, and he intended to have left a yearly revenue for the support of it; but some dissensions which he had with the Mayor and Corporation, in which he thought he had been ill used, changed his intention. This conduit, which stood in the midst of the High-street, proving a great interruption to the free passage of carriages, especially since the great increase of them, was pulled down in 1754, and the reservoir for the water was placed in the upper part of the two towers of St. George's gate.

(s) This arises from two springs a little northward of St. Peter's Street; they are of a different quality, though rising within seven feet of each other. These waters have been prescribed and taken with good success from the first discovery of them. They were discovered in 1693, and described by Dr. Scipio des Molins, in the Philosoph. Transf. vol. xxv, No. 312, p. 2462. See Kennet's Parochial Antiqu. where mention is made of Edburg Well, in Canterbury.

(t) St. Peter's church, not far from it, stands but a very small distance from the north side of this street.

(u) In this hall the courts, tribunal, or place of judicature of the city, is seated and held, where distributive justice in both civil and criminal causes, of a secular nature, proper for the cognizance of that court is administered. The name of Guild or Guildhall, deriving its etymology from the Saxon or old English word Gild, signifying a society or corporation. It had not antiently this name, nor does it occur, that I know of, in any record till the 26th year of King Henry VI, who then in his charter of the change of Bailiffs to Mayor, makes mention of it by this name, granting, among other things, that the Mayor should hold pleas in the Guildhall of this city; before this, it was commonly

Saints church, two of the principal inns, and the Guild or Court Hall, as it is usually called, of the city, situated in the middle of this street, as the fittest and most convenient place for it. It is a very handsome commodious building, for the several purposes it is intended for. In the hall, on each side, there hang some match-locks, brown-bills and other old weapons; and at the upper end, where the court of justice is kept, there are several portraits, most of them whole lengths; one of which, over the Mayor's seat, being that of Q. Anne; the others being of those who have been benefactors to the city, and underneath each is some account of their donations. In the middle of the hall, is a handsome brass branch for candles, given by fir Thomas Hales, bart. and Thomas Knight, esq; (u)

In the street, close to the Court Hall, is a public water cock, with an inscription, commemorating that fir John Hales, bart. brought the excellent water of it from St. Austin's into this city, at his own expence, in 1733; which generous benefaction was continued by his descendant fir Edward Hales, bart. in 1754.

Beyond this, in the same street, are St. Mary Bredman's church, the public assembly-rooms (v), the corn-market (w), the meat-market or shambles (x), and St. George's church; nearly opposite to the corn-market, is the new-built church of St. Andrew, and on the same side eastward, the mansion of the White Friars.

called and known by the name of the Speck house; and the common gaol or prison of the city, since removed to Westgate was then kept by it, in that part of it to the streetward, and from its contiguity was called by the same name likewise; but the Town Court was not always kept at this place, for both that and the prison were formerly kept together elsewhere, and that probably at the place where the present corn-market is, and were then both called by the name of the Speck-house. See Battely's Somner, p. 66.

(v) These rooms were erected mostly at the expence of the gentry of the eastern part of the county by public subscriptions, and the property of them was vested in trustees in order to secure the use of them to the public; the last surviving trustee was Charles Pyott, late of St. Martin's Hill, esq; deceased; the use of these rooms and the rest of the building, at other times, was vested in Mr. Whitfield the elder, who paid the rest of the expence, and had the care of the building and the future management of them.

(w) The corn-market, with a granary over it, is situated on the north side of the High-street, further eastward. It has not been for many years made use of as a market, that being held in the open street, on the side opposite to it. The lower part of this building is partly inclosed as a night watch-house, and the rest or forepart of it, for the sale of fish, toll free; a few hucksters for greens, and such like commodities; on the spot where this building now stands, was formerly the Town House, or Guildhall of the city, with the prison adjoining to it, before the present one was built, being called at that time the Speck House, as has been mentioned above.

(x) This meat-market, or shambles, for the butchers, is built on a spot of ground on the same side of the High-street eastward, but inclosed and apart from it; it was erected in

DESCRIPTION OF THE CITY AND SUBURBS.

The middle of this High-street is crossed by two streets; along that to the southward, called St. Margaret's, and Castle-street beyond it, the high road leads by the castle and the suburb of Wincheap, to the town of Asford; in the former is St. Margaret's church, and not far from it, on the opposite side of the street, a handsome house called the Whitfield-house, from its having been for many years the residence of the family of Whitfield, a branch of those of Tenterden, in this county; of whom John Whitfield, esq; died possessed of this house in 1691, whose descendants resided here till his great-grandson John Whitfield, esq; (y) alienated it to John Jackson, esq; (z) an alderman of the city, who resided in it till his death in 1795; after which it was sold by his devisees to G. Gipps, esq; who again conveyed it to Mrs. Lydia Friend, who now occupies it as a boarding-school for young ladies.

At the end of St. Margaret's-street, where formerly was an iron cross, are four vents or streets. That strait forward leads to the Old Castle and the county Sessions House, whence the road continues through Wincheap to Asford. That to the right leads to Stour-street, at the end of which is St. Mildred's church; and that to the left or eastward leads to the Dunjeon, through the site of the antient Ridingate over the Roman 1740, in the room of some antient shambles, which stood along the middle of the High-street, to the great inconvenience of passengers, and to the discredit of the city itself.

(y) John Whitfield, gent. who died in 1691, was son of Henry and Anne, and grandson of John and Catherine Whitfield; he appears by his will proved in Prerog. off. Canterbury, to have been of the law, and of the society of the Middle Temple; but he seems to have had no great opinion of his profession, which he debarred both his sons from following. He appears to have been an ingenious man, for he mentions in his will, his fire-engine, which he himself had constructed, and the furnace which he had lately built in St. Margaret's, in which he had made some glasses. He was a man of considerable property both in lands and money, and was a good benefactor to this city, of which the reader will find an account below, among the charities left to it. By his will, he gave, among other bequests to his son John, a large medal of Arabian gold, of about 10l. value; a large medal of the King of Sweden; his mother's locket of diamonds in 3 parts; his grandfather's sealed ring; his striking watch; the Estrich cup, and Queen Elizabeth's glass, which was his grandfather's, and 40 rings of gold made with the motto of his coat of arms engraven on each of them, to be given to his particular friends and relations; all which are mentioned here to shew his respectability of life. He married Rebecca, daughter and coheir of Robert Jaques, of Elmsted, esq; by whom he had a numerous issue, of whom two sons lived to maturity, and three daughters. Rebecca married to William Henman; Roberta 1st to Sampson Pierce, and 2dly to David Jones; and Anne to the Rev. Owen Evans. Of the sons, John was of Canterbury, and possessed this house, and Robert was of Chartham Deanry, and by his second wife Anne, daughter of Herbert Palmer, esq; left several children. John Whitfield, esq; the eldest son above-mentioned, died in 1705, leaving Anne his wife surviving, (who married Walling-street, towards Dover, and by a branch from it southward, to Hythe and Romney Marsh, over the Stone-street way.

On this road, at a very small distance from St. Margaret's-street, before you come to the Dunjeon and Ridingate, is a large capital mansion-house, formerly the property and residence of the family of Man, who were possessed of the aldermanry of Westgate, held of the crown in K. Henry III.'s reign, from which time they continued resident in this city. In K. Henry VIII.'s reign, John Man was of Canterbury, gent. as appears by his deed dated in the 8th year of it, sealed with his coat of arms, which was, Or, a chevron ermines, between 3 lions rampant-guardant sable. His great-grandson William Man, esq; resided in this parish of St. Mary Bredin, (the church of which is situated close to the gardens of this house northward) whose son sr Charles Man, knt. anno 1 Charles I, built this mansion, which has a most respectable appearance; at length, after it had continued in his descendants till the latter end of the last century (a), it was alienated by one of them to the family of Denew, which had resided at Staplegate in this city for many descents; one of whom, Nathaniel Denew, resided here, and dying in 1720 (b), left it to his widow Dorothy, eldest daughter of sr Abraham Jacob, of 2dly Laurence Bridger,) and one son John Whitfield, of Canterbury, esq; who married Ann Wase, and left by her, who died in 1758, 3 sons, John, of Canterbury, and Henry and Wase, who both married, but died without issue, and two daughters; Anne married to the Rev. John White, of Minchinghampton, and Mary to William Phillpott, gent. attorney-at-law. John Whitfield, of Canterbury, esq; the eldest son, resided in this house till he alienated it. He married Elizabeth Johnson, by whom he left issue three sons and four daughters. They bore for their arms—Argent, a bend, between two cotizes engrailed sable. Many of them lie buried in St. Mary Magdalen Burgate, church, in this city.

(x) Mr. Jackson was formerly of Salisbury; he had issue by Sarah his wife, who died in 1793, an only son William Jackson, esq; a young man of a most amiable character, who being hurt by the viciousness of a horse, died unmarried in 1789, æt. 31, and was buried, as was his mother near him afterwards, in St. Mildred's church. They bear for their arms—Argent, on a chevron sable, 3 cinquefoils pierced of the 1st, between as many falcon's heads, erased azure.

(a) There is a pedigree of this family in the Heraldic visitation of the co. Kent, anno 1619, beginning with John Man above-mentioned, T. Hen. VIII. Many of them lie buried in St. Mary Bredin church, in the account of which, below, their monuments are taken notice of.

(b) Nathaniel Denew was son of John Denew, of Canterbury, esq; by Mary his wife, and lies buried with Dorothy his wife, above-mentioned, who died in 1743, in St. Mary Bredin church. They had issue one son and three daughters, viz. John, who was of St. Stephen's, esq; and dying in 1750 without issue, lies buried in that church, as does Elizabeth his wife, only daughter of Rance, of London. Of the three daughters, Dorothy married 1st to the Rev. Dr. Richard Ibbetson, by whom she had no issue; and 2dly, to the Rev. Julius Deedes, Prebendary of Canterbury. Mary married to

DESCRIPTION OF THE CITY AND SUBURBS.

Dover, kent. and she alienated it to Capt. Humphry Pudner, who died possessed of it in 1753 (c), upon which it passed by his will to his daughter Katherine, wife of Thomas Barrett, of Lee, esq; in this county, whom she survived, and afterwards sold it to Mrs. Cecilia Scott, of the family of Scott's Hall, who resided in it, and dying unmarried in 1785 (d), devised it by her last will to her brother William Scott, of Blendon Hall, in Bexley, in this county, esq; who afterwards removed hither, and now resides in it (e).

To return to the High-street, where, on the northern side, opposite to St. Margaret's-street, is a narrow way called Mercery-lane, antiently le mercerie, no doubt from that trade having been principally carried forward in it; the houses of it are the most antient of any in the city, each story of them projecting upwards, so as almost to meet at top; the west side of it being the scite of one of those antient inns, which Chaucer mentions as frequented by the pilgrims in his time (f).

of one of those antient inns, which Chaucer mentions as frequented by the pilgrims in his time (f). This lane leads to the entrance into the precincts of the cathedral, the principal gate of which is opposite to it. Hence to the eastward, and parallel with the High-street, is Burgate-street (g), through which the high road leads to Deal and Sandwich. In this street is the market-place for poultry, butter, and garden-stuff (b), and further eastward, St. Mary Magdalen's church.

From the end of Mercery-lane, opposite to Burgate-street, the street leads through that of St. Alphage northward towards Northgate, thro' which the high road leads to the island of Tbanet. On the east side of Palace-street, is the precinct of the Archbishop's palace, and opposite to it St. Alphage church; a little distance behind which is the precinct of the Black Friars; all the Rev. Herbert Randolph, rector of Deal, and Elizabeth, to Edward Roberts, esq; See vol. iii. of the Hist. of Kent, p. 597. There is a continued series of this family in the Register of St. Alphage parish, from the year 1654 to 1699.

(c) The family of Pudner came originally out of Normandy, whence Humphry Pudner came and settled at St. Ives in the co. Cornwall, but removed from thence and settled at Sandwich, and lastly at Margate, in the Isle of Tbanet, where he died in 1671, and was buried there; having had by Mary his wife, daughter of Peit, of Sandwich, several sons and daughters, of whom his only surviving son Humphry was of Margate, and in 1689 was commander of a vessel in government service. He was drowned on the Godwin Sands in 1703, leaving by Martha his wife, daughter of Lee, of Throwley, one son Humphry, of Canterbury, captain of a man of war as above-mentioned, who died in 1753, et. 83, and was buried at Nackington, as was his wife Frances, sister and coheir of sir William Willis, bart. who died in 1762, et. 78; by her he had Humphry, who died unmarried in 1747, et. 29. Katherine, twin born with Humphry, born 1717, married to Thomas Barrett, esq; as above-mentioned. Mary, who died unmarried in 1779, et. 54; the others died infants, and all except Katherine, lie buried in Nackington church. The Pudners bore for their arms—Gules, bendy of 6 or, over all a cross argent.

(d) See vol. iii. of the Hist. of Kent, p. 300 (t).

(e) See ibid. p. 293, and vol. i, under Bexley, p. 162.

(f) Before the time of the great rebellion in the middle of the last century, there was a colonade on each side of Mercery lane, for the benefit and safety of foot passengers, in like manner as London Bridge had till within memory; but when the Dean and Chapter was abolished, the occupiers of the houses in it being most of them tenants to that dissolved body, took the opportunity of inclosing these colonades or piazzas in the front of their shops, and of converting them to the enlargement of them; which incroachment continuing for some years was not contested at the restoration, but was suffered to continue in the same manner to the present time; by which means it happens that the front shops of these houses are become reputed a freehold; whereas the rest of the building both behind them and above, remain as before, the leasehold premises of the Dean and Chapter; and what is still more extraordinary in the tenure of several of these houses, the dining-rooms or front apartments over the shops belong solely to the adjoining houses; when the rooms behind, above, and below, without any communication with the houses of them, are the property and in the occupation of other persons.

(g) The houses on the north side of this street range along the south boundary of the cathedral precincts, and are so situated, that they have almost all of them their front apartments in the city liberty, and the back ones in that of the Dean and Chapter; in consequence of which, the children of the freemen, born in these dwellings, were to have no right to sue for their freedom except they were born in some one of these front apartments, by the agreement made between the Prior and Chapter of Christ Church, and the Mayor and Citizens in King Henry VIII's time, as has been taken notice of above.

(b) At the place where the poultry market is now held, was formerly a market cross, said to be at the Bull Stake, a name taken from the baiting and chafing of bulls there, used by an antient order and custom of the city by the city butchers before their killing, not for pleasure, but to make them proper meat and fit to be eaten. This cross was built by John Coppin, of Whitstaple, and William Bigg, of Canterbury, in 1446, in the room of a former one decayed, standing in the same place, as appears by the story of Archbishop Stratford's troubles, mentioned in Antiq. Brit. Eccles. in which we are told, that the writ of summons against the Archbishop was fixed up at the High Cross without the gate of the Priory of Canterbury. This cross, erected in 1446, was pulled down by the Mayor in 1645. This place was likewise as early as King Edward III's reign called the Poultry, but at present, and for many years past, it has been known by the name of the Butter Market. It continued without a market-place till about the time of the restoration, when Mr. John Somner, brother to the Antiquary, at the expence of upwards of 400l. built a handsome market place, with several rooms over it for public use, part of which was as a repository for corn, against a time of dearth and scarcity, he demising it on a lease to the corporation for 99 years for these purposes; but it seems the corporation used him with great ingratitude, inasmuch that he published in 1664 an account of the proceedings between him and them. This lease expired in 1764, since which, in 1790, the above-mentioned building has been taken down, and a new market-place, on a much more extensive scale, has been erected in its room, at the expence of the corporation.

which

DESCRIPTION OF THE CITY AND SUBURBS.

which will be further mentioned in their proper places; I shall only notice further, that not far northward from the latter, stood a small house, the property of the Templars (i), and one likewise formerly belonging to the chaplains of the chantry of Edward the Black Prince (k), the site of which has been for many years known by the name of the Mint, from its being esteemed a privileged place, under the controul of the Board of Green Cloth.

THE SUBURBS without the walls of the city are very extensive; that of St. Dunstan's, westward of the city, through which the high road leads to Whitstaple and London, is in a strait line with the High-street of the city, being a broad and handsome approach to it, and is within the jurisdiction of the county of Kent. A description of it has already been given in vol. iii. of the Hist. of the county, p. 589. The suburb without Northgate, through which the road leads to the Isle of Thanet, is but meanly built and inhabited. In this suburb, near the city wall, is a fine spring of water, called St. Radigund's Bath, built over and fitted for cold bathing. In the altering of a very antient house near the bath some time since, some hollows or pipes were discovered, carried along in the thickness of an old stone wall, which seemed a contrivance for heating the room in former times, and making a sudatory or sweating-room of it. In this suburb are the hospitals of St. John, and of Jesus, usually called Boys's Hospital, and the remains of St. Gregories Priory. The suburb towards the south, called Wincheap, thro' which the high road leads to Ashford, is much better built, though not so populous; great part of the western side is in the parish of Thanington, and county of Kent; at the south extremity of it are the remains of the hospital of St. Jacob. The last suburb remaining to be mentioned, is, that on the eastern side of the city, by

(i) Somner, p. 70, says, this house of the Templars was situated in Northgate parish, in or near Waterlock, now called Church-lane, (the lane, as he conceived, under the town wall, and leading by Northgate church within, down to the river running from Abbat's Mill;) for that, Thorn, 1921, mentions a messuage given in 1273 to St. Augustine's abbey, by one Edmund de Cambio, situated in Waterlock-lane, in the parish of Northgate, near the houses of the Templars, &c.

Leland, in his Itin. vol. vii, appendix 144, says, that the monasterie of St. Sepulchre, was once belonging to the Templars—Monasterium S. Sepulchri olim Templarii.

(k) This house stood, says Somner, p. 70, very near, if not in the place, where some part of the Templars habitation was situated in St. Alphage parish; and there is now, over an antient stone porch, opening to the lane leading from the north end of Palace-street, westward, by Staple-gate, towards the lane turning to Abbat's Mill, yet undefaced, the Black Prince's Arms.

By the return of the King's Commissioners for the survey of chantries, &c. anno 2 Edw. VI, it appeared that there was a messuage appertaining to the late chantry, called far the largest of them, through which the high road leads to Sandwich, Deal, Dover and Romney Marsh.

That to Sandwich and Deal, passes from Bur-gate along St. Paul's, where is the church of that name, along the Borough of Longport, where the way or street is remarkably wide and spacious, being the highest ground and esteemed the most pleasant and healthy of any part within the city, or without. On the north side of it is the wall which bounds the precinct of St. Augustine's abbey, on which the Kent and Canterbury Hospital is built, and on the opposite side the mansion of Barton. Hence the road continues through the borough of Longport, to St. Martin's parish; on the south side at the bottom of the hill is a good house, which, as appears by the wills in the Prerog. office, has been in the possession of the family of Austen, branched off from those of Adisham, ever since Q. Elizabeth's reign, and belongs at this time to Mr. John Austen; partly up the hill, on the opposite side is St. Martin's church, and a little above it a good gentleman's house, formerly belonging to Cbeney Elwine, gent. who sold it to sir Henry Palmer, knt. and he resided here and died possessed of it in 1659; after some intermediate owners, it was alienated to Robert Pyott, esq; who resided here and died possessed of it in 1789 (l), leaving by his 1st wife an only daughter and heir Anne, whose husband Robert-Thomas Pyott, esq; is now, in her right, in the possession of it.

About half a mile further beyond the summit of the hill, is Stone-house, the property of Mr. William Hammond (m).

The remaining part of this suburb southward lies without St. George's-gate, near which, on the right hand, close under the city wall, where formerly was the city ditch, a market is held on a Saturday weekly, for the sale of all kinds of cattle.

Prince Edward's Chantry, within the cathedral church of Canterbury, situate and being within the parish of St. Alphage; the yearly value of the said messuage being 20s. the outgoings of which were 4d. so there remained clear 19s. 8d. This survey is printed at the end of Battely's Somner.

(l) Robert Pyott, esq; was bred up in the service of the royal navy; he married first, Anne, one of the daughters and coheirs of sir Richard Sandys, of Norborne, bart. who died in 1753, leaving an only daughter Anne, above-mentioned, who in 1760 married her first-cousin Robert-Thomas Pyott, of Hull, in Yorkshire, merchant. His 2d wife was Elizabeth, widow of Benjamin Letbiullier, of Sheen, esq; who died in 1778, without issue, and was buried in this church of St. Martin. The arms of Pyott, being—Azure, on a fess or, a lion passant gules, in chief 3 bezants, were first granted by Camden, Clarx. in 1611, to Richard Pyott, sheriff of London. See Guillim. p. 360.

(m) It was the property of Mr. William Hammond, who died here in 1773, having before settled it on his son Henry on his marriage, on whose death in 1784 it came to his son William, the present possessor of it.

DESCRIPTION OF THE CITY AND SUBURBS.

Hence the high road divides that which leads strait forward towards Dover, being newly made through part of Barton field; and the other which turns south-eastward, in a circular rout by Oaten-bill, where was formerly the place of execution for criminals, and St. Sepulchre's priory, falls in with the old road coming from the ancient Riding-gate, on the Watling-street way, leading towards Dover, and likewise to Hythe and Romney Marsh. On the south side of this road, about half a mile from the city, is a feat, formerly the hospital of St. Laurence, now the property and residence of Mrs. Grabam.

THE DUNGEON

is a place so remarkable here, that it cannot be passed by unnoticed in the description of this city. The Dungeon or Dancjobn field, for it is at present known by both those names, lies near the scite of old Riding-gate, adjoining but within the walls of the city, at the south-east corner of it, and on the west side almost to the ditch and wall of the castle bayle. In ancient deeds the name is variously written Dangon, Daungeon and Dungen; names all much alike and of the same import.

At the south-east corner of this field, close to the city wall, there is thrown up a vast artificial mount or hill, now to all appearance circular, having a deep ditch, from which no doubt the earth was taken round the other part of it; it is a great deal higher than the wall ever was, when entire; insomuch, that from the top of it there is a clear view over the whole city below it, as well as a great extent of the adjacent country (n); the field itself, before the late alterations, consisted of very uneven ground, and whatever had occasioned it, had never been levelled. On the outward, or opposite side of the wall to the above mount, the city ditch and a high road only separating the two, is another artificial mount, of a much smaller size and not half so high (o).

This place was esteemed of such consequence, that it gave name to the adjoining manor of the Dungeon.

(n) On the top of this hill, some time since, there stood a windmill, which has been removed several years ago. Leland, who wrote in King Henry VIII.'s time says, in his Itin. vol. vii, p. 145, "Many yeres fins men soute for treasor at a place cauled the Dungen where Barnhales house is now and ther yn digging thei found a corse closed in Leade."

(o) The field or meadow, at the north-west corner of which this small mount stands, is of like uneven surface as the other. It is usually called the Martyr-field, from several persons having been burned in a large hollow or pit at the south end of it, in Q. Mary's reign, on account of their religion. See Fox's Martyrs, vol. iii.

(p) Dugd. in his Warwickshire, says that dungeon meant a strong tower, or platform, upon a large or high mount of

The original of its name is conjectured to have arisen from its having been the Danes work, and to have been from thence corruptly called Dangeon and Daungeon, for Danien or Danes-bill (p); and that, because it was either their work against the city, or of the city against them; but the former appears, by what follows, to be much more probable. Indeed, it seems to have been the proper work of the Danes, the great and frequent molesters, invaders, and wasters of this city, and most likely at the time when in K. Ethelred's days they besieged the city, and after 20 days resistance, took it by storm, and then destroyed both city and inhabitants.

Whoever well observes the whole of this spot, will plainly see, that the works above-mentioned, both within and without the present wall of the city, were not counterworks one against the other, as the common opinion is, but were once all one entire plot, containing about three acres of ground; the outwork of a triangular form, with a mount or hill (what appears to be now two, having been but one of a pear-like shape, till cut through, as will be noticed below) intrenched round within it, and that, when first made and cast up, it lay wholly without the city wall, and that part of the mount which now forms the larger one and most part of the outwork likewise, towards the north of it, for the greater security of the city, has been taken and walled in, since that side of the trench was formed, which encompasses the smaller mount now lying without and under the wall, (fity meeting with the rest of the city ditch,) after both sides of the outwork were cut through to make way for it, at the time of the city's being walled and inditched; a conjecture that must seem probable to any one who marks and examines the place with attention (q).

THE EXCHANGE.

THERE was formerly in this city an exchange, a royal exchange, called in latin Cambium Regis, mention of which often occurs in the old rentals earth artificially raised, such being usually placed towards the side of a castle or fort, which is least defensible; and he gives an example of a like mount having been raised at Warwick for the purpose of defence. He says, that when that place had been destroyed by the Danes, it rested so till Ethelreda, daughter of King Alfred, repaired its ruins, and in 915 made a strong fortification there called the Dungeon, for resistance of the enemy, upon a hill of earth artificially raised, near the river side, as is yet to be seen on the west part of the castle; and a fort so considerable in respect of its natural situation, was no doubt of great importance for securing the peace of all those parts. Ibid. p. 298 341.

(q) The field in which the larger mount stands, has lately been levelled and converted into public walks, as has been already mentioned above.

and

and other records of the priory of Christ church. It appears to have been granted by K. John in his 6th year, by the name of the King's Change, to the archbishop for 100 marcs per annum (r), and I find an order of his successor K. Henry III, that none should make change of plate or other mass of silver, but in his exchange of London or Canterbury (s). It was standing, it seems, till K. Edward III.'s reign, and in all probability received its final period from him, for that prince gave the site and building of it, called le change, then almost wholly in ruins, situated in the High-street, and in the parish of All Saints, to the master of the hospital of Eastbridge, in this city, in augmentation of the endowment of it (t). Of the antiquity and continuance of this exchange here, I have not found much, further than that K. Henry III, in the 6th year of his reign, wrote to the Scabines and men of Ipre, that he and his council had given prohibition that none, Englishmen or others, should make change of plate, or other mass of silver, but only at his exchange at London or at Canterbury (u); and that in the iter of H. de Stanton and his associates, Justices Itinerant here, in the 7th year of K. Edward II, Hugh Pykard, clerk, was indicted within the liberties of the priory of Christ church, for stealing 32lb. of silver, which was in the change of Canterbury.

An exchange relates of course to a MINT or place of mintage and coinage of money; but antiently, as appears by the statute of the 1st year of K. Henry VI, cap. 4, they were not allowed to be together, but were to be kept apart, and accordingly there was a place formerly neighbouring to the above-mentioned exchange, on the other side of the same street (v), where the mint was kept. The officers and ministers belonging to it, had their dwellings close by it in some tenements belonging to the priory of Christ church; from which circumstance, in their old rentals, there is frequent mention of the mints or offices belonging to the mint, in the parish of St. Mary Bred-

(r) Pat. 6 John, m. 5. Ibid. m. 7.

(s) Stow's Survey, B. ii, 52.

(t) Liber Hospitalis.—The master of the hospital made two demises of the premises into tenements, one anno 43, the other anno 47 Edw. III. the antient boundaries of which are particularized by Somner, p. 64. See the instruments relating to this grant in ibid. appendix, No. xx a. xx b.

(u) Stow's Survey, p. 351. Battely's Somner, p. 64.

(v) Where, says Mr. Somner, the Crown Inn, or some part of it then stood, this Exchange was kept in a corner of the mint towards the east, and was part of the boundary, he continues, to that, which was then the dwelling of Isaac Clark in Battely's time, anno 1703, Mr. Alderman Webb's. Mr. Battely says he had seen a charter, in which mention is made of another of these mint offices in the parish of St. George, over against the pillory of the city. Ibid. p. 64.

(w) Stow's Survey, p. 46.

(x) Lambarde.

man. This mint was most probably abolished at the same time with the exchange, for there is no mention of it of latter years. How long it had been kept at this place, or of what antiquity it was, I know not; but among the places in England, which K. John in his letters mentions as having mints kept in them, this city is one (w), and it had been so, I suppose, for many ages, for K. Æthelstane appointing the places for mints and the number of minters throughout the kingdom (x), began with Canterbury, to which he allowed seven mints; a greater number than to any other place, except London, which was allowed to have eight.

Of these seven mints at Canterbury, four were the king's (y), two were the archbishop's, and the seventh was the Abbat of St. Augustine's (z), of these the three latter will be mentioned in their proper places (a).

These mints, as well as all others throughout the realm, were answerable to the king, and the officers belonging to them were amenable to him for all offences committed by them in the coinage of money; that is to say, these mints were under the direction of the exchequer at London (b). Thus we read, that in 1126, anno 26 Henry I, the principal mnyers of all England, being discovered to have made pennies adulterated, and not of pure silver, and being by the king's command assembled together at Winchester, had all on the same day their right hands cut off (c).

In the 3d year of K. Edward III, I find that William de Latimer, having purchased the office of coinage in the tower of London and city of Canterbury, from Maud, the widow of John de Bote-tourt, who held it by inheritance of the king in capite, obtained his pardon for that transgression (d).

At a small distance from this place, on the same or south side of the High-street, is another, where once the Jews, who antiently for a long time together were suffered to dwell in most of our chief cities, kept their residence, having

(y) Mr. Somner, p. 65, says, among other pieces of antique (Roman, British, Saxon, Danish, and Norman) coin which he had met with and reserved, some were stamped in this mint, as he took it, in this city, for certain the reverse of the coin said so.

(z) Leges Adelstani Regis. Brompton, col. 843. These mints were become so numerous in King Ethelred's time, that he made a law to diminish their number; decreasing, that there should be three in each principal port, and in every other one; and at the same time he made proper regulations for the moneys being made pure and of its right weight. See Leges Ethelredi Regis. Ibid. col. 899.

(a) See cart. 1 John, p. 1, m. 6, n. 46 25; Edw. III, n. 10, pro. iiii. Cuneo et tribus monetariis habendis in civitate Cantuar. Ibid. pat. 5 Henry VI, p. 1, m. 9.

(b) Madox's Excheq. p. 198, 603, 604, 605, 632, 678.

(c) Simon Durham, col. 254.

(d) Dugd. Bar. vol. ii, p. 31.

their

REMARKABLE OCCURRENCES.

their dwellings in this street and in the lane by it, from thence till very lately called Jury-lane and at this time Cross-lane (e), their dwellings, amounting in the whole to almost twenty; all which, together with their synagogue, or as it was more frequently called, their school, upon their general banishment out of this city and all other parts of the kingdom, in K. Edward II.'s reign, chiefly on account of their immoderate usury, and their barbarous practice of crucifying Christian children, about the feast of Easter, (at which time their whole number, according to Matt. Westminster, amounted to 16511,) (f) as confiscate, escheated to the king, and were soon afterwards by him given or alienated to different persons; but the most part to the number of 12 tenements at the least, and a void piece of ground which belonged to the community of the Jews, or in common, was granted to the monks of Christ church (g). By all that can be collected from antient rentals and boundaries, it is conceived that the present stone parlour of the King's-head Inn, in the High-street, which is mounted upon a vault, and ascended by many stone steps, as the Jewish synagogues and schools were always built aloft, is the remains of a good part of that which was the Jews synagogue or school, in this city (h). At present the habitations of the Jews, who are very numerous in this city and its suburbs, are mostly in the parish and street of St. Peter's, and in the suburb of Westgate; in which latter they have a synagogue, and at some distance farther westward, a burying-ground, as has been already mentioned more at large in vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 590.

REMARKABLE OCCURRENCES.

In the year 1129, K. Henry I. kept his court with much solemnity at Canterbury (i).

It is said by some, that K. Stephen died here in 1154 (k).

In the 1st year of K. Richard I. anno 1189,

(e) King Henry II, in the 23d year of his reign, gave leave to the Jews in England to have a burying place in any city, but without the walls of it, where they could find a fit place to bury their dead. Stow's Survey, B. i, p. 20.

(f) In the year 1290.

(g) In the year 1290, being the 19th of King Edw. I. there were sundry lands of the Jews, granted to the Prior and Convent of Christ church. See Madox's Exchequer, p. 178.

(h) Mr. Somner, p. 65, says, their synagogue or school stood about where then some part of the Saracen's Head, now the King's Head Inn, stands, as appeared by the record of Christ Church, in which is this bound to certain fee of the late monks hard by it. The land in the parish of All Saints between the great street, which is toward the north, and the school of the Jews, which is towards the south, nigh a lane which leads from the above street towards St. Mildred's, being that ground, as he took it, upon which the forepart to the streetward of that which was then the Sara-

William, king of Scotland, came to Canterbury, being conducted thither by the Archbishop elect of York, and the Bishop of Lincoln, and made his homage here to the king, who received him into his favor (l).

K. John, in the year 1204, kept the festival of Christmas with much solemnity at Canterbury (m).

K. Henry III, in his 47th year, anno 1263, kept his Christmas with great solemnity at Canterbury, and summoned the prelates and nobility of the realm, to attend him here to the celebration of it, and to proceed with him afterwards to Dover (n).

In K. Edward I.'s reign, anno 1272, there happened at Canterbury a great storm of thunder and lightning, and a sudden inundation; the waters breaking forth seemingly from the caverns of the earth, overflowed the greatest part of the city, where they were never before known to come, insomuch that the violence of the current by its impetuosity overturned and laid level many houses and buildings in it, and drowned many men, women and children (o).

In the same reign, anno 1299, there was an earthquake, which, though not very violent here, was felt as far as Hampton in co. Middlesex (p).

In K. Edward II.'s reign, the inhabitants of this city were thrown into great consternation by the coming hither of Bartholomew, Lord Badlesmere, that great and powerful baron, contrary to the king's inhibition to him, with 19 knights, having their armour concealed under their surcoats, and his esquires carrying their swords openly, in which manner they visited St. Thomas's shrine; of which proceeding, some citizens were immediately dispatched to inform the king. But the Lord Badlesmere, being afterwards taken prisoner elsewhere, was conveyed to this city in 1322, and was drawn from thence to the gallows at Blean, and was there hung, and his head being cut off, was fixed on a pole on Burgate, and then his body was hung up (q).

cen's Head Tavern, being in shew newer than the back part, was afterwards built, to which ground the very next house above (the Mitre) was bounded westward, and called the house nigh the school of the Jews. Thus explained in the rental: The stone house which is over against the land where the school of the Jews is situated towards the west.

(i) Rapin, vol. i, p. 199.

(k) Ibid. vol. i, p. 210; others say, he died at Dover.

(l) R. de Diceto, col. 649. Fox, vol. i, p. 388.

(m) Madox's Exchequer, p. 17.

(n) Ex Bund. Literarum de an. 47 Hen. III. in Turri London. Prynne, vol. iii, p. 121.

(o) Leland's Col. vol. iii, p. 419, Ex. Annal. T. Wike. Thorn, col. 1920. Knighton, col. 2460, says it happened anno 1271, xiv. Cal. Octob. and that a great famine followed throughout the country.

(p) Camden's Ann. of Ireland.

(q) Leland's Col. vol. i, p. 274.

REMARKABLE OCCURRENCES.

In the 22d year of K. Edward III, anno 1347, there was a great and famous tournament and jufts held at Canterbury, in relation to which Dugdale says, that Thomas de Grey, of Codnore, being a very active person, had such great esteem with the king, that he received at his hands a hood of white cloth, embroidered with blue men, dancing, buttoned before with great pearls; and being to perform divers military exercises, in a tournament at Canterbury, had certain accoutrements of India silk, whereon the arms of fir Stephen de Cofinton were painted, bestowed on him by the king (r).

In 1361, there was so great a tempest of wind here, that the trees were overturned, and the roofs and steeples were thrown down, and so vast was the fury of it, that it seemed as if the whole frame of the universe was involved in ruin (s).

In 1382, on May 21, at mid-day, there was an earthquake throughout all England. Thorn tells us, it terribly shook and shattered the eastern window of the chapter-house, and the western window of the church, as well as other edifices of stone, both within the monastery of St. Augustine, and without (t).

It appears by an ancient chronicle, that King Edward IV, anno 1469, came to Canterbury, and there was Nicolas Faunte the Mayor, and many others executed (for the aiding the bastard Falconbridge); K. Edward went thence to Sandwich, and took Falconbridge there with him; and the Lord Denbam and fir John Fog and others, were left in Kent to sit on judgment of the rebels, of whom there were a great number punished by the purse. Upon this offence the king seized the liberties of the city, and appointed John Bromton custos of the city, from the feast of Pentecost to the 20th of January following, when he restored them (u).

In the year 1520, being the 12th year of K. Henry VIII, Charles V, then newly elected emperor, came to Dover, where the King met him and on Whitsunday accompanied him to Canterbury, and were received together, riding under one canopy, at St. George's gate, Cardinal Wolsey riding next before them, with the chiefest of the nobility of England and Spain. On both sides of the streets stood all the clerks and priests, that were within 20 miles of Canterbury, with long censers, crosses, surplices, and copes of the richest sort, and thus they rode under the canopy till they came to the west door of the cathedral, where they alighted from their horses, and were waited on by Archbishop Warbam, and having there said their devotions, they went into the Archbishop's palace adjoining, where, within a day or two afterwards the Archbishop entertained them with a ball, and a royal and sumptuous banquet after it; of which further mention will be made in its proper place, below (v).

In the year 1573, Q. Elizabeth, in her royal progress, came to this city, and kept her court during her stay here, in her palace of St. Augustine's monastery; at which time she was magnificently entertained by Archbishop Parker, at his palace of Canterbury.

In the year 1593, Thomas Long being then Mayor, a great plague raged in this city (w); and it appears by the parish registers, that the plague raged in this city in the years 1544, 1564 and 1595, and in 1635 again with great violence, from the beginning of August to the end of October.

On June 12, 1625, K. Charles I. with his Queen Henrietta Maria, of France, came to Canterbury to his palace of St. Augustine's monastery, and there consummated his marriage with her.

On Christmas Day, in the year 1648 (x), there were great tumults raised in this city by the means of Michael Page, the Puritanical Mayor, who encouraged the people to insult and molest those who were going to observe the festival at church, which were with much difficulty appeased by fir William Man, alderman Sabine, and Mr. Lovelace, a lawyer; but upon this the committee of the county sent forces in form to attack the city; who, though they heard by the way that all was quiet, chose to march in as conquerors, and finding the gates open, took them down and burned them, threw down several parts of the wall, and committed many to prison upon suspicion, among whom were the three peace-makers (y).

K. Charles II, at his restoration in 1660, in his way to London, lay three nights at the late palace of Lady Wotton, in St. Augustine's monastery, as did his two brothers the Dukes of York and Gloucester.

On September 8, 1692, a great shake of the earth was felt in this city.

In 1663 and 1698, the assizes were held in Canterbury; and in 1737, there was a special commission granted to try John Bell and his wife, the master and mistress of the city workhouse, for embezzling the property intrusted to their care, which was opened in this city before fir Edward Probyn, knt. one of the Judges, being appointed

(r) Dugd. Bar. vol. i, p. 231, 711.

(s) Thorn, col. 2122. (t) Ibid. col. 2158.

(u) Leland's Col. vol. ii, p. 507.

(v) Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. X^c. See Rapin, vol. i, p. 742.

(w) Battely's Somner, p. 184.

(x) A great riot happened at Canterbury on Christmas Day, 1648. See Rushworth, vol. viii, p. 948, 957, 976.

(y) History of Independency, 4to. 1648.

NATURAL HISTORY.

by it, to try the cause. When the judge was received in form by the Mayor and Corporation, and the expence attending it was 54l. and they have been held once since, in the year 1741.

In the year 1776, on January 8, there happened a great inundation in Canterbury, inasmuch that several persons were drowned by the vast impetuosity of the current, which overflowed across the road at the west end of Westgate-bridge, and directed its course down North-lane, with great force; and in the autumn 1785, there was a most tremendous storm of wind, which overthrew houses and barns in the environs of this city, and destroyed the greatest part of the hop plantations near it.

NATURAL HISTORY.

In the Philosophical Transactions, vol. xxi, p. 26, for 1699, is an observation of some parbelia or mock suns, seen by Mr. Stephen Gray, at Canterbury, on February 26, 1699; and in vol. xxii, No. 261, p. 507, is another letter from the same, dated May 4, following, giving an account of another phenomenon, still more rare and curious, which happened here on April 7, that year, between four and five o'clock. He says, that there appeared on each side the sun a parbelion connected by a halo of the usual diameter; they had each of them a tail of a whitish colour, extended opposite to the sun, of about 15 or 20 degrees in length; the upper part of the halo was touched by the arch of a circle, which had the colours of the iris with greater vivacity than the former. The appearance might not be altogether unfitly represented by the figure underneath, where A is supposed to be the sun, B. C. the parbelia, with their trains. D the coloured arch touching the halo B. D. C.—E the more vivid arch that passed between D and the zenith Z.

On the 19th of December, 1741, another parbelion or halo was seen here, being two mock suns and an inverted rainbow, of the most lively colours; the former were at times almost too bright to look on, and then they seemed round, but were often fringed with prismatic colours; the appearance ended about noon. See an account of it, sent to the Secretary of the Royal Society, by the Rev. Mr. H. Miles, in Philosophical Transactions, vol. xlii, No. 462, p. 46 (z).

On December 11, 1741, a fire-ball appeared soon after noon-day, and the sun shining, but few people saw it, and they could only guess at its course; which, however, was observed to be from north-west by north, to south and by south, and right over Littleborne from Westbere, and towards Ralling, near which place Lord Cowper, who was hunting, heard but one explosion (for there were two); the other most probably happened at such a distance, as to be in one with that so near him. Mr. Goffling, of the Mint-yard, who gave the account of it to the Secretary of the Royal Society, says, that he found his house violently shaken for some seconds of time, as if several loaded carriages had been driving against the walls of it, and heard a noise at the same time, which he took for thunder, yet of an uncommon sound; though he thought

(z) Descartes, in his book of Meteors, calls such phenomena, parbelia or mock suns, and gives us the history of five seen at Rome in the year 1629, March 20, and demonstrates that there may sometimes, according to the rules of refraction and reflection, appear six at one time, viz. five mock suns and the true one.

thunder,

HERALDRY.—THE STOUR.

thunder, which could shake at that rate, would have been much louder, therefore he concluded it to be an earthquake; the sky, he found, was cloudy, but nothing like a thunder cloud in view, and there was a shower of rain from the eastward presently after, the coldest that he ever felt. The noise, he afterwards found, proceeded from the above fire-ball, which passed with great rapidity over our county; how far he could not tell. It began with two great blows, like the reports of cannon, and then rolled away till it was heard no more; and he afterwards heard, the appearance was like that of a very large shooting star, and the train of light it left soon disappeared, from its being noon day.

This fire-ball was seen and the explosion heard in Suffex, and it appeared about three miles from Newport in the isle of Wight, which seems to be the first land it touched; at the same time its course was south-west by south, to north-east by north; and its motion nearly parallel to the horizon. It appeared different in shape to people at different places. See Philosoph. Transact. vol. xli, No. 461, p. 872. vol. xlii, No. 462, p. 60.

HERALDRY.

The family of Wilde dwelt for some generations at St. Martin's Hill; the first of whom, John Wilde, esq. came out of Cheshire hither, and died in 1554. His grandson sir John Wilde resided here for some time, till he removed to the Archbishop's palace, of the office of keeper, of which he was patentee; he died in 1635, and was buried in Christ-church, as was his surviving son and heir Colonel Dudley Wilde, in 1653 (a).

Thomas Stoughton, esq. third son of Edward, of Asb near Sandwich, was of St. Martin's Hill; he died in 1591, leaving three daughters his co-heirs; of whom Elizabeth, the eldest married

(a) They bore for their arms—Argent, a chevron sable, on a chief of the 2d, 2 martlets of the first, (quartering, Norden, Stoughton, Exhurst, Twissbam, Clitherow, Notbeame, and Omer.) There is a pedigree of them in the heraldic visitation of the co. Kent, anno 1619, and several of their wills are in the Prerog. office, Canterbury. They were a different family from the Wildes, Barons.

(b) See vol. iii. of the Hist. of Kent, under Asb. Thomas Stoughton's will is in Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(c) His arms—Argent, 9 ears of corn vert, 2 in saltier surmounted of a 3d in pale, 2 and 3; which coat was granted by William Segar, Norroy, Jan. 17, 1602. See Harl. Mss. No. 1115.

(d) His arms—A chevron between 3 moor cocks, quartering Packenham.

(e) He bore for his arms—Argent, on 3 mounts vert 3 trees, their trunks proper, leaves vert, fruit gules, 2 and 1. See Herald's office, C. 16, fol. 107.

(f) Itin. vol. vii, p. 144.

(g) Thus in Domesday, the hundred of Westgate, and the manor of Westgate Court, a principal one, belonging to the Archbishop, are called the hundred and manor of Esture, and Stursete, from their situation near this river; and the Thomas Wilde, of St. Martin's Hill, by whom she had sir John Wilde, knt. above-mentioned; she died in 1596 (b).

In the heraldic visitation of the year 1619, is the pedigree of William Watmer, descended from William, third son of John Watmer, alias Watmough, of Ecclestone, in county of Stafford (c).

Of Jeremiah Smith, of Canterbury, in the reign of K. James I. son of John Smith, of Much-Warlingfield, in county of Suffolk.

Of George More, of Canterbury, descended from Richard More, of the county of Lincoln (d).

Of Richard Skrubsole, of Canterbury, gent. who died in 1634 (e).

THE RIVER STOUR.

THE Britons are said, in general, to have called their rivers by the name of dour, which, in their language signified water; whence this city was called by the Romans, Durovernum; though it is written by Bede and others, Dorovernia, and Dorobernia; all names, however, of the same import. Leland has a singular conjecture, that this river was in the Britons time, named Avona, and that the Romans from thence, though corruptly, called the city Duravennum, for that of Dor and Avona, it should rather have been called Doravona or Doravonum (g).

In the early time of the Saxons, it was frequently both called and written Æstura, Æstur, &c. (h) no doubt from the latin word æstuarium, an estuary, or arm of the sea, having, as is conjectured, flowed up, where the course of this river is, over the level on which part of Canterbury now stands, and as high up as Asbford beyond it (i). A circumstance rendered probable, by the situation of the place, the history of former times, and the several criteria and tokens which have corroborated it (k). When this manor of Esture, or Esteward, as it is vulgarly called, lying on this river likewise, about nine miles from Canterbury higher up, certainly took its name from it.

(i) See Somner's Chatham News, in Battely, p. 188.

(k) Mr. Somner, as corroborating proofs, mentions the parcel of strange teeth and bones found by him almost close to this river at Chatham, about 17 feet deep, supposed by some to have belonged to an hippopotamus, or river-horse; and as these are an instance on that side of the valley for the probability of the sea's quondam occupation of it, so there is one, not less remarkable from the other or opposite side of it; for at Westbere, about three miles below Canterbury, north eastward, lying under the brow of the hill, stretching out by Upstreet as far as by the west end of Sarris Wall, there were found in his time, as was related by credible assurance, on the same occasion as at Chatham, (the sinking of a well) at a very great depth, store of oysters and other like shells, together with an iron anchor, found and unimpaired; and the same was told of another anchor dug up likewise in his days at Broomdown, on the same side of the level somewhat above Canterbury, westward. See Battely's Somner, Chatham News, p. 188.

estuary

THE RIVER STOUR.

estuary ceased to flow, leaving the lands dry, and this river to its present course, is not, however to the purpose for me to enquire into here; but to return to the name of the river. It was afterwards written by the Saxons, Stur, as appears by one of their codicils, so early as the year 686; and by another in 814, it is written by its present name of Stour. It was afterwards written both Stur and Stura, and so Leland has it in his Itinerary, a name not singular to this river only, as there are others in different parts of England called so likewise (l).

The rise and course of this river has been already so fully described in the former parts of the hist. of Kent, that there can be no occasion to repeat them here; I shall therefore continue my discourse of it, by observing, that the advantage this city derived from it was not attended without inconvenience, for it was subject, from its nearness, to frequent inundations; an inconvenience hardly worth mentioning, and of little consequence, as it has happened but rarely for a long time past, nor indeed can it happen, but upon very extraordinary floods, and then only in the very lowest or western part of it, as the city stands now so much higher than it formerly did, having been from time to time much raised, as well by the devastations made of it in the time of the Danes, as the several fires that have happened in it (m).

Leland writes thus of the Stour, in his time. "The river of Canterbury now cawled Sture, "springeth at Kingges Snode, the which standeth "southe, and a lytle be west fro Canterbury, and "ys distant of Cant. a xiiii or xv myles. Fro " Kinges Snode to Afsbeford, a market towne ii "myles of on the farther syde of Sture. Fro " Afsbeford to Wye, a market towne iiiii myles of "on the farther syde of Sture; to Charbam, a

(l) Battely's Somner, p. 20.

(m) That the scite of a great part of this city was in very antient time made and raised ground, appears by the remains of foundations on foundations to a very considerable depth, and the ground for supporting superstructures in several places often stuck and stuffed with piles of wood, or long poles and stakes forced into the ground, as has been frequently experienced by those who have dug wells, vaults, cellars and the like. Many instances of subterraneous works occur. A strong piece of stone-work, about five feet under ground, was met with in digging a cellar in St. Margaret's parish; it was indented, and so firm, that it resisted the very strong blows of the workmen's tools. In sinking a well in Lamb-lane, within about two rods and an half of the current of the river, the labourers were stopt at about 15 feet deep, by a piece of timber that lay across the place, until it was sawn asunder; it appeared by the mortices in it to have been the groundsel of some old building, and on their continuing to dig deeper, they came to a spring arising from a gravelly or stony soil, the water of which seemed mineral, so far as gall or oak leaves could give a proof of it. Upon the digging of a cellar on the west side of the gate going into Christ-church, near the market-

"villag iiiii myles; to Canterbury iii myles; to " Fordwic, on the farther side, wher as yet ys a "poore mayr; to Sturemutbe, a faire village iiiii "myles be water; to Richeboro, on the farther side "ii myles or more; to Sandwic, super Ripa a myle "and so withyn a dim myle yn to the mayne se.

"The water of Stur breaketh a lytle above " Canterbiri into ii armes, of the which one "cummeth be Westgate, and the other thorough "the cyte under S. Thomas Hospitale, and me- "teth agayne yn one botom beneth the cyte, a "this side . . . ford, being half a . . .

"The river yn one place runneth thorough "the cite walle, the which is made there with "ii or iii arches for the curse of the streme (n)".

This continues the present course of the river Stour, which, owing to the mills built on it, and other obstructions, is not navigable in any shape, higher than the town of Fordwich; but from thence, passing on the inside of the Isle of Thanet, by the baven of Sandwich, to the sea it is navigable for lighters, most of which are employed in the conveyance of heavy merchandise, such as coals, wood, stone, lime, bricks, fir timber, &c. between those places, though the stream is in different parts so shallow, and swerved up, especially about Sandwich baven, owing to want of proper management and attention, that the lighters find frequent obstructions in passing along it.

It should seem, that in very early times, the chief of the two branches of this river which runs through Canterbury, was that by King's Mill, through the midst of the city; but the Archbishops, to promote the advantage of their mill at Westgate, caused much of the stream to be diverted that way, so that the branches at this time are nearly equal (o).

place, about 10 feet under ground, a well was discovered about 12 feet deep, with a kirk to it; a little within St. George's Gate, in digging a cellar for a new house, the workmen came to an arch firm and solid, which they broke to pieces; and in a garden near adjoining, there was found a pavement of broad free stone, several feet under ground; in Mercery-lane, in digging a cellar, an oven, with wood coals in it, and wood by it, was found about 7 feet under ground, with two large stones not far from it, lying one upon another, and in the middle of the upper stone, a mortice-hole; in Lamb-lane above-mentioned, in a well just by the river side, there were two stones, laid there in former ages by art, so firm and heavy, that they could not be removed; many other instances besides these, no doubt, could be produced, and to these I may add, that at the back of King's Bridge Hospital, which adjoins the river, the ground has been in course of time so raised, that the capitals of some pillars close to it, are now nearly even with the surface of the ground.

(n) Itin. vol. vii, p. 145.

(o) This caused many dissentions between the Archbishop and the Citizens. Archbishop Peckham was charged by the citizens with the diverting of the river by certain cuts

THE RIVER STOUR.

The improvement of the river for the general benefit and advantage of the city, by enlarging and scouring it has been several times attempted, but without success. In the beginning of K. Henry VIII.'s reign, a design was formed to make that part of the river between Fordwich and Canterbury answerable to that below the former; that is to cleanse, deepen, and enlarge it, and to remove all mills and other annoyances on it, insomuch that lighters and boats might be brought to both alike; this proceeded so far, and with such probability of success, that it was allowed and authorised by an act of parliament passed in the 6th year of that reign (p); but the event proved, that execution, which is the life of all laws, was wanting here; for notwithstanding this progress made towards it, nothing was done to any purpose at that time; most likely the differences between the city and the Archbishop, as it diverted him from building here, and induced him instead of it to lay out great sums in erecting a stately palace at Oxford, in this county, so it had the mischievous effect to nip this project in the bud, and it came to nothing; and although it was afterwards revived and in part put in practice, with some hopes of success, through the endeavours of Mr. Alderman Rose, sometime Mayor of the city, in Q. Elizabeth's time, who was a good benefactor to the work while he lived, yet dying before it was completed, and wishing well to it, gave by his will 300l. towards it, but not being looked into as it ought, the design succeeded no better than before (q). And there were other attempts made afterwards, one of which was at the latter end of K. James I.'s reign, by Mr. John Gafon, who covenanted with the Mayor and Commonalty, within two years to make the river navigable for boats and other vessels of the burthen of 12 tons, from Sandwich to Canterbury; another in 1638, by Arnold Spencer, with the corporation, for the like purpose; and a third by Thomas Rogers, in 1695, who engaged with the mayor cuts or trenches, for the bettering of his mill at Westgate, which the jury found to have been done before, partly in Archbishop's Kitwarby's time, and partly in that of Archbishop Boniface. Battely's Somner, p. 21.

(p) Anno 6 Henry VIII. ch. 17. This act is not printed in the Statute Books, being esteemed a private act; it is printed in Battely's Somner, p. 21, and a copy of it is in the city chest. (q) Bat. Somn. p. 21 & seq.

(r) These indentures are all in the city's chests.

(s) Mr. John Rose, by his will, in Prerog. office, Canterbury, proved in 1591, gave to the Mayor and Commonalty 300l. to be paid to them within four years after his decease, upon condition that they within half a year after his decease, should enter into a bond of 500l. that if the river from Fordwich to Canterbury was not made navigable for carriage by water in it by boats of ten tons at the least, within six years after his decease, that then they should repay it to his Executors.

VOL. IV.

5 T

and commonalty to make the river navigable from Sandwich to Browning's Mill (r); all which seem to have failed in their attempts for this purpose, though Mr. Battely, who published a new edition of Somner's Canterbury, with additions in 1703, says that of late this river had been so cleansed and deepened, that lighters and boats came up then to the city, laden with coals, stones or any other wares from Sandwich (s).

How this might be, I know not, as I can gain no kind of knowledge of the fact; but for a number of years past this river, between Canterbury and Fordwich, has been in no such state; and by the appearance of the several mills on it, there does not seem any probability of such a circumstance having ever taken place (t).

In the rage for the improvements of this city which took rise in the year 1787, a grand scheme was projected to make this river navigable from Asbford to the sea, and 60,000l. was proposed to be raised by subscription for the expence of it; different methods were proposed for this purpose; one of which was to continue it by the present stream, and another by an entire new canal to go out by the Netbergong, at Northmouth, one of the antient mouths of the river Wantsume, whilst the sea flowed round the Isle of Thanet; and for this purpose alderman James Simmons undertook, at his own expence, to employ that very able and skilful engineer Mr. Robert Whitworth, of Halifax in Yorkshire, to take the levels and survey of the country, from the city of Canterbury to St. Nicholas bay, and to make an estimate of a canal, on which vessels of one hundred tons burthen should be navigated from the sea to the said city; which survey, levels and estimate this ingenious surveyor completed in a most masterly manner (u); and the drawings, plans, estimates, names of the land owners, and quantity of acres to be cut through, are now in the possession of the aforesaid Alderman Simmons. An opposition from Sandwich retarded the operation of this intended canal, which had scarcely

(t) Mr. Gosling, p. 31, says, that about the beginning of this century, an attempt was made to render this river navigable from Fordwich; and he continues, but upon what authority does not appear, that it succeeding so far that lighters brought coals up to that part of Canterbury, being the suburbs of it, near Duck-lane; but that when the undertaker had run out his fortune in making the experiment, he found that the coals could be brought as cheap or cheaper from Fordwich to the city, by land-carriage, so that the design came to nothing.

(u) The following is an extract from Mr. Whitworth's report, "I have taken the levels and survey of the country from the city of Canterbury to the sea, by which I find there will be no great difficulty to make a canal from Canterbury to St. Nicholas bay, which is about ten miles and a half. I have drawn the profile and made the estimate accordingly, so as to navigate vessels drawing eight feet water, having nineteen or twenty feet beam; the har-been given up, when that most calamitous war, occasioned by the revolution in France, unfortunately broke out, and put a total stop to this and many other great works of public utility.

"bour

THE MILLS.

THE MILLS.

THERE is nothing to say further of this river, excepting as to the mills situated on it in and about this city, which are now but few, in number only five; whereas about K. Stephen's time, I find that, besides these mills, there were six others standing upon this river, in or not far from this city, which belonged to the monks of Christ church; all which are long since down and quite gone (v).

The five mills abovementioned still remaining, are King's mill, so called, because it formerly belonged to the King, and was otherwise called both Eastbridge mill, and Kingsbridge mill, from the near situation to that bridge. Thorn, in his chronicle says, that K. Stephen gave to the Abbat of St. Augustine, the mill which he had within the city near Eastbridge, with the course of water belonging to it, in recompence for 100 mares, “hour at the mouth of the canal will have the advantage “of most that I have seen, for though there is apparently “no back water, yet it may be made to have a powerful “one, for it fortunately falls out, that the level of the “ground is such, that two feet water may be let into the “canal on a high spring tide for three miles and a half,

“which is about 60,000 tons of water; one half of that “quantity let down at low-water, would be sufficient to “scower out the harbour. The quantity of water necessary
“for this canal, might be supplied, as far as I can see,
“without injury to any one, and would take twenty-one “vessels up, and twenty-one vessels down in the space of a “week, and much more might be had, either on Sundays
“or at night, when the mills do not work.”

(v) In the Sarriden library, is a deed of the time of King Henry II, in which John de Dover confirms to his brethren the Monks of Christ church, in Canterbury, in free and perpetual alms, the Mill near St. Mildred's church, in Canterbury, which Hugh de Dover, his uncle, gave them, with his consent, at his death; witness Ralph de Eslinges, Robert de Luci, Elias de Silonghelde, &c.

(w) See the charter printed in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. viii. Thorn, col. 1807.

(x) This charter is printed in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. viii. Thorn, col. 1807.

(y) See ibid. appendix, No. viii. Thorn, col. 1807.

(z) In a cause of tythes brought in 1366, by the Parson of All Saints, against the Miller of this mill; the latter deposed, that he was not farmer of it, but servant of the mayors of the city, by them there deputed; and further, that all the bakers of the town ought to grind all sorts of grain for white bread, toll free.

It is worthy observation, that the Mayors of the city are mentioned in the above deposition, which office did not begin until almost 100 years after; since the above times the case is altered, the bakers of the city having no such privilege of grinding at this mill toll free, as then, for white bread.

One William Brunst, citizen and Alderman of Canterbury, about the year 1462, by his will, appointed his executors to buy 300 feet of ashlar or Folkestone stone, to make a which he received from that church in his necessity (w); from which time the Abbats enjoyed the mill, until Abbat Clarembald made it over to K. Henry II, who in lieu of it granted many liberties to the monastery (x). Afterwards, when the city was granted to the citizens in fee farm, by K. Henry III, this mill of Eastbridge, otherwise called King's-mill, as parcel, was expressly included in the grant and given to the citizens, together with the borough (y), and they possess it at this time (z).

Abbat's Mill, the next upon the same stream, below King's-mill, was so called because it once belonged to the Abbat of St. Augustine, and that as early as K. Stephen's reign, being then purchased by the Abbat Hugh, the 2d of that name, at his own cost, for the use of the sacristy of his monastery (a). At the suppression of the monastery, in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, this mill came into the King's hands (b). It now belongs to the Mayor and Citizens of Canterbury (c).

For many years this mill, from the occupier of it, was known by the name of Brown's mill; but Mess. Simmons and Royle having in 1791 obsubarise about the King's Mill. See Battely's Somner, p. 24, appendix, No. viii.

(a) On the condition that all provision of corn for the use of the monastery, should be there ground toll free, that the tythe of the mill should be paid to the Almonry of the monastery, and the residue of the profits arising from the mill should go to the use of the sacristy. See Battely's Somner, appendix, No. viii. Thorn, col. 1799.

(b) See the grant of the mill, anno 34 Henry VIII, 3 ps. orig. R. 17; the year before which the King demised to Walter Trotte, of Canterbury, yeoman, this water-mill, called Abbat's Mill, with its appurtenances, in the parish of St. Alphege, within the city of Canterbury, with all courses and streams belonging to it, and all that fishery in those waters and streams with sundry premises in St. Peter's and St. Cross parishes, all late belonging to this Abbey, to hold for 21 years, at the yearly rent of 7l. Aagta. office, Leases and Inrolments.

(c) In 1358, an agreement was entered into between the Abbat and the Citizens, that when the latter should have occasion to repair their Mill called Kyngesmill, and the Prior of Christ Church Mill, called Mildredemell, and the cleansing of the course of water between them and from the city's mill to the Abbat's Mill, called Abbat'smill, the reparations of which mills, and the cleansing of which stream, could not be effected unless the course of water was turned during such time; therefore, at the request of the citizens, the Abbat granted licence that the said course of water might be diverted for the above purposes during the space of one month, on condition, that whenever the Abbat's Mill, called Abbat'smill, should want reparation, a like leave should be granted to the Abbat and his successors by the citizens and their heirs; and in case the reparation and cleansing aforesaid could not be effected within the month, that then the citizens should agree to pay to the Abbat after the rate of a month, for the time the course of water should remain out of its proper channel 40s. and that this agreement should not be drawn into precedent, to the prejudice of either party, on account of the premises. Thorn, col. 2121.

tained

MANORS WITH ITS JURISDICTION.

tained the lease of it from the corporation, restored its antient name of Abbat's mill. They have since erected, at the expence of near 8000*l.* a capital building and corn mill, on the antient scite, from plans furnished by the late ingenious Mr. John Smeaton, which is of such curious and strong mechanical powers, as to be able to grind and dress from 500 to 700 quarters of corn weekly (d).

Westgate mill, the first upon the other stream, is a very antient one; in the survey of Domesday, it is mentioned as being the Archbishop's mill, but then in the hands of the canons of St. Gregories. The tythe of it was by Archbishop Hubert, in K. John's time granted, among other things, to the Hospital of Eastbridge, and that grant was confirmed by the prior and convent of Christ church. This mill still continues parcel of the demesnes of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Shafford's mill, now called Dean's mill, from the late possessor of it, is situated on the same stream, at no long distance below Westgate itself. Mr. Somner thinks it is the same, which about K. Richard I.'s time, was called Scepesbotesmelne (e); in the 20th year of K. Edward III, it was called by the name of Shafford's mill. It is now the property of Mr. Deane John Parker.

Barton mill is situated still further down the river, and appears by some of the buildings belonging to it, made of flint with ashlar windows and quoins, to be of good antiquity. It formerly belonged to the priory of Christ church, being appropriated to the grinding of the corn used by them for their own spending within the court. At the dissolution in K. Henry VIII.'s time, it came to the crown (f).

Christopher Hales, esq; afterwards knighted, and attorney-general to K. Henry VIII, was possessed of this mill, then called Barton mill, with a meadow belonging to it, then in the tenure of George Robinson, holding it in capite by knight's service, and then being of the value of 10*l.* (g) He died in the 33d year of that reign,

(d) The form of this new building is quadrangular, of the measure of 72 by 52 feet 5 inches; the height from the foundation to the vane, 100 feet; it contains six working floors, besides the observatory on the centre of the roof. To the grinding floor the walls are substantially built of brick and stone, and continued from thence to the eaves of the building with massy timber, covered with weather-boarding, terminated on the four sides, which are handsomely and uniformly finished, with a block cornice, and the roof covered with slate.

These premises, with those of King's Mill, are held under the Mayor and Corporation for the term of 30 years, at the yearly rent of 40*l.* and a premium of 2450*l.* for the benefit of the lease.

In digging for the foundation of the present edifice, at the depth of several feet under ground, were discovered many piles, and the frame of a mill-apron, of oak timber, the whole as black as ebony; a great quantity of brass and it was afterwards sold by his daughters and co-heirs to Thomas Culpeper, on whose decease, Alexander, his son, had livery of it in the 3d and 4th year of Philip and Mary (b).

It lately belonged to Mr. Allen Grebell, who erected close to it a handsome house, in which he afterwards resided. But the mill and some land adjoining to it, has been lately sold to Messrs. Sampson and William Kingsford, the latter of whom has long resided on the premises.

MANORS

WITHIN THE JURISDICTION OF CANTERBURY.

THE MANOR OF THE DUNJEON.

the mansion of which, situated just without the city walls, at a small distance westward from the lesser hill of the Dunjeon, in the parish of St. Mary Bredin, has been pulled down for some years, and only part of the out-offices are remaining, with part of the garden walls.

This manor, now known by the name of Dean-john farm, was formerly the property of an antient family called Cbiche, one of whom, Ernaldus de Cbich, was a person of principal note in the reigns of K. Henry II, K. Richard I, and K. John, and the aldermanries of Burgate and Northgate, in this city, being then held as an estate in fee, did then belong to him and his heirs, and had continued for some time in his family. Thomas Cbiche, who was one of the bailiffs of Canterbury in 1259 and again in 1271, was a principal benefactor to the above church of St. Mary Bredin (i). John Cbich was likewise one of the bailiffs of it in the 23d and 26th years of K. Edward III.

In the year 1320, being the 13th of K. Edw. II, a definitive sentence was pronounced by Robert Malling, then commissary of Canterbury, on the evidence as well of antient deeds and writings as otherwise, that the hospital of St. Lawrence, in Canterbury, was entitled to receive not only the tythes of this manor, but of 300 acres of land likewise adjacent to it; in consideration of which, John wire, and other pieces of metal; undoubtedly part of a water-mill in very early times.

(e) The composition between the Prior and Canons of St. Gregories, Parsons of Holy Cross, Westgate, and the then vicar, in the year 1347, calls it Shafford's Mill, and in express words reserves the tythes thereof from the vicar to themselves; which clearly shews it to be a titheable mill, and not within the exemption of the Stat. of 9 Edw. II, ch. 5. See Battely's Somner, p. 25. Dugdale, Mon. vol. ii, p. 374, mentions a mill called Cricumelne, which was given to the canons of St. Gregories.

(f) Battely's Somner, p. 25.

(g) Rot. Esch. His lands were disfavoured by the act of 31 Hen. VIII, c. 3. (h) Rot. Esch.

(i) His name, in antient characters, together with his effigies, were once in the west window of this church, as his coat of arms was carved in the stone-work of the chancel of it. See Philipott, p. 94.

Cbiche,

MANORS WITHIN ITS JURISDICTION.

Chiche, who was then lord of this manor, was to receive in autumn for his servants, five loaves of bread, two pitchers and an half of beer, and half a cheefe of four-pence; and he himself was entitled to receive unum par Cbirotbecarum ferinarum, one pair of leather gloves, and one pound of wax in candles; and for his servants three pair of gloves. Thomas Chich, son of the above-mentioned John, was sheriff of this county in the 15th year of K. Richard II.'s reign, and kept his shrievalty at the Dunjeon; and his great-grandson Valentine Chich, dying without male issue (k), this manor was alienated by him about the beginning of K. Edward IV.'s reign, to Roger Brent, who was of the parish of All Saints, in Canterbury, gent. who died seised of it, as appears by his will in the Prerogative-office, in Canterbury, in the year 1486, anno 2 Henry VII, and ordered it to be sold for the payment of his debts and legacies (l); after which it appears by an old court-roll, that in the beginning of the next reign of K. Henry VIII, John Boteler, or

(k) The Chickes bore for their arms—Azure, 3 lions rampant, within a bordure argent.

(l) He ordered to be buried in the chapel of St. Mary of All Saints, in Canterbury, and mentions Letice his wife.

(m) Phillipott, p. 94. By the act of 31 Hen. VIII, c. 3, the lands of James Hales, esq; were disgavelled; as were those of fir James Hales, knt. by that of 2 and 3 Edw. VI.

(n) A full account of the family of Hales, excepting of this branch, has already been given in voi. ii. of the Hist. of Kent, p. 576. Sir John Hales, knt. who purchased this manor, was son of John, the eldest son of Henry, of Hales Place, in Tenterden, and died about the 1st year of K. Edw. VI, leaving issue 4 sons by Isabel his wife, daughter and coheir of Stephen Harvey, by Isabel, daughter and heir of William Brooker. Of the sons, James the eldest was of the Dunjeon; Thomas the 2d son, was of Thanington, ancestor of the Hales, baronets, of that place and Bekeborne; Edward the 3d son, was of Tenterden, and ancestor of the Hales, baronets, of Tenterden, Woodchurch, Tonstall, and now of St. Stephen's; and William the 4th son, was of Reculver and Nackington; all of whom have been fully mentioned under those several parishes. James the eldest son, was of the Dunjeon; he was knighted, and anno 1 Edward VI. made one of the Justices of the Common Pleas; he married Margaret, one of the daughters and co-heirs of Oliver Wood, one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, T. Hen. VIII, who had been twice married before, 1st to fir Walter Mantell, of Heytford, in co. Northampton, knt. and 2dly to fir William Haut, knt. and lies buried in the south chancel, usually called the Wood's chancel, now closed up, in St. Mildred's church, where there is a monument remaining to her memory; she died in 1677. By fir James Hales she had issue an only son Humphry Hales, and two daughters, Eliz. married to William Austen, of Tenterden, and 2dly to — Barber; and Jane, married first to Walter Mantell, and 2dly to Christopher Carlisle; Humphry Hales, esq; the son, died possessed of the Dunjeon in 1567, and was buried in the above church, by Joane his wife, daughter and heir of Robert Atwater, of Leaham, who died in 1544; by her he had several children, of whom survived to maturity 2 sons, James, of whom below, and Humphry, who was York Herald, and two daughters; Abigail married to Anthony Sampson, of Nutts, esq; and Mary, wife of fir Isaac Sidly, of Great Chart; which fir

Butler, of Heronden in Eastry, was become proprietor of it, and he passed it away by sale to fir John Hales, chief baron of the Exchequer (m); and when Leland visited this part of Kent in the 30th year of that reign, he then resided at this mansion; from him this mansion descended down to fir James Hales, of the Dunjeon, knt. who died in 1665 (n), leaving one only daughter and heir Elizabeth, who carried it in marriage 1st to fir Stephen Hales, of the co. of Warwick, K. B. and 2dly to George, third son of William Sheldon, of Beoly, in the county of Worcester, esq; by neither of whom she had issue. They resided at the Dunjeon, where she died in 1678, and as he did a few months afterwards, possessed of this manor and seat, which his heirs alienated in 1680, to Henry Lee, esq; whose descendant Thomas Lee Warner, esq; in 1752, pulled down to the ground this mansion, then known by the name of Dunjon, alias the Coventry House (so called from the Lady Coventry's residing in it) (o), leaving only a few of the offices in the front, and the gar-

James Hales, knt. the eldest son, was of the Dunjeon, and being Treasurer to the expedition made to Portugal, he died at sea in 1589; he married Alice, daughter of fir Thomas Kempe, of Ollantigh, afterwards re-married to Richard Lee, esq; she died in 1592, and was buried in St. Michael's chapel, in Canterbury cathedral, where there is a monument erected by her to her own memory, and of her two husbands, and to her only son Cheney Hales, of the Dunjeon, esq; who died early in life in 1594, and was buried in St. Mary Bredin church. He married Mary, daughter of Richard Hardres, of Hardres, who afterwards re-married William Ashenden, and lastly George Walter, esq; by her first husband she had an only son fir James Hales, of the Dunjeon, knt. who dying in 1665, was buried by his wife, daughter and heir of fir Thomas Norton, knt. who died in 1659, in St. Mary Bredin church. They left an only daughter and heir Elizabeth, married first to fir Stephen Hales, of Snetterfield, in co. Warwick, K. B. who died in 1668 without issue; on which she married 2dly, George, 3d son of William Sheldon, of Beoly, in co. Worcester, esq; as above-mentioned; they both lie buried in St. Mary Bredin church.

This branch of the Hales's bore for their arms the same as those of St. Stephen's. There are pedigrees of them in the two heraldic visitations of the county of Kent, of 1574, 1619, and in Mil. No. 2230, to the year 1664, in the British Museum.

(o) She resided here, as appears by the parish register, in 1688, and dying in 1710, was buried on May 3, in St. Mary Bredin church. Thus the register.—By her will proved in Prerog. office, Canterbury, May 5, that year, styling herself Margaret, Lady Dowager Coventry, widow of George, Lord Coventry, deceased, she directed to be buried in the vault in Rainham church, among her ancestors. The Hon. Heneage Finch, of Wye, her executor; her sister, the Lady Anne Grimstone. She gives the moiety of the produce of her goods and chattels to Thomas Kene, late Bishop of Bath and Wells, and the Rev. Nathaniel Spinckes, in trust, that they dispose of it among the deprived Bishops and Ministers of Scotland, according to the form of the church of England, and such deprived ministers of the church of England, whose several circumstances by reason of their not having taken the oaths, should be found most pressing

and

MANORS WITHIN THE CITY LIBERTY.

den walls standing, and near them the farmhouse, with the buildings belonging to it. He died possessed of this estate in 1768, and was succeeded in it by his son Henry Lee Warner, of Walsingham Abbey, in Norfolk, esq; the present owner of it (oo).

THE MANOR OF MORTON, alias DODINGDALE, lies in the same parish of St. Mary Bredin, about two miles south-eastward from the walls of Canterbury. It was originally called Dodingdale, from a family who were possessors of it, one of which name, Hamo, the son of Guido de Dodingdale, as appears by the records of St. Augustine's monastery, gave the tythes of his manor of Dodingdale to that Abbat and Convent (p); but it seems it was but for a certain term of years, for in K. Henry II.'s reign, according to the same records, Richard de Marci, who was then the possessor of this manor, granted the tythes of his lands of Dodingdale to the hospital of St. Laurence near Canterbury, in perpetual alms, to the intent, that the brothers and sisters of it should have these tythes in particular, to buy linen cloth on the feast of St. John Baptist; trusting that they would remember him and his in their prayers.

When the family of Dodingdale was become extinct here, this manor came into the possession of another family of the name of Morton. By a deed without date, Elias de Morton, who implanted his name on it, by which it has ever since been called, demised the fee simple of it to Hugh Fitzvinon, a family which had large possessions at Sellinge near Monk's Horton; and his daughter Eugenia Fitzvinon passed it away by deed in the 20th year of K. Henry III., to Nicholas de Twitham, and he immediately afterwards, by a deed not having any date, settled it on Robert de Polre, but whether his successor sold it or not to John Cbich, is uncertain, as there is a chasm of this time in the private evidences of it (r), though the records of St. Augustine make him to have some interest in this manor in the 3d year of K. Edward III., anno 1330. The and necessitous, and among such widows and children of them as should be left exposed to want; but in a codicil she excepted Dr. Hickes, late Dean of Worcester, and the Rev. Ralph Tayler, from receiving any benefit from the same.

(oo) He is descended from the Lees of Hartwell, in co. of Bucks, of whom Thomas Lee married Anne, sister of Dr. John Warner, Bishop of Rochester; their son Dr. John Lee was Archdeacon of Rochester, the bishop's heir and executor, and pursuant to his will and act of parliament, took the name of Warner. He died in 1670, and was buried in that cathedral, leaving two sons; the eldest, Lee Warner, esq; married Catharine, daughter of Henry Hampson, and died in 1698, and was buried near his father; and the youngest, Col. Henry Lee, purchased the above manor, and was M. P. for Canterbury; he married Dorothy, daughter of fr George Grubham Howe, bart. By Elizabeth, daughter of fr Harbottle Grimstone, bart. he left issue Henry Lee Warner next that I find to have had possession of it, are Hardres and Isaac, who by joint conveyance in the 22d year of K. Henry VI., conveyed it to William Say, for the use of Robert Rigden, in whom the title did not remain long, for he in the 33d year of that reign conveyed all his concern in it by sale to William Barton and John White, and they by joint consent alienated it in the reign of K. Henry VI., to Richard Pargate, citizen of Canterbury, who died in the 35th year of that reign, and by his will (s) gave it, after his wife Isabell's death, to his son Edward, who was succeeded in it by his son and heir John Pargate, whose descendant Edward, in the 25th year of K. Henry VIII.'s reign passed it away to Peter Bruin; and after it had remained many years united to this family, Henry Bruin dying without issue, gave it to his sister Jane Bugge, who in the 1st year of K. James I.'s reign sold it to her kinsman John Bruin, and he in the 5th year of it alienated it to William Denne, who dying without issue male, Margaret his only daughter and heir carried it in marriage to Mr. Edward Hougham, after whose death it devolved to his two surviving daughters, Elizabeth married to Mr. Edward Rose, of Cbistlet, and Anne to Mr. John Bettenham, of Canterbury, who jointly possessed it in 1656 (t), at which time and perhaps for some time before, it was known by the name of Morton only. It afterwards became the property of Sawkins, from one of which name it was passed away to Mr. William Hammond, of Stone-House, near Canterbury, who on his son's marriage settled it on him, and dying possessed of it in 1773, was succeeded by his son Mr. Henry Hammond, who died here on July 20, 1784, and his son Mr. William Hammond, now of Stone-House, is the present possessor of it.

PORTION OF TYTHES.

It appears by the Registrum Roffense, that Gerard de Dudingdale, gave a portion of tythes in Dudingdale, near Canterbury, to the Prior and Convent of St. Andrew in Rocheſter; which gift was confirmed by Archbishops Richard, Baldwin and Hubert (u).

esq; who pulled down the mansion of the Dunjon, as above-mentioned, and died in 1760, having married Mary, daughter of Samuel Milles, esq; M. P. for this city, who died in 1770, by whom he had two sons; of whom the eldest, Henry Lee Warner, is the present possessor of this manor. He bears for his arms—Quarterly of 4 coats; 1, Lee, gules, a feſs chequy or and azure, between 8 billets of the 2d.—2, Warner; 3, Whetenall, and 4, Howe.

(p) Battely's Somner, p. 40.

(r) The heirs of John de Polre, in the 5th year of the reign of King Edward II. held the 4th part of a knight's fee in Dodingdale of the honor of Clare. Rot. Esch. ejus an.

(s) In Prerog. off. Canterbury. His father William appears to have been then living, and that he left a daughter Agnes.

(t) Philipott, p. 93.

(u) Reg. Roff. p. 116. See also p. 44, 46, 48, 410, 506.

MANORS WITHIN THE CITY LIBERTY.

This portion of tythes, on the suppression of the priory of St. Andrew in Rochester, came into the hands of K. Henry VIII, and was soon afterwards settled by him on his new-founded Dean and Chapter of that church, and continued with them till the abolition of bishops, deans and chapters, &c. at the latter end of K. Charles I.'s reign; soon after whose death in 1649, it was surveyed, by order of the state, in order to its being sold; in which survey it was returned, that the portion of tythes called Dodingdale portion, and the portion of castle lands belonging to the above late Dean and Chapter, in or near Canterbury, in Thanington and Nackington, and in the parish of St. Mary Bredin, in Canterbury, consisted of all manner of tythes arising from several parcels of land in those parishes, amounted in the whole to 101 acres and three roods of land.

Also the portion of tythes called castle lands tythes, in or near this city, all which were let by the Dean and Chapter, Nov. 22, anno 6 Charles I., to Josh. Colfe, alderman of Canterbury, for 21 years, at the yearly rent of 46s. 8d. and two fat capons; but are worth, over and above that rent, 17l. 9s. 4d. per annum. Parliamentary surveys, vol. xiv, Lambeth Library. These premises returned to the dean and chapter at the restoration, part of whose inheritance they now remain. Mr. John Toker was lately lessee of them.

STUPPINGTON

is a manor in St. Mary Bredin's parish, which had antiently the same owners as the adjoining one of the Dunjeon, having been the property of the Chiches, and afterwards of the Hales's, one of whom, sir James Hales, knt. in the 15th year of K. James I., appears to have suffered a recovery of this manor, with those of Nackington, Staplegate, and the Dunjeon, all within the liberties of the city of Canterbury.

After this and some intermediate owners, it became vested in later times in the family of Toker, of whom Mr. Stephen Toker resided here, and at his death was succeeded in it by his son John, who married Bennet Blaxland, by whom he had five sons and one daughter; of the former, Mr. Stephen Toker, the eldest, possessed this estate, but dying unmarried, he devised it by his last will to his nephew Edward, eldest son of his fourth brother, by Margaret Ford his wife (v). He afterwards resided here, and in 1795, conveyed this estate, consisting of a mansion with outbuildings, gardens, and about 300 acres of land, to Mr. Allen Grebell, who now possesses it and resides here.

(v) See more of the Tokers, under Ospringe, vol. ii. of the Hist. of Kent, p. 799 (r).

THE MANOR OF CALDICOT, lying within the borough of St. Martin, eastward from Longport, was part of the possessions of the see of Canterbury; as such it appears to be described as follows in the general survey of Domesday, taken in the 15th year of the Conqueror's reign, under the title of the lands of the archbishop.

Ipse Archieps ten villa quæ vocat. S. Martin & ptin ad Estursete. & jacet in ipso bund. & defd. se p. uno solin & dim. Tra. e In dno sunt. 2 car. & 36. bord.

Ad hanc tra ptin. 7. burgenses in Cantuaris. reddtes 8. sol. & 4. den. Ibi 5. mold. de 20. sol. & parva silva.

In hac villa ten Radulf. dim. solin de Archiepo. & ibi bt 2. car. in dno & 5. villos cu. 3. bord. hntes 2. car. & dimid. T. R. E. valeb. 7. lib. dim solin. S. Mart. & aliud dim solin val. semp. 4. lib.

Which is: The Archbishop himself holds the ville, which is called St. Martin, and it belongs to Estursete, and lies in that hundred, and was taxed at one suling and an half. The arable land is In demesne there are 2 carucates and 36 borderers.

To this land there belong 7 burgesses in Canterbury, paying 8 shillings and 4 pence. There are 5 mills of 20 shillings and a small wood.

In this ville Ralph holds half a suling of the Archbishop, and there he has 2 carucates in demesne and 5 villeins, with 3 borderers having 2 carucates and an half. In the time of K. Edward the Confessor, it was worth 7 pounds; half a suling of St. Martin and another half suling, were always worth 4 pounds.

Soon after which this manor appears to have been appropriated to the use of the Archbishop's table, in which state it continued till the time of Archbishop Walter Reynolds, who, in the year 1326, at the earnest desire of the monks, with both the King's and Pope's consent, gave it, together with the wood of Thorholt adjoining, then of the value of 10l. to the Prior and Convent, to be for ever appropriated to their use, inasmuch as it was a convenient place for them to retire to, and recreate themselves when they were wearied out and tired, it being at no great distance from their monastery (w). After which there were continued disputes between the prior and convent, and the mayor and citizens, concerning their respective rights and jurisdictions within this manor, all which were compromised and settled, among other matters of dispute of the like sort between them in and about the city, by an indenture in the 7th year of K. Henry VII; in which, as to this manor, there was a clause, saving to the prior and convent all liberties, privileges

(w) Battely's Somner, p. 131. Tanner's Mon. p. 200. See Rot. Esch 19 Edw. III. n. 81.

and

MANORS WITHIN THE CITY LIBERTY.

and franchises, which they had or ought to have within the borowe of St. Martyn's and the manor of Calcott, not hurting the mayor and commonalty of a fine or rent of xii pence yearly of the said borowe, nor of any liberty, franchise or privilege they had or ought to have in it, or any parcel of the same, to which the prior and convent had title. To explain which, a schedule was annexed to the indenture, for the clause being so general, and not rehearsing what the manor was in quantity, nor the privileges and liberties specially, there might arise in time to come, for want of such plain declaration, great variance between them again; therefore it was agreed, that the manor of Calcott contained in demesne land 318 acres, within the following metes and boundes, that is to say, from the hed of the cundy of the prior and convent toward the north, between the pond of the cundy towards the east, and the bank and dyke of the Barton felde on the west, unto a lane which extended westward from the second pond there, unto the waye leading unto Fordwich, the which waye so extended north-east directly unto a croft, called Gallowbell croft, dividing Byshopsfylde, Shepescroft, and two crofts, pertaining unto the monastery of St. Austyn's, on the north-west, and the lands pertaining unto the manor of Calcott, called Hedgecroft, Bryan's croft, and Turrott downe on the south-east part, and so from the said way to the hed of Gallowbill croft towards the south-east, unto the end of the hedges of Gallowbill croft, and so by the side of that croft eastward unto a croft called Hentye, and so from the south side of Gallowbill croft, southward, unto the street called Fordwyche waye, and so over that street southward, and so down by the hedge of a croft of the prior and convent, called Toult croft, eastward, by the said street unto a croft called Borstall, and so from the street by the said croft southward to Toult wood, and the wood of the heirs of Thomas Soutbland, and so including Toult wood as marks and bounds appeared, by the lands of the manor called the Mote, and of the prior and convent on the east part and Toult leaze on the west part and so southward by the lands of Risbard Luckyn, sometime John Barlowe, unto the hyght streete leading from Canterbury to Sandwyche, and so there westward by the said street leading from Sandwyche unto Mellefylde, and so northward along by Mellefylde unto the north corner of it, sometye leading from Fordwyche to Canterbury, and unto Toult downe and so southward by the oulde street to the hedd of Culverhouse croft, and so from oulde streete westward, by the hedd of Culverhouse croft unto Caponlongate, and so from thence unto the Oulde sole adjoining unto the fylde of the monastery of St. Austyn, called Pauverage and unto St. Martyn's peices, and so from

St. Martyn's peice westward under the hedge of Pauverage aforesaid, unto the end of that land, and so directly from thence by a right line unto the aforesaid cundy of Christ church—but the said manor extended further more in three pieces of land lying at St. Martyn's, not being within the boundes aforesaid, whereof the limits and boundes follow hereafter; first, one of the said three pieces of land is called Bromedowne, and unto 17 acres of land lying between the lands of the monastery of St. Austyn's, called North-home towards the west, and the said lands called Pauveredge towards the north and east, and the second peice was called Printkelbam, and contained three acres and lay adjoining unto the lands of Bromedowne towards the east, and the land called North-home toward the south, and to the lands of the prior and convent called Barton felde towards the west and north; and the third peice contained three yards and lay between the church-yard of St. Martyn's and the parsonage of the same church toward the west, and the lands called Bromedowne toward the north, and the lands of Thomas Gylbert toward the east and south; within which limits and boundes and burrowe before rehearsed, the said prior and convent and their successors without interruption or let of the Mayor and Commonaltie, their heirs and successors, should have the view of frank pledge with all the articles and things thereto pertaining, weiffe and straves, and also the said prior and convent and their successors, should have of their men and tenants, and in all their fee within the said lymits and burrowe infangtheff, outfangtheff, warren, goods, weyfed goods of condemned men for felony, and fugitives for felony, goods of outlawed men and goods of felons themselves, the year and day and waste, deodands and all manner of amerceaments of their men and tenants in all the kynges court, the yffues and fines before the Mayor and Commonaltie in the court of the said cyttie excepted; and it was furthermore agreed between the said parties, that the prior and convent should have unto them and their successors for ever, the like libertie, privilege and franchise in a parcel of land of the said prior and convent, called Polder's leaze, lying within the parish of St. Martyn, and in all such lands and tenements as be holden of the said prior and convent, as by reason of the said manor as they by this agreement should have within the limits, boundes and burrowe aforesaid; and the prior and convent and their successors should not let, ne interrupt the mayor and commonaltie, their heirs ne successors, of any libertie, franchise or privilege, within the lymits and boundes of the said manor and burrowe; ne in the said other lands and tenements, other than be contained in the articles before rehearsed; and to this inden-

ture

MANORS WITHIN THE CITY LIBERTY.

ture both parties interchangeably set their respective seals.

After this the manor of Caldicot, or Calcot as it was more usually called, continued in the possession of the prior and convent till the final dissolution of that monastery in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, when it came into the king's hands, who settled it, among other premises, by his dotation charter in his 33d year, on his new founded Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, part of whose possessions it still continues.

A Court Baron is held for this manor.

THE MANOR OF THE MOAT, alias WYKE, is situated likewise within the bounds of the city's liberty, in the parish of St. Martin, at the eastern extremity of it. The mansion of it stood almost close to the north side of the road leading to Littleborne, in the midst of a park, the wall of which bounded to it, but the house has been pulled down some few years ago.

This manor was formerly possessed by a family which gave name to it, one of whom, Stephen de Wyke, possessed it in the 20th year of K. Henry III, as appears by Testa de Nevill, and he paid respective aid for it at the marriage of Isabel, that prince's sister (x); but it appears by the book of aid, anno 20 Edward III, for making the Black Prince a knight, that this family had then but a small interest in it, for it is there entered, that the heirs of John Tancrey, Stephen de Wyke (y), and Richard Betts, for the heirs of John Taylor, paid respective aid for it, as the 4th part of a knight's fee, which the heirs of John Taylor before held at Wike of the Archbishop. But before the beginning of K. Richard II.'s reign, their concern here was no more, for by the court rolls of it of that time, sir Richard de

(x) Anno 1353, being the 6th year of King Edward III, Richard Oxenden, then Prior of Christ Church, the sec of Canterbury being vacant, granted a licence to Stephen de Wyke's chaplain, to celebrate divine service in his chapel at Wyke, within the parish of St. Martin; the instrument of which is printed in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. ix^a.

(y) I find this name of Wyke appropriated to other premises likewise hereabouts, for in one of the registers of St. Augustine's Abbey, cart. 387, sir William de Breus, knt. is said to give his messuage called Wike, in St. Paul's, Canterbury, to Walter de Sepely, his chaplain, to serve in his chapel of Lokedale, T. Edw. I. See vol. iii. of Hist. of Kent, p. 666.

(z) Richard de Hoo, of Canterbury, otherwise called Richard de Hoo, Chivaler, of the co. of Kent, attended with many others, John of Gaunt, King of Castile, &c. in his voyage to Spain, anno 9 Richard II. Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 490.

(a) Phillipott, p. 94.

(b) From Henry Finch, of Netherfield above-mentioned, and Alice Belknap his wife, descended sir Thomas Finch, knt. who married Katherine, eldest daughter and coheir of sir Thomas Moyle, of Eastwell, knt. by whom he had three sons and a daughter, of whom the eldest was sir Moyle

Hoo (z) and Richard Skippe, were become possessed of it, and they about the latter end of that reign conveyed it by deed to Simon Spencer, who a few years afterwards alienated it to John Standford, gent. and he suddenly afterwards passed it away to Richard Smith, with whom it had not long continued before it was conveyed to John Eastfield, esq; son of sir William Eastfield, K. B. and Lord Mayor of London in the year 1438, anno 16 Henry VI, from whom it passed by sale to William Rogers, and he by fine levied in the 33d year of that reign conveyed it to Philip Belknap, of Canterbury, esq; Mayor of that city in the year 1458, and Sheriff of the county of Kent in the 34th year of K. Henry VI.'s reign, at which time he resided and kept his sbrievalty here, at his mansion called the Moat. He married Elizabeth, daughter of John Woodhouse, esq; by whom he had issue Alice, his only daughter and heir, who married Henry Finch, of Netherfield, esq; the father of sir William Finch, Banneret, who in his mother's right was invested in the possession of this manor of the Moat, and from him it devolved by successive right to the Right Hon. John, Lord Finch, created Baron of Fordwich by K. Charles I, (a) when he was Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England (b). He resided at this seat, of which he died possessed, with the Heath or Hoath farm adjoining, in 1661, without male issue, and the title became extinct (c). He devised this manor and estate to his kinsman He-neage, Earl of Winchelsea (d), whose grandson Charles, Earl of Winchelsea, alienated it to William, Lord Cowper, afterwards created Earl Cowper and Viscount Fordwich (e), whose grandson George, Earl Cowper, pulled down the antient mansion of the Wike, for many years past known by the name of the Moat House. He died in Italy in Finch, knt. and baronet, of Eastwell; and the second son was sir Henry Finch, knt. and serjeant at law to King James I, whose son and heir was John Finch, the possessor of this manor, as above-mentioned, who was knighted on Jan. 23, 1639, being then chief justice of the common pleas, and keeper of the great seal, and the year after was created Lord Finch, Baron of Fordwich, in Kent, anno 16 Charles I. He left an only daughter, married to sir George Radcliffe, of the Privy Council of Ireland. See more of the ancestors of this family, under Eastwell, vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 198.

(c) See an account of him, vol. iii. of the Hist. of Kent, p. 603, 606. See Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 499.

(d) His will, proved May 29, 1661, is in Pierog. off. Canterbury.

(e) His son William, Earl Cowper, resided much at this seat, and intended to have rebuilt it for his constant residence; but the corporation of Canterbury, within the bounds of which it was situated, insisting that he should employ no other workmen in it, but such as were freemen of the city, his lordship, who saw the absurdity of this restraint, was so offended at it, that he gave over the design, and made Hertfordshire the object of his future improvements, and never resided here for any time afterwards.

MANORS—RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS.

1789, and was succeeded by the Right Honorable George Augustus, Earl Cowper, who is the present owner of this estate, but it has long since lost even the name of having been a manor (ee).

On Thursday evening, Dec. 27, 1770, by the moon light, was shot by Mr. John Austen, of St. Martin's hill, in the Mote copse near Trendley, within the park wall, a large yellow Eagle, of the same kind as that in the Tower. It measured from wing to wing when expanded, seven feet and two inches, and from the head to the tail three feet and one inch.

THE MANOR OF LITTLE BARTON, called in the survey of Domesday, NORTHWOOD, lies about a quarter of a mile northward from the suburbs of Northgate, on the north side of the public highway leading to the Isle of Thanet, and almost adjoining to the river Stour.

It formerly was part of the possessions of the priory of Christ church, to which it was given by the name of Bartun, in the year 832, and it continued part of them at the taking of the survey of Domesday, in which it is thus entered, under the general title of their lands.

In Cantuarie Hund.

Ipsa Archieps ten Nordeude. p uno solin se defd. Tra. e. . . . In dnio 1. car & dim. & 7. villi cu 26. bord. bnt. 2. Car. Huic m ptinent in civitate Cantuarua. 100. burgses. 3. min. reddentes 8. lib. & 4. sol. Ibi. 8. mold de. 71. sol. & 24. ac psi. silva 30. porc. In tot val & valuit. 17. lib.

Which is: The Archbishop himself holds Nordeude. It was taxed at one suling, the arable land is In demesne there is 1 carucate and an half and 7 villeins, with 26 borderers, having 2 carucates. To this manor belong in the city of Canterbury 100 burgesses, 3 lefs, paying 8 pounds and 4 shillings. There are 8 mills of 71 shillings, and 24 acres of meadow; wood for the pannage of 30 hogs. In the whole it is worth and was worth 17 pounds.

It was known by the name of the manor of Barton, in the 10th year of K. Edward II, for in that year the Prior of Christ church obtained a grant of the liberty of free warren, for this their manor of Berton near Canterbury, among others belonging to them (f).

The park, in which the house stood, has been since converted into a farm; it is walled entirely round. See an account of this family in vol. iii. of the Hist. of Kent, p. 561, 603, 606.

(ee) In 1735, an act passed for settling the estate of William, late Earl Cowper, deceased; among which was this farm called the Mote Farm, with lands, &c. in the parishes of St. Martin in Canterbury, Littleborne and Wickham, to the uses and purposes therein mentioned. See Swaycliff, vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 561.

(f) Cart. 10 Ed. II, n. 60. See Tan. Mon. p. 201.

(g) This district is bounded on the south-east side by the eastern branch of the river Stour. On the south and west by a large dike adjoining to Griffin-lane; and on the north by a dike, that separates it from the gardens belonging to

The manor of Little Barton, of which mention has already been made above, was late the property of Mr. Allen Grebell, who some years ago built here, almost adjoining the east side of the mills, a handsome house, in which he resided for several years, till his removal to Stuppington, near this city.

This estate pays a yearly fee farm rent of 2l. 13s. 4½d.

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS
WITHIN THE CITY LIBERTY.

OF the many religious foundations, hospitals, and alms-houses which were within the circuit of this city and its suburbs, most of them were exempt from the liberty of it; these therefore will be treated of hereafter, among those districts which are esteemed to be exempt from it, and to lie within the county at large. Those now held to be within the jurisdiction of the city, are as follows:

THE GREY FRIARS

was a convent here, which stood at a small distance southward from St. Peter's-street, of which there are remaining only some walls and ruined arches; the scite of it is very low and damp, among the meads and garden-grounds (g), having two entrances or alleys leading to it, where formerly stood two gates; one called Northgate, in St. Peter's-street, facing that of the Black Friars; the other was called Eastgate, to which the entrance was by a bridge at the end of Lamb-lane, in Stour-street.

These friars, called at first Franciscans, from the name of their founder St. Francis (b), the head of whom was called the Guardian, were afterwards likewise called Grey Friars, from their habit, which, in imitation of their founder, was a long grey coat down to their heels, with a cowl or hood (i), and a cord or rope about their loins, instead of a girdle. They were likewise called Minorites, from their being the lowest and most humble of all orders; and sometimes Observants, from their being more observant and strict to the rules of their order, than a more negligent and loose sort of them. They were styled Mendicants, the houses on the south side of St. Peter's-street.

(b) St. Francis was of Apisum, in the Duchy of Spoleto, in Italy, where he founded this order of friars, as some say in 1206, and as others in 1209, and it was afterwards confirmed from time to time by the Popes, and by some of them in general councils. K. Hen. III. was so great a favourer of their order that the convents, as well as the numbers of these friars, increased to a wonderful degree throughout the whole kingdom. See Collect. Anglo-Minorit. passim.

(i) The friars cowl was in shape of a bag, narrowing to a point at the end. It was fastened to the upper part of the coat behind, and hung down on the back at hand ready to pull over their head, or to fill with victuals, or what else they received in alms, as they begged from house to house.

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS.

from their professing wilful poverty, subsisting chiefly upon alms, which they used to ask and receive from door to door; by which friars were distinguished from monks, who kept at home within their convents, and lived in common upon their own substance. These Franciscans came first into England in K. Henry III.'s reign, about the year 1224 (k). How they were afterwards entertained, or accommodated with a home, is told by the author of the Antiquities of the English Franciscans, entitled Collectanea Anglo-Minoritica; by this we learn, that these friars, viz. Aghellus de Pisa and his companions, on their coming to Canterbury in the year 1220, were charitably harboured and entertained for two days by the Benedictine monks, in the priory of the Holy Trinity, after which they were taken in at the Poor Priests Hospital, where however they continued no longer than whilst a part of the school belonging to it was fitted up for their reception. Here some of them staid to build their first convent; for which purpose Alexander, the Provost or Master of the Hospital, gave them a spot of ground set out with a convenient house, and a decent chapel or oratory, which by his care and charitable endeavours were there built for them, and here he placed these friars, and this was their first convent for this order in England, and was held in the name of the corporation or community of Canterbury, for their use, they being by their profession incapable of possessing it as their own right.

Here they lived for some time, increasing in numbers and popularity, having gained the esteem of many persons of dignity and consequence; among whom were Archbishop Stephen Langton, his brother the Archdeacon, and Henry de Sandwich, who became their first great benefactors and patrons. Among others who admired them for their sanctity, was a devout and worthy citizen, of a flourishing family then in this city, as they were afterwards in the county, one John Digg or Diggs, then an Alderman of it (l), into whose favour they had so far insinu-

(k) Thus, according to our English historians, the writers of this order place their coming as early as the year 1219, or in the several years following to 1224. See Tan. Mon. p. 221. Fox, vol. i, p. 224. Aghellus de Pisa, Friar of this order, with his companions (nine in number) arriving at Dover, whither they were transported at the charge of the monks of Feschamp, in Normandy, were afterwards graciously received by the King, principally on account of a letter, which they brought with them from Pope Honorius III, and were placed by the King at Canterbury. See Col. Anglo-Minorit. Stow says the same, and that five of them being priests, remained at Canterbury. Survey, B. iii, p. 129.

(l) Twelve years before this, anno 1258, and five years after, anno 1273, he was one of the bailiffs of this city. A descendant of his, John Diggs, possessed lands in Westgate so late afterwards as the 4th year of King Henry ated themselves, that he purchased for them a piece of ground, lying between the two streams of the river Stour here, then called the Island of Binnewyth (m), and shortly afterwards translated them thither (n).

The friars being seated here, and there being many houses and much ground belonging to the priory of Christ church, within the precinct of their convent, they laid claim to them, and they made themselves absolute possessors of the whole of this island; and the Monks seeing the common people much inclined to favour them, and not willing to incur theirs, lest it might bring with it the people's displeasure too, made a virtue of a necessity, and after the friars had been no small time in possession, without payment of any of the accustomed rents and services, which the former tenants of the monks were bound to pay; they, by a composition made, as they phrased it, thro' pure motives of charity, not only remitted to them all arrears past and for the future, an abatement of the one half of the rent; on condition of their paying in full of all services and demands, for the time to come, iii shillings yearly rent (o). How this might stand with their founder's rule, and their own vow, appears strange; for by their rule set forth articulately in Matthew Paris, they were clearly debarred, not only by their vow of poverty, but by express precept besides, from all property, either house, or ground, or any kind of substance, but as pilgrims and strangers in this world, serving the Lord in poverty and humility, by going and begging alms with confidence, &c.

These Franciscans or Minorite friars, had granted to them by several popes, many privileges, immunities, and indulgences (p); besides their exemption and immunities from episcopal and other ordinary jurisdiction; in the matter of tythes they were privileged from the payment of any, either of their house, orchard, or garden, and the nutriment, i. e. the herbage or agistment of their cattle, as in the decretals; in matters of burial, they had liberam sepulturam, i. e.

VII, as did James Diggs, esq; anno 18 Henry VIII Apograph, Surrenden Library.

(m) This island gave name to a family of citizens who sometime resided here, and were from thence called the With's, or more frequently the Binnwith's, of whom one John Binnewith, about the beginning of King Henry III.'s reign, was a benefactor to Harbledowne hospital; the legend round his seal to the deed of his gift to it, being SIGILL. IOHANNIS. DE. WITH. and one Arnold Binnewith was anno 1221 and again in 1227, one of the Bailiffs of this city; but the friars having gotten possession, both the island and her former inhabitants soon lost their former names. Battely's Somner, p. 55.

(n) See Wood's Antiq. Oxon. l. i. p. 68. Weever, p. 134.

(o) This composition is dated anno 1294, the 22d of King Edward I. It is printed in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. xvi. (p) See Rotul. 48 Hen. III in Turri Lond.

might

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS.

might chuse wheresoever any of them would his place of burial, paying the fourth-part of the obventions to the parish church; and as a thing of which multitudes were ambitious, numbers of persons of high degree and estimation were desirous of living, dying, and being interred in the habit of these Franciscans, believing that whosoever was buried among them, especially if in the holy and virtuous habit of a poor friar, he should not be only happily secured from evil spirits, which might otherwise disturb the quiet of his grave, but assure to himself an entrance into the kingdom of heaven (q).

There is but little further to be mentioned concerning these friars and their house, only that in K. Henry VII.'s reign, this convent became one of those which were called Observants, being those who put themselves under the more strict discipline of this order, in opposition to whom, the others gained the name of Conventuals, who continued under the former relaxed state of the rules of their primitive institution, tho' still in general they were called Franciscan friars (r).

This house was dissolved in the 25th year of K. Henry VIII, anno 1534, those of this order being the first that were suppressed by him (s). Hugh Rich was the last principal of this house.

As to the benefactions to this convent, it should be observed, that whoever died of any worth always remembered these friars in their wills, and in general gave liberally both to their church and convent; among others, it appears by the wills in the Prerog. office in Canterbury, that William Woodland, of Holy Cross parish, anno 1450, by his will gave 5l. towards the reparation of their church, and five marcs besides to the repairing of their dormitory or dortor; and Hamon Beale, a citizen, and in his time mayor of Canterbury, chusing this church for his place of burial, as Isabel his first wife had done before, gave 40s. in money to this convent.

There were several persons of worth and estimation, as well of the clergy as laity, buried in the church of this convent, which is so entirely destroyed, that the scite of it can only be conjectured. Weever, however, has preserved some few of them. These were, Bartholomew, Lord Badlesmere, steward to K. Edward II.'s household, who was hanged for rebellion in 1321, at the gallows at the Blean, near this city; sir Giles Badlesmere, knt. his son; Elizabeth Domina de Chilbam; sir William Mansfon, knt. sir Roger Mansfon, his brother; sir Thomas Brockbull, knt. and the Lady Joan, his wife; sir Thomas Brockbull, knt. their son, and Lady Editba, his wife; sir Fulk Peyforer, knt. sir Thomas Drayner, knt. Lady Alice de Marinis; Lady Candlin; sir Alan Pennington, of the co. Lancaster, knt. who died in this city; Lady Audry de Valence; sir William Trussell; sir William Balyol; sir Bartholomew Alburnham, knt. and sir John Mottenden, knt. a friar of this house (t); and by the register in the Preg. office above-mentioned, it appears, that Hamon Beal, who is mentioned above as a benefactor to this convent, and who was Mayor of this city in 1464, by his will anno 1492, appointed to be buried in the middle of the nave of the church of these Friars Minors, and to have a tomb three feet high, at his executors charges, set over him and Elizabeth his wife (u); that Thomas Barton, of Northgate, in Canterbury, by his will 1476, ordered to be buried in the church of this house, and that a little square stone of marble set in the wall over the place where he should be buried, with images and figures of brass of his father, mother, himself, wives and children, &c. Margaret Cberche, of St. Alpbage, in the nave of the church before the high cross in 1486—John Forde, of St. George's, in the north part of the church, near the altar of St. Clement there, in 1487—and that Richard Martyn, Bishop in the Universal church, by his will in 1502, ordered to be buried in the church of these Grey Friars, to whom he devised his crismatory of silver, and parcel thereof gilt, and the case thereto belonging, and mentions the chapel of St. Saviour, in this church.—Elizabeth Master was buried in the church of these Friars in 1522; Anne Culpeper, widow of Harry Agar, esq; by her will anno 1532, ordered to be buried, if she died at Canterbury, at the Friars Observants there.

Weever says, that this priory was valued at that time at 39l. 12s. 8½d. per ann. but there is no valuation of it either in Dugdale or Speed (v).

The scite of this priory was granted anno 31 Henry VIII, to Thomas Spilman (w), who levied

(q) Gregory the IXth coming to the papacy, was the first Pope that put this habit on, who frequently wore it, and willed to be buried in it. Pope Martin the IVth was likewise buried in it, as were several kings, and among them, James and Alphonfus, Kings of Arragon, and many other eminent men beside, whose names the reader may see in Landmeter, de Veteri Clericorum & Monachorum Habita, pt. ii, c. 7, p. 123; and in the Beehive of the Romish church, lib. i, c. ii, John Peckham, Archbishop of Canterbury in King Edward I.'s time, was before a friar of this order and the Provincial of it.

(r) See Rapin, vol. i, p. 691.

(t) Hugh Rich, the Guardian, or which is all one, the Warden, as the statute anno 25 Henry VIII, ch. 12, styles him, of this Convent, was one of those who conspired and suffered with Elizabeth Barton, the Holy Maid of Kent. Battely's Somner, p. 57.

(u) Weever, p. 239, by mistake, says they were buried in the White Friars; but that is plainly an error.

(v) Somner, p. 182.

(w) The above valuation must be merely the scite, buildings and ground within the inclosure belonging to it; for these friars had no temporal estate.

(w) Prima ps. orig. rot. 139.

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS.

a fine of it in the 35th year of that reign, and and then alienated it to Erasmus Finch and his wife (x), after which, I find it next in the name of Lovelace, for it appears by the escheat rolls, that William Lovelace died possessed of it in the 25th year of Q. Eliz. holding it in capite, in which year his son, of the same name, had livery of it (y); sir William Lovelace, knt. resided here and died possessed of it in 1629 (z); since which it has been for many years in the possession of the family of Hartcup; the present possessor of it being Thomas Hartcup, esq;

A fee farm rent of 4s. is yearly paid to the crown for this estate, by the name of the Little Friars, in Canterbury.

THE BLACK FRIARS.

THE CONVENT or priory of which, for the principal member of it was styled Prior, was situated on the opposite or north side of St. Peter's-street, at a small distance from it; great part of it is still remaining, being two sides of the quadrangle, together with the church on the other or western side of the river, the whole being now formed into houses and tenements, the property of different persons (a). This convent had an approach to it by three gates; one, and that the most private, opening before the street by St. Alphage church; a second by the Waterlock, and the third in St. Peter's street, being the principal one, built not long before the 30th year of K. Edward III; it was beautifully built of squared flint, ornamented with carved stone works, and over the middle was a niche, in which stood the figure of their patron saint; but this gate has been pulled down within these few years. These Black Friars, so called, on account of their habit, which was a black cope and cowl, over a white coat, were likewise called Dominicans and black preaching Friars; the former, from their order having been founded by St. Dominick, the latter, because they were the only preachers of all the friars. They came hither and settled in this city in the year 1217, being the 1st of K.

(x) Viz. the scite of the late house of the Friar's Minors within the city of Canterbury, and two messuages, two orchards, two gardens, three acres of land, five acres of meadow and four acres of pasture, with its appurtenances in the parishes of St. Peter, St. Mildred, and St. Margaret, in the said city, held in capite. Rot. Esch. ejus an.

(y) Viz. of the scite of le Grave Friars, in the city of Canterbury, and six acres of meadow in the parish of St. Peter, in the same city. Rot. Esch. ejus an.

(z) He was buried at Bethersden. His will is in Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(a) This district is bounded on the east by King's-street, from the corner of Browning's-lane, to the Waterlock, near Orange-street; on the south east, by the passage which leads from the said Waterlock, across the river towards St. Peter's-street; on the west, by St. Peter's church-yard; and on the north-west, by the garden of S. E. Brydges, esq; and the Henry III.'s reign, seven years before the Franciscans (b). It is said, that the King at their first coming, received them kindly, as did Stephen Langton, then Archbishop, and placed them at Canterbury, where it seems he built this convent for them, which was the first in the kingdom of that kind (c). Like the Franciscans, they and the monks of Christ church, in the same year with the other, anno 1294, came to a composition about several houses and lands lying within their precinct (d).

In the year 1394, the Friars Preachers celebrated their principal chapter at Canterbury, on the day of the Assumption, in their church here (e). There were from time to time numbers of persons of note buried in the church of this Priory. Weever (f) has preserved the memories of only these few of them, viz. Robert and Bennet Browne, esqrs. Bennet, daughter of John Shelving, and wife of sir Edmund Haute, knt. (afterwards remarried to sir William Wendall, knt.) with her first husband here, in K. Edward III.'s reign.

The following burials are from the wills in the Prerogative Office, in Canterbury; Thomas Peny, of St. Alphage, by his will anno 1481, ordered to be buried in the cloister of this house, near to William his son; John Sloden, brother of the hospital of St. John Baptist, by his will, the same year, ordered to be buried in the cemetery of these friars. John Nashe, of St. Alphage, by his will anno 1486, was buried in the church. Anne Baker, of St. Alphage, in the church here, in 1464. Thomas Baker, of the same, in 1473. John Whittill, in the cemetery, in 1479. Alice Elleryngton, in 1512, in the church yard.

John Whytlok, of St. Alphage, gave by his will in 1503, to the brothered of Seynt Nicholas, holden in the Blake Frerys, yn Canterbury, the picb clarkys to bere him to church, viz. St. Alphage, and that he be set yn their bed-roll 10s.

This house of the Black Friars was dissolved in the 27th year of K. Henry VIII (g), and the lower end of St. Peter's-lane, to Abbot's Mill. It contains about five acres and seven perches.

(b) Knyghton's Col. 2422. See Rotul. Pat. anno 28 Edw. I.—12 Edw. II, m. 3.—

(c) Thus Mr. Somner. Others write, that they came into England in the year 1221, and had their first house at Oxford that year. See Præf. Tanner's Monasticon.

(d) Battely's Somner, p. 57, & seq.

(e) See the particulars of it in Thorn, col. 2197.

(f) Page 238.

(g) The coat of arms belonging to this priory, was—Azure, on a plain cross argent, the letters i in old English character, (being the arms of the priory of Christ Church;) between four mitres labelled or.

Mr. Burton, in his Leicestershire, p. 153, says, that the arms of monasteries were generally the same with those of their founders, or very near them, of which the above is scite of it seems to have remained in the crown for some years (b). But in 1557 it appears that the scite and adjoining appurtenances belonging to it, were sold by the crown to John Anthony (i). It was afterwards granted to Thomas Wiseman, and then, anno 2 Eliz. to John Harrington (k), after which it appears that this precinct and scite, with the gardens and lands belonging to it, came into the possession of William Hovenden, of Christ church, in Canterbury, who died in 1587, and by his will gave this estate to Robert Hovenden, his eldest son; in tail male, remainder to Christopher and George, his sons (l). It afterwards came into the possession of Peter de la Pierre, alias Peters, who was originally of Flanders, and coming to settle in England, had purchased it in 1658, and was, with his eldest son John, naturalized by act of parliament after the restoration. He was by profession a surgeon, and resided here till his death, which happened in 1668; by his will he gave this estate among his five children (m); but the principal part, being the house in which he resided, with the orchard, garden and inclosed slips of ground on each side of his house porch, being a part likewise of the Black Friars; he gave to his eldest son John de la Pierre, alias Peter, who after his father's death resided here, and being a physician, practised with much reputation. He died in 1689 (n), and his will gave this his mansion here with its appurtenances in some measure an instance. The Prior and Convent of Christ Church, at the first settlement of these Friars in Canterbury, were the patrons and protectors of them. But it may be necessary to observe that, as the religious acknowledged sometimes a second or a third founder, so they seem to have often changed their arms accordingly, and sometimes have put the arms of both founders upon their seals, and to have impaled them for their arms. The latter arms of some of these houses being manifestly different from those which they first used.

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS.

(b) King Edward VI. in his 1st year demised to John Bateburst, the scite of this priory, with all houses, buildings, lands, gardens, orchards and hereditaments belonging to it, then in his occupation, with two gardens belonging to the priory, to hold for 21 years, at the yearly rent of 40s. for the former premises, and of 4s. 8d. for the latter; and again in his 5th year, he demised the same for the like term and rent, to Thomas Bateburst. Inrolments, Augtn. off.

(i) Harleian Mss. No. 606-86—No. 607-272.

(k) Tan. Mon. p. 221. (l) Wills, Prerog. off. Cant.

(m) He left three sons and two daughters; to the eldest son John, he gave his house, in which he resided, with its appurtenances as above-mentioned. To Peter, 2d son, two houses in the same Friars; and to Michael, 3d son, a house of the Black Friars, and all the houses, with their appurtenances in the isle, and a piece of ground called the Whiting Ground, parcel of the same. To his daughter Susan, afterwards married to Edward Crayford, the upper and lower part of the house, or great hall, with its appurtenances, and a house and garden, parcel of the same; and to his daughter Mary, in like manner, certain houses in the Black Friars, with their gardens and appurtenances, to his eldest son Peter de la Pierre, alias Peters, who resided here, and practised likewise as a physician; he used the name of Peters only, and died possessed of this estate in 1697, as did his widow in 1722, and were both buried in St. Alpbage church, in this city (o). They left issue only two daughters, Anne and Elizabeth; to the former of whom he devised this mansion, but she dying unmarried, and before the age of 21, her surviving sister Elizabeth Peters became her heir, and in 1722 carried it in marriage to Thomas Barrett, of Lee, esq; whose second wife she was, and he died possessed of it in 1757; upon which it descended to his only daughter and heir, by her, Elizabeth, who entitled her husband, the Rev. Wm Dejovas Byrbe, to the possession of it; he died at his house in the Black Friars, et. 62, on March 7, 1792 (p), leaving Elizabeth his wife surviving, who is now again in her own right possessed of this estate, and resides on it (q).

In 1685, a suit for substraction of tythes, against the proprietor of these precincts was instituted in the Court of Exchequer, by John Stocker, rector of St. Alpbage; but after a full hearing, the exemption was allowed.

In the eastern suburb of the city, about a quarter of a mile from the antient Riding-gate, almost adjoining to the Watling-street way, stood

THE NUNNERY OF ST. SEPULCHRE, some ruins of which are still visible; it was and the house and garden formerly called the church-yard of the said Friars. Peter the 2d son above-mentioned, was of Dover, surgeon, and by Margaret his wife, left an only daughter Margaret, to whom he gave his four messuages or tenements, with their ground and appurtenances, in the Black Friars, one of which was called Weaver's-hall. Margaret, the daughter, married Alexander Kenton, by whom he had a daughter Anne, who married Isaac Warner. Michael, the 3d son, left his share of the Friars in 1708, to his two sons, Peter and Michael. Edward Crayford above-mentioned, who married Susan de la Pierre, or Peters, died in 1713, and gave to his daughter Susan, the messuage in which Humphry Brailesford lived, with the stable, garden and appurtenances, and also the great hall, then used for a Meeting-house by the Anabaptists, and three other messuages, with the gardens and appurtenances; all which are situated in the Black Friars.

(n) He left issue four sons and two daughters, viz. Peter, of the Black Friars, M. D. John-Charles, of Birchington, surgeon, who died in 1712; and Lewis, of Canterbury, gent. Susan, the eldest daughter, married Gilbert Junes; and Jane the youngest, married Peter Gleane.

(o) See more of the Peters's, vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 749, and vol. iv, under Grove in Woodnesborough. Their several wills are in the Prerog. off. Cant. They bore for their arms—Or, three roses gules.

(p) He lies buried in Kingston church, where there is a small monument erected to his memory. He left an only daughter Elizabeth surviving, who married in 1786, Samuel Egerton Brydges, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-law, but now of Denton, near Barham, esq.

(q) See more of the Byrbes, and their arms, in vol. iii. of the Hist. of Kent, p. 749.

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS.

founded by Archbishop Anselm, about the year 1100 (r), and although situated within the boundaries of the fee of the Abbey of St. Augustine, and on the soil belonging to the Archbishopric, yet is held to be within the liberties of the city and county of Canterbury (s).

The district of it was once a parish, having its own parochial church within it, and is now esteemed extraparochial from any other parish. This nunnery was founded for a convent of Black Benedictine Nuns, and was under the immediate protection and patronage of the Archbishop, being built contiguous to the church dedicated to the Holy Sepulchre, from whence this house assumed its name.

Among other benefactors, who out of their charity endowed this house with revenues, was William Calvel, a citizen of Canterbury, of whose name there was antiently a flourishing family in this city, of which he had the reputation of being the chief (t); and after K. Richard I. had given the wood of Blean to the Prior and Convent of Christ church, Walter, the prior of it, and his convent, granted to this nunnery, as much wood as one horse, going twice a day, could fetch thence, where the church wood-reeves should appoint; but there being much uncertainty in this grant, the nuns in 1270 releasing it, procured in lieu and by way of exchange for it, a certain portion of the above-mentioned wood to be assigned and made over to them (u), which wood retains from these nuns the name of Minchen wood at this time (v).

In 1184, the church or parsonage of St. Edmund, of Ridingate, was appropriated to this nunnery, by the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, as will be further mentioned below; which church was afterwards in 1349, with the consent of the nuns, being patrons, united by the then Commissary of Canterbury to the church of St. Mary Bredin; as will be further noticed, under that church.

In the year 1227, Julian, then priores of this convent, granted to the hospital of Eastbridge, one-fourth part of an acre of land (w), and in 1224 the nuns engaged not to appropriate to themselves any lands or rents in any of the possessions of the Abbat of St. Augustine, without the special licence of the convent (x); and K. Hen.

III, in his 40th year, made a grant of divers liberties to the priores of this convent (y).

Time and the indulgence of superiors bringing their corruptions, nuns became in process of time, not such recluses as their order required. Whence, as well upon the command of Pope Boniface the VIIIth, by his letters to Archbishop Winchelsea, and his suffragans, as by his decretal, concerning the confining of nuns to their cloysters, the Archbishop, in the year 1305, inclosed these nuns of St. Sepulchre, according to that constitution (z). In 1365, Cicily Thornford, priores, resigned her office into the hands of the Archbishop, who upon this sent his letters to the Prior of Christ church, to constitute another in her room; the prior accordingly proceeded to the nunnery, where calling the nuns together, he elected, confirmed and installed Joan Cberison, a sister of the house, priores.

Archbishop Morton, by his last will, dated in 1500, settled and assigned for ever, lands lying within the park at Maidstone, called the Mote, and a mill near it, for the yearly payment of eight marcs to this nunnery, to find a priest to celebrate mass in it, in the chantry founded by John Bourn, rector of Frakenham, in the time of Archbishop Witlesley (a).

The temporalities of this nunnery, in the taxation made in 1292, were thus rated. In Canterbury, Thanington, Hackington, Bishopborne, and Little Hardres, 12l. 10s. 5d. and in an old custom of the manor of Northfleet, these nuns had a pension from it of 13s. 4d. yearly, and the like from that of Bixley, of 5s. (b)

In K. Henry VIII.'s reign, this nunnery was esteemed a corporation, consisting of a priores and five black veiled nuns, whose habit was a black coat, cloak, coul, and veil; and it had a seal and all other requisites of a compleat nunnery; in which state it remained till it at length tasted of the common calamity and ruin, which befell the other religious foundations of the like sort throughout the kingdom, being suppressed in the 27th year of K. Henry VIII.'s reign, by the act of that year, which gave to the King all such religious houses as had not 200l. a year clear yearly income (c); at which time its revenues were estimated at 38l. 19s. 7d. per ann. according to (r) See Dugd. Mon. tom. i, p. 545.

(s) This precinct is bounded on the east by the Bricklyn field, and the manor of Barton; on the south by the old Walling-street road; on the west by the road which leads from Oatenhill towards that road, and on the north by the lands belonging to the late Doge's chantry.

(t) See Leland's Col. vol. i, p. 89. Dugd. Mon. vol. i, p. 545.

(u) Libr. in Archiv. Christi, Cant.

(v) Battely's Somner, p. 36, 37.

(w) Lib. Hosp. de Eastbridge.

(x) Thorn, in decim. Script.

(y) Pat. in Turri London.

(z) See Walsingham Hist. Ang. de anno 28 Edw. I, 1301. Lib. Eccl. Christi, Cant. Battely's Somner, p. 36.

(a) Liber olim penes. Thomas Hales, bart. Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 174.

(b) Archiv. Eccl. Christi, Cant.

(c) The last Priores of this house, Dame Philippa Johanna, surrendered this nunnery in the 29th year of King Henry VIII, and had on Dec. 2, that year, by the name of Philippa John, an annuity of 100s. granted to her for life. She lies buried in the north aisle of St. George's church, which in her will, she calls the chapel of the Blessed Mary.

Speed;

RELIGIOUS FOUNDATIONS.

Speed; and according to Dugdale, 2*gl.* 12*s.* 5½*d.* the latter being probably the clear value (d). It seems, says Somner, that the parish church of St. Sepulchre was torn down in the same fall with the nunnery; for however mention may be found both of the parish church and church-yard before, yet, since the suppression, the place of the two latter is unknown.

There is very little remaining of the ruins of this nunnery; a high arched gateway of stone (e), sufficient for a carriage to pass, this being the common usual entrance to it, with a building of flint, containing some few small rooms on the north side of it, and part of a small court within it, of the same appearance, are all that are left of it. Within these few years, some of the walls of the precincts of it were standing on the north side of the Watling-street way, which have been lately removed.

In the ground behind, or eastward of these ruins, several Roman urns have been dug up; which shews it was once used as a place of burial.

In this nunnery Elizabeth Barton, more vulgarly known by the name of the Holy Maid of Kent, the great impostor of her time, was a veiled nun and voteres, in K. Henry VIII.'s reign; who being tutored by the monks and other papalists, pretended to Divine Inspiration, and spread her prophecies about, of the destruction of those who were going forward with the reformation, and of the King, if he went on in his divorce and second marriage; for this, she and her accomplices (d) See Tan. Mon. p. 211.

(e) Mr. Somner, p. 38, thinks that this stone gate-way might have been the western door of the church, as he collected from this boundary.—Of the land which lieth over against the church of the Holy Sepulchre, nigh a street by which they go towards Dudendale, on the south side of the said church. But this boundary by no means points this out, nor is either the gate-way at all proportionable to the entrance into a church, or the space in the court eastward of it of sufficient size to have contained a church, though of the smallest sort.

(f) Those executed were, Elizabeth Barton; Edward Bocking, a monk and doctor of divinity; Richard Dering, a monk, and cellarer of Christ Church; Richard Masters, Parson of Aldington; Richard Risby; Henry Gold, bachelor of divinity; and Hugh Rich, a friar and guardian of the order of Franciscans. The others were John Adestone, and Thomas Abell, priests; Edward Thwaites, gent. Thomas Lawrence, register; Hawkhurst, a monk; and Thomas Gold, together with John Fisher, Bishop of Rocheſter; who were found guilty of misprison and concealment of treason, in aiding and encouraging her in her pretended prophecies.

All our Chroniclers have told this story at large; Hall, Stow, Hollinshed and Speed, have dwelt long on it, and the statute of King Henry VIII. gives many particulars relating to the story of it.

(g) Augtn. office, Deeds of Purchase and Exchange, Kent, box A. 21. See Tan. Mon. p. 211. The King had before this, on May 21, in his 29th year, demised to were attainted by act of parliament, anno 25 Hen. VIII, seven of whom suffered death with her, being executed at Tyburn for treason; and six others of them were punished with fine and imprisonment (f).

After the dissolution of this priory, in the 29th year of K. Henry VIII, the scite of it and all manors, lands, pensions and emoluments thereto belonging (except the advowsons of churches and patronages not particularly mentioned) and subject to the payment of 40*s.* to the Archbishop and of 3*l.* to the vicar of St. Mary Bredin, were granted by the King, ult. Nov. in his 29th year, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, in lieu of other lands (g), who, by deed, dated 7th Dec. anno 37 Henry VIII, confirmed by the chapter, the 22d of that month following, reconveyed to the King the scite of this priory, the rectories of St. Sepulchre and St. Maries, and all estate there late belonging to the priory (b). After which the King, in the 38th year of his reign, granted the scite of this late dissolved priory, and all the possessions belonging to it, spirituals as well as temporals, of whatsoever sort, and wheresoever situated within the realm, to James Hales, of the Dunjeon, esq; to hold in capite (i); he was afterwards knighted, and one of the Justices of the Common Pleas. He died in 1555, anno 1 and 2 Philip and Mary, possessed of this estate, leaving Humphry Hales, esq; his son and heir (k). He died in the 10th year of Q. Elizabeth, and was succeeded in it by his son Sir James Hales, of the Dunjeon, knt. (l), and he sold it in the Thomas Barkenal, of the city of Canterbury, the scite of this priory, with the houses, edifices, orchards, lands, &c. within the precincts of it, with several pieces of land amounting together as therein described, to 70 acres of land, and the tythes of all the premises, and also one annual rent of 10*6s.* and 8*d.* issuing out of the manor de le Mote, near Maidstone, and the rectories of the parish churches of St. Sepulchre and St. Mary Bredin, to this priory appropriated, together with all tythes, oblations, profits and emoluments belonging to them, and all other manors, lands, tenements and hereditaments whatsoever, to the said priory belonging, in the city of Canterbury or its suburbs, or in Thanington, Natyndon, Bridge, Blean, Solton, Ash, Goodneston, Cockerling, Kingston, Bilsington, Dover, Hougham, Willeborough, Whitſtapple, Fengeſbam, and Marge B. Mariæ; excepting all edifices and buildings within the scite and precinct of the priory, which the King had already ordered to be pulled down and removed, and except all wards, marriages, advowsons and patronages of churches, &c. trees, woods, and underwoods; to hold for 21 years, at the yearly rent of 39*l.* 3*s.* 3*d.* Inrolments, Augtn. office.

(b) Ibid. deeds marked Kent, box 75.

(i) Rot. Esch. ejus an. pt. 5. See Tan. Mon. p. 211.

(k) He had livery that year of this estate, consisting of the scite of this dissolved priory, 350 acres of arable, 12 acres of marsh, and 80 acres of wood, in a number of different parishes in this county. See Rot. Esch. ejus an.

(l) Rot. Esch. ejus an.

HOSPITALS AND ALMSHOUSES.

14th year of Q. Elizabeth, to sir Thomas Kempe, knt (m).

In K. James I.'s reign, one third part of it was in possession of sir Christopher Mann, of Canterbury, knt. who, by fine levied, conveyed it to sir James Hales, knt. in exchange for the manor of Bonnington, and other lands (n).

Sir Edward Master, of Canterbury, knt. appears to have died possessed of this estate in 1690, for he gave by his will (o), to his grandson Harcourt, son of his son Giles Master, his messuages, with the barns, stables, malthouse, &c. commonly called the Nunnery Houses, alias St. Sepulchre's, and 10 acres of land adjoining, in St. Mary Bredin's parish.

After the family of Master was become extinct here, it passed, after some intermediate owners, into the name of Francis, one of whom, Mr. Thomas Francis, of the Lime Kilns, near this place, died possessed of it, leaving his widow surviving, and several children; she afterwards married Mr. William Slodden, of Canterbury, gent. whom she likewise survived, and is at present in the possession of this estate (p).

In April 1760, as some workmen were digging in the orchard belonging to Mr. Basil Harrison, near St. Sepulchre's remains, for brick-earth, at the depth of about five feet, they found a leaden coffin much decayed, containing the skull and bones of a woman, as supposed; the coffin was six feet long, the head of it 15 inches over, 12 deep, and the foot nine inches over. It lay upon some small tiles, and had some marks on them, though so much defaced as not to be understood; under the middle of the coffin was a stone 16 inches by 14, with a hole in the centre, four inches square, full of small coal and dust. Some time before there was found in digging near the same place, an urn, 14 inches deep and 12 inches over, which was likewise full of small coal and ashes. Many more human bones have at times been dug up in the same orchard; which from this, is supposed to have been the burying-place of the nunnery near adjoining to it.

HOSPITALS AND ALMSHOUSES.

COGAN'S HOSPITAL is situated on the south

(m) Viz. the whole scite of the Priory of St. Sepulchre, in Canterbury, and 10 messuages, and 100 acres of land in the parishes of St. Mary, St. Sepulchre, St. Mildred, St. Mary Northgate, St. Andrew, St. George, and St. Martin, in the city of Canterbury. Rot, Esch. pt. 2.

(n) This is mentioned in sir Christopher Mann's will, proved 1630. (o) In Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(p) Though the scite of this nunnery is in the hands of the heirs of Mr. Francis, yet it appears by the see farm rolls, that the whole of the premises are not in their possession. The see farm rents paid at present are: Mr. Tho. Francis's heirs for part of St. Sepulchre's priory, in Canterbury, 1s. 6d. The same for part of ditto, 1l. 3s. 6d. Lord side of St. Peter's street, almost opposite to the late gate of the Black Friars. It was founded by Mr. John Cogan, of this city, who by his will proved in 1657 (q), gave his mansion, wherein he then dwelt in St. Peter's, Canterbury, together with his moiety of the manor of Littleborne, late the Archbishop's, which he had purchased, and such lands and tenements, which should be purchased with his assets, after his debts and legacies were first paid, to his executors, to be settled on feoffees; his house, for the habitation, and the lands and tenements, for the support and maintenance of six poor widows of Clergymen, who had lived in Canterbury, in the co. of Kent, or in London, to be nominated and approved of by the Mayor of Canterbury, and five senior Aldermen, or the greatest part of them, according to the regulations mentioned in the will; and he orders in it, that the sixth woman placed in the house, should be some poor widow or maid, who should attend on the other five widows, and keep clean the house, &c. for them; but his circumstances being perplexed and involved in difficulties, and the manor of Littleborne, for there seems to have been no other lands purchased, being again resumed by the Archbishop at the King's restoration, this house was left alone without any endowment whatever for this charitable purpose; this was, however, in some measure compensated by future benefactors; the first of whom, Mr. Barling, by his will proved in 1670, devised one annuity or yearly rent of 3l. to be paid to the Mayor and Chamberlain of this city for ever, on September 1, yearly; one moiety to the six poor widows inhabiting this house, and the other moiety towards the repair of the house and premises, as the Mayor and six widows judged fit, the same to be paid out of his lands in Dering Marsh for ever, with power of distraint, &c. Another and more efficient benefactor was Dr. John Aucher, one of the Prebendaries of the cathedral, who vested an estate in trustees, for the payment of 10 pounds each, to six clergymen's widows, with a preference to those in Cogan's hospital (r).

After which, Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, by her will in 1694, among other charitable legacies, gave out of her personal estate, four pounds per Dudley and Ward for part of ditto, 2s. 2d. Mr. John Toker for part of ditto, 3s. 6d. Mr. William Hammond for part of ditto, 2s. 2d. Mrs. Cumberland for part of ditto, 2s. 2d.

(q) He was manager under the committee appointed for the sequestration of the estates of the Royalists in these parts of Kent, and of course benefitted himself by some part of the plunder; but he seems to have died in very perplexed circumstances, insomuch that his two executors refused acting as such, and at last his sister's daughter Thomasine Harford, alias Amery, had letters of administration granted to her. He was buried in St. Peter's church.

(r) Dr. Aucher's deed is dated anno 8 W. III. The first

HOSPITALS AND ALMSHOUSES.

ann. to be paid to Cogan's hospital, to be equally shared and divided among such poor as should inhabit and reside in, and receive the alms of the hospital, by equal half-yearly payments, without any deduction, on any pretence whatsoever. For this purpose, and to pay her other charitable legacies, she devised to the Mayor and Commonalty of the city of Canterbury, her leasehold estate, called Callis Grange, in Thanet, in trust, to perform the purposes of her will (s). In addition to these gifts, the poor in Cogan's hospital are entitled to receive from Mrs. Master's legacy, who died in 1716, yearly, the sixth-part of the interest due from 1631. 16s. 3d. old south sea annuities, being the sum vested in the Mayor and Commonalty of this city, in trust, for the several hospitals in Canterbury; of which a full account will be given below, among the several benefactions made to this city. Besides which, the society established for the relief of the widows and orphans of the clergy, within this diocese, usually add 10 guineas more yearly to each of these widows; which, with what little matter they have of their own, make a comfortable retreat for them. But there being no sufficient fund left for the repair of the house, it became ruinous and would soon have been uninhabitable, had not the benevolence of private persons, by a handsome subscription, afforded a sufficient sum to put it in complete and substantial repair (t).

THE BRIDEWELL, or Poor Priests Hospital, situated not far from the south side of the High-street, in Lamb-lane, was antiently founded by Simon Langton, the Archbishop's brother, Archdeacon of Canterbury, about the year 1240, anno 24 Henry III (u), not, it seems, altogether of himself, but assisted with the alms and charity of several devout and pious benefactors. Shortly after the hospital's foundation, the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, at the instance of the founder abovementioned, granted to it the rectory or church of St. Mary, of Stodmarsh, of their patronage, with the profits of four acres of land (v). To this there was afterwards added, in the year first trustees were, Thomas Belke, George Thorpe, Herbert Randolph, John Coppin and Paul Lukin. The revenues consist of the rent of a messuage or farm-house, with 55 acres of land in Worde, and 32 acres of marshland in Bur-marsh and Eastchurch, in Romney Marsh.

(s) The will is printed in Lewis's Thanet, col. No. xlvii, p. 93.

(t) The subscription was made in 1772, and amounted to 343l. 13s. 0d. the charge of the repairs amounting within a trifle to that sum.

(u) Thorn, col. 1892, says it was made in the year 1243. See Tan. Mon. p. 223.

(v) In these grants the master or chief of the hospital, is called the Syndic.

(w) Thorn, col. 1920. In the interim of this hospital's foundation, and the appropriation of St. Margaret's church

1271, being the last of Henry III, another patronage or rectory, viz. that of the church of St. Margaret, in Canterbury; being given to it in pure and perpetual alms, by the same Abbat and Convent, patrons of it, at the instance of Hugh Mortimer, then Archdeacon of Canterbury (w); besides these, they had nothing else, excepting the small island, behind their house, made use of by them as a garden, and an old mill belonging to, and near it, called Medmilne, but long since forgotten, which before had been, as well as the house itself in which they dwelt, the property of one Lambin, a Fleming (x).

This hospital appears to have been founded for a place of succour and relief for poor priests, i. e. chaplains, curates and other like unbeneficed clerks; chiefly those probably, who either by age or other infirmities, were disabled from the performance any longer of their holy functions abroad in the world, and were therefore here accommodated with a chapel, adjoining their habitation, in which they might perform divine offices, and celebrate for their benefactors; it was, as well as the hospital, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, the first fabric of which, was not, as now, built of stone, one Thomas Wyke, syndic or master of it, having first in 1373 new built it of such materials.

This hospital escaped the general dissolution, and remained un-suppressed in Q. Mary's reign, in the second year of which, anno 1554, Hugh Barret was presented by the patron, Nicholas Harpsfield, Archdeacon of Canterbury, to the mastership of this hospital, together with the rectory of St. Margaret's, in this city, appropriated to it, and then vacant by the death of Nicholas Langdon, the last incumbent there (y); in which state this hospital remained till the 17th year of Q. Elizabeth's reign, on the 14th of May, in which year it was surrendered up to the queen, by Blaze Winter, the master of it, Edmund Freake, Bishop of Rochester, then Archdeacon of Canterbury; the patron and the Archbishop, Matthew Parker the ordinary, together with all its lands, revenues, to it, the Rector and Master of the Hospital, with the consent and confirmation of the Abbat and the Archdeacon, came to a composition about the tythes, and other ecclesiastical rights and duties of this hospital. Battely's Somner, p. 73, appendix xxv^b. The grants of these two churches to the hospital, are printed in ibid. appendix, No. xxiii, xxiv.

(x) Battely's Somner, p. 71.

(y) He was nominated by the patron, and afterwards presented to the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, ordinaries, or keepers of the spiritualities in the then vacancy of the see, who gave the person presented, institution with letters mandatory to the Archdeacon or his official, for his induction. See Battely's Somner, p. 73. See the note of the instrument of institution and induction, in ibid. appendix, No. xxiv^b.

HOSPITALS AND ALMSHOUSES.

ly: then, advowsons of churches, and all appurtenances belonging to it (z); (which surrender was confirmed by the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, under their common seal, two days afterwards, and inrolled in chancery); upon which the queen, upon the humble petition of the Mayor and Commonalty of the city of Canterbury, the same having been surrendered up to her, upon that intent and confidence, granted this hospital, with all its possessions and appurtenances, as above-mentioned, to them and their successors, by letters patent, under her great seal, dated July 5, in the above year, to hold, as of her manor of East Greenwich, in free socage, by fealty only, and not in capite, for the benefit and use of the poor of this city for ever (a). This grant appears to have been obtained by John Rose, then Mayor, and Richard Gaunt, then Sheriff of this city, at whose suit and solicitation, at the expence of 50*l.* it was procured; which sum was afterwards reimbursed to them by a general tax on the community of the city (b).

From the above time this hospital has belonged to the city; it was for many years afterwards called the Bridewell hospital, from its being made use of as the Bridewell, or House of Correction of the city, and from there being kept and maintained in it a number of Bridewell, or Blue Coat Boys, poor townsmen's children; but in the year 1729, an act of parliament having passed for the establishment of a General Workhouse, for the better relief and employment of the poor of this city, this house or hospital was allotted for this purpose; since which, it has been usually known by the name of the City Workhouse, being likewise the city bridewell and house of correction, and as such it is used at this time. The yearly rents of this hospital, amounting to 1*l.* 1*s.* 4½*d.* are payable to the Archbishop (d).

MAYNARD'S HOSPITAL, or Spital, is situated in a small lane leading eastward out of Stour-

(z) In the antient taxation of the revenues of this hospital, the spiritualities of it being the above two churches, were valued at 5*l.* and the temporals of it at 6*l.* total 11*l.* Thorn, col. 2168.

(a) See Battely's Somner, p. 19 & seq. The Queen's grant is printed in ibid. appendix, No. xxv. The grant is remaining in the chest in the city chamber.

(b) This is indorsed on the back of the grant.

(d) In 1643 they were paid to the Archbishop from this hospital, by the hands of the Mayor and Commonalty of Canterbury.

(e) The inscription, transcribed underneath, sets forth, that it was founded in the year 1317, in the 12th year of King Edward II. Mr. Somner says, he had good inducement to avouch, that it was founded in King Henry II.'s reign, and however the inscription put up in after-times, varies from this, his assertion seems to be nearest the truth. See Tan. Mon. p. 229.

(f) He was so called in antient writings, to distinguish him from another family of the same name here, who were dyers; which addition continued to his posterity, who street, being corruptly so called, for the founder of it was one Mayner, a citizen of Canterbury, dwelling in St. Mildred's parish, in K. Henry II.'s days (e). He was a man, it seems, of noted wealth, and was, as such, surnamed Mayner le Rich (f).

It was, together with the small chapel belonging to it, dedicated to the Virgin Mary; the endowment or possessions of it are vested in the prior, brothers and sisters, for the time being, in whose names all the leases are granted. The mayor and commonalty appoint the master, who is generally the senior alderman; the present master being Alderman James Simmons. The mayor and aldermen are the visitors. The former of whom have the appointment from time to time of the brothers and sisters, who must be upwards of 50 years of age, of good and honest conversation, unmarried, and have resided for the preceding seven years within the liberties of the city (g).

William Benet, of Canterbury, by his will in 1464, ordered that his executors should give the place that Roger Goldfinch dwelled in, and the 2*s.* quit-rent of his tenement, held by John White, to the brethren and sisters of Maynard's Spital, and their successors for evermore.

By the survey taken by the commissioners in K. Henry VIII.'s time, upon the statute of the 37th year of his reign, cap. 4, it appears, that the revenues of it then consisted of small tenements, and strips of garden ground in this city, which were of the yearly value of 3*l.* 7*s.* besides nine acres of wood, called Brotherbedd's wood, and a close of land adjoining to it, called Brotherbedd's close, in the parish of Fordwich.

In the year 1600, the income of these estates were yearly, 20*l.* 4*s.* This house and chapel were repaired in 1617, by Joseph Colf, esq; alderman of this city, and master of this hospital (h).

But the buildings of this hospital and chapel, having been blown down by the great storm, were known by it, and so called after him, viz. Erbistam and Winulphus his sons, and afterwards Maynerus, probably his grandson, of which the two former lived in the reigns of King Richard I. and King John; and in the 1st of King John, Winulphus was one of the Præpositi of the city; and Maynerus in the 13th year of King Henry III, was Governor of the city.

(g) In the year 1666, the records of this hospital being sent to London on account of a law suit then depending, were destroyed in the great fire, except the old leases since Queen Elizabeth's time.

(h) Though this hospital and chapel, as will be further mentioned below, have been since rebuilt, yet the old inscription at the reparation of it in 1617 has been replaced on it, which is as follows: "This house and chapel was founded by John Maynard for three brothers and four sisters, anno domini 1317, in the 12th year of King Edward II. This work was finished and the chapel was repaired in the year of our Lord 1617, by Joseph Colf, esq; alderman of the city of Canterbury, and M. of this hospital."

which

HOSPITALS AND ALMSHOUSES.

which happened on Nov. 3, 1703, were all rebuilt from the foundation with brick, by the charitable contribution of the Mayor, Aldermen and other worthy benefactors, in the year 1708, John Beaumont, esq; being then Mayor; the work being first principally promoted and carried on by the application of Alderman Oughton, chamberlain, and Alderman Wilson, master of this hospital; the contributions amounting to upwards of 300*l.* and the expences of erecting the buildings to 299*l.* and upwards, as appears by the Chamberlain's accounts.

This hospital has a common seal, on which is the representation of the Virgin Mary, with a child in her arms.

COTTON'S HOSPITAL adjoins to that last mentioned, and indeed is the same as part of it, being three several rooms or lodgings erected by Leonard Cotton, of St. Margaret's, gent. Alderman and Mayor of this city in 1580, who by his last will in 1605, gave three places in Maynard's Spital, to one poor widower and two poor widows, such as should be inhabiting in the parish of St. Margaret, if there should be any dwelling there capable thereof. In default, to such poor of St. Mildred's; in default of which, then to any such as should dwell in the city and county of Canterbury, the persons to be of good, honest behaviour, and of the age of 50 years at least, to be nominated and placed here by the Mayor of Canterbury; which poor persons should receive to their own uses, from the hands of the Mayor for ever, all the profits and revenues of such lands and tenements as he bequeathed for their maintenance and relief; for which purpose he gave to certain trustees therein named, his tenement with its appurtenances, in which strangers then dwelt, in St. Margaret's parish, and on the north side of his then dwelling-house, and another tenement in that parish; and another with an orchard and its appurtenances in Winchepe, in St. Mildred's parish in this city; and he willed that the above-mentioned feoffees, the survivors of them, or their heirs, should, within six months after his death, enfeoff the Mayor and Commonalty of the said city, or such other persons as they should think fit, most agreeable to the laws of the realm in these premises, for the use, maintenance and relief of the said three persons, to be placed in the said rooms in the hospital, or spital called Maynard's Spital, as aforesaid, for ever. And he ordered, that if the Mayor or any other persons who should have any interest in the premises, should at any time dispose of or convert the same, or any part thereof, or the produce thereof, to any other benefit or purpose than as aforesaid, or should at any time put in any other poor persons than as above described, or in any shape should abuse this gift, contrary to the meaning of his will, that from thenceforth this his bequest concerning the said poor should be void and determine; and that such persons and their heirs which should be seized of the premises to the aforesaid uses, should from thenceforth stand and be seized thereof, to the use of the prior and brethren and sisters of St. John's Hospital, without Northgate, and their successors for ever, for their relief and comfort (i).

The estates given by the testator are leased out, and produce a clear income of 5*l.* os. od. per quarter, or 20*l.* os. od. per annum; which money is paid to the three poor, of Cotton's foundation, quarterly (k).

Though there are here two hospitals, having separate endowments, yet being one connected building, and under the same patronage of the mayor of this city, for the time being, who with the aldermen are visitors, and one of the latter always master of them, it may be looked upon as one and the same hospital.

The modern benefactions to it are—The yearly portion it is entitled to receive from Mrs. Master's legacy, who died in 1716, being the 6th part of the interest due yearly from 163*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* old south sea annuities; which sum is vested in the Mayor and Commonalty of this city, in trust, for this and the other hospitals in Canterbury; of which a further account may be seen below; among the benefactions made to this city.

Mr. Matthew Browne, in 1717, gave by his will 10*s.* a year, issuing out of two houses in the Borough of Staplegate, to be paid yearly to the brothers and sisters of it on the 12th day of March for ever; with power of distress, &c.

Thomas Hanson, of Crosby-square, London, esq; by his will proved in 1770, gave 500*l.* to this hospital; which sum is now vested in three per cent. bank annuities, and produces a dividend of 17*l.* 10*s.* per annum; and there being no fund for repairs, Mr. William Rigden, of Canterbury, brewer, in 1771, by bargain and sale inrolled in chancery, vested in trustees a messuage and smith's forge, in Hawk's-lane, in this city, to apply the rents to the reparations of Maynard's and Cotton's hospitals, the surplus to be divided among the brothers and sisters of Maynard's seven houses, resident constantly there, in such manner as the trustees should think fit. The annual rents of Maynard's hospital, including seven pounds paid by the city, amounted in 1712 to 36*l.* 12*s.* and so on nearly the same to 1770; and that they were not more, was owing to the abuses

(i) This will was proved in 1605, in the Prerog. off. Cant. and there was a definitive sentence, by which the Commissary confirmed it in the same year.

(k) The three houses founded by Cotton, are those next to Castle-street, at the east end of the hospital.

HOSPITALS AND ALMSHOUSES.

committed in the management of them; but this being looked into by the Mayor and Commonalty, and a better regulation of them taking place, they amounted in 1785 to 46l. 4s. od. and are now, in 1796, increased to 69l. 10s. od; besides which the present master has received by finer 35l. which, with the annual 6l. 6s. od. left by Mr. Rigden, has been expended in a complete and thorough repair of the chapel and ten houses; and there is no doubt, but if the Mayor and Commonalty continue to patronize and protect the poor of these hospitals, with the same attention, their revenues will be still further improved.

ST. JAMES'S, otherwise ST. JACOB'S HOSPITAL, at the further end of Wincheap, is situated in the parish of Tbanington; but being without the bound of the city, which run close along the walls of it, the reader will find an account of it in the description of that parish, in the third volume of the History of Kent.

BOYS'S HOSPITAL, named by the founder Jesus Hospital, is situated in the suburbs of Northgate, at the further end of the street leading to the Isle of Thanet; it was founded and endowed by the will of sr John Boys, of St. Gregories, knt. proved in the year 1612, whose monument yet remains on the north side of the nave of the cathedral, for eight poor men and four women, at the least, besides the warden or principal of the hospital, who has a house to himself, and the rest of the members have each apartments; which form the three inner sides of a square, a dwarf wall and the gate forming the side next the road. The warden and brothers are bound by the founder's statutes, to attend divine service in their habits, which are long black cloth gowns, every Sunday morning, at the cathedral. The number of brethren and sisters are to be increased to a number not exceeding 20; of which, one-third only are to be women, as the revenues of the hospital should allow. The poor in it to be first such of the parish of Northgate as had lived there seven years, not under 55 years of age, and not worth 10l.—then of St. Dunstan's; then of St. Paul's, and in default of any such there, then of St. Mildred's, or any other part of the city—The warden to have yearly 10l. every brother and sister 4l. and the clavinger 40s. more, and to have black gowns once in three or four years. The warden or schoolmaster to teach freely to read and write, and cast accounts, 20 boys above 12 years old, of the parishes of Northgate, St. Paul's, St. Mildred's, St. Albage, Westgate, or St. Dunstan's, to be presented by the churchwardens and overseers; and in default, by the Mayor of Canterbury, to be taught for two years, and then six of them to be put out apprentices, or to some mechanical art, and afterwards to be accounted out-brothers of the hospital, and to have certain cloathing, and yearly payments out of the revenues of it. The founder, in his book of ordinances of this hospital, directed, that the warden shall be appointed by such of the surname of the founder, who should be owners of the seat of Betteshanger, and in default of such, by those of the same name, who should be owners of the seat of Fredville, both at that time in the possession of this name and family; and in default of such, by the Dean of Canterbury, for the time being; if no Dean, by the Mayor of the city; and if any of these fail to nominate in the space of two months, then, after proper notification, by the Archdeacon of the diocese. The above-mentioned two seats having for a long time been in the possession of other names and families, the Deans of Canterbury have for many successions been masters here, and as such, on any vacancy of the brethren or sisters places, have nominated two persons, statutablely qualified, to the Mayor, who chooses one of them, to supply the vacancy; but of these, the poorest, most impotent, and most honest and best behaved, is, by the founder's order, to have the preference.

Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, widow, by her will proved 1694, gave, out of her personal estate, 5l. a year to Jesus hospital, to be paid and divided among the poor of it, in like manner as her gift to Cogan's hospital abovementioned; and this hospital receives likewise from Mrs. Master's legacy, who died in 1716, yearly, the sixth part of the interest due from 1631. 16s. 3d. old south-sea annuities, being the sum vested in the Mayor and Commonalty of this city, in trust, for the several hospitals in Canterbury; of which, a full account may be found below, among the several charitable benefactions to this city.

The Mayor, Dean and Archdeacon, or the greater part of them, are appointed visitors, who are to audit and examine the accounts of the hospital, on Dec. 12, yearly, and receive 10s. for their pains.

It appears by the account taken of the estates of it, at the death of the founder in 1612, that the annual rents were then 96l. 12s. in possession, and on his wife's death, 38l. more, and two quarters of wheat. The rents reserved on the present leases granted by the hospital in 1777, were only 117l. 12s. per annum; 11. 19s. towards their annual feast on St. John's day at Christmas; an annuity of 5l. out of Asb marshes, and another of 6l. 13s. 4d. out of land in Sbolden, and the quitrents of the manor of Whitacre, 3l. 17s. nett per annum, making all together 133l. 2s. 4d. being the whole of the then annual income of it, exclusive of the fines on leases (1). But since this, the revenues having still considerably further increased, by the particular attention

(1) See the abstract of statutes and state of this hospital printed by the Rev. Mr. Duncombe, in 1777.

HOSPITALS AND ALMSHOUSES.

paid to the letting of the estates belonging to the charity, as it appeared in 1787, at the annual visitation of the Mayor and Dean of Canterbury, visitors, attended by several of the aldermen. They then ordered, in consequence of this, agreeable to the direction of the founder, that one more brother should be added to the former number, and that six more poor boys should be taught to read, write and cast accounts, and that three of these boys should every year be put out apprentices, with a premium of eight pounds, and that 40s. should be laid out in cloathing every such boy, at the time of his being put out; and they increased the salaries of the former brothers and sisters 10s. per quarter each.

Robert Grove, of Hythe, gent. by his will anno 1608, gave to sir John Boys, knt. 20l. for the use of Jesus hospital, to be bestowed in land or such like, for that use for ever (m).

BRIDGER'S ALMSHOUSES are situated in the suburbs between St. George's-gate and Riding-gate, on the road opposite the city ditch; they were built in 1778 by the Rev. Mr. Byrch, executor, and in pursuance of the will of Mrs. Sarah Bridger, of this city, for six poor women, the nomination of whom is vested in his heirs.

HARRIS'S ALMSHOUSES, so called from the founder of them, are situate on the left hand or eastern side of Wincheap, and were built in the year 1726, for the habitations of five poor families, by Thomas Harris, of Canterbury, hopt-merchant; who, in his will proved June 8, that year (n), mentions, that as to all his five messuages and dwellings, with the gardens and appurtenances in Wincheap, in St. Mildred's, which he designed for almshouses, and in which he had placed five old men and their wives, to live there during their lives, rent free; he gave and devised the same to trustees, nine in number, viz. Isaac Terry, Stephen Durant, John Austen, of St. Martin's, gents. William Nebersole, of St. Margaret's, gent. Henry Terry, of St. Mary Magdalen, mercer, and his grandsons Edward Charlton, Thomas, John and Richard Barbam, to them and their heirs for ever, upon trust, as such old persons as were or should be placed therein by him, during his life, should continue therein during their lives, rent free, they respectively keeping the dwellings and appurtenances, and the fences of the gardens and back-sides thereto belonging, in good repair; and in trust that as they or any of them should die, the said trustees, or the survivors of them, or the major part of them, or the heirs of such survivor, should from time to time place in the same dwellings as they should become respectively vacant, such other poor persons as they or the major part of them should think proper, there to remain and dwell for their lives, rent free, and so from time to time for ever; and be ordered that two of the said tenements or dwellings should be from time to time filled up with two poor persons of the parish of St. Mary Magdalen, and the other two with two poor persons of the parish of St. Mildred; each to be of the age of 50 years at the least, and who did not receive alms of any of the said parishes; and further, for the better support and maintenance of the said poor persons dwelling therein, he gave and devised to the said trustees and their heirs for ever, all his messuage or farm, called Marley, in Kingston, then let at 21l. per ann. and all that share of wood, containing about three yards of land belonging to the said farm, for them to dispose and pay the clear yearly rents and profits, all charges being deducted therefrom, among the said poor people dwelling in the same, to be divided equally, share and share alike, among them, and so to continue among them for ever; and when the said trustees should be reduced to three, be ordered, that they should convey the said messuages or almshouses, farm, lands and tenements, unto a competent number of new trustees, and their heirs; and so in like manner from time to time, for ever.

CHARITIES.

Sir Thomas White, Alderman of London, gave 100l. to be paid by the Chamberlain of the city of Bristol, at Merchant-Taylor's Hall in London, once in 24 years, for the profit of young beginners, freemen and traders in this city, to be lent out to them in parcels of 25l. to each poor freeman, for the space of 10 years, without interest; they to give their own bond, and such other security as the Court of Burghmote should think proper and sufficient; to repay the same, after that time was expired, into the chamber of the city, to be lent out again for the same intent and purpose (o).

Mr. John Whitfield, of this city, gent. by his will in 1687, gave 150l. to be lent out to poor tradesmen, freemen of this city, in parcels of 25l.

of payment, and non-delivery of any of the sums to any of the cities, or towns therein mentioned, contrary to the tenor thereof; all which forfeitures were to be to the use of the President and Scholars of St. John's, provided if the rents decayed, so that the payments could not be made, the same should cease, till that decay ceased, and in such case the President and Fellows of St. John's, should pay out of the forfeitures to them happening, such money as the city of Bristol neglected to pay to the towns to which the

(m) Will, in Prerog. off. Cant.

(n) In Prerog. off. Cant.

(o) There was an indenture made between the Mayor, &c. of Bristol, the President and College of St. John in Oxford, of the said sir Thomas White's foundation, and the Warden of the Merchant Taylor's Company in London, dated July 1, 1560, for the better performance of this gift, in common with the like to the Merchant Taylor's Company, and other towns, with a forfeiture upon Bristol, in default each, gratis, for five years and no longer, nor twice to any one man; upon such security as the House of Burghmote should order, direct and approve of, and so to be lent out and taken for ever; and when any sum of 25*l.* should be repaid into the Chamberlain's hands, he should give notice at the next Court of Burghmote after the payment, that it might be known for some other freeman to petition for it; and the Chamberlain or Town Clerk should give a note to the executors of the testator, or inform them how, and to whom the money was lent; and that once in three or four years, such persons as should have the freehold and inheritance of the messuage, wherein he then lived, might have liberty to inspect the securities given for the said money, and once in five years might present two persons, such as he or they should think fit, to have two of the said 25*l.* gratis, giving security as aforesaid, and to be in like manner approved (p).

CHARITIES.

Thomas Paramore, of Monkton, esq.; by his will in 1637, gave his messuage called the Flower-de-luce, in Canterbury, to his nephew Thomas Paramore, on condition, that he payed to the Mayor and Aldermen of the same 100*l.* the same to be lent to five poor shopkeepers of this city, freely; and he willed, that whosoever should borrow the sum of 20*l.* parcel of the same, should put in good security to the mayor and aldermen, to repay the same at the end of five years; which said poor shopkeepers should, with the consent of the mayor and aldermen, be appointed by his said nephew during his life, and afterwards by the house of burghmote, or the major part of them for ever (q).

Mr. Edward Johnson, ribbon-weaver, by his last will in 1677, gave 100*l.* to be disposed of at the discretion of the mayor and chamberlain, for the time being, and the two eldest aldermen, to 10 poor tradesmen, freemen of this city; that is to say, to each 10*l.* a piece, to remain in their default was made—that two persons should be chosen, one by the Mayor of Bristol, and the other by the President and Fellows aforesaid, who should make a survey every 20 years, whether the money was employed in the towns, according to the devise; which if neglected, the town which made default, should lose the benefit of any further receipt, and some other town should have the same.

There is in the city chest, the copy of a deed dated July 1, 1566, relating to Mr. Thomas White's gift.

(p) In his will, he desired that the 150*l.* as aforesaid might be mentioned on his monument in St. Mary Magdalen's church, in Canterbury, that the same might not be forgotten; and by his will he appointed that the fire engine then in St. Margaret's church, and the buckets there, should remain there for the service of the town, and that there should be paid yearly out of the messuage in St. Margaret's wherein he dwelt, the sum of 20*s.* half yearly, into the hands of the church wardens of St. Margaret's, to be disposed of as hereafter mentioned; and he ordered that his other fire engine of wood, which he had invented, should hands for the space of 10 years, without paying interest, they giving good security for the repayment of it at the end of that term, and so to continue and remain to be disposed of in the same manner, from time to time for ever.

Mr. Henry Robinson gave into the hands of the chamberlain of this city, the sum of 100*l.* to the intent, that as often as the interest of it should amount to the sum of 5*l.* it might be employed in setting up some honest young man, who was born in the city, and who had served seven years apprenticeship to some trade in it, having been bound thereto by the churchwardens and overseers of some parish within the city, towards the stocking and setting him up in his said trade; the young man to be from time to time chosen and nominated by the mayor, recorder, and aldermen of the city, of which the mayor or recorder always to be one; and that the name of such young man at the time of payment of the said 5*l.* should be entered and registered in a book, kept by the chamberlain, and he to account once every year to the mayor, recorder, and aldermen; and whoever should receive the said money, should enter into bond with one or more securities to be approved of by the mayor, recorder and aldermen, in the penalty of 10*l.* to be paid to the chamberlain, for the repayment of the said money, in case that he should give over or leave off his trade within two years after his receiving it. Provided, that no young man answering the above description, should apply for the said 5*l.* then it might be given to any other young man born in the city, who had served his apprenticeship to some trade in the same, he giving the same security (r).

Mr. John Watson, alderman of this city, by his last will in 1633, gave two tenements, once John Winter's, at the iron cross, being at the four vent way between St. Margaret's and Castle-Street (s), which had been given to superstitious remain to the parish of St. Mary Magdalen, if they would accept of it and provide some fit place to set it in; and also 5*l.* to buy buckets to hang up in that church; and if not accepted there, then to the parish of St. George. And as to the 20*s.* per annum above-mentioned, he ordered that 2*s.* 6*d.* of it should be paid to the respective clerks of the parishes where the engines should stand, for their care in looking after them.—10*s.* to be given to some poor men of the city, to be chosen by the churchwardens of either parish, five out of each parish to play the engines once a year, or oftener if they pleased, that the use of them might be known; and the other 5*s.* to lye in stock in the hands of the churchwardens of St. Margaret's for the amending and repairing the said engines and buckets; but if they should not be so exercised, then the 10*s.* to be put into the stock with the 5*s.* per annum, and the account of it to be kept in the parish books of St. Margaret's.

(q) The will is in Prerog. off. Cant.

(r) In the city chest is an indenture dated April 28, 1642, concerning this gift of Mr. Robinson.

uses,

CHARITIES.

uses, and had been purchased by him of the crown, having escheated to it (1), and likewise a small piece of meadow land in St. Mildred's, to the mayor and commonalty and their successors for ever, as feoffees in trust to the uses of the poor inhabitants of the city of Canterbury, for them to employ the whole rents and profits of the land and tenements, for the buying and providing yearly for ever, ruffet cloths, to make cloaths for the aforesaid poor, aged, decrepid and impotent persons, inhabiting in the several parishes of the said city; to be delivered to them on the feast of St. Andrew yearly, to cloath the poor of three parishes every year by turn and course; beginning with the parishes of St. Margaret, St. Mildred, and St. Mary Bredin, and so on through the city, as the will at large directed. The poor persons to be above the age of 50 years, and to be at the election and nomination of the mayor and four of the eldest aldermen for ever; and his will and desire was, that the chamberlain should have full power to demise and let the premises by writings under his hand and seal for three years, and so on for the like term for ever, for utmost value or yearly rent without any fine; and that he should receive the rents, provide the cloaths, and account yearly for the sums received and disbursed to the mayor and four of the eldest aldermen, upon the first Thursday in the month of December yearly for ever; and that 6s. 8d. should be paid to the mayor and aldermen for their pains in it; and 10s. to the chamberlain for his pains about the business and affairs aforesaid, and for taking care that the tenements were kept in good repair.

Mr. Avery Sabine, an alderman of this city, by his last will in 1649, gave an annuity, or rent charge of 20l. per annum for certain charitable uses; of which 10 marcs were to be paid yearly to the use of Kingsbridge hospital, and the remainder to cloath 10 poor people in the city of Canterbury, on the feast of St. Andrew, yearly; the overplus to be laid out in the charges of renewing the feoffment, or to be divided between the poor people of this city, in manner as by the will is more fully expressed; and he vested all his lands in Monkton in Thanet, in feoffees for the discharge of this trust, and ordered that when the major part of them should be deceased, the feoffment to be from time to time renewed.

Mr. John Cogan, by his will proved in 1657, among other charities, gave the lands and tenements, which he had lately purchased, being in or near the parishes of St. Mildred and St. Mary Castle, in or near the city of Canterbury, and in or near Thanington, of the yearly value of 35l.

which he hoped, within the space of 10 years more, would be of an improved value of 10l. more, which he had bought and intended to dispose of, for the encouragement of maid servants to stay and continue for the space of six or seven years together; he therefore willed and devised to any such three maid servants, as should dwell and inhabit freely and without compulsion or restraint, with any master or mistress, not being their kindred, within the city of Canterbury, for the space of six or seven years together, without shifting them of their service during the said term, upon certificate, by such master or mistress, of such service done by any such maid servant, to be made to his executors, or the survivor of them, and after their decease, to the mayor and recorder of the city of Canterbury, and three or more of the said aldermen, for the time being, that there has been paid to such maid servant or maid servants, not exceeding 50s. a year, given by their masters or mistresses, the sum of 5l. a piece, of lawful money of England, and the overplus and surplusage, the tenements being kept in good reparations, be willed should be employed and laid out by his executors, and the survivor of them during their lives, and after their decease by the mayor, recorder and three of the antient aldermen of the city, for the payment of the cloathing of six fatherless maiden children, from the age of six years to the age of 21 years; each of them to have a petticoat and waistcoat of coloured kersey, garnished with two statute laces, and one pair of shoes, and one pair of stockings, provided for them, to have them against the 25th day of Dec. commonly called Christmas day, and so to go through the city of Canterbury, from parish to parish, as the said overplus and surplusage would reach and extend unto, for ever; but the rent of this estate has been so much improved, that the number of children clothed, has, of late years been upwards of sixty, and extended every year to all the parishes throughout the city (u).

Mrs. Mary Masters, of Canterbury, spinster, by a codicil to her will in 1716, gave the sum of 5l. per annum, to all and several the hospitals, but not mentioning where the hospitals were; and her personal estate too being deficient in the payment of her legacies, the payment of them was withheld by her heir and executor, sir Harcourt Masters, knt. (v) and this causing a suit of litigation, the cause was heard before sir Joseph Jekill, the Master of the Rolls, in Easter Term 1718; when the court determined, among other matters in the will and codicil, that, as to the 5l. per annum to all and every the hospitals, it

(1) Late in the occupation of Mr. Edward Scudamore, but now let in separate tenements.

(1) Battely's Somner, p. 169.

(u) See his bequest of his house, &c. called Cogan's Hospital, above, p. 288.

(v) She was the daughter of his father's elder brother.

GIFTS, &c. TO THE CITY.

appearing, that the testatrix lived in Canterbury, for many years, and died there, and that she had taken notice by her will, of two Canterbury hospitals by name; this charity was held not to be void for the uncertainty, but to have been intended for all the hospitals in Canterbury, but not as was pressed, to the hospital a mile out of Canterbury, viz. at Harbledown, though founded by the same Archbishop of Canterbury, and governed by the same statutes; and this the court decreed, notwithstanding it was objected, that they ought not to go out of the words of the will, and confine the general words all hospitals, to those in Canterbury; and the court did this the rather, because these charities if they prevailed would be perpetuities of 5l. per ann. and by that means create a deficiency, and consequently in a great part defeat the rest of the will, as to plain legacies in favour of those which were doubtful. Sir Harcourt Masters, the heir and executor abovementioned, was one of the Directors of the South Sea Company, in the fatal year 1720, whose estates were vested by act of parliament in trustees, for the benefit of the sufferers in that general calamity. In consequence of which, about the year 1737, the money which had been paid by the trustees of the Director's forfeited estates, out of the estates of sir Harcourt Masters, on account of the above annuities, was laid out in the purchase of 163l. 16s. 3d. old south sea annuities, which in 1740 stood in the names of John Lynch, D. D. and John Knowler, esq. the latter of whom received the interest from time to time. and paid one sixth to the hospital of St. John; another sixth to that of Eastbridge; another sixth to that of Maynard; another sixth to that of Jesus; another sixth to that of Smith; and the remaining sixth to that of Cogan.

On the decease of Dr. Lynch, John Knowler, esq. being the surviving trustee, he, upon June 16, 1761, being present in burghmote, proposed to transfer the said 163l. 16s. 3d. to the mayor and commonalty of the city of Canterbury, as trustees for the said hospitals; which proposal being accepted by the court, he transferred that sum to them accordingly, for the above purpose.

DIFFERENT GIFTS OF LANDS, TENEMENTS, &c.
TO THE CITY.

JOHN BRIGGS, anno 36 Edward III, gave to this city a parcel of land, called Le Gravel Pet, in Winchape-field, in the parish of St. Mary de Castro, lying between a certain way leading from Winchape towards Dodingdale, towards the south, as the deed expresses it (w).

(w) Battely's Somner, p. 183, from the archives of the city.

(x) In the Prerog. off. Cant.

(y) The two stone houses in Somner's time, the one the Tyger, the other the White Horse, situated by the above lane, were, as he conjectured, the two tenements given as William Bennet, of St. Andrew's parish, mayor of this city in 1450, gave by his will in 1464 (x) to this city, two tenements beside Jury-lane, in St. Mary Bredman's parish, to the welfare and common profit of the city for evermore, except 10s. to be paid yearly to the parson and churchwardens of St. Andrew's; and he ordered his executors to buy 300 feet of ashler, of Folkestone, to make a wharfe about the King's Mill thereto, and 5s. for the reparation of the shamelys for strange bocherys to occupy every market day, and for paving the strete from St. Andrew's to the Pyllorie, that might go cleaner thereto 10s. John Fremingham and Thomas Lambsyn were his feoffees and executors (y); besides the above, he gave other benefactions, as will be mentioned elsewhere.

Roger Brent, of All Saints parish, in this city, and owner of the Dunjeon manor, who died in 1486, having been an alderman and thrice mayor of this city, gave to the community of it and their successors, his messuage called Stoneball, in the parish of All Saints, in which church he lies buried, to hold to them and their heirs, upon trust, that they and their successors should build a certain dwelling for honest men and women to live in, for which they should take the annual profits arising from thence, to the use of the said community (z).

John Broker, of St. Margaret's, alderman and twice mayor of this city, by his will anno 1521, gave to the mayor and commonalty of this city for ever, two houses, the one in St. Mary Castle parish, the other at the Waterlock, in St. Margaret's parish (a).

Thomas Petit, of St. George's, esq; by his will anno 1626, gave 50l. to the mayor and commonalty, to be employed by them continually for the maintenance of two hospital boys at the least, in their new hospital.

John Webb, gave by his will anno 34 Eliz. as appears by the burghmote book, 50l. to the mayor and corporation of this city.

Thomas Ludd, of this city, glazier, by indenture, dated April 28, 1649, out of the good will which he bore to this city, gave and confirmed to the mayor and commonalty of it and their successors, one annuity or yearly rent charge of eleven shillings, to be issuing and going out of his messuage, with its appurtenances in a street, called the Rulb-market, in the parish of St. Alphage, in this city (b), and payable on Midsummer day to them, for the purpose of establishing a lecture or sermon for ever, to be preached yearly above-mentioned. They belong to the city at this time.

(z) Will, Prerog. off. Cant. (a) Ibid.

(b) Bounding to the said street south; to the house called the King's Head; west; and to the house of Thomas Bullock, east.

GIFTS, &c. TO THE CITY.

upon Holy Cross day, being the day of the election of the mayor, and immediately before the election, by such a preacher as the mayor for the time being should think fit, and at such place as he should appoint for the more solemn meeting of the mayor, aldermen, &c. of the city; and be ordered, that the mayor, &c. and their successors should pay to every such minister for his pains therein, the sum of ten shillings, immediately after the end of the said sermon; and to the parish clerk one shilling, for ringing the sermon bell and for his attendance; with a power of distress, &c.

Henry Vanner, of St. George's, in Canterbury, alderman of this city, by his will in 1630, gave to the mayor and commonalty of it and their successors for ever, the sum of 150l. upon condition, that they should for ever thereafter, from time to time, maintain and keep, bring up, and place in a decent and religious manner, within the city, six poor children, born within the same; whereof two of the said six should be kept and maintained in the name of Juane Vanner, his late sister deceased, and the other four in his own name, until such time as the said children should be fit to be apprentices, or should otherwise be provided for; the election, denomination and appointment of them to be in the said mayor and commonalty for ever. And he gave to the said mayor and commonalty, one yearly rent of 10l. to be received from his executor, out of the rents of his leases of Barton lands, for so long time as they should continue in being; and directed, that the said legacy should be employed towards the raising of a stock of money for the helping of poor tradesmen; for which purpose his desire was, that the said mayor and commonalty, from such time as they should be possessed of any competent sum of money, fit to be let out to poor tradesmen, which should need to have any such sum of money as 5l. that then such person or persons, giving sufficient bond with sureties, to the mayor and commonalty for the repayment of it, should have the same for such term as the mayor and commonalty, and the person or persons so requiring the said sum or sums, should agree upon; for which money no use or interest should be required. And he ordered that the said poor tradesmen, dwelling in the parish of St. George, should have the preference before any other.

Robert Rose, of the precincts of Christ church, gent. by his will in 1620, gave 100l. to be for the poor children of the hospitals of Canterbury, in such sort to be employed for the best use and purpose, as the like by others had been bestowed.

Hester Hammond, of Canterbury, spinster, by her will proved 1719, gave the sum of 20s. per annum, to be paid by her executor yearly, towards the charges of maintaining the charity school for boys in the city of Canterbury; the same to continue to be paid so long as that school should be maintained and kept up; her niece Phebe, wife of Mr. Thomas Lefroy, her executrix.

Dorothy Nixon, of Christ church, in Canterbury, widow, by a codicil to her will proved with it, in Feb. 1730, gave 400l. to her nephews, Herbert, Thomas and George Randolph, upon trust, that they, the survivor or survivors of them and the heirs of such survivor, should lay out the same in land of inheritance, and in the mean time to place out the same at interest, and apply the same to the putting out of one boy, and the remainder towards the putting out of one girl; if not enough for both to be apprentices, to be chosen by her said trustees, or the majority of them, out of some or one of the charity schools within the city and liberty of Canterbury; and if the said schools should all fail, then the said boy and girl should be chosen and elected out of the poorer sort of the children belonging to, and of the parish of St. Margaret, within this city.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL JURISDICTION.

THE CITY OF CANTERBURY is within the ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the diocese of Canterbury and deanry of the same.

As to the several parish churches which have been, or now are within this city or its suburbs; the first of them that is found mentioned, excepting that of St. Martin, is that of the four crowned martyrs, taken notice of upon this occasion by Bede, who says, that a little before the year 624, great part of this city was burnt, and the flames raging vehemently near this church, Archbishop Mellitus put a stop to them by his prayers. The four crowned saints gave title to an ancient church in Rome, and was probably given to this church by one of our three first Archbishops, who were Romans. The place where this church was situated, cannot now be marked out, but as far as can be guessed by Bede's short narrative, it was not far from the Archbishop's palace, and not improbably on the same spot of ground where St. Alphage's church now stands; for the flames were driven by a south wind towards the north side of the city, and the Archbishop was carried near to this church of the four crowned martyrs, where a stop was put to the fire; the wind suddenly turning to the north, as the venerable historian relates it (c). Another church is mentioned in a charter of Coenulph, K. of Mercia, and Cutbred, K. of Kent, anno 804, being a gift to the Abbess and her nuns of Liminge, of a piece of land, which belonged to the church of St. Mary, situated in the west part of this city. But as no such church is now, or is read of, to have been standing since the conquest, it may be safely inferred, that from the face and condition of the city having suffered an utter change since that period, especially when the Danes made such havock of both place and people in K. Ethelred's days, both by fire and sword; the church abovementioned, as well as all others within it, were then totally destroyed and annihilated; so that all that we know of (except St. Martin's) must have been erected since that time, and the names of the saints to which several of the churches are dedicated, as St. Alpbage, St. Dunstan, and St. Edmund the King and Martyr, serve to confirm the truth of it.

(c) Bede, lib. ii, c. 7.

CHURCHES.

There are, within the walls of this city, twelve parish churches now remaining, and there were five more, which have been long since demolished, and there are three churches now situated in the suburbs of it, and there has been one demolished—Of those now remaining, there were only two, viz. St. Martin's without, and St. Alpbage's within the walls, which were not of the patronage of some religious house or abbey, in or in the near neighbourhood of the city, and these two were in the patronage of the Archbishop (d).

It may be thought strange, that the number of churches in this city has decreased so much, and that so many of them have been united to others, and yet together, even at this time, make but a very moderate income to the incumbents; this has been supposed, in general, to have been occasioned by the great failure of their former profits, which they enjoyed before the reformation, of private masses, obits, processions, confessions, or the like; all which then fell to the ground, and lessened the income of most of them to a very small pittance. However, as will be seen below, some of these churches were become desecrated and in ruins, and others were united long before the above time; which seems to have been owing, in great measure, to many of them having been built by the bounty of well disposed persons, in hopes of a future support and endowment, which failing, and the repairs and support of the fabric lying too heavy on the parishioners, they suffered them to run to ruin; and there being no sufficient maintenance for the priests, they became desecrated, or were united to some other neighbouring churches. Indeed it appears plain, that poverty was the sole cause of their decay; for in their most flourishing state, the benefice of each of these churches was so low and poor, that they were for that very reason excused in all taxations, being of less value than the stipends of poor vicars, which had been advanced above five marks a year (e).

(d) Battely's Somner, p. 163.

The decrease of the value of church benefices was equally felt in other cities and towns, as well as this, which occasioned an act of parliament to be passed at Oxford, in the 17th of K. Charles II, for uniting churches in cities and towns corporate; in conformity to which, in 1681, a petition was made to the Archbishop, under the names and seals of the major part of the mayor and aldermen, and justices of the peace, of this city, who being informed of the Archbishop's intentions of uniting the parish churches of it, according to the above act, they did thereby give their free consent, that those within the city should be united, viz.

St. Paul's and St. Martin's,

St. Mary Bredman's and St. Andrew's,

Holy Cross Westgate, and St. Peter's,

St. Alpbage's and St. Mary's Northgate, leaving all things necessary to the perfecting of this union, according to the tenor of the above act; which instrument was dated March 6th, that year, and signed by Jacob Wraight, mayor, and P. Barrett, recorder, &c. To this was added a petition of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury to the Archbishop, as being perpetual patrons of the parish churches of St. George, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Paul, St. Mary Bredman, and St. Peter, within the city and liberties, for the uniting of those churches with each other and with others adjoining, in manner as above-mentioned in the former petition, which was given under their common seal, dated March 13th the same year. Upon the receipt of these, the Archbishop issued his decree, reciting the two petitions for uniting the several above-mentioned churches, the particulars of which will be found below under the description of each of them; which decree was dated at Lambeth, on March 24, 1681. To which the inhabitants of each parish signed their consents, by their several instruments, dated December 19th, 20th, and 21st, the same year. After which, by a decree of the Archbishop's in 1684, with the consent of the mayor, aldermen and justices of the peace of this city, and of the King, under his great seal as patron, he united the church of All Saints with St. Mary de Castro, already united to it, to the parish church of St. Mildred; further particulars of which will be found below, under the latter parish. It should seem the decree of the Archbishop in 1681, for the uniting of the churches of Holy Cross Westgate, and St. Peter did not have its full effect, for on April 6, 1692. There were two petitions, one from the mayor and eight others, and another from the Dean and Chapter to the Archbishop, similar to the former ones, for this purpose; and the Archbishop's decree, dated at Lambeth, the 13th

(e) See Battely, pt. ii, p. 177.

CHURCHES.

of that month, united these churches; and with the same particulars in every thing else as the former decree in 1681 (f).

OF THE CHURCHES

At present within the walls of this city.

ALL SAINTS church is situated on the north side of the High-street, almost adjoining to King's-bridge. It is a building, which, notwithstanding the late repair of it, has no very fightly appearance, being built of rubble stone, and covered with plaister; seemingly of about K. Edward III.'s reign. It consists of two isles and two chancels, having a turret at the west end of the south side, new built in 1769 (g), in which is a clock and only one bell (h).

The old steeple projected so far into the street, that when King's-bridge adjoining was widened at the above time, for the accommodation of the public, it was found necessary to take down the steeple of this church, and to re-build it as at present.

This church has no monuments, and not many inscriptions in it. It is situated so very low, close to the river side, that it is exceeding damp, the water arising in the graves, if dug more than three feet deep.

It appears by the survey of the King's Commissioners, taken anno 2d Edward VI, that there were obit lands given by Thomas Fryer, by his last will for a yearly obit, to be kept within this church for ever, the yearly value of which was 13s. 4d. of which was distributed to the poor 2s. 8d.—Clear 10s. 8d. That there was obit rent given by John Coleman, by his last will, for an obit to be kept in this church for the space of twenty years, from the last day of January 1536; which rent, was by the year, 10s. of which was distributed to the poor 2s. 4d.—Clear 7s. 8d. (hb)

(f) Copies of all these instruments are in the Register's Office, Canterbury.

(g) Somner mentions some grave-stones in it remaining in his time, of persons of good account, buried in it; among others, of Roger Brent, an alderman, and thrice mayor of this city, who died in 1486, and was buried in St. Mary's chapel, in this church, and as appears by his will, was a good benefactor to the city. On his grave-stone were the arms of Brent, impaling Lee; on another grave-stone were the arms of Apulderfeld, impaling Evening; and on another, 2 chevrons, impaling 3 chevrons; and in one of the windows were the arms of Archbishop Morton. All which have been long since obliterated.

The following inscriptions on grave-stones are remaining in it; at the east end of the south isle, a memorial, partly obliterated, for Elias Maurois, a native of French Flanders, who fled from thence on account of his religion, obt. 1623, æt. 50, leaving a widow, two sons and four daughters. Another for Thomas Sheldon, obt. 1700, an infant. One for Thomas Humard, esq; alderman of Nor-

This church's cemetery or church-yard was acquired and laid to it but in modern times, as it were, says Somner, for in K. Henry III.'s time, and afterwards in K. Edward III.'s time too, it was in private hands, as appears by several deeds of those times, and did antiently belong, in part at least, to Eastbridge hospital. It is situated on the north side of the church, and being on higher ground, has many tomb and head stones remaining in it.

The patronage of this church, which is a rectory, was part of the possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, with which it continued till the general dissolution of monasteries in the reign of K. Henry VIII, in the 30th year of which, it was, with the rest of the possessions of it, surrendered into the King's hands, where it has remained ever since, the King being at this time patron of it. This church, with that of St. Mary de Castro, before united to it, was in the year 1684, united by Archbishop Sancroft to that of St. Mildred, in this city, with the consent of the mayor and aldermen and justices of the peace of it, and of the King, patron of it.

In the antient taxation, in K. Richard II.'s time, this church was valued at four pounds per ann. but on account of the slenderness of its income, was not charged to the tenth (i). This rectory is valued in the King's books at seven pounds per ann. In 1588, here were 135 communicants. In 1640 it was valued at 30l. communicants 105.

There is a terrier of this rectory, but without date, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

John Coleman, of this parish, who lies buried in our Lady's chapel, in this church, by his will anno 1535, gave his garden, which lay opposite the parsonage of it, to the parsons of it and their successors for ever.

wich, who died in this city, on his return from France, in 1753, æt. 41. Arms—On a bend, between two cotises engrailed, three roundlets. A memorial for Dorothy Dent, daughter of Henry and Margaret Dent, obt. 1792, æt. 26. Another for Susanna, daughter of Valentine Simpson, and Mills his wife, obt. 1740, an infant. One for Margaret, wife of Daniel Lister, buried here between two of their daughters, obt. 1621. In the north isle, a memorial for Shadrack Tyler, B. A. son of Robert Tyler, vicar of St. Laurence; and grand-son of Shadrack Cooke, vicar of Faversham, obt. 1756, æt. 22. Another for Joseph Royle, alderman of this city, obt. 1788, æt. 54. John Fuller, alderman of this city, was buried beside his late wife, in this church in 1569. In the register of this parish, which begins in 1558, are several entries of the burials of the Bridges's, Denne's, Six's, and Sawkins's.

(b) On the bell is this inscription, in old English letters, Joseph Hatch made me in 1623.

(hb) This survey is printed at the end of Somner, by Battely. (i) Thorn, col. 2169.

CHURCH

CHURCHES.—ALL SAINTS.—ST. ALPHAGE.

CHURCH OF ALL SAINTS.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

RECTORS.

Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine. (k) William Byde, in 1467.
(l) Alanus Hydmarsh, in 1476.

(m) Richard Knepe, in 1535.

(n) William Blossom, obt. 1550.

(o) Roger Squyre, in 1550.

The Queen. (p) Henry Fisher, Sept. 26,
1579 . . . refig.

Richard Hayes, March 2,
1590, refig. 1608.

William Watts, in 1634.

The King. (q) Philemon Pownell, cl.
Feb. 10, 1608.

(k) (l) They are mentioned in different wills in the Prerog. off. in Canterbury.

(m) He is mentioned in a will in Prerog. off. Cant.

(n) His will is in Prerog. off. Cant.

(o) He is mentioned as Parson of Albaldwyn in Canterbury, in a will in Prerog. off.

(p) He was also vicar of St. Dunstan's, near this city.

(q) A dispensation passed September 14, 1626, for his holding this rectory, with the hospital of poor priests, and the parish church of St. Margaret annexed to it. Rym. Fœd. vol. xviii, p. 878.

(r) He was in 1673, presented to the rectory of St. Peter's, in this city. See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, col. 886.

(s) On the 1st bell there is no inscription; on the 2d, in capitals, Henry . . . lin, Geo. May, churchwarden . . . made me 1692. On the 3d, in old English letters, Joseph Hatch made me 1616. The frame appears once to have contained a 4th bell.

Sommer mentions the following burial inscriptions, on brass, in old English letters, in this church, all long since destroyed: viz. one in the chancel for John Piers, born at Maidstone, rector of this church. For John Parmenter, rector, who was Commissary of Canterbury likewise, and rector of Adisham, and died in 1501. For Robert Provest, rector of this church, obt. 22 January, 1487. For John Lovelych, B. L. who was rector and likewise register of the Archbishop's Consistory at Canterbury, obt. Sept. 6, 1438. For Richard Stuppeny, B. L. L. who was a Proctor of Canterbury, obt. 1596. In the fourth chancel, for Henry Gosborne, of St. Alphage, gent. citizen and alderman, and four times mayor of this city, in the chapel of our Lady, obt. April 22, 1522. He had two wives, by whom he had 25 children; of which ten were sons, and by his will gave 20 marcs, (a large legacy in those days) towards repairing the city walls. On his stone these two shields,—Sable, a fess gules, between 3 gesse argent; and—Vert, a saltier argent, a chief ermine. Robert Gosborne, clerk, rector of Penhurst, his brother, lies close by him, obt. 1523. For Richard Engham, of Great Chart, obt. February 7, 1568. In the middle isle, for John Caxton, and Joane and Isabel his wives; he was a benefactor to this church, and died October 12, 1485. For John Colfol, parish-clerk of this church, obt. May 28, 1500. For Nicholas Reve, citizen and wax-chandler, of Canterbury, obt. 1431. On the second pillar from the west end, on a brass plate, the only one now remaining of those mentioned by Sommer, Gaude Prude Thoma, per quem fit ista Columpna, with his coat of arms. He lived in K. Edward IV. th's days, and by his will appointed to be buried by Christ church porch, and gave by it as much as would build a pillar in this church, and five marcs to the works of Christ church, anno 1468. In the west window, the figures of Edmund Staplegate and 28, 1661.

(r) Richard Burney, cl. Sept.

Humphry Bralesford, A. M.
Sept. 3, 1684.

On the 29th of which month, this church was united to that of St. Mildred, in this city, to the list of the rectors of which, below, the reader is referred for an account of the rectors of these united churches.

ST. ALPHAGE church is situated in the north part of the city, on the west side of Palace street; it is a large handsome building, consisting of two isles and two chancels, having a square tower steeple at the west end of the north isle, in which are three bells (s).

Eleanor at Pytte, his wife, in coloured glass, and underneath, Orate p. aibus, Edmudi Staplegate, & Elenora at Pytte, uxoris ejus. This man, who took his name from his habitation at Staplegate, adjoining this parish, was in K. Edward III.'s days, several times one of the Bailiffs of this city. In the west wall, without, an inscription for Agnes Halke, who was buried the first in this church yard after its consecration, anno 1502. There were formerly many coats of arms in the windows of the church; among others,—Or, 2 chevrons gules;—Or, a cross engrailed gules;—Azure, a fess dancette sable, in chief three mullets argent;—On a saltier 4 arrows in the centre of a heart, between 4 pellets;—Azure, a lion rampant crowned, double queued or;—Azure, 3 wheat sheaves or. The following monuments and grave stones are among others in this church at this time: A memorial near the altar-rails for Thomas Wise, S. T. P. descended of a genteel family in Oxfordshire, incumbent of this parish and of Beaksborne, a six preacher of this cathedral, and a prebendary of that of Lincoln; he died 24 July, 1726, æt. 55. Arms—3 chevrons. Another next the last, for Brodnax Brandon, gent. eldest son of William Brandon late of Portsmouth, by Anne his wife, daughter of Sir William Broadnax, knt. of Godmestham. He married Charlotte, youngest daughter of Sir Edward Ward, late Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and left issue three children; Edward, Grace, and Philip; obt. 1733, æt. 35. Arms—Barry of 10, over all a lion rampant, ducally crowned; impaling a cross fleure. An inscription on a brass plate for John Mainwaring, esq; of an antient and noble family of that name, of Pyvor in Cheshire; he married Barbara, eldest daughter of John Winter, cl. prebendary of Canterbury, by whom he had one son and three daughters, obt. 1621, æt. 67. An inscription on the same stone, inscribed the reverse way, for Elizabeth Maundy, daughter of William Maundy, M. D. formerly of this city, obt. 1776, æt. 78. A memorial for the eldest son of Captain Thomas Coakley, obt. 1649. In the north isle, at the east end, a memorial for Honora, daughter of Charles Knowler, gent. and Honora his wife, obt. 1729, æt. 18 years. On the left hand also lies Charles, son of the above-mentioned Charles and Honora, who died an infant, 1714; also for Charles Knowler, gent. who left issue surviving by Honora his wife, two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth, obt. 1750, æt. 72; likewise for Honora his wife, 1776, æt. 94. A mural tablet for Samuel Vassal, esq; son of Colonel John Vassal, obt. 1714, æt. 38. Arms—Azure, a sun in chief, a vase in base or. A memorial for Peter Peters, of the dissolved Dominican monastery, near this parish, M. D. the eldest son of John Peters, of the same place, M. D. He married Elizabeth, only daughter and heir of John Stoning, of London, by whom he had three children, John, Anne, and Elizabeth; of whom John and

CHURCHES.—S T. ALPHAGE.

Thomas Prowde of this parish, died anno 1468, and by his will gave one pair of organs, to the use of this church.

Anne dying young and unmarried, but Elizabeth survived and married Thomas Barret, of Lee in Kent, esq; obt. 1697, æt. 40. Under the same stone lies buried Elizabeth his wife, obt. 1722, æt. 48. Arms—Peters, or, 3 roses gules; on an escutcheon of pretence, Stoning, argent, on a chevron gules, three martlets, between 3 hurts, each charged with a fleur de lis or. On two hatchments above; arms—Peters, quartering Stoning. Another for Anne, eldest daughter of Peter Peters, M. D. obt. 1712, æt. 18. Arms—Peters, and Stoning, quarterly. One for Michael Peters, gent. obt. 1754, æt. 69. Arms—Peters, a crescent for difference. On a hatchment at the north-east corner, an inscription for John Stockar, rector of this parish almost 46 years, obt. 1708, æt. 84. Arms—Stockar. On another at the south side of the north isle, arms—Bix, on an escutcheon of pretence, Gules, a chevron or; and an inscription for Mr. Thomas Bix, of Bishopsgate, London, buried here near his grandfather and grandmother, obt. 1697, æt. 42. On another against the north wall, arms—Simpson, impaling vert, a chevron between 3 rams passant or, for Roger Simpson, gent. obt. 1656. Mary his wife obt. 1648. A memorial for William Crayford, esq; formerly recorder of this city, obt. 1733, æt. 38; also for Susanna and Elizabeth Crayford, who died in 1726 and 1735, infants; and for Susanna, widow of William Crayford, esq; obt. 1775, æt. 78; also for Bennet, wife of Edward Crayford, surgeon, obt. 17—, æt. 35. Arms—Crayford, a crescent for difference, impaling 2 chevrons between 3 mullets. On a hatchment against the north wall, arms—Crayford, a mullet for difference, for Edward Crayford, esq; third son of Edward Crayford, of this city, esq; obt. 1693, æt. 26. On an adjoining hatchment,—arms 6 coats; 1st, Crayford; 2d, Wootton, sable, a saltier argent, an annulet for difference; 3d, sable, 3 passant or; 4th, argent, a chevron between 3 bulls heads caboshed sable; 5th, At-Sea, barry of 6, argent and gules, a fish argent, between 2 haunches, a label of 3 points; 6th as the 1st, for Jane, wife of William Crayford, esq; daughter of Mr. Thomas Rogers, obt. 1698, æt. 22; she left issue Susanna, William, and Elizabeth. Another hatchment, arms—Crayford, 6 coats as above, impaling Peters. A memorial near the gallery for Anthionetta Crayford, wife of Peter Crayford, of this city, gent. obt. 1727, æt. 51; also for Peter Crayford, gent. obt. 1732, æt. 56. Arms—Crayford, impaling 2 chevrons between 3 mullets. A memorial for George Hammond, gent. obt. 1761, æt. 63; also Mary his widow, obt. 1782, æt. 81; likewise Mary their daughter, obt. 1788, æt. 65, and for Thomas Hammond, gent. (attorney and several years chamberlain of this city) their son, obt. 1791, æt. 56. A memorial for Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas and Mary Hammond, of this parish, obt. 1775, an infant. Small stones for Lessfords and Morgans. Memorials for Bushers and Potters. A memorial at the west end of the north isle for William Culling, gent. obt. 1647. Another for the rev. Mr. Le Suer, at first chaplain to the Earl of Lifford's regiment, afterwards to a regiment called the Portuguze foot, and lastly minister to a French episcopal chapel in this city, obt. 1746, æt. 80 years; also for Margaret his wife, obt. 1749. Frances Le Suer their niece placed this stone to their memory. A memorial, the beginning hid by the pews born at Montpellier in France; she died in this parish, obt. 1730, æt. 73. Another along the front of the gallery, for John Knott, obt. 1684; also for Mary, wife of Michael Foutrell, of this parish, youngest daughter of Mr. John Knott, obt. 1649, æt. 51. Several memorials for the Knotts and Foutrells. A memorial for Mrs. Algerina Dashwood, eldest daughter of George Dashwood, esq; and niece of Mr. Bridget Knott,

By the return of the King's Commissioners, anno 2 Edward VI, it appears, that there were lands given by Isabell Fowle, by her last will, obt. 1713, æt. 14. Arms in a lozenge—On a fess 3 griffins heads erased. A memorial for Sarah, wife of William Napton, obt. 1745, æt. 50. On a hatchment against the east end of the north wall, arms—Brandon, barry of ten, argent and gules; over all a lion rampant or, impaling azure a cross fleury or. In the south isle, a small mural monument in a corner south of the altar, for Matthew Hadde, eldest son of Henry Hadde, of Frinted, both alike esqrs. He was of the society of Lincoln's Inn, and for 27 years performed the office of Justice of the Peace within this city. He was steward of four courts; 1st, of the chancery of the Cinque Ports at Dover; 2d, of the royal manor of Wye; 3d, of the dissolved monastery of St. Augustine; and lastly, of the town and port of Faversham; and practised as a barrister at law to the county at large, obt. 1617, æt. 72. Arms, at top—Gules, 3 stags heads caboshed or, between the horns of each a cross crosslet, fitchee argent, a crescent for difference; at the bottom, Hadde, as above, quartering per fess argent and azure, a tower gules, impaling Hammond of St. Albans. On the left side, Hadde, impaling Wilford. On the other side, Hadde impaling Roper of Eltham. At the top of the monument, Edward Hadde, gent. repaired this in 1678. On a mural monument on the south side of the isle, for Jane, the wife of John Roberts, esq; eldest son of sir John Roberts, of this parish, knt. only daughter and heir of Josias Hugesen, of Norton, esq; deceased, by Mary his wife, daughter and heir of Ambrose Rose, gent. she left issue only Jane her daughter. This monument was erected by her husband; arms—Roberts, per pale, 3 pheons heads, impaling Hugesen. On a wooden tablet, against the opposite pillar, is a long fulsome inscription for the above Jane, wife of John Roberts, esq; she died in 1656, æt. 20, within 15 months after her being married. A memorial for sir John Roberts, knt. obt. 1648, æt. 71; also for Mary, wife of John Coppin, gent. and daughter of the said sir John Roberts, obt. 1685, æt. 42; arms, on a hatchment above,—Per pale, azure and gules, 3 bears heads couped, a chief or; a mullet for difference, impaling Roberts. A memorial for Dame Jane Roberts, widow of sir John Roberts, knt. and daughter of Stephen Bunce of Throwley, gent. obt. 1665, æt. 54, near her late husband. Arms—Roberts, impaling Bunce. A memorial for Anne, wife of Norton, esq; and daughter of sir John Roberts 1681, the rest is hid by the pews; arms—A cross potent, quartering Roberts. A mural monument over the south door, for Mr. Simon Wakefield, of this parish, obt. 1710, æt. 58. His wife Anne, obt. 1714, æt. 58; they left issue one son and two daughters, John, Eleanor and Elizabeth; also for the said John, who died unmarried 1719, æt. 37. Arms—Argent, on a fess between 3 water bougets gules, a passant. A mural tablet at the north side of the isle, shewing that in the vault beneath lies Sarah, widow of William Bennett, of this parish, obt. 1780, æt. 69; also for William Bennett, son of the above, leather-cutter, obt. 1782, æt. 29. On a hatchment opposite the south door, for Mary, wife of John Coppin, gent. and daughter of sir John Roberts, knt. obt. 1585, æt. 42. A memorial for Mrs. Deborah Timewell, only daughter of John Bridges, esq; late of this city, and wife of Edward Timewell, of Chigwell in Essex, esq; obt. 1752, æt. 47; also for the said Edward Timewell, esq; obt. 1762, æt. 77. He was the eldest son of Benjamin Timewell, esq; one of the commissioners of the navy in the reign of Q. Ann, E. B. their brother caused this stone to be placed here. Arms—Or, on a chief crenelle, 3 lions heads erased, impaling, on a cross, a leopard's face. Memorials for Edward Foutrell, 1720; Robert Hoghen, 1741; Ester Le Hook, obt. 1738, æt.

CHURCHES.—S T. ALPHAGE.

for a priest to celebrate masse within this church, from the third week in Lent until the morrow after Easter-day; as also, that one torch should be bought yearly to serve the high altar for ever; the yearly value of the land being 12s.—That there was lamp-rent likewise given by John Selowe, for the maintenance of one lamp, to burn yearly before the image of St. John the Evangelist, within this church, for ever; the said rent was by the year 6d. (t)

This church, which is a rectory, is exempted from the jurisdiction of the Archdeacon. It has been from early times part of the possessions of the see of Canterbury, and still remains so, being at this time, with the rectory or church of St. Mary Northgate, united to it in 1681 (u), of the patronage of his Grace the Archbishop.

The church of St. Alphage is valued in the antient taxation, in K. Richard II.'s reign, at four pounds per ann. but on account of the slenderness of its income, was not rated to the tenth (v). It is valued in the King's books at 8l. 13s. 4d. and the yearly tenths at 17s. 4d. the church of Northgate having been united to it since, being valued separate from it (w). In 1588 it was valued at 30l. Communicants 120. In 1640 it was valued at 40l. Communicants the like number.

The parsonage-house, which adjoins the church and church-yard southward, has had two good benefactors, in Mr. Herbert Taylor, formerly rector of this church, and Mr. Hearn, the present rector.

85; for John Berry, obt. 1780, æt. 78. There are some good remains of painted glass yet left; among which are the following coats of arms—Sable, a fess gules, between 3 swans argent; the same coat impaling Vert, on a chevron argent, 5 horse shoes; the same impaling Vert, a saltier or, a chief ermine; a chevron between 3 birds heads erased, and Gules, a saltier or.

Among the wills in the Prerog. off. Canterbury, I find that William Proude, of St. Elphe, was buried in 1596 in this church, before the altar of St. James and St. Erasmus. Richard Colfoll was buried in it in 1501. Richard Burcharde, of this parish, anno 1534. He gave by his will to this church 3l. towards the making of a new pair of organs, to be set up on the north side of the choir, before the image of St. Elphe, on the south side of it; also 40s. that is 6d. quarterly, to a clerk to be provided to play on the same at high feasts. John Whytlock, anno 1503, in this church on the north side of it. Thomas Colphall alias Colpham, of St. Elphys, beside Joan his wife in 1541. Serlys Prude, alias Proude, of St. Alphage, gent. in 1584, before his pew. Christopher Turner, gent. of this parish, in 1591, before the pew of the late deceased Mrs. Lovelace. Thomas Mancringe, gent. in 1593. Christopher Nevinson, of this parish, gent. in 1617. Thomas Gay, of Canterbury, gent. in 1660. In the chancel, Henry Hales, of the precincts of Christ church, gent. in 1679, near his grandchild Mary, daughter of his son John Hales; Mary Hales, of the precincts of the Archbishop's palace, widow in 1687. Anne Hecault, of Canterbury, spinster, near her mother and sisters, in 1720. Besides the above burials in this church, there is frequent mention in the parish register of it, which be-

There are two terriers of this rectory, the one dated anno 1637, the other April 27, 1747, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

CHURCH OF ST. ALPHAGE.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented:

RECTORS.

- (*) Robert Istep, in 1405.
 (xx) John Lovelycb, L.L.B.
obt. Sept. 6, 1438.
 (y) John Piers, in 1461.
 (z) John Elys, in 1467.
The Archbishop. Robert Elys, in 1476.
 (a) Robert Proveste, obt. Janu.
 22, 1487.
John Cussham, in 1490.
 (b) John Parmenter, in 1501.
 (c) Thomas Davyes, in 1518,
obt. 1540.
 (d) Umpbrey Jordan, in 1540
 and 1549.
 (e) John Atkins, obt. Feb.
 1580.
John Alderston, inducted
 March 1580.
Joshua Hutton, in 1594, resigned 1596.
John Sheppard, induct. 1597, resigned 1599.
David Platt, A. M. induct.
 Oct. 1599, obt. Sept.
 1642.

gins in 1558, of the Lovelaces, Masters, Juxons, Halls, Denews, Dennes, Foches, Primroses, &c.

(t) The return of the commissioners is printed at the end of Somner, by Battely.

(u) See the petitions for the uniting of these churches, and the Archbishop's decree thereon, above, p. 462; by which this church of St. Alphage and St. Mary Northgate were united, both belonging to the same patron; and that the former should for ever be the church presentative, and that the parishioners of each should resort to the same, as to their proper church.

(v) Thorn, col. 2169.

(w) Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 26.

(x) He is mentioned as a seoffee of Amabilia Gobion, in a deed in the Surrenden library.

(xx) He was register of the Archbishop's consistory court, and lies buried in the chancel.

(y) His grave-stone, in the chancel of this church, is very antient, but without date; but he is mentioned in a will in the Prerog. office in 1461.

(z) He and his successors, including Jordan, are mentioned in different wills in the Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(a) He lies buried in this church in the choir of it, as ordered by his will, and devised by it to his pytt-making, 3s. 4d.

(b) He was commissary of Canterbury, and rector of Adisham, and lies buried in the chancel here.

(c) He was buried in this church, before the image of St. Elphe, in the choir. His will is in Prerog. off. Cant.

(d) See Strype's Life of Cramner, p. 100.

(e) He was buried in the chancel.

Richard

CHURCHES.—S T. ANDREW.

(f) Richard Pickis, obt. Jan. 1660.

Edward Fellow, A. M. ind. June 1661, obt. 1663.

(g) John Stockar, A. M. inducted Sept. 24, 1663, obt. 1709.

During his time this church appears to have been united to that of St. Mary Northgate, so that he died rector of both churches, as did his successors, viz.

(h) Thomas Wise, S. T. P. induct. April 1709, obt. July 24, 1726.

(i) Herbert Taylor, A. M. inducted Aug. 1, 1726, resigned 1753.

(k) John Airson, A. M. 1753, resigned 1761.

(l) George Hearn, cl. collated May 1, 1761. Present Rector.

ST. ANDREW'S church stands in a small recess, about the middle of the High-street, on the south side. It was built in the room of the antient church of the same name, which stood at a small distance, in the centre of the street, the passage along which was through two narrow lanes on each side of it. This church was an antient structure of only one isle, and one chancel, having a spire steeple at the west end; in it were many monuments and inscriptions; the former of

(f) He was, as well as his successor, buried in the chancel of this church. His will is in Prerog. Court, Cant.

(g) He was a native of Switzerland.

(h) He was vicar likewise of Bekeborne, and one of the Six Preachers of Canterbury cathedral, and a Prebendary of Lichfield. He was buried in this church July 29, æt. 55.

(i) He resigned these churches on being inducted to the vicarage of Bridge, with Patrickborne, in 1753, of which he was patron.

(k) One of the Minor Canons of Canterbury cathedral. He resigned these churches for those of St. Martin and St. Paul.

(l) One of the Six Preachers of Canterbury cathedral.

(m) In the old church there were, in Mr. Somner's time, brass plates and inscriptions for Edward Bolney, esq; obt. 1517. For Stephen White, citizen and the first ironmonger that ever was dwelling in the city of Canterbury, obt. 1592; and in the windows, the figure and an inscription on the glass, Orate p̄ aia Dni Wilmi Mellrose Rectoris Eccle scæ Mariæ de Brodman. By it was his device, being w. m. with a rose over head. And in another the figure and an inscription, Orate p̄ aia patris Jobis Fanting Rectoris Scæ Mariæ de Bredyn—Det Mater Xii Fanting John Gaudia Cæli. These, perhaps, were benefactors to the church about the time that one John Petyt of this parish was; who by his will in 1498, gave five marks to the making a new steeple and a new roof to it. And one John Swan, another parishioner here, at the same time an alderman, and sometime mayor of this city, gave in like manner by his will, 66s. 8d. towards the work of a new roof and steeple here, when it should happen to be new made. In this church which, when this church was pulled down in 1764, an act of parliament having been obtained for this purpose, for the accommodation of the public, by laying open the street, were at first deposited in the undercroft of the cathedral; but when the new church was finished, they were placed in the vestibule of it; an account of them will be given below. Among these were the several monuments of the rectors of this parish, from Dr. Cox in 1544, to Mr. Paris, who died in 1709, both inclusive, and were for the most part buried in it. Among these it is observable, that there were two ancestors of the famous Dean of St. Patrick's, viz. Thomas Swift, his great-great-grandfather, and William his son, who were successively rectors of this church from 1569 to 1624; the former of them having expressly desired by his will, that his bones should rest in that church, where his people so entirely loved him (m).

This church being thus taken down, a new one was erected, though not till some years afterwards, on a spot of ground bought for the purpose, of sufficient size for a small cemetery likewise adjoining (n). This church, which is a neat building of brick, with a small turret of wood, in which hang two bells (o), was opened by licence from the Archbishop, for the performance of divine service, on Dec. 26, 1773, and was consecrated, with the church-yard, on the 4th of July following (p).

It appears by the return made by the King's was a chantry for one William Butler. In Gostling's Canterbury, there is a neatly engraved view of this old church.

(n) The ground was purchased and the church built, partly by the parish rates and partly by the collection of private contributions; the expence of the ground and building amounted in the whole to 1900l.

(o) On one of the bells are these words, ROBERTUS MOR ME FECIT, 1597.

(p) In the vestibule of the new church, as has been already mentioned, are placed the monuments, formerly in the old church; to commemorate which, against the west wall there is put up a tablet of white marble, and these monuments: one for Katherine Gibbon, eldest daughter of Robert Gibbon, citizen and draper of London, and Mary his wife, who was born at Ipswich, in 1622, and died in 1633. One for Dorothy Sprakelyng, wife of Robert Sprakelyng, of Bocton Aluph, gent. and eldest daughter of Giles Master, esq; by his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of William Petyt, of Chilham, esq; obt. 1749. Another for Mr. Thomas Swift, rector of this church 22 years, obt. 1592, æt. 57; and for Mr. William Swift his son, who succeeded him in this church 33 years. He was rector of Harbaldowne 22 years; obt. 1624, æt. 58. Margaret, wife of Mr. Thomas Swift, lies in the cathedral church-yard, against the south door, with nine of her children. Mary, wife of Mr. William Swift, lies buried with him, obt. 1626, æt. 58. They left issue one son, Mr. Thomas Swift, preacher in Herefordshire, (who died in 1658, æt. 63, leaving 10 sons; one of the younger of whom was Jonathan, the father of the Dean of St. Patrick's) and two daughters, one the wife of Thomas Witseide, gent. and Margaret wife of

CHURCHES.—ST. ANDREW.

Commissioners, anno 2 Edward VI, that there were obit lands given by the last wills of Robert Bone, John Swanue, and Edmund Mynot, for the keeping of their several obits yearly within this parish church for ever. The yearly value of which lands were 36s. of which the outgoings were 5s. 11d. distribution to the poor 2s. 6d. clear 27s. 7d.—and that there was obit rent given by William Bennet (q), for one obit to be kept within this church for ever; which rent was of the yearly value of 10s. and there was likewise given by the same William Bennet, lamp-land, to find one lamp within this church for ever, the yearly value of which land was 10s. and that there was church-rent then given, but by whom was not known, the rent being of the yearly value of 1d. (r)

In a will anno 1534, I find mention of St. Ninian's light, in this church.

This church is a rectory, the patronage of which was part of the possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, with which it continued till the final dissolution of it in the 30th year of of Henry Atkinson, apothecary and citizen of London. Which two daughters erected this monument. Arms—Sable, an anchor or, enwreathed with a dolphin azure. A small tablet framed and glazed, for Thomas Sawisi, once rector of this church, obt. 1592. A tablet for Giles Master, late of the parish of St. Paul, esq; who by Mary his wife, daughter of Edward Hales, of Chilbam, esq; had three sons and six daughters, of whom were surviving at the time of his death, Edward his only son, who married Dorcas, daughter of sr Hugh Hamersley, sometime Lord Mayor of London. Mary, widow of William Watmer, late of this city, alderman; and Deborah, widow of Edmund Randolph, M. D. also by his second wife Elizabeth, the daughter of William Petit, of Chilbam, esq; he had two sons and three daughters; of whom were then only surviving, Dorothy, married to Robert Sprakelyng, gent. and Frances, married to James Bix, gent. He died in 1644, æt. 67. He lived to see issue of his loins, children and grandchildren, 46. Arms—Gules, a lion rampant, holding a rose branch, impaling his two wives, Hales and Petit. A tablet for Edward Aldey, rector of this parish 49 years, and Prebendary of Christ church, Canterbury, 13 years. He left issue surviving by Margaret Moorfield, his first wife (buried near him) Edward, his only son; Mabell, then wife of William Foche, gent. Anne, then wife of Thomas Elwin; of this city, alderman. His second wife was Judith, widow of Henry Tooke, gent. He left surviving Mary, the daughter of Thomas Hawke, gent. his third wife, (she died in 1682, and was buried in the chancel near him.) He died on July 12, 1673, æt. 79. Arms—Ermine, on a chief sable, 2 griffins combatant argent. Another for Arthur Kay, D. D. rector of this church, and Six Preacher of the cathedral 30 years. He married Elizabeth the daughter of Thomas, the only son of sr William Southland, of Lee in Ickbam, by whom he had issue nine children, three sons and six daughters, obt. 1701, æt. 60. A small tablet at the bottom of the above, for the above-mentioned Elizabeth, wife of Dr. Kay, obt. 1720, æt. 74. Arms—Argent, an eagle's head erased gules, between 3 torteauxes, impaling or, a griffin segreant vert; on a chief gules, 3 spears heads argent, for Southland. A tablet for the Rev. Mr. John Paris, A. M. late rector of the united parishes of St. Mary Bredman and St. Andrew, vicar of K. Henry VIII, when it was, with the rest of the possessions of that monastery, surrendered into the King's hands; whence it was afterwards granted by the King, in his 34th year, in exchange, and with other premises, to the Archbishop of Canterbury (s); but upon its being united in 1681 to St. Mary Bredman's rectory (t), (which was of the patronage of the Priory of Christ church, and on the dissolution of it had been given to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury); that being the mother church to the smaller parish, the right of patronage of these united churches was decreed to the Archbishop and the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury jointly; that is to say, two turns to the Archbishop, and one turn of presentation to the Dean and Chapter. In which state the patronage of it continues at this time.

The church of St. Andrew was valued in the antient taxation, at 8l. per annum.

This rectory, with that of St. Mary Bredman united, is valued in the King's books at 22l. 6s. 8d. (u) and the yearly tenths at 2l. 4s. 8d. (v) In 1588, it was valued at 60l. Communicants 200.

Beakesborne, and master of the hospitals of East Bridge, St. John, and St. Nicholas, Harbledown. He was born at Marlborough, in 1658, and educated at Corpus Christi college, Oxford. He married Anne, the daughter of Robert Hill, of Newton, in Cambridge, gent. obt. 1709, æt. 51. A flat stone near the east side of the vestibule, for Thomas Noble, of this parish, obt. 1716, æt. 48. Another for Nathaniel Hulfe, gent. and Anne his wife, many years inhabitants of this parish. He died in 1746, æt. 75; she died in 1749, æt. 71; and three of their children, who died infants. Arms—Hulfe, an escutcheon of pretence, a fess between 3 estoiles. In the upper vestibule, on an hatchment; the arms of Hulfe and inscription, for Nathaniel Hulfe, gent. of Horton, near Chartam, but an inhabitant and citizen of Canterbury, from the time of his youth, obt. 1746, æt. 75.

(q) William Benet, son of Robert Benet, of Stour-street, was of this parish, and lived in K. Henry VI. and K. Edward IV.'s reigns. By his will, which is dated in the third year of the latter reign, anno 1463, he appears to have been a man of much note and wealth; and the several charitable donations in his will were very considerable; by it he ordered to be buried in the church of St. Augustine, by Alys his wife. He gave 4s. 4d. yearly quit-rent, out of a tenement in Clement's-lane to his seoffees, the parson and two church-wardens of St. Andrew's, to sustain and keep the clock of this church; and as they had no goods in hand, as other churches had, he gave them five mares in money, to be put to the use and welfare of it; and likewise 10s. yearly to be paid to the parson of this parish or his deputy, and the two church-wardens; to be issuing from his tenements in St. Mary Bredman, devised by him to the city.

(r) The survey of the commissioners is printed at the end of Battely's Somner.

(t) Augtn. off. deeds of purchase and exchange, box Kent, C. 50.

(s) See these instruments, and the decree of the Archbishop, above, p. 462, and under St. Mary Bredman, below.

(u) Of this sum St. Andrew's was 13l. 6s. 8d.

(v) Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 26.

CHURCHES.—ST. ANDREW.—ST. GEORGE.

In 1640, it was valued at 80l. the like number of communicants.

There is a terrier of this rectory, dated anno 1630, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

CHURCH OF ST. ANDREW.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

RECTORS.

- The Archbishop. (w) John Cox, S. T. P. obt. 1544.
William Morphet, inducted Dec. 22, 1565.
Henry Morray, July 3, 1570.
(x) Thomas Swifte, A. M. March 18, 1572, obt. June 12, 1592.
(y) William Swifte, A. M. July 8, 1592, obt. Oct. 24, 1624.

(w) I find his name spelt in a manuscript Cockys. All the rectors here mentioned down to Dr. Kay inclusive, were buried in the old church; under the scite where it once stood, their remains still rest.

(x) (y) They were both likewise rectors of St. Michael, Harbledown. See more of them in Biog. Brit. index Swifte. The will of Thomas Swift is in Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(z) He was a Prebendary of Canterbury, and died æt. 79.

(a) A Six Preacher of the cathedral; he died æt. 60.

(b) An arch for the convenience of foot passengers, was cut through the circular or stair case part of this tower a few years since, when the city was new paved; but from the many cracks discernable above, it appearing to have done the tower much injury, and that it was becoming dangerous, the commissioners of the pavement of the city, in August 1794, ordered it to be taken down and the square tower to be made good, with a pointed spire of wood on the top, at their expence.

(c) On these bells are the following inscriptions: the 1st, 2d, and 4th of which are in old English characters; the 3d, in Roman capitals. On the 1st, Joseph Hatch made me 1627; 2d, Sa'te Georgi ora pro nobis; 3d, Thomas Palmer made mee 1664. Thomas Dunkin, William Rillehill, c. w.; 4th, Josephus Hatch me fecit, 1625.

Among other monuments and memorials in this church are the following, viz. a monument on the south wall near the altar, for Ann, daughter of John Polley alias Polhill, of Oxford, gent. thrice married; first, to Thomas Gilman, mercer and citizen of London, by whom she had no issue; secondly, to William Nutt, of Canterbury, Councillor at Law, to whom she bore only John Nutt, yet living; and thirdly, to Thomas Milles, of Davington, son of Richard Milles, of Ashford, 25 years head customer of Sandwich and the member ports thereof, in Kent, viz. Dover, Faversham, Milton and Rochefer; 44 years water bailiff there, keeper of Rochefer castle, and squire for the body of K. James I. unto whom she bore two daughters, namely, Ann Milles the first, born in 1615, then living, and a second born in 1618, both in Canterbury; the latter died soon after she was born, and was buried here beside her mother, who died at Davington Hall, in 1624. Arms—Ermine, a fer de moline sable, on a chief of the last, 2 wings conjoined or, impaling 1st and 4th, argent, on a bend gules, 3 crosses potent or; 2d, argent, an eagle displayed sable; 3d, sable, a fess between 3 garbs or. A mural monument near the above, for Thomas Forster, A. M. rector of this parish and of (z) Edward Alday, A. M. Nov. 6, 1624, obt. July 12, 1673.

(a) Arthur Kay, S. T. P. July 18, 1673, obt. — 1701.

During his time, these two churches of St. Andrew and St. Mary Breadman appear to have been united: a list of the future rectors of which may be seen below in the account of the latter, which is the mother church..

ST. GEORGE'S church is situated on the north side of the High-street, near the gate of the same name; it is a large handsome structure, consisting of two isles and two chancels, having a well built tower steeple, with, till lately, a pointed leaden turret at the north-west corner of it (b). There are four bells in the tower, and one formerly in the turret (c).

Chartham, and one of the Six Preachers of the cathedral, obt. September 13, 1764, æt. 53. A mural monument for Nicholas Knight, gent. late of this parish, son of Thomas Knight, also interred near this place; also Margaret, his first wife, and seven children by her; and Johanna his second wife, and five children by her, who after being an inhabitant and housekeeper 50 years, in this parish, obt. 1667, æt. 78. Arms—Gules, 2 bars ermine, in chief 3 griffins heads erased argent. A mural monument near the altar on the north side, for Edward Randolph, M. D. He had 10 sons and five daughters, by Deborah his wife, fourth daughter of Giles Master, of Canterbury, esq; obt. 1681. Another for John Hobday, gent. and Elizabeth his wife, only daughter of Avery Hilles, esq; a magistrate of this city: They had a numerous issue who are buried here; he died in 1713, æt. 66; she died in 1732, æt. 83. Edward Hobday, of London, merchant, their only surviving son erected this monument in 1750. Arms—Gules, a fess fusille, argent and azure, between 3 mullets pierced of the 2d; over all an escutcheon of pretence, azure, a chevron between 3 fleurs de lis argent. On a hatchment for Hills, and inscription for John Hills, gent. obt. 1687, æt. 41. A mural tablet on the north side of the south isle for the Rev. Weyman Bouchery, late rector of Little Blakenham in Suffolk, obt. 1712, æt. 27; and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Gilbert Knowler, esq; of Hearne, obt. 1751, æt. 64; and also for their daughter Sarah Bouchery, obt. 1783, æt. 71. This monument was erected by their son the Rev. Gilbert Bouchery, vicar of Swoffham in Norfolk. A mural tablet for George Bryant, obt. 1727, æt. 74. In the north isle, at the east end, another for Mary Robins, 1775. On a hatchment, arms—*Quarterly, 1st and 4th, ermine; 2d and 3d, pale of 6, argent and gules, impaling these arms;—1st, Sable, a chevron between 3 fleurs de lis, argent;—2d, Argent, a bear rampant, collared and chained or; and an inscription for John Cotes, of Canterbury, gent. obt. 1655, æt. 71; in memory of whom Margaret his wife, daughter of John White, gent. and Anne his wife, daughter of Richard Beresford of Westorham, esq; erected these their arms. On another over the second pillar, arms—*Argent, on a cross gules, 5 fleurs de lis or, impaling argent, a chevron between 3 hearts gules; and an inscription for Thomas Durant, of New Romney, gent. obt. 1688, æt. 42; and for his eldest son Thomas Durant, of Canterbury, gent. obt. 1702, æt. 28. On another on the third pillar; arms—*Sable, within a bordure, a vulture or, impaling gules, 2 bars ermine; in chief 3 griffins

CHURCHES.—ST. ANDREW.—ST. GEORGE.

This church, which is a rectory, was part of the possessions of the Priory of Christ church in Canterbury, and at the dissolution of it was granted by K. Henry VIII. to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, in the patronage of whom, together with that of St. Mary Magdalen in Burgate, united to it in 1681 (d), it remains at this time.

It appears by the return of the King's Commissioners, anno 2 Edward VI, that there were obit lands given by the wills of Edward Parle-gate, Thomas Rayley, and John Williamson, as well for the observation of their obits, as for the maintenance of one lamp in this church for ever; the yearly value of which was 76s. and 8d. of which the outgoings were 8s. 1d. ob. distributed to the poor 10s. reparations of the church 22s. 11d. ob. clear 35s. 7d. and there was obit rent given by Thomas Cadbury, of one obit, to be kept within

3 griffins heads erased argent, 1660. On the fourth pillar another; arms—Azure, 6 martlets, 3, 2, 1, or, impaling sable, 2 bars or, ob. 16—44

7.

27.

On the fifth pillar another; arms—Argent, on a fess gules, a cross crosslet fitchy or; between 2 trefoils of the field, between 3 others proper, impaling as the last, etatis 53. On the sixth pillar another; arms—Azure, a dexter hand erect proper, a mullet for difference, impaling parted per bend or and sable, a sea lion rampant, double queued, counter-changed.

At the east end, on a pannel of wood, in a frame, with columns and a pediment, a painting representing Guy Faux, entering the parliament-house; and underneath, IN PERPETUAM PAPISTARUM INFAMIAM. On a small shield; arms—Argent, a chevron between 2 trefoils in chief, and a laurel leaf in base; impaling gules, 3 arrows or; under the pediment under which was a representation of the two fleets, which is now obliterated.

CAROLI ANNOTT

. 1632.

English Fleete . . 88. . . Spanish Fleete

In the middle isle, on a plain stone, a memorial for John Plummer, gent. ob. 1703, et. 35. Mary, wife of John Plummer, daughter of Thomas Turner, esq; ob. 1727, et. 58; by whom he had William, John, Hellen, and Samuel; also John Plummer, gent. ob. 1732, et. 37; and Samuel Plummer, gent. Attorney at Law, of the society of Cliffords Inn, London, ob. 1754, et. 52; sons of the said John and Mary. Arms—A chevron between 3 griffins heads erased, impaling 6 coats; 1st, 3d, and 5th, ermine; 2d, 4th, and 6th, a fer de molin, on a chief a lion passant guardant. On a small stone a memorial for William, son of John and Mary Plummer, ob. 1696, an infant. A memorial for Elizabeth, relict of Richard Comyns, esq; Sergeant at Law, late of Wristle Lodge, in Essex; daughter of Thomas Chiffinch, esq; of Northfleet, ob. 1764, et. 60; leaving one daughter. Arms—On a lozenge, a chevron ermine, between 3 garbs, impaling on a fess embattled 3 leopards faces. Another for Thomas Cobb, youngest son of Benjamin and Catherine Cobb, late of New Romney, ob. 1765, et. 10 years. A flat stone, part broken off, for Vilal Dole one of the ministers of the French church in this city, ob. 1686. In the south isle, on a small white stone in the shape of a heart, Joseph Hasted died an infant, 1769. On a brass plate with the figure of a priest, an inscription for this church for ever, the yearly value 5s. (e) In the antient taxation, this church was valued at ten marcs.

This rectory is valued in the King's books at 7l. 17s. 11d. and the yearly tenths at ol. 15s. 9½d. (f) In 1588, it was valued with St. Mary Burgate, at 80l. Communicants 300. In 1640 it was valued at only 50l. (g)

Thomas Petit, of St. George's, Canterbury, esq; by his will in 1626, gave 50l. to be disposed of to young married couples for ever, the poorest, as near as might be, of four parishes, one of which should be that wherein he should die, which by the register, to be in this parish of St. George; a more particular account of which is given in vol. iii. of the History of Kent, under Cbilbam, p. 141.

A terrier of this rectory, dated May 13, 1630, is in the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

John Lovelle, once rector of this church, ob. April 24, 1438. On a small stone, Sarah Maria Bouchery, ob. 1683. Rebecca Bouchery, ob. 1685. Memorials for the Greenbills, Caisters, and Banks's. A memorial for Stephen Hobday, A. M. rector of Lower Hardres, and vicar of St. Dunstan's, ob. September 22, 1743. Anne Hobday, ob. 1746; Ester Hobday, ob. 1748; Edward Hobday, of London, merchant, ob. 1760. A memorial for William Copin, ob. 1633, et. 71. One for Edward Taylor, ob. 1747, et. 86. Another for Jacob Sharp, ob. 1774, et. 82; and for the Rev. John Sharp, D. D. rector of St. Mary Abchurch, London, late Fellow of C. C. C. ob. 1772, et. 44; and for his mother Elizabeth Sharp, ob. 1780, et. 81. A memorial for Thomas Cunry, late of Ash, ob. 1641, et. 50. Arms—A pile issuing from the chief between 4 fleurs de lis, over all a fess. A memorial for Algerina Dashwood, ob. 1748, et. 76. In this church are, besides the hatchments already mentioned above, these following. One against the south wall; arms—1st and 4th, argent, a chevron engrailed between 3 cocks argent, crested, &c. gules; 2d and 3d, quarterly; 1st, or, an eagle displayed sable, legged gules; 2d and 3d, gules; 4th, or. On the 2d arms, Hills, sable, a chevron between 3 fleurs de lis or; on the 3d arms, Hills, impaling or, a chevron engrailed, between 3 cocks argent; on a 4th arms, or, 3 roses gules, seeded and barbed proper.

Besides the above there are entries in the register of the burials of the Thornbersts, Masters, and Petytts. The Lady Mills in 1634, Courthopes, Sakers, Wraitbs, Hasteds, Barretts, Foches, Hardres's, sir Peter Gleane, bart. who died an immature death in 1719, and Peters's.

The register begins in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, anno 1538, being at first only a copy taken from the old register, as is mentioned in the title of the book. The register itself begins anno 1574.

Richard Pargate, a wealthy citizen of Canterbury, who died in 1457, was buried in this church, in the Lady chapel, before the altar, and gave towards the paving the isle of the church, where his father lay, 20s. William Tenbam, esq; of this parish in 1500, was buried in the same chapel, at the head of Edward Pargate there. John Rose, alderman, in this church in 1591.

(d) See the petitions and instruments, for the uniting of these churches, above.

(e) See this return of the commissioners, printed at the end of Battely's Somner.

(f) Rent to the church wardens 3s. 4d. pension to the priory of Christ church 5s. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 26.

(g) Without the church of Burgate.

CHURCH

CHURCH OF ST. GEORGE.

PATRONS, or by whom presented.	RECTORS.
Prior and Convent of Canterbury.	(b) John de Natyndon, about 1330. (i) John Lovel, obt. April 24, 1438. (k) John Williamson, L.L. B. in 1490 and 1519. (l) Edward Broughton, in 1523. (m) William Bassenden . . . 1558.
Dean and Chapter of Canterbury.	Mark Saunders, Nov. 12, 1574. (n) Thomas Wilson, A. M. July 21, 1586, obt. Jan. 1621. Thomas Jackson, A. M. presented April 1622, obt. 1661. (o) Blaze White, A. M. May 7, 1661, refig. 1666. (p) Elisha Robinson, A. B. Oct. 1, 1666, obt. Jan. 30, 1670.

In whose time, viz. 1681, the churches of St. George and St. Mary Magdalen appear to have been united, and the next incumbent and his successors have been presented to these united rectories.

John Sargenson obt. 1684.

(b) See Battely's Somner, p. 68.

(i) He lies buried in this church:

(k) Wills, Prerog. off.

(l) He was likewise the Archbishop's commissary.

(m) See Strype's Annals, p. 43, 46.

(n) See parish register of Lewisham. He was buried in this church-yard, at the end of the chancel, on January 23. His will is in Prerog. off. Canterbury, in which he styles himself minister of God's word, in St. George's, Canterbury. See Granger, vol. i, p. 254.

(o) Likewise rector of Stonar.

(p) He was buried in the body of St. George's church.

(r) He was afterwards rector of Chartham.

(s) He was likewise rector of Mersham, and one of the Six Preachers.

(t) He was a Prebendary of Canterbury, and afterwards rector of North Cray and of St. Swithin's, Londonstone.

(u) He held the rectory of Pluckley with these churches, both which he resigned for that of Ickham. He was afterwards a Prebendary of Canterbury, and Archdeacon of the diocese, and on his elder brother's death succeeded to the title of baronet.

(w) And rector of Chartham, by dispensation. He lies buried in this church.

(x) He had been rector of Brook, and vicar of Milton by Sittingbourne; he resigned these churches of St. George and St. Mary Magdalen on being inducted to the vicarage of Stone in Oxney, and is one of the Minor Canons of this cathedral.

Francis Master, A. M. presented July 10, 1684, obt. 1686.

(r) John Maximilian Delangle, S. T. P. July 3, 1686, refig. 1692.

(s) John Cooke, A. M. March 9, 1692, obt. 1726.

(t) William Ayerst, S. T. P. Dec. 10, 1726, resigned 1729.

(u) John Head, A. M. Feb. 10, 1730, refig. 1760.

(v) Thomas Forster, A. M. July 21, 1761, obt. Sept. 13, 1764.

(w) Francis Gregory, A. M. Dec. 11, 1764, refig. May 1777.

(x) James Ford, A. B. 1777. Present Rector.

ST. MARGARET'S church stands on the west side of the street of the same name. It is a large building, consisting of three isles and three chancels, having a tower steeple at the west end of the south isle; there are three bells in it (y).

It appears by the survey of the Commissioners, anno 2 Edward VI, that the lamp lands given by the last will of John Wynter, and Joane his wife, for the maintenance of a lamp within this church for ever, as has been mentioned above, were of the yearly value of 12s. of which the outgoings were 10d. clear 11s. 2d. and there were obit lands given to this church by the will of James

(x) One of the Minor Canons of the cathedral.

(y) On the first bell is the date 1599; on the second, in old English letters, Josephus Hatch me fecit 1625; on the third, the same. Mr. Somner mentions several antient memorials on brasses in this church, all which are long since destroyed; viz. for Leonard Cotton, gent. mayor of this city in 1579, obt. 1605, et. 80, of whom mention has been made above, in the account of his charitable benefaction to Maynard's Spital. Another for Thomas Fort and Elizabeth his wife. One for John Holbrand, and Joane and Joane, his wives, obt. 1452. Another for Richard Pret, of Canterbury, citizen and draper, and Alice his wife. There had been other antient inscriptions, but the brasses were gone; perhaps among them was one for John Broker, of this parish, in his time an alderman, and twice mayor of this city, who by his will in 1521, appointed to be buried before St. John's altar, in this church, the south chancel being dedicated to that saint, and the other to our Lady, each of which had its proper altar, the official's court, standing in the place of the latter. This John Broker was a good benefactor to this city and left a sum of money to be bestowed on the reparation of the way between the castle gate and the Tren cross, in the ward of Worgate. In the windows of this church were formerly these arms—Clifford, impaling Savage. Browne, impaling Glover; and a coat;—Argent, a bend sable, on a canton azure, a fleur de lis argent, impaling or, on a fess vert, a hind passant of the field. Among others, there are in this church the following monuments and grave-stones. On the north side of the CHURCHES.—S T. MARGARET.

Ase, for one obit, to be kept in it for ever; that they were of the yearly value of 4s. the outgoings of which were 8d. clear 3s. 4d. per annum (x).

In this church is held an Ecclesiastical Court, in which the Archbishop once in four years visits the clergy in the neighbouring parts of his diocese; besides which, there are two other visitations annually held in it by the Archdeacon, or his Official, one for his clergy, the other for the churchwardens only; the parishes exempt from his jurisdiction being visited by the Commissary, at such time as he is pleased to appoint. In the altar, a handsome monument, for ſir George Newman, L. L. D. Commissary to the Archbishops Whitgift, Bancroft, and Abbott, and Judge of the Cinque Ports to the Lords Warden, Lord Cobham, Earl of Northampton, the Lord Zouch, and the Duke of Buckingham, almost for 30 years; he was thrice married, first to Elizabeth Wycliff; secondly, to Mary Gough; and thirdly, to Sybilla Wenland, who survived him. He had issue by them 11 children, viz. by the first, Elizabeth and Richard; by the second, Mary, married to H. C. esq; by the third, four sons and four daughters, of whom he left surviving four only, viz. Margaret, George, James and Sybilla. He died in 1627, æt. 65, and his eldest son the same year, æt. 28, about four months after him. Arms—Or, a fess dancette gules, between 3 eagles, displayed sable. A mural monument on the south side of the altar, for George Barrett, esq; eldest son of ſir Paul Barrett, bart. obt. 1709, æt. 46; and also for Susan, his wife, daughter of Thomas Green, gent. obt. 1711, æt. 49. The monument erected by Thomas Barrett, esq; their only child. Arms—Or, on a chevron between 3 mullets sable, 3 lions rampant of the field, impaling azure, 3 stags tripping or. An antient mural monument, with the half-length effigies of a man, and inscription for John Watſon, who had been mayor, chamberlain, and sheriff of this city, and was a good benefactor to the poor of it, obt. 1633; and also for Leonard Cotton, once mayor, and sheriff of it, a benefactor likewise to it. (See their gifts to this city above, among the benefactions given to it.) At the west end of the middle isle, a mural tablet for Mary Burnby, the daughter of Thomas Woolley Pickering, by Mary his wife; she died in 1786, æt. 36, and an infant son, named John. At the east end of the north isle, a mural monument for Paul Lukin, gent. proctor in the two ecclesiastical courts of the Archbishop and Archdeacon, and 20 years auditor to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, and for his wife, daughter of Martin Hirst, gent. married near 39 years, and had a numerous issue. He died in 1716, æt. 72; she died near six months after him in the same year, æt. 58. Arms on the west side,—Sable, 3 mullets argent, on a chief of the last, a demi lion rampant, vert, impaling azure, a sun in its glory or; on the east side the same arms, without the impalement. A mural monument near the last, for Anthony Oughſon, gent. descended from an antient family of that name, at Fillongley, in Warwickſhire, but for 66 years an inhabitant of this parish; and for Anne his wife, daughter of ſir James Bunce, of Kemſing, by Dorothy, daughter of ſir William Hugesſen, of Provender. They had issue three sons and one daughter, of whom the last only survived, and erected this monument. He died 1750, æt. 87; she died 1732, æt. 66. Arms—Paly gules and azure, a lion rampant or, impaling azure, on a fess argent, 3 eagles displayed of the field, between 3 bears of the second. Near the pulpit is a mural tablet, in a frame carved and gilt, for Francis Aldrich, S. T. P. principal of Sidney College, Cambridge, obt. 1609, æt. 33. This monument was erected by his son, this church likewise, and in a court he has in the body of the cathedral, causes for fornication, defamation and other ecclesiastical matters, are tried before surrogates, appointed to that office. This church, which is a rectory, was part of the possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, and was in the year 1271, being the last of K. Henry III, given by them at the instance of Hugh Mortimer, Archdeacon of Canterbury, in pure and perpetual alms, to the hospital of Poor Priests, in this city, with which it remained till the suppression of it in the 17th year of Q. Elizabeth's

Simon Aldrich. Arms—Argent, a bend engrailed, on a canton or, a pheaon azure, impaling or, on a fess azure, an afs proper. A brass plate, having the effigies of a man, and inscription for John Wynter, mayor of Canterbury, obt. 1520; who by his will founded a lamp to burn before the high altar of this church, in perpetual memory of the most holy body of our Lord Jesus Christ, for which purpose he gave two tenements at the Trencroſſe, in this parish, of the yearly value of 16s. and to free the church-yard of this church from the yearly rent of 3s. to the Prior and Convent of Christ church, arising from the same. A mural monument for William Somner, that industrious antiquary, author of the history of Canterbury, and several other learned books and curious tracts of antiquity. He was born March 30, 1606, obt. March 30, 1669. Arms at the top,—Ermine, 2 chevrons gules; at the bottom the same, impaling azure, a chevron ermure, between 3 arrows, on a chief argent, 2 birds sable, legged gules; on a canton gules, a mullet or. In the middle isle are flat stones, and memorials for Jane, wife of Rev. Thomas Leigh, rector of this parish, obt. 1707, æt. 70, and for the said Rev. Thomas Leigh, obt. April 19, 1774, æt. 67, rector of this church and of Murſton 40 years. For Valentine Jeken, obt. 1746, æt. 23. Alderman Jeken, obt. 1750, æt. 81. John Jeken, town clerk, obt. 1767, æt. 55. Thomas Leigh, obt. 1748, æt. 12. For the Biggs's, Pilchers, Lane, Read, Beaumonts, Obrien, Broxup, Wilson, Carters, White, and Warmer. For Paul Lukin, and Grace his wife; Thomas their son died æt. 19; Anne, æt. 22, both in 1715. In the north isle, for Aphra Raylton, obt. 1737, æt. 26; Robert her father, obt. 1738, æt. 52; Aphra his wife, obt. 1749, æt. 66; Elizabeth their daughter, obt. 1757, æt. 47. For Stephen Bean, of Wingham, obt. 1753, æt. 46. For John Darken, M. D. obt. 1784, æt. 74. For Anne Brandon, widow of William Brandon, of Portsmouth, esq; obt. 1762, æt. 93. For William Hatcher, obt. 177-, æt. 86; and Mary his wife, obt. 1780, æt. 79. For Lancelot Lovelace, recorder of this city; and Marcy . . . 1640, for Richard Botting, of this city, surgeon, obt. 1757, æt. 60; and for his son Richard Botting, of Faverſham, surgeon, who died an untimely death, in 1765, æt. 35; also for Anne, relict of Richard Botting, and daughter of Simon Holcomb, esq; obt. 1769. Leonard Brownt, of Canterbury, gent. and alderman of the same, was buried in 1671, in the north isle, near the font. Frances Newman, of Canterbury, widow, was buried in 1686, in this church near her husband George Newman, esq; Barbara Hennington, of the Archbishop's palace, widow, in 1706, in the grave of Mr. Somner, her husband. Judith Lovelace, of this parish, widow, buried in 1712, in the chancel near her sons. John Somner, of the Archbishop's palace, gent. in 1679, in this church. Besides these there are in the register, frequent burials of the Somners, Lovelaces, Lukins, Barratts, and Primroses. The register begins so late as the year 1654.

(x) The survey of the commissioners is printed at the end of Battely's Somner.

reign,

CHURCHES.—ST. MARGARET.—ST. MARY BREADMAN.

reign (a); after which the patronage of this rectory became vested in the Archdeacon of Canterbury and his successors, with whom it has continued ever since; the Rev. the Archdeacon of Canterbury being the present patron of it.

In the ancient valuation this church of St. Margaret was valued at four pounds per annum.

This rectory is now of the clear yearly certified value of 63l. 10s. od. (b)

In the register of this parish is entered a certificate of the birth of Raymond Thomas, eldest son of the Hon. Henry Arundel, eldest son of the Lord Arundel of Wardour, in the year 1619, on Nov. 11.

CHURCH OF ST. MARGARET.

PATRONS, or by whom presented:	RECTORS.
	John . . . in 1216.
	Thomas Wyke, 1373.
	(c) Philip Taylor, in 1521.
	Nicholas Langdon obt. 1554.
	Hugh Barret, inducted July 27, 1554.
The Archdeacon.	Blaze Wynter, March 16, 1575.
The King by lapse.	(d) Philomen Pownel, cl. Sept. 21, 1626.
	(e) Francis Rogers, S. T. P. . . . obt. July 23, 1638.

(a) See an account of this hospital, above.

(b) Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 28. See Comp. among the Cotton Mss. Claudius D. x.—

(c) He is mentioned in a will in Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(d) A dispensation passed, dated Sept. 14, 1626, for his holding the rectory of All Saints, with the hospital of Poor Priests, in Canterbury, and the parish church of St. Margaret annexed to it. Rym. Fœd. vol. xviii, p. 878. It is observable, that he had a separate induction to St. Margaret's and the above hospital, and to both on Sept. 21.

(e) He was rector of Denton and vicar of Alkham, and son of Dr. Rogers, Dean of Canterbury, and Bishop Suffragan of Dover. See Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 587.

(f) He was presented to the hospital of Poor Priests in Canterbury, with the church of St. Margaret annexed to it, and in the patronage of the crown by lapse. Rym. Fœd. vol. xx, p. 313.

(g) He was buried in this church.

(h) He had been rector of St. Mary Bredin and held the rectory of St. Mary Magdalen Burgate, with this rectory by dispensation. He lies buried in St. Margaret's church, with many more of his family.

(i) Also vicar of Brookland, and a Minor Canon of the cathedral.

(k) Rector likewise of Murston near Sittingborne, and curate of Iwade.

(l) It was antiently called in latin, Ecclesia S. Mariæ Piscatorum, i. e. St. Mary Fishman's church, from a fish market held by it; and in yet earlier times, Ecclesia S. Mariæ de Andrefgate, from that place hard by it, where the four ways met at the old St. Andrew's church, once called Andrefgate, that is, Andrew's gate. See Battely's Somner, p. 164.

(m) The bell has on it the date 1. 5. 9. 7. Som-

(f) Tho. Ventris, cl. A. M.
August 10, 1638, ejected
1662.

(g) William Hawkins, 1662,
. . . obt. May 1674.

(b) William Lovelace, 1674,
. . . obt. Aug. 1683.

(i) Thomas Johnson, 1713,
. . . obt. Nov. 6, 1727.

Henry Shove, A. M. Dec.
15, 1727, refig. 1737.

(k) Thomas Leigh, A. M.
1737, . . . obt. April
18, 1774.

Gilman Wall, A. M. 1774.
Present Rector.

ST. MARY BREADMAN'S church, so named to distinguish it from the others in this city, dedicated to St. Mary, which surname it had from the Bread Market, formerly kept beside it (l).

This church stands on the south side of the High-street, near the centre of it. It is a very ancient building, seemingly of the early part of the Norman times. It is rather small, consisting of two isles and two chancels, having a tower steeple at the west end of it, in which hangs one bell (m).

This church, as well as those of St. George and St. Peter, was antiently of the patronage of the Priory of Christ church, as were likewise St. Michael Burgate, and St. Mary Queningate, both never has preserved two antient inscriptions in this church, now obliterated, viz. in the chancel a brass plate and inscription in old English letters, for Thomas Alcock, rector, who died on Holy Cross day, anno 1500. And another inscription on brass in the body, for William Megg, sometime alderman of this city, who died in 1519.

The following monuments and grave-stones are, among others, remaining in it, viz. a mural monument near the altar, for Joseph Colfe, esq; alderman, sometime mayor and Justice of the Peace for this city, obt. 1620. His 1st wife was Budwine, by whom he had issue nine children, of whom four died before him. He left surviving, by his 2d wife Margaret, three sons and two daughters; Joseph, Thomas, Charles, Mary and Anne; which wife, his three sons and the husbands of his two daughters, erected this monument, viz. Thomas Jackson, Joseph, Thomas and Charles Colfe, and Richard Henley. Arms, on a shield quarterly, 1st and 4th, Colfe, or, a fess between 3 horses current 2 and 1 sable; 2d and 3d, azure, a cross chequy, or and gules, between 4 mullets of the 2d; on each side the arms of Colfe singly. A memorial close to the altar-rails, for sir Paul Barrett, knt. Sergeant at Law. He had three wives; the first was Mary, daughter and heir of Thomas Stanley, of this city, gent. by whom he had four sons and four daughters, five of whom survived, obt. 1685, æt. 53. Arms on a shield above, Barrett impaling Stanley, a crescent for difference. Another adjoining, for Mary, wife of Paul Barrett, of this city, esq; only daughter and heir of Thomas Stanley, late of this city, gent. obt. 1672, æt. 32. A memorial westward of the above, the 1st part of which is covered by the step. . . likewise for Hester, only daughter of Mr. John and Hester Warly, obt. 1707. A memorial for John Lec, of this city, gent. obt. 1722, æt. 59. He left issue by Mary his wife, one daughter long since demolished; all which five churches, together with that of St. Sepulchre, were confirmed to the priory, by the bulls of Pope Alexander III, and several succeeding Popes, and each of them paid to it an annual pension; this of St. Mary Breadman paid yearly 6d.

CHURCHES.—ST. MARY BREADMAN.

After the dissolution the patronage of it was granted to the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, who possessed the entire presentation to it till the year 1681; when the church of St. Andrew adjoining, of the patronage of the Archbishop of Canterbury, being united to it, the future right of presentation to these united churches was decreed; two turns to the Archbishop, and one turn to the Dean and Chapter; in which state it continues at this time. This church of St. Mary Breadman, though it has the smallest parish, yet is esteemed the mother church to the other (n).

This church was valued in the antient taxation at four marcs; but from the slenderness of its income, was not charged to the tenth (nn). It is valued in the King's books at 9l. per annum.

There is a terrier of this rectory, dated May 10, 1630, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

CHURCH OF ST. MARY BREADMAN.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

RECTORS.

Prior and Convent (o) Richard Langdon, anno of Christ church. 25 Edward III.

John Colley.

Thomas Alcock, obt. on Holy Cross day, 1500.

ter Mary, who married Mr. John Warly, surgeon, of this city. On a stone adjoining, on a brass plate, an inscription in capitals, for Matthew Gibbon, of London, obt. 1657, æt. 9. Below the above, is a stone, having on brass the small figure of a priest, with his hands closed in prayer, and inscription in old English letter, for Robert Richmond, rector of this church, obt. July 8, 1524. A small stone for two infant daughters of the Rev. John Duncombe, rector of this parish, and Susanna his wife; another for an infant son of the same. A memorial for the Rev. John Duncombe, rector of this parish and St. Andrew's united, vicar of Herne, and one of the Six Preachers of the cathedral, obt. Jan. 19, 1786, æt. 56. In the south isle, two small stones and memorials, for Jane and Susanna Staines, who died infants. In the cross space, near the west end, a memorial for Mr. William Powell, of this parish, obt. 1694, æt. 42. At the north side of the above, a memorial for Sarah Garratt, late wife of John Garratt, obt. 1714, æt. 55. A memorial for Richard Iddenden, and . . . his wife; he died 167. . . she died 1676; the rest obliterated. A memorial within the north door, near the west end, shewing that in a vault underneath lies George Knowler, son of George Knowler, of this parish, alderman of this city, and Elizabeth his wife, obt. 1776, æt. 18; likewise Mrs. Anne Brisenden, aunt to the above, obt. 1783, æt. 65.

(n) See the petitions for uniting these churches, and the Archbishop's decree thereon, above; by which this church

Robert Richmond, obt. July 18, 1524.

The Dean & Chap. William Mellrose of Canterbury. John Fanting.

The Queen by lapse. James Bisset, March 12, 1590

Dean and Chapter. Nicholas Benart, in 1604. Matthew Wariner, Jan. 29, 1637.

The Archbishop. Arthur Kay, S. T. P. July 18, 1673.

At which time these two churches of St. Mary Breadman and St. Andrew appear to have been united, viz. in 1681; so that he was collated to both of them united, as were the succeeding rectors. Dr. Kay died in 1701, and was succeeded by

The Archbishop. (p) John Paris, A. B. collated Nov. 7, 1701, obt. Nov. 5, 1709.

Dean and Chapter. (q) Robert Cumberland, A. M. presented January 19, 1709, obt. November 6, 1734.

The Archbishop. (r) William Wood, A. M. collated Dec. 1734, obt. Feb. 13, 1736.

Isaac Terry, A. M. induct. Feb. 20, 1736, obt. Dec. 1744.

Dean and Chapter. (s) Francis Walwyn, S. T. P. presented May 9, 1745, resigned 1757.

The Archbishop. (t) John Duncombe, A. M. collated Jan. 25, 1757, obt. 1786.

and St. Andrew's were united, and the former declared to be the church presentative, and that the parishioners of both should resort to the same, as their proper church, and that the patron of St. Andrew's should have the right of presentation upon the then vacancy, and upon the next avoidance that should after happen; and the patron of St. Mary Breadman the next after that, and so in the same proportion and order of turns for ever.

(nn) Thorn, col. 2169.

(o) He lies buried in this church, as do his successors down to Fanting inclusive.

(p) He was likewise vicar of Bekeborne, and master of Eastbridge hospital, St. John and St. Nicholas, Harbledown, and was buried in St. Andrew's church, æt. 51.

(q) He held the rectory of Hastingleigh with these churches, and was a Minor Canon of the cathedral.

(r) He resigned the rectory of Westbere for these churches, and was perpetual curate of Goodnestone, by Sanawich.

(s) He had been rector of East Peckham and Great Mongeham, and was afterwards rector of Adisiam, and a Prebendary of Canterbury.

(t) Late Fellow of Bennet College, in Cambridge; in 1763 he had a dispensation to hold West Thurrock, in Essex, with these churches; he was afterwards vicar of Herne, and a Six Preacher. He was the author of several learned publications of various sorts;

William

CHURCHES.—ST. MARY BREADMAN.

(*) William Gregory, A. M. collated 1786. Present Rector.

ST. MARY BREDIN, usually called Little Lady Dungeon (v) church, is situated at a small distance north westward from the Dungeon, whence it takes that name, and Watling-street. It is a very small building, seemingly antient, consisting of a nave, and small isle on the north side of it, and a chancel; at the north-west corner is a wooden pointed turret, in which hang three small bells (w). You go down into it by several steps, which makes it very damp.

This church was built by William, furnamed

(u) He is vicar likewise of Cosmus Bleane, and master of Eastbridge hospital, and was one of the Six Preachers of the cathedral.

(v) It has the name of Little Lady, from its being the least church in this city, dedicated to our Lady, and its near situation to the Dungeon, or Dunjill as it is called by the common people, occasioned the latter name.

(w) The inscriptions on the bells are—On the 1st, R. Phelps facit. Thomas Francis church-warden, 1711—ad, in old English letters. M. A. H. T. A. †. On the 3d, in like letters, N. O. Deu. Favoamus. Jhon.

Among the monuments and inscriptions are the following.—A mural tablet over the altar for James Ley, an accomplished youth, who after having studied the law for five years at Lincoln's Inn, intending to travel, and waiting at Dover for a fair wind, was taken ill of a fever, and returning to Canterbury in hopes of recovery, died here in 1618, æt. 20. Sir James Ley, knt. (afterwards Earl of Marborough) master of the Court of Wards, the father, erected this monument to his second son. Arms below, Ley, argent, a chevron between 3 seals heads couped, sable, a crescent for difference—On the south side, Ley, as above, impaling or and azure, on a bend 3 birds—On the north side the same quarterings; 1st, argent, a chevron between 3 leopards faces, sable; 2d, or, a chevron engrailed, between 3 3d, or, a chevron azure, between 3 roses gules; 4th, argent, 3 trees erased vert, fruited or; 5th, ermine, a chevron paly of 6, or and azure, between 3 leopards faces of the last; 6th, on a chevron, azure, 3 fish, or; 7th, 8th, gules, ten bezants, 4, 3, 2, and 1; 9th, or, a lion rampant, azure; 10th, argent, a cross fleury, or. A mural tablet and inscription, shewing, that in a vault near it, lies Thomas Francis, obt. 1785, æt. 52. Another, on the west side of the last, for William Slodden, obt. 1788, æt. 46; he married Elizabeth-Farewell, widow of Thomas Francis, by whom he had two sons, William and James Penvold, of whom William died an infant in 1787; the latter was born a posthume five months after his father's death. A plain altar tomb on the south side of the altar rails, round the verge of which is an inscription for Humphry Hales, esq; son of sir James Hales, knt. deceased 1555. The same father sir James Hales, knt. . . . N. B. the rest hid by the pews.—A mural tablet over the above, for George Sheldon, third son of William Sheldon, of Beoly in Worcestershire, esq; who first married Frances, daughter of Thomas More, of Gobbins in Hertfordshire, esq; and afterwards Elizabeth, only daughter and heir of sir James Hales, of the Dungeon, knt. the widow of sir Stephen Hales, of Sniterfield in Warwickshire, K. B. which George died without issue in 1679, and lies buried here, as does Elizabeth his second wife, who died 1679, five months after his death. Arms above, Sheldon, viz. A fess between 3 martlets, on the west side Sheldon, impaling Hales; on the south side the same, impaling More, viz. a chevron, be-

Fitzhamon, being the son of Hamon, the son of Vitalis, one of those who came over from Normandy with William the Conqueror. This William was, no doubt, the patron of this church, which he had built, and most probably gave it to the neighbouring nunnery of St. Sepulchre, where it staid till the dissolution of that house in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, when the patronage of it was granted anno 29th of it, with the nunnery and the rest of the possessions of it, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, subject nevertheless to the payment of 3s. to the vicar of this church; all which were again reconveyed by the Archbishop to the King in his 37th year, in exchange for other between 3 moorcocks. About the middle of the north side is a handsome mural monument, on which, among much sculpture, are the figures of a man and woman kneeling before a desk, and inscription for William Mann, esq; erected by Francis Blenerhasset, his latter wife having been married to him near four years. He died in 1615, æt. 56. Arms—Mann, or, a chevron ermines, between 3 lions rampant sable, impaling gules, a chevron ermine, between 3 fish argent, a crescent for difference. A mural tablet near the above, for sir Christopher Man, knt. buried near to his brother here, obt. 1638, æt. 76. Arms on the west side, Man, as before, impaling Monings, viz. gules, 3 crescents, or. In the middle, Man impaling ermine, 6 escallops gules; on the east side, Man impaling Sbirley, viz. bendy of 8, argent and azure, a canton ermine, quartering 2d, argent, a chevron sable, between 3 martlets gules; 3d, ermine, a cross fery, gules. A mural tablet for Lady Elizabeth Man, daughter of Richard Willys, of Baals, in the county of Hertford, esq; late wife of sir William Man, of this city, knt. by whom he had issue, Elizabeth, Jane, Anne, William, Christopher, and Richard; she died in 1642, æt. 26. Arms—Man quartering ermine, 6 escallops gules, impaling Willys, parted per fess, gules and azure, 3 lions rampant, counter-changed; a bordure ermine, quartering 2d, argent, a lion rampant, sable; 3d, gules, 2 bars or, in chief 3 bezants. A brass plate near the step, close to the altar rails, and inscription for Christopher Bachelor, late of this parish, and Katherine, his wife, daughter of Herbert Finch, gent. who lived together 60 years, and had issue three sons and eight daughters, and both died in Sept. 1604. Arms—on a bend, 3 fleurs de lis, between 3 wings, impaling Finch, quartering a saltier engrailed, between 4 lions heads erased. A brass plate, with the arms of Finch; the figure and inscription lost. A memorial for Mary, wife of John Wigzell, of this parish, gent. obt. 1788, æt. 50. A memorial for six infant children of the name of Francis. In the north isle, on a flat stone, under the belfry, a memorial for Captain James Harris, of Major General Willis's regiment of marines, obt. 1705, æt. 50. Arms—3 crescents, 2 and 1.—A flat stone and memorial for Mrs. Abigail, widow of Mr. Robert Darnald, and grand-daughter of sir Thomas Hayes, sometime Lord Mayor of London, and daughter of Edward Colimore, esq; of Brandford in Suffolk, obt. 1707, æt. 72. Arms—in a lozenge ermine, a canton ermines, impaling a chevron between 3 bugle horns. A plain stone for Day, daughter of Rob. of the Ile of Thanet, issue by her, three s. He died 38 y 1632. N. B. the rest is hid by the pews. In the chancel are memorials for Nathaniel Denew, who had by his wife Dorothy, daughter of Abraham Jacob, of Dover, two sons and three daughters, obt. 1720, æt. 55; also the above Denew, obt. 1723, æt. 20. Dorothy, wife of the above Nathaniel Denew, obt. 1743, æt. 75. Arms—Denew, viz. or, premises (x), and he granted them the following year to the Hales's, lords of the manor of the Dungeon, whose burial place was within this church; since which the patronage of it has continued in the possession of the owners of that manor, down to Henry Lee Warner, of Walsingham Abbey, in Norfolk, the present patron of it.

CHURCHES.—ST. MARY BREDIN—ST. MARY MAGDALEN.

Upon the decline of the church of St. Edmund of Riding-gate, not far distant, of the patronage likewise of the same nunnery, it was in 1349 united to this of St. Mary Bredin, with the consent of the Priores and Convent (y).

In the ancient taxation this church is valued at five marks, but on account of the slenderness of its income was not charged to the tenth (z). This vicarage is valued in the King's books at 4l. 1s. 5½d. and the yearly tenths at ol. 8s. 1½d (a). In 1588 it was valued at 20l. Communicants 82. It is now of the clear yearly value, as certified, of 18l. 18s. od. (b)

It was held for a long time as a donative, that is, from about 1670 to 1742, and a curate was licenced to serve in it; but in the latter year the Rev. Curteis Wightwick took out the seals for it, and was presented to it as a vicarage, by the Lord Chancellor; on his resignation in 1751, it was again held in sequestration, and continues so at this time.

There is a terrier of this rectory, dated Aug. 24, 1615, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

THE CHURCH OF ST. MARY BREDIN.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

VICARS.

(c) Wm Dobbynson, in 1556.

5 chevrons azure, impaling or, on a canton gules, an eagle displayed of the field. A memorial, much obliterated, for Edward Master, obt. 1638, æt. 21. Another for George Master, obt. 1652, æt. 25. At the west end of the south isle, a memorial for Titus Rufford, obt. 1696, æt. 74. Another nearly obliterated, for sr Christopher Man, Esq. and for sr William Man, knt. only son of the same, by his second wife Frances, daughter of sr Edward Master, knt. Another for Joyce, daughter of sr Christopher Man, knt. died an infant, 1636; Anne, daughter of sr William Man, by his wife Elizabeth Willys, obt. 1637; Richard, his son, obt. 1642, infants; Jane, second daughter of the same, obt. 1673. A memorial for Katherine, eldest daughter of John Shirley, of Lewes in Suffex; 1st married to Whittingham Wood, of Bromley, esq; died the widow of sr Christopher Man, knt. obt. 1641, æt. 49. Another for Joshua Webster, sometime a merchant in London, trading to the Lewant sea, but at his death an inhabitant of this parish, obt. 1696, æt. 52; he was by his will a good benefactor to the school founded and endowed by his father, at Whittington in co. of Derby.

Somner says, that John Hales, Humphry Hales, and James Hales, lie buried in this church; likewise John Hales, son of John Hales, second Baron of the Exchequer, which John, the son, died May 4, 1532, as appeared by the inscription on brass, still remaining on his grave-stone here; and that the effigies and coat armour of John Chiche, who lived in K. Henry III.'s reign, and was owner of the Dungeon manor adjoining, which coat was, argent 3 lions rampant azure, (d) Thomas Panton, in 1572.

The Queen, bac vice. John Milner, A. B. March 27, 1596, refig. 1599.

Richard Hardres, John Taylor, A. M. Feb. 24, 1599, refig. 1601.

of Hardres, esq; Wm Strudle, Feb. 13, 1601, refig. 1606.

(e) Christopher Cage, Dec. 6, 1606, refig. 1610.

John Sheperd, Sept. 8, 1610 and in 1636.

William Lovelace, in 1663.

After which this vicarage seems to have been looked on as a donative, and a perpetual curate was appointed to it, however, in 1737 I find it held as a sequestration, for it was then committed as such to Henry Shove, cl. who was appointed to it on Jan. 15, 1737.

Thomas Leigh, cl. succeeded him on Oct. 1737, and continued so till Curteis Wightwick, A. M. (f) was presented to it by the Lord Chancellor, on Nov. 23, and inducted the 26th, 1742; he resigned the vicarage in 1751, when it was again put in sequestration, and Thomas Leigh, cl. was again appointed to it, after whose death Gilman Wall, A. M. was appointed on Jan. 20, 1775, and is the present sequestrator of it.

ST. MARY MAGDALEN's church, in Burgate, stands on the south side of the middle of Burgate-street, being rather a small building, consisting of two isles and a chancel, having a square tower at the north-west corner, in which are three bells (g).

were painted in the west window of this church; and that the latter was carved on stone, in one corner of the chancel.

Besides the above, there are frequent entries in the register of this church, which begins in 1552, of the burials of the Berrys; of Silas Johnson, gent. in 1635; of the Mans, Spencers, the Lady Coventry, in 1710, the Denews, Houghams, and Lees. James Dunkin, alderman of this city, was buried in this church in 1624.

(x) Augmentation-office, deeds of purchase and exchange, box Kent, D. 75.

(y) The union of these churches, made by the Prior and Chapter of Canterbury, sede vacante, on Nov. 3, anno 1349, is in Regist. E. Eccles. Christi, Cant. fol. 46^b. a. b. by which Register, fol. 1, it appears, that the Priores and Convent had only a few quarters of corn out of it for themselves, and the vicars had all the other profits.

(z) Thorn, col. 2169.

(a) Viz. endow in decim. predial and personal, & al spiritual profic. per annum 1l. 3s. 4d. Pens recep. Prioris Sci Sepulchri, 3s. prox. 2s. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 27.

(b) Bacon ibid.

(c) Wills, Prerog. off.

(d) And rector of St. Mary Magdalen Burgate.

(e) He was likewise vicar of Littleborne.

(f) He was rector of Bonnington.

(g) On the bells are the following inscriptions, in old English characters; 1st, Joseph Hatch made mee, 1616; 2d,

Sanctis

CHURCHES.—ST. MARY MAGDALEN.

This church, which is a rectory, was part of the possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, and continued with it till the final dissolution of the monastery in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII.'s reign, when it came into the King's hands, who granted it soon afterwards in his 33d year, to his new-founded Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, where the patronage of this church, since united in 1681, as mentioned above, to that of St. George's, remains at this time.

One Richard Wekys, of this parish, butcher, in 1471, was a great benefactor to this church. The steeple of it was new built in 1503; towards which one sir Harry Ramsay, of St. George's, was a benefactor (b). John Fremingbam, esq; who was Mayor of this city in 1461, gave by his will, among other acts of piety, 20 nobles to this church (i).

By the return of the King's Commissioners, an. 2 Edward VI, it appears, that there were lands given by Edm. Brandon, by his last will, to the Sancte Petre ora pro nobis. J. S.—3d, Sancte Patricia ora pro nobis

Among the monuments and grave-stones in this church, are the following, viz. at the east end of the south isle a mural tablet for Mr. Edward Dering, late of Doddington, obt. 1786, et. 69. Arms—Or, on a saltier sable, a crescent for difference; another, shewing that in a vault near, are deposited the remains of Richard Barbam, esq; obt. 1784, et. 74. Elizabeth his wife died 1781, et. 74. Elizabeth their daughter died 1782, et. 46, and Sarah their daughter, obt. 1784, et. 44. Arms—Argent, on a fess gules, a fleur de lis and 2 martlets or, between 3 bears passant sable, impaling gules, 9 martlets, over all an escutcheon argent. A mural monument for Henry Saunders, counsellor at law, of this parish, who married Jane, eldest daughter of Thomas Paramor, of Fordwich, esq; by whom he had an only daughter and heir Anne, married to John, son and heir apparent of Thomas Marsh, of Tipton in Devon, gent. He died in 1637, et. 63. Arms—Parted per chevron, sable and argent, 3 elephants heads counterchanged as the field, impaling Paramor. A mural monument near the pulpit, for Michael and Thomas Paramore, gents. sons of Thomas Paramore, esq; sometimes mayor of this city. Michael died et. 9, and Thomas, who married Anne, the daughter of Henry Franklyn, of Tbroughley, gent. obt. 1615. Arms—Paramore. In the south isle, a memorial for Ann, daughter of Benjamin Chandler, and Ann his wife, of this parish, 1740; Dawlinge Chandler, obt. 1741, and another of the same name, 1743, both infants. A memorial for Anne, wife of Benjamin Chandler, of this city, apothecary, who left three surviving sons and three daughters, obt. 1747, et. 33; also for Ijaac Casaubon Chandler, obt. 1748, an infant. Benjamin Chandler, the husband and father of the above, obt. 1778, et. 68. A memorial for Kembrom, the wife of Edward Keward, deceased, obt. 1587. Another for Elizabeth, widow of Peter Paris, of Goudhurst, obt. 1778, et. 60. In the north isle, a memorial for John the son of Mr. John Mills, obt. 1693, an infant; one for William Lofia, 1761, an infant; one for Noah Bolain and Elizabeth his wife; he died 1751, et. 61; she died 1764, et. 78; Noah their son, abs. 1764, et. 38; also Edward and Easter, children of the last-mentioned, died in their infancy. In the south isle, an elegant mural monument of rich sculpture, for John Whitfield, gent. who was buried with his grandfather and grandmother, John intent, that one priest should say the masse of Jesus weekly within this parish church of Mary Magdalen for ever, the yearly value of which was 10s. of which was clear 9s. 6d. That there was light-rent given by John Brande, by his deed for the maintenance of a light, as well to burn nightly before the body of Christ, as also at the celebration of divine service within the church for ever. The same rent was by the year 8s. (k)

In the ancient taxation, this church was valued at eight marks per ann.

This rectory is valued in the King's books at 4l. 10s. od. and the yearly tenths at ol. 9s. od. (l) —In 1588, it was valued at 20l. Communicants 93.

At a visitation holden anno 1560, it was presented, that there belonged to the parsonage house, a piece of ground called Maudelen croft, which had been wrongfully detained by Mr. Hyde, auditor of Christ church, to the great impoverishment of the parsonage (m).

and Catherine, and his parents, Henry and Anne, under it. He married Rebecca, youngest daughter of Robert Jaques formerly Sheriff of this county. She died 1685, et. 36, leaving surviving issue Anne, Rebecca, Roberta, John, Robert, and Henrietta. He was a liberal benefactor to this city, and the poor of it, by his will (which has been already mentioned above among the charitable gifts to it); he died of an apoplexy in 1692, et. 56. Arms—Whitfield impaling Jaques. A memorial for John and Jaques, sons of John Whitfield, gent. and Rebecca his wife, who died in 1668 and 1671. On a brass plate in the north isle, an inscription for Margaret Rook, obt. 1494. Another like for Joan, daughter of John Hatche, once the wife of Henry Lynde, of Canterbury, obt. 1467. On another like for Christopher Alcock, draper, obt. 1490. A plain stone and memorials on it, for C. Packe, M. D. obt. 1749, et. 59. C. Packe, an infant, obt. 1769. Maria Paake, daughter of Herbert Randolph, obt. 1772, et. 85. A memorial for John Wingate, obt. 1698, et. 54. One for Susanna, wife of John Bungay, obt. 1620. One for Susanna, wife of William Gray, obt. 1776, et. 74; also for William Gray, obt. 1784, et. 89, an inhabitant of this parish 66 years, and a member of the corporation 60; also for Martba, wife of Philip Castle, and daughter of William Gray, obt. 1788, et. 58 years.

Mr. Somner says, there was in his time an inscription on a brass plate, for Sybell, widow of Libby Orchard, late of Monkton-court, in Tbanet, obt. 1586.

In the windows of this church were formerly these arms—Sable, a chevron between 3 hawks heads argent.—Argent, a chevron gules, in chief 3 roses; in base a crescent sable.—Gules, a chevron between 3 flags heads, caboshed or; and Azure, three others in pale or. In this register, which begins so late as the year 1634, are many burials in this church, of the Lovelaces, Netherfoies, Dennes, and Whitfields, and of Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Lightfoot, of this parish, in 1614, in the chancel near her deceased husband.

(b) Battely's Somner, p. 165.

(i) Ibid. p. 181.

(k) This return is printed at the end of Batt. Somn.

(l) Redd. Priori. Sii Gregorii 2s. 8d. To the hospital of St. James 4s. In undercroft, terr. voc. Maudelyn croft, 5 acres 10s. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 27.

(m) By records it appears, that this ground lies in the parish

CHURCHES.—ST. MARY MAGDALEN.—ST. MARY NORTHGATE.

There is a terrier of this rectory, dated April 27, 1630, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

CHURCH OF ST. MARY MAGDALEN.

PATRONS.
or by whom presented.

RECTORS.

	(n) James ——— anno 27 Edward I.
	(o) Tho. Fysher , Oct. 10, 1553.
The Queen.	(p) Tho. Panton , July 9, 1580.
Dean & Chapter of Canterbury .	Thomas Warriner , Dec. 15, 1585, obt. 1606.
	George Marson , March 6, 1606, refig. 1631.
The King.	(q) John Marston , A. B. Oct. 28, 1631, obt.
Dean & Chapter.	(r) Wm Lovelace , A. M. Sept. 26, 1660, obt. Aug. 1683.

In whose time it seems, this rectory and that of St. George were united, and on his demise John Sargenson was presented the first to these united churches, and died possessed of these rectories in 1684; a list of whose successors may be found above, under the account of St. George's church.

ST. MARY NORTHGATE church is built partly over the city gate, called Northgate, and partly on the west side of it, from which is a staircase to go up to that part over the gateway, in which divine service is performed. It consists of only a body and chancel, being remarkably long and narrow, having a square tower steeple at the west end, rebuilt of brick, in the room of the old one, which fell down a few years ago (s).

Under the choir, or chancel of this church, is a vault, with an open space or loop-hole in the wall, fashioned like a cross. It was sometime a hermitage, but is now belonging to the parsonage (t).

There is a modern burying-ground belonging to this parish, on the north side of Broad-street, a little westward of Ruttington-lane.

This church, which is now a vicarage, was part of the ancient possessions of the Prior and Con- parish of St. Martin, and is bounded north by the street; southward by land of St. Augustine's; and that the parson of this church paid 4s. per annum to the hospital of St. Jacob. Bately's Somner, p. 165.

(n) Prynne, p. 824.

(o) He had the Queen's letters of presentation, anno 1553. Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 347.

(p) He was vicar of St. Mary Bredin.

(q) See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 1013.

(r) Vicar likewise of St. Mary Bredin.

(s) There were originally four bells in the old steeple, one of which, the second, is now broken. The first and third stand at the bottom of the present tower; the fourth, or tenor, is hung in its proper place. On the bells are these inscriptions: on the first, in old English letters, Joseph Hatch made mee, 1623. The second is broke and gone. On the third, in like letters, Joseph Hatch vent of St. Gregory, in Canterbury (u), with whose consent as patrons of it, Arccb. Stratford, in the year 1346, endowed the vicarage of it as follows; that the vicar and his successors, vicars in this church should have all and all manner of oblations in the church of Northgate, and in every other place within the bounds, limits or tythings of it, of whatsoever sort made, or to be made, or accruing to it, or in it, or liable to increase in future, the oblations or obventions of the hospital of Northgate alone excepted; and that the vicars should receive and have all tythes of wool, lambs, pigs, geese, apples, pears, hemp, flax, beans and other fruits and herbs, growing in orchards or gardens, and the tythes of mader (v) arising within the parish; and also all other small tythes of whatsoever sort belonging to this church, and all other profits, which the vicars of it had been used to take in former times, except all great tythes (estimated of the yearly value of four marks) belonging to it, which the religious had reserved to themselves; and that the vicars should undergo at their own costs and expences, the burthen of performing divine offices in the church and the finding of the books and ornaments of it, of the processional tapers, and of one lamp which ought to burn in the chancel of it, and the administering of bread, wine, lights, and other things there necessary for the celebration of divine rights; and also the payment of tenths, and the imposition of any other matters which should happen to be imposed on the English church, for the moiety of the tax of this church; but that the religious should acknowledge for ever, and undergo the burthen of rebuilding and repairing the chancel of it, within and without, and the payment of the tenths of this sort and the imposition of whatsoever sort for the other moiety of the taxation of it, and all the other burthens, ordinary and extraordinary incumbent, or which ought to be incumbent on it, and which were not allotted above to the vicar of it (w).

made mee, 1616. On the fourth, in like letters, William Crippin, c. w. Joseph Hatch made me, 1623.

(t) Mr. Somner has preserved the memory of these inscriptions, in this church, in old English letters, on brass plates, which have been long since lost and destroyed, viz. one for Jeffrey Holman, sq; obt. January 24, 1478. One for Walter Garrade, late vicar here, obt. August 26, 1498. Another set in the north wall, for Ralf Browne, sometime alderman and mayor of this city, in 1507 and 1510. In one of them were formerly the arms of Apulderfield, and a shield, containing 6 lions rampant. In the church is a memorial for the Macarees, but it is mostly hid by the pews. The parish register begins so late as 1640.

(u) Dugd. Mon. vol. ii, p. 374.

(v) Decimas Warentiæ, five Mader, vulgariter nuncupat. in orig.

(w) Bately's Somner, appendix, num. lxxviii. See the declaration

CHURCHES.—ST. MARY NORTHGATE.—ST. MILDRED.

After this, both the advowson and advowson of the vicarage of this church, continued with the Prior and Convent of St. Gregory, till the dissolution of it in the 27th year of K. Henry VIII, when coming into the King's hands, both of them were granted, among the rest of the possessions of the priory, to the Archbishop of Canterbury and his successors, where the appropriation still remains, his Grace the Archbishop being the present possessor of it. In the ancient taxation, this church was valued at 66s. 8d. (x)

George Gipps, esq; M. P. for this city, is the present lessee of this parsonage, worth, as estimated, only 3l. per ann.

The advowson of the vicarage likewise passed by the above grant to the Archbishop and his successors, and this vicarage being in 1681, united to the adjoining rectory of St. Alphage (y), as such, still continues in his Grace's patronage, who has ever since collated to that rectory, with the vicarage of Northgate united to it.

In the ancient taxation, this vicarage was valued at five marcs per ann. but on account of the slenderness of its income, it was not charged to the tenths (z). This vicarage is valued in the King's books at 11l. 19s. 4½d. and the yearly tenths at 1l. 3s. 11½d. (a)

Richard Mascall, of Christ church, in Canterbury, in his will proved 1703 (b), recites, that whereas he had by deed indented and inrolled in Chancery, and dated June 22, 1692, and by other conveyances purchased of Joseph Wells, of Ash, yeoman, one annuity or yearly rent charge of 4l. issuing out of the manor of Mardall, with its appurtenances, in Hothfeld and Ashford; he then gave one moiety of the same to the poor people of St. Mary Northgate for ever, to be distributed among the most indigent poor people of it, by the minister, churchwardens and overseers of the poor of it, within ten days after they should receive the same; and the other moiety he gave to the parish of Chart next Sutton Valence, for the purposes therein mentioned, with power of distress, on non-payment, &c. and reimbursement of all costs and charges, from time to time, out of the said manor and lands and premises; and he directed a copy of the deed to be kept in the book of accounts of the parish officers of St. Mary Northgate for ever, and the original deed to be kept in the parish chest of Chart Sutton, there carefully to be preserved for ever.

CHURCH OF ST. MARY NORTHGATE.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

RECTORS.

- The Archbishop.
- (c) Thomas Skeene, in 1346.
 - (d) Walter Garrarde, in 1476, obt. Aug. 26, 1498.
 - (e) William Kempe, in 1520. William Page, in 1523.
 - (f) William Lovell, S. T. B. Dec. 3, 1572, obt. 1581. Thomas Webbe, . . . Aug. 10, 1581. John Stybbynge, jun. March 11, 1583.
 - (g) William Okell, refig. Anthony Kirkbye, . . . June 15, 1597, refig. 1609.
 - (b) Elias Meade, A. M. Nov. 30, 1609, obt. 1612. Thomas Tatnall, A. M. Apr. 30, 1612.
 - (i) Sampson Kennard, A. M. May 29, 1612, obt. 1635. Daniel Bollen, A. M. Dec. 2, 1635. John Stockar, A. M. Sept. 24, 1663, obt. 1709.

During his time, viz. in 1681, this church and that of St. Alphage appear to have been united, so that he died rector of both churches, being the first that was so inducted to them; a list of whose successors, may be found above, under the account of St. Alphage's church.

ST. MILDRED'S church is situated at the south west extremity of the city, near the Old Castle and the river Stour, in the church-yard belonging to it. This church is a large handsome building, of three isles and three chancels, with a square tower steeple on the north side, in which are five bells (k). This church, and a great part of the city, was, according to Stow, burnt declaration made by Robert, Prior, and the Chapter of Canterbury, sede vacante, dated 1348, concerning the ordination of this vicarage, which was made on November 4, 1346. Register E fol. 12^a. Mss. Cantuar. The execution, on account of the ordination of this vicarage, dated at Canterbury, 10 kal. November, 1348. Regist. P. fol. 54^b. ibid. See Ducarel Rep. p. 17.

- (x) Thorne, col. 2166.
- (y) See St. Alphage, above, p. 467.
- (z) Thorne, col. 2169.
- (a) Viz. endow. in decim. predial personal & al spiritual, profic per annum 11l. 8s. 8d. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 27.
- (b) In Prerog. off. Canterbury.

- (c) See Somner, appendix, p. 73.
- (d) Wills, Prerog. off. He lies buried in this church.
- (e) He and his successor are both mentioned in a will, in Prerog. off. (f) His will is in Prerog. off.
- (g) He is mentioned in a will in Prerog. off. in 1604, as late minister of this parish.
- (h) His will is in Prerog. off. proved January 8, 1612.
- (i) See St. Dunstan's parish register.
- (k) On the first bell is this inscription in capitals, Richard Phelps made me, 1711. On the second, no inscription. On the third, in capitals, the same as the first. On the fourth, in old English letters, Josephus Hatch me fecit, 1622. On the fifth, a figure in relief, of Christ, bound and in the year 1246, anno 30 Henry III, but as it should seem not entirely so, for at the west end of the south aisle there is a very fair Roman arch, remaining over the window, and by all appearance the work of those times.

CHURCHES.—ST. MILDRED.

This church is a rectory, the patronage of which was part of the possessions of the Abbot and Convent of St. Augustine, with whom it con-and crowned with thorns, and this inscription, in old English letters: J. H. S. have * marce * on * the * Sowles * of * Thomas * Wood * and * Margaret * his * wyfe * a·n·n·u·n·a· m·c·c·c·c·c·x·x·x·v·j· T. M. W.

These initials surround a shield of arms (which has at each corner a coin,) viz. quarterly, 1st and 4th, a fess ingrailed, between 3 fleurs de lis; 2d and 3d, on a fess between 6 bendlets, 3 above and three below, a crescent, impaling, quarterly, 1st and 4th, a mule passant, in chief a mullet; 2d and 3d, a saltier between 4 mullets. In the middle chancel of this church are 6 flat stones, which are in part hidden by the floor, within the altar rails, and the inscriptions on the remainder are obliterated. On a stone Edwardus, the rest obliterated. Arms, on a brassplate—Parted per pale, azure and or, 3 griffins segreant, impaling gules, on a bend between 2 cotizes argent, 3 annulets or. A memorial, part obliterated, for William Glover, gent. obt. 16— Margaret his wife died in 1654, et. 79. Another for Richard Sandys, esq; grandson of Sir Richard Sandys, of Northborne, bart. obt. 1763, et. —2 years; also Susan Crayford Sandys, relict of the same, obt. 1777, et. 56. Arms, quarterly, 1st and 4th, Sandys; 2d and 3d, a castle crowned with a dome. One for the Rev. and learned John Rigden, B. D. born in this parish, educated in the King's School, vicar of Ryegate in Surrey, and Fellow of St. John's college in Cambridge, obt. 1732, et. 42; his brother William placed this stone. One for Mary, wife of Laurence Bridger, gent. obt. 1701, et. 24. On two small tablets, the names, Winifred Bridger, Laurence Bridger. On a stone, a memorial for John Stanley, cl. A. M. son of Mr. John Stanley, twice mayor of this city, obt. 1658, et. 49. Arms—Stanley, in chief a mullet, for difference. In the north chancel, a mural monument, for Thomasine Honeywood, widow, late the wife of Anthony Honeywood, of this parish, and before the wife of John Adye, of Doddington, gent. and one of the daughters and heirs of Richard Day, of Tring in the co. of Hertford, gent. who died 1626, et. 70, having had issue by her first husband two sons, John and Thomas, and five daughters; of whom John married first to Elizabeth Waller, eldest daughter of Thomas Waller, of Beaconsfield, esq; and after to Mary, daughter of Solomon Cole, of Lyffe in Hampshire, esq; Mary to John Fell of Hampsted, gent. Elizabeth to John Bix, of Bapchild, gent. Joane to Edward Ledesbam, of London, gent. and Jane to James Wood, of Tunstall, gent. Thomas and Margaret died unmarried. Arms, on the east side, Adye, impaling parted per chevron or and azure, 3 mullets pierced counterchanged. On the west side, Honeywood, impaling as above. At the top, as the impalement single. Near the above monument, against the east wall, is a small hatchment, being vairs, argent and azure, on an escutcheon of pretence, gules, a chevron or, impaling Master. On a hatchment, a memorial for John Bix, gent. obt. 1708, et. 27; and a child of his. Arms, the same, with the like impalement as that last mentioned. On another a memorial for John Bix, gent. and Frances his wife, obt. 1694, et. 81. Arms, the same as the last. A mural monument for William Smith, late of this parish, gent. and Dorothy his wife, daughter of George Juxon, late of Chart continued till the dissolution of that monastery, in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, when it came into the hands of the crown, where it has continued ever since, the King being the present patron of it.

The church of St. Mildred is valued in the ancient taxation, at eight marks per ann.

This rectory, with that of the ancient desecrated church of St. Mary de Castro, or of the Castle, is

Sutton, gent. by whom he had three sons, William, George and John; and six daughters, all surviving him. He died 1699, et. 68; she obt. 1711, et. 75. In the pavement, near the above monument, is a flat stone with the same inscription, varying only in the age, being there said to be 69. In the north aisle a small stone for Richard Teale, obt. 1759, an infant. Another for William, son of William and Susanna Eades, obt. 1761, an infant. A memorial for John Wear, gent. of this parish, obt. 1763, et. 73. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. Richard and Elizabeth Austen, and left Thomas, Elizabeth and Rebecca, also Elizabeth his wife, obt. 1775, et. 78. A memorial for Lydia, wife of William Eades, of this parish, gent. obt. 1755, et. 49. A memorial for Frances Bix, obt. 1686, an infant. A memorial for William Astong, obt. 1780, et. 26; also Augustine, son of William Haslong, esq; and lady Frances Alicia his wife, obt. 1779, an infant. Another for Elizabeth Adye, wife of John Bix, of this parish, gent. obt. 1636. A memorial for Frances, wife of James Bix, gent. obt. 1683, et. 64. She was daughter of Giles Master, esq; by his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of William Pettit, formerly of Chilham, gent. One for William Brome, son of John Brome, of Tuppence, esq; obt. 1749, et. 25. Another for Nathaniel Highmore, esq; obt. 1790, et. 66. One for Mrs. Mary Smith, obt. 1743, et. 60. A memorial for Thomas Bayly, who left issue, by Aphra his wife, one son and one daughter, obt. 1719, et. 56; also for the said Aphra, obt. 1732, et. 37. At the north-west corner stands the font. It is of stone and leaded within, in form of an octagon; each side of which is adorned with a niche, in the pedestal part, and above with quarterfoils, each containing a small ornament on a lozenge. On the first next the wall at the east side, are, in old English capitals, gilt, the letters J. H. S. In the middle space are the following stones and memorials; for Henry Waddell, alderman and twice mayor, of this city. He had two wives; first, Margaret, the daughter of Mr. ———, by whom he left only one daughter, Margaret; and afterwards Rebecca, daughter of William King, of this city, gent. by whom he left Anne, Henry, William and Rebecca, obt. 1705, et. 62; also for Rebecca his daughter above-mentioned, obt. 1709, et. 17; also for Rebecca his wife, obt. 1716, et. 50. For William Waddell and Elizabeth his wife, late of this parish, who had issue one son, Henry, surviving. She died 1712, et. 18; he died 1714, et. 24. For Aphra, the only daughter of Robert Beak, gent. obt. 1716, et. 31. Arms, quarterly, 1st and 4th, a cross moline ermines; second, Denne, of Denne-hill, viz. 3 leopards faces; third, Denne, of Thanct, as before. For Hester, daughter of Thomas and Phebe Leffroy, obt. 1706, an infant. For Katherine Fitch wife of Mr. Richard Birkenhead, obt. 1625. For Edward late of this parish, obt. 1639, et. 80. A mural tablet for Robert Gilbert, obt. 1624. A memorial close within the west door, for alderman John Garlin, twice mayor of this city, obt. 1713, et. 88. Another for Henry, son of Robert and Elizabeth Flatman, obt. 1700, et. 22; also for Anne, late wife of John Browne, second daughter of Robert and Elizabeth Flatman, obt. 1702, et. 19; also for Elizabeth last mentioned, obt. 1711, et. 63. He left valued in the King's books, at 17l. 17s. 11d. and the yearly tenths at 11. 15s. 9½d. (l) In 1588, issue three daughters, Elizabeth, Margaret and Mary; also for Elizabeth, wife of Valentine Jeken, one of the daughters, obt. 1714, æt. 37. A memorial for Robert Beche, presbiter, obt. 1679, æt. 60; his widow placed this stone; also for Aphra Beake, obt. 1684, æt. 55. Also for Robert Beake, gent. son of Mr. Robert and Aphra Beake, who married Bridget the third daughter of Vincent Denne, serjeant at law, by whom he had issue one daughter, Aphra, obt. 1701, æt. 37. Arms—Beake, as before. On an hatchment, arms—Sandys, impaling Hougham, argent, 5 chevrons sable. A mural tablet at the north side of the altar, for Thomas Cranmer, esq; son of Edmund, Archdeacon of Canterbury, nephew of Thomas Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, by his brother. He was register of the Archdeaconry, and had issue by Anne, five sons and eight daughters, obt. 1604, æt. 69. Arms at top, Cranmer, Argent, on a chevron azure, between three pelicans sable, vulnerating themselves, as many cinquefoils or. On three shields on the frieze: The left shield,—Argent, on a fess between 3 lozenges sable, an annulet, quartering Cranmer. The middle one, quarterly, 1st and 4th,—Azure, 3 bars or, in the dexter chief a canton ermines; 2d and 3d, Cranmer. The right shield, quarterly, 1st and 4th—Sable; 2d and 3d, Cranmer. Two shields below, 1st quarterly; 1st and 4th, Norwood, ermine, a cross engrailed gules; 2d and 3d, Cranmer. The second shield, Cranmer singly. On the south side of the chancel, an altar tomb for fr Francis Head, bart. who married Margaret, daughter of James Smithsbye, esq; by whom he had issue six sons and three daughters, of whom four sons and one daughter survived him, viz. Richard, Francis, James, John and Anne, obt. 1716, æt. 46. Arms—Head, with the arms of Ulster, on a canton, impaling ermine, on a fess gules, 3 roses or; Smithsbye, quartering 2d and 3d, Green, azure, 3 stags tripping or. A cenotaph, in memory of fr William Cranmer, knt. the second son of William Cranmer, esq; descended from Edmond Cranmer, Archdeacon of Canterbury, and brother to the Archbishop. He was bred a merchant, and was in 1691 chosen Governor of the Merchants Adventurers Company residing in London, obt. 1697, æt. 67, unmarried; being born in this parish, and lying buried in the parish church of St. Leonard, Bromley, in Middlesex. Mr. John Kewick, his executor, out of gratitude, erected this monument. Arms, Cranmer, as before. At the north side of the chancel is a mural monument, designed by the late Captain Riou, and executed by Moore, for Winefrid Bridger, obt. 1776, and for Winefrid Bridger, her grandmother, obt. 1727; also for her father Lawrence Bridger, esq; and Mary her mother, who died in 1738 and 1701, and for her brother John Bridger, esq; obt. 1747. Arms on an hatchment above, Bridger in a lozenge, Argent, a chevron engrailed sable, between 3 crabs gules. Another, Bridger, impaling on one side,—Argent, 2 bars, in chief 3 martlets gules; on the other, Argent, a bend cotized sable. Above the tomb of fr Francis Head is a very beautiful mural monument of marble, in a pyramidal form. Upon the tablet, in front of the pyramid, is the figure of Hope, represented leaning on an urn, supposed to contain the ashes of the deceased. On each side of the tablet are basso relievos. That on the east side representing Pegasus, expressing poetical genius; the other denoting benevolence and charity, by the ancient symbol of the pelican. On the top is placed a small vase, on which are emblazoned the arms, viz. Argent, on a chevron sable 3 cinquefoils pierced of the 1st, between as many falcons heads erased azure. On the tablet is an inscription, to the memory of William Jackson, esq; of this city, obt. 1789, æt. 31, unmarried; (whose death was occasioned by a hurt it was valued at 50l. Communicants 360. In 1640, it was valued at 70. Communicants 100.

CHURCHES.—ST. MILDRED.

he received a few days before, in riding an unruly horse.) Underneath is a long epitaph, enumerating his excellent good qualities, all which he truly deserved. The monument was erected by his father and mother, John and Sarah Jackson, in 1790. The elegance of the execution of it displays the skill of the sculptor Bacon. On a flat stone in the middle of the boarded floor, under the altar, is a flat stone and memorial, telling that in a vault underneath lay Susan, the infant daughter of Richard and Catbarina Sandys, obt. 1775, and also Catbarina, wife of the Rev. Richard Sandys, of this parish above-mentioned, who died in 1777, æt. 29. Arms—Sandys, impaling Hougham.

The south chancel is now closed up from the church, but there is an access to it from the church-yard. It was formerly called the Wood's chancel, from its belonging to a family of that name. It is now in a ruinous desolate state, and the pavement sunk into a hollow, towards the vault underneath.

Somner says, that there was once in the windows of it in very ancient characters, the name of Richard At-Wood; and on a brass plate an inscription for Thomas At-Wood, esq; steward of the Archbishop's household, and mayor of this city, who in honor of Jesus caused this chapel to be made, and for Margaret his wife, daughter of John Moyle, esq; and he says that a family of this name anciently dwelt in this parish, in Stour-street, where one Thomas At-Wood dwelt in K. Henry VIII's time; being four several times mayor of this city, and kept his mayoralty in his house there. He built this chapel or chancel, for a peculiar place of sepulture for himself and his family, several of whom lie interred in it, under fair grave-stones, formerly inlaid with brass, all long since shamefully torn away; and that in the windows of this church were formerly these names; Magister John Bould—Dns. Johannes Mawny, orate p aibs Roberti Bennet & Crist. orate p aibs Johannis Boys orate p aibs Johannis Pocot & Johannis Pocot filii ejusdem; but none of these are now left. Only on the south side there remains a neat mural monument. Arms—Argent, a chevron between 3 bulls heads cabeshed sable, borned or, impaling ermine, on a chevron gules, 3 leopards faces passant fleurs de lis or, to the memory of Lady Margaret Hales, daughter and heir of Oliver Wood, esq; by Joane, daughter and heir of Henry, son and heir of fr William Cantelop, knt. She was married to three knights, viz. first, to fr Walter Mantel; secondly, to fr William Hault; and lastly, to fr James Hales, knt. She died in 1577. Thomas Newil, Dean of Canterbury, erected this monument to her memory, in 1599. Arms, on the left side—Or, a cross gules, impaling Wood. On the right side Hales, impaling Wood. At the bottom, a genealogical tree, bearing the following shields of arms. 1st, Argent, a cross engrailed between 4 martlets sable, impaling Wood. Second, obliterated, impaling the 1st coat without its impalement. Third, as the impalement of the 2d, impaling Argent, on a chevron gules, between 3 3 mullets or. 4th, the same, impaling Hales. 5th, as the 1st, impaling Azure, 3 lions rampant, 2 and 1 or. 6th, as the impalement at top, impaling Argent, a fess nebule, azure between 3 lions passant sable. 7th, as the top with the impalements. 8th, Gules, a saltier argent, impaling the 1st. 9th, Argent, 3 eagles displayed, between 2 cotizes, impaling the 1st. 10th, Sable, a bend lozengy argent. 11th, 6 coats; 1st, 3d and 5th, Azure, a lion rampant or, 2d, 4th and 6th, or, impaling the 1st.

In the register of this parish, which begins anno 1559, are several entries of the burials of the Newmans, Hand- fields, CHURCHES.—ST. MILDRED.—HOLY CROSS.

Archbishop Sancroft, by his decree, dated Sept. 29, 1684, united the rectory of All Saints, in this city, with St. Mary de Castro, of the King's patronage likewise, to this of St. Mildred (m), in which state it continues at this time. It is now of the clear annual value of 80*l.* (n)

The neighbouring church of St. John, becoming desolated after the reformation, tacitly devolved to this church of St. Mildred, and it has ever since been esteemed as part of this parish (o).

CHURCH OF ST. MILDRED.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.
The Crown.

RECTORS.

- (p) William . . . anno 27
Edward I.
(q) John Balbourne, in 1503.
(r) Humphry Gartb, in 1540.
John Hill, induct. Nov. 20,
1567, obt. 1601.
(s) Richard Allen, S. T. B.
May 16, 1601.
. . . . Man, in 1654.
(t) Richard Burney, Sept. 8,
1661. refig.—
James Ardern, cl. A. M.
May 26, 1662, refig. 1666.
(u) Simon Lewth, A. M. Oct.
8, 1666, obt. 1672.
John Sargenson, A. M. Oct.
2, 1672, obt. 1684.
Humphry Bralesford, A. M.
Sept. 3, 1684, refig. 1708, on the 29th of which month, 1684, this church and that of All Saints, were united, so that his fields, Cranmers, Netherfoles, Drylands, Swifts, Norwoods, Bix's, Johnsons, the Lady Catherine Carter in 1678, Scotts and Freemoultts.

One John Stulp, it seems, was a good benefactor to the making of several new pews in this church, as appears by his name on them. George Stanley. esq; mayor of Canterbury, was buried in 1676, in the chapel or burying place in St. Mildred's church, near his father and mother there.

(l) *Viz. In un parcel terr gleb. per ann. 3*l. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 27.

(m) Register Sancroft, f. 252, a. b. Mss. Lambeth. In the Prerog. off. in Canterbury, is the instrument of William, Archbishop of Canterbury, for uniting the churches of St. Mildred, St. Mary de Castro, and All Saints, having the consent of the mayor, alderman and justices of the peace of the city of Canterbury, and of the King under his great seal, he being the patron of the same. The Archbishop in it decreed, that the church of All Saints and St. Mary de Castro already united, should remain so united and consolidated, with and to the parish church of St. Mildred, aforesaid, and that the parishioners of each should belong to the parish church of St. Mildred, as their own proper church, and that as often as the said church alone, out of the three before-named, should be and remain presentative, and as often as any vacancy of the same should happen, dated at Lambeth, September 29, 1684.

successors were presented to the rectories of All Saints and St. Mildred united.

- (v) John Andrews, A. M.
April 5, 1708, obt. 1710.
(w) James Henstridge, A. M.
Nov. 22, 1710, obt. Dec.
4, 1745.
(x) Theodore Delafaye, Feb.
4, 1746, obt. July 26,
1772.
(y) Anthony Lukyn, August
1772, obt. Nov. 12, 1778.
(z) Wm Theophilus Montjoy
Webster, presented Dec.
24, 1778, obt. April 17,
1788.
(a) Edward-Wm Whitaker, presented May, 1788.
Present Rector.

HOLY CROSS WESTGATE church, so called both from its dedication and situation, stands just within the city gate, called Westgate, on the south side of the street, almost adjoining the city wall. It is a large church, but low, consisting of three isles and a chancel, having a square tower at the west end, in which are five bells (b).

On the north side of the church, eastward of the porch, are the ruins of the walls of a chantry, adjoining the walls of the church, but shut out from it, and open to the air.

In allusion to the church's name of Holy Cross, there was formerly over the porch, or entrance into it, a crucifix, or representation of our Saviour's crucifixion, as may be learnt from the will of Richard Marley, dated 1521, who appointed to be buried in the church-yard,

The King's confirmation of the same, under his great seal, dated October 14, 1684. (n) Ibid.

(o) See below.

(p) Prynne, p. 824.

(q) Wills, Prerog. off.

(r) He is mentioned in a will, in Prerog. off. Cant.

(s) He resigned this rectory and the King's presentation again, June 28, 1637. Rym. Fœd. vol. xx, p. 207.

(t) Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 885. See St. Peter's.

(u) And vicar of Holy Cross Westgate.

(v) Likewise rector of Knolton. He was buried in this church.

(w) He was rector of Brook, and a Minor Canon of this cathedral.

(x) He had been sometime curate of Queenborough.

(y) He held the vicarage of Reculver, by dispensation.

(z) He was inducted to the rectory of St. Mildred and St. Mary de Castro, with the united rectory of All Saints, on January 1, 1779. He died suddenly at Reading, in Berks.

(a) And rector of St. John's, Clerkenwell. He was inducted to this church of St. Mildred on June 10.

(b) On the bells, 1st, in capitals, John Fisher, church warden, 1739; 2d, in old English letters, Joseph Hatch made me, 1608; 3d, Joseph Hatch made me 1615, I. H. R. C.—4th, Stephanus Nortone de Kent, me fecit; 5th, in like letters, but capitals, Joseph Hatch made me, 1608, &c. &c.

before

CHURCHES.—HOLY CROSS WESTGATE.

before the crucifix of our Lord, as nigh the coming in of the north door there as conveniently might be, and ordered his executors to see gilt well and workmanly the crucifix of our Lord, with the Mary and John, standing upon the porch of the said north door (c); but this crucifix has been many years removed, and the King's Arms placed in its room (d).

There was antiently in this church, a chantry, to which belonged a priest, called Jhesus masse priest, who had been accustomed to say masse, and to help to maintain divine service in this church, and was removable at the pleasure of the inhabitants. It was not known by whom it was founded, but by tradition, with the help and devotion of the parishioners, who bought several lands and tenements to maintain this chantry (e); the valuation of which, as appears by the return of the commissioners for the visiting of chantries, and such like foundations, in the 2d year of K. Edward VI.'s reign, was found worth 11l. 9s. 8d. of which, outgoings deducted, there remained clear 8l. and 19d. ob.

(c) This will is in Prerog. off. Canterbury. He mentions in it the brotherhood of Holy Cross, in the said church. The three altars in it, the picture of our Lady of Pita and of St. Erasmus in it, and he gave 5l. towards the setting up a new rood-loft in it.

(d) In the north wall at the west end, in a window now stopped up, is a figure of a man, holding a skull between two columns. On the frieze in capitals, In Memoria Almundi Colpb. On the plinth, in the same capitals, In spe Requirimus et Resurgemus. Arms, quarterly; 1st and 4th, Colse-Or, a fess between 3 horses current sable; 2d and 3d, Argent, a cross chequy or and gules, between 4 mullets of the second.

Mr. Somner has transcribed some of the ancient epitaphs in this church, remaining in his time, but they have been, long since, all of them obliterated. For Stephen Mathew, mercer, of this city, obt. January 5th, 1442. For sir Wm. Hall, chaplain. For Robert Colt, brewer of this city, obt. December 6, 1444, and Dionisia his wife. For Wm. Colkyn, obt. August 3, 1440. For John Nayler and Robert Nayler, his son, late alderman of this city, which Robert died December 25, 1545. For Thomas Ramsay and Margaret his wife, obt. May 3, 1495. For John Cornwell, dyer, and Joane and Alice his wives. He died December 30, 1492. For Margaret Colpboll, wife of Thomas Colpboll. She died March 1, 1533. For James Hope, gent. obt. December 12th, 1458. For Cristiana Crane, obt. January 22, 1445. For John Barber and Joane his wife. He died April 10, 1533. For Thomas Lyud, first mayor of Canterbury; and Constantia his wife, February 12. . . . For William Charnell, first chantry priest of Jhesus, obt. Dec. 20, 1516. Several of the vicars lie buried in the chancel; as Nicholas Chilton, obt. 1400. Robert Raynhull, obt. 1416, and Patricius Gerard, obt. 1458; and close by them lies one Clement Harding, B. L. but their inscriptions are long since gone. Alice Wode, widow, daughter and heir of William Wodlande, ordered by her will in 1522, to be buried in the church-yard of Holy Cross Westgate, near the tombs of her ancestors. The following monuments and inscriptions are among others, at present remaining. At the south side of the chancel is an elegant mural cenotaph, for

To this masse there belonged a fraternity, called from thence the fraternity of Jhesus masse, or Jhesus brotherhood, founded by whom was not known, within this church; the lands and tenements belonging to which were of the yearly value of ten shillings. There were divers men and women, who, through devotion, gave to this brotherhood, some 4d. some 8d. yearly; for which they were named brothers and sisters; which money was bestowed upon lights in the church; and upon one masse and dirige, for the brothers and sisters departed, who were recommended to our Saviour's mercy, by the priest at masse. The names of this fraternity were entered on a bead-roll kept for the purpose. Both chantry and fraternity were suppressed, with all others of the like kind, in the 2d year of K. Edward VI, tho' it appears to have been without a priest for some time before (f).

The present church was built in K. Richard II.'s reign, in the room of one of the same name, which stood over the antient gateway of Westgate, and was of course demolished, when Arch-

James Six, A. M. and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, who died at Rome, in 1786, æt. 29, and was buried in that city. Arms, azure, in chief, 2 crescents, in base a mullet of 6 points argent. Near the altar-rails, a memorial for John Seaman, son of the late Dutton Seaman, esq; and Elizabeth his wife, of Guildhall, London, obt. 1789, æt. 48. A memorial opposite the pulpit, for Leak, wife of Peter Boudry, obt. 1750, æt. 72; also for the said Peter Boudry, obt. 1753, æt. 80. A memorial near the west door, for the Rev. Francis-William Durand, 41 years minister of the French church, within the precincts of the cathedral, obt. 1789, æt. 74. In the north isle are memorials for Mrs. Elizabeth Goddard, wife of Cornet Goddard, of the 20th regiment of dragoons, obt. 1781, æt. 34. And for several of the Turners. In several parts of the church are stones, which appear by the marks on them to have been robbed of their brasses, particularly in the chancel and middle isle. In the former are four, which have had large figures and inscriptions on them. At the east end of the isle, one which had a small figure and inscription, opposite the cross space. One which had two figures and an inscription, on the north side of the last, in the same space. One which had a small figure and inscription, on the south side. One which had two large figures and inscriptions; and in the side isles are several others in the same state.

Mr. James Six, of this parish, F. R. S. a gentleman well known to men of science, for his ingenious pursuits in astronomy and natural philology, was a good benefactor to this church; by whose gift principally, the late erected organ was placed in it, where he lies buried. He died in September, 1793.

(e) Viz. one messuage and 66 acres of land and marsh, lying in Ab; six tenements in this parish; four little tenements in St. Dunstan's, and two in Harbledown.

(f) The return of the Kings commissioners, anno 2d Edward VIth. is printed at the end of Somner; by which it appears likewise, that there were then 240 housing people within this parish, and that the salary, issues and profits of the lands of the above chantry, had been for one year before, distributed to the poor of the parish, there not having been any priest nor any sale of the same. That there were

obit

CHURCHES.—HOLY CROSS WESTGATE.

bishop Sudbury, in that reign, pulled down that gate, which was become ruined, and built the present one. The King's licence for the purchase of the ground, for the scite of the present church, and the cemetery, being dated March 10, anno 3 Richard II. (g)

This church was part of the antient possessions of the priory of St. Gregory, in Canterbury (b), to which it was appropriated, but no vicarage seems to have been endowed in it, till Archbishop Stratford, by his instrument under his seal, dated at Saltwood on the 5th of the ides of June, in the year 1347, and of his translation the 14th, endowed the vicarage of this church as follows: John Sorges being then vicar of it, THAT it being affirmed on the part of the religious, that they had in time past acknowledged the burthens of the payment of the tenhs, and other impositions whatever, for the taxation of this church, and also all ordinary burthens incumbent on it, and that they had received nothing of the fruits, rents, profits, or obventions of it, during the time of the abovementioned vicar, although in the times of the other vicars of it, they were accustomed to have, and take from it a certain pension of money; the vicar likewise asserting, that all the commodities of the church were scarce adequate, in those times, for his sufficient maintenance, and the burthens incumbent on his vicarage; wherefore the Archbishop, having duly considered the premises, and examined into the same, in the presence of the parties, and with their consent decreed and ordained, that the abovementioned religious and their successors should receive and have in future, the tythes of all and singular the gardens within the bounds and limits of the parish of this church, wheresoever situated; and also the tythes of a certain mill, commonly called Shesfote's mill, situated within the parish of this church; but that the said vicar and his successors, vicars there, should have and possess two small houses, below the church, situated on both sides of the same, of antient time belonging to the vicarage of it; and that the vicars of the church should likewise receive, possess and have for ever, in the name of their vicarage, the rest of the tythes, as well large as small; and also the oblations, and fruits, rents, issues and profits, all and singular, belonging to the said church, or which should belong to it in future, by any cause or occasion whatsoever, the same not being obit lands given, by the last wills of John Delphes and John Boll, to keep their obits in this church for ever, the yearly value of which was 32s.—of which in money distributed to the poor 10s. To the reparations of the church 8s. So there remained clear 14s. There was lamp land given by the last will of William Harnesbill, for the finding of one lamp, to burn for ever, before the sacrament in this church, the yearly value of which land was 10s.

allotted to the religious, as abovementioned. And that the vicars of the church should acknowledge and undergo at their own costs and expences, the burthen of serving the church in divine services, and the providing and finding of bread, wine, lights, and other things, which should be necessary for the celebration of divine rites in the same, such as were to be found and provided, either by right or by custom used in the diocese, by the rectors and vicars of places; and likewise the washing of the vestments and ornaments of the church, and the finding or producing of straw, with which the church should be strewed in such manner, and as often as should be necessary; but the burthen of rebuilding and repairing of the chancel of the church, and the finding or producing and repairing of books, vestments, and ornaments of the same, which ought or were used to be found, produced, or repaired of right or custom, by the rectors of churches, and moreover the burthen of the payment of tenhs and other impositions whatsoever, which should or ought in future to belong to the said church, according to the taxation of it, or otherwise; and also the rest of the burthens, ordinary and extraordinary of it, of whatsoever sort incumbent, or which ought to be incumbent on the vicar, for the time being, and not allotted above, the religious should undergo for ever and acknowledge; reserving, nevertheless, to himself and his successors, Archbishops of Canterbury, the full power of augmenting and diminishing the vicarage, if and at any time it should seem expedient to him or them (i).

After this, both the appropriation and advowson of the vicarage of the church, continued with the Prior and Convent of St. Gregory, till the dissolution of it in the 27th year of K. Henry VIII, when coming into the King's hands, both of them were granted, among the rest of the possessions of the priory, to the Archbishop and his successors, where the appropriation still remains; his Grace being the present possessor of it.

This church or parsonage appropriate, in the antient taxation, was valued at 100s. (k)

George Gipps, esq; is the present lessee, under the Archbishop, of this parsonage, which is worth, according to estimation, only 14s. per ann.

The advowson of the vicarage likewise passed by the above grant, to the Archbishop and his successors; but in the time of Archbishop Sancroft, anno 1681, by the mutual consent of the Arch-

(g) See this licence in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. lxxii.

(b) Dugd. Mon. vol. ii, p. 374.

(i) Battely's Somner, appendix, No. lxxix.

(k) Thorn, col. 2166. A copy of a composition of this vicarage is extant, in Mss. marked A. 11. fol. 38^o. in Archiv. Eccles. Cath. Cantuar.

CHURCHES.—HOLY CROSS WESTGATE.

bishop and of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, patrons of St. Peter's church, being that of the adjoining parish, the latter has been united to this of Holy Cross Westgate (l), so that the patronage is now become vested in the Archbishop and Dean and Chapter alternately; in which state it continues at this time.

There was an inquisition, ad quod damnum, to enquire, if it would be to the King's prejudice to grant to Simon Tanner, and others, a licence, to give and assign one messuage, and one garden, with appurtenances, in the parish of the Holy Cross of Westgate, to Robert Raynbull, vicar of this church and his successors (m); which inquisition was taken at Canterbury on the Tuesday next after the feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, anno 16 Richard II. (n)

The vicarage of Holy Cross Westgate, is valued in the antient taxation at 4l. per ann. but on account of the slenderness of the income was not charged to the tenth. It is valued in the King's book's at 13l. 0s. 0d. ob. and the yearly tenths at 1l. 6s. 0½d. (o) In 1588 it was valued at 30l. Communicants 280.

There is a terrier of this vicarage, dated May 13, 1630, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

John Whyttok, of St. Alphage parish, by his will in 1503, gave to every poor bedwomen dwelling in Westgate parish, in the houses of theould vicars gift, 12d. (p)

CHARITIES.

Abraham Colfe, by his will proved Jan. 25, 1657, gave six penny loaves, to be distributed every Lord's day, to five poor godly men or women of this parish, and one man or woman of the French congregation, inhabitants here, who attend the whole time at their respective churches, one penny loaf each, of good wheaten bread; the poor persons to be changed every Sunday; charged on the stock of the Leather sellers Company, in London, amounting in money to 1l. 7s. And he gave by his will likewise, 6s. 8d. yearly, to be equally divided to the prisoners of Westgate, St. Dunstan's, and Maidstone gaols, in money; and for want of such, to those in the house of correction, in bread, charged on a house and or-

(l) See the petitions for the uniting of these churches, and the Archbishop's decree thereon, above; by which this parish church was united to that of St. Peter, and it was declared that the former should for ever be the church representative; and that the parishioners of both should resort to the same, as to their proper church; and that the patron of St. Peter's should have the right of presentation upon the first avoidance which should happen, and the patron of Holy Cross Westgate upon the next, and so on alternately for ever. It should seem as if this decree did not effectually take place at that time, for in 1692 there were two petitions, similar to the former ones. In 1681, one from the chard in Broad-street. Which charities were by his will vested in trust, with respect to the former five, and to the prisoners in the different gaols, in the vicar and churchwardens of Westgate, and with respect to the latter one, in the minister and elders of the French congregation.

Thomas Maneringe gave by will, Sept. 12, 1592, the sum of 6s. 8d. to be yearly distributed to 20 poor men, at Easter, in money, charged on a house and orchard in Broadstreet.

John Smith, cl. parson of Wickbambreaux, by indenture dated July 25, in the 14th year of K. Charles I. anno 1638, that help and means might not be wanting to such persons who were prisoners, either in the custody of the gaoler of the gaol of the city and county of Canterbury, or in the custody of the gaoler of the gaol of the county of Kent, kept in the parish of St. Dunstan, at such time as such prisoners were to suffer punishment for their offences, to bring them to repentance, and to induce them, after their trials, to lead a better life; therefore, for the instruction of such as should be in either of the said gaols, he had taken order, for the reading of divine service, and preaching of sermons to them, in manner as hereafter mentioned; with reasonable allowance for the preacher's pains. For the performance and accomplishment of which, he granted and confirmed to Hamon Lewknor, of Acrise, esq; and seven other feoffees and trustees and their heirs, one annuity or yearly rent of 5l. issuing and going out of two pieces or parcels of marsh land, containing by estimation ten acres, called Sbereives Marsh, with the appurtenances, in the parish of Wickbam Brooks, to have and to hold the said annuity or yearly rent unto the said Hamon Lewknor, and the other trustees, their heirs and assigns for ever, upon the trusts hereinafter mentioned; the said annuity to be payable four times a year, at the Sessions-house, in the Castle at Canterbury, with power of distress on non-payment. The said annuity to be paid to and received by the said Hamon Lewknor and the others, upon the special trust and confidence, that they should therewith provide and procure the usual divine service of the church of England, to be read four times in the year, and a sermon to be preached at each of those times, by a licenced preacher, unto the mayor, &c. and the other from the Dean and Chapter, which was followed by a decree of the Archbishop, for the uniting of these churches, with the same regulations of presentation as before.

(m) Thorne, col. 2169.

(n) Chertæ Antiq. A. 16. Archiv. Cantuar.

(o) Redd. Prior Eccles. Christi 35. Endow pro mans & parv. ten & duo Gardin per ann. 1l. 1s. in decim. predial & personal, & al profic. per ann. 12l. 3s. 6d. redd. solut Archiep. Cantuar. 1s. 4d. Orig. endow. ut supra. See Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 27.

(p) Wills, Prerog. off. Cant.

CHURCHES.—HOLY CROSS WESTGATE.

prisoners who should from time to time be in the gaol of the city of Canterbury, as near before the several Quarter-sessions, to be kept in and for the city, as conveniently might be; the said service and sermons to be read and preached in the church of Holy Cross Westgate, if consent could be had for that purpose; if not, then in some convenient chamber in the house, wherein the gaoler or keeper dwelt, and that the said feoffees should likewise procure and provide the like services; and sermons should be read and preached at the like times unto such prisoners, as should from time to time be in the aforesaid gaol for the county of Kent, then kept in the parish of St. Dunstan, at the like times as aforesaid; the same to be read and preached in some convenient chamber of the house, where the said gaol was, for the better instruction of such prisoners; and that the said feoffees should pay to such preacher, each time for his pains 10s. and should further deliver to him 2s. 6d. to be thus bestowed by him; 6d. to the gaoler for preparing the room, and 2s. among the prisoners so instructed; which money so to be paid to the said preachers, should be paid unto them on demand, at the Register's office, for the Archdeaconry of Canterbury, where it should be before-hand left for that purpose; and that after his death the sole nomination of all such preachers, as should instruct the prisoners for the time being, in the aforesaid gaols, and of providing and procuring them to read such services, and preach such sermons, in such manner as aforesaid, should be vested in the Archbishop, his Commissary, for the time being, or the Archdeacon of Canterbury for the time being, or such of them as should be living and abiding in or about the city of Canterbury, so that such readers and preachers so nominated to read and preach in the gaol of the city of Canterbury, should be living and abiding within the Deanry of Canterbury, that so they might attend the same with the least trouble; and those to read and preach in the gaol of the county of Kent, in St. Dunstan's; to be living and abiding either in the deanries of Bridge, Westbere, or Elebam, or any of them; and that every such licenced preacher should have a month's notice thereof, at the least, and better to provide himself for the purpose.

And the survivors of the said feoffees, their heirs or assigns, when they should be deceased to the number of four only, that then they so

(q) Vix. William Mann, of Canterbury, esq; Thomas Belk, D. D. Prebendary of Canterbury; George Oxinden, of the University of Cambridge, esq; L. D. Henry Oxinden, of Brook, esq; Edward Nutt, of Nackington, esq; William Kingley, jun. of Christ church, Canterbury, esq; William Courtbope, of Stodmarsh, esq; and Henry Marsh, of Kingston near Canterbury, esq;

(r) Somner, appendix, p. 74.

(s) He lies buried in the chancel of this church, as does surviving, or the heirs of the survivors of the feoffees, should convey the said annuity to four others of worth and quality, living in or near the city of Canterbury, and to their heirs and assigns for ever, for the like trust, intent, and purposes as was therein before expressed and declared, and not otherwise. And for the better preservation of this deed, that one part of it should be with the consent of the Archdeacon of Canterbury, deposited in the registry of the Archdeaconry, to remain there among the writings in the custody of the Register, in right of his office, and so successively with them from register to register, by which it might be kept in memory, from what deanries the preachers were from time to time to be chosen, and that they might, in convenient time, be provided; and the register or his clerk might shew the same to such persons as should require it, or make such copies as should be desired, on payment of the usual fees, &c. for the same.

In the year 1680, all the feoffees were deceased, excepting Henry Oxinden, then sir Henry Oxinden, of Wingham, knt. and bart. who was then become the only grantee and trustee of the said annuity. He, by indenture, dated Oct. 6, in the above year, and intended to be inrolled in chancery, assigned it over to sir James Oxinden, of Dean, knt. and eight others (q), and their heirs and assigns for ever, in trust only, for the continuing, upholding and preserving the above trust, recited in the above indenture, and for no other intent or purpose whatsoever.

CHURCH OF HOLY CROSS WESTGATE.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

VICARS.

- (r) John Sorges, . . . in 1347.
 (s) Nicholas Cbilton, . . .
 obt. 1400.
 (t) Robert Raynbull, . . .
 obt. 1416.
 (u) Patrick Gerrard, . . .
 obt. 1458.
 (v) John Rotley, refig. in 1460.
 (w) Clem. Hardinge, L. L. B.

 (x) Thomas Pedecocq, . . .
 obt May, 1501.
 (y) Dunstan Petle, in 1527.

his successor Raynbull. By the writ ad quod damnum, above recited, it appears Raynbull was vicar in 1392.

(r) He was rector of St. Peter's likewise. He lies buried in this church. (u) He lies buried in this church.

(v) Will's Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(w) He lies buried in the chancel of this church.

(x) He was buried in the church-yard. His will is in Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(y) He is mentioned in a will, in the Prerog. off. Cant.

CHURCHES.—HOLY CROSS WESTGATE.—ST. PETER.

- The Archbishop.* (z) Tho. Wellys, . . . 1522.
 (a) John Sweeting, Dec. 13, 1582, and in 1586.
The King, sede vac. (b) John Bungay, A. M. April 2, 1611, obt. 1617.
The Archbishop. (c) James Lambe, A. M. Nov. 1, 1617, obt. 1662.
 (d) John Ardern, A. M. May 26, 1662, refig. 1666.
 (e) Simon Lowth, A. M. Sept. 20, 1666, refig. 1679.
Christopher Hargrave, A. B. Aug. 19, 1679, resigned the same year.
 (f) Charles Kilburne, A. M. inducted Oct. 9, 1679, obt. Jan. 14, 1737.

On the resignation of Christopher Hargrave, in 1679, this rectory and that of St. Peter, being the church of the adjoining parish, appear to have been united, and Charles Kilburne was inducted to both these united churches, as were his successors following.

- (g) Tho. Buttonsbow, 1737, . . . resigned 1741.
 (b) William Miles, A. M. Oct. 1741, obt. Oct. 16, 1746.
 (i) Robert Ayerst, A. M. Jan. 19, 1747, refig. 1786.
 (k) John Gostling, A. M. 1716. Present Rector.

ST. PETER'S church is situated at a small distance from the north side of the street of that name; the church, which is not large, consists of three narrow isles and a chancel, with a square tower at the west end of the south isle, in which are three bells (l).

(z) He was also Suffragan Bishop of Sidon, and rector of Woodchurch. See Willis's Mitred Abbeyes, vol. ii, p. 97.

(a) Parish Register. (b) Ibid. (c) Ibid.

(d) He and his successor are mentioned as rectors, in the parish register.

(e) He was likewise rector of St. Mildred.

(f) He was buried in this church.

(g) He resigned this rectory on being presented to that of Addington, in the diocese of Rochester.

(b) He held the rectory of Offham with this, by dispensation.

(i) He was at the same time made a Minor Canon of the cathedral; after his resigning this rectory, he became a Six Preacher and afterwards rector of Speldhurst in this county.

(k) He was rector of Brook and of Milton, by Canterbury; the former of which he resigned on being inducted to these churches.

(l) On the bells are the following inscriptions. On the 1st, in capitals, John Lee, sen. and William Balduck, church-wardens, 1637; John Palmar made me. On the 2d, in old English letters, capitals, Jobannes rate Digrate pro nobis orate. Arms, at three places, a chevron between 3 chevi-rooks. 3d, in the like capitals, Sancta Maria, pro nobis. Somner has recorded the inscriptions on some of the grave-stones, and the legends in some of the windows of this church, none of which have been for a long time since remaining. He says, there were in the windows formerly this legend, in old English letters; Thbis Ikbam & lone sa femme gijoint ici de Salmes eit mercy 1400. And on a brass plate an inscription for William Ikbam, once citizen and bailiff of the city of Canterbury, who died July . . 1424. A legend in another window. Orate p aia Wilhelmi Septuans militis & Elizabethæ ux ejus. Another under a figure kneeling, in his surcoat of arms: being—Per pale, ermine and a lion passant-guardant crowned, a bordure with cross-croffets fitebee. Orate pro bono Statu Johannis Bigg armigeri ac Aldermanni bujus Civitatis Cant & Constantie uxoris ejus qui me Vitrari fecerunt anno domini 1473—et Specialiter pro bono Statu Willielmi Bygg Civitatis Cant & Johanne Consortis sue & p aibs parentum ac benefactorum eorum qui hoc lumin anno dom. 1468.

The above William Bigg, seems to be the same person who, with John Coppyn, of Whitstaple, built the market cross, at the bullstake, in this city, and gave 10l. towards the new building of St. George's Gate. In the chancel was a brass plate, for John Colley, once rector of this church, obt. February 22, 14-8. He built the chancel window over the altar, on the foot of which was once legible, this legend; By John Colley, who was parson here. In the body was an inscription on brass, for John Syre, once rector of this church, obt. anno 1436.

There are considerable remains of painted glass, particularly at the east end of the north isle, in the upper part of which window there are the following shields of arms. Viz. in the 1st range, Vulence, Barry, gules and or, impaling Norwood, ermine, a cross engrailed gules; Barude, or, 2 chevrons gules, impaling Rokesley, azure a fess gules, between 6 lions rampant azure. A coat obliterated, but was Apulderfield, impaling Averanches or, 5 chevronels gules. Poynings; impaling Rokesley. In the 2d range, Criol, impaling Averanches;—Argent, 3 chevronels gules; on a chief of the last, 3 billets azure, impaling Criol. In the lower range, Poynings, impaling Fitzpaine,—Gules, 3 lions passant argent; over all a bend azure. Poynings, impaling Tulbot,—Gules, within a bordure engrailed, a lion rampant or. In the north window, Sable, 6 keys or, 3, 2 and 1 or. Poynings. The remains of 4 figures. The arms of Christ church, in Canterbury. In the centre of the window, the remains of a figure, sitting in a chair of state. In the window at the east end of the chancel, are the remains of two figures, and that of a deer or hind, lodged. And there were formerly these coats, among others: Or, an eagle displayed or; gules, on a chevon 3 keys or. And in the north window the effigies of a woman, kneeling, on her mantle 3 crescents.

The following monuments and grave-stones are among others in this church. In the north isle, a mural monument for Elizabeth, only daughter of alderman Lincall, by Mary his first wife, obt. 1708, æt. 14; also Elizabeth, the first wife of Thomas Lincall, sen. obt. 1703, æt. 65. Another near it for Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Lincall, jun. of this parish, daughter of William Smith, of this city, by whom he had issue six children, of whom three are here interred. The three surviving were Thomas, Dorothy and William. She died 1714, æt. 44. At the east end a mural tablet for Ralph Barudwyn and Marian his wife; which Ralph was alderman and twice mayor of this city; who died in 1611, æt. 75. By which Marian he had issue, one son Samuel, deceased, and here buried, and seven daughters, of whom Martha the third deceased, and lies buried by her father here. On a small stone an inscription, almost obliterated, but the name of Heyman is legible. Memorials for

CHURCHES.—ST. PETER.

By the survey of the King's Commissioners, anno 2 Edward VI, it appears, that there were obit lands given by William Bigge, who is mentioned above as lying buried in this church, by his last will, for one obit to be kept, and a lamp to be maintained within this church for ever; the yearly value of which lands was 14s. 4d. of which the outgoings were 16d. distribution to the poor 2s. 9d. clear 10s. 3d. And that there were light-lands given and bequeathed by Thomas Ikbam, who is likewise mentioned above, as buried in this church, by his last will, as well for the maintenance of two tapers before the sacrament in this church, as to be employed in other works of charity for ever. The yearly value of which lands was 23s. and 4d. the outgoings of which were 2s. clear 21s. 4d. (m)

The parsonage-house of this church was given to Thomas, the then rector of it, by one Richard de Langdon, of Canterbury, with the King's licence, anno 25 Edward III. (n)

This church, which is a rectory, was part of the possessions of the Priory of Christ church in Canterbury, and at the dissolution of it, in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, came into the King's hands, who granted it in his 33d year, by his dotation charter, to his new-founded Dean and Chapter of Canterbury; since which, in 1681, Archbishop Sancroft, with the mutual consent of the Dean and Chapter, and of the Archbishop of Canterbury, patron of the adjoining rectory and church for the Fowlers, A memorial for Dorothy, the widow of Giles Hinton, D. D. 1730. In the south isle, a mural monument for Joseph Sawkins, late of this city, gent. the second son of John Sawkins, of the same, gent. by Elizabeth his wife, and married Hester, daughter of the late Rev. Mr. John Cooke, by whom he had issue eight children, Joseph, Hester, Elizabeth, John, William, Charles, James and Jane; of whom five were then surviving, but Hester, John and Charles, lie buried in this isle. He died suddenly in 1752, æt. 55. His widow erected this monument; also for the above-named Jane Sawkins, obt. 1755, æt. 19. Arms—Vert, a fret argent, an escutcheon of pretence or, 2 lions passant-guardant gules, impaling as on the escutcheon. In the middle chancel, a memorial for Lewis Kilburne, son of Charles Kilburne, rector of this church, who died in 1704, æt. 17. Arms—A chevron between 3 ducks. A memorial for Thomas Passett, of Lincoln's Inn, gent. date obliterated. In the middle isle are memorials for Leonard Spraklin, obt. 1629, æt. 49. Arms, Spraklin impaling three crescents. For William Gunsley Friend Ayerst, obt. 1750, an infant. For Bennet Hales, obt. 1646, an infant. For Harnet, Talbutts, Huffam, Cuckows. Arms—A chevron, in chief 3 crescents, impaling 2 lions combatant, supporting in their paws a tower. For Thomas Halke, obt. 1575. For Tomlins, Shorte, Bassett. For John Leed, mayor, obt. 1670. Bottings and Pilchers. Henry Swerder was buried in 1504, in the chapel of St. John Baptist, in this church: He gave by his will the three alms houses to this parish. Roger Clark, who was mayor anno 1511, by his will in 1542, appointed to be buried between the church-gate and the church-door of St. Peter, in Canterbury. It seems then, says Somner, p. 183, that one of the altar tombs here at this day was erected for him. Thomas Halke, mayor of Canterbury, was buried in 1611, in of Holy Cross Westgate (o), this church of St. Peter has been united to it, so that the patronage of these united churches is now become alternate in the Archbishop and Dean and Chapter; in which state it continues at this time.

This church, in the antient taxation, is valued at four pounds per annum, but on account of the slenderness of its income, was not taxed to the tenth (p).

This rectory is valued in the King's books at 3l. 10s. 10d. and the yearly tenths at 7s. 1d. (q) In 1588 it was valued at 20l. Communicants 153. In 1640 it was valued at 40l. Communicants 120.

There is a terrier of this rectory, dated May 11, 1630, in the registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

CHURCH OF ST. PETER.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

RECTORS.

- (r) Thomas in 1321.
 (s) Thomas in 1351.
 (t) John Syre, obt. 1436.
 (u) Thomas Sterlyng, in 1504
 and 1519.
 (v) William Grene, in 1524.
 (w) John Colley, obt. Feb.
 22, 14—. . . .
 (x) Robert Thompson, in 1546.
Nicholas Patytere, Feb. 5,
 1582, refig. 1605.

The Crown.

this church, in the space there, where his former wives were buried; and he ordered that his stone then being in the church should be trimmed, and laid over him, with remembrance of his death, and his wives and children graven in brais upon it.

In the register are frequent entries of the Netherfoles, Spraklyns and Hales, &c.

(m) This survey is printed at the end of Battely's Somner.

(n) Battely's Somner, p. 164. The grant is among the Chartæ Antiq. of the Dean and Chapter, marked A. 209. The King's licence is among the same, marked R. 227.

In the register of Henry, Prior of Canterbury, ab. an. 1285, ad 1327, among the Mss. in the public library at Cambridge, marked E. e. v. fol. 31, it is entered that the church of St. Peter is bound to pay 6s. 8d. to the treasurer of that priory.

An arbitration made by Nathaniel Brent, Ant. I. L. D. concerning 13s. 4s. yearly, to be paid to the rector of the church of St. Peter for tenths of a certain meadow near the scite of the house of the Friars Minors, dated April 22, anno 1636. Chartæ Antiq. A. 192, among the Archives of the Dean and Chapter.

(o) See Holy Cross Westgate, above.

(p) Thorne, col. 2169.

(q) Pens. solut. Prior Eccl. Cantuar. 6s. 8d. Prox. 2s. 8d. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 27.

(r) Somner, appendix, p. 69. (s) Ibid.

(t) He was buried in the body of this church.

(u) He is mentioned in a will in Prerog. off.

(v) He is mentioned in a will in the same office.

(w) He lies buried in this church.

(x) Wills, Prerog. off. Canterbury.

Dean

CHURCHES DESECRATED.

- Dean and Chapter of Canterbury. (y) Rufus Rogers, A. M. 1605, obt. Feb. 1651.
 The King. Duell Read, cl. Septemb. 7, 1672.
 Dean & Chapter. (z) Richard Burney, inducted in 1673, refig. 1679.
 Charles Kilburne, A. M. inducted Oct. 9, 1679.

On this church and that of Holy Cross Westgate being united, in 1681, he was inducted the first to both of them so united, and he died in 1737 rector of both churches; a list of whose successors may be found above, under the account of Holy Cross church.

THE ALMS HOUSES.

Henry Swarder, of this parish, by his will in 1504, ordered, that his three messuages, next to a certain one of his, situated next the corner, beside the shell in St. Peter's-lane, be founded for ever for three poor people to dwell in, they keeping sufficient reparations for the same; these have been for a long time vested in the parishioners, to place in them such poor people of their parish as they should in their discretion think proper; and on Sept. 16, 1599, anno 41 Elizabeth, it was agreed on, at a meeting of them, that whoever should be placed in any of the said houses, should pay at their entrance 6s. 8d. towards the reparations of the house they were to enter into; and also should pay yearly to the churchwardens 6d. every quarter, for so long time as they should continue therein, and that the churchwardens should have power to distrain for the same.

The same day a legacy of 30s. given by Leon. Bonner, late of this parish, deceased, towards the reparation of the said houses, was paid into the hands of the churchwardens.

BESIDES the above-mentioned churches at present remaining within the walls of this city, there were five others, which have been long since demolished, and their districts united to the present churches and parishes above described. These churches were

ST. EDMUND'S church, being dedicated to St. Edmund, king and martyr, and usually called St.

(y) He was buried in this church.

(z) He had been rector of Old Romney, from which he was ousted by the puritans, about 1643, and after the restoration became rector of St. Mildred's and of All Saints, in Canterbury. He died April 1, 1692. See an account of him, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, col. 885.

(a) Thorne, col. 1838.

(b) The church of St. Edmund was a rectory, and valued in the antient taxation at 53s. 4d. but on account of the slenderness of its income, was not charged to the tenth. Thorne, col. 2169.

(c) See above.

(d) Battely's Somner, p. 11. (e) Ibid. p. 181.

Edmund of Ridingate, from its situation near adjoining to that gate; was built by one Hamo, the son of Vitalis, who was one of those who came over from Normandy with William the Conqueror, and gave it to the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, whence it was granted in the year 1184, by Roger, then Abbat, and his Convent, to the Priorefs and Convent of St. Sepulchre's, just by, to hold in frank almoign, they offering as an acknowledgement of the Abbat and Convent's former right to it, 12d. yearly, upon the altar of St. Augustine, on the same saint's day, as a rent towards the repair of their organs (a).

This church, upon the declining of it in the year 1349, was united to that of St. Mary Bredin, not far distant from it (b), by the then Commissary of Canterbury, especially authorized for that purpose, by the ordinary, that is, the Prior and Convent of Christ church, in the vacancy of the see, on Archbishop Bradwardine's death, with the consent of the Priorefs and Convent of St. Sepulchre's, then patrons of it (c).

The remains of this church have been wholly removed a long time since, insomuch that there have not been the least traces of the scite of it to be found for many years past (d).

ST. MARY DE CASTRO church, so called from its situation near the castle, and to distinguish it from the other St. Mary churches in this city, has long been desolated, the chancel only of it being left standing; to the repair of which one Roger Ridley, by his will anno 1470, gave 4l. (e) Time was, when it was as absolute a parish church as any about this city (f), and though before the reformation it seems not to have been in a very flourishing condition (g), yet that change in religious ceremonies was very probably the cause of this church's still further decay and desolation; for offerings, altarages, and such profits, of which this benefice chiefly consisted, and from which the maintenance of the incumbent was in great measure drawn, being by this change abolished, there was not from other matters a sufficient competency left for him, so that it became soon afterwards deserted, and was united to St. Mildred's (b), and has been ever since esteemed as part of that parish (i). To this church was united, in 1449, the neighbouring

(f) There was in 1484, a cemetery belonging to this church; for Alice, wife of Michael a Wood, of Wincheap, by her will proved that year, ordered to be buried in it.

(g) In the antient taxation, this church was valued at 66s. 8d. but on account of the slenderness of its income, was not charged to the tenth. Thorne, col. 2169.

(h) See St. Mildred's, above.

(i) Mr. Somner says, a little before his time, this church was again divorced from St. Mildred's, by having a particular incumbent presented and inducted into it; but this seems to have been an only instance, as from that time no one has thought it worth their attention, and it has consequently remained united to St. Mildred's, the same as before.

small

CHURCHES DESECRATED.

small church of St. John, long since likewise desolated, a further account of which will be given below.

The Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine were patrons of this church of St. Mary, before the dissolution of that monastery (k), since which the patronage of it has of right become vested in the Crown, and continues so at this time, the Crown having presented to it so late as the year 1637. The following is a list of such rectors of it as I have met with.

(l) Richard . . . in 1231.

(m) Thomas Pysard, anno 27 Edward I.

(n) Simon . . . anno 1321.

(o) Richard Allen, S. T. P. July 26, 1637.

ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST'S church, called from the slenderness of its income, St. John the Poor, had a parish called St. John's belonging to it. It stood much about the upper end of that lane leading from Castle-street, called the Back-lane, though formerly from this church, St. John's-lane.

This church coming to ruin, was, with the consent of the patrons, the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, united in 1349, by the Prior and Convent of Christ church, ordinaries during a vacancy of the see, to the church of St. Mary de Castro abovementioned (p); the profits of the former then amounting to 40s. and the latter to five marcs (q); the church of St. Mary being made the mother church, by virtue of which union, John Skippe; cl. was admitted to both churches, on Nov. 11, 1349.

After which, I find no further mention of this parish church of St. John (r); but it seems to have been included in that of St. Mary de Castro, and as such united with it to the church of All Saints, as has been already mentioned above. The remains of it were for a long time used as a malthouse, or in tenements, and continue so at present.

The book of St. Laurence's hospital makes mention of some portions of tythes, belonging to (k) Battely's Somner, p. 165.

(l) Ibid. p. 77.

(m) Prynne, p. 824.

(n) Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 33.

(o) He was presented to St. Mildred's rectory in 1601, to which he had a second presentation on June 28, 1637, after which as appears above, he had next month a presentation to this church. See Rym. Fœd. vol. xx, p. 207.

(p) The inquisition for the uniting of the churches of St. Mary de Castro and St. John, called the poor, is dated 5 kal. Julii, anno 1349, and in Regist. Ecclef. Christi. Cant. fol. 46^b.

(q) In the antient valuation, the church of St. John was valued at 66s. 8d. but on account of the slenderness of its income, was not charged to the tenth. Thorne, col. 2169.

(r) One Henry Plaice was killed by a fall from a ladder, anno 5 Edward III. as he was at work in tiling St. John's this church, by the following entry, viz. That the hospital received all the tythes of four acres of land in Market-field, and the rector of St. John, in Canterbury, received of two acres, eight sheafs; and of two other acres, seven sheafs, in all one copp. And the hospital received two parts of the tythes of six acres of land lying at Stone-street, toward the south, and a narrow way toward the north. And the rector of St. John, in Canterbury, received a third part of the tythes (s).

ST. MARY OF QUENINGATE, was a church so called from its situation near that antient gate, in a lane called Queningate-lane, within the city wall. I find it in old records called both a church and a chapel. That such there was, is most certain, as may be traced in the records of Christ church, now of more than 580 years old, which priory had the patronage of this church given to it, by Hugh Magminot (together with eleven mansions in Canterbury) (t), and which was, among others, confirmed to it by a bull of Pope Alexander III, and by many bulls of the like sort afterwards. By the above records, it appears likewise, that the rector of this church in 1381, made an exchange of it, and St. Michael church in Burgate, to which it was an annexed chapel for Portpool chantry, in St. Paul's; the profits of this church and chapel amounting to no more than 4l. yearly—further than which, I find no further mention of it, nor any trace of the scite of it (u).

ST. MICHAEL BURGATE, was another church, situated, as appears by its name, in Burgate-street, and probably on the north side of it near the gate itself, and within the city walls. Upon its dissolution, the parish of it was united to the church of St. Mary Magdalen, in Burgate (v). The patronage of it belonged to the Priory of Christ church, to which it paid an annual pension of 2s. and it appears to have been confirmed, among others, to that priory, by the bull of Pope Alexander III, and of divers succeeding Popes (w). When it was desecrated, is not known (x), but probably it was long before the reformation; church in Canterbury, as is recorded in the crown rolls of that year.

(t) Battely's Somner, p. 166.

(u) Somner's manuscript papers in the library of Christ Church.

(v) It was valued in the antient taxation with the chapel of Queningate, at 4l. but on account of the slenderness of the income, was not charged to the tenth. Thorne, col. 2169.

(w) Battely's Somner, p. 16.

(x) Ibid. p. 146.

(y) This church was in being in 1490; for fr. John Hopton, chaplain, by his will that year gave a legacy to the parishioners, when they should make new pews in the quire of St. Michael's church. William Byllynghye, curate of the parish church of St. Michael, in 1501, was buried in the chancel of this church. Richard Smith, was parish priest of it in 1516.

CHURCHES.—ST. PAUL.

the site of it, as well as that of St. Mary of Queningate, having been seemingly afterwards included within the bounds of the precincts of the priory, now of the Dean and Chapter (y).

Besides the churches above described within the walls of this city, there are three at this time, without them, viz. St. Dunstan's, St. Paul's, and St. Martin's, each in their respective suburbs; and there was another, viz. that of St. Sepulchre, adjoining to that nunnery, which has been long since desecrated; the former of these, St. Dunstan's,

(y) The remains of this church have long since been converted into a dwelling house, demised on lease by the Dean and Chapter, to a branch of the family of Lynch. The two physicians of that name, father and son, lately possessed and resided in it; some of the antient walls of the church are still remaining.

(z) On the 1st bell is this inscription, in capitals, Thomas Palmar made mee 1661. c. w. On the 2d, the same; and on the 3d, in old English characters, Johannes Hams. R Campana.

In this church, among others, are the following monuments and grave-stones, viz. A mural monument, at the east end of the south isle, for sir Edward Master. He married Dorcas, the daughter of sir Hugh Hammersley, sometime Lord Mayor of London, by whom he had 20 children. Arms—Gules, a lion rampant, holding in its paws a rose branch, or, impaling gules, 3 goats heads or. Another for Lieutenant John Toker, in the service of the crown, under K. James II. in the Princess Anne's royal regiment of horse, in 1388, obt. 1713, et. 46. Arms—Vert, on a bend argent, 3 hearts gules. At the east end of the north isle, on the north side of the altar rails, a mural monument for sir William Rooke, of St. Laurence, in this parish, kn. who after some years imprisonment, and other sufferings for his loyalty, was soon after the King's restoration put into the commission; had likewise a regiment of foot, and the command of a troop of horse. He was one of the deputy lieutenants for this co. and high sheriff of the same, for several years, part in K. Charles II.'s reign, and near four years in K. James II.'s reign. He married Jane Finch, daughter and co-heir of Thomas Finch, of Coptree, esq; in Allington parish, near Maidstone; by whom he had George, Mary, Ursula, Anne, Thomas, Jane and Finch Rooke, obt. 1690, et. 70. Arms, on a hatchment,—Argent, on a chevron engrailed, 3 cheffrooks between as many Cornish choughs sable, impaling argent, a chevron between 3 griffins passant, sable, for Finch. A memorial on canvas, and gilt frame, against the wall on the south side the altar rails, for George Fineux, gent. obt. 1653, et. 40; second son of Thomas Fineux, of Hougham, near Dover, esq. He married Margaret, second daughter of Valentine Morstoft, citizen and merchant of London, by whom he had two children, Elizabeth who died an infant, and Pierce, a posthume, then living, 1654. Arms—Vert, a chevron between 3 eaglets, displayed or, impaling Azure, a flag lodged or. On a brass plate nailed against the easternmost pillar, an inscription for Master Edmund Hovynden, once vicar of this church, who died July 24, 1497. On an oval tablet against the north wall, for James Daniell, of this parish, obt. 1758, et. 51; also for Jane Mantell, obt. 1775, et. 88; like for Jane, widow of James Daniell, and daughter of Henry and Jane Mantell. Jane Daniell died in 1788, et. 78. A white marble tablet for Mary, daughter of Daniel and Susanna Nickalls, who were many years inhabitants of St. Andrew's, in this city, and were buried with their family in that church, which is now no more, being in the county at large, has already been taken notice of under the hundred of Westgate, in which it lies, in vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 591. I shall therefore proceed to describe the others.

ST. PAUL'S church stands on the south side of the street of that name, within the city liberty, at a small distance without Burgate, in the high road to Deal and Sandwich. It is a small mean building, consisting of two isles and two chancels, having a square tower at the west end, in which hang three bells (z).

obt. 1764, et. 65. Mr. Thomas Nickalls, her brother, citizen and upholder, of London, obt. 1776, et. 75, and lies buried in the same vault. Mrs. Sarah Nickalls, sister to the above, obt. 1780, et. 71. Mrs. Rebecca Nickalls, another sister, obt. 1781, et. 69, being the last of the family. On a brass plate an inscription for George Wyndbourn, gent. and Katherine his wife. He died 1531. A tablet against the south wall, for Mr. Nathaniel Price, obt. 1787, et. 72, citizen and goldsmith, of London, and 17 years an inhabitant of this parish. A memorial for Thomas Stoughton, gent. obt. 1611, et. 26. A brass plate and inscription for John Twyne, esq; (the learned antiquary) obt. 1581, who was a school-master, and taught the latin tongue, and had been mayor of this city. In the south isle a memorial for Mrs. Anne Masters, daughter of John Nowers, of Ashford, gent. obt. 1716, et. 73. A memorial for Johnson Macarce, esq; obt. 1786, et. 62. One for Edward Master, son of sir Edward Master, obt. 1675, et. 36. Hugh, son of the above. Arms—Master, as before. A memorial for sir Edward Master, obt. 1690, et. 80. His lady, obt. the same year, et. 70. One for Richard and William Tapenden, of Sittingbourn. Richard, obt. 1737. William, 1740, both infants. Besides which there are memorials for the Taddys, Waddells, Hollingberrys, Pembrokes, Tolpuss, Worger, Hodson, and several others.

Besides the above, there are entries in the parish register, which begins in 1562, of the burials of several of the Masters, Bests of St. Laurence; Randolphs, Lady Dorcas Master in 1671; of Fynch Rooke, esq; in 1696, who was killed in a duel, on March 8th, that year, in the North-holmes, fought with Ensign Anthony Buckeridge; they both died in the field. Lady Mary Rooke, from St. Laurence, in 1699. Captain Thomas Rooke in 1701. The Lady Rooke, jun. in 1702. Sir George Rooke in 1708. Dame Jane Rooke, widow of sir William Rooke, in 1711. George Rooke, esq; the last heir male of this family, in 1739.

David Ferne, the short man, born in the shire of Ross, in the parish of Ferne, et. 27, was buried here in 1737. He was 30 inches high, from head to foot, and 36 inches round, as appears by the entry made in the register.

At the bottom part of the chancel window, says Mr. Somner, there was in antient character or letter, Magister Hamo Doge, a man of note in K. Henry III.'s reign, who was official to the Archbishop, and the last rector of this church before the erecting a vicarage in it. He was founder of a chantry in this parish, and for some time held the aldermany of Westgate ward. In the other windows, Richard Favere, John Stace and Constance his wife, Joan Gale and Christiana his wife, George Windbourne and Katherine his wife, Richard Berne and Joan his wife, and Thomas Pollard. This Richard Berne, who was of Canterbury, gave by will, dated 1461, full of pious and charitable legacies, 10l. towards the repair of this church, at that time in great want of it. He was buried in the isle in the south part of this church, before the cross. John Twyne, the antiquary, above-mentioned, who

CHURCHES.—ST. PAUL.

This church, like others in this city, of the patronage of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, had no particular cemetery or church-yard of its own, but in like manner buried in the common cemetery within the precincts of that abbey; after the dissolution of which, being deprived of that privilege, the parish was obliged to resort for this purpose to the church-yards of other churches in the neighbourhood, until the year 1591, when having purchased a piece of ground on the south side of Longport-street, a faculty was that year obtained for confirming it as a burial place of this parish; as it remains at present.

This church was part of the ancient possessions of the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine, to which it was appropriated, and a vicarage erected and endowed in it in the year 1268, anno 52 Henry III, by Hugh Mortimer, the Archbishop's official, with the consent of the patrons, and of Hamo Doge, then rector of it, who presented, with their consent likewise, Virgil de Alcbam, chaplain, to the vicarage of it, who was by the said official instituted canonically to the same; saving nevertheless to Master Hamo, rector of it, and his successors, rectors of the same, eight marks of silver yearly, from the fruits of the said vicarage, at the birth of our Lord, Easter, the feast of St. John Baptist, and the feast of St. Michael, in equal portions; and that the vicar should pay the procurations of the Archdeacon, and should sustain all other ordinary burthens; but that he should have and receive in the name of his vicarage, all obventions, oblations, chance payments, and all other rights to this church, in any manner belonging or appertaining (except grain and beans in the field) according to which, at that time the vicarage was taxed; sealed with the seal of the official's office, and dated at Canterbury, 5 id. Dec. anno 1268 (a).

After which, the appropriation and advowson of the vicarage of this church continued with the Abbat and Convent, till the dissolution of the monastery in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII.'s reign (b), when they came into the King's hands, who soon afterwards, in his 33d year, settled them by his dotation charter, on his new-founded Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, who who lies buried in the chancel, was great-great-grandson of sir Bryan Twyne, of Long Parish in Hampshire, kn. by Alice his wife, daughter of William Piper, of Canterbury. See an account of him, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, col. 202, 387.

Richard Cram, of this parish, anno 1490, gave 6s. 8d. for a new pair of organs, to serve God, in this church.

(a) Battely's Somner, p. 167, appendix, No. lxvii. Thorne, col. 2095.

(b) Anno 31 Henry VIII. this parsonage was held in ferme, by sir Christopher Hales, at the yearly rent of 100s. In the ancient taxation it was valued at five marks.

(c) See the petitions, consent and decree of the Archbishop thereupon, above; by which this church and St. Martin's were united; and it was decreed, that this church of St. Paul are the present possessors of this appropriation. But since the above time, by the mutual consent of the Dean and Chapter, and of the Archbishop, patron of the adjoining rectory and church of St. Martin, this vicarage of St. Paul was in 1681, united to it; so that the patronage of these united churches is now become alternate in the Archbishop, and the Dean and Chapter (c), in which state it continues at present.

On the abolition of Deans and Chapters, at the latter end of K. Charles I.'s reign, this rectory appropriate came into the hands of the state, and was surveyed by their order in 1650, in order to be sold; in which survey it was returned, that it consisted of the tythes of corn and hay, and other profits belonging to it, estimated to be worth 100l. per annum. The same being then let by the late Dean and Chapter, by their indenture, June 26, 1641, to George Best, gent. for 21 years, at the yearly rent of 5l. but that the premises were worth over and above the said rent 97l. and 7d. per ann. (d) On the restoration in 1660, this parsonage returned again to the Dean and Chapter, and in 1678 there was a terrier taken of it (e), by which it appears, that it consisted of the tythes of the farm, then belonging to the Earl of Winckelsea, in the occupation of John Sutton, containing by estimation, 120 acres, except the Hoath, which was bought heretofore of Mr. Smith, and was parcel of the manor of Barton; the tythes of 20 acres of wood-land; the tythes of 20 acres of land lying in Moate park, then in the occupation of William Ginder; the tythes of 16 acres of land, lying within the park, late Lord Camden's, and then of Edward Hales, esq; in the occupation of William Holmes; the tythes of the farm called the Old Park, containing by estimation 60 acres of land, in the occupation of John Sutton; all the residue of the lands within the parish, were parcels of and belonging to the tithery of St. Laurence.

In the year 1594, Andrew Peerson, cl. Prebendary of Canterbury, died possessed of the interest in the lease of the parsonage barn of St. Paul's, commonly called Caldcott barn, with three acres of land about it (f). George Best, gent. was lessee of this parsonage, as above-mentioned should be in future the church presentative; and that the parishioners of the parishes belonging to each of the said churches should resort to the church of St. Paul, as to their proper church, and that the patron of St. Martin's should have the right of presentation, upon the first avoidance which should happen, and the patron of St. Paul's the next, and so alternately for ever.

(d) Parliamentary Surveys, Lambeth library, vol. xv.

(e) It is now remaining among the Archives of the Dean and Chapter.

(f) He devised his interest in it to Joan, wife of his son Andrew Peerson, to the bringing up of their children, the lease being in the name of Roger May, of Hackington, gent. in trust for his use.

in 1650. He was owner of the house and estate of St. Laurence adjoining to it, in whose successors, owners of that estate, the lease of this parsonage continued down to the late Lord Viscount Dudley and Ward, whose tythery in this parish will be mentioned below, in whose heirs the interest of it remains at this time.

This vicarage was antiently valued at 66s. 8d. only, but on account of the slenderness of its income, was not taxed to the tenth (g).

It is valued in the King's books at 9l. 18s. 9d. and the yearly tenths at 19s. 10½d. (h) In 1588 here were 196 communicants. In 1640 it was valued at 40l. the like number of communicants. There is paid to the vicar, by the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, in lieu of tythes of land in St. Laurence, 5l. per ann. and another 5l. as an augmentation of the vicarage.

There is a terrier of the vicarage, dated April 28, 1630, in the register of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

PORTION OF TYTHES.

On the foundation of the hospital of St. Laurence, near this parish, in the year 1137, by Hugh, Abbat of St. Augustine's, he granted to it, in alms, inter alia, as part of its endowment, the whole tythe of wheat and peas of all the land, which adjoined to Langeport, of their demesne on the left side of the highway which led from Canterbury to Dover, which land was within this parish of St. Paul. These tythes, which consisted of those of the lands that were parcel of and belonging to the manor of Barton, after the suppression of the hospital, came, with the rest of the revenues of it, into the hands of the several grantees and possessors of it (i), as are mentioned below, in the account of that hospital, who in succession became possessed of them down to John, Viscount Dudley and Ward, and are usually known by the name of St. Laurence tythery; who, though he alienated the mansion of the hospital, with the lands contiguous to it, yet he retained the possession of this tythery, of which he died seized in 1788, and his heirs are now entitled to it.

In the year 1348, in the visitation of Thomas Bradwardin, Archbishop of Canterbury, on a complaint made by Thomas Carlton, vicar of St. Paul's, before the Archbishop's Commissary; that all and singular the small tythes of the manor belonging to the Abbat, &c. of St. Augustine, vulgarly called Langeport, alias Barton, in St. Paul's aforesaid, howsoever arising to the said Thomas, as vicar, had belonged from old time, and ought then to belong, as well of right as custom; and that Thomas Wardrobe, farmer of that manor had, to his great detriment, unjustly withdrawn, detained, and held all and all manner of tythes of this kind. He therefore sitting to determine the same, and all parties having been summoned and appearing in Christ church, on Sept. 27, anno 1349, and Richard Scholdon, monk of St. Augustine, and the master of St. Laurence's hospital, having then there produced to him certain muniments, which being diligently inspected and read over, it sufficiently appeared to him, that these tythes wholly belonged to the hospital, and ought in future so to do; he therefore proceeding lawfully in the said matter, at the instance and prayer of the said vicar, dismissed the said Tho. Wardrobe, farmer, as aforesaid, so far as related to the premises. In testimony of which, he had put his seal at Canterbury, on Dec. 10, in the year aforesaid (k).

CHARITIES.

Sir Henry Palmer, of Bekeborne, knt. by his will in the Prerog. office, Canterbury, anno 1611, gave 10s. to be yearly paid out of his manor of Well Court, to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, towards the relief of the poor of it.

Sir Edward Mester, of Canterbury, knt. by his will in 1690, gave 5l. towards the purchasing of a piece of ground for the enlargement of the church-yard, lying in the Borough of Longport, belonging to this parish of St. Paul; to be paid to the churchwardens of it, when they should have procured such piece of ground, adjoining to the church-yard, for that purpose.

CHURCH OF ST. PAUL.

PATRONS,
or by whom presented.

RECTORS.

The Abbat & Conv. (l) Hamo Doge, the last rector, resigned 1668. X

VICARS.

(m) Virgil de Alkham, the first vicar, in 1268.

(n) Thomas Charlton, in 1349.
Edmund Ovynde, in 1490.

(o) Robert Spersfall, in 1511.

(oo) Roger Downvyle, in 1523.

a manner as he, or any master of the hospital had before held or ought to have held the same.

(k) Ledger of St. Laurence hosp. cart. 18. (l) See above.

(m) See ibid. In a charter to St. Radigund's, to which he is a witness, he signs his name Virgil de Cbilton, perpetual vicar of St. Paul's.

(n) Ledger of St. Laurence hospital.

(o) (oo) Both mentioned in a will in Prerog. off. Cant.

John

(g) Thorne, col. 2169.

(h) Decret. primit. dat. Nov. 1. Ed. vi. Lamb. Archiv. Endow. in pens. recept. de mon. Sti Augustini 13s. 4d. in dec. predial. & personal. oblat. & al. spiritual. profic. per annum 9l. 13s. 2d. Prox. 5s. Bacon's Liber Regis, p. 26.

(i) By the grant of this hospital and its possessions, anno 17 James I, the King granted them to be holden in as ample CHURCHES.—ST. PAUL.—ST. MARTIN.

(p) John Clarke, in 1523 and 1554.

(q) William Walsall, in 1562, obt. Sept. 18, 1621.

Dean & Chapter of William Frye, Dec. 19, 1621, obt. Feb. 1626.

William Jordan, in 1637.

William Lovelace, in 1659.

(r) William Jordan occurs again after the restoration in 1661, obt. 1681.

Owen Evans, A. B. Jan. 9, 1681.

On the uniting of this church, in 1681, to that of St. Martin, he was inducted the first to these united rectories. He died in 1743, rector of both. A list of whose successors may be found below, under the account of St. Martin's church.

There having been at different times, several altercations between the city and abbey of St. Augustine, touching the extent of the city's franchise or liberty, in this parish and hereabouts; to clear up all doubts relating to it, a composition was entered into between them, with the King's consent, in the year 1268, being the 42d year of K. Henry III.'s reign, at Westminster, before the King there (s).

The parishes of St. Andrew, St. Mary Magdalen, and for some time St. Paul, which before the dissolution of St. Augustine's Abbey, buried in the cemetery of it, being all churches of that Abbey's patronage, had the church-yard of St. Mary de Castro's church (of that Abbey's patronage likewise) assigned to them in lieu of that cemetery, for the burial of their dead there; a privilege in which St. Mary Bredman's parish did, and does now, but by what right is unknown; that church being of the patronage of Christ church, partake of, with the others, but all, or some part at least of the burials there, was received by the poor of Maynard's Spittal, who in return for it antiently kept it in repair, and for default, anno 1560, were presented by St. Andrew's; since which the case is altered, each parish keeping in repair their part of the inclosure (t).

ST. MARTIN'S church is situated at the eastern extremity of the suburb of its own name, standing on the side of the hill, a little distance from the north side of the high road leading to Deal and Sandwich, and within the city's liberty.

(p) Wills, Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(q) He and his successor lie buried in this church.

(r) He held the rectory of Orgarfwike with this vicarage.

(s) This composition is printed in Batt. Somn. app. p. 72.

(t) Ibid. p. 166.

(u) It is remarkable, that though this church is situated on an eminence, some way up the hill, yet that part of it on the north side of the alley, which leads through the midst of it, is flowed with water from the springs, almost as high up as the floors of the pews, whilst that part on

This church seems indeed very antient, being built, the chancel especially, which appears to be of the workmanship of the time, mostly of Roman or British bricks; the noted reliques and tokens of old age in any kind of building, whether sacred or profane (u).

It consists at present of a nave or body and a chancel (v), having a square tower at the west end of it, in which hang three bells (w). The chancel appears to have been the whole of the original building of this church, or oratory, and was probably built about the year 200, that is about the middle space of time when the Christians, both Britons and Romans, lived in this island, free from all persecutions. The walls of this chancel are built almost wholly of British or Roman bricks, laid and placed in a regular state, in like manner as is observed in other buildings of the Romans in this island, of which those in Dover castle are an instance.

This, as Mr. Somner observes, is an infallible token of an old British or Roman building; but he continues, when these materials are put into a wall (however plentiful they may be,) here and there promiscuously, without rule or order, they seem to be only a sign of the materials having been taken from the ruins of some other building, and were used as they came to hand by the workmen of some later time (x); which observation may, without doubt, be applied to the body of this church.

In the midst of the nave or body, there is an antient circular stone font, much enriched with ornamental sculpture. It consists of a cylindrical stone of near two feet six inches high, and as much in diameter; it is but a shell, so that the basin is sufficiently large to dip a child. The outside is embellished with four series of ornaments; the lower one is a simple scroll; the next a kind of hieroglyphical true-lover's knot; the third small Saxon arches, which shew the architecture, intersecting each other; the upper one a kind of lacing in semicircles inverted, intersecting one another. All the ornaments are very small and much enriched, so that it would be impossible to do justice to it, except by a drawing on a very large scale, which has occasioned the size of the engraving of it here inserted (y).

This church, so much celebrated for the great antiquity of it, is supposed by some to have the south side is remarkably dry for several feet deep.

(v) In this church were formerly the images of St. Christopher and St. Erasmus.

(w) On the 1st bell, there is no inscription. On the 2d, John Palmar made me 1. O. +. I. A. R. On the 3d, in old English characters, Ora pro nobis Santa Caterina.

(x) Battely, pt. ii, p. 3.

(y) In the church are the following monuments and inscriptions. An altar tomb on the south side of the chancel, within the altar rails, erected for the Lord John Finch, Baron

An Ancient Stone Font, in St. Martins Church, Canterbury.

Digitized by Google

CHURCHES.—ST. MARTIN.

been the resort of St. Augustine and his fellow labourers for their devotions at their first arrival, and by licence of K. Etbelbert, granted to them, in favor of Q. Bertba his wife, who had this church, built long before, as Bede says (x), by the believing Romans, and dedicated to St. Martin, allotted for the place of her public devotions. Others suppose that the chapel where Baron of Fordwich; descended from the family of Eastwell. Above the tomb is a mural monument, with another long inscription to his memory. He died in 1660, æt. 77. It was erected by the Lady Mabella Finch his wife. Arms—Finch, quartering Herbert, and impaling Fotherbye. On the pavement of the space is a small cross of white marble, which has been much noticed by the curious, as of great antiquity, it is about nine inches long and six wide; the following is a representation of it.

A memorial in the chancel, partly illegible, but what remains shews it to be for Anne, daughter of John Whitfield, of the city of Canterbury, gent. obt. 1697 Martin Lister, M. D. Ardoeni Evans 1742. Arms, above the inscription, 3 coats; 1st, A bend between 2 cotizes engrailed; 2d, A chevron between 3 moors heads; 3d, Ermine, on a fess 3 mullets. A mural monument of white marble, for James Hanson, of Canterbury, gent. a practitioner of the law, obt. 1756; and for Mary Hanson his widow, daughter of Thomas Conyers, formerly of this parish, gent. obt. 1762, æt. 98. Arms—Argent, 3 susils sable, pierced, on a chief of the last as many lions rampant of the 1st, impaling azure a maunch or. On a plain stone, near the altar rails, arms—a chevron between 3 palmers scripts, impaling on a pale, a sword erect, in chief 3 annulets; and inscription for sr Henry Palmer, kt. late of Howlets, obt. 1659, æt. 49. On a brass plate the effigies of a man, and inscription for Thomas Stoughton, late of Ash, gent. obt. 1591. Arms—on a shield at each corner of the stone, a saltire, between 4 staples, an escalop in the middle, a crescent for difference. On a brass plate the figures of a man and woman, and one son, and five daughters; and an inscription for Michael Fraunces, gent. and Jane his wife, daughter of William Quilter, esq. They both died on January 10, 1587. Arms—Parted per bend, a lion rampant, counterchanged, quartering a bend, and impaling a chevron, between 3 choughs. Near the pulpit, on a mural black tablet, is a beautiful urn of white marble, and inscription for Anne, youngest daughter and coheir of sr Richard Sandys, of Northborne-court, bart. and wife of Charles Pyott, of this parish, esq; obt. 1753, æt. 43. She lies in a vault underneath. On the pedestal of the urn, a memorial for Charles Pyott, esq; above-mentioned, obt.

St. Augustine first celebrated mass, was that of St. Pancrace, within the precincts of the adjoining monastery (a). However this may be, it is in general admitted, that this church having been in early times a Christian oratory made use of by the believing Romans, was repaired and re-consecrated by Luidbard, Bishop of Soissons, who had attended Q. Bertba from France, when 1789, æt. 83. Arms—Azure, on a fess or, a lion rampant gules, in chief 3 bezants, and a mullet for difference; an escutcheon of pretence for Sandys. Below on the tablet a memorial for Elizabeth, second wife of Charles Pyott, esq; daughter of sr Thomas Hales, bart. of Howlets, obt. 1778, æt. 66. At the west end of the isle, a mural monument for James Butler, of St. Andrew's, Canterbury, obt. 1767, æt. 49; and for Martha his wife, obt. 1773, æt. 52, and two of their sons, who died infants. A mural tablet for Mrs. Anne Hulfe, obt. 1780, æt. 68, daughter of Nathaniel and Anne Hulfe, of St. Andrew's parish, whose remains, with those of three of their children, lie in the spot where that church once stood. Arms—Hulfe. A mural tablet against the south wall, for Mrs. Chandler, daughter of Mr. Austen, of this parish, and widow of Mr. Chandler, of St. Mary Magdalen, apothecary, obt. 1778, æt. 71, surviving her husband only eight months; also for Mrs. Rebecca Austen, sister of the above, obt. 1784, æt. 69. On a brass plate in the middle of the isle, an inscription for Stephen Falkes and Alys his wife, the which deceased May 1, 1406. On a plain stone, arms—within a bordure, a falcon, impaling Hulfe. A memorial for Mary, wife of Edw. Kitchell, gent. of the Society of New Inn, London, obt. 1656, æt. 20. A memorial for G. A. De Reck. 1775. A hatchment—Argent, a lion rampant, sable, impaling argent, 6 crosses patee, over all, a bend between 2 cotizes sable. On a grave-stone, 1631, April 22, Samuel Skeame lies here, son of Andrew a Symphon, 1632, September 29. In the church-yard, on a monument affixed to the south wall, an inscription to the memory of Mr. John Austen, late of this parish, buried here near the remains of Rebecca his wife, and nine of their children, but within the church. He died 1745, æt. 74. She died 1744, æt. 64. On another monument adjoining the above, an inscription for Mr. John Austen, son of Mr. John Austen, nearly deposited, obt. 1770, æt. 62; also for Mary his wife, and sister of Mrs. Anne Hulfe, interred within the church, obt. 1711, æt. 70. Ten of their children survived them. John Hougham, of this parish, was buried, anno 1482, in this church, before the high cross in the nave; (who in his will mentions his parsonage and lands at Ash, in St. Martin's and St. Paul's, and likewise Salamon, son of Saloman, his late son deceased). Joane his widow, was buried anno 1503, in the church-yard here, beside her second husband John Strete, whom she likewise survived. Stephen Fokys, of this parish, was buried in 1506, in this church, before the font. By his will he ordered that the yearly rents and profits, coming of his little messuage, with its appurtenances, in which Gregory Bradley then dwelt, should wholly remain to the churchwardens of this parish, for the time being, for ever, for the reparation of this church. Elizabeth Vincent, of this parish, widow, was buried in 1606, in the chancel. Lady Mabella Finch, Baroness Fordwich, was buried in this church, near her deceased Lord, in 1669.

The parish register begins so late as 1662.

(x) Bede Ecclef. Hist. lib. 1, cap. 25. Brompton, col. 729.

(a) Gervas, col. 1630;

the

Digitized by Google

CHURCHES.—ST. MARTIN.

been the resort of St. Augustine and his fellow labourers for their devotions at their first arrival, and by licence of K. Etelbert, granted to them, in favor of Q. Bertha his wife, who had this church, built long before, as Bede says (z), by the believing Romans, and dedicated to St. Martin, allotted for the place of her public devotions. Others suppose that the chapel where

Baron of Fordwich; descended from the family of Eastwell. Above the tomb is a mural monument, with another long inscription to his memory. He died in 1660, æt. 77. It was erected by the Lady Mabella Finch his wife. Arms—Finch, quartering Herbert, and impaling Fotherbye. On the pavement of the space is a small cross of white marble, which has been much noticed by the curious, as of great antiquity, it is about nine inches long and six wide; the following is a representation of it.

A memorial in the chancel, partly illegible, but what remains shews it to be for Anne, daughter of John Whitfield, of the city of Canterbury, gent. obt. 1697 Martin Lister, M. D. Ardoeni Ewans 1742. Arms, above the inscription, 3 coats; 1st, A bend between 2 cotizes engrailed; 2d, A chevron between 3 moors beads; 3d, Ermine, on a fesi 3 mullets. A mural monument of white marble, for James Hanson, of Canterbury, gent. a practitioner of the law, obt. 1756; and for Mary Hanson his widow, daughter of Thomas Conyers, formerly of this parish, gent. obt. 1762, æt. 98. Arms—Argent, 3 susils sable, pierced, on a chief of the last as many lions rampant of the 1st, impaling azure a maunch or. On a plain stone, near the altar rails, arms—a chevron between 3 palmer's scripts, impaling on a pale, a sword erect, in chief 3 annulets; and inscription for sr Henry Palmer, kn. late of Howlets, obt. 1659, æt. 49. On a brass plate the effigies of a man, and inscription for Thomas Stoughton, late of Ash, gent. obt. 1591. Arms—on a shield at each corner of the stone, a saltire, between 4 staples, an escalop in the middle, a crescent for difference. On a brass plate the figures of a man and woman, and one son, and five daughters; and an inscription for Michael Fraunces, gent. and Jane his wife, daughter of William Quilter, esq. They both died on January 10, 1587. Arms—Parted per bend, a lion rampant, counterchanged, quartering a bend, and impaling a chevron, between 3 choughs. Near the pulpit, on a mural black tablet, is a beautiful urn of white marble, and inscription for Anne, youngest daughter and coheir of sr Richard Sandys, of Northborne-court, bart. and wife of Charles Pyott, of this parish, esq; obt. 1753, æt. 43. She lies in a vault underneath. On the pedestal of the urn, a memorial for Charles Pyott, esq; above-mentioned, obt.

St. Augustine first celebrated masse, was that of St. Pancrace, within the precincts of the adjoining monastery (a). However this may be, it is in general admitted, that this church having been in early times a Christian oratory made use of by the believing Romans, was repaired and re-consecrated by Luidbard, Bishop of Soissons, who had attended Q. Bertha from France, when 1789, æt. 83. Arms—Azure, on a fesi or, a lion rampant gules, in chief 3 bezants, and a mullet for difference; an escutcheon of pretence for Sandys. Below on the tablet a memorial for Elizabeth, second wife of Charles Pyott, esq; daughter of sr Thomas Hales, bart. of Howlets, obt. 1778, æt. 66. At the west end of the isle, a mural monument for James Butler, of St. Andrew's, Canterbury, obt. 1767, æt. 49; and for Martha his wife, obt. 1773, æt. 52, and two of their sons, who died infants. A mural tablet for Mrs. Anne Hulfe, obt. 1780, æt. 68, daughter of Nathaniel and Anne Hulfe, of St. Andrew's parish, whose remains, with those of three of their children, lie in the spot where that church once stood. Arms—Hulfe. A mural tablet against the south wall, for Mrs. Chandler, daughter of Mr. Austen, of this parish, and widow of Mr. Chandler, of St. Mary Magdalen, apothecary, obt. 1778, æt. 71, surviving her husband only eight months; also for Mrs. Rebecca Austen, sister of the above, obt. 1784, æt. 69. On a brass plate in the middle of the isle, an inscription for Stephen Falkes and Alys his wife, the which deceased May 1, 1406. On a plain stone, arms—within a bordure, a falcon, impaling Hulfe. A memorial for Mary, wife of Edw. Kitchell, gent. of the Society of New Inn, London, obt. 1656, æt. 20. A memorial for G. A. De Reck. 1775. A hatchment—Argent, a lion rampant, sable, impaling argent, 6 crosses patee, over all, a bend between 2 cotizes sable. On a grave-stone, 1631, April 22, Samuel Skeame lies here, son of Andrew a Sympson, 1632, September 29. In the church-yard, on a monument affixed to the south wall, an inscription to the memory of Mr. John Austen, late of this parish, buried here near the remains of Rebecca his wife, and nine of their children, but within the church. He died 1745, æt. 74. She died 1744, æt. 64. On another monument adjoining the above, an inscription for Mr. John Austen, son of Mr. John Austen, nearly deposited, obt. 1770, æt. 62; also for Mary his wife, and sister of Mrs. Anne Hulfe, interred within the church, obt. 1711, æt. 70. Ten of their children survived them. John Hougham, of this parish, was buried, anno 1482, in this church, before the high cross in the nave; (who in his will mentions his parsonage and lands at Ash, in St. Martin's and St. Paul's, and likewise Salamon, son of Saloman, his late son deceased). Joane his widow, was buried anno 1503, in the church-yard here, beside her second husband John Strete, whom she likewise survived. Stephen Fokys, of this parish, was buried in 1506, in this church, before the font. By his will he ordered that the yearly rents and profits, coming of his little messuage, with its appurtenances, in which Gregory Bradley then dwelt, should wholly remain to the churchwardens of this parish, for the time being, for ever, for the reparation of this church. Elizabeth Vincent, of this parish, widow, was buried in 1606, in the chancel. Lady Mabella Finch, Baroness Fordwich, was buried in this church, near her deceased Lord, in 1669.

The parish register begins so late as 1662.

(z) Bede Eccles. Hist. lib. 1, cap. 25. Brompton, col. 729.

(a) Gervas, col. 1630;

the

CHURCHES.—ST. MARTIN.

she married K. Etzelbert, and was dedicated by him to St. Martin. Whom it was dedicated to before, is not known, but most probably it was to the Virgin Mary; for St. Martin was not born till some time afterwards (b).

This church, which is a rectory, is exempt from the jurisdiction of the Archdeacon; it was part of the antient possessions of the see of Canterbury (c), and the patronage of it continued solely in the Archbishop, till the church was united in 1681 to the neighbouring church of St. Paul, by the mutual consent of the Archbishop, and of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, the patrons of the latter (d); from which time it has continued in the alternate presentation of the Archbishop and the Dean and Chapter, the present patrons of it.

This church is valued in the antient taxation at 10*l.* It is valued in the King's books at 6*l.* 5*s.* 2½*d.* and the yearly tenths at 12*s.* 6¼*d.* (e) In 1588 it was valued at only 20*l.* Communicants 71. In 1640 it was valued at 40*l.* Communicants 70.

It appears by the survey of the King's commissioners anno 2 Edward VI, that there were obit lands within this parish given and bequeathed by divers persons, that one yearly obit should be kept in this church for ever; the yearly value of which lands was 23*s.* 4*d.* of which the distribution to the poor was 12*d.* outgoings 21*d.* clear 20*s.* 7*d.* (f)

CHARITIES.

Sir Henry Palmer, of Bekeborne, knt. by his will in 1611, gave 10*s.* to be yearly paid out of his manor of Well Court, to the minister and churchwardens of this parish, towards the relief of the poor of it (g).

Dame Mabella Finch, baroness of Fordwich, by her will proved in 1669, gave to Mr. Osborne, minister of St. Martin's parish, in which she then dwelt, and to his successors for ever, ministers of the said parish, during the time he and they should continue as such, but no longer, for his (b) St. Martin was Bishop of Tours, a saint then of great répute in France. He died in the year 395.

(c) In the Cotton library, Mss. Augustus 11, 90, is a charter, endorsed Donatio unius Sedis in loco qui dicitur S. Martini Ecclesia & Villulæ Modicæ ad eandem Sedem fideli suo amico Wighelmo per Regem Æthelredum anno 867, indit. xv.

(d) See the consent, petitions and decree of the Archbishop thereupon, above, and the particulars for uniting these churches, under St. Paul's, above.

(e) Viz. In Penf. rec. de Decm. Reg. 2l. 13*s.* 4*d.* In gardin. 3 rod terr. & decim gran. lan. agn. porc. lib. pasch. & omni. al. profic. in toto 6l. 5*s.* 2½*d.* Bacon's Lib. Regis, p. 26.

By a decree of the court of first fruits, the taxation of this parsonage of St. Martin, was reduced from 9*l.* per ann. at which rate it was formerly charged with the payment of first fruits and tenths, to 6*l.* 5*s.* dated November 26, and their better maintenance, one annuity or yearly rent charge of 10*l.* yearly issuing, to be received and taken out of all her messuages, lands and tenements aftermentioned, viz. her manor, capital messuage or farm called Ridgeway, with the buildings, lands and appurtenances in Chifflet, and Reculver, containing 340 acres, and her lease of Ozengell grange, in St. Lawrence, held under the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury; and she ordered the sum of 100*l.* to be paid into the hands of Mr. Bingham and three such other of the ablest inhabitants of this parish of St. Martin, to be by them and the churchwardens and overseers of it, and their successors for ever, employed for the use and benefit of then and hereafter poor of this parish; they giving security to her executors, Mr. Charles Fotherby, and Mr. Isaac Palmer, as they or the major part of them should approve of, for the keeping and employing the said money, and for the due payment of the profits of it (h).

There is a terrier of this rectory, dated May 9, 1630, in the Registry of the Consistory Court of Canterbury.

CHURCH OF ST. MARTIN.

PATRONS. or by whom presented.	RECTORS.
The Archbishop of Canterbury.	(l) John de Henney , in 1321.
	(k) John Bourn , in 1330.
	(l) John Brocn , in 1492.
	(m) Giles Talbot , in 1509, obt. May 1524.
	(n) John Hitchcock , in 1539. — Frencham , refig. 1578.
	John Mug , March 1578, obt. 1587.
	John Stubbs , A. B. May 1587.
	Rich. Genweye , induct. 1592, obt. 1612.
	(o) Wm Osborne, jun. in 1665. William Osborne , A. M. induct. 1693, obt. Aug. 1693.

anno 1 Edward VI, in which decree there is a particular of the tythes, &c. due to the rector of this church. An exemplification of this decree is among the Archives of the Dean and Chapter.

(f) The survey of the commissioners is printed at the end of Battely's Somner.

(g) The will is in Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(h) Ibid.

(i) Somner, appendix, p. 33.

(k) Stev. Mon. vol. i, p. 328.

(l) Wills, Prerog. off. Canterbury.

(m) He was buried in the chancel of this church. His will is in the Prerog. off. in Canterbury.

(n) He is mentioned in a will in Prerog. off. Cant.

(o) He is mentioned in the will of Lady Mabella Finch, proved in 1669.

CHURCHES.—ST. MARTIN.

(p) Owen Evans, A. M. 1693,
obt. March 1742.

On the uniting of this church to that of St. Paul in 1681, he was inducted the first to both churches so united. He died in 1742, rector of both.

(q) Thomas Lamprey, A. M.
June 1743, obt. Sept. 2, 1760.

(r) John Airson, A. M. Dec.
1760, obt. Dec. 13, 1787.

(s) Thomas Freeman, A. M.
1788. Present Rector.

BISHOPS OF ST. MARTIN'S.

THIS place is said from the time of Archbishop Theodore, until that of Archbishop Lanfranc, that is, for the space of 349 years, to have been a Bishop's see; but what renders this almost incredible, is, that there is no mention made of any such in any history whatever, till near the time of the Norman conquest, and then of only two, Eadfin and Goodwin, who are both styled Bishop's of St. Martin's; the former is mentioned as such from the year 1032 to 1038 (t); the latter seems to have been constituted Bishop of this see in 1052, by Archbishop Robert, and died in the year 1061, according to the Saxon chronicle.

The office of these suffragan Bishops has been already fully treated of in the History of Kent, under the account of those of Dover; as to those of St. Martin's, the office of it being vacant a few years before Archbishop Lanfranc came to his see, he, after he became Archbishop, whether because two Bishops were too many for one city, the reason, as some say, which he gave for what he did, or having respect to that ordinance of the Council of London, holden anno 1075, requiring the removal of Bishops sees from obscure rural villages to cities, or because this Bishop was a chorepiscopus, a kind of country suffragan, an order of prelates he no doubt well knew had been for just reasons abolished abroad, and to foreign customs, he had according to all accounts, too much partiality; for one or more of these reasons, he refused to consecrate any other Bishop in this see; but as he needed the help of a substitute, he created in the place of it a kind of new office of Archdeacon, in which place he put Valerius, one of his chaplains, who became the first Archdeacon of Canterbury, at least

(p) He was also rector of Elmstone, and was buried here.

(q) In 1752 he had a dispensation to hold these united rectories, with that of Stonar.

(r) He was likewise rector of Orgarwick in Romney Marsh, and was a Minor Canon of the cathedral. He had been before rector of St. Alphege with Northgate.

(s) He resigned the rectory of Old Romney on being inducted to these churches.

in the light that office has been looked on ever since (u), and thus ended this suffragan see of St. Martin.

CUSTOM OF TYTHES.

THE ENDOWMENTS of these churches, as well within as without the walls of this city, in respect to tythes, ought not to be passed by in silence; the custom and manner of the payment of which, Mr. Somner says, in his time, whether predial or personal, was not in kind, but by and according to the rents of houles, viz. after the rate of 10d. in the noble, quarterly payable. This, he says, was the general custom of tithing throughout this city, one parish, St. Andrew's, only excepted, where, by what means was unknown, the custom was to pay something more, viz. 10½d. in the noble. How long this custom had been in force, was not found; but by records in the Archbishop's registry (v) it appeared, that antiently the clergy of this city were in the same situation for their tythes and offerings, as their brethren the clergy of London were, and partook with them of their custom; but how long afterwards this continued, or when or why it ceased and was changed, and abated into the present manner of tything, and whether or no personal tythes were then paid besides, (as Linwood's opinion is, that they ought to be, this being according to him, a predial tythe) was not found; but he says, he persuaded himself, that personal tythes were likewise paid, and that, because almost every testator, as well of this city, as the country round about it, gave some satisfaction more or less by his will, to the parish priest for his tythes forgotten, or negligently paid, which it was conceived could not easily happen in this certain kind of payment. Yet it was rather than otherwise supposed, these privy personal tythes were seldom or never drawn from the parishioner by any legal compulsory way, or from any course taken for their recovery, in fore exteriori, as it is called, but by other means as prevalent in those times. That is, one method, by the calling the parishioner to account for them in foro conscientie, in the Court of Conscience, at the time of confession, or thrift (perhaps the reason of their being called privy tythes); another by the terrifying danger of incurring the greater curse pronounced of excommunication, (which confirmed him much in his persuasion

(t) Gervas, col. 1651, says, that Seward, Suffragan Bishop (Chorepiscopus) of Archbishop Eadfin, died at Abingdon, and was buried there. Archbishop Eadfin sat from anno 1038 to 1050.

(u) See Battely's Somner, p. 34, 150.

(v) See these records, Battely's Somner, appendix, No. lxxi^a. lxxii^b.

EXTRAPAROCIAL JURISDICTION.

of the usual payment of them) declared in every parish church in town and country, until the reformation, four times in the year, against all such as withheld these tythes; the cause, perhaps, why every man was so careful not to die in his priest's debt for them (w).

HAVING now finished the description of the city and county of Canterbury, the suburbs and several places within the extent of the liberties of it, I come lastly to those villes and districts within the walls, as well as within the suburbs of it, which are esteemed to be either by privilege, charter, or custom of long time established, exempt from those liberties, being usually called extra parochial, and indeed not without some propriety; all which are held to be, except the ville of the precincts of Christ church, which has a constable of its own, within the hundred of Westgate, and all of them within the jurisdiction of the county of Kent at large.

THESE are within the walls of the city.

The BOROUGH of STABLEGATE.

The VILLE of the PRECINCTS of the ARCHBISHOP'S PALACE.

The VILLE of the PRECINCTS of CHRIST CHURCH.

The WHITE or AUGUSTINE FRIARS.

KINGSBRIDGE or ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL, and COKYN'S HOSPITAL.

THE FOLLOWING are situated without the walls of the city.

The PRIORY of ST. GREGORY.

ST. JOHN'S HOSPITAL.

The ABBEY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

The BOROUGH and MANOR of LONGPORT.

SMITH'S ALMS HOUSES.

DOGE'S CHANTRY, and

ST. LAURENCE'S HOSPITAL.

THE BOROUGH of STABLEGATE, or Staplegate as it was afterwards spelt, is a small district, situated in the northern extremity of the city, which is by name excepted in the charter of K. Henry VI, made to the city, from the franchise of it, as being a parcel of the hundred and ville of Westgate, and of the see and liberty of the Archbishop, to whom at one time it is said to have belonged (ww).

It is generally conjectured to have derived its name from the Saxon, in which language it signifies the resting-place or end of a journey, or the laying down of a burthen; for it was, says Darel, the place appointed for strangers and travellers; and Thorne, the chronicler of St. Augustine's, assures us, that this was the reason why it was called Stablegate; where those wearied with carrying their burthens in the way, were unladen and stabled (x); so that this was the very place, as is generally conjectured, where Augustin, the first Archbishop of Canterbury and his company, on their being first received by K. Ethelred, were entertained and seated by him, before he resigned to him his own palace, and retired to Reculver.

Thorne is very particular in his relation of it. He says, the King granted to them a place of residence, situated in the city of Canterbury, viz. within the parish of St. Ælphage, on the opposite side of the King's highway towards the north, along which the wall of the archiepiscopal palace extended itself, in which Augustine with his associates were entertained till the time of the King's conversion. It was, continues he, at that time, as an oratory, for the King's family, who there adored and sacrificed to their gods; but the King, desirous of enfranchising this spot of his hospitality, and to acquit it from all exactions whatsoever for ever, granted, that the inhabitants should not answer to the citizens in any tallages or assessments, or contribute any subsidy to them, but be subject to the Archbishop in all things, and to enjoy in like manner as his palace, uncontradicted liberty, the privilege of being a sanctuary, a place of refuge for criminals, even after they were indicted, should they flee into this place of Stablegate, where they should enjoy the same privilege equally as in a church (y).

This borough has for many years past been in a state of ruin and poverty; the houses in it being inhabited only by poor and unprincipled people, who fly hither as to a sanctuary, and shelter from the liberty of the city. It was some time past erected into a ville, in order to maintain its own poor; but at present there being but few in it, who do not receive relief from the ville, the rates for that purpose are not only almost insupportable, but there are hardly any persons to be found to serve the office of collecting them, and to go through the other official duties of the ville.

There was formerly a family in this city, who from their residence in or near this place, were surnamed De Stablegate, of whom one Edmund Stablegate, the same person, probably, that Lambarde speaks of in his perambulation, under Bilfington, was in the 42d year of K. Edward III, a bailiff of this city, as appears by a deed made to the hospital of Eastbridge, to which, by the title of one of the bailiffs of it, he signs himself, among others, a witness (z). He had also a manor and seat, which was called after him, at

(w) See Battely's Somner, p. 171.

(ww) This district at present is bounded on the east by the street leading from Northgate to Palace-street; on the south, by the end of Palace street, and a part of King's-street; on the west, by Knott's-lane; and on the north, by that part of the parish of Northgate within the walls.

(x) Thorne, col. 1759.

(y) Ibid.

(z) By inquisition taken anno 46 Edward III, Edmund Staplegate was found to die seized of the manor of Bilfington, held in the manner, as is therein mentioned, and likewise nine messuages, one grange and 15 acres of arable, with appur-

THE ARCHIEPISCOPAL PALACE

Nackington, just without the liberties of this city, of which mention has already been made, under the description of that parish (a); and I find some of this name and family, who dwelt in the parish of St. Albage as late as K. Henry VIII.'s reign, for anno 1524. Robert Staplegate was of St. Albage, and possessed several tenements in this hamlet, and dying that year was buried in the cemetery of St. Augustine's monastery.

THE VILLE and PRECINCT of the Archbishop's Palace is situated on the eastern or opposite side of the street from Stablegate abovementioned, and adjoining eastward likewise to the precincts of the cathedral (b).

Augustin, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, and his associates, being kindly received by K. Ethelbert, were accommodated with a habitation in this city, at Stablegate, near this palace, then the residence of that monarch, as has been mentioned above, where they presently afterwards began, says venerable Bede, to follow the examples of the apostles in their way of living (c). This sanctity of life and innocency of manners, joined to the persuasive arguments made use of by Augustine, in favor of Christianity, so far wrought on the King's mind, that he became a convert to the Christian faith, and shortly after removing his residence to Reculver, he bestowed as a further instance of his favor, on Augustine, for a perpetual seat for him and successors, his own royal palace in this city, conjectured to have stood much hereabouts. The palace with the adjoining buildings (d), Augustine afterwards converted into a cathedral and monastery; yet, as it should seem, he did not divide his dwelling, or set out his residence apart from the monks; but he, and they, and both their successors, living in common, both as to goods and possessions, and in one and the same habitation of one entire precinct, and this continued so afterwards till Archbishop Lanfranc's days, who came to the see about four years after the conquest, and being a Norman, altered most of the customs and usages of the English church to those of his own country, and among others of this his own appurtenances in Canterbury, and the suburbs of Canterbury, held of the King in burgage, according to the use and custom of gavel-kind, and that Edmund Staplegate, was son and heir to the former; and the said Edmund, and John, and Thomas were sons and heirs to the latter.

(a) See vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 727.

(b) A few years ago these precincts were erected into a ville, so that now, parish officers are appointed of the inhabitants of it, and they maintain their own poor by a rate levied occasionally among them.

These precincts are now bounded, on the east and south, by those of the Dean and Chapter; on the west, by Palace-street; on the north, by the street that leads from the Borough of Staplegate to the Green-court, and to the precincts of the Dean and Chapter, and contain about three acres and 65 perches.

see and monastery, and among other regulations abolished this community of living, and among his other structures, built himself a court or palace, distinct from the monks, before which time there is no mention found of any such palace or like separate habitation for the Archbishop. Accordingly Eadmer, speaking of Archbishop Lanfranc, says (e), he it was, that first shifted and settled, in the manner they were at the taking the survey of Domesday, the manors and possessions between himself and the monks, setting out to each of them and their successors, their distinct and proper parts (f).

The antient building of Ethelbert's palace, in all probability, did not escape the fury of the Danes, but was consumed in the year 1011 by them in the same flames that destroyed both the church and city. For a long time after there does not appear to have been any thing of any consequence done towards the rebuilding or repairing it, as such; and whatever little had been done, had through the carelessness of Archbishop Stigand, the predecessor of Lanfranc, been suffered to fall down again, so that the latter found it, as well as his church, little more than a heap of ruins.

Whatever Lanfranc built of this palace, there seems now to be but very little, if any, part left; and indeed at the time Archbishop Hubert came to the see, which was about 100 years after Lanfranc's death, it was come to a state of decay; for it must be observed, that before, as well as after this time, this palace, which was at times brought to be a large and costly pile of buildings, experienced the change of fortune with frequent variety, being raised to a noble state by some, and suffered to shrink into shameful decay by other Archbishops; sometimes it was defaced by accidental fires, and at other times it was neglected and fell under the blemishes of dilapidation, through their carelessness, either from their residing in foreign parts, or preferring some of their other palaces and castles in their several manors for their residence; and it was again often repaired, enlarged, adorned and beauti-

(c) Hist. Eccles, lib. i. c. 26. Brompton, col. 729.

(d) Mr. Somner, willing to carry the antiquity of Christ church as high as possible, says, Augustine converted the palace and neighbouring church into a cathedral and monastery; but sure it seems improbable that there should be any church here. At that time, the King himself had been, till then a pagan, and was not likely to permit a christian church even in ruins, so near his own dwelling; and his Queen Bertha, who was a christian, through his favor, was permitted to follow her religion, had both her public and private church, and oratory at some distance, in the church of St. Martin or chapel of St. Pancrase.

(e) Hist. Novorum, lib. i, p. 8.

(f) Battely's Somner, p. 101.

THE ARCHIEPISCOPAL PALACE.

fied by others, who were honourable benefactors to it.

Archbishop Hubert, at his coming to the see of Canterbury, finding this palace in the state of decay as abovementioned, pulled down the greatest part of it, and afterwards laid the foundations of that large and stately hall, and other suitable offices, almost the whole of which remained till the times of rebellion in the middle of the last century. But though he sat in this see for upwards of 12 years, yet he left this work unfinished (g); the reason of which was not owing to his want of good will, or ability, but to his absence from hence, being constantly employed by the King in the highest offices of state (h); Archbishop Langton, Hubert's immediate successor, carried the building on, and having completed it, gained the credit of being the founder of it (i), yet was the beautifying and adorning of it left to one of his successors, Archbishop Boniface, who besides, as he himself expressed it, might truly be accounted the founder of it, by paying those debts which his predecessors had contracted for the expences of it (k).

This grand and stately hall, famous for the royal guests, who at different times found in it no less than royal entertainments becoming the greatest princes, and for the splendid feasts of little inferior account in general, made by the Archbishops on the days of their intbronization, at which not only many of the nobility and suffragan Bishops, but a great and numerous assemblage of respectable persons of the gentry, were present.

Among other remarkable occurrences which took place in it, it ought not to be forgotten, that in Sept. 1299, the marriage ceremony between K. Edward I. and Margaret, the King of France's sister, having been celebrated in the cathedral here, the nuptial feasts were sumptuously kept in this hall for four days together, most of the nobility both of England and France being present at them. The splendid and sumptuous entertainment made by Archbishop Warham, at his intbronization, is particularly related by his successor Archbishop Parker, and will be fully mentioned in the succeeding part of this history. During that prelate's time, in the year 1520, anno 12 Henry VIII, there was celebrated on one of the nights of the Whitsun-week, a splendid ball in the great ball of this palace; at which the newly elected Emperor Charles V. danced with the Queen of England, and the King of England with the Queen of Arragon, the Emperor's mother; this being finished, a royal feast commenced, the tables were covered in the hall, and the banqueting dishes were served in; before which rode the Duke of Buckingham, as sewer, upon a white hobby, and in the midst of the hall was a partition of boards, at which the Duke alighted, and kneeled on his knee, and that done, took again his horse back, until he was almost half-way to the table, and there alighted and did the like as before; and then rode to the table, where he delivered his hobby, and sewed kneeling at the table where the Emperor was, and the King with his retinue kept the other end of the hall (l).

Archbishop Parker, at his coming to the see in the 1st year of Q. Elizabeth, found the palace with the great hall and the other edifices belonging to it in such bad repair, that in the two next years he was necessitated to lay out upwards of 1400l. in the re-edifying of them (m); after which, in 1573, that Queen being here on one of her progresses through the country, and Sept. 7 being her birth-day, he made a sumptuous banquet at this palace, to which he invited the Queen, Gondy, Count de Rbetz, and Mote Fenslon, with a great number of noblemen, who feasted with him in the great hall here on that day (n).

In this state the palace remained till the abolition of episcopacy and church government, after the death of K. Charles I, when the whole of it being sold to supply the necessities of the state, the purchasers, for the lucre of the materials, pulled down the great hall, and the other best apartments (being by far the greatest part of it) and converted the remainder into private houses, in which state it has continued ever since. However, on the restoration of K. Charles II, the remains of the palace, with the precinct of it, returned to the see of Canterbury; but the Archbishop, on taking possession of them, found the state of the buildings to be such, as not to be capable of being made habitable for him, and weighing well the considerable cost of re-building a palace here, and the inconveniences of its distance from London, demised the whole of the scite of it, with the buildings and precinct of it,

(g) Anglia Sacra.

(h) Lamb. Per. p. 313.

(i) Harpsfield, Eccles. Hist. p. 434.

(k) Stow's annals of K. Edward I. Mr. Somner gives us the Archbishop's speech on this occasion. My predecessors, says the Archbishop, built this hall at great expences, they did well indeed, but they laid out no money about this building, excepting what they borrowed. I seem indeed to be truly the builder of this hall, because I paid their debts. Archbishop Langton left his see so much in debt, by what he laid out on this hall, and the excessive expences he was at, on the translation of St. Thomas Becket, that it cost Archbishop Boniface 22,000 mares or 14,666l. 13s. 4d. to clear the see of those debts.

(l) Peck's Desid. Curios. book. vi, p. 50.

(m) See Battely, appendix, No. x.

(n) See Camden and Strype's Annals, vol. ii, p. 314.

THE ARCHIEPISCOPAL PALACE.

on a beneficial lease to one lessee for 30 years, which is usually renewed every ten years, on paying an adequate fine; in which manner it continues at this time to be held (o), John Monins, esq; (p) who has built himself a handsome house on part of the premises, in which he resides, being the present lessee of them.

There is so very little remaining at present of this once stately palace, that it is hardly possible to form any conjecture what it ever was.

All that is now left of it is, two buildings converted into tenements opposite the western side of the cloysters; both of which have much shew of antiquity; these were repaired, and perhaps nearly rebuilt, by Archbishop Parker; one of them has a kind of regular and not unhandsome front for the time, westward, towards St. Alphage-street, built, by all appearance of it, by him; this was the remains of a spacious gallery between this part of the palace, and the great hall of it, which stood at the north end of it; the back part of this house towards the precincts of the palace, has a strong thick wall to it, built of flints, with an arched stone door-case, &c. which Mr. Somner thinks is the only part remaining of Archbishop Lanfranc's time, the room within it being that where the Archbishop then held his civil or temporal court. The other house adjoining, opposite the western door of the cloysters, is a high building of stone rubble and flint mixed, which seems of itself to be of some antiquity, but was greatly repaired by Archbishop Parker, whose arms are on the south side of it, towards Christ church-gate, as well as in the windows and some other places within doors. From this part of the palace is a high wall embattled, reaching to the north-west tower of the church, as a separation and bounds between the two precincts; in this wall are the remains of a sheltered way to the cloysters, for the accommodation of the Archbishop in bad weather, in his passage to the church; though on public and solemn occasions, his entrance to it was from a large gateway, the square tower of which, handsomely built of flint and ornamented with asbler stone, situated opposite and within a very small distance of the great western door of the cathedral, is still remaining, which, however seemingly otherwise, being on the outer side of the above wall, is yet within the bounds of the precincts of this palace.

(o) The reserved rent amounts to 60l. 8s. yearly; in 1770 the fine on renewal was 63l. and the rack rents 203l.

(p) See an account of him and his family, in vol. iv. of the History of Kent, under Charlton.

(q) These remains of the old palace, above-mentioned, escaped the fury of the puritans in the time of the great rebellion; for when they had killed the right owner and taken possession of his spoils, as Mr. Gosling tells us, their zeal for destroying cooled by degrees, and they had wit enough to find out that good houses were of more valued

The antient wall which surrounded these precincts, is still, in great part, remaining on the west and north sides of it, and was much more so, till the alterations made within these few years here; it is built of rubble-stone and flint, of great height and thickness, and seems by every appearance of it, to be part of that originally built by Archbishop Lanfranc. Nearly in the middle of the west side of it is a large handsome gateway, built of brick, with stone ornaments, by Archbishop Parker, being the principal entrance to the palace from St. Alphage-street; on the north side of it are some other brick buildings erected about the same time, seemingly for the inferior offices belonging to the palace (q), and until the present lessee, Mr. Monins, within these few years, pulled down several others for the purpose of erecting his new house and offices, and laying out his garden behind them, there were some small remains left of the great hall of this palace. The north porch of it, of no small size, opening into the precincts of the palace, then a dwelling-house, was remaining; and in the garden behind it were numbers of small pillars of the Betherden marble, once the ornaments of it, dispersed in fragments about it. At the eastern wall of the garden were two niches, adorned with pillars and canopies of this sort of marble, still maintaining the appearance of grandeur, and against the wall at the east end was the look of what seemed formerly to have been a cloyster, consisting of five arches on the outer side, which were eleven feet wide, the crowns of which appeared about four feet above ground, all below being buried in the rubbish which made the foot way.

At a small distance eastward from hence, adjoining to the west side of the cloysters, was, whilst the priory remained, the lodgings belonging to the cellarer of it, having a door opening into them. These at the dissolution of the priory came to the crown, and were particularly excepted out of the dotation charter granted by K. Henry VIII. to his new Dean and Chapter, and were afterwards granted to the Archbishop; since which they have continued to be esteemed as part of the precincts of his palace (r). Part of them were converted into a dwelling, though new modelled to a different appearance, till Mr. Monins pulled it down a few years since, and there is now remaining of it only a wall against the cloysters, though much than the rubbish of them; and it is rather diverting to know, that the person to whose share one of the houses fell, that opposite the cloyster door, used to date his letters from his palace at Canterbury.

(r) The King exchanged the cellarer's lodgings with the Archbishop, for three acres of land, late parcel of the priory of St. Gregory, and lately included in the park at Canterbury, and other premises, by deed, dated April 24, anno 34 Henry VIII. Augmentation office, deeds of purchase and exchange, marked Kent, box, C. 50.

CATHEDRAL and PRIORY.

higher, built of flint, with stone ornaments, being part of those antient lodgings abovementioned.

There was in 1720, a French chapel or meeting-house within these precincts; for Anne Herauld of Canterbury, spinster, by her will proved that year, gave the sum of 10l. to the adorning and repairing of the French chapel or meeting-house, in the Archbishop's palace here, belonging to the French congregation; but there has been none such within memory, though there has been a methodist meeting, in a chapel within these precincts, for many years past, not improbable in the same place as abovementioned.

A South Prospect of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury.

The VILLE and PRECINCTS of CHRIST CHURCH.

THE VILLE of the precincts of Christ church is situated in the north-east part of the city within the walls of it; though within the jurisdiction of the county at large, it is not amenable to the Court Leet of the hundred of Westgate, to which it does no suit, having the privilege of a constable of its own, who is appointed yearly at the Quarter Sessions for East-Kent, from among the inhabitants of it, usually by recommendation from the Dean and Chapter, who are possessed of the entire freehold of it (s). The cathedral church

(s) These precincts were about 40 years ago erected into a ville, so that now in like manner as a parish, it has its own parochial officers, and maintains its own poor. This ville is now charged to the county rate, at 1l. 2s. 4d. being its settled proportion to the county stock.

stands nearly in the south-west part of it, adjoining to which, on the north side, stood most part of the Benedictine priory of Christ church, the remains of which are converted into dwellings and offices for the use of the Dean and Chapter, and the other members of this church.

THE CATHEDRAL AND PRIORY OF CHRIST CHURCH.

THE history of this church and priory has been so accurately and minutely investigated, both by Mr. Somner and his continuator Mr. Battely(t),

(t) Mr. Somner published his History of Canterbury, quarto, in 1640, and intended a new edition of it, but he did not live to execute that design; upon which the booksellers, to forward the remaining copies of it, caused a new title to be printed, anno 1662, and added to the book, which has

CATHEDRAL and PRIORY.

that it would be very difficult to avoid a frequent repetition of what they have already published concerning it; so far from avoiding it, continued use has been made of their ingenious labours throughout the greatest part of this account, as the means of rendering the greatest justice to it. Not that the following history of them has been confined to their labours only, it is compiled from other authors likewise, who have since written on this subject in particular, and from various other authorities, as well as from personal knowledge, and has been extended as far as the nature of this work would admit. Every history and chronicle has much in it relative to the concerns of this church, and its prelates, nor is this to be wondered at, when we consider how much both were connected with the public affairs of the realm, and that it has ever been the metropolitcal church; a church, which has from the earliest antiquity, been universally revered for its sanctity, and rendered illustrious by a series of prelates who have presided over it, of high estimation for their piety as churchmen, and for their eminent abilities, when intrusted, as they frequently were, with the highest and most important offices of the state (u).

THE ORIGIN of a Christian church on the site of the present cathedral, is supposed to have taken place as early as the Roman empire in Britain, for the use of the antient faithful and believing soldiers of their garrison here; and that Augustine found such a one standing here, adjoining to K. Ethelbert's palace, which was included in the King's gift to him.

This supposition is founded on the records of the priory of Christ church (v), concurring with the common opinion of almost all our historians, who tell us of a church in Canterbury, which Augustine found standing in the east part has made some suppose that there has been two impressions of it, which is certainly a mistake. Mr. Battely, the old impression having been long since sold off, published in the year 1703, a new edition of it, in folio, in which, whatever Mr. Somner had corrected or altered, with his own pen, in order to a second edition, was observed by him, and he added to Mr. Somner's History, a second part, which he styled Cantuarua Sacra, or the Antiquities of the Cathedral, Archbishoprick, Priory, Dean and Chapter, Archdeaconry, the Monastery of St. Augustine, the parish churches, hospitals, and other religious places, in or near this city; after which in 1721, Mr. Dart published the History of this Cathedral in folio, with beautiful plates of the building and the monuments in it, engraved by Cole. Mr. Gosling next, in 1777, published his Walk, in which this church and the priory with the precincts of them, are accurately described, and plates are added of the several parts of them, as they appear at present. Lastly, Simmons and Kirkby published a description of this church, with the lives of the several Archbishops, in 1783, being a new and much enlarged edition, of a smaller and more confined pamphlet, before printed by J. Burnby, on this subject.

of the city, which he had of K. Ethelbert's gift, which after his consecration at Arles in France, he commended by special dedication to the patronage of our blessed Saviour (w).

According to others, the foundations only of an old church formerly built by the believing Romans, were left here, on which Augustine erected that, which he afterwards dedicated to our Saviour (x); and indeed it is not probable that K. Ethelbert should have suffered the unsightly ruins of a Christian church, which, being a Pagan, must have been very obnoxious to him, so close to his palace, and supposing these ruins had been here, would he not have suffered them to be repaired, rather than have obliged his Christian queen to travel daily to such a distance as St. Martin's church, or St. Pancrace's chapel, for the performance of her devotions.

Some indeed have conjectured that the church found by St. Augustine, in the east part of the city, was that of St. Martin, truly so situated; and urge in favor of it, that there have not been at any time any remains of British or Roman bricks discovered scattered in or about this church of our Saviour, those infallible, as Mr. Somner styles them, signs of antiquity, and so generally found in buildings, which have been erected on, or close to the spot where more antient ones have stood. But to proceed, King Ethelbert's donation to Augustine was made in the year 596, who immediately afterwards went over to France, and was consecrated a bishop at Arles, and after his return, as soon as he had sufficiently finished a church here, whether built out of ruins or anew, it matters not, he exercised his episcopal function in the dedication of it, says the register of Christ church, to the honor of Christ our Saviour; whence it afterwards obtained the name of Christ church (y).

From the time of Augustine for the space of up-

(u) In this see, since its first erection, there have been 18 Archbishops sainted, nine made Cardinals, twelve Lord Chancellors, four Lord Treasurers, one Lord Chief Justice of England, and nine Chancellors of the University of Oxford.

(v) The monks who were never wanting to frame, as well to record evidences of all grants or rights, to which they had made any pretence, have left us in their old registers, several of this donation of K. Ethelbert. Mr. Somner has given three of them, which are transcribed in his Appendix, No. xxviii^a, xxviii^b, xxviii^c. These evidences inform us, that this church was built by the believing Romans, and that K. Ethelbert gave it, with his palace, to St. Augustine; but herein they are only transcribers from Bede; a name, which would have given credit to their records, so far as they followed him, had they not totally mistaken his meaning, in relation to the fact in question. See Battely's Somner, p. 84, pt. ii, p. 3. Thorne, col. 1760.

(w) Bede Eccles. Hist. lib. i, cap. 3.

(x) Gervas, col. 1310, says, that Augustine built a church in the city of Canterbury, which he dedicated in honor of our Saviour Jesus Christ. See Kilburne, p. 58.

(y) Regist. Cant. A. Bromton, col. 733.

wards

CATHEDRAL and PRIORY.

wards of 300 years, there is not found in any printed or manuscript chronicle, the least mention of the fabric of this church, so that it is probable nothing befell it worthy of being recorded; however it should be mentioned, that during that period the revenues of it were much increased, for in the leiger books of it there are registered more than 50 donations of manors, lands, &c. so large and bountiful, as became the munificence of Kings and nobles to confer (z).

It is supposed, especially as we find no mention made of any thing to the contrary, that the fabric of this church for 200 years after Augustine's time, met with no considerable molestations; but afterwards, the frequent invasions of the Danes involved both the civil and ecclesiastical state of this country in continual troubles and dangers; in the confusion of which, this church appears to have run into a state of decay; for when Odo was promoted to the Archbishopric, in the year 938, the roof of it was in a ruinous condition; age had impaired it, and neglect had made it extremely dangerous; the walls of it were of an uneven height, according as it had been more or less decayed, and the roof of the church seemed ready to fall down on the heads of those underneath. All this the Archbishop undertook to repair, and then covered the whole church with lead; to finish which, it took three years, as Osbern tells us, in the life of Odo (a); and further, that there was not to be found a church of so large a size, capable of

(z) The particulars of them may be seen in Mr. Somner's appendix, No. xxxvi, and in Dugdale's Monasticon, vol. i, p. 18.

(a) Ang. Sacr. vol. ii, p. 83.

(b) A. D. 1011, in September, the Danes, with a numerous and well armed fleet, came to Sandwich, where landing, they made their way directly to Canterbury, which they immediately encompassed and besieged. Having carried on the siege with all vigour, using every warlike means either to battle or to scale the walls, or by throwing fire to set the city in flames; on the 20th day of September, the latter means took effect, for a fire being kindled in some houses that were nearest to the walls, it increased so much by a strong south wind, that the whole city was presently in a flame. The citizens were by this brought into a miserable streight; for before them they saw the enemy ready to enter, sword in hand; behind them were the flames, not only devouring their houses, but which was far more dreadful, ready to devour their wives and children together. Hence private affection and a tenderness of compassion prevailed so far over them that they neglected the public safety, they forsook the defence of the walls, and ran to their own houses to snatch their wives and children from the flames, who in the same hour were to be exposed to the merciless fury of the enemy. For whilst they were buried among the ashes of their houses, a breach was made and the enemy entered the city: then a terrible noise of shrieks and cries on one side, and of trumpets and shouts on the other, was lifted up to the heavens, so as the very foundations of the city seemed to be shaken by it. And now, who can conceive in his thoughts the sad confusion containing so great a multitude of people, and thus, perhaps, it continued without any material change happening to it, till the year 1011; a dismal and fatal year to this church and city; a time of unspeakable confusion and calamities; for in the month of September that year, the Danes, after a siege of 20 days, entered this city by force, burnt the houses, made a lamentable slaughter of the inhabitants, rifled this church, and then set it on fire, inasmuch that the lead with which Archbishop Odo had covered it, being melted, ran down on those who were underneath. The full story of this calamity is given by Osbern, in the life of Archbishop Odo, an abridgement of which the reader will find below (b).

The church now lay in ruins, without a roof, the bare walls only standing, and in this desolate condition it remained as long as the fury of the Danes prevailed, who after they had burned the church, carried away Archbishop Alphege with them, kept him in prison seven months, and then put him to death, in the year 1012, being the year after Living, or Livingus, succeeded him as Archbishop, though it was rather in his calamities than in his seat of dignity, for he too was chained up by the Danes in a loathsome dungeon for seven months, before he was set free, but he so sensibly felt the deplorable state of this country, which he foresaw was every day growing worse and worse, that by a voluntary exile, he withdrew himself out of the na-which overspread the whole city. Some fell by the sword, some perished in the flames, some were thrown headlong over the walls, and others in a manner more shameful than is fit to be expressed, were put to death. The matrons were dragged by the hair of the head through the streets, in order to extort from them the discovery of hidden treasures, which they never had, and then were cast into the flames. The infants were torn from their mother's breasts, some of them were carried about stuck on the tops of spears, others were laid under the wheels of carriages and crushed to pieces. The venerable Archbishop Alphege, who all this while had staid in the church, in the midst of his weeping monks, could no longer endure to hear of the calamities of the miserable people; but rushing out of a sudden from the church, ran among the heaps of the slain bodies into the midst of the enemies, crying aloud, Spare! O spare! &c. when they seized upon him, bound him, stopped his mouth that he might not speak, then beat and abused him. They then forced him back into the church, and there made him stand and see a most dismal tragedy; for before his eyes many were put to several kinds of cruel death, that he might behold in it the most frightful shapes before he came to die himself. The church was rifled and set on fire, inasmuch that the melted lead ran down upon the heads of the monks; they came out and were presently put to the sword. In this slaughter the monks and people, men, women and children were decimated, i. e. nine were slain and one saved alive, and the Archbishop himself was carried away, and afterwards put to death by them. See Battely's Somner, p. 84. From Wharton's Ang. Sacr. vol. ii, p. 133.

tion,

The Ichnography of the Church of Canterbury as built by Archbishop Lanfranc, with that of the Choir and the adjoining parts built by Prior Conrad.

The Ichnography of the Crypt as at the Dissolution of the Priory in 1540.

REFERENCES to the upper part.

- A The naves and wings of the church built by Lanfranc.
- B The choir and parts built by Conrad.
- C The chapel of the Virgin Mary.
- D The tower and altar of St. Andrew.
- E The tower and altar of St. Peter and St. Paul.
- a The two western towers.
- b The lower wings.
- c The steps from the nave and both wings into the choir.
- cc The altar of the holy cross.
- d The steps to the upper part of the church.
- e The steps descending into the crypt.
- f The altar of St. Michael.
- g The altar of All Saints.
- h The altar of St. Benedict.
- i The altar of St. Blaise.
- k The pillars supporting the roofs of both wings.
- l The door into the cloyster.
- m The altar of St. Martin.
- n The altar of St. Stephen.
- o The altar of St. John the Evangelist.
- p The altar of St. Gregory.
- q The presbytery.

- qq The altar of St. Alphage.
- r The altar of Christ.
- rr The altar of St. Dunstan.
- s The tomb of Queen Edyve.
- t The patriarchal chair.
- u The chapel and altar of the Holy Trinity.

REFERENCES to the lower part.

- a The western doors into the crypt.
- b The altar of St. Mary Magdalen.
- c The altar of St. Nicholas.
- d The altar of St. Paulinus.
- e The altar of St. Owen.
- f The altar of the Holy Innocents.
- g The altar of St. John Baptist.
- h The altar of the tomb of St. Thomas the Martyr.
- i The altar of St. Augustine.
- k The chapel of the Blessed Virgin.
- l The tomb of Lady Mohun.
- m The tomb of the Countess of Athol.
- n Archbishop Morton's tomb.
- o The chantry of Edward the Black Prince, in which, perhaps, was the altar of St. Catherine.

tion, to find some solitary retirement, where he might bewail those detolations of his country, to which he was not able to bring any relief, but by his continual prayers (c). He just out-lived this storm, returned into England, and before he died saw peace and quietness restored to this land by K. Canute, who gaining to himself the sole sovereignty over the nation, made it his first business to repair the injuries which had been done to the churches and monasteries in this kingdom, by his father's and his own wars (cc).

As for this church, Archbishop Ægelnoth, who presided over it from the year 1020 to the year 1038, began and finished the repair, or rather the rebuilding of it, assisted in it by the royal munificence of the King (d), who in 1023 presented his crown of gold to this church, and restored to it the port of Sandwich, with its liberties (e). Notwithstanding this, in less than 40 years afterwards, when Lanfranc soon after the Norman conquest came to this see, he found this church reduced almost to nothing by fire, and dilapidations; for Eadmer says, it had been consumed by a third conflagration, prior to the year of his advancement to it; in which fire almost all the antient records of the privileges of it had perished (f).

The same writer has given us a description of this old church, as it was before Lanfranc came to the see; by which we learn, that at the east end there was an altar adjoining to the wall of the church, of rough unhewn stone, cemented with mortar, erected by Archbishop Odo, for a repository of the body of Wilfrid, Archbishop of York, which Odo had translated from Rippon hither, giving it here the highest place; at a convenient distance from this, westward, there was another altar, dedicated to Christ our Saviour, at which divine service was daily celebrated. In this altar was inclosed the head of St. Swithin, with many other relics, which Archbishop Alphege brought with him from Winchester. Passing from this altar westward, many steps led down to the choir and nave, which were both even, or upon the same level. At the bottom of the steps, there was a passage into the undercroft, under all the east part of the church (g). At the east end of which, was an altar, in which was inclosed, according to old tradition, the head of St. Furseus. From hence by a winding passage, at the west end of it, was the tomb of St. Dunstan (h), but separated from the undercroft by a strong stone wall; over the tomb was erected a monument, pyramid wise, and at the head of it an altar (i), for the mattin service. Between these steps, or passage into the undercroft and the nave, was the choir (k), which was separated from the nave by a fair and decent partition, to keep off the crowds of people that usually were in the body of the church, so that the singing of the chanters in the choir might not be disturbed. About the middle of the length of the nave, were two towers or steeples, built without the walls; one on the south, and the other on the north side. In the former was the altar of St. Gregory, where was an entrance into the church by the south door, and where law controversies and pleas concerning secular matters were exercised (l). In the latter, or north tower, was a passage for the monks into the church, from the monastery; here were the cloysters, where the novices were instructed in their religious rules and offices, and where the monks conversed together. In this tower was the altar of St. Martin. At the west end of the church was a chapel, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, to which there was an ascent by steps, and at the east end of it an altar, dedicated to her in which was inclosed the head of St. Astorburtæ the Virgin; and at the western part of it was the Archbishop's pontifical chair, made of large stones, compacted together with mortar: a fair piece of work, and placed at a convenient distance from the altar, close to the wall of the church (m).

To return now to Archbishop Lanfranc, who was sent for from Normandy in 1073, being the fourth year of the Conqueror's reign, to fill this see, a time, when a man of a noble spirit, equal

(c) Godwin de Præful. Angliæ.

(cc) W. Malmsb. de Gestis regum Angliæ, l. ii, c. 8. Ingulph. Hist. p. 507.

(d) Antiq. Brit. p. 94.

(e) Register Christ church.

(f) His words are: Antiqua ipsius Ecclesiæ privilegia in ea conflagratione, quæ eandem Ecclesiam tertia, ante sui introitus annum, Consumpsit pene omnia perierant. Eadmer, Hist. novorum l. i, p. 9. Gervas, col. 1310; says, that at the time when Duke William, with his armed forces entered, wholly wasted and subdued England, all things were given to pillage, and the church of Christ was burnt.

(g) This undercroft was made in imitation of the confessionary in St. Peter's church at Rome, with an arched or vaulted roof.

(h) According to his will, his body was laid very deep under ground.

(i) Battely's Somner, pt. ii, p. 7.

(k) Chorus psallentium.

(l) Eadmer's words are: Quod hostium in antiquorum legibus regum jus homine exprimitur. In quibus etiam omnes querelas totius regni, quæ Hundredis vel Comitibus uno vel pluribus, vel ceste in Curia Regis non possent legaliter diffiniri, suam inibi sicut in Curia Regis summi, sortiri debere discerniter. Mr. Selden, in his preface to the Decim Scriptores, has made a large commentary on these words of Eadmer. It has been observed, that such kind of courts are a proof of the great antiquity of a church or chapel, where they have been held. See Battely, pt. ii, p. 8.

(m) Eadmer, Hist. Nov. l. i, p. 9. See Batt. Som. p. 8.

CATHEDRAL.

to the laborious task he was to undertake, was wanting especially for this church; and that he was such, the several great works which were performed by him, were incontestable proofs, as well as of his great and generous mind. At the first sight of the ruinous condition of this church, says the historian, the Archbishop was struck with astonishment, and almost despaired of seeing that and the monastery re-edified; but his care and perseverance raised both in all its parts anew, and that in a novel and more magnificent kind and form of structure, than had been hardly in any place before made use of in this kingdom, which made it a precedent and pattern to succeeding structures of this kind (n); and new monasteries and churches were built after the example of it; for it should be observed, that before the coming of the Normans most of the churches and monasteries in this kingdom were of wood; (all the monasteries in my realm, says K. Edgar, in his charter to the Abbey of Malmesbury, dated anno 974, to the outward sight are nothing but worm-eaten and rotten timber and boards) but after the Norman conquest, such timber fabrics grew out of use, and gave place to stone buildings raised upon arches; a form of structure introduced into general use by that nation, and in these parts furnished with stone from Caen in Normandy (o). After this fashion Archbishop Lanfranc rebuilt the whole church from the foundation, with the palace and monastery, the wall which encompassed the court, and all the offices belonging to the monastery within the wall, finishing the whole nearly within the compass of seven years (p); besides which, he furnished the church with ornaments and rich vestments; after which, the whole being perfected, he altered the name of it, by a dedication of it to the Holy Trinity; whereas, before it was called the church of our Saviour, or Christ church; and from the

(n) Ead. Hist. lib. i, p. 7.

(o) Stow's Survey of London, p. 352. Daniel Hist. in vita Conquest. See Battely's Somner, p. 86.

(p) Eadmer ibid. At this time all the remains of the old church, which age and flames had not devoured, were taken down to the ground. Gervais, in his Actus Pontificum Cantuar. col. 1654, tells us, that as the church of Canterbury with its offices were consumed by fire, in the time of the wars, Lanfranc making all things new, pulled down all that was old from the foundations. Lanfrancus omnia innovans a fundamentis, vetera evertit; and afterwards built up the church itself, with the offices within the wall, together with the wall itself.

(q) See Eadmer, Hist. Nov. p. 26, 35, 108.

(r) He adds this, in respect of the clear light of the glass windows, the beauty and comeliness of the marble pavement, and the curious paintings of the roof. Malmib. de Gestis Pontif. lib. i, p. 234. See Eadm. lib. v, p. 109. Battely's Somner, p. 86, pt. ii, p. 12.

(s) The greatness of this undertaking appears still more above time it bore (as by Domesday book appears) the name of the church of the Holy Trinity; this new church being built on the same spot on which the antient one stood, though on a far different model.

After Lanfranc's death, Archbishop Anselm succeeded, in the year 1093, to the see of Canterbury, and must be esteemed a principal benefactor to this church; for though his time was perplexed with a continued series of troubles, of which both banishment and poverty made no small part, which in a great measure prevented him from bestowing that cost on his church, which he would otherwise have done, yet it was thro' his patronage and protection, and through his care and persuasions, that the fabric of it, begun and perfected by his predecessor, became enlarged and rose to still greater splendor (q).

In order to carry this forward, upon the vacancy of the priory, he constituted Ernulph and Conrad, the first in 1104, the latter in 1108, successively priors of this church; to whose care, being men of generous and noble minds, and of singular skill in these matters, he, during his troubles, not only committed the management of this work, but of all his other concerns during his absence.

Probably Archbishop Anselm, on being recalled from banishment on K. Henry's accession to the throne, had pulled down that part of the church built by Lanfranc, from the great tower in the middle of it to the east end, intending to rebuild it upon a still larger and more magnificent plan; when being borne down by the King's displeasure, he intrusted Prior Ernulph with the work, who raised up the building with such splendor, says Malmesbury, that the like was not to be seen in all England (r); but the short time Ernulph continued in this office did not permit him to see his undertaking finished (s). This was left to his successor Conrad, who, as the conspicuous, when it is considered, that they took down a choir, which had been built not long before, by one who did nothing mean or little, consequently might be supposed to be decent and capacious, and which at that time could not be out of repair or fallen to decay. The pulling down this part of a new and well built church, and this it seems to have been; for the nave of it, the cross isles, and the angel steeple, all built at the same time with the choir, and by the same hands, continued for more than 500 years afterwards, was censured by some at that time, as a vain and needless expence, and the builders of the new choir were accused of extravagancy to the King, to whom it was intimated that the money spent about this costly building might have been more useful to him in his wars, and other expences of the state; but the King made a most gracious reply in favour of the monks, commending them who not having wasted or diminished the goods of the church, had increased the prosperity of it. See Eadmer, p. 109. Battely, pt. ii, p. 13.

CATHEDRAL.

obituary of Christ church informs us, by his great industry, magnificently perfected the choir, which his predecessor had left unfinished (t), adorning it with curious pictures, and enriching it with many precious ornaments (u).

This great undertaking was not entirely completed at the death of Archbishop Anselm, which happened in 1109, anno 9 Henry I, nor indeed for the space of five years afterwards, during which the see of Canterbury continued vacant; when being finished, in honour of its builder, and on account of its more than ordinary beauty, it gained the name of the glorious choir of Conrad (v).

After the see of Canterbury had continued thus vacant for five years, Ralph, or as some call him Rodulph, Bishop of Rochester, was translated to it in the year 1114, at whose coming to it, the church was dedicated anew to the Holy Trinity, the name which had been before given to it by Lanfranc (w). The only particular description we have of this church when thus finished, is from Gervas, the monk of this monastery, and that proves imperfect, as to the choir of Lanfranc, which had been taken down soon after his death (ww); the following is his account of the nave or western part of it below the choir, being that which had been erected by Archbishop Lanfranc, as has been before mentioned. From him we learn, that the west end, where the chapel of the Virgin Mary stood before, was now adorned with two stately towers, on the top of which were gilded pinnacles. The nave or body was supported by eight pair of pillars. At the east end of the nave, on the north side, was an oratory dedicated in honor to the Blessed Virgin, in lieu, I suppose, of the chapel, that had in the former church been dedicated to her at the west end. Between the nave and the choir there was built a great tower or steeple, as it were in the centre of the whole fabric (x); under this tower was erected the altar of the Holy Cross; over a partition, which separated this tower from the nave, a beam was laid across from one side to the other of the church; upon the middle of this beam was fixed a great cross, between the images of the Virgin Mary and St. John, and between two cherubims. The pinnacle on the top of this tower, was a gilded cherub, and hence it was called the angel steeple; a name it is frequently called by at this day (y).

This great tower had on each side a cross isle, called the north and south wings, which were uniform, of the same model and dimensions; each of them had a strong pillar in the middle for a support to the roof, and each of them had two doors or passages, by which an entrance was open to the east parts of the church. At one of these doors there was a descent by a few steps into the undercroft; at the other, there was an ascent by many steps into the upper parts of the church, that is, the choir, and the isles on each side of it. Near every one of these doors or passages, an altar was erected; at the upper door in the south wing, there was an altar in honour of All Saints; and at the lower door there was one of St. Michael; and before this altar on the south side was buried Archbishop Fleologild; and on the north side, the holy Virgin Siburgis, whom St. Dunstan highly admired for her sanctity. In the north isle, by the upper door, was the altar of St. Blaise; and by the lower door, that of St. Benedict. In this wing had been interred four Archbishops, Adelm and Ceolnoth, behind the altar, and Egelnoth and Wilselm before it. At the entrance into this wing, Rodulph and his successor William Corboil, both Archbishops, were buried (z).

(t) Gervas's words are, col. 1664, speaking of Archb. Corboil: dedicating this church in the year 1130, Ecclesiam Cantuarie a Lanfranco fundatam & consummatam, sed per Anselmum auctam, cum honore & munificentia multa, dedicavit.

(u) Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 137. He gave to it five large bells; the first of which required 10 men, the second as many, the third 11, the fourth 8, and the fifth 24 men, to ring them. This fifth bell was first of all given by Prior Ernulf, but being afterwards broken, Prior Conrad, at a prodigious expence, caused it to be new cast; and afterwards Prior Wibert, who died in 1167, gave a great bell to the steeple, which required 32 men to ring it. Dart, p. 9, where see an account of the ornaments given by Prior Conrad to this church.

(v) Battely, pt. ii, p. 13. (w) Matth. Paris.

(ww) Dec. Script. col. 1294. Gervas was one of the most voluminous writers of his time. His chronicle of the Kings of England, from anno 1122 to 1200, and his History of the Archbishops of Canterbury, from St. Augustine to Archbishop Hubert, who died anno 1205, are his two most considerable performances of the kind. A strict attention to chronology in the disposition of his materials is one of the chief excellencies of this historian. See Henry's

History of Great Britain, vol. iii, p. 427.

(x) Obituary, printed in Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 147.

(y) John of Salisbury, who flourished about the year 1172, in his Prefatory Poem before his book, mentions the gilded cherub on the pinnacle of this steeple, in these verses:

— — — Sic Caput illa Britannis;
Quam tibi præsignat ANGELUS arce micans.
 ANGELUS iste quis est! aut quæ domus illa, requires;
 Namq; novas rerum forma movere solet.
 Hæc est illa domus, quæ Chystum prima recepit,
 Aqua suscepit insula tota fidem.
 Insula tota fidem cepit, fideiq; parentem
 Prædicat, extollit, audit, honorat, amat,
 Consilii magni si nūsti forte datorum
 Non erit ignotus ANGELUS iste tibi.
 ANGELUS e specula totum circumspicit orbem,
 Et Corpus pennis subvehit atq; tegit.
 Sic videt e specula, sic protegit omnia pennis
 Ut jus non habeat hortis in orbe suo.

(z) These wings and the nave of the church, continued in the same state as Lanfranc had left them, above 300 years, but the angel steeple stood longer and then fell to decay; they were all taken down and rebuilt, as will appear below.

Hence,

CATHEDRAL.

Hence, he continues, we go up by some steps into the great tower, and before us there is a door and steps leading down into the south wing, and on the right hand a pair of folding doors, with stairs going down into the nave of the church; but without turning to any of these, let us ascend eastward, till by several more steps we come to the west end of Conrad's choir; being now at the entrance of the choir, Gervas tells us, that he neither saw the choir built by Lanfranc, nor found it described by any one; that Eadmer had made mention of it, without giving any account of it, as he had done of the old church, the reason of which appears to be, that Lanfranc's choir did not long survive its founder, being pulled down as abovementioned, by Archbishop Anselm; so that it could not stand more than 20 years; therefore the want of a particular description of it will appear no great defect in the history of this church, especially as the deficiency is here supplied by Gervas's full relation of the new choir of Conrad, built instead of it; of which, whoever desires to know the whole architecture and model observed in the fabric, the order, number, height and form of the pillars and windows, may know the whole of it from him. The roof of it, he tells us (a), was beautified with curious paintings representing heaven (b); in several respects it was agreeable to the present choir, the stalls were large and framed of carved wood. In the middle of it, there hung a gilded crown, on which were placed four and twenty tapers of wax. From the choir, an ascent of three steps led to the presbyterium, or place for the presbiters; here, he says, it would be proper to stop a little and take notice of the high altar, which was dedicated to the name of CHRIST. It was placed between two other altars, the one of St. Dunstan, the other of St. Alpbage; at the east corners of the high altar were fixed two pillars of wood, beautified with silver and gold; upon these pillars was placed a beam, adorned with gold, which reached across the church, upon it there were placed the Glory (c), the images of St. Dunstan and St. Alpbage, and seven chests or coffers overlaid with gold, full of the relics of many saints. Between those pillars was a cross gilded all over, and upon the upper beam of the cross were set 60 bright crystals.

Beyond this, by an ascent of eight steps towards the east, behind the altar, was the archiepiscopal throne, which Gervas calls the patriarchal chair, made of one stone; in this chair, according to the custom of the church, the Arch- bishop used to sit, upon principal festivals, in his pontifical ornaments, whilst the solemn offices of religion were celebrated, until the consecration of the host, which came down to the high altar, and there performed the solemnity of consecration. Still further, eastward, behind the patriarchal chair (d), was a chapel in the front of the whole church, in which was an altar, dedicated to the Holy Trinity; behind which were laid the bones of two Archbishops, Odo of Canterbury, and Wilfrid of York; by this chapel on the south side near the wall of the church, was laid the body of Archbishop Lanfranc, and on the north side, the body of Archbishop Theobald. Here it is to be observed, that under the whole east part of the church, from the angel steeple, there was an undercroft or crypt (e), in which were several altars, chapels and sepulchres; under the chapel of the Trinity abovementioned, were two altars, on the south side, the altar of St. Augustine, the apostle of the English nation, by which Archbishop Athelred was interred. On the north side was the altar of St. John Baptist, by which was laid the body of Archbishop Eadfin; under the high altar was the chapel and altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary, to whom the whole undercroft was dedicated.

To return now, he continues, to the place where the presbyterium and choir meet, where on each side there was a cross isle (as was to be seen in his time) which might be called the upper south and north wings; on the east side of each of these wings were two half circular places or nooks in the wall, arched over after the form of porticoes. Each of them had an altar, and there was the like number of altars under them in the croft. In the north wing, the north portico had the altar of St. Martin, by which were interred the bodies of two Archbishops, Wlfred on the right, and Living on the left hand; under it in the croft, was the altar of St. Mary Magdalen. The other portico in this wing, had the altar of St. Stephen, and by it were buried two Archbishops, Athelard on the left hand, and Cuthbert on the right; in the croft under it, was the altar of St. Nicholas. In the south wing, the north portico had the altar of St. John the Evangelist, and by it the bodies of Æthelgar and Aluric, archbishops, were laid. In the croft under it was the altar of St. Paulinus, by which the body of Archbishop Siricius was interred. In the south portico was the altar of St. Gregory, by which were laid the corps of the two archbishops Bregwin and Plegmund. In the croft under it was the altar of St. Owen, archbishop of Roan, and underneath in

(a) Decim. Script, col. 1294.

(b) Battely, pt. ii, p. 10.

(c) Majestas Dei.(d) Cathedra patriarchatus.(e) Croft, Saxon crypta, confectio, Mægrūgion.

ECCLESIAE Cathedralis et PRIORATVS Benedictorum CANTVARIAE facies Borealis ab FADWINO Monacho, inter annos MCXXX et MCCLXXIV delineata.

- a. Purgatorium calani .
- b. Purgatorium fontis .
- c. Hic influit in piscinam de fonte cimiterii exterioris .
- d. De piscina in fontem prioris .
- e. Aqua hic erit in piscinam de eadem ala .
- f. Intrat in alam domus infirmorum .
- g. Porta cimiterii iuxta capellam .
- h. Capella infirmorum . i. Domus infirmorum .
- k. Necessarium infirmorum . l. Coquina infirmorum .
- m. Camera prioris vetus .
- n. Purgatorium .
- o. Via que ducit ad domum infirmorum .
- p. Puteus . q. Purgatorium .
- r. Columna in quam ducta aqua deficiente, potest hauriri aqua de puteo, et administrabitur omnibus officinis .

- s. Hostium locutorii . t. Fenestra terrea .
- u. Puteolus ante hostium locutorii ad quod conflant aque pluviales personales qui per arcum claustrum est: a quo puteolo dirigitur ductus per viam que ducit ad domum infirmorum et deviens contra hostium crepse deflectitur extra viam ad dextram .
- v. Purgatorium . w. Hostium terram .
- x. Dormitorium . y. Retectorium .
- z. Fenestra ubi ferula administrantur .
- 1. Fenestra per quam ejiciuntur scutelle ad lavandum .
- 2. Porta inter domum hospitiu et coquinam .
- 3. Coquina .
- 4. Camera ubi pueri lavantur .
- 5. Nova camera prioris . 6. Balneatorium et amens .
- 7. Granarium .
- 8. Portica iuxta aulam novam .

Barbo sculp.

CATHEDRAL.

the croft, not far from it the altar of St. Catherine.

Passing from these crofts isles eastward were two towers, one on the north, the other on the south side of the church. In the tower on the north side was the altar of St. Andrew, which gave name to the tower; under it, in the croft, was the altar of the Holy Innocents; the tower on the south side had the altar of St. Peter and St. Paul, behind which the body of St. Anselm was interred, which afterwards gave name both to the altar and tower (f) (now called St. Anselm's) The wings or isles on each side of the choir had nothing in particular to be taken notice of—Thus far Gervas, from whose description we in particular learn, where several of the bodies of the old archbishops were deposited, and probably their ashes remain in the same places to this day.

As this building, deservedly called the glorious choir of Conrad, was a magnificent work, so the undertaking of it at that time will appear almost beyond example, especially when the several circumstances of it are considered; but that it was carried forward at the Archbishop's cost, exceeds all belief. It was in the discouraging reign of K. William Rufus, a prince notorious in the records of history, for all manner of sacrilegious rapine, that Archbishop Anselm was promoted to this see; when he found the lands and revenues of this church so miserably wasted and spoiled, that there was hardly enough left for his bare subsistence; who, in the first years that he sat in the archiepiscopal chair, struggled with poverty, wants and continual vexations through the King's displeasure (g), and whose three next years were spent in banishment, during all which time he borrowed money for his present maintenance; who being called home by K. Henry I, at his coming to the crown, laboured to pay the debts he had contracted during the time of his banishment, and instead of enjoying that tranquility and ease he hoped for, was, within two years afterwards, again sent into banishment upon a fresh displeasure conceived against him by the King, who then seized upon all the revenues of the archbishopric (b), which he retained in his own hands for no less than four years.

Under these hard circumstances, it would have been surprizing indeed, that the Archbishop should have been able to carry on so great a work, and yet we are told it, as a truth, by the testimonies of history; but this must surely be understood with the interpretation of his having been the patron, protector and encourager, rather than the builder of this work, which he entrusted to the care and management of the priors Ernulph and Conrad, and sanctioned their employing, as Lanfranc had done before, the revenues and stock of the church to this use (i).

In this state as abovementioned, without any thing material happening to it, this church continued till about the year 1130, anno 30 Henry I, when it seems to have suffered some damage by a fire (k); but how much, there is no record left to inform us; however it could not be of any great account, for it was sufficiently repaired and that mostly at the cost of Archbishop Corboil, who then sat in the chair of this see (l), before the 4th of May that year, on which day, being Rogation Sunday, the Bishops performed the dedication of it with great splendor and magnificence, such, says Gervas, col. 1664, as had not been heard of since the dedication of the Temple of Solomon; the King, the Queen, David, King of Scots, all the Archbishops, and the nobility of both kingdoms being present at it, when this church's former name was restored again, being henceforward commonly called Christ church (m).

Among the manuscripts of Trinity College library in Cambridge, in a very curious triple psalter of St. Jerome, in Latin, written by the monk Eadwyn, whose picture is at the beginning of it, is a plan or drawing made by him, being an attempt towards a representation of this church and monastery, as they stood between the years 1130 and 1174; which makes it probable, that he was one of the monks of it, and the more so, as the drawing has not any kind of relation to the psalter or sacred hymns contained in the manuscript.

His plan, if so it may be called, for it is neither such, nor an upright, nor a prospect, and yet something of all together; but notwithstanding this rudeness of the draftsman, it shews very plain that it was intended for this church and priory, and gives us a very clear knowledge, more than we have been able to learn from any description we have besides, of what both were at the above period of time (n).

use till Archbishop Becket's martyrdom, and then was a third time changed; of which a more particular account will be given below.

(n) In the year 1755, the Antiquarian Society published an engraving of this drawing, with an account of it, and of the plan, adding that the book was given to Trinity College library, by Dr. Nevil, Dean of Canterbury, and Master of that College, and a great benefactor to it; probably it once belonged to this church, as in an index of books formerly belonging to it, mention is made of Tripartitum Psalterium Eadwyni.

(f) See Decim. Script. col. 1294 et seq. Battely's Somner, pt. ii, p. 10.

(g) Eadmer, Hist. Nov. p. 108. (h) Ibid. p. 26.

(i) Ibid. p. 108.

(k) Antiq. Brit. in vita Corboil.

(l) See Antiq. Brit. Harpsfield and Godwin, in vita Archiep. Corboil.

(m) Gervas, col. 1341, 1664. Battely's Somner, p. 14. At this time the church's common seal was renewed, which in the fore part had the representation of the church, with the name of Christ church round it. This seal continued in

CATHEDRAL.

Forty-four years after this dedication, on the 5th of Sept. anno 1174, being the 20th year of K. Henry II.'s reign, a fire happened, which consumed great part of this stately edifice, namely, the whole choir, from the angel steeple to the east end of the church, together with the prior's lodgings, the chapel of the Virgin Mary, the infirmary, and some other offices belonging to the monastery; but the angel steeple, the lower cross isles, and the nave appear to have received no material injury from the flames (o). The narrative of this accident is told by Gervas, the monk of Canterbury, so often quoted above, who was an eye witness of this calamity, as follows:

Three small houses in the city near the old gate of the monastery took fire by accident, a strong south wind carried the flakes of fire to the top of the church, and lodged them between the joints of the lead, driving them to the timbers under it; this kindled a fire there, which was not discerned till the melted lead gave a free passage for the flames to appear above the church, and the wind gaining by this means a further power of increasing them, drove them inwardly, insomuch that the danger became immediately past all possibility of relief. The timber of the roof being all of it on fire, fell down into the choir, where the stalls of the monks, made of large pieces of carved wood, afforded plenty of fuel to the flames, and great part of the stone work, through the vehement heat of the fire, was so weakened, as to be brought to irreparable ruin, and besides the fabric itself, the many rich ornaments in the church were devoured by the flames.

The choir being thus laid in ashes, the monks removed from amidst the ruins, the bodies of the two saints, whom they called patrons of the church, the Archbishops Dunstan and Alphage, and deposited them by the altar of the great cross, in the nave of the church (p); and from this time they celebrated the daily religious offices in the oratory of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the nave, and continued to do so for more than five years, when the choir being re-edified, they returned to it again (q).

Upon this destruction of the church, the prior and convent, without any delay, consulted on the most speedy and effectual method of rebuilding it, resolving to finish it in such a manner, as should surpass all the former choirs of it, as well in beauty as size and magnificence. To effect this, they sent for the most skilful architects that could be found either in France or England. These surveyed the walls and pillars, which remained standing, but they found great part of them so weakened by the fire, that they could no ways be built upon with any safety; and it was accordingly resolved, that such of them should be taken down; a whole year was spent in doing this, and in providing materials for the new building, for which they sent abroad for the best stone that could be procured; Gervas has given a large account (r), how far this work advanced year by year; what methods and rules of architecture were observed, and other particulars relating to the rebuilding of this church; all which the curious reader may consult at his leisure; it will be sufficient to observe here, that the new building was larger in height and length, and more beautiful in every respect, than the choir of Conrad; for the roof was considerably advanced above what it was before, and was arched over with stone; whereas before it was composed of timber and boards. The capitals of the pillars were now beautified with different sculptures of carvework; whereas, they were before plain, and six pillars more were added than there were before. The former choir had but one triforium or inner gallery, but now there were two made round it, and one in each side isle and three in the cross isles; before, there were no marble pillars, but such were now added to it in abundance. In forwarding this great work, the monks had spent eight years, when they could proceed no further for want of money, but a fresh supply coming in from the offerings at St. Thomas's tomb, so much more than was necessary for perfecting the repair they were engaged in, as encouraged them to set about a more grand design, which was to pull down the eastern extremity of the church, with the small chapel of the Holy Trinity adjoining to it, and to erect upon a stately undercroft, a most magnificent one instead of it, equally lofty with the roof of the church, and making a part of it, which the former one did not, except by a door into it; but this new chapel, which was dedicated likewise to the Holy Trinity, was not finished till some time after the rest of the church; at the east end of this chapel another handsome one, though small, was afterwards erected at the extremity of the whole building, since called Becket's crown, on purpose for an altar and the reception of some part of his relics (s); further mention of which will be made hereafter.

(o) The outward walls of the church on each side the choir, and the two towers, Anselm's and St. Andrew's, seem to have received but little injury from the flames; for the principal damage was the weakening the pillars, by the firing of the adjacent stalls, otherwise the roof only had suffered.

(p) This was called the altar of the Holy Cross, and was placed under the great cross, between the nave and the choir.

(q) Gervas, col. 1298. Battely, pt. ii, p. 14.

(r) Gervas, ibid.

(s) See Gervas, col. 1298 et seq. The original building of Becket's Crown, appears to have been but one story

The eastern parts of this church, as Mr. Gosling observes, have the appearance of much greater antiquity than what is generally allowed to them; and indeed if we examine the outside walls and the cross wings on each side of the choir, it will appear, that the whole of them was not rebuilt at the time the choir was, and that great part of them was suffered to remain, though altered, added to, and adapted as far as could be, to the new building erected at that time; the traces of several circular windows and other openings, which were then stopped up, removed, or altered, still appearing on the walls both of the isles and the cross wings, through the white-wash with which they are covered; and on the south side of the south isle, the vaulting of the roof as well as the triforium, which could not be contrived so as to be adjusted to the places of the upper windows, plainly shew it. To which may be added, that the base or foot of one of the westernmost large pillars of the choir on the north side, is strengthened with a strong iron band round it, by which it should seem to have been one of those pillars which had been weakened by the fire, but was judged of sufficient firmness, with this precaution, to remain for the use of the new fabric.

The outside of this part of the church is a corroborating proof of what has been mentioned above, as well in the method, as in the ornaments of the building. The outside of it towards the south, from St. Michael's chapel eastward, is adorned with a range of small pillars, about six inches diameter, and about three feet high, some with fantastic shafts and capitals, others with plain ones; these support little arches, which intersect each other; and this chain or girdle of pillars is continued round the small tower, the eastern cross isle and the chapel of St. Anselm, to the buildings added in honour of the Holy Trinity, and St. Thomas Becket, where they leave off. The casing of St. Michael's chapel has none of them, but the chapel of the Virgin Mary, answering to it on the north side of the church, not being fitted to the wall, shews some of them behind it; which seems as if they had been continued before, quite round the eastern parts of the church.

These pillars, which rise from about the level of the pavement, within the walls above them, or range of windows in height, being vaulted over them, and the top adorned with handsome battlements. The monks afterwards began to raise this building still higher, but the dissolution of the priory in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, stopped their progress in it, and it was left unfinished. Henry de Eastria, who was Prior at the time of erecting it, is said to have laid out 115l. 5s. upon the building of this chapel.

(t) Grymbald is said to have erected a monument there are remarkably plain and bare of ornaments; but the tower abovementioned and its opposite, as soon as they rise clear of the building, are enriched with stories of this colonade, one above another, up to the platform from whence their spires rise; and the remains of the two larger towers eastward, called St. Anselm's, and that answering to it on the north side of the church, called St. Andrew's, are decorated much after the same manner, as high as they remain at present.

At the time of the abovementioned fire, which so fatally destroyed the upper part of this church, the undercroft, with the vaulting over it, seems to have remained entire, and unhurt by it.

The vaulting of the undercroft, on which the floor of the choir and eastern parts of the church is raised, is supported by pillars, whose capitals are as various and fantastical as those of the smaller ones described above, and so are their shafts, some being round, others canted, twisted, or carved, so that hardly any two of them are alike, except such as are quite plain.

These, I suppose, may be concluded to be of the same age, and if buildings in the same stile may be conjectured to be so from thence, the antiquity of this part of the church may be judged, though historians have left us in the dark in relation to it.

In Leland's Collectanea, there is an account and description of a vault under the chancel of the ancient church of St. Peter in Oxford, called Grymbald's crypt, being allowed by all, to have been built by him (t); Grymbald was one of those great and accomplished men, whom K. Alfred invited into England about the year 885, to assist him in restoring Christianity, learning and the liberal arts (u). Those who compare the vaults or undercroft of the church of Canterbury, with the description and prints given of Grymbald's crypt (v), will easily perceive, that two buildings could hardly have been erected more strongly resembling each other, except that this at Canterbury is larger, and more profusely decorated with variety of fancied ornaments, the shafts of several of the pillars here being twisted, or otherwise varied, and many of the capitals exactly in the same grotesque taste as those in Grymbald's crypt (w). Hence it may be supposed, that those whom Archbishop Lanfranc em-for himself, which on some disagreement between him and the Oxonians, he removed to Winchester. See Lel. Coll. vol. i, Editoris Præfatio, p. xxviii.

(u) He died in the year 903. See Lel. Coll. vol. i, p. 18.

(v) In Leland's Collections, as above, there are two plates, one of the inside of this crypt of Grymbald, with some capitals of the pillars with grotesque figures, the latter the ichnography of it, &c.

(w) The shafts of the pillars in this undercroft are about ployed as architects and designers of his building at Canterbury, took their model of it, at least of this part of it, from that crypt, and this undercroft now remaining is the same, as was originally built by him, as far eastward, as to that part which begins under the chapel of the Holy Trinity, where it appears to be of a later date, erected at the same time as the chapel. The part built by Lanfranc continues at this time as firm and entire, as it was at the very building of it, though upwards of seven hundred years old (x).

CATHEDRAL.

But to return to the new building; though the church was not compleatly finished till the end of the year 1184, yet it was so far advanced towards it, that, in 1180, on April 19, being Easter eve (y), the Archb. Prior and Monks entered the new choir, with a solemn procession, singing Te Deum, for their happy return to it. Three days before which they had privately, by night, carried the bodies of St. Dunstan and St. Alphege to the places prepared for them near the high altar. The body likewise of Q. Edive (which after the fire had been removed from the north cross isle, where it lay before, under a stately gilded shrine) to the altar of the great cross, was taken up, carried into the vestry, and thence to the altar of St. Martin, where it was placed under the coffin of Archbishop Livinge. In the month of July following the altar of the Holy Trinity was demolished, and the bodies of those Archbishops, which had been laid in that part of the church, were removed to other places. Odo's body was laid under St. Dunstan's, and Wilfrid's under St. Alphege's; Lanfranc's was deposited nigh the altar of St. Martin, and Theobald's at that of the Blessed Virgin, in the nave of the church (z), under a marble tomb; and soon afterwards the two Archbishops, on the right and left hand of Archbishop Becket in the undercroft, were taken up and placed under the altar of St. Mary there (a).

After a warning so terrible, as had lately been given, it seemed most necessary to provide against the danger of fire for the time to come; the flames, which had so lately destroyed a considerable part of the church and monastery, were caused by some small houses, which had taken fire at a small distance from the church. There still remained some other houses near it, which about four feet in girt, and as much in height, but with plinth and capital, not less than six and an half; from thence spring the arches, which are nearly semicircular, and make the height of the vault about 14 feet; all above the capitals are plain, westward of the cross isles.

(x) It may not be amiss to observe here, that as this was the foundation of the church in the time of Archbishop Lanfranc, so it shews that the east end of his church was circular. Mr. Battely's plan makes it so, with a chapel and altar of the Holy Trinity there, and it is in general observed that the old Saxon churches turned circular at the belonged to the Abbat and Convent of St. Augustine; for these the monks of Christ church treated, by an exchange, which could not be effected till the King interposed, and by his royal authority; in a manner compelled the Abbat and Convent to a composition for this purpose, which was dated in the year 1177, that was three years after the late fire of this church (b).

These houses were immediately pulled down, and it proved a providential and an effectual means of preserving the church from the like calamity; for in the year 1180, on May 22, this new choir, being not then compleated, though it had been used the month before, as has been mentioned above, there happened a fire in the city, which burned down many houses, and the flames bent their course towards the church, which was again in great danger; but the houses near it being taken away, the fire was stopped, and the church escaped being burned again (c).

Although there is no mention of a new dedication of the church at this time, yet the change made in the name of it has been thought by some to imply a formal solemnity of this kind, as it appears to have been from henceforth usually called the church of St. Thomas the Martyr, and to have continued so for above 350 years afterwards.

New names to churches, it is true, have usually been attended by formal consecrations of them; and had there been any such solemnity here, undoubtedly the same would not have passed by unnoticed by every historian, the circumstance of it must have been notorious, and the magnificence equal at least to the other dedications of this church, which have been constantly mentioned by them; but here was no need of any such ceremony, for although the general voice then burst forth to honour this church with the name of St. Thomas, the universal object of praise and adoration, then styled the glorious martyr, yet it reached no further, for the name it had received at the former dedication, notwithstanding this common appellation of it, still remained in reality, and it still retained invariably in all records and writings, the name of Christ church only, as appears by many such remaining among the archives of the Dean and Chapter; and though on the seal of this church, which was east end, in which form this probably was before Lanfranc rebuilt it, and was continued in like manner by him.

(y) 13 cal. March. Gervas, col. 1457.

(z) Gervas ibid.

(a) These were the Archbishops Athelard and Eadwin.

(b) This composition was sealed with the King's seal, and with the seals of both the monasteries. See Battely's Somner, p. 88, appendix, No. xxviii, where the composition is printed, and pt. ii, p. 16. Thorne, col. 1820, 1827.

(c) Gervas, in Decim. Script. col. 1457.

changed

about this time; the counter side of it had a representation of Becket's martyrdom, yet on the front of it was continued that of the church, and round it an inscription with the former name of Christ church; which seal remained in force till the dissolution of the priory.

It may not be improper to mention here some transactions, worthy of observation, relating to this favourite saint, which passed from the time of his being murdered, to that of his translation to the splendid shrine prepared for his relics.

Archb. Thomas Becket was barbarously murdered in this church on Dec. 29, 1170, being the 16th year of K. Henry II, and his body was privately buried towards the east end of the undercroft. The monks tell us, that about the Easter following, miracles began to be wrought by him, first at his tomb, then in the undercroft, and in every part of the whole fabric of the church; afterwards throughout England and lastly, throughout the rest of the world (d). The fame of these miracles procured him the honour of a formal canonization from Pope Alexander III, whose bull for that purpose is dated March 13, in the year 1172 (e). This declaration of the Pope was soon known in all places, and the reports of his miracles were every where founded abroad (f).

Hereupon crowds of zealots, led on by a phrensy of devotion, hastened to kneel at his tomb. In 1177, Philip, Earl of Flanders, came hither for that purpose, when K. Henry met and had a conference with him at Canterbury (g). In June 1178, K. Henry returning from Normandy, visited the sepulchre of this new saint; and in July following, William, Archbishop of Rheims, came from France, with a large retinue, to perform his vows to St. Thomas of Canterbury, where the King met him and received him honourably. In the year 1179, Lewis, King of France, came into England; before which neither he nor any of his predecessors had ever set foot in this kingdom (b). He landed at Dover, where K. Henry waited his arrival, and on Aug. 23 the two Kings came to Canterbury, with a great train of nobility of both nations, and were received with due honour and great joy, by the Archbishop, with his com provincial Bishops, and the Prior and the whole Convent (l).

K. Lewis came in the manner and habit of a pilgrim, and was conducted to the tomb of St. Thomas by a solemn procession; he there offered his cup of gold and a royal precious stone (k), and gave the convent a yearly rent for ever, of a hundred muids of wine, to be paid by himself and his successors; which grant was confirmed by his royal charter, under his seal, and delivered next day to the convent (l); after he had staid here two (m), or as others say, three days (n), during which the oblations of gold and silver made were so great, that the relation of them almost exceeded credibility (o). In 1181, K. Henry, in his return from Normandy, again paid his devotions at this tomb. These visits were the early fruits of the adoration of the new sainted martyr, and these royal examples of Kings and great persons were followed by multitudes, who crowded to present with full hands their oblations at his tomb. Hence the convent was enabled to carry forward the building of the new choir, and they applied all this vast income to the fabric of the church, as the present case instantly required, for which they had the leave and consent of the Archbishop, confirmed by the bulls of several succeeding Popes (p).

From the liberal oblations of these royal and (d) There were in this church two volumes, filled with the records of these miracles; Gervas relates several of them. John Grandison, Bishop of Exeter, among others, wrote the life and passion of St. Thomas, giving a strange account of these miracles, being such, he says, as were never before wrought or heard of; and, indeed, from their absurdity, so they seem to be.

(e) See Ralph de Diceto, Dec. Script. col. 715, in whose history this bull is twice printed.

(f) Battely, pt. ii, p. 17.

(g) Bromton, col. 1126.

(h) Dec. Script. Ralph de Diceto, col. 604.

(i) Bromton, col. 1140, says, that St. Thomas had appeared three times to Lewis in a vision.

(k) Chron. Sci Aug. Gervas, Dec. Script. col. 1457, says, that K. Henry went to the sea-side at Dover, to meet the French King, on x cal. September; both Kings were with all due honor and unspeakable joy, received by Archbishop Richard, the Bishops of England, the Convent of Canterbury, and an innumerable multitude of the great men of the kingdom, brought hither in reverence to the memory of the martyr, at whose tomb, having finished his prayer, he offered up his golden cup, and the rent of 100 muids of wine yearly, out of regard to the martyr and the church of Christ. He watched during the night at the tomb, and in the morning, at his request, was admitted into the fraternity in the chapter house, and having given his charter for the above rent, he departed joyfully, and embarked at Dover.

(l) The words of the charter are, Centum modios Vini ad mensuram Parisensem. K. John granted that the monks should receive this gift for ever, free from all custom. Madox, Hist. Exchequer, p. 19, and 526. See K. John's charter for this exemption, ibid. p. 526. A muid is supposed to be the third part of a tun, by Battely, pt. ii, p. 18. King Edw. IV, in his 22d year, issued his writ, reciting, whereas by virtue of the grants of the progenitors of Lewis of France, the Prior and Convent had and received, 33 casts of wine, from France, yearly; the King, out of his particular grace and affection and regard to the Convent, and the glorious martyr St. Thomas, granted that for the future they should take the same, free of all customs and taxes whatever. See Rym. Fæd. vol. xii, p. 166.

(m) Bromton.

(n) Rad. de Diceto, col. 720.

(o) Ibid. col. 604.

(p) Viz. Pope Alexander III, Urban III, and Gregory IX.

CATHEDRAL.

noble personages at the tomb of St. Thomas, the expences of rebuilding the choir appear to have been in a great measure supplied, nor did their devotion and offerings to the new saint, after it was completed, any ways abate, but, on the contrary, they daily increased; for in the year 1184, Philip, Archbishop of Coloigne, and Philip, Earl of Flanders, came together to pay their vows at this tomb, and were met here by King Henry, who gave them an invitation to London (q). In 1194, John, Archbishop of Lions; in the year afterwards, John, Archbishop of York; and in the year 1199, K. John, performed their devotions at the foot of this tomb (r). K. Richard I. likewise, on his release from captivity in Germany, landing on the 30th of March at Sandwich, proceeded from thence, as an humble stranger on foot, towards Canterbury, to return his grateful thanks to God and St. Thomas for his release (s). All these by name, with many nobles and multitudes of others, of all sorts and descriptions, visited the saint with humble adoration and rich oblations, whilst his body lay in the undercroft. In the meantime the chapel and altar at the upper part of the east end of the church, which had been formerly consecrated to the Holy Trinity, were demolished, and again prepared with great splendor, for the reception of this saint, who being now placed there, implanted his name, not only on the chapel and altar, but on the whole church, which was from thenceforth known only by that of the church of St. Thomas the martyr.

(q) Ralph de Diceto. Dec. Script. col. 625. Rapin, vol. i, p. 239.

(r) Ralph de Diceto, Dec. Script. col. 675, 706.

(s) Bromton, col. 1257.

(t) K. Edward I, being at Canterbury on the feast of the translation of St. Thomas Becket, in his 27th year, presented the golden crown of Scotland, which he had found in the possession of John Baliol, at Dover, as an offering at the shrine of this saint. See Walsingham Hist. Ang. p. 44. Matthew Westminster, anno 1399, p. 415. Prynne, p. 798. This King either sent or personally offered every year, upon the day of the martyrdom of St. Thomas, 3 florins of gold, which the obituary calls his chevage; he gave to the convent several jewels, images and vessels of pure gold, of inestimable value, and granted it several liberties and privileges. See Somner's manuscript papers, in the library of Christ church. Whilst this shrine existed, the Barons of the Ports of Romney, Hythe, Dover and Sandwich, were accustomed to present at it the cloths of estate, of gold or silk, which they held over the King and Queen at their coronations, and then claimed and received as their fees.

(u) Among these I find the following, in Rymer's Fœdera. The Duke of Anjou, who was then in England, a prisoner and hostage for the French King, had licence in the 35th year of K. Edward III, to visit the shrine of St. Thomas, as had David de Bruys, in the 39th year of that reign, and he had another licence in the 41st year of it, that he, together with Margaret his wife and 100 horsemen in their train, their servants, &c. should again visit this shrine. A licence and safe conduct in the 47th year of that reign was

On July 7, anno 1220, the remains of St. Thomas were translated from his tomb to his new shrine, with the greatest solemnity and rejoicings (s). Pandulph, the Pope's legate, the Archbishops of Canterbury and Rheims, and many Bishops and Abbats, carried the coffin on their shoulders, and placed it on the new shrine, and the King graced these solemnities with his royal presence (t). The Archbishop of Canterbury provided forage along all the road, between London and Canterbury, for the horses of all such as should come to them, and he caused several pipes and conduits to run with wine in different parts of the city. This, with the other expences arising during the time, was so great, that he left a debt on the see, which Archbishop Boniface, his fourth successor in it, was hardly enabled to discharge.

The saint being now placed in his new repository, became the vain object of adoration to the deluded people, and afterwards numbers of licences were granted to strangers by the King, to visit this shrine (u). The titles of glorious, of saint and martyr, were among those given to him (v); such veneration had all people for his reliques, that the religious of several cathedral churches and monasteries, used all their endeavours to obtain some of them, and thought themselves happy and rich in the possession of the smallest portion of them (w). Besides this, there were erected and dedicated to his honour, many churches, chapels, altars and hospitals in different places, both in this kingdom and granted for Alianor de Bruys, Countess of Carryck, to travel to the glorious martyr St. Thomas, of Canterbury, with 60 horses in her train. Another of the same date, for James de Douglas, Chivalier. Another for the same person, next year, to travel hither to this shrine, with 20 servants and their horses. In the 33d year of K. Henry VI, the Abbat of Melros, in Scotland, had the King's licence to come into England, with 12 servants, and to come in pilgrimage to this shrine, and of remaining here for that purpose; and no doubt but there were many others granted at that time, and afterwards, for the same purpose. See Rym. Fœd. vol. vi, p. 324, 463, 582; vol. vii, p. 32, 37; vol. xi, p. 360.

(v) The words of K. Henry VI, to the monks of this place are, speaking of St. Thomas, whose precious body is gloriously enshrined in your church; and K. Edward IV. in his charter to this city, says, in whose metropolitane church, the body of St. Thomas the martyr lies honourably enshrined.

(w) The reliques of this saint, even the meanest things that had any relation to him, as his hair, his shirt, his cloaths, and even his shoes, were esteemed as invaluable treasures and coveted by all who could procure, by purchase or favor, any portion of them. In the church of St. Paul in London, two pieces of his skull, some part of his hair and some small shreds of his clothes, were preserved in costly vessels. At the hospital of Harbledown, a piece of one of his old shoes was hung out to the road, for travellers to kiss. The neighbouring monks of St. Augustine's Abbey chose the keeper of St. Thomas's altar for their Abbat, to induce him to bring some of these reliques, which lay on abroad (x). Thus this faint, even whilst he lay in his obscure tomb in the undercroft, brought such large and constant supplies of money, as enabled the monks to finish this beautiful choir, and the east parts of the church; and when he was translated to the most exalted and honourable place in it, a still larger abundance of gain filled their coffers, which continued as a plentiful supply to them, from year to year, to the time of the reformation, and the final abolition of the priory itself (y).

the

CATHEDRAL.

To return now again to the building of the fabric of this church; about the year 1304, or soon afterwards, the whole choir was repaired or beautified and three new doors made, and the pulpitum was new made; the flight of steps and the fine skreen of stone work so curiously carved, and still remaining at the west end of the choir, being made at the charge of Prior Hen. de Estria, who repaired likewise the new long belfry towards the north, the vestry and the treasury, with the new turret beyond it, the new great horologe in the church, and caused to be made several new bells, for different parts of it, as will be further mentioned below. The two wings or cross isles, on each side of the middle tower or Angel steeple, as it was called, which had continued in the same state that Lanfranc had left them, except that the middle pillar in each of them was taken down soon after the murder of Archbishop Thomas Becket, to give a fuller sight of that in the north wing, at the foot of which he yielded up the ghost, were, for the most part, rebuilt the altar in Christ church, with him, which he did to their monastery; and Benedict, Prior of this church, when he was elected Abbat of Peterborough, carried with him to that monastery many reliques of St. Thomas, as his shirt, his surplice, and a quantity of his blood, in two chrystal vessels, besides which instances there were many others in different places abroad. See Dugd. Hist. St. Paul's, p. 234, 336. Erasmus's Colloq; Perigrinatio religionis erga suscepi.

(x) In the cathedral church of St. Paul in London, there was an altar to St. Thomas the martyr. Within the precincts of the church of Peterborough, was a chapel and an alms-house, dedicated to him. At Lesnes in this county, there was a priory dedicated to him. In this city was an hospital and a chapel, likewise dedicated to him; as there was a church, at Fairfield, in this county; and there are numbers of instances of this kind elsewhere in different parts of this kingdom. See Dugd. Hist. of St. Paul's, p. 228. Supplement to Hist. Peterborough, p. 287.

(y) The shrine had a clerk and other retainers, who constantly gave their attendance at it, and it was very necessary, both in regard of the treasure which was about it, and the continual offerings made at it, these amounting to a great value by the year, as it should seem by the accounts of them, which shew, that from about 200*l.* per ann. which they amounted to about 400 years since; they grew within six or eight years following to treble that sum. See Battely's Somner, p. 125.

(z) It appears that the north wing was not finished at the time of his death, for Alexander Hawkyn, who had been from the foundations, by Archbishop Sudbury, (who came to this see in the year 1376) at his own proper costs and charges (z), and probably the chapel of St. Michael too, on the east side of the south wing, which may be esteemed as part of it, in the same state they remain at this time.

These being finished in the year 1379, anno 2 Richard II, the same Archbishop, a prelate of a public and generous spirit, directly afterwards took down the old nave of the church, which Lanfranc had erected, as being too mean and greatly inferior to the new choir, and which probably had by this time fallen into decay, purposing to rebuild it again at his own cost (a), to a state and beauty proportionable to the rest of the church. But in the next year, anno 1381, before he had laid one stone for the foundation of it, he fell into the hands of that mutinous rabble, headed by Wat Tyler, who cut off his head on Tower-bill (b). The monks having thus lost their good benefactor, were under the necessity of undertaking this work at their own charge. The two succeeding Archbishops, Courtney and Arundel, were as generous and honourable in their contributions towards this building as became the noble quality of their births, and the eminent dignity of their stations (c). In the obituary of Christ church, it is recorded, that Archbishop Courtney, in whose time this building was begun, contributed towards it 1000 marcs (d), and Archbishop Arundel, in whose time it was finished, gave a like sum of 1000 marcs to this work (e). During the time of the secretary to several Priors, gave 150*l.* towards the south steeple, &c. and towards the new roofing of this martyrdom, the former of which was not built till some time after Archbishop Sudbury's death.

It has in general been supposed, that both these cross isles were wholly pulled down to the very foundations, by that Archbishop; but the tomb of Archbishop Peckham, who lived long before him, in the north wing, and a very plain old stair-case close by it, which could not be made to suit the rest of the new work, without violating that monument, shews, that part of what he did was only casing the old work; so does that projection still to be seen over the portico of St. Michael's chapel in the south wing, seemingly as what had once supported an organ, ubi organa solent esse; and a small part of the old wall on the outside this wing may still be discovered uncased; and another proof of it, though not to be seen, unless when the cloyster leads are repairing in that part, is a very fair circular window frame of stone, on the outside of the wall over the door, from the cloyster into the martyrdom or north wing, of which nothing is to be seen on the inside.

(a) In assistance to this work he had obtained of King Richard II, in his 2d year, the revenues and profits of the Archdeaconsry, then in the King's hands, for so long time as they remained with him. See Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 216.

(b) Harpsfield, Hist. Eccles. Ang. Sæcul. 15, cap. 14, p. 634. Battely's Somner, p. 89.

(c) Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 61.

(d) See his other benefactions to this church and priory, below, under his life.

(e) Ibid. p. 62.

building

CATHEDRAL.

building of it, the two parsonages of Godmersham and Westwell were appropriated, with the King's and Pope's licence, to the priory, to enable them the better to carry it on; and at the time of the appropriation of the latter, which was in the year 1401 (f), the convent had expended on this work upwards of 8000 marcs (g); about nine years after which, as near as can be computed, this fabric was finished; that is, before the death of Prior Chillenden, for he is recorded in the obituary to have fully completed, with the help of Archbishop Arundel, the rebuilding of the nave, with the chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary, situated in the same. It was 30 years in building, and the whole of it continues at this time firm and entire (b).

At the time of Archbishop Sudbury's death, the west front of the church, with the two adjoining towers, had not in the progress of taking down the nave, been demolished; probably the monks

(f) K. Richard II, was at this time a great benefactor to this fabric, and to the priory likewise, for he forgave two corrodies of 30 marcs, and the forfeitures of their tenements in London, to the value of 1000 marcs, and gave them licence of Mortmain, to purchase lands or rents to the value of 200*l.* and to appropriate to themselves the churches of Godmersham and Mepham; and moreover gave, at the request of Archbishop Courtney, 100*l.* sterling towards the fabric of the high altar, and of the nave of the church, besides rich jewels and gifts, which he at several times offered at the shrine of St. Thomas the martyr, and at the altar in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin in the undercroft. Some little time after this, viz. in 1422, Robert Clifford, of Well, esq; brother of Richard Clifford, Bishop of London, gave 400 marcs towards the fabric of this church, and his silver plate, &c. He was buried in the nave of it. See Somner's manuscript papers in the library of Christ church.

(g) The preamble to the grant of Godmersham rectory, dated anno 1397, is printed in Somner's Appendix, No. xxix. It recites, that the Prior and Convent had already expended on the building of this nave, and other necessary works of the church, of their own money, more than 5000 marcs, as was manifest to all that saw it; and that the work which was begun, and what was otherwise of necessity to be undertaken there of their cloyster, which was pulled down, and their chapter-house, which was in imminent danger of ruin, could not be perfectly and decently repaired for less than 6000 marcs, the hospitality afforded to great personages and others of different kingdoms resorting to them from day to day, being attended to, and which they could not with credit decline, &c. That of Westwell, dated anno 1401, was much to the same purpose, only it expressed that the convent had then laid out upwards of 8000 marcs on it.

(b) In the carrying on the building of this church at different periods, so little care was taken in the planning of the new works, as not to carry them in a right line with the old, by which means the church is crooked, as is easily observed, by taking a view along the north wall of the nave, and likewise from the west door of it eastward to the end of the church, as well as by observing the pavement of the upper cross, where another angle is made, for when that came to be laid, the stones not fitting, as they should have done, the irregularity was remedied, by cutting many of them out of the square in some places, and filling the vacancies up in others.

terrified at the great expence which they then found they must be subject to, determined to leave this part standing, and to add such alterations as would make it, as far as possible suitable to their new building; to effect which, they formed new windows in each tower, with pillars and arches similar to those in the rest of the nave; a large window was put in the center of the front between them (i), and a new porch underneath, and the whole, excepting the two towers, was now cased with stone.

On the north tower, Archbishop Arundel built a high leaden spire, and furnished the Angel steeple with five bells, afterwards called the Arundel ring, in process of time removed into this tower (k), which afterwards bore the name of the Arundel steeple.

The tower on the south side, being 130 feet high, usually called St. Dunstan's steeple, from a great bell hung in it, which was dedicated to that of them out of the square in some places, and filling the vacancies up in others.

(i) The key stone of this window was demolished not many years since, by the throwing down of some rubbish from the Oxford steeple. On it was well carved the head of an uphooded monk, which was in good preservation; but now all that remains of it, is a scrap of drapery; it has been called the head of Prior Chillenden, who died in 1414, but perhaps erroneously.

(k) Leland, in his Collectanea, vol. i, p. 88, says, Archbishop Arundel built the west steeple, and supplied it with five bells; and in his Itinerary, vol. vi, f. 3, p. 6, says, "The belles that in the pyramis ledid at the weste ende of the chirche, are belles caulled Arundella's Kinge."—These bells, according to the records of the church, were first put into the Angel steeple, upon the rebuilding of which they were removed into this tower, called Arundel steeple. The weights of them was—The 1st bell 7188*lb.*—the 2d, 3646— the 3d, 2272— the 4th, 1646; to which Prior William Molash added a 5th bell, bigger than the others, weighing 8105; which bells have been since removed from hence, as will be further mentioned below. By these records it appears, that besides those bells mentioned above, as given by the Priors Ernulf, Conrad, and Wibert, there were given in 1316, anno 9 Edward II, by Prior Hen. de Esfria, five bells; the first was called Bell Thomas, which was hung in the great steeple or clock-house (cloccario) and weighed 800*lb.* three other bells were bought for the new long steeple, on the north side the church, of which the first weighed 2400*lb.* the second 2200*lb.* the third 2000*lb.* and one bell to toll when the chapter were to meet, which weighed 800 pounds. The price of these bells was, besides carpenter's and smith's work, 236*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* and in the year 1317, there were bought three new bells for the steeple under the Angel; the first weighed 1460*lb.* the second 1210*lb.* and the third 1124*lb.* which cost 65*l.* 0*s.* 9*d.* and there were three lesser bells likewise added in the same steeple, which weighed 2750*lb.* and cost 10*l.* 18*s.* Soon after the year 1338, two great bells, Jesus and Dunstan, were given by Prior Hatbrand, to the south west steeple; and Prior William Chillenden in 1410, added another, which was dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and was in latter times hung up in the same steeple; and in 1430, Prior Molash gave a large bell, called Bell Dunstan, weighing 8105*lb.* as has been noticed above.

saint,

CATHEDRAL.

faint, given by Prior Molaſh, was after this pulled down by Archbiſhop Chicheley, who came to this ſee in 1413, anno 1 Henry V, and was founder of All Souls College in Oxford. He made a great progreſs in the rebuilding of it, whence, in his honour, it had the name of both the Oxford and the Chicheley ſteeple, but dying before it was completed, it was finiſhed by Prior Thomas Goldſtone, who was not elected to that office till fix years after the Archbiſhop's death (l). He built likewiſe the elegant and beautiful chapel on the eaſt ſide of the martyrdom, which he dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin Mary (m), now commonly called the Dean's chapel, from ſeveral of the Deans having been buried in it.

The great tower in the middle of the church, now uſually called Bell Harry ſteeple (n), but formerly, as has been mentioned above, the Angel ſteeple, being 235 feet in height, had continued without new building, or probably want of repair, as there is no mention of ſuch in any record till the time of Prior William Selling, who was elected in 1472, anno 11 Edward IV, and died in 1495, being the 10th year of K. Henry VII's reign. He is ſaid to have begun to rebuild it, and his ſucceſſor Prior Thomas Goldſtone, the ſecond prior of that name, to have finiſhed it before his death, which happened in 1517. This the obituary records, telling us that he erected and perfected the lofty tower in the middle of the church, between the choir and the nave, with excellent carved and gilded works, with windows and with both iron and glaſs work belonging to it, in which he was aſſiſted by what his predeceſſor Wm Selling had done, and by Cardinal Archb. Morton, who built great part of it at his own coſt and charges (o). For the ſtrengthening of this lofty tower, of moſt beautiful form, Prior Goldſtone cauſed two larger and four ſmaller arches of ſtone to be fixed underneath it, from pillar to pillar, as they now remain; on

(l) Alexander Hawkin, who had been ſecretary to ſeveral priors 40 years, gave 150l. towards the ſouth ſteeple, and a new bell, and towards the new roof of the martyrdom.—Somner's manuſcript papers in the library of Chriſt Church.

(m) The Lady Mabilia Gobion gave towards the new building of the new chapel of the Virgin Mary 14l. during this Prior's time, Anne Tatterſhale gave to the fabric of this church 140l. and a cenſor of pure gold to the high altar; and ſir William Brencheley, by his will in 1446, gave 100l. likewiſe to this fabric. Somner's manuſcript papers in the library of Chriſt Church.

(n) It is ſo called from a ſmall bell, called Bell Harry, placed on the platform, at the top of it (the only remaining one here), ſaid to have been brought out of France by K. Henry VIII, and given to this church.

(o) In the higheſt window in the inſide of this tower, over the choir door, was the Archbiſhop's arms, with a red Cardinal's hat over them, which was demolished by the Puritans in the middle of the laſt century, as were the four gilt vanes on the four pinnacles of the tower, on which were ſeverally repreſented the coats of arms of the King, ſome of theſe his rebus and motto are carved in old Engliſh letters. His rebus was a gold ſtone, between theſe three capital letters T. P. G. ſo placed in general; and his motto, Non nobis Domine, non nobis ſed nomini tuo fit gloria (p). Archbiſhop Warham ſeems afterwards to have been a benefactor, by adding ſome additional ornaments at the top of it, as appears by his coat of arms at the top of the ſtone work. There was a ring of five bells remaining in this belfry at the diſſolution of the Priory, which was taken down anno 32 Henry VIII, and ſold by the King's Commiſſioners (q).

Whatever alterations or improvements were made to this church before the diſſolution of the priory, further than what has been already mentioned above, may be found in the account of the ſeveral Priors and Archbiſhops below, by whoſe care and bounty they were reſpectively made. I ſhall therefore only take notice (r), that a ſmall elegant chapel was built in the north wall of the Trinity chapel, at the upper end of the church, over againſt the monument of K. Henry IV. and his queen, ſoon after his burial, about the year 1447, as a chantry for the repoſe of their ſouls; and another ſtill ſmaller one, adjoining to Archbiſhop Warham's tomb in the martyrdom, for a prieſt to ſerve in it for the like purpoſe of ſaying maſs for the repoſe of his ſoul, &c. and that there was another ſmall chapel or chantry of the Lady Joane Brencheley, built on the outſide, but adjoining the ſouth wall of the nave, between the two buttreſſes of the fourth window, having a door opened to it in the wall of the church; in it was an altar dedicated to St. John Baptiſt. Sir William Brencheley, Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench, was buried near it, in the nave, in 1446, and his widow built this chapel next year, and erected an altar in it, with conſent of the Prior and Convent (s). After the diſſolution of the Priory it fell to decay and lay Prince, Church, and Archbiſhop. See Culmer's Dean and Chapter news.

(p) In this place, in the middle of the line of the words of his motto, his name is inſerted in a rebus thus T a ſhield charged with three gold ſtones, and then P in gold; i. e. Thomas Goldſtone, Prior; at the upper part of the inſide of the tower, his name and motto are placed different, as mentioned above. Thoſe arches or stretchers are very ſubſtantial, and are pierced in ſuch patterns as make them in ſome meaſure an ornament, though they certainly were deſigned as a means of ſecurity to ſtrengthen the pillars under ſo great a weight.

(q) This appears by the records in the Augtn. Office; they weighed 24646 pounds, and were ſold to Henry Criſpe of Birchington, and Robert St. Leger of Faverſham. See Battely, part ii, p. 24.

(s) John Coſſen, chaplain of the chantry of ſir William Brencheley, kn. died in 1526, and gave 20s. to the reparations of the ornaments of this chantry chapel. He was buried in St. Alphege church.

(r) Battely, part ii, p. 25.

CATHEDRAL.

in ruins, till Dean Nevil, about the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, repaired it for a burying place for himself and family; hence it acquired the name of Dean Nevil's chapel, by which it continued to be called, till the whole of it, with the monuments in it, was a few years since pulled down, and the materials removed, as having an unsightly appearance to the rest of the church. Besides these, there have been only some few ornamental improvements made, but nothing in particular worthy of being noticed.

Some mention will, no doubt, be expected here of the destruction, in which this cathedral was involved during the unhappy troubles of the great rebellion, in the middle of the last century. It was in the very beginning of the year 1641, as we reckon the entrance of the year at present, when that dismal storm first arose, which afterwards shook and threatened with a final overthrow, the very foundations of this church, for upon the feast of the Epiphany, and the Sunday following, there was a riotous disturbance raised by some disorderly persons, in the time of Divine Service, in the choir of this church, and although by the care of the Prebendaries, a stop was then put to these disorders for a time, yet afterwards the madness of the people raged, and prevailed beyond resistance;

(1) Some account of one of those sacrilegious disturbances may be seen in the Mercurius Rusticus, published in 1648, in a letter of Dr. Pafke, one of the Prebendaries and Vice Dean of this church, dated Aug. 30, 1642. It relates, that Colonel Sandys arrived here with his troops on the Friday night, and presently caused a strict watch and sentinels to be set, both upon the church and upon their several houses; this done, Serjeant-Major Cockaine came to him, and in the name of the parliament demanded to see the arms of the church, and the store powder of the county, which being shewn him, he possessed himself of the keys. Next morning the members were excluded the church, and were not permitted to enter for the performance of divine service, but about eight o'clock for Michael Livesey, attended by many soldiers, came into the church offices, and commanded the keys of the church to be delivered up to one of their company, which being done, they departed with them; when the soldiers entering the church and choir, overthrew the communion-table, tore the velvet cloth from before it, defaced the goodly screen of it, violated the monuments of the dead, spoiled the organ, broke down the antient rails and seats, with the brazen eagle which supported the bible, rent the surplices, gowns, and bibles, and carried away others, mangled all the service books and common prayers, bestrewing the whole pavement with their leaves; a miserable spectacle to the beholders. They then exercised their malice upon the arras hanging in the choir, representing the history of our Saviour; on which, observing several figures of Christ, they pierced them, and cut them through with many blasphemous expressions, and afterwards committed many other villainous acts of the like sort. Not content with these exploits, they afterwards finding another statue of Christ in the frontispiece of the Southgate, they discharged against it 40 shot at least, triumphing much when they hit it in the head or face, as if they resolved to crucify him again in the Dean and Canons were turned out of their stalls; the beautiful and new erected font was pulled down; the inscriptions, figures, and coats of arms engraven upon brass, were torn off from the antient monuments; the graves were ransacked, and whatever there was of beauty or decency in it, was despoiled by the outrages of sacrilege and prophaneness (1); in which forlorn state it remained until the abolition of Deans and Chapters, and the sequestration of their revenues, by ordinance of parliament in the year 1644, when the government committees, of which there were five in this county; those at Maidstone and Canterbury being the chief, took possession of those revenues, as well as of the precincts and church itself (u), and Captain Thomas Monins, of Dover, was appointed treasurer general of them, for the use of the state; and it is certainly owing to him, who appears to have been a royalist in his heart, that this venerable building was preserved from destruction, for he caused it to be maintained and repaired constantly out of the revenues of it; but in 1649 his office ceased, the state having passed another ordinance for the sale of all lands and tenements belonging to Dean and Chapters, and of the several cathedrals belonging to them; upon which, this of Canterbury was valued, as to all the materials of it, his figure, whom they could not really hurt; nor had their fury stopt here, threatening the ruin of the whole fabric, had not the Colonel, with some others, come to its relief and rescue; when the tumult being appeased, they departed for Dover, from whence they were again expected as that day, and it was greatly apprehended they would plunder the houses of the church members, unless timely prevented.

(u) It appears by Mr. Monins's accounts, now in the hands of his descendant John Monins, of Canterbury, Esq.; that the yearly rents and woods which came into his receipt, amounted to 2217*l.* per annum. The deanry, prebendal houses, &c. were let to laymen at different rents; the late members of the church, if not delinquents, were allowed in general, a third part of their former income, and if they had no allowance, their wives were allowed a fifth part of it; the lower members and under officers were in general paid the whole of their stipends. 100*l.* was allowed yearly, to be distributed to the poor, of whom 241 were relieved yearly, at Christmas. Numbers of the parochial clergy were paid by order of the Committee of Plundered Ministers, yearly pensions and augmentations. There appears, during the whole time to have been the psalms read, lectures and sermons preached in the cathedral and sermon-house, and the sacrament administered in the former; the preacher in the cathedral had 150*l.* per ann. the lecturer in the sermon-house 100*l.* The charges for the repair of the church and precincts, and in keeping them in clean and good order, were not spared; among other articles I find, in 1646 paid for the repair of the roof of the church 109*l.* In 1647, a great repair was made to the arch over the body of the church, with much expence of masonry, &c. to the amount of 80*l.* for repairing the upper windows of the body of the church, &c. 16*l.* In 1649, the stone causeway was made from the south gate to the porch of the church, and the school had a great repair.

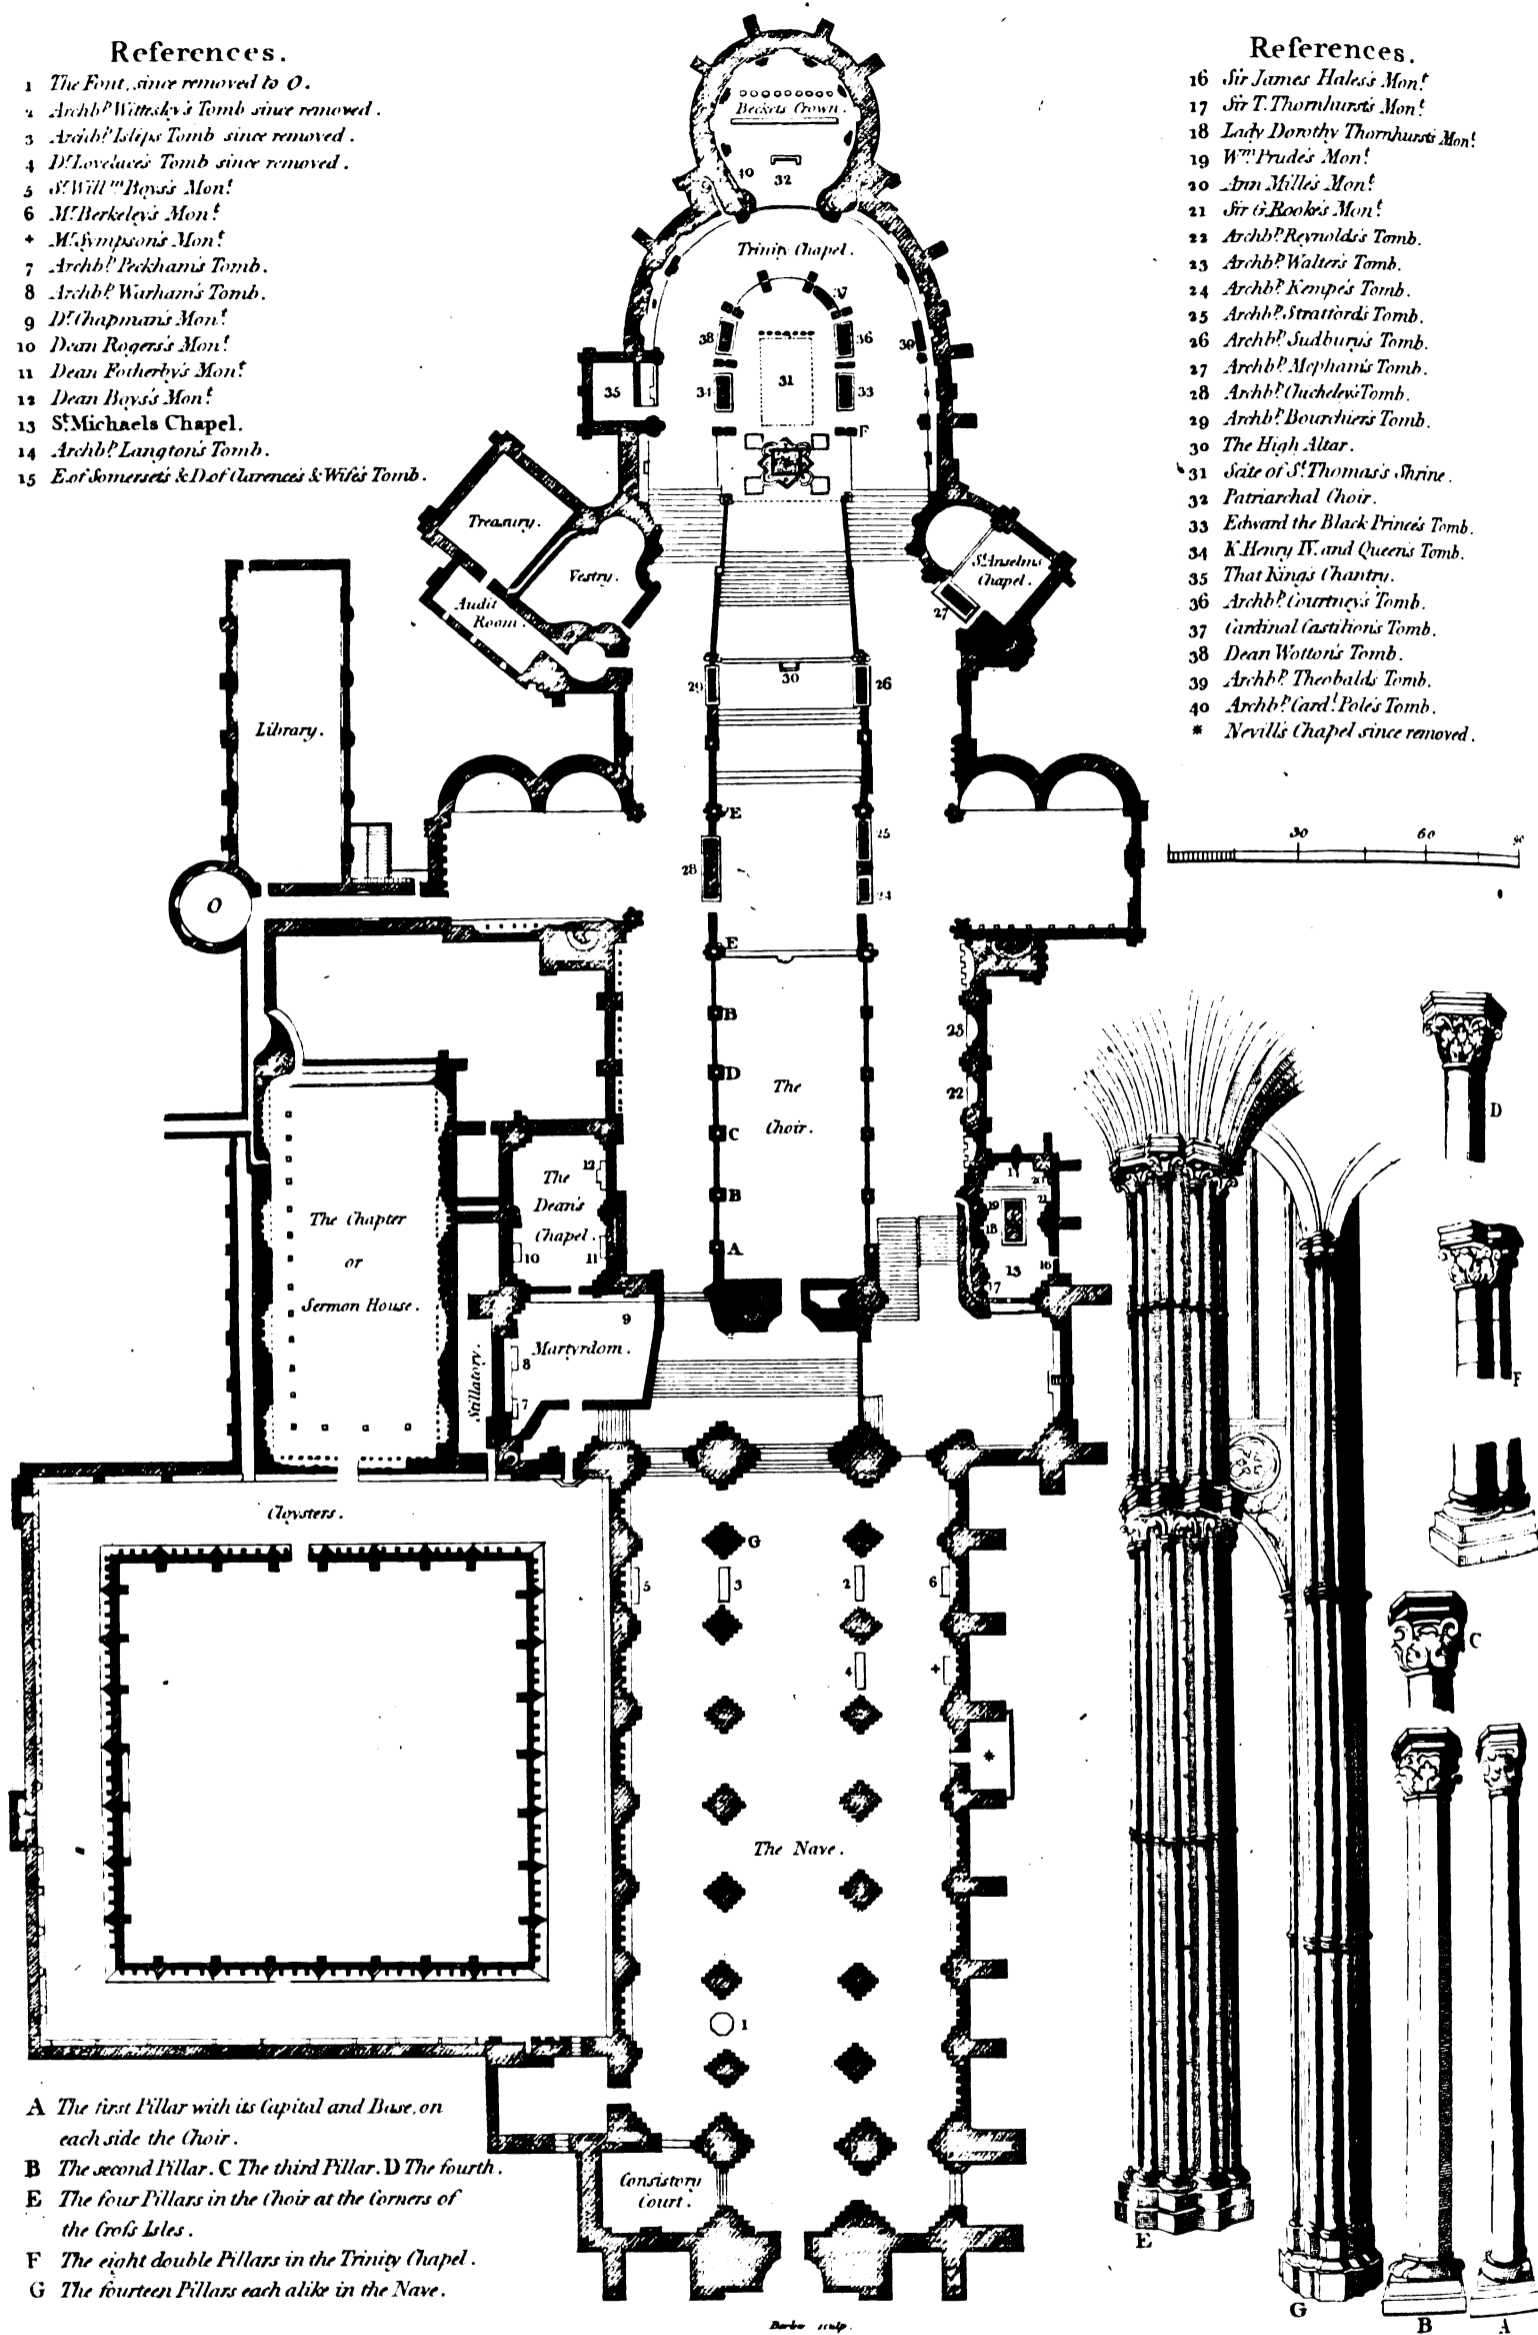

and

References.

- 1 The Font, since removed to O.
- 2 Archb^d Wittsky's Tomb since removed.
- 3 Archb^d Islips Tomb since removed.
- 4 D^r Lovelace's Tomb since removed.
- 5 S^t Will^m Bays's Mon^t.
- 6 M^r Berkeley's Mon^t.
- + M^r Simpson's Mon^t.
- 7 Archb^d Peckham's Tomb.
- 8 Archb^d Warham's Tomb.
- 9 D^r Chapman's Mon^t.
- 10 Dean Rogers's Mon^t.
- 11 Dean Fotherby's Mon^t.
- 12 Dean Bays's Mon^t.
- 13 S^t Michael's Chapel.
- 14 Archb^d Langton's Tomb.
- 15 Eof. Somerset's & D^r of Clarence's & Wife's Tomb.

References.

- 16 Sir James Halles's Mon^t.
- 17 Sir T. Thornhurst's Mon^t.
- 18 Lady Dorothy Thornhurst's Mon^t.
- 19 W^m Prades's Mon^t.
- 20 Ann Mills's Mon^t.
- 21 Sir G. Cooke's Mon^t.
- 22 Archb^d Reynolds's Tomb.
- 23 Archb^d Walter's Tomb.
- 24 Archb^d Kemp's Tomb.
- 25 Archb^d Stratford's Tomb.
- 26 Archb^d Sudbury's Tomb.
- 27 Archb^d Mepham's Tomb.
- 28 Archb^d Cuckew's Tomb.
- 29 Archb^d Bourchier's Tomb.
- 30 The High Altar.
- 31 Site of S^t Thomas's Shrine.
- 32 Patriarchal Choir.
- 33 Edward the Black Prince's Tomb.
- 34 K. Henry IV. and Queen's Tomb.
- 35 That King's Chantry.
- 36 Archb^d Courtney's Tomb.
- 37 Cardinal Castillon's Tomb.
- 38 Dean Wotton's Tomb.
- 39 Archb^d Theobald's Tomb.
- 40 Archb^d Card^l Pole's Tomb.
- * Nevills Chapel since removed.

- A The first Pillar with its capital and Base, on each side the Choir.
 B The second Pillar. C The third Pillar. D The fourth.
 E The four Pillars in the Choir at the corners of the Cross Isles.
 F The eight double Pillars in the Trinity Chapel.
 G The fourteen Pillars each alike in the Nave.

A Plan of the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, with the Cloysters and other Buildings adjoining to it, with the Architecture of the several Pillars, and the Tombs and Monuments, as they were before the new Pavement of the Nave in the Year 1787.

CATHEDRAL.

and the charge of taking it down (v). However, it by some means remained untouched, and at the restoration of monarchy, and the re-establishment of the church of England in 1660, it was restored to the Dean and Chapter, the lawful possessors of it; at which time this church was found in so neglected a condition, that it was found necessary to expend no less a sum than 12,000*l.* to put it in a decent state for the celebration of religious service (w).

THE CATHEDRAL of Canterbury is a noble and magnificent pile of building, the sight of which imprints on the mind a religious awe and veneration; and notwithstanding the different ages in which the several parts of it have been built, and the various kinds of architecture, singular to each, no one part corresponding with that adjoining to it, yet there seems nothing unightly or disagreeable in the view of it; on the contrary, the whole together has a most venerable and pleasing effect. The same observation may equally be applied to the inside of this church, where, on entering it, the mind is again impressed with awe and admiration at the fine perspective view of this vast and magnificent edifice, the work of many ages, and of incredible labour and cost to rear it to its present state, for the purpose of adoring the Almighty God of the universe, and of our Saviour Christ, as a sacred temple of holiness to his honour, praise and glory.

(v) Mr. Monins, the treasurer, on his being removed from that office, was made a captain of a troop of horse, which he held till the restoration, when he petitioned the King, in regard to his having ever favoured the royalists, and prevented much ill usage to them from time to time; for his having preserved this cathedral from ruin, and the other buildings belonging to it, whilst treasurer; and for his having secreted the church muniments and plate, and restored them at the restoration. That he might be permitted to keep his troop of horse, but for reasons, best known at that time, he was not permitted to do it.

(w) This money was paid from the body from their fines, though it was said to be in as good repair as any other cathedral; exclusive of this, they divided out of their first fines 1100*l.* a piece, besides having before made out of them a handsome present to the King. This is related in a letter written by a prebendary of this church, Peter de Meulin, 4to. 1668, inserted in the Harleian Miscellany, 4to. vol. iv, London, 1745.

(x) There have been many paintings and drawings made of this beautiful structure, in different views of the outward as well as the interior parts of it; many of these have been engraved in different works, and in single prints; there are in particular views of it engraved in Dugdale's Monasticon; Dart's history of this church; Battely's second part of Somner; Grose's Antiquities; and in Gostling's Walk. Mr. Battely has likewise given an ideal ichnography, as conjectured by the Rev. Mr. Sacket, of the old church, before Lanfranc, one of the church with the choir of Conrad, and another of the undercroft, as at the time of the reformation; and another ichnography of the whole church, with the cloysters, chapter-house and library; all which have references to the

To proceed now in the account of this fabric, with some particulars relating to the former and present state of the several parts of it, not mentioned above, and of the monuments and tombs which are, or have been within the walls of it (x).

At the entrance of this church, at the west front of it, notice has been already taken, that there were on each side a tower; that on the south side, called the Chicheley tower, had formerly on the south side of it, over the porch, at the entrance into the church (y), the figures cut in stone, of four armed men; the niches in which they were placed still remaining, representing those who murdered Archbishop Becket. In this tower there is now a fine musical peal of eight bells, and a clock which strikes a solemn sound on a large bell, appropriated for this purpose, and for tolling at funerals, being placed on the platform on the summit of it (z). On the vaulting of the porch are carved a number of coats of arms in stone, on the ribwork of it. The tower on the north side, called the Arundel tower, is very antient; it is in height 100 feet, the form of it, and the materials with which it is built, plainly shew it to have been of a very early date; indeed, by all appearance, it may well be conjectured to be the same that was built by Archbishop Lanfranc, with the rest of the church. It had formerly a lofty leaden spire, 100 feet high, placed on it by Archbishop Arundel, whence it was afterwards called by his name. This spire several parts of them, the latter as it remained in his time; all which, with alterations as at present, are inserted in the course of this work.

(y) The roof of the porch is vaulted with stone work, richly carved with a cluster of shields of arms, being 28 in number, in a double circle. The arms of Old France and England quarterly; the rest round it among them are, the arms of the See of Canterbury, impaled with Chicheley, and of Courtney, with a label of three points. William Salter, of St. Elphe's parish, was buried in 1549, in this porch.

(z) In 1726, the bells in the Arundel steeple were taken down and cast into a new ring of eight, by Mr. Samuel Knight, bell-founder, and afterwards hung up in the Chicheley Tower. These six bells were cast at different times, and all, excepting the third bell, since the reformation, as appears by the inscriptions on them. On the 1st was Josephus me fecit, 1635; on the 2d, Josephus Hatch me fecit, 1636; on the 3d, T. G. Prior, Sancte Thoma, ora pro nobis; on the 4th, E. R. Robertus Mot me fecit, 1585; on the 5th, Joseph Hatch made me, 1606; on the 6th, W. H. Beate Trinitati Campana, hec sacra primo fusa, 1408, secundo 1624, Josephus Hatch me fecit.—The largest of the eight bells having been cracked, was recast in 1778. The weight of the new bell being 33 cwt. which is 3 cwt. less than that of the old one. The large bell on which the clock strikes, on the top of the tower, was likewise cracked in 1758, by the persons making it toll, by knocking on it for that purpose with a large hammer; an attempt was made to repair it by soldering, but the experiment failed, and it was new cast here, in the plumbery, in 1762. The old bell, the same given by Prior Molash, weighed 7500 cwt. being much larger than any in the peal.

being

CATHEDRAL.

spire being much damaged in the great storm which happened in Nov. 1703, was taken down as low as the platform and balcony, which now make the top and finishing of it. This tower is now so weakened by age, and by the alterations made in the under part of it, to make it conformable to the rest of the nave on the inside, that it has been thought necessary to strengthen it with bands of many hundred pounds weight of iron. Underneath it, in the nave, is the Archbishop's Consistory Court, lately fitted up in an elegant manner, by the present Commissary of the diocese, sir William Scott, knt.

The nave has lately been new paved with white Portland stone, and has been much admired for its simplicity and neatness. On taking up the old pavement, the modern gravestones were all removed, but there was not that delicacy and decency used, as ought to have been to the remains of those antiently buried in it, by the workmen to whom it was intrusted, to make the ground firm and sure for the new pavement. At which time the beautiful font, the gift of Dr. Warner, Bishop of Rochester and Prebendary of this church, not long before the great rebellion broke out, in the last century, which stood between two of the pillars on the north side, at the lower end of the nave, was removed without the church to the adjoining circular building northward, close to the door of the library (a).

At the upper part of the north isle of the nave, near the place where sir John Boys's monument now is, was once, in the old nave, though parted

(a) This font (the former one being portable and removeable at pleasure) was erected in 1636, in which year it was consecrated by the Bishop of Oxford; it was sacrilegiously pulled down and defaced in the time of the great rebellion; but as soon as the restoration took place in 1660, Mr. Somner, who had bought up, at his own cost, and collected together the different pieces of it which had been pillaged by the rabble, restored the whole of them to the original donor of it, who re-edified it, and restoring it to its former beauty, replaced it again in the nave of this church; Mr. Somner having the honour of a daughter to be first baptized in it that same year. There is a print of it in Mr. Gosling's Walk, given by a descendant of the donor of it.

(b) Anno 1174, when the choir was burnt down, Gervas says, that the Convent erected an altar in this chapel, at which they solemnized the daily service till the year 1180, when they returned to the choir again; and then he tells us, the chapel with the altar was demolished; why they erected an altar, where there was one before, and how it could be said that they demolished this altar and chapel, when there is certain evidence, that in this very place the chapel and altar of the Blessed Virgin were standing many years after Gervas says they were demolished, is worth enquiring into; for in 1184, Archbishop Richard is said to have been buried expressly in this very chapel; besides which, in the registry of this church, there are several grants made to this very altar of the Blessed Virgin, in the upper part of the nave of the church, and to the same altar, which is before the great cross in the church; one of these off, a kind of chapel, dedicated, as well as the altar in it, to the Blessed Virgin Mary, called from thence our Lady's chapel (b). In it were buried the Archbishops Theobald, and Richard, the immediate successor to Thomas Becket, whose leaden inscription and pontifical relics, that is, his cope, crozier and chalice were found in 1632, in digging Dr. Anian's grave; but this old chapel has not been heard of, since the present nave of the church has been built.

At the upper part of the nave are two crosses or wings; that on the north being called the martyrdom, from St. Thomas Becket's murder in it (c). In this wing stood an altar, by the wall where Dr. Chapman's monument now is, commonly called the altar of the martyrdom of St. Thomas, which, together with the place, Erasmus saw, and thus describes it. There is here to be seen an altar, built of wood, consecrated to the Blessed Virgin, small, and remarkable on no other respect, but as it is a monument of antiquity, and upbraids the luxury of these present times. At the foot of this altar, the holy martyr is said to have bade his last farewell to the Blessed Virgin, at the point of death. Upon this altar lies the part of the sword by which his head was cleft, and his being contused, it speedily hastened his death. We religiously, says Erasmus, kissed this piece of the sword, as rusty as it was, out of love and veneration to the martyr (d).

This place was, no doubt, highly esteemed by our ancestors, the walls of which seemed to have been hanged with arras; and the veneration it grants is dated an. 46 Hen. III, 1262, and another still later in 1299; these prove, that the altar was standing many years after Gervas says it was demolished. This perhaps may be thus cleared up — When the choir was burnt, the Convent made choice of this chapel for the daily celebration of those offices of religion, which were before celebrated at the high altar, dedicated to our Saviour Christ; upon which they took down the altar of the Blessed Virgin, and in the place of it erected an altar to Christ, which was to be esteemed the high and principal altar, so long as they made use of it for the daily service. But when they returned to the new choir, where they had erected a high altar, they took down that which they had placed in this chapel; the taking down of which is most probably called by Gervas, the demolishing of the chapel and the altar, and that after this was done, they restored both the chapel and altar, consecrated to the Blessed Virgin, with the services that were wont to be performed there before. See Battely, part ii, p. 26.

(c) That part at the bottom of the steps, where he fell, was separated from the way to the choir, by a stone partition, on the door of which was written the following lines in old English letters:

Est sacer intra locus Venerabilis atq; Beatus, Presul ubi Sanctus Thomas est Martyrizans.

A grave was dug here in the year 1734, so near this partition, that the foundation of it gave way, which occasioned its being taken down, and the way to it laid open.

(d) Erasmii Colloq; Peregrinatio Religionis Eiga suscept.

CATHEDRAL.

was held in, seems to have been the reason of its being chosen for the solemnizing of the espousals of K. Edward I. with his queen Margaret, daughter of the King of France, which were celebrated here on Sept. 9, 1299, by Robert, Archbishop of Canterbury; near the door at the entrance from the cloister.

The fine painted window of this wing, given by K. Edward IV, was in great part destroyed in the time of fanaticism, in the middle of the last century; but what is left is sufficient to convince us how beautiful it must have been, when in its perfect state.

In this window, before that destruction of it, there was, as we are told, the picture of God the Father, and of Christ, besides a large crucifix and the picture of the Holy Ghost, in the form of a dove, and of the twelve apostles; there were likewise seven large pictures of the Virgin Mary, in as many several glorious appearances, as of the angels lifting her up into Heaven, and the sun, moon and stars under her feet, each having an inscription under it, beginning with Gaude Maria, as Gaude Maria sponsa Dei, &c. To these were added many figures of saints, as St. George, &c. but the favorite saint of this church, Archbishop Becket, was more rarely pictured in this window in full proportion, with his cope, rochet, mitre, crozier, and other pontificals; and at the foot of the window was a legend, shewing that it was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. In laudem & honorem Beatissime Virginis Mariæ, Matris Dei, &c. (e)

To give some account of the present state of this window; it is in the Gothic taste, with a multitude of lights or pannels of glazing; the three lower ranges of which are considerably large, and seven in each row. The middle one is almost all of coloured glass, the others plain, except some escutcheons of arms.

The coloured range has in its middle pannel, the arms of the church, under a canopy at present, but probably had once a crucifix or some other representation, held equally sacred, as all the figures on each side are kneeling to it. These are supposed to be those of K. Edw. IV. and his family, in as large life as their places permit. The King is next in the centre pannel to the west; in those behind him are Prince Edward, and Richard, Duke of York; in that on the east side is the Queen; in the next three princesses, and in the last two others: all have crowns or coronets, except these two. But these figures and descriptions under them, have been all much defaced and very badly repaired, by filling up those parts which had been demolished with glass brought from other places, and intended for other figures of different sorts. In the ranges of small lights at the upper part of the window, each capable of holding one small figure only, are those of different saints; their height and distance having preserved them from being broken.

(e) This is taken from the account given of this window by the fanatic Richard Culmer, contemptuously stiled Blue Dick, the man principally concerned in the demolition of it. See Gosling, p. 209.

Mr. Gosling has given, in his Walk, p. 328, from the observation of a friend, which I suspect to be the late Dr. Beauvoir, a minute, and indeed a very curious and accurate description of this window in its present state, to which the reader is referred; as it is by far too long for the purpose of this work. By this account it appears, that most of the principal figures, and other parts of the window, which had been so maliciously destroyed, have been filled up by pieces of glass, taken, most probably, at the time of the restoration, from numbers of fragments scattered about in other parts of the church, no ways relating to the subjects here; and some most absurdly contrary to what they were, added to them; which fills the account above-mentioned full of probabilities and conjectures of the former state of it, when entire.

Adjoining to the north side of this isle or martyrdom, behind the tomb of Archbishop Warham, though without the wall of the church, was the chapel or chantry, being a very small one, erected by him, for a priest to celebrate for his soul, &c. but this was pulled down at the time of the reformation. Contiguous to this martyrdom, on the east side, is the chapel, usually called the Dean's chapel, from several of the Deans of this church having been buried in it. It has a most curious vaulted roof of carved stone-work; it was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, whence it was, till the reformation, called our Lady's chapel. By the work, it appears to be of the time of K. Henry VI. and at the latter end of that reign to have been stiled the new chapel of the Blessed Mary, having been then lately built by Prior Thomas Goldstone, the first of that name who lies buried in it.

The opposite or south wing is, almost the whole of it, now paved with the modern grave-stones, removed from the nave of the church, when that was new paved a few years since; on the sides are several mural monuments of marble; all which will be noticed in their proper place below. The great window at the south end of it falling to decay, has been lately rebuilt, as it is said, at the cost of near 1000*l.* being filled with painted glass, taken from different parts of this church and the neighbourhood of it, and makes a very handsome appearance (f).

(f) This window was selected and arranged with much care and industry, by Mr. John Simmonds, one of the vesturers of the church, to whom the arrangement of it was committed by the Dean and Chapter.

CATHEDRAL.

On the east side of this wing is the chapel of St. Michael, built mostly on the site of a former one, most probably, by the appearance of the architecture of it, about, or soon after the time these cross isles or wings and the nave of the church were taken down and rebuilt, but upon a smaller scale, as appears by Archbishop Langton's tomb, who lived in K. Henry III.'s reign, which is at the east end of it, and remains one half within the chapel, and the other without, in the church yard, the wall of the chapel being built across the middle of it (g). Notice has already been taken that these cross isles or wings were not wholly taken down by Archbishop Sudbury, and that what was left standing of them was almost all new cased with stone, to resemble the new parts, and that there is a projection over the entrance into St. Michael's chapel remaining, for the support of an organ, ubi organa solent esse; I shall therefore only observe further here, that it has the look of antiquity, being faced with wainscotting painted; on the two front pannels are the pictures of St. Augustine and St. Gregory, in their pontifical vestments, mitres, &c. done in stone colour (b).

Over this chapel is a beautiful room in the same style, being part of Archbishop Sudbury's repairs; the roof is of ribbed arches, on the keystones of which, are the faces, carved, of three members of this priory, whose names and degrees were in legends beside them, though now partly obliterated; the eastern one has remaining in old English letters, Thomas—— prior; meaning, I suppose, Thomas Chillenden, who was chosen prior in 1390. The middle one seems to have been Johns Woodnesbergh, who succeeded him in 1411; the western one is Willms Molasch discipulus (i).

From the martyrdom, above described, is a passage down several steps into the crypt or undercroft, the whole vaulted over with stone, and

(g) It appears from Leland, that this chapel was formerly called St. Anne's chapel; for in his Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 4, he says, "In the cross isle that standeth beneath the degrees of the quire southward lye buried in St. Anne's chapel, Simon Langhtoun, and also another Bishop of Cantuarbyri. There lyeth also John, Counte of So... and another of them with a lady of Claraunce. This chapel be likelihod in this isle was new made from the honor of Erle John of Somerset. In the south wyndowes of he same goodly chapel be written yn the glasse wyndowes, these three names, John Counte of Somerset, the Lord Percy, the Lord Mortaine, and every one with the King's arms."

It seems to have been afterwards called St. Michael's chapel, and there was a large stone figure of St. Michael formerly placed on the top of the roof, over the south door of the adjoining south isle, under Bell Harry steeple; this figure, which held a great brazen cross in its hand, was pulled down in the time of the great rebellion, in the middle of the last century, by the Puritans; it was so large, that it required the strength of 100 men with a rope for the supported by different sized pillars, extending under the remaining part of this church eastward, a place which at its entrance strikes us with its awful and solemn appearance; a work seemingly of the age of Archbishop Lanfranc, soon after the Norman conquest, and left entire, notwithstanding the misfortunes which destroyed the building over it at different times, and made use of by the architects as a part of the fabric which would have cost them great labour and time had they been obliged to rebuild it, and being no ways injured, was left as a substantial foundation fully sufficient for them to erect their future structure on it. That part of it under the choir and the side isles, has been for many years appropriated to the Walloons and French Refugees for their place of worship. Under the upper south cross isle, or wing of the choir, was the chapel or chantry of Edward the Black Prince, with an altar in it, dedicated to St. Mary, founded by him in the year 1363, and endowed by licence of his father K. Edward III, with the yearly revenue of forty marks, to be paid by the Prior and Convent, to the support of two chaplains to pray for his soul, &c. This chantry being suppressed by the act of 37 Henry VIII, grew out of use and deserted, and is walled up from the rest of the undercroft. I shall only observe further, relating to it, that the roof is a piece of more new and curious work than the vaults about it, and yet the overbuilt structure is as old as any that stands within the adjoining vaults of elder fashioned work; to accomplish this, the former roof over the chapel was undoubtedly taken off, which might well be without endangering the church, that the chapel might in all parts the better correspond and suit with the dignity and rank of the founder, and was rebuilt in the neat and more costly manner that it remains in at present (k).

Eastward of the French church, in the under-purpose, and was so heavy, and fell so high, that in its fall it buried itself in the ground. It looked straight forward to a lane right over against it, in Canterbury, from thence called Angel-lane. See Culmer's Dean and Chapter News from Canterbury, edit. ii, p. 2.

(b) There are three round holes in the wainscot, seemingly marks of musket shot, probably made by the fanatics, out of enmity to these saints, in the time of the great rebellion. A few years since the workmen taking off the top covering of this wainscot, they found several leaden bullets behind it.

(i) This room was till lately made use of as a singing school for the choristers; before which it was used as an armory, and fitted up with racks for abundance of pikes, all which have been some years since removed.

(k) Bately's Somner, p. 97. Robert Weef, otherwise called Robert Walpole, of Canterbury, chaplain, by his will anno 1473, ordered to be buried in this church, in a certain chapel, called le Pryncis chapel, situate near the chapel of the Blessed Mary in cryptis there.

croft,

CATHEDRAL.

croft, under the Trinity chapel, is a small oblong square place, inclosed with open Gothic stonework, being once a chapel, commonly called our Lady Undercroft. This chapel consisted of a body and chancel, divided by a step in the middle; the altar at the east end is destroyed, but the niche over it for the statue of the Virgin still remains, as well as the pedestal on which it stood, adorned with small figures in relievo of the annunciation, and some other parts of her history, not quite defaced.

Mr. Somner says, the Blessed Virgin had a chapel in the crypt so early as the year 1242; if so, probably, that of which we see the remains at present was erected in the room of it, the former one extending farther eastward than the latter, inasmuch, that Archbishop Becket's tomb of burial was placed in the middle of it. The stone-work, which incloses this chapel, is elegant, but is only at the sides and east end; towards the west it has none, being left quite open; probably this was the work of Prior Goldstone, the second who ruled this church at the time of Archbishop Morton's death in 1500, and might erect it according to the Archbishop's directions, who, Mr. Collyer tells us, was buried under the choir, in a fine chapel, built by himself. His gravestone still remains in the middle of it, and his monument at the south-west corner of the chapel, near which he had a chantry erected for a priest to celebrate for his soul, &c. This might be on the north side of the tomb, and join the west end of the Lady chapel, and being demolished at the reformation, accounts for that part of it being open, as we see it at present.

Since the dissolution of the priory and the reformation which followed, this chapel has been quite deserted, and has become despicable, tho' formerly so much celebrated, and of such high esteem, and so very rich, that the sight of it, debarred to the vulgar, was reserved to persons of great quality only. Erasmus, who by the especial favor of Archbishop Warham's recommendation, was brought to the sight of it, describes it thus; "There, says he, the Virgin mother has an habitation, but somewhat dark, inclosed with a double sept or rail of iron, for fear of thieves, for indeed I never saw a thing more laden with riches; lights being brought we saw a more than royal spectacle; in beauty it far surpassed that of Walsingham. This chapel

" was not shewed but to noblemen and especial friends, &c. (l)

At some distance south-eastward from the above, under the chapel of St. Anselm, is another now divided by a stone wall into two, with a pillar in the midst of each. No notice is taken of this part of the undercroft in Gerwas's description abovementioned, though the altars, &c. in that on the opposite side are there given. There has been much painting on the walls, tho' now almost obliterated; much of it related to the nativity of St. John Baptist and his apocalypse; below these, in the north wall, on a kind of cornice, were these words, Hoc altare dedicatum est in honorem Sancti Gabrielis Archangeli; but they are hardly legible now (m).

A few steps eastward from our Lady's chapel, abovementioned, is Becket's tomb, so called from Archbishop Becket's first interment there, whose dead body the assassins giving out that they would take and cast out into the open fields, to be a prey for beasts and birds, or otherwise abuse it; the monks immediately buried it here in a new tomb (n), in the middle of the Virgin Mary's chapel, afterwards pulled down, where it rested till Archbishop Stephen Langton translated it above, to the Trinity chapel, with great solemnity. Before this removal, it was to this place, where an altar was erected to the honor of the tomb of the Blessed Martyr St. Thomas, that K. Henry II. came with bare feet, to pray, in part of his penance, and K. Lewis VII. of France, came likewise to visit St. Thomas's tomb, and make his offerings to the saint.

This part of the undercroft, a vault of goodly architecture and scarcely to be paralleled, was, no doubt, in former time set much store by, and was highly celebrated. It was built under the magnificent chapel of the Holy Trinity, which the monks had erected after the fire of the church, instead of the small one at the east end of Lanfranc's church; and the architect took care that his work should be distinguishable enough from that, to which it was added, by the difference of taste, though by no means inferior to it in elegance and grandeur, and designed, as it should seem, to finish it in a circular form; at the east end there is an arch, over which there is remaining the figure of a crucifix, with a person standing on each side. This opens into the circular building, being the vault under Becket's grave without any remains of corps or coffin, the whole perfectly clean.—Probably this grave was left undisturbed, when the stone coffin in which the Archbishop was laid, was carefully taken out of it, in order to remove his relics elsewhere.

The obituary of the church mentions, that Thomas Otford, who died in 1414, paved the tomb of St. Thomas, and the chapel of St. John Baptist therein, with square tiles; part of which pavement still remains.

(l) Erasmi Colloq; Peregrinatio Religionis ergo suscept.

(m) Mr. Gosling's opinion is, that Mr. Darr's description of the paintings here are, like some others in his book, more fancy than reality.

(n) To such as doubt, whether Archb. Becket had a grave here, Mr. Gosling relates what he had heard many years before he died, from an eye witness of undoubted credit, whom the learned Archdeacon Battely invited to see a stone in the undercroft taken up, under which they found a crowns, of about 30 feet diameter, the roof arched with ribs meeting in the centre. It is now the greatest part of it walled off and allotted to the first prebendal house, for the household uses of it.

CATHEDRAL

To return again to the upper part of the church, and ascend the steps from the nave to the skreen at the west door of the choir, a beautiful piece of gothic carve-work, built by Prior Henry de Eastria in 1304; it is rich in flutings, pyramids and canopied niches, in which stand six statues, crowned; five of which hold globes in their hands; and the sixth, most probably meant for K. Eitelbert, being an antient man, with a long beard, holding a church in his hand (o); over this skreen is placed the most beautiful and harmonious organ, perhaps at this time in England, built in 1784, by the celebrated Mr. Green, at the expence of more than 1500*l.* to the Dean and Chapter, in the room of the former one, which stood most unsightly on the north side of the choir (p).

From hence eastward, before the reformation, the magnificence and glory of this church shone forth. The stalls on each side, divided into the upper and lower choir, in the former of which, the prior, the principal officers of the convent and the senior monks sat, in the latter the junior monks, were composed of wood richly carved and ornamented in the gothic taste. At the upper end of the south side was the Archbishop's stall, of the like sort, richly gilt; opposite to which, in the middle, on the uppermost of the two steps, was a beautiful eagle of brass, on which was laid the precentor's book, at which he sat during divine service, to perform his office, with a clerk on each side of him. Above this was the presbitery, where the choir was adorned on each side with costly hangings; those on the north side were the benefaction of Richard Dering, monk and cellarer of this convent, given, as (o) That on the right hand of K. Eitelbert seems more delicately featured and feminine than the rest, and might perhaps be designed for Bertha his queen. Culmer, in his Dean and Chapter News, p. 20, describes this richly ornamented screen, before the damage done to it by him and his puritanical followers, in which he says, thirteen images, representing Christ and his twelve apostles, standing over the west door of the choir, were all hewed down by them; and twelve more at the north door of it; and twelve mitred saints fate aloft, over the west door, abovementioned.

(p) The old organ, which was an excellent one, was new built, excepting that the former front was preserved, in 1753; half the expence of it was defrayed by Captain Humphry Pudnor, of this city; and he would have contributed still more, if it might at that time have been removed to its present situation.

(q) Battely's Somner, p. 93, part ii, p. 29.

(qq) There is a list of them in the manuscripts in the Cotton libr. printed in Dart's appendix, pl. num. xiii, which takes up more than eight folio pages.

the legend wrought at the bottom of them imported, in 1511. Those on the south side, by Prior Thomas Goldstone, in the same year; the latter representing the birth, life and death of the Blessed Virgin, as the obituary informs us, most beautifully and curiously embroidered in rare and excellent figures, on three pieces of arras; the former representing that of our Blessed Saviour; and there was another set of hangings, probably still more rich and curious than these, as they were reserved for grand festivals and holidays only (q). These hangings were all put away, when the sides of this part of the choir were new wainscotted, and fitted up in the present handsome and more modern fashion. By these hangings, on the north side between the tombs of the Archbishops Cbicheley and Bourchier, was the repository for the relics of saints. Erasmus tells us, that on the north side (of the presbitery) were kept, close under lock and key, such precious rarities as were not to be seen by every body; infomuch that we should wonder if he should tell us, what a number of bones were brought forth, skulls, jaw-bones, teeth, hands, fingers, whole arms; most of which, out of devotion, he kissed; but the number was so infinite, that he found it impossible to stay to observe the whole of them (qq). Above this, raised on a flight of steps, stood the high altar (r), ornamented as rich as gold, silver, jewellery and costly art could adorn it; and Erasmus tells us, we should think the richest monarchs mere beggars, in comparison of the abundance of silver and gold which belonged to the furniture of it (s).

For the celebration of the divine rites in this church, with a pomp and solemnity equal to the rest of the splendor of it (t), the vestry was filled with jewellery, with candlesticks, cups, pixes, and crosses of every size, made of silver and gold, many of them richly and curiously wrought with mitres, pastoral staves, with vest-

(r) Underneath the pavement of this altar was a low vault, the grated windows of which looked into the undercroft; this was called the lesser armory, armariolum, to distinguish it from a greater one on the north side of the north isle. It contained nothing but the body of St. Blaze, being rather a feretry than a store-room.

(s) Erasmii Colloq; ibid. Battely's Somner, p. 94.

(t) The blaze of light occasioned by the numerous candles and torches provided constantly for the celebration of divine services in this church, must have added greatly to the magnificence of them. Mr. Battely has given the antient assize of the weights and measures of the wax tapers provided in the sacristy of this church, many of them of a large weight and size; the paschal taper weighed 300*lb.*; seven tapers in seven branches, weighed 50 pounds, namely six of them seven pounds a piece, and that in the middle eight pounds; procession candles 2*lb.* a piece, and on the feast of the Purification, each weighed 3*lb.* See Battely, part ii, appendix, numb. xix.

CATHEDRAL.

ments and copes, almost without number, of all sorts and colours of damask and velvet, all richly embroidered and mixed with gold and silver, that the weight of many of them were almost too much for the wearer to support without the greatest fatigue; in short, the number and richness of them, as appears by the inventory taken at the dissolution of the priory, when they were carried away for the King's use, were almost beyond estimate (v).

These were chiefly given at different times by the Archbishops and Priors of this church. The obituaries of it mention several particulars of such benefactions; among others, Archbishop Stratford gave a most precious cope and his best mitre; Archbishop Arundel gave a mitre of gold beset with many jewels, a rich vestment, 21 copes and one of cloth of gold; Archbishop Morton gave 80 copes, embroidered with his name and arms; in short, the obituaries abound with instances of this kind; but all these rich ornaments were swept away at the time of the dissolution, and it may truly be affirmed, more for the sake of the rich plunder, than any real regard to reformation.

As to the present state of the choir of this church, it is said to be the most spacious of any in the kingdom, being about 180 feet in length, and 38 feet clear in breadth; the stalls for the Dean and Prebendaries are at the west end of it, six on each side the entrance, and are said to have been carved by Gibbons. They are of wainscot, divided by neat pillars and pilasters, fluted, with capitals of the Corinthian order, supporting arched canopies and a front elegantly carved with a rich foliage and other ornaments, of crowns, sceptres, mitres, &c. on it are the arms of England and France, of the Archbishopric, and of the Dean and Chapter; this work was part of what was performed after the restoration, at a vast expence, among the repairs of those mischiefs done by the Puritans in the time of the preceding troubles.

The old monkish stalls, in two rows, on each side of the choir, remained till the year 1704, when the present new seats and wainscotting on each side, were put up in their room, being the design of sir James Burrough (u), and are of the Corinthian or composite order. This part was put (v). See an account of all these vestments, ornaments, jewels and utensils deposited in the sacristy of this church, an. 1321, in a manuscript in the Cotton Library, marked Galba, E. iv. 14, f. 114, printed in Dart's appendix, p. iv, Numb. vi. Of the silver vessels then in the refectory, ibid. p. 185.

(u) Sir James Burrough was Master of Caius College in Cambridge, and died in 1764. Whoever has seen the front of the Senate House in Cambridge, and compares it with either of these sides of the choir, cannot but observe the close resemblance one has to the other, being the designs of the same person.

up some years after the other, and though not so rich in ornaments, is intended to correspond in taste with them.

About this time, anno 1706, Archbishop Tenison gave the present throne, which is at the east end of these seats, on the south side, the expence of it being 244l. and upwards. The whole is of wainscot, the canopy and its ornaments raised very high on six fluted pillars of the Corinthian order, with proper imposts, and makes a very grand appearance; at the right hand of it is the seat or pew for the Archdeacon. This seat, as well as the throne, are situated, as the former ones had been, in that part of the choir called the presbiterium, or chancel, which is distinguished from the lower part by the two steps above-mentioned, reaching from side to side; the middle stone of the lower one, having a semicircular projection, in which is a square cavity, now filled up, in which the stand was formerly fixed, on which laid the precentor's book when he performed the service of the choir, before the reformation (w).

Westward of these steps the pavement of the choir is of grey marble, in small squares; but eastward to the altar rail it is laid with large slabs of a very different kind of stone, a specimen of which, being a polished piece of this kind of marble laid as a tablet or shelf against the wall, appears near the northern entrance into the choir, perhaps placed there to lay a book on. This piece has so much the appearance of the grain of wood, that it has been judged by some to be a petrification; but when the new pavement of marble was laid at the altar, and many stones of this kind were taken up to make room for it, this notion appeared to be a mistaken one, and many of them were found capable of a polish, little inferior to agate, the edges in curious strata and the tops of them beautifully clouded. The connoisseurs have called them by different names, some antique alabaster agate; others, the Sicilian, and the Egyptian agate, and Dr. Pocock the oriental traveller, diaspro fiorito, the flowered jasper.

In the middle space of the choir, for the illuminating of it on Sundays and festivals, there hang two handsome brass sconces, of twenty-four lights each; that towards the west has on it the

(w) These steps, when the above alterations and improvements were made, were removed a little more towards the east, as they remain at present; in the doing of which, numbers of pieces of lead, which had seemingly been melted, were found under the stones, supposed by Mr. Gosling to be some of the lead, which being melted, fell down from the roof of the church, when the choir was burned down in 1174, and had made its way, through the extreme heat of the fire, into the joints of the pavement.

CATHEDRAL.

arms of Aucher, impaling Herwytt, being the gift of sir Anthony Aucher, of Bishopborne, bart. who died in 1692. The other has on it the arms of Tenison, and this inscription; the gift of Dr. Edward Tenison, Archdeacon of Carmarthen, Anno Dom. MDCCXXVI. (x)

The ascent to the altar is by a flight of six steps, reaching from side to side within the altar-rails, the height of which has a fine and noble effect.

The present altar-piece was erected soon after the year 1729, from a design of sir James Burrough abovementioned; it is of the Corinthian order, very lofty and well executed, and makes a very grand and magnificent appearance; the expence of it was defrayed out of a legacy of 500*l.* left in 1729, by the will of Dr. John Grandorge, to be laid out on the church, and was afterwards employed to this purpose. At the same time, a handsome wainscotting was carried on from the altar-piece to the two side doors of the choir, in a taste designed to distinguish this part, being the presbiterium or chancel, from the rest of the choir.

To this benefaction, another of 200*l.* was added in 1732, from which a new pavement of black and white marble, in a fancied pattern, was made, beginning at the altar-rail, which is of wainscot with balustrades handsomely carved, at six or seven feet from which was carried on the noble flight of steps of veined white marble, reaching the whole breadth of the place; above these the pavement is continued in a pattern suitable to that below them, over the whole flat space on which the altar stands, being of the breadth of near 20 feet.

On the front of the upper step, the memory of the donor of this pavement is recorded, by

(x) Dr. Tenison was a Prebendary of this church at that time, and was afterwards Bishop of Ossory in Ireland.

(y) Mrs. Nixon was the widow of Dr. Thomas Nixon, Prebendary of this church; she died in 1731, and was buried in the body of it. Mr. Herbert Randolph, her nephew, to whose disposal her legacy, given in the codicil to her will, was left, determined to have it a distinct expence, and to compleat it himself if his aunt's money should fall short of it; this proved to be the case, and the finishing of it cost him 30*l.*

(z) There was once a large sun or glory, gilded, having in the middle the letters I. H. S. set up on high, supported by cherubims with expanded wings, painted and gilt, over this screen of the altar, but taken down, because it gave offence, long before the skreen was removed, but when, is not known; it now lies in the small chapel on the side of K. Henry IV.'s tomb. It has already been observed from Gervas, that at the east corner of the high altar, were fixed two pillars of wood, beautified with silver and gold, upon which was laid a beam adorned with gold, upon which were placed the glory (Majestas Dei) the images of St. Dunstan and St. Alpbage, and seven chests or coffers, overlaid with gold, full of the relics of many saints. The above cannot possibly be the glory which Gervas mentions, and have laid here ever since the reformation.

this inscription, In honorem DEI hoc pavimento LEGAVIT DOROTHEA NIXON, 1732; to this her executor, Mr. Randolph, was a contributor (y).

In the centre of the above skreen, between the pillars, is a circular arch in the wainscot, which was filled up as a blank space. This was afterwards ornamented with a large piece of crimson velvet, in a carved and gilt frame, placed in it over the altar, from a gift of Archbishop Herring of 50*l.* to be laid out on the church; since which a still further improvement has been made to this skreen, which has a very beautiful effect, by laying open this part of it and filling it with plate glass, framed in copper, gilt; by which means there is a fine prospective view thro' it, quite from the western extremity of the church, of the eastern part of it, being the Trinity chapel, with the circular pillars round it, and the several tombs between them, terminated by Becket's crown, and the fine painted windows at the eastern extremity of the whole. The former altar-piece, which was in the Gothic taste, richly carved and ornamented, of the colours of blue and gold, now forms the back part of the present new skreen (z).

The altar itself is of wainscot, being, except when the sacrament is made at it, very plain and undressed, having on it only a crimson velvet cloth and cushions, fringed with a gold border; a present made to the church, as was the furniture of the Archbishop's throne, the Dean's and the Vice-Dean's stalls, by Q. Mary, wife of King William III., when she visited this church; but on a Sunday, when this altar is dressed up for the sacrament, and covered with its costly and splendid service of rich plate (a); it has, though perhaps, and indeed most likely far inferior to its

(a) One piece of the church plate is a beautiful cup adorned with the figures of a lion and a horse, being the supporters of the Duke of Norfolk's arms, and of a talbot, the Earl of Shrewsbury's, with this inscription under the foot of it; Thomas Howardus seneris: Mag. Brit. regis ad Cæsarem legatus hac transiens 7 Aprilis, 1636. Votivum hunc callicem Deo. Opt. Max. humillime obtulit, altariq; hujus ecclesie Cathedralis sacrandum reliquit. This shews it to have been the votive gift of Thomas Howard, then Earl of Arundel, who married the daughter and coheir of Gilbert Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, ambassador from K. Cha. I. to the Emperor, on his passage through this city at the time abovementioned. This chalice or cup is very elegantly finished, and probably had a cover equally so, but it has long since been missing.

In 1756, there was received from the executors of Philip Bestock Weston, of Bestock in co. Berks, esq; in pursuance of his will, dated in 1727, the legacy of 40 marcs (26*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*) to be laid out in buying plate for the altar of this church, with which two very handsome patens of silver gilt, for the sacramental bread were bought; at the same time all the rest of the plate (except the two great candlesticks) was new gilt; which altogether make a very handsome and splendid appearance.

former

CATHEDRAL.

former state abovementioned, before the reformation, an appearance of grandeur and magnificence that blots from the mind, as far as possible, a regret for its having been bereaved of its former ornaments.

Behind this skreen of the high altar, after the further ascent of several steps, is the chapel of the Trinity, where there is a circle of tombs of royal and illustrious persons; and adjoining the north wall over-against the monument of K. Henry IV. and his queen, is the small elegant chapel, built for a chantry for two priests to celebrate for his soul according to his will, soon after his burial, about the year 1412; in the centre of this chapel of the Trinity was once the most glorious sight throughout the whole church, namely, the shrine of St. Thomas the Martyr. According to Erasmus, it was a cover of wood, which inclosed a coffin of gold, which when drawn up by ropes and pulleys, discovered an invaluable treasure, gold being the meanest thing to be seen there; all shined and glittered with the rarest and most precious jewels of an extraordinary bigness, some being larger than a goose's egg; when this sight was shewn, the prior, who was always present, touched every jewel with a white wand, one by one, telling the name, the value and the donor of it (b); but this place, as well as the other parts of the church, was despoiled of all its riches and ornaments at the reformation, in K. Henry VIII.'s reign (c). Beyond this chapel is the vertex of the whole building, called Becket's crown, in which, says Erasmus, was to be seen the whole face of the blessed martyr (d), set in gold and adorned with many jewels, which have all, as well as the altar on which it lay, been long since removed. This part of the building or chapel, as it might be called, was to the intent of the first founders of it compleat, when built as high as the vaulting over the first range of windows in it. The monks at the time of the dissolution were going on, in honour of St. Thomas, to advance this building still higher, and had compleated another story or range of windows above these, and the half way of those for another above them (e); but their fall at that time put an end to their further progress in the work, in which unfinished state it continued till of very late years, when the upper imperfect part was taken down in 1748, the expence being paid out of part of a benefaction given by Captain Humphry Pudner, of this city, and a kind of battlements placed on the top of it, but of so uncouth a form, that it is now nearly as great a blemish and eyesore as it was before in its former unfinished state.

THE ISLES on each side of the choir, with the buildings contingent to them, seem all that remain undescribed of this church. The outside walls of these isles seem by all appearance to have been those which remained unhurt by the fire which destroyed this church in the year 1174, an. 20 Henry II, and to have been altered, as far as possible, to the purpose of the new building; in the middle of them are two cross isles, with two circular porticos on the eastern side of each; these have all been chapels, and have had altars in them; some appearances on the walls of their having been so, are still to be seen. In the north portico of the north wing, was the altar of St. Martin, and in the window over it there still remains his figure on horseback, cutting off part of his cloak to cover a naked beggar; at the end of this wing the range of small arches and marble pillars make a like number of stalls, like those in the chapter-house, only more diminutive, having a bench of stone covered with boards, to sit on, all along; one of these stalls, being that at the east end, is distinguished from the rest, by being raised a step higher, and boarded at the back and sides, so as to form an armed chair; such a bench is also on the west side of this wing, answering that in the opposite cross isle. Above these cross isles are two towers, with pointed turrets, the one dedicated to St. Andrew, the other to St. Anselm; these have much ornamental carve work on them, with many small pillars and intersected arches over them, and are seemingly as antient as any part of the church.

Above the southern tower is a small chapel, called St. Anselm's chapel likewise, the monuments in all which, together with those in the other parts of the church, will be mentioned together below. Before St. Anselm's burial in it, this chapel appears to have been known by the name of St. Peter and St. Paul; the great south

(b) Erasmii Colloq; Peregrinatio Religionis Ergo. Bately's Somner, p. 125.

(c) The pavement in this chapel, round the place where the above shrine once stood, has many circular stones laid in it, with figures very rudely designed and executed, of the signs of the Zodiac and other fancies of the workmen, and besides these, a curious and beautiful Mosaic, which having suffered much by the superstition of some, and the destructive curiosity of others, was some years since in part repaired.

(d) This plainly contradicts what Mr. Somner tells us from Stow's Annals of K. Henry VIII, viz. that when by order of Lord Cromwell, Becket's bones were taken out of the iron chest, which contained them, in order to burn them to ashes; the skull and all, with the piece which had been cut out of it, laid in the wound, was there found in it. But this latter part of them is said to have been placed on this altar, and to be that which is as above taken notice of by Erasmus.

(e) Two large newel staircases of stone, in the inside of this chapel, lead up to the top of this building, and were probably intended, besides leading to the several stories, to end at two handsome spires or turrets.

window,

CATHEDRAL.

window of which, was new made in the year 1336, at the charge of 42l. 17s. 2d. (f)

Over this chapel is a room, a closet to which has a window looking into the choir with an iron grate; the only conjecture for the use of it seems to be, that it was made use of as a place of confinement for such monks as had committed irregularities; the grated window towards the choir, as there was a view of the high altar from it, seems to have been made that those confined here might be eye witnesses of those sacred solemnities, which they were excluded from joining in, and might from it have a view of the elevation of the host (g).

At this chapel may be seen how the east end of the old church began to contract itself towards the circular form, in which it was finished, and especially at the ascent to the chapel of the Holy Trinity, which was added after the fire, and begins at a small distance eastward from hence.

At the upper end of the north isle, on the north side, is a new built room, called the Audit-room, to which the Dean and Chapter adjourn after having first begun their chapter annually in the ancient Chapter-house of the Priory, and where they hold their audits and transact their other occasional business; adjoining to this is an ancient room built of stone and vaulted at top, now called the Treasury, formerly the great Armory, so called to distinguish it from the vault called the lesser Armory, under the high altar; in the former all the ancient charters and records of the church are kept, in large wooden lockers, made in the shape of cofes, in which, as we may no doubt judge from thence, those sort of vestments were formerly kept. The adjoining room, of like construction, is now called the Vestry, being made use of for such purposes when the Dean and Prebendaries meet to robe and unrobe before and after Divine Service, but formerly the Sacristy (b). Erasmus, on being led to this room exclaims, "Good God! what an incredible number of rich embroidered vestments of silk and velvet, was to be seen there! How many candlesticks of gold! There we saw the pastoral staff of St. Thomas. It seemed to be a cane covered over with a thin plate of silver, very light, plain and no longer than to reach from the ground to the girdle." (i)

(f) Battely, part ii, p. 25; and the particulars of the expence of it, appendix, ibid. Numb. 1.^b

(g) The room is pretty large, and has light enough. It has a chimney and an oven; so it should seem, that those confined here were to dress such provisions for themselves, as the convent was pleased to allow them; from this room there is a door into a platform, for them to have the benefit of the fresh air and exercise.

(b) The Vestry-room was the old chapel of St. Andrew, adjoining to which on the north side is the Treasury; over these are several rooms, some of which have chimnies in them, probably for the melting of the wax, lead and such

There are very few parts of this church, in which the windows have not been adorned in the most costly and beautiful manner with painted glass; and as this art became more and more known, we may well suppose, the monks, who spared no expence in embellishing their church by all the means they could think of, embraced this opportunity likewise of adding from time to time to the richness and grandeur of it; and although many of these windows have been totally destroyed, and others much defaced, yet there are still sufficient remaining to make us regret those lost, and to convince us of the beautiful and grand appearance the whole must have made when in compleat preservation; those still remaining are not a few, and are deservedly admired for the richness and brilliancy of their colours, and the variety and elegance of the Mosaic grounds and borders of them.

The buildings on the north side of the church have, in some measure, preserved the windows there from that destruction which those on the south have suffered from a mischievous enmity to whatever could be come at, either beautiful or elegant, in this church, from an idea of its being the remnant of popery and superstition, and that the destruction of it was a meritorious service to Protestantism. The designers of these windows, to shew the luxuriance of their fancies, formed their historical pieces in small portions, fitted to the iron framings of such various patterns, that hardly any two windows were alike.

Mr. Somner has given us an account of the subjects and inscriptions round the pictures of 12 of them; the principal remains of which have been collected and put together in the two, near the door of the former organ loft in the north isle, making two beautiful compleat windows of the larger size. These appear to have been in the same stile of painting with those in Becket's chapel.

The choice of subjects for the painter was made, by collecting two or three histories in scripture, in which it was thought there was some typical resemblance; or by annexing some allegorical picture to some one historical; and accordingly the inscription under or about a picture, does not always belong to that, but in other like uses that required the heat of fire. The Audit room, westward from the vestry, was built about 70 years since, in the room of the ancient one; in this room was a portrait of the founder of the present establishment, Henry VIII. and of K. Charles I, both lately removed; and there is one of Dr. Lyndford Caryl, deceased, late master of Jesus College, Cambridge, and a Prebendary of this church, a person to whom the body is much indebted for his indefatigable care and industry in the regulation and improvement of their estates.

(i) Erasmii Colloq; ut supra. Battely's Somner, p. 93.

CATHEDRAL.

part or on the whole to those which correspond with it (k).

The uppermost range of windows in that additional height, which was given to the eastern parts of this church after the fire in 1174, are in a different style from those already mentioned; these contain two figures only in each of them, of a large size; in those the figures are small and the compartments numerous. The range of these begins over the north side of the choir, and runs from the north-eastern corners of the great tower round the cross isles and the Trinity chapel, and back again to the great tower on its south-eastern corner; the subject of them seems to be the genealogy of our Blessed Saviour. The upper half of the first window, beginning at the north-west corner of the choir, is quite defaced; probably it had a figure representing the Almighty, which occasioned its demolition; the lower has the figure of Adam in his husbandry work, with his name to it. Several of the rest are without figures, and some with carpet patterns of most beautiful colours; but where any are remaining, the style in which they are drawn, and the thrones on which they are placed, much resemble those of the Kings, on the reverse of their earliest royal seals; they are in number 49 in the whole, including two large circular windows at the end of the two cross isles or wings (l). The upper range of windows in the western part of both isles, having been entirely demolished, have been since filled up with fragments from other places, and however beautiful the colours may be, there is no making out what they are intended to represent; the lower range of windows in the cross isles have only borders round them, with some few coats of arms interspersed; among these in the north wing are two modern ones of Dean Nevil, with its quarterings, and of Archdeacon Kingsley.

The range of large windows in the Trinity chapel and in Becket's crown, appears by the remains of them to have been finely painted; they were designed to represent the passion of St. Thomas, with the story of his miracles. The figures are small, and so are the pannels that contain them, which with the iron work fitted to them, are contrived with a still greater variety of patterns than those hitherto mentioned, though much of the painted glass, especially on the north side of this chapel, is still remaining, yet great part has been destroyed; and though the windows in Becket's crown appear at a little distance entire, yet they have suffered in many places and have been but very awkwardly mended.

To proceed now to the windows in the western part of the church; the great window over the western entrance into the nave, was made in the latter part of the reign of K. Richard II, anno 1400; it is in the Gothic style, quite different in taste from those abovementioned, being mitred at top and very large, with abundance of compartments in several stories or stages, one above another, divided by jambs of stone work, and each finished at top in form of the niches of that order.

The uppermost stage or compartment, which is close under the point of the mitred arch, contains the arms of K. Rich. II, who having chosen Edward the Confessor for his patron, impaled his coat. The second range contains six small figures between the arms of his first wife, on the north, and those of his second on the south. The third stage has ten saints. The fourth has twelve saints, with a youth kneeling and censuring on the south side, and another kneeling figure on the north. Below these in the uppermost range of the large compartments, are seven large figures of our Kings standing under Gothic niches, very highly wrought; they are bearded, have open crowns on their heads, and swords or sceptres in their right hands. They represented Canute, Edward the Confessor, Harold, William the Conqueror, William Rufus, Henry I, and Stephen. They have suffered much, and have been patched up again; and each had his name under him in the old black letter, of which there are very little remains.

The tops of the canopies are all that are left of the fourteen niches, of which the two next stages consist. The workmanship of this window is much inferior to those which have been already mentioned, nor are the colours near so rich and beautiful.

The compartments of the windows in both ranges on the sides of the nave, have each a slender border, of no meaning and as little beauty; in the midst of each throughout the whole, is a shield of arms. The two large windows in the lower north and south wings have already been mentioned, the one being the costly gift of K. Edward IV. the other a late collection of painted glass of various subjects, no ways relating one to the other, taken principally from different parts of the church.

(k) The figures in both these windows have been thought worth observing, on account of the resemblance, which the drapery of the figures bears to that in the famous hangings said to have been embroidered by the sister of William the Conqueror, and perhaps still preserved at Bayeux in Normandy; of which prints have been given by Montfaucon in France, and Dr. Ducarel and others in England; and these we may suppose to have been the dress of the times. Mr. Gosling, p. 314, has given the subject of Scripture history, in each of these pictures, with the inscriptions under them.

(l) Mr. Gosling has given a particular description of all these windows, with a scheme annexed for the better understanding of it. See his Walk, p. 324 et seq.

The eastern window in the Dean's chapel, besides some shields of arms of the family of Bourcbier, is diapered with an oak leaf between two acorns, and Bourcbier's knots; and in the upper part are impannelled in rounds a golden falcon volant. In the eastern window of St. Michael's chapel, in the opposite wing, is in similar rounds, the devise of Margaret Holand, whose magnificent monument, erected by herself, is in the middle of this chapel, being a white hind couchant, gorged with a golden coronet and chain, under a tree, the devise of her grandmother Joan, Countess of Kent, wife of Edward the Black Prince, and mother of K. Richard II. Another device in the same window is a white greyhound couchant, gorged with a golden coronet and chain, under a tree. The other parts of the window are filled with scrolls containing the words A Jhu Mercy, in old English letters. These are all the windows worth notice throughout this church, the others having in them either small fragments of painted glass, or pieces put together by way of patchwork, without any relation to each other, and as such of no account.

THE NUMBER of altars in this church, as well above as in the undercroft, before the reformation, was very considerable, amounting at least to 38, in different parts of it. This appears to have originated from a custom, which seems to have come from undefiled Christianity, of burying the remains of the bodies of eminent saints, especially martyrs, under those stones upon which the eucharist was celebrated (m); the first and true intent of which was, to preserve a due reverence for the memories of the saints; even in this church it is to be remembered, that in early days the head of St. Switbin was inclosed in one altar; the head of St. Furseus in another, and the head of St. Austroberta in a third altar; that an altar was built as a repository for the body of St. Wilfred, and another altar was erected at the tomb of St. Dunstan; but superstition in process of time transgressed all bounds of honour and respect due to the memory and relics of holy persons, by framing litanies, supplications and prayers to the saints for the sake of their merits, and by erecting numbers of altars furnished with relics, which were strong invitations to every one to bring their oblations to those altars.

Hence a superfluity of altars abounded in great churches, but notwithstanding this, there still was a regard to unity, for there was one altar called the high or chief altar, to which the rest were subordinate; at this altar the public

(m) Thorndike, Epist. p. 254. Battely, pt. ii, p. 25.

(n) On searching the graves and moving the remains of those antiently buried in this nave, for new making the ground to lay the present new pavement on, it was then found, that this was not the first time these depositories of mass was daily celebrated, at the other altars private masses were occasionally performed. All these superfluous altars were abolished at the reformation, and according to the primitive rule, the high altar alone was left, at which the sacred mysteries of religion have ever since, and are now celebrated free from all abuses of superstition.

Those which have been demolished, have been most of them mentioned in the description of this church, in the former pages of this book, as have the several places where they stood, and the respective saints to whom they were dedicated.

THE MEASUREMENT of the whole building of this cathedral, is as follows: Feet.

Length from the east to west within side	514
Length of the choir	180
Breadth of the choir from pillar to pillar	40
Length of the nave to the foot of the steps	178
From thence to the skreen at the entrance of the choir	36
Breadth of the nave and side isles	71
Height of it to the vaulted roof	80
Lower cross isles from north to south in length	124
Upper cross isles from north to south	154
Height of the Oxford steeple	130
Height of the Arundel steeple	100
Height of the spire formerly on it	100
Height of the great tower called Bell Harry tower	235
Height of the great tower within to the vaulting	130
Area of the great tower	35 by 35
Vaulting of the choir from the pavement	71
Vaulting of the chapel behind the altar	58
Square of the cloysters	134

THE ACCOUNT of MONUMENTS and GRAVESTONES, throughout this church, has been purposely reserved to mention them in this place altogether, that the description of the fabric might not be interrupted by the recital of such a number of them; many of them in the nave and martyrdom had been curiously and richly inlaid with ornaments and inscriptions on brass, but all of them have been long since defaced and the brasses purloined from them.

Mention has been made above, that on the new paving of the nave a few years ago, the several gravestones and tombs in it were removed elsewhere (n); the antient ones, especially of the the dead had been disturbed, for every coffin and grave had been opened and ransacked, most probably in the time of the great rebellion, by the Puritans, partly out of enmity to the place, but principally in search of whatever of value might have been deposited in them.

Arch-

CATHEDRAL,

Archbishops and the Priors, to make good the pavement of the sermon-house, and the modern ones to the lower south wing or cross isle. For the inscriptions on the several brasses throughout this church, we are principally indebted to Weever and Somner, as we are to Battely and Dart for the later memorials, each of whom have respectively preserved the memory of such as remained in their times (o); from them we learn that of those in the nave the lowermost gravestone, in the middle space being one of a much larger size than usual, having been richly inlaid with brass, with the portrait of a Bishop in his robes, and an inscription likewise, was for John Bokingham, Bishop of Lincoln, who died in K. Richard II.'s reign, about the year 1397, having resigned his bishopric and become a monk of this priory, where he died (p).

Some little distance higher was an inscription in French, with the figure of a knight in armour and shields of arms, for sir William Septvans, knt. who died the last day of August 1407 (q). Near it was an inscription in Latin with the figures of a knight and his wife, with their shields of arms, for sir William Septvans, knt. who died March 4, anno 1448, and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of sir John Pesche, knt. who died March 28 following, and these verses, Sum quod eris, volui quod vis, credens quasi credis.

Vivere forte diu, max ruo morte specu

Cessi quo nescis, nec quomodo, quando sequeris.

Hinc simul in caelis ut simus quoque proceris.

(o) See Weever's Funeral Monuments, p. 234. Battely's Somner, appendix, Numb. xxxii.

(p) He was in that reign keeper of the Privy Seal, and afterwards Bishop of Lincoln, whence, in 1397, Pope Boniface IX., bearing him some grudge, translated him by force to Litchfield, a bishopric of much inferior value, which he refused to accept, and choosing rather a retired monastic course of life, he became a monk of this church, where he spent the remainder of his days, living here 24 weeks at his own costs, and dying in the Prior's lodgings, called the Master Honours. By his will he gave several legacies, viz. to the church, to the Prior Thomas Chillenden, and to every monk. He appointed that one hundred pence should be given to 100 poor people, to every one a penny annually, on the anniversary of his death, for ever; he appointed the above Prior his executor, who out of his goods, which were sold, purchased ornaments and vestments for this church, to the value of 240l. the particulars of which are recited in the obituary. He appointed to be buried towards the lower end of the nave of this church, having made an agreement, as appears by the records of it, with the Prior and Convent, to build him with all convenient speed, a chantry chapel near his sepulture, but it is not known whereabouts. See pat. 1 Hen. IV. p. v. mxxvi. When the present new pavement was made, his skeleton was found entire, but nothing else, nor any part of his coffin remaining. William Haukyn, chaplain of the chapel of John Bokingham, died in 1468; and Robert Burton, another of the chaplains, in 1488, and desired to be buried in the place where the rest of the chaplains were usually buried.

Not far from thence an inscription in Latin, with a figure of a man and shield of arms, for Odomar Hengham, esq; who died April 4, 1411 (r).

Nearer the south side an inscription in Latin on a large grey stone, with the figure of a knight and his shields of arms, for the most noble sir John Guildford, knt. one of the councillors of K. Henry VII. He died July 19, anno 8 Henry VII, 1493.

Near the above an inscription in Latin, with the figures of a man in long robes, and a woman and shields of arms, for William Brucbelle, sive Brencbley, formerly Justice of the Common Pleas, who died in Holborne, in the suburb of London, May 20, 1446, and Joane his wife, who died August 8, 1453 (s).

Not far from the above, an inscription in English, and figure of a man in a long gown, for Edmund Haut, esq; who died in 1488.

Nearer the north side, an inscription and figure of a knight with shields of arms, as follows:

Thomas Fogge, jacet hic, jacet hic sua sponsa Johanna,

Sint celo cives per te Deus hos et Osanna;

Regni Protector Francos Britones superavit

Nobilium rector sicuti Leo Castra precepsit

Et quoque Militiam sic pro patria peramavit

Ad summan patriam deus hunc ab agone vocavit (t).

In the north isle of the nave was an inscription in Latin, and the figure of a priest in his long robes, for Master Richard Willeford, once chaplain of the chantry of Arundell, who died in 1520.

(q) This sir William Septvans, says Weever, p. 234, served in the wars of France, under K. Edward III. It appears by his will in the Consistory Court of Canterbury, that his residence was at Milton near Canterbury, and that which was very remarkable, he gave manumission to divers of his slaves and natives.

(r) Weever says, he dwelt at Coxsted in Stockbury.

(s) See an account above of the chantry chapel, built for him, adjoining the south side of the nave, not far from his place of burial, afterwards called Dean Nevil's chapel. By his will he gave to the fabric of this church roof.

(t) By his will in the Consistory of Canterbury, anno 1407, he gave ten marks to the work of this church; and it is recorded in the obituary, that sir Thomas Fogge gave 20l. sterling, towards the new chapter-house; and his wife gave 20d. to each monk in the convent. She was descended from the royal blood of the Kings of England, being daughter of sir Stephen De Valence, who was descended from William De Valence, Earl of Pembroke, half-brother by the mother to K. Henry III. She died July 8, 1425.

The shield of arms of this sir Thomas Fogge, carved and painted on wood, hung till of late on the pillar of the nave, next his place of burial. William Fogg, of St. Elphes gent. was buried here in 1525; and as by his will he expresses it, near his ancestors. He gave by it to the bell-ringers of Christ church, for the peles, and for the making of his poole 3s. 4d. He left an infant son Francis by Katherine his wife.

Another

CATHEDRAL.

Another for Robert Clifford, esq; brother to Rich. Clifford, Bishop of London, who died March 9, 1422; and another for sr William Arundell, knt. Justice of our Lord the King.

At the upper end of the nave, between the pillars, were three large handsome raised tombs of Petworth marble, all richly inlaid with brasses; the one on the north side having had the portrait of an Archbishop in his pontifical dress, for Archbishop Islip, who died in 1366; the lower one on the south side having a like portraiture and ornaments on it, for Archbishop Wittlesey, who died in 1374. The tomb above this last, having had an inscription and portraits of a man in long robes, and a woman, for William Lovelace, sergeant at law, and high steward of the liberties of Christ church, and of Anne his first wife; he died anno 1576.

At the upper end of the middle space near the steps leading to the choir, there were several large gravestones of marble, which had been laid over priors of this church, and two over Archbishops, as appeared by the marks remaining on them, each having been richly ornamented with brasses, having their portraits in their pontifical habits, shields of arms, &c. (u)

Weever mentions (v) a monument erected here to the memory of that valiant knight sr William Molineux, of Seston in Lancashire, knt. who at the battle of Nauarret in Spain, was made knight banneret by Edward the Black Prince, anno 1367, under whose command he served likewise for a long time in the wars of France, whence returning home, he died in Canterbury, anno 1372, and was buried here; but even the place where the monument stood has been long since unknown.

John Monins, of Swanton, esq; by his will proved in 1568, directed to be buried in the parish church of Waldersbare, and that there should be bestowed towards the rearing of a convenient tomb of stone, in the sheere church of this county, as a monument of him, the sum of 100 marcs.

Somner mentions several gravestones in the nave of this church, the particular places of which are unknown; these were of the prebendaries Myllys and Gardiner, formerly monks of this priory, and named prebendaries in the foundation charter of this church; of Thomas Hoo the younger, of Canterbury, anno 1407; of Alderman Dobbs, anno 1580; of the Lady Crook, wife of sr Gerard Crook, knt. anno 1579; besides which, be

(u) It may be observed, that the grave-stones of the Priors are easily to be distinguished from those of the Archbishops though their mitres, robes, &c. from the marks on them where the brass was formerly inlaid, plainly appear to have been similar; those of the latter, having in their hands a staff, with a plain cross formee at the top; whereas says, there were several others, which being mostly of mean and obscure persons, he did not think them worthy to mention.

To the above may be added, the memorials on gravestones of Adrian Saravia, prebendary of this church, and his first wife Catherine D'Allix; he died in 1612, at 82; she in 1605, having been married fifteen years; his monument will be mentioned below; of John Sandford, prebendary, who died in 1629, at 60; of one for Nicholas, John and Nicholas Sympson, grandfather, father and son; the first and the last of them both S. T. P. and prebendaries of this church; the one died 1630, at 51; the other in 1609, at 60. The son being bred a merchant, on the raging of the civil war, retired into the country, where he died in 1680, at 58.

Dart has added these more modern ones, since defaced, and removed with the others. In the south isle before the chapel door of the Newils, surrounded by antient defaced gravestones, a blue one for Jacob de Prez, D. D. obt. 1717, at 83, and for Mary his wife, obt. . . . and Anne their daughter, obt. 1718, at 37; near it another for Mrs. Elizabeth Henstridge, wife of Mr. Daniel Henstridge, organist, obt. 1715; one for John Elliot, gentleman, obt. 1656, at 67. Some gravestones over several children of Herbert Randolph, esq; and one for Elizabeth, daughter of John Best, esq; and widow of Herbert Randolph, esq; by whom she left issue, Herbert, Anne, Eliz. and Dorothy, obt. 1697, at 65.

In the north isle a stone and inscription for Master Hurst, gentleman, and Lucie his wife; she died in 1679, at 59; he died 1680, at 69; another for Charlotte-Mary, and Catherine, the daughters of Dr. Thomas Green, archdeacon and prebendary of Canterbury, and of Catherine his wife; Charlotte, obt. 1710, at 15; and Catherine in 1717, at 9; another for Sarah, wife of Matthew Griffith, D. D. chaplain to K. Charles I. and daughter of Richard Smith, D. D. chaplain to Q. Anne, and had five sons and five daughters, whereof three only survived her, viz. Sarah Edwards, Elizabeth Napier, and Mary Woolryche, obt. 1677, at 80; one for Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. Austen, rector of Aldington, obt. 1634, at 17; one for Walter Knight, A. M. minister of the gospel, afternoon lecturer on the Lord's day, in this place; another for Robert, son of Robert, the only son surviving of Dr. Isaac Bargrave, late Dean of Canterbury, obt. August 28, 1659, at 5 years, and lies amidst the ashes of those of the former had in theirs, a pastoral staff with an ornamented crook. Leland, in his Itin. vol. vi, says, "these high tumbs of Bishops be in the body of the church, " Simon Iselepe, Whitelessey, Arundel."

(v) Funeral Monuments, p. 234.

CATHEDRAL.

his father, brothers John, Isaac and Henry, and his sister Jane.

*Farewell, sweet boy, and farewell all in thee,
Blest parents can in their best children see;
Thy life to woove us unto heaven was lent us,
Thy death to wean us from the world is sent us.*
Also for Isaac Bargrave, his brother, obt. 1663; one for Robert Sprakeling, gent. eldest son of Robert Sprakeling and Rebecca his wife, obt. 1673, æt. 30, and for Rebecca, daughter of Adam Sprakeling, gent. and Hester his wife, obt. 1694, æt. 14, and for Robert and Rebecca Sprakeling; she was the daughter of Richard Lamynge, gent. by whom he had two sons, Robert and Adam; he died in 1687, æt. 78; she died in 1706, æt. 84; one for Dr. John Aucher, prebendary, obt. 1700, æt. 82; for William, son of Robert Laws, gent. obt. 1634, æt. 14; for Mrs. Elizabeth Dodsworth, obt. 1702, æt. 18; for Nicholus Wooton, organist, obt. 1700, æt. 32; for Francis Barton, esq. obt. 1639, æt. 71; for John Allen, gent. son of Christopher Allen, of Borden, gent. obt. . . .; for Peter and Thomas Nowel, sons of Thomas Nowel, of the town and port of Sandwich, gent. the former died in 1709, æt. 19; the latter in 1711, æt. 27; and one for three infant children of Gilbert Burroughs, rector of Kingston, and Margaret his wife. In the middle space, a gravestone for Nathaniel Herring, esq. a native of Jamaica, obt. 1716, æt. 31; for Theodorus Beacon, M. D. and his unmarried daughter Elizabeth; his age was 65; hers 30; he died 1729.

The modern gravestones, of later date, which were removed to the south crose-istle, were mostly in memory of the several prebendaries and of their families; the former of which will be taken notice of in the account of them, in the further part of this work below.

There are some few mural tablets against the sides of the nave, viz. against the north wall for Thomas Sturman, auditor of this church, who died in 1632, which being almost obliterated, was replaced by Dr. John Bargrave, vice-dean, in 1679; for Orlando Gibbons, of Cambridge, organist of the royal chapel to K. Charles I; who came to Canterbury, to attend the solemnity of that prince's marriage with Q. Henrietta Maria, but died here of the small-pox, on Whitsunday, 1625, æt. 45 (w). This monument, which has his bust on it, was erected by his widow Elizabeth, by whom he had seven children; for William Gardiner, prebendary, obt. 1544 (x); for Adrian Saravia, prebendary, erected to his memory by his second wife Margaret Wilts, who survived him; he died in 1612; the inscription on his gravestone has been mentioned above; for John Turner, S. T. P. canon of Lincoln, and prebendary of Canterbury; he married Sarah Tucker, a clergyman's daughter in Suffolk, by whom he had one son and two daughters; he died in 1720, æt. 61; for Richard Colfe, prebendary, S. T. P. who died in 1613, æt. 63; a very handsome monument for sir John Boys, knt. having his effigies habited in his doctor's robes, in a reclining posture, lying on it; he was of the family of Fredville, and was bred to the law; he was steward to five Archbishops of Canterbury; assessor in the court to three wardens of the five ports, recorder of the city of Canterbury, founder of Jesus Hospital in the suburbs; he married two wives, 1st, Dorothy Pawley; 2dly, Jane Walker, but left no child; he died 1612, æt. 77; underneath are the figures of his two wives and of an infant lying in swadling cloaths, on a tablet between them; at top are his arms between those of his two wives. This monument being much abused in the great rebellion, was repaired by his relation Grotius Boys, son of Geoffry, of Beshanger (y); at a small distance is a mural tablet for Dr. Thomas Boys, of Fredville, who married the daughter of Richard Rogers, S. T. P. Dean of Canterbury, and Suffragan to the Archbishop; and likewise for Elizabeth, second daughter of sir William Boys, knt. M. D. great-grandson of the aforesaid Thomas Boys; she died in 1722, æt. 23.

Against the south wall, an oval tablet of white marble for John Porter, of Wandswoth, in co. Surry, esq. he died in 1764, æt. 67; he married Catherine, daughter of lieutenant-general George Sutton, by whom he left one son and five daughters; at the top the arms of Porter, 3 bells and a canton, and at bottom Requiescat in Pace (z); habited; some of the materials of the cloathing remained in small pieces or tatters, seemingly a stuff of gold tissue, and a piece of a leaden plate, on which could be read ARCHIEP. and the word PRIMAS. seemingly very antient; the remaining part of the lead had crumbled away. These, perhaps, were the remains of Archbishop Theobald, who was buried somewhere hereabouts, in the year 1184.

(z) This motto is constantly put on all the monuments and grave-stones in this kingdom, of those of the Roman Catholic persuasion, of which this gentleman was one; seemingly from an apprehension that their remains might be disturbed by the protestants.

(w) The age on his monument is left blank. See an account of him, in Wood's Ath. vol. i. Fasti, col. 222.

(x) By his will he ordered a stone of 40s. value, to be laid over him.

(y) On the removal of the earth for making the new pavement of the nave, the stone coffin under this monument was found with the outward side of it already broken to pieces; in it were three skulls, lying close together at one end and a number of bones in a heap promiscuously in the middle of it. Under the window, eastward, from this monument, there was found lying on the foundation, which about three feet under the surface projected like a shelf, a skeleton, the body of which had been to all appearance richly

CATHEDRAL.

Another like tablet for Richard Cope Hopton, esq., of these precincts, who died in 1786, æt. 73; and further on an elegant monument of sculpture, in white marble, executed by Rysbrack, for John Sympson, esq.; the only surviving son of John Sympson, of the profession of the law, the first born of Nicholas Sympson; he studied the liberal arts, and particularly physic, at Merton college, Oxford; he died in 1748, æt. 63. The monument was erected by Mary his surviving widow.

At a little distance eastward from this monument is an antient one against the wall, the letters of which are much defaced by time; at the under part of it there has been seemingly the effigies of one or more persons. The following is the inscription on it.

*He thats imprisoned in this narrow room,
Wer't not for Custom needs nor Verse, nor Tomb;
Nor can from these a Memory be lent
To him who must be his Tombs Monument.
And by the Virtue of his lasting fame,
Must make his Tomb live long, not it his name;
For when this gaudy Monument is gone,
Children of th' unborn world shall spy the stone
That Covers him and to their Fellows cry,
Tis' here, tis' hereabouts BERKELEY does lie,
To build his Tomb then, is not thought so safe
Whose Virtue must outlive his Epitaph (a).*

On the outside of the south wall of the nave, but with a door opening into it till lately, stood Nevil's chapel, formerly Brenchley's chantry, and fitted up by Dean Nevil, about the year 1600, as a place of burial for himself and his relations, as has been already taken notice of above. In this chapel were two handsome monuments; that on the east side consisted of two compartments; under one arch of it was the effigies of Dean Nevill, in his habit, kneeling at a desk, who was buried here in 1615; under the other arch, that of his brother Alexander Nevill, habited in armour, in the like posture; he was the eldest son of Richard Nevill, esq.; by Ann Mantel, daughter of sir Walter Mantel, knt. he died in 1614; opposite was the monument of Richard Nevil, esq.; and Anne his wife, the dean's father and mother, and Thomas Nevil, his uncle, erected in 1599 by the dean; but the dates of the death and age of the Dean, and the age of his brother Alexander, who died in 1614, are on their monument left blanks, as having probably been erected in their lives time, and not inserted afterwards; Richard Nevil, abovementioned, was born in Nottinghamshire, whose father and elder brother were sir Alexander and sir Anthony Nevil, knts. he spent the decline of his life at Canterbury, having married Ann, daughter of sir Walter Mantel, knt. and the lady Margaret (who after sir Walter's death, married sir William Hault, and lastly sir James Hales, knt.) they were all buried in this chapel, which being pulled down and the door into the nave closed up, the bodies now lye in the open church yard, and the monuments, in the removal of them, were broken to pieces and demolished.

In the lower south wing or cross isle, are several modern mural monuments, viz. of Wm Kingsley, archdeacon and prebendary of this church; he married Damaris, daughter of Mr. John Abbot, of Guildford, brother of George, archbishop of Canterbury, by whom he had sixteen children; he died on January 29, 1647, and of Damaris his wife, who survived him, and died on October 30, 1678, æt. 85; another for the famous and learned Meric Casaubon, son of Isaac Casaubon, grandson of Henry Stephens, great-grandson of Robert Stephens; both he and his father Isaac Casaubon having been canons of this church; he died in 1671, æt. 75; one for John Castilion, S. T. P. dean of Rocheſter, and canon of this church, who died Oct. 21, 1688, æt. 75; against the principal pillar are two monumental compartments, one for Mrs. Frances Holcombe, wife of Samuel Holcombe, S. T. P. and prebendary of this church; she was daughter of George Hetherington, of London, gent. and Susan his wife, of the antient family of Wilmer, in the county of York; of four children she bore, Susan died an infant, Frances, Samuel and Ann survived; she died 1725, æt. 62; the other for Samuel Holcombe, S. T. P. abovementioned; he died April 1, 1761, æt. 96; this monument was erected by his children Sam. Holcombe, A. M. prebendary of Worceſter, and Frances; another for Miss Jane Hardres, only daughter of sir Thomas Hardres, knt. King's serjeant at law, and Philadelphia his wife; she died in 1675, æt. 20.

At the corner between the south door and St. Michael's chapel, is a mural monument, for John Battely, S. T. P. rector of Adisham, and canon and archdeacon of this church and diocese. He died in 1708, æt. 61. On the other side of the entrance into the above chapel, against the corner pillar, is a marble monument of two compartments, for Herbert Randolph, A. M. eldest son of Herbert Randolph, of this city, esq. and Mary his wife, daughter of John Castilion, dean of Rocheſter. He married Catherine, daughter of Edward Wake, S. T. P. prebendary of this church; and after her death, Mary, daughter of Nathaniel Denew, esq. He left by the former, two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth; and died September 1st, æt. 62. He was first of Christ church in Oxford, and then fellow of All Soul's college; afterwards rector of Deal and of Woodchurch, and a six preacher of

(a) In the Prerogative office, Canterbury, I find the will of Robert Berkeley, of Christ church, gen. proved in 1614; but I know not whether it be the same abovementioned.

this

CATHEDRAL.

this cathedral. Dart says, that in this isle were grave-stones for Elizabeth, widow of Thomas Hayman, and Thomas their only son. She died in 1615; he in 1634; for Mrs. Jane Hamand, rest obliterated; for . . . Crisp, citizen of London; for Katherine Sprakeling, the unmarried daughter of Adam Sprakeling, late of Fordwich, esq. deceased, obt. 1632, æt. 21; for . . . Head; for John and Mary, son and daughter of Edward Scott, esq. by Mary, daughter of sir John Hoy, obt. 1653, and died infants; for Catherine, widow of Nicholas Drake, esq. who had by her former husband, William Kingsley, five sons and one daughter, descended from the Totbills, in Devonshire, and was the youngest of thirty-three children, of William Totbill, and survived them all. She died in 1622, æt. 74; for William Kingsley, archdeacon of Canterbury, and prebendary of this church. He married Damaris, daughter of Mr. John Abbot, of Guildford, brother of George, archbishop of Canterbury, by whom he had sixteen children, obt. 1647; also for Damaris his wife, obt. 1678, æt. 85; for Jane Ansell, widow, daughter of Robert Moyle, of Buckwell, esq. obt. 1632;—near St. Michael's chapel, for Wm Belk, S. T. P. prebend of this church, who married Elizabeth, daughter of sir Thomas Hardres, obt. August 12, 1676, æt. 74; also for Thomas Belk, S. T. P. prebendary likewise of this church, son of the former, who married Anne, daughter of sir Henry Oxenden, of Dean, bart. obt. September 17, 1712, æt. 72; for Dr. John Castilion, dean of Rochester and canon of this church, obt. October 21, 1688, æt. 75, and Margaret his wife, obt. 1716, æt. 80; for Mary, widow of Herbert Randolph, esq. and daughter of Dr. Castilion, obt. 1697, æt. 28, and an infant daughter. A small stone for Ursula Horsmonden, obt. 1682; and one for Dudley Jackson, obt. 1616, an infant. These grave-stones have all been removed from their places, and have been intermixed with those removed from the nave, on making the new pavement there and placed here, as has been already noticed above.

Adjoining to the east side of this isle, is St. Michael's, otherwise called the Somerset chapel, entirely filled with sculptured monuments, all which are entire and well preserved, owing to their not being erected to the memories of churchmen; almost a sure destruction to them, in the time of the great rebellion.

(b) In one of the registers of this church, mention is made of the Earl of Somerset's having been admitted during his life time into the fraternity of this convent. He died on April 21st, being Palm Sunday, 1410. Thomas, Duke of Clarence, second son of K. Henry IV. was slain in battle in France, on Easter Eve, 1421, anno 9 Henry V. The Lady Margaret lived to a good old age, and dying a widow on December 31, 1440, was buried here. She erected this monument in her life time for herself and her two husbands. On her head, as well as the Duke's, are ducal coronets; on her robes were depicted the arms of England, within a bordure argent. His arms were depicted on his breast. The Duke of Clarence by his testament, dated July 10, 1417, directed to be buried in this cathedral, at the

In the middle of this chapel is a beautiful and sumptuous raised tomb or monument of alabaster, on which lie, in full proportion, the effigies, excellently sculptured, of Margaret, daughter of Thomas, and sister and coheir of Edmund Holand, both earls of Kent; beside her lye her two husbands: on her left John Beaufort, marquis of Dorset and earl of Somerset; and on her right Thomas Plantagenet, duke of Clarence (b); round the edge of the tomb were these two verses in brass, now worn away:

Hic Jacet in Tumulo Thomas Clar. nunc quasi nullus Qui fuit in Bello Clarus nec clarior ullus.

The mural monuments are; on the left or north side, one for Lieutenant Colonel Prude, slain at the siege of Mastricht, in the Belgic wars, in 1632. On it is his effigies clad in armour kneeling on a cushion on one knee; and underneath these verses:

*Stand Soldiers ere you march, by way of charge
Take an example here, that may enlarge
Your minds to noble Actions. Here in Peace
Rests one whose life was war, whose rich increase
Of Fame and Honor from his valour grew,
Unbegged, unbought; for what he won he drew
By just Desert: having in service been
A Soldier till near Sixty from Sixteen
Years of his active Life: Continually
Fearless of Death, yet still prepar'd to dye
In his religious Thoughts: For midst all Harms
He bore as much of Piety as Arms.*

*Now Soldiers on, and fear not to intrude
The Gates of Death, by th' example of this Prude.*

He married Mary, daughter of sir Adam Spracklin, knt. and had by her four sons and three daughters. His surviving son Searles erected this monument.

Next to this, eastward, is another monument, adorned likewise with much sculpture, for sir Thomas Thornburst, knt. and his lady. He was son of sir Stephen Thornburst, knt. employed in the Dutch, German and Spanish wars, as a general, and was slain in the expedition against the Isle of Rhee, on July 17th, 1627; by Barbara his wife, feet of his father, K. Henry IV. and appointed his executors to purchase the patronage of some church, worth 40l. per ann. and to procure the same to be appropriated to the prior and monks of it, to maintain four secular priests there to celebrate divine service for ever, and named in it K. Henry V. his brother, his next heir. Margaret his wife survived him, by whom he left no issue, but he had one illegitimate son, called John the Bastard of Clarence, who was in the skirmish, in which his father was slain, and recovering his dead body from the enemy, carried it first to the Dutchess, who was then in Normandy, and from thence to Canterbury, where it was interred. See Rym. Fœd. vol. ix, p. 462.

CATHEDRAL.

one of the coheirs of Thomas Shirley, esq. he had three children, Barbara, Anthony and Cecilia. This monument was erected by his widow. On it are their effigies, his, clad in armour, in a reclining posture, holding his shield of arms in his left hand; hers, lying at full length beside him, having a book in her right hand. Underneath are the figures of their three children; above them all is a tablet with these verses:

*Stay Gentle Reader, pass not slightly by,
This Tomb is sacred to the Memory
Of Noble Thornhurst; what he was and who
There is not room enough in me to show,
Nor his brave story out at length to explain
Both Germanies, the New found World and Spain,
Ostends long siege and Newports Battle tried
His worth; at last warring with France he dyed.
His blood sealed that last Conquest, for Black Rhee
Gave him at once a Death and Victory.
His Death as well as Life victorious was Fearing lest Rhee (as might be brought to pass)
By others might be lost in Time to Come
He took possession till the Day of Doom.*

Eastward of the above is another handsome monument, for lady Thornburst, sometime the wife of sir Richard Baker, of Sisinghurst, by whom she had two daughters, the lady Grisogone Lennard and the lady Cicely Blunt. She died in 1609, æt. 60; on it is her effigies lying at full length, her head reclining on her right hand, and in her left a book; above is that of a man kneeling, with his hands joined and uplifted, he is clad in armour with his sword and spurs on. Underneath her figure, on one side the base, is that of Dame Grisogone Lennard; on the other, that of Dame Cicely Blunt, both kneeling in the full dress of the times.

The next monument still further eastward, is that of the lady Dorothy Thornburst, daughter of Roger Drew, of Dentworth, esq. who after the decease of Dr. Hippocrates d'Ossen, a celebrated physician of the illustrious family of Ossen in Holfatia, married a second time to sir Stephen Thornburst, knt. and survived him. She died in 1620, æt. 55. Her niece by the father, Mary Norton, erected this monument; on it is her effigies, kneeling, her hands joined and uplifted as in the attitude of prayer, as large as life, elegantly carved in alabaster; before her is a desk, with a book lying open on it. On the base of the tomb are these verses:

*Si Laudata Venus, Juno, si sacra Minerva,
Quis te collaudet fœmina? talis eras;
Te Te magnanimam, pulchram, Doctamq; Cadentem,
Et talem tantis Dotibus urna teget?*

(c) Leland, in his Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 4, says, "In the Cross Isle that standeth beneath the Degrees of the Quire Southward lye buried in St. Annes Chapel Simon

Spiritus astra ferit, sic inter Sidera Sidus, Cœlicolam recipit Cœlicolûmq; Domus.

At the east end, a handsome one of white marble, for Miss Anne Milles, called the Beauty of Kent, having her bust carved in white marble on it; she was daughter of Samuel Milles, esq. and Anne his wife. She died unmarried on December 23, 1714, æt. 20. On the pavement below is a remarkable antient tomb of stone, coffin shaped, having a cross carved on the top, for Archbishop Stephen Langton; only the head part of it is within the chapel, the wall of which crosses the middle of it, by which it appears that the old chapel, in which it was first erected, was of a larger extent than the present one (c). Next is a mural monument, being a cenotaph, for sir George Rooke, who lies buried in St. Paul's church in Canterbury. On it is placed his bust, dressed in a large full curled wig, after the manner of sir Cloudesly Shovel's, in Westminster Abbey. He was son of sir William Rooke, knt. and Vice-Admiral of England. The French flying from the fight in 1692, he in a open boat, amidst the fire of great and small shot, in the presence of so many French, a deed scarce credible, having first prepared the fire ships, burnt thirteen ships of war near La Hogue; afterwards the difference between the Suedes and Danes being composed, he by his advice left the north in peace and returned southward, where a whole fleet of the enemies conveying ships, were either burnt or taken at Vigo. He safely brought to England the galleons, ships of immense burthen, laden with treasure; and with the utmost integrity lodged the spoils in the public treasury. He took Gibraltar with the fleet in fewer hours than a regular army afterwards in vain besieged it months, and with the same career of success, his navy being much inferior in strength, he put to flight the whole French fleet, which, though well provided, dared not to hazard a battle. He retired after all to his paternal seat near this city, where he died on January 4, 1708, æt. 58; he married three wives; first, Mary Horve, of Cold Berwick, in the county of Wilts; secondly, Mary Lutterell, of Dunster castle, in the county of Somerjet; and thirdly, Catherine Knatchbull, of Mersham Hatch, in Kent; by the second of whom he left George, his only son. This monument was erected by Wm Brodnax and Samuel Milles, esqrs. his executors.

On the south side, a mural monument of alabaster, for sir James Hales, knt. who being appointed treasurer in the expedition to Portugal, and returning from thence, died in 1589; for Alice his widow, who died in 1592; and for Cheney Hales, their only son, who was snatched

"Langhtoun and also another Bishop of Canterbury there lyeth also John Counte of So and another of them with a Lady of Clarence."

away

CATHEDRAL.

away by an untimely death. Richard Lee, esq., the surviving husband of the said Alice, erected this monument. On it, is sculptured a ship on the seas, on the side of which two men are putting down a man in armour, with his hands joined and uplifted, into the sea; underneath which, on the shore, is an elderly man with a beard, in a long loose gown and hood over his head, kneeling on a cushion, his hands joined in the attitude of prayer, before a stone desk, on which lies a book open; in the back ground is a small chapel and a few trees about it. On the side of the desk is a shield, being the arms of Lee, impaling those of Dame Alice Hales; in a compartment underneath, is the effigies of a youth in a cloak, kneeling on a cushion before a stone desk, on which is a book open, his hands joined in the attitude of prayer.

Next to this, in the corner, is a handsome one, with military trophies, for Brigadier Francis Godfrey, groom of the bedchamber to prince George of Denmark, and a colonel in the army. He died of a fever in 1712, æt. 32. His parents erected this monument.

There are two small brass plates fixed to the walls of this chapel; one against the north wall for prior Richard Oxinden, who died in 1338; the other against the south wall for prior Robert Hathbrand, who died in 1370. On each are engraved their figures; they were both buried in this chapel.

At the entrance of this chapel, upon a grave-stone, are the arms of Musgrave, and an inscription to the memory of Mary Musgrave, descended by the mother from the noble family of the Whartons; she died in 1623, æt. 19; and near the foot of the duke of Clarence's monument, a grave-stone for sir Edward Master, knt. eldest son of Jacob Master, of East Langdon, esq. who married Ethelred Streynsham, eldest daughter and coheir of Robert Streynsham, of Ospringe, esq. who having been married forty years, and become the father of fifteen children by her, died on August 11, 1648, æt. 74.

In the opposite or north cross isle, commonly called the Martyrdom, against the north wall is the monument of archbishop Peckham (d), under an arch, which has been adorned with carving and gilding; this is of stone, but the effigies of the archbishop, lying at length in his pontifical habit, is of oak wood, entirely sound, though near five hundred years old. It is not fixed to the tomb, but lies fastened to a slab of the same wood, none of which has seemingly ever been painted. The upper part of the mitre is wanting (e). He died in 1292.

Next to this, against the same wall, is the monument of archbishop Warham, of beautiful gothic stone-work; on which is the figure of the archbishop, lying at full length in his pontifical habit; the brasses of the coats of arms on the base of the tomb, have been purloined. He died in 1534.

Against the east wall, where was formerly the altar of St. Thomas Becket, close to the passage into the undercroft, is a mural monument, for Alexander Chapman, S. T. P. on which is his bust in white marble. He was archdeacon of Stow, in the county of Lincoln, and prebendary of this church; He died on September 6, 1729, æt. 52. Near the cloister door is a mural tablet, for the Rev. John Clerke, born at Witney, in Oxfordshire, A. M. of the university of Oxford, and lastly, rector of the united parishes of St. Mary Botbaw and St. Swithin, London; who, after a short stay at the deanry here, whither he had retired on account of his health, died on October 9, 1700, æt. 45. His widow Rebecca, daughter of George Hooper, of the county of Worcester, gent. erected this monument. At a small distance from this is another, for Priscilla, daughter of Thomas Fotherby, esq. wife of William Kingsley, gent. to whom she bore eleven children, four of whom were buried here, and seven survived, viz. William, Anne, Thomas, Anthony, Phæbe, Elizabeth and Ede; she died of a consumption in 1683, æt. 33. Her husband erected this monument.

At the entrance of this isle is a gravestone, over John Bargrave, S. T. P. canon of this church, who died May 11, 1680, æt. 70; and further in it another, for James Jefferies, S. T. P. canon likewise of it, who died September 4, 1689, æt. 40; and one near archbishop Peckham's monument, for Dr. Charles Elstob, a prebendary of this church. On the pavement are several large stones, which have been robbed of their brasses. There are three of these over the graves of archbishops Ufford, Stafford and Dean; and three more over those of the priors Finch, Selling, and Goldstone, all which appear to have been richly inlaid, having had on them their portraits, in their pontifical habits, shields of arms, inscriptions, &c. (f)

(d) Some have doubted if this is archbishop Peckham's monument. Leland, in his Itin. vol. vi, ascribes it to him, of which see below.

(e) It seems singular that this figure should be left so exceedingly plain, when all the rest of the monument is profusely painted and gilt, and that it should not be fixed to the rest of the tomb, but be moveable. This has made some suppose, that it never originally belonged to it, but was a figure placed occasionally over the grave of any deceased Archbi- shop, immediately after his interment, and remained there till his grave-stone or monument was ready for it.

(f) Leland, in his Itin. vol. vi, says, "in the Cross Isle betwixt the Body of the Chirche and the Quire Northward ly buried Pechem and Warcham also under slate stones of Marble Deane afore Priour of Lanthony and another Bishop. The lyith the Olde Priour was so wel Letterid."

CATHEDRAL.

In this place Mr. Somner says, there was in his time, a stone with an inscription on brass, in Latin, for sir John Fineux, knt. and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Paſton. He was chief justice of the King's Bench, under both the reigns of K. Henry VII. and VIII. and was a great benefactor to the convent of the White Friars, in this city. On the left side of Dr. Chapman's monument, is a small white marble and inscription, for Francis Iſham, who died an infant in 1699. A grave-stone for Tuſton, daughter of James, and Margaret Jefferies, who died an infant in 1688; another for Dame Tuſton Montague, wife of sir James Montague, knt. attorney general to Q. Anne, obt. 1712. In the south-west corner, one for Dr. Thomas Fotherby, the son of Thomas and grandson of Martin, biſhop of Salisburſy; he married Elizabeth, daughter of Manwaring Hammond, eſq; obt. 1710, et. 52; under the same is buried, Martin, his brother, who died 1666, et. 11. Adjoining to the east side of this cross iſle, and separated from it only by a gothic screen of open work, is the chapel, formerly called the virgin Mary's, but now the dean's chapel, from several deans of this church having been buried in it; six of them being deposited here since the reformation. The first of these was Richard Rogers, S. T. P. who lies under a handsome table monument, on the north side. He was suffragan to the archbiſhop of Canterbury, and thirteen years dean of this church; and died on May 19, 1597, et. 64. On the south side is a tomb, the sides of which are adorned with sculpture of skulls, human bones and other such emblems of mortality, erected for dean Charles Fotherbye, of Great Grimſey, in the county of Lincoln, archdeacon of this diocese, then prebendary, and lastly, dean of this church; he married Cicilia Walker, of Cambridge, with whom he lived thirty-one years; she bore him ten children, five of whom only survived him, viz. John, married to Elizabeth, daughter of sir Anthony Coke, of Effex; Phæbe, married to Henry, son of sir Henry Palmer, of Kent; Robert, to Priscilla, daughter of John Moile, of Buckwell, eſq. and two daughters unmarried, Elizabeth and Mabell. He died on March 29, 1619, et. 70; his widow Cecilia who died in 1634, et. 60, lies buried in the same tomb (g), which was erected by his eldest son John. Near to this, on the same side, is a mural monument, having on it the effigies of dean John Boys, sitting in his study, with a table and reading desk before him, leaning his head on his hand. The pillars and entablature, on which are four escutcheons of his arms, and those of the deanry, are of the Ionic order, all of

(g) At the ends of this tomb, many of the first ornaments have been cut away, to make room for something that required more than the tombs take up, both in length and white marble. He died suddenly in his study, in the year 1625, and was buried here on September 30. Among the books which form the back ground of the monument, is the inscription, which informs us, that it was erected by Angela his widow. At the east end under the window is a handsome mural monument for dean Thomas Turner, canon residentiary of St. Paul's, London, then dean of Rochester in 1631, and lastly dean of this church in 1643; he died in 1672, et. 81. On the north side is an oval half length painting on copper, for dean Isaac Bargrave: it is copied from one of Cornelius Janſon, in the deanry; it is inclosed in a beautiful frame of white marble, at the bottom of which is his coat of arms and inscription; he died in 1642, et. 56. John Bargrave, of Kent, S. T. P. by his last will ordered this monument to be erected; here likewise was intombed Elizabeth Dering his wife; she died in 1667, et. 74.

About the middle of the chapel is a black marble stone and inscription for Dean John Potter, S. T. P. who died on Sept. 20, 1770, et. 57, and for Martha his wife, who died in 1775, et. 70. At the time of the dean's burial, his infant son, who died in 1746, was removed from the nave to the same grave here; on opening which for the dean, some bones were found which might probably be those of Prior Goldstone, the founder of this chapel, and buried in it.

Near the entrance is a memorial for James Wedderburn, born at Dundee in Scotland, dean of the royal chapel there, and lastly biſhop of Dumblain, for four years; he died on Sept. 23, 1639, et. 54; and another for John Bourchier, archdeacon of Canterbury, who died on Nov. 6, 1495, whose coat of arms, as well as several devices and legends relating to him, are dispersed throughout the east window of this chapel.

In the upper south iſle, adjoining to the choir, under the second south window eastward, even with the wall, is the tomb of archbiſhop Walter Reynolds, who died in 1327, with his effigies in his pontifical robes lying at full length on it, but much defaced, the inscription round it obliterated; and at the feet of it, under the next window, that of archbiſhop Hubert Walter, who died in 1193, of the like form, only with a dog at his feet, and in the same condition. Their robes were once adorned with the armorial bearings of their families (h); but a thick covering of white-wash, the usual modern embellishment of church monuments, a long time hid the remains of them; the inscription on the latter tomb was hardly discernable in Weever's time, and the place only is now to be traced where it once height, but whether altars or monuments, does not appear.

(h) Archbiſhop Reynolds's robes were of azure, powdered all over with golden griffins.

CATHEDRAL.

was. On the opposite or north side next the choir door, is the monument of archbishop cardinal Kemp, on the south side of the presbytery, having an inscription round it in brass, all entire to this day; he died in 1454. Next above this, on the south side of the high altar, is that of archbishop Stratford, who died in 1341, having his effigies on it, lying at length in his pontifical dress, made of alabaster, but without any inscription. Above this is the monument of archbishop Sudbury, who being beheaded by the rebels in London in 1381, was brought hither and buried in this tomb; a fragment of his epitaph round it in brass yet remains. To this tomb the mayor and aldermen of this city were used to come, with much form and ceremony, yearly to visit it, in grateful commemoration of the great benefactions he had made to this city (i).

Opposite to this last, is the tomb of archbishop Mepham, of black marble, making a part of a very elegant screen of stone work between this side isle and St. Anselm's chapel, under the great south window of which is a raised part said to be the tomb of archbishop Bradwardin, who died in 1349, but without any inscription or ornament.

In this chapel, at first dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, were deposited the remains of St. Anselm, who died in 1107, whence it was afterwards called by his name; this chapel having escaped the fire, it is probable his bones rested here till the reformation, when it is reasonable to suppose his relics met with the same fate from the King's commissioners, as those of Becket, Winchelsea and others in this church did, which had been the objects of popular superstition.

At the north-east corner of the cross isle or wing below this chapel, was, as is conjectured, the tomb of archbishop Winchelsea; in this place, where he is said to have been buried in 1313, there are some broken places in the great pillar, and several marble pillars adjoining to it are so broken as to shew plainly that some high built monument or the like, had been once erected there; most probably it was demolished at the time of the reformation, on account of the great veneration he was held in by the common people.

On the opposite side of the choir, in the north isle, are two monuments; on the south side of it adjoining to the choir, being the westernmost of the two, is that of archbishop Chicheley, who died in 1443, founder of All Souls College; it was made in his life time at his own expence (k), and is very rich in carving, gilding and painting; there are several small figures of the Apostles, death, time, &c. round the two pillars at the ends of it; upon the tomb, which is of marble, lies the effigies of the archbishop in his pontifical dress, his cross beside him, as in full health; at his head are two angels sitting, and at his feet two priests kneeling, in the attitude of prayer; underneath the tomb is hollowed, and at the bottom of it, as an emblem of that mortality and humiliating state to which he was one day to come, is the archbishop's figure again represented as an emaciated corpse, almost naked. The inscription on brass round it is entire (l).

The other monument, higher up on the north-ern side of the high altar, is that of cardinal archbishop Bourgekier, erected by himself in his life time, as has been already noticed above. It is a high and stately monument, composed of Beberfsden marble, the front of which is full of niches, once filled with small figures, but they have been long since taken from thence; the inscription round it in brass, is still entire; he died in 1486.

Opposite this tomb, over the door of the audit room, is a small mural tablet to the memory of Thomas Cocks, auditor and register of this church, in the beginning of the last century.

Ascending the steps at the east end of this isle, we come to the Trinity chapel; built behind the high altar of this church, the place in the midst of which the rich and much adored shrine of St. Thomas Becket formerly stood, and which from the sanctity of it was reserved for the tombs and burials of such only as were of high rank and distinction.

The pillars of this chapel were built to form a circle round the eastern part of the above shrine, and between them all the monuments in it, except one, are placed. The first on the north side, is that of K. Henry IV. and his queen, Joane of Navarre, who was his second wife (m); their effigies, in their royal robes and crowned, and was there solemnly intombed by K. Henry her husband, who died on March 20, 1413; and had by his will, made about three years before his death, ordered his body to be buried here. Stow, in his Annals, Weever, and Brook in his Catalogue of the Kings of England, say, that the King was buried by the Lady Mary his first wife, in the monastery of Christ church; and Weever gives that reason for his being buried there. But we are otherwise informed by Henry de Knighton, who assures us, col. 2741, that anno 1394, Mary the wife of Henry, Earl of Derby, afterwards K. Henry IV. was buried in the New College at Leicester.

(i) At Sudbury, the place of his birth, they claim to have his body buried in St. Gregories church; and some time ago they shewed his head there.

(k) It is said to have been sculptured in Italy.

(l) This beautiful monument of their founder, was formerly kept in constant repair and preservation, at the expence of All Soul's College. But the allowance made for that purpose has been for some years withdrawn, and they have in vain been applied to on this account.

(m) Stow says, that she died on July 9, anno 1437, at Havering in Essex, from whence her body was first removed to Bermondsey, and thence conveyed to Canterbury, curiously sculptured of white marble or alabaster, lying at full length on it; his feet against a lion couchant, hers against a leopard; the queen on the right hand, under a canopy carved, painted and gilded, having on it three shields, one with the arms of England and France quarterly; another with the same, impaling Evreux and Navarre, and a third Evreux and Navarre quarterly; all these on a ground diapered with eagles volant, and the word Soverayne, as the king's device and motto, and ermine collared and chained, with the word Attemperance for that of the queen, as is likewise a tablet, at the foot of the tomb on which is the painting of an angel, standing and supporting a large escutcheon, charged with the same achievements. The devices and mottos above-mentioned enrich the cornice of the canopy, but what is particular, the word Soverayne and the eagles are on the side where the queen lies, and the ermine and Attemperance on the side of the king. Against the pillars at the head of the monument hangs a tablet, painted with the murder of archbishop Becket, now much decayed (n).

CATHEDRAL.

This monument has suffered not a little within memory; much of the rich carving of the canopies over the heads of the king and queen having been broken off and destroyed some few years ago, and the figures themselves have suffered greatly from the heavy hands of the careless and ignorant labourers, who have at times been employed and left to themselves to clean it (o).

On the opposite side to the above is the monument of Edward the Black Prince, the eldest son of K. Edward III, who died at the archbishop's palace here (p), on June 8, anno 1376, and his funeral exequies were celebrated in this church on the feast of St. Michael following (q). It is a noble monument, very entire and very beautiful; his figure, large as life, lies at length on it, his feet against a lion couchant, all in gilt

(n) All records agree that the King's corpse was brought by water to Faversham, and thence by land to Canterbury; where his funeral was celebrated with such pomp and state, as was suitable to his regal eminence; his son K. Henry V, and the nobility being present, upon the Trinity Sunday following his death. But there was a story fabricated, by one of the persons who was in the boat, which brought the King's body by water towards Canterbury; that whilst they were on the passage, a great storm arose, which so endangered the lives of the persons in the vessel, as well as of the nobility, which followed in eight smaller ones; that in despair, they agreed to cast the corpse into the sea, which having done, there was immediately a calm; after which they carried on the coffin, covered over with cloth of gold, with all manner of solemnity to Canterbury, and there honorably buried it. See Anglia Sacra, vol. ii, p. 373. Packe's Desid. Curios. B. vii, p. 5. The story is printed at the end of Clement Maidstone's treatise of the martyrdom of Richard Scroope, Archbishop of York, who was executed for treason against this King.

brass; the figure compleatly armed, except the head, on which is a scull-cap with a coronet round it, once set with stones, of which only the collets now remain; and from hence hangs a hood of mail down to his breast and shoulders; below which is his surcoat of arms, old France and England quarterly; the head of the figure rests on a casque or helmet joined to his cap, which supports his crest (a lion) formed after the trophies above the monument, where are his gauntlets curiously finished and gilt; his coat, on which are the arms above-mentioned, quilted with fine cotton, and at least as rich as any of those worn now by the officers at arms on public occasions, but much disfigured by time and dust; and the scabbard of his sword, which appears by it to have been but a small one (r). His shield hangs upon a pillar near the head of his tomb, on which are the same arms of old France and England quarterly; it once had handles to it.

Round the edge of the tomb is a long inscription in brass of French prose and verse, the whole of which is printed both in Weever, Sandford, Battely and others; the former, being the only material part of it, is as follows:

Ly gist le noble Monfr. Edward ainez filz du tres noble Roy Edward tiers: Prince d'Aquitane & de Gales, Duc de Cornwaille & Count de Castre, qi morust, en la feste de la Trinite gestri le viii jour de Juin l'an de grace mil trois cens Septante Sifne. lalm de qi Dieu eit mercy. Amen.

The sides and ends of the tomb are adorned with sculpture and shields of arms, on which are alternately the arms of old France and England quarterly, with a file of three points, over the shield a label, on which is the word Houmout in old English letters. The other shield has his own arms, viz. three ostrich feathers, the quill end of each in a socket, with a label crossing, on which is his motto Ich Dien, and a label above the shield in like manner, as the other above-

(o) The ingenious Mr. Carter, the engraver, some few years ago made a curious and accurate draft, which he painted in water colours, of this monument, and has since engraved it.

(p) Thus Stow and others, but some historians say, he died at the royal palace at Westminster.

(q) He is said to have given by his will, several jewels, vessels, and images of gold, rich vestments, &c. to this church, all which are recorded in the obituary. Leland, in his Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 2, says, "Edwarde the Black Prince lyeth right agayne hym (viz. K. Henry the IVth.) under a pillar by South. He dyed in the Bishops Palace in Cantewabyri and gave a great chalice of gold and cruets of gold besides many other Jocales into Christes Church." But in his will, printed at length in Weever, p. 208, there is no mention of this whatever, nor any gift to the church of Canterbury.

(r) The sword itself as is reported, was taken away by Oliver Cromwell.

mentioned

CATHEDRAL.

mentioned with the like words Ich Dien on it (s). On the canopy over the monument is painted the figure of our Saviour, now defaced, and the four Evangelists, with their symbols in small compartments at the four corners of it.

Between the two next pillars, eastward, is the elegant tomb of archbishop Courtney, who died in 1396, having his effigies in alabaster, dressed in his pontifical vestments, lying at full length on it, but without any inscription; many have contended this to have been only a cenotaph, as was frequently the custom in those times for great personages, and that the archbishop was buried in the chancel of the collegiate church at Maidstone, where there was a tomb and inscription, telling us that he lay buried there; but more of this will be found mentioned in the archbishop's life, below.

Under the next arch is a plain simple tomb for Odo Coligni, bishop elect of Beauvais, cardinal Chastillon, poisoned in 1571, as tradition reports, to prevent his embracing the Protestant religion, for which purpose he had come to England, and put himself under the protection of Q. Eliz. (t) This tomb is no more than a covering of brickwork and plaister over the coffin, which is laid on the pavement, and is much in the shape and form of many of the like sort in our country church-yards. Those who appointed his remains to be laid in this honourable place, did not, to all appearance, think it worth while to be at the expence of a decent repository for them.

Opposite to this tomb, on the north side of the chapel, at the foot of K. Henry IV.'s monument, is that of dean Wotton, who died in 1566; he was descended of a noble family in this county, and was an eminent statesman and an accomplished courtier; for he found means to continue in favour and to act in a public character under four reigns, in which there were as many changes in religion. His figure, which represents him kneeling on his tomb, his hands

(s) These words perhaps, were designed to express the intrepid character he bore, as a soldier; houmout, signifying in the German language, a bold and high spirit; the other, Ich Dien, I serve as a dutiful son and subject. There seems to have been an altar opposite this tomb, where masses were celebrated for his soul; a stone step very much worn being under a window there; and within memory, the prince's plumes of feathers and the arms of France and England, as on the monument, were in painted glass here; the escutcheon with the feathers has long been broken and lost; the other was some years ago taken away to mend a window in another place.

(t) See an account of him in Biog. Brit. vol. iv, p. 2381 [c.] Strype's Annals, vol. ii, p. 238.

(u) Archbishop Theobald's remains after the fire in 1174, were deposited, says Gervas, under a marble tomb, before the altar of St. Mary, in the nave of the church, and we have no account where they were removed to, on the rebuilding of it. If the remains lately found there as above-mentioned, see p. 533, a few years ago, were not his, they joined and uplifted, in the attitude of prayer before a desk, on which is a book lying open, is an excellent piece of sculpture, the head especially, which is said to have been taken from the life, and executed at Rome during his stay there; the countenance has vast expression in it; he is represented in his doctor's robes, bare-headed and with short curly hair and beard; by the figure he seems to have been of a very small stature.

Near the south wall of this chapel, opposite to archbishop Courtney's monument, is one by itself, of a very singular form; it is so unlike all the monuments since the conquest, which I have seen described, that it seems more like one of Saxon antiquity, being made in the manner and shape of their shrines, rather than Norman. It was designed to stand close to a wall, but does not do so here; it is shewn as the tomb of archbishop Theobald, but the general opinion is to the contrary (u), though it remains unknown for whom it was otherwise designed.

At the end of this chapel is a small circular building, being the eastern extremity of this church, called Becket's crown, in which, on the north side, is the tomb of cardinal archbishop Pole. It is a plain one, and of plaister, but of a form not inelegant; on it was this inscription, Depositu[m] cardinalis Poli; above it there were, on the wall, some beautiful paintings in fresco, but these are sadly gone to decay, and there remains but little to be seen of them; but they are described to have been two angels supporting a shield of the cardinal's arms of eight coats, and between them two cherubims, holding a cardinal's bat; over this tomb is still remaining an old painting of St. Crysostom carrying our Saviour over a river.

HAVING described the monuments and burials in the upper part of this church, I shall now descend to the crypt or undercroft, where there are but few monuments or gravestones remain-might perhaps have been, together with his tomb, removed to this place; and the present one here then may be the same mentioned by Gervas, for it can hardly be supposed that they removed the one without the other.

Some have conjectured this tomb to have been erected for archbishop Anselm, and that his relics were removed hither from the chapel of St. Peter and St. Paul, where they had been before deposited. St. Anselm being a native of Piedmont, the late king of Sardinia, in K. George II.'s reign, was desirous of having his remains sent over to him, and his ambassador in England so far succeeded as to obtain leave and authority to have a search made here, for that purpose. A person, commissioned accordingly, applied to the late Mr. Goffling, whom he thought the best able to assist him in his enquiry, for his opinion, whether this tomb might not probably contain the remains of that prelate; but he was so fully convinced by him, that all search after any such would be fruitless, that the monument was left untouched, and the search was entirely laid aside.

ing. That part of the undercroft, now used as the French church, has the pavement so entirely covered with a coating of dirt so thick, that whatever remains on the original pavement, cannot be seen; but beyond this part of the undercroft, being the western extremity of it, there is to be seen a gravestone laid over one of the archbishops or priors, having had on it his portrait in his pontifical habit and shields of arms, and otherwise richly ornamented, all in brass, which has been long since torn away from it (v).

Further eastward from the French church, nearly under the high altar, is the monument of cardinal archbishop Morton, who died in 1500; his figure in his pontifical habit lies at length on it; around the arch over it, there have been many small figures and much ornamental sculpture. This was a very costly and superb monument, but the zealots in the time of the great rebellion defaced it shamefully; at a small distance nearly eastward from it, is his gravestone, in the middle of what was formerly the chapel of the Virgin Mary, which appears to have had on it his portrait, in his pontifical habit, with shields of arms and other ornaments in brass, all long since torn from it; by his will he directed to be buried before the image of the Blessed Virgin Mary, commonly called our Lady of the Undercroft (w). His monument, as above-mentioned, is between two pillars near the south-west corner of the chapel.

On the south side of this chapel, close to the outside of it, there is a handsome monument for Joane, daughter of Bartholomew de Burghersh, Lady Mohun, prepared and set up at her own cost (x); on the tomb is her figure, lying at full length; the inscription in French, being pour dieu priez por l'ame Johane Burwaschs que fut Dame de Mohun; but this has, as well as the rest of the monuments in this part of the undercroft, been from time to time much defaced by the carelessness of the workmen belonging to the church, who make this place the common repository for their materials, ladders and other such like un-

(v) Leland says, in his Itin. vol. vi, there lieth x Bishops, (that is Archbishops;) buried in the Cryptes.

(w) Mr. Collier says, he was buried under the choir, in a fine chapel, built by himself.

(x) From the charter or instrument of her chantry, recorded in a leiger of this church, and dated in 1395, anno 19 Rich. II, we learn, that she lived in the days of K. Richard II, and wrote herself lady Dunster, (Domina de Donestee), wife of John de Mohun, of Dunster, being descended, as it seems, from that noble house of the Mohun's of Dunster castle, in Somerſetſhire, in the indenture between her and the prior and convent, in consideration of her payment of 350 marcs sterling, and certain utensils and accoutrements convenient for her chantry; (with which money the manor of Selgrave was purchased and amortized to the monks, with the king's licence), they granted to her a perpetual chantry, and covenanted with her, that when she died, wieldy lumber; of course it is suffered to remain in a very filthy condition,

Not far distant south-eastward from this, is an ancient tomb for Isabel, countess of Athol (y), on which is her figure at full length; this has suffered likewise much within these few years; three handsome pannels of alabaſter on the front of it, with shields of arms, having either thro' carelessness or mischief, been beat down from it; these lay for some years entire enough to have been replaced with little expence and trouble, but they are now lost and destroyed.

Still further eastward, there are several corpses interred, especially in that part which composes the vaults allotted to the first prebendary; these lie nearly even with the pavement, the stones of which seem to form the lids of the coffins.

Besides those who we know had monuments or memorials on their grave-stones in this church, there were others, who were buried in it, for ought that we know, without any; several of these, among which are many of the first archbishops, with their places of sepulture, have already been mentioned, in the account of the fabric of the church; notwithstanding which, it may not be unacceptable to take some notice here of the burial-places of the several archbishops, from the time of St. Augustine. The first of them, as well as the nine succeeding archbishops, including Nothelm, were buried in St. Augustine's monastery, as was afterwards archbishop Yambert; Elſin, archbishop elect, died in the Alpes with cold, and was buried abroad, but where is not known. Archbishop Robert being ejected in 1052, died and was buried in the abbey of Gemetica in Normandy. Archbishop Stigand was buried at Winchester. Archbishop Balawin died, and was buried in the Holy Land. Archbishop Reginald, his successor, died within a few days after his election, and was buried in the church of Bath, of which diocese he was bishop. Archbishop Richard Wetherſhead, in his return from Rome, died and was buried at St. Gemma. St. Edmund, archbishop, died and was buried in her corpse should be laid in the tomb, which she had of her own cost prepared and set up, near the altar of our lady in the undercroft; and being so intombed there, should never be removed, nor the name of the tomb altered, but be honorably kept, and five shillings per ann. to the clerk, who kept the lady chapel, for keeping clean her tomb, with many other matters in the indenture; which, that the chantry might not be forgotten with their successors, the monks caused to be enrolled and recorded in their martyrology, that upon her obit day it might be annually recited. See Battely's Somner, p. 100. The dean and chapter now possess the above manor, but the intent of it, as to the tomb, has been long since neglected.

(y) She was daughter of Richard de Chillam, natural son of K. John, wife first of David Strabolgi, earl of Athol, and afterwards of Alexander Baliol; she died at Chillam in February, 1292. See Weever, p. 214.

CATHEDRAL.

foreign parts. Archbishop Boniface died and was buried in the country of Savoy; and Robert Kilwardby, his successor, died and was buried abroad, at Viterbo in Italy. Archbishop Langham died and was buried at Avignon, whence his body was afterwards removed to Westminster abbey, of which place he had been abbat. The number of those, who were not buried in this church, being twenty-one.

Those who were buried in it, having neither monument or gravestone at this time, whose places of burial in it have been already pointed out above, were the archbishops Cutbert, Bregwin, Atbelard, Ulfred, Fleologild, Ceolnoth, Atbelred, Plegmund, Athelm, Wifelm, Odo, Dunstan, Athelgar, Siricius, Elfric, Elphage, Living, Agelnoth, Edsin, Lanfranc, Anselm, Rodulph, Corboil, Theobald, Thomas Becket, Richard, Winchelsea, Iffip, Witlesey and Arundel; these are in number thirty. The archbishops Walter, Langton, Peckham, Reynolds, Mepham, Stratford, Bradwardin, Sudbury, Courtney, Chicheley, Kemp, Bourghcbier, Morton, Warbam and Pole, in number fourteen, have monuments still remaining, as described above; as are the gravestones of archbishops Ufford, Stafford and Dean, making in the whole together forty-eight archbishops, who have been buried in this church, all whose remains, except those of archbishops Becket and Winchelsea still rest within it.

There is no memorial extant of the sepultures of any of the primary deans of this church, who presided over it, instead of priors, before archbishop Lanfranc's time. Of the priors of this church, I shall observe that of the first six and twenty, ten of them were translated to higher preferments, four of them resigned, two of them were deposed, and one of them died at Rome. The remaining nine of them continued priors to the time of their death, but we have no record or memorial of the places of their interment, except that of Wibert in 1167, in the chapter-house, and the two inscriptions, the one at the foot of a buttress on the outside of the north wall; the other on the outside of the south wall of the church nearest to archbishop Becket's chapel; which are conjectured to have been placed there, the first in memory of prior Lee, who died in 1234; the last for prior Nicholas de Sandwich, his successor, who died in 1289; both which will be noticed below.

Of the rest of the priors, Richard Oxenden and Robert Hathbrand, were buried in St. Michael's chapel, where their inscriptions on brass plates still remain. The priors Finch, Selling and Gold- stone, the second of that name, were buried in the martyrdom, where their gravestones, though robbed of their brasses, still remain. Prior Thomas Chillenden was buried in the nave of the church, towards the south side of it, just by archbishop Arundel; prior Woodnesborough, just above him, and prior Elebam just above him; prior Salisbury lies also in the upper part of the nave of the church, the gravestones of all whom were remaining over them, till they were of late removed on the laying down the new pavement of the nave.

Prior Thomas Goldstone, the first of that name, was buried in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary, founded by him, now called the dean's chapel. There is nothing known of the burial places of the priors Gillingham, Mongebam, Oxny, and Petham, nor of William Molash, whose death is recorded in the register of the church; some of them most probably were buried in the chapter-house, but which of them, excepting Wibert, is not known. The several inscriptions on their gravestones in this church, will be mentioned below, in the account of them.

The burials of the several deans of this church since the new foundation of it, have been noticed already in the description of their monuments in the different parts of it, viz. of dean Wotton in the Trinity chapel, of dean Nevil in the late chapel, called by his name, on the south side of the nave, and of the deans Rogers, Fotherbye, Boys, Bargrave, Turner, and Potter, in the dean's chapel.

There was but one archdeacon buried in this church before the reformation, viz. archdeacon Bourghcbier, who lies in the dean's chapel, and but one since Dr. Kingsley, who was buried in the lower south cross isle, except dean Fotherbye, is mentioned, who had been likewise archdeacon.

The prebendaries interred in this church are many, all whom, and the several places where they lie, may be found in the account of them below, taken from their memorials, their wills, and the parish register of this church.

To these burials may be added that of Q. Ediva, who was laid in the same grave with archbishop Living; of Richard Fitzalan, Earl of Arundel (z), and of Gerald Fitzmaurice, who was Justice of Ireland in the beginning of K. Henry III.'s reign (a).

There were many persons, without doubt, buried in this church, who from the high estimation it was held in, were mostly of note and superior quality, who have no memorials at present left of them; nor are their particular places of sepulture, or even their names known (b).

(z) Rapin, vol. i, p. 508.

(a) K. Henry III, in his 28th year, issuing his commands from Rocheſter, to the keepers of the archbishopsrick, to cause a fair stone to be laid in this church, over the body of Gerald Fitzmaurice, justice of Ireland, with his shield of arms, who died at Canterbury. See Stow, B. i, p. 136.

(b) Among the manuscripts in the Cotton library, Mss. CLAUDIUS, B. ix, 2 f. 265, are the names of the martyrs, confessors

CATHEDRAL.

The parish register of this church does not begin till the year 1564, anno 4th Elizabeth; by it the burials in it appear to have for the most part been those of persons of family, clergymen of eminent note, or members of this church and their families. Besides those whose monuments and gravestones have been mentioned above, the register mentions the burials of the lady Edmondson, brought from beyond seas in 1615; sir John Cullimore in 1620; the lady Lovelace in 1627; sir John Wild in 1635; the lady Fotherby in 1686; the lady Mansfield in 1643; lady Wild and lady Heyman, both in that year; Awdry lady Master in 1658; sir John Fotherby in 1666; Charles, Earl of Bellamont and Baron Wotton, in 1602; the lady Hardres in the south cross isle, and lady Rebecca Parker in the same, in 1691; the lady Anne Head, of these precincts, in the same, in 1711, near her father and mother; sir William Boys in the nave, in 1744, and the lady Anne his widow, in 1753; and Chaworth Brabazon, Earl of Meath, in the south isle of the nave, in 1763.

Besides which there are frequent entries in it, among others, of the burials of the families of Master, Somner, Randolph, Spracklyn, Simpson, Wilsford and Hardres.

In the wills registered in the Prerogative-office in Canterbury, I find, among others, the following directions for burials in this church; of John Charte, alias Toppenden, a petty canon, in 1556, in the nave; John Honywood, of Sene, in Newington, in 1557; Richard Fysher, alderman in 1575, in the nave; William Roberts, of St. Alphage, in 1583, beside his father; Richard Basely, of these precincts, preacher of the gospel, in 1585, in the nave near the bodies of John Bale and Robert Pownall, his companions in exile, professors and preachers of God's word, whose goodness had restored them to their native country; Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Rooke, late of Mersham, gent. in 1599; William Heyman, of these precincts, the same year, beside his sister Emlen Heyman, and his brother and sister Hill; George Smith, of St. Mildred's, gent. in 1610; Nicholas Parker, of the precincts, in 1617, in the nave near his late wife; Mrs. Mary Sympson, of the same, in 1617, in her husband's grave; Francis Tooke, late of the lady Wootton's palace in 1626, in the nave; Anne Seller, of Christchurch, widow, in 1625, in the same, near her late husband John Seller, cl. B. D.; Elizabeth, daughter of Theodore Beacon, M. D. of Canterbury, in 1629, and directed a tomb stone to be laid there, with an inscription, shewing that her father and brother were there buried; George confessors and virgins, whose bodies have been buried in the metropolical church of Canterbury; printed in Dart, appendix, p. xxvi, No. ix. Among the Harlein manuscripts is one, No. 1366-2, containing church notes, such Marson, of Christchurch, cl. in 1632, on the south side of the church in the narrow place between sir Stephen Thornburst's chapel and the stairs there, going up behind the choir; Thomas Boys, of St. Gregories, gent. in 1625, in the grave in which his first wife lay, a small remembrance to be made upon a stone for his two wives, himself and his daughter Frances; Thomas Howenden, alderman of Canterbury, in the north isle, near his only daughter Anne, and Frances, widow of John Bargrave, D. D. prebendary of Canterbury, in 1686, in the nave near her father sir John Wild, deceased.

The cemeteries of this church, adjoining to it, were not appropriated, especially the larger or outward one, to the members of it only, but to the inhabitants of the city in general, till of late years. In the wills in the Prerogative-office abovementioned, I find mention of the following burials in them.

Of Thomas Prowde, of St. Alphage parish, in 1468, near the porch of the church, where his wife was buried near him, in 1493; Richard Clerk, rector of Great Mongebam, in the cemetery in 1476; John Webbe, of Canterbury, in the same year; just within the gate near the sepulchres of Roger Laborne, John Wilcocks, of this city, in 1485; Joan Bettenham in 1490; John Brimme, cl. in the same year; Peter Maxey, cl. chaplain of the prince's chantry, in 1492; John Rotheram, of Northgate, in 1494, and Margaret his wife, in 1499; Henry Pygott, of St. Alphage, in the inner cemetery in 1500; Elizabeth Colpin, of St. Elphis, in 1501, in the sanctuary of Christchurch, near her children; John Hawkyngs, chantry priest of Arundel's chantry, in 1511, in some holy place within the precincts, as the lord prior and convent should devise, and in his will mentions sir Philip his fellow chaplain, and gives that joined close there to those of the house of the chantry; Thomas Sydrake, chaplain, of the city of Canterbury, in 1516, in the cemetery; James Cursume, chantry priest of prince Edward's chantry, in 1518, near the monument of sir Richard Pereson, his late associate there, and mentions the chapels of the above chantry, St. Clement, St. Mary subtus undercroft, St. Augustine and St. John Baptist, near the tomb of St. Thomas, all in this church; Christopher Taylor, of St. Alphage, in 1518, in the sanctuary, under the yough tree; Agnes Vincent, in the same year in the cemetery, and mentions the children of the Ambry of Christchurch, and gave to the prior and convent to admit her sister of the chapter with them, her best gerdyll; sir William Haddon, chantry priest of Christchurch, in 1529, near the sepulture of sir John Lancaster; John Geamy, as arms, epitaphs, &c. taken in the cathedral, archbishop's palace, chapter-house, crypts, cloysters, deanry, in the parochial churches and in sir Thomas Wood's house in Canterbury, in 1599.

CATHEDRAL.

of St. Margaret's, in 1525, in the sanctuary; he gave a legacy to the brotherhood of St. Loys, in Christ-church; John Bremar, of St. Albage, in 1529, in the sanctuary; John Henry Arundel, one of the priests of the almy, in 1540, in the church-yard; Richard Burcharde, of Canterbury, in 1534, in the sanctuary, next Agnes his wife, and directed that his executors should provide two pair of stone crosses to be made and wrought after those standing at the sepulture of William Bremour; the one pair at his sepulture, the other at that of his wife; William Page, cl. one of the chantry priests of Arundel's chantry, in 1549, in the church-yard, near the sepulture of Richard Perefey; he gave 8d. a piece to the five chantry priests of Christ-church; Richard Thompson, cl. petty canon in 1563; John Pettowse, cl. petty canon in 1560, and Richard Turpyne, of St. Albage, in 1574, against the tomb there.

THE PRIORY OF CHRIST-CHURCH.

AFTER St. Augustine had taken possession of the palace given him by K. Ethelbert here, and had been consecrated a bishop at Arles, in France, it is recorded, that he founded a church and monastery close to it, in which he and his companions, who were monks, lived in common, according to certain rules of their monastic order; which, as it is by many affirmed, was the Benedictine, that is, followers of the order of the black monks of St. Benet, in which sort of community they continued to live till the time of archbishop Lanfranc, who came to the see soon after the Norman conquest, and according to the usage of his own country, being himself a Norman, altered this manner of living, by separating his habitation and revenues from those of the convent (c).

At first the archbishops presided over their monks themselves, as chief governors; but the business of the see of Canterbury increasing so much, as to take up the whole of their attention, they were obliged to provide a substitute to preside over the convent, under the name of dean; but the first of these, that we have found mentioned, is upwards of 200 years after the foundation of it (d).

A LIST OF DEANS OF THIS PRIORY.

Ceolnoth is the first dean, whose name is to be found, as such, in any record, being mentioned

(c) Reyneri Apostolat. Benedict. Trac. Batt. Som. p. 82.

(d) See Angl. Sacr. tom. i, p. 135.

(e) Annal. brev. Roffen. Steph. Birchington. Gervas Antiq. Britan. &c.

(f) Battely's Somner, p. 139.

(g) Dart, p. 178, places the deans between Ægelwin, and Egelnoth as follows: Alfric, Kinsyn, Maurice, Alfine, Ælfwine, Athelfine, Ælfwine the second, Athelfine the second; whose names as deans, though not the years of their deaths, by several writers (e). He lived in the time of archbishop Wlfrid, who came to the see in the year 807, but being promoted to the archbishopric in 832, on the death of Fleologild, the immediate successor in his place was Ægelwin, who was constituted dean, as appears by a Saxon record (f), in whose time all the monks, except five, died of the plague, and the monastery became almost desolate, and the church deserted; for there were not left monks sufficient to celebrate in it, nor were there any found, partly through fear of the raging pestilence, and partly through terror of the Danes, who would take on them the monastical order, insomuch that the archbishop was obliged to fill up the vacant places with secular priests and clerks, in such number as was requisite for the due and decent performance of the service of the church, which, as well as the monastery, appear to have continued in the possession of these seculars, without any admission of regulars, for the space of about 150 years; but on archbishop Alfric's coming to the see in 993, he disliking the seculars, resolved to dismiss them, and to restore the monks; for which he obtained the Pope's consent, which was confirmed by the King, at the archbishop's request, in the year 1006, as appears by the Saxon chronicle, which gives a full account of it.

I shall now return to the deans, who continued to preside over this monastery during the time that the seculars continued in the possession of it; Ægelwin, the dean, being dead, the obituary of this church, which does not mention the year of his death, records barely the names of (g)

Kensin.

Maurice.

Alfin, Ælfwin.

Alfric, in whose time, most probably, monks were again established in this church, as above-mentioned.

Egelnoth, a monk, was the next dean, who, as is intimated in the register of the church, and in the Saxon annals of Peterborough, was consecrated archbishop of Canterbury in 1020; nine years before which, this city, with the inhabitants of it, had been almost entirely destroyed by the Danes, this church laid in ashes, and only four out of forty monks, who were then in the monastery, left alive; this was the state of it when Egelnoth succeeded to the see of Canterbury. He rebuilt are mentioned in the obituaries of this church. See manuscripts in Cotton library, marked Vitellius D. vii, 36, f. 68; Nero C. ix. i. f. 1, printed in Dart, appendix, p. xxv, xli. During the time of these deans lived Fridegod, a monk of this convent, an excellent master of the Greek and Latin tongues, a man of great piety and strict discipline; who wrote several books and treatises, one of which was, the life of archbishop Wilfrid, of York, which is extant in the Cotton library, Claudius. A. l. 1. See Dart, p. 178.

the

CATHEDRAL.

the church and provided secular priests and clerks to officiate in it, in the room of the monks that had been slain; Gervas calls them monks, and says, they were like the canons of cathedral churches, who wore indeed the habit, but did not observe strictly the rules of the monastical order (b); but it ought to be remembered, that this was owing to the necessity of the times.

Egelric was a monk, and dean of this church, and elected bishop of Chichester in 1058.

Godric succeeded him, and according to Osburn, was a disciple of St. Alpbage, and was present when the body of that saint was translated from London to Canterbury, in 1023 (i). The narrative of which transaction is given by that writer, who was informed by Godric of all the solemnities of this translation; this dean was sent to Rome by archbishop Stigand for his pall, which journey was performed some years after he had been made dean of this church; he was succeeded in this dignity by Henry, who was constituted first dean (ii), and then prior of this church. The office was the same, only the name and title was changed, which was done by archbishop Lanfranc, who new modelled this, as well as the other churches in this kingdom, according to the usage and customs of his own country of Normandy (k).

A LIST OF THE PRIORS.

HENRY, above-mentioned, had been sometime abbat of Caen, in Normandy, and was probably brought over by archbishop Lanfranc, and made first dean, and then upon that archbishop's new modelling this church, prior of it about the year 1080, in which dignity he continued till 1096, when he was installed dean of Battel, in Suffex (l).

In his time flourished Osburn, the monk of this house, a learned and religious man, and much esteemed by archbishop Lanfranc. He was much skilled in music, of courteous behaviour, pleasant and witty conversation. He wrote in a good style, if we take Malsbury's word, the life of St. Dun-

(b) Decim. Script. col. 1650.

(i) See Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 19. Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 232.

(ii) Vita Lanfranci, edit. Dacher, p. 7. Mr. Wharton observes in his Anglia Sacra, that the title of dean was given to the superior or prior of cathedral churches, till the middle of the 12th century.

(k) Gervas, col. 1390, anno 1164, in his relation of the differences between K. Henry II, and archbishop Becket, mentions, Gilbertus Episcopus Londiniensis & Cantuariensis Ecclesie Decanus, but this must be understood, as provincial dean to the metropolitan archbishop of Canterbury. See col. 1429. (l) Rayner, apud. Benedict.

(ii) See Dart, p. 178.

(m) See Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 191.

stan, and likewise of Elphage, archbishops; which last is in verse and prose, and other books; he lived till the year 1074 (ll).

ERNULPH, a monk of this church, was constituted prior by archbishop Anselm (m), and was intrusted by him during his troubles with the rebuilding of this cathedral, at which time he is always mentioned by the name of venerable, either from his age or wisdom, or perhaps it might be for both, being stiled Vir laude dignissimus & in scientia literali & Religione diu probatus; and Malsbury (n) gives the highest commendations of him for his goodness, prudence and integrity, and for his honourable benefactions to the churches over which he presided, both here and at Peterborough, of which church he was promoted to be abbat (o); both which flourished under him in the greatest prosperity, and his departure from them was equally lamented, as may be seen recorded in the registers of both churches (p); and it appears that he well deserved this great character. He was lastly preferred to the bishopric of Rocheſter (q).

In his time lived Folgard, a monk of this priory, a man of much learning and singular piety; he is said to have written the life of St. John of Beverley and other treatises, and the life of Odo, the first of which is in the Cotton library, faustina, b. iv, 8. (r)

CONRAD, a monk of this church, was elected prior in his room, and was, like him, a man of a public and generous spirit; Edmer, speaking of him and his predecessor, says, that archbishop Anselm put all the affairs of this monastery at the disposal of his own friends, constituting Ernulph and Conrad, both monks of this convent, successively priors of it, at whose command and pleasure all the business of it should be ordered and managed. He was sometime confessor to K. Henry I, and was translated from this priory anno 1126, to be abbat of Hulme, in Norfolk. He finished with great care and judgment, the rebuilding of this church, begun in his predecessor Ernulph's time, the beauty and elegance of which is recorded by the writers of those times. His benefactions to this church were (n) De Gestis Pontific, l. i. p. 133.

(o) Willis's Mitred Abbeys, vol. i, p. 145, 236, says he was promoted to be abbat in 1107, and afterwards, April, 1115, to the see of Rocheſter. See Flor. Wigorn, p. 479. Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 297. Dart, p. 179. Cotton Library Misc. marked Claudius, C. vi, 7. f. 166, printed in Dart, appendix, p. xxvii.

(p) Obituaries of Christ church, and register of Peterborough, entitled Swapham, the only one now to be seen.

(q) It was given to him by his predecessor in it, Ralph, when translated to the see of Canterbury. See more of him in the catalogue of the bishops of Rocheſter; and in Fox's acts and monuments, where there is a letter directed to him, and others concerning priests's marriages. Battely's Som. p. 139, pt. 2, p. 114. (r) See Dart, p. 179.

CATHEDRAL.

exceeding large, and are recorded to his honour in the obituary of it (s).

Edmer, a monk and chaunter of this monastery, at this time, was a learned man and wrote several books; among which were a treatise concerning the troubles of archbishop Anselm, whose faithful friend and companion he was; one on ecclesiastical liberty, some historical tracts, the life and acts of the archbishops Anselm and Elphege, in prose and verse; of St. Wulfred and other miscellaneous pieces. He was afterwards abbat of St. Alban's, and in 1120 was elected bishop of St. Andrew's, in Scotland, but having laid aside his intention of governing that bishopric, returned next year to his former station here (ss).

GOSFRID succeeded him as prior, and was afterwards in 1128, being a man eminently religious, according to the continuator of Florence of Worcester, at the suit of David, K. of Scots, and with the consent of archbishop William Corboil, chosen abbat of the monastery of Dunfermlin, in Scotland. (t)

ELMER, or AILMER, as his name is written by some, succeeded Gosfrid the same year, being a monk likewise of this monastery, and continued prior nine years, dying in 1137. Gervas calls him Vir magnæ simplicitatis & eximie Religionis; and he certainly bore a great character for learning and piety. He wrote divers treatises mentioned by Pitfeus, in whom more may be learned both of him and his two contemporaries above-mentioned (u).

JEREMIAS, another monk of this monastery, succeeded as prior the same year, anno 1137, by the vote and election of the monks, the see of Canterbury, being then void; though at first he was much in favour with archbishop Theobald, yet afterwards incurring his displeasure, he deposed him from his priorship in 1143, and placed one Walter in his room; upon which Jeremias appealed to the Pope, Innocent II, who, against the archbishop's will, restored him to his office, and Walter was displaced and retired to Dover; but the former, dreading perhaps the uneasiness of continuing here under the archbishop's displeasure, renounced his government of this priory shortly after of his own accord; in consideration of which, he had however 100 marcs given him to pay his debts, and Walter was again received in his stead (v).

WALTER, above-mentioned, was surnamed Durdent, one of which name is mentioned by Pitfeus, in his appendix to his catalogue of English writers, in all probability, this very prior, giving him a large encomium for his great learning, especially in divinity, and mentioning some of his works. He was removed from hence and preferred to the bishopric of Conventry, to which he was elected by the convent there in 1149 (w), and afterwards was consecrated in this church.

WALTER, surnamed Parvus or Petit, chaplain to archbishop Theobald, succeeded as prior, being instituted by the archbishop, with the advice of the convent. He afterwards displeased the archbishop so much, that he deposed him from this dignity in the year 1153, and afterwards had him conveyed to Gloucester, where he was kept in prison as long as the archbishop lived (x):

WIBERT, sub-prior of this church, succeeded him in the priorship; he was a man worthy to be commended and admirable in good works, says Gervas (y). His benefactions to this church are recorded in the obituary; among other things, he gave a large bell, which required thirty-two men to ring it, and restored the wood of Chartbam to the convent; he caused the conduits of water to be made in all the offices within the court of the priory (z); he died on 5 cal. Oct. 1167, and was buried in the chapter-house of this monastery (a), where his gravestone remained till within these few years. It had once this inscription in brass on it: hic jacet Wibertus quondam prior hujus ecclesie.

Odo (b) succeeded Wibert, and was prior in archbishop Becket's days, and is the same person undoubtedly whom Pitfeus calls St. Odo; a man of approved virtue and eminent learning (c). After that archbishop's death, the King fearing the election of another prelate who might tread in the same steps, and by his turbulence give him future trouble, requested this prior, with much intreaty, that for his peace and content of mind, (s) Battely's Somner, p. 139, pt. 2, p. 114. See Cotton Library Mss. marked Claudius, C. vi, 7. f. 166, printed in Dart, appendix, p. xxvi.

(ss) See Dart, p. 179.

(t) The king of Scots petition for this purpose, is still extant, among the records of this cathedral.

(u) Battely's Somner, p. 140. Harpsfield, p. 3. Gervas, col. 1343. See Dart, p. 180.

(v) Godwyn and Parker, in Vita Theobaldi, Matthew Paris, p. 103. Prior Jeremias is mentioned by Harpsfield, in his relation of the new work, at Dover, by Corboyl. Battely's Somner, p. 140. Gervas speaks much of this Prior. See Decim. Script. col. 1312, 1343, 1359, and says, he retired to St. Augustine's monastery, where he died.

(w) Gervas, col. 1311, in Episcopatum Cantrensis Ecclesie Vocato. Col. 1367, Coventrensis. Col. 1359, 1367. Battely's Somner, p. 140, pt. 2, p. 115. Annal. Burton, anno 1153. The autograph of his profession still remains among the archives of this church.

(x) Gervas, in Decim. Script. col. 1313, 1367, 1369, 1667. Battely, pt. 2, p. 115.

(y) Gervas, col. 1313. See Mss. Cotton Library, Claudius, C. vi, 7. f. 166, printed in Dart, appendix, p. xxviii.

(z) See Dart, p. 10, and 180.

(a) Gervas, in Decim. Script. col. 1369, 1403.

(b) Lel. Col. vol. , p. 68, calls him, Odo, alias Wood.

(c) As such, he is much praised by Leland. See some account of his writings in Dart, p. 181.

fuch

CATHEDRAL:

such a one might be elected, whom he should appoint, and accordingly named a bishop, who was to his liking a plain single man; but the prior, without dissembling, answered, that he neither would, nor could without the consent of his convent, give any promise; and soon afterwards, in opposition to the King's request, they agreed to the election of another to be archbishop. This prior is said to have fallen out with his convent, upon account of his translating the reliques of St. Dunstan and St. Elphage. In 1175 he vacated the office of prior here, on being made abbat of Battel in Suffex (d).

One Sampson Dorobernensis, of Canterbury, a man famous likewise for his piety and learning, and an excellent preacher, who wrote a book of homilies and other tracts; was contemporary and companion to him here, being a monk of this church about the year 1170 (e).

BENEDICT, the archbishop's chancellor, was the next prior in succession (f), and continued in this office till he was translated to be abbat of Peterborough in 1177 (g), and thence known by the surname of Petriburgensis, to which abbey he was a good benefactor, as appears by the register of it (h), as having carried thither from hence with him, some of the stones from the martyrdom in this church, which had been stained with Becket's blood, of which an altar was afterwards made in that church. He was a great favorite of K. Richard I, a man of very great learning, and is said to have been a doctor of divinity of Oxford; he wrote two treatises concerning St. Thomas Becket, and his miracles, as a history of the life and transactions of K. Henry II; a very curious treatise, and touching finely upon policy and church matters, and therefore much used by Bromton and Hoveden in the writing of their histories (i).

HERLEWIN, chaplain to archbishop Richard, succeeded Benedict, and was prior in the days of Pope Alexander III, who directed his bulls to him, commanding, that the offerings of this church should be disposed of for the repair of it; extreme age and a total deprivation of sight, having rendered him incapable of the government of his convent, he resigned his office on August 6, in the year 1179, in the third year of his being prior (k), and was succeeded by (d) Fox's acts and monuments, vol. i, p. 307. Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 304. R. de Diceto, col. 588.

(e) Battely's Somner, p. 141. Dart, p. 181.

(f) Gervas, col. 1432.

(g) Willis's Mitred Abbies, p. 146, 237. Gunton, 29, 299.

(h) Battely's Somner, p. 141.

(i) This manuscript is now among the Cotton Mss. See Dart, p. 181. (k) Gervas, col. 1456. He died in 1181.

(l) Ibid. col.

(m) See Dart, p. 182: }

ALAN, who was elected the same day; he was by birth an Englishman, and had been before a canon of Beneventum, afterwards sacrist of this church and doctor of divinity, and lastly prior of it (l). The monks had conceived such great hopes of his integrity and good conversation, that by the advice and consent of almost the whole convent, archbishop Richard was, as it may be said, forcibly compelled to promote him to the government of it. He is said to have been a man of wit, learning and piety; he wrote much, the particulars of whose labours may be found in Pisfeus (m). Being sacrist of this church in archbishop Becket's time, he was very intimate with him; but afterwards when he was prior, he opposed himself against archbishop Baldwin, both in his election, and in his proceedings afterwards; by whose policy, because he could not win him over to his interests, he at length, under pretence of his preferment, procured his removal from this priory to the abbey of Tewksbury, quasi in pœnam suæ constantiæ, of which he was made abbat about the year 1185 (n). He was undoubtedly a man of strict and stout resolution, for it is recorded in the register of Christ-church, that in the year 1181, when in a procession, for Roger Mortimer, an excommunicate person, for his contumacy, intruded himself at it. This prior observing him there, informed the archbishop, who was then present, of it, and again a second time, as the archbishop would have connived at it, the servants of the latter dissuading the prior from it, for fear of the King's displeasure; but he finding the archbishop would take no notice of it, told him, that since he would use his authority without, he would use his own within the church, and accordingly having entered it, and mass being begun, he required the convent to cease, who immediately obeyed, and the excommunicated person, to his shame, was by strong hand cast out of the church, and then they proceeded in the mass (o).

In his time lived Richard Pluto, a monk of this place, much commended by Leland for his skill in poetry, rhetoric, mathematics, philosophy and divinity, and especially ecclesiastical history, one of which he wrote of this kingdom, as well as other treatises; he died in 1181 (p).

HONORIUS, chaplain to archbishop Baldwin, and (n) Gervas, col. 1480. He received the benediction, on 17 cal. July, 1187. Willis, vol. i, p. 184. See Prynce, vol. i, p. 876. Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 479.

(o) Battely's Somner, p. 142. More may be seen of this prior, in the account of the troubles, which happened, between archbishop Baldwin and the monks of his church, in Fox's acts and monuments, vol. i, p. 308.

(p) On 12 cal. Nov. 1188, and was buried in the chapter house there. Willis, ibid. vol. i, p. 238. See Cotton Library Mss. marked Claudius, C. vi, 7, f. 166, printed in Dart, appendix, p. xxviii.

CATHEDRAL.

cellarer of this church, succeeded Alan on 7 cal. July, 1186; of whom, and of his two successors, more may be read in the account of the quarrels between the monks of this church and archbishop Baldwin, in Fox's acts and monuments (q). Being sent to Rome, to oppose the Archbishop, in his project of building a college at Hackington, he died there of the plague, in 1188 (r), and was buried in the cloyster of the church of the Lateran (s). He is honourably recorded in the obituary.

ROGER NORRIS was made prior in his room, on 2 non. Oct. 1189, by archbishop Baldwin, by his own authority, who forced him on the convent much against their will (t); on which account, in their treaty for conditions of peace and composition, one article was, that this prior should be deposed, and he was so accordingly, and promoted on Nov. 22, next year, at the request of the archbishop, to be abbat of Evesham (u).

About this time lived William Fitz Stephens, usually called Stephens and Stephanides, a monk of this church, descended of a noble family in Normandy. After spending most of his life in these cloysters he went over to France, where he grew famous for his knowledge in philosophy and divinity. He wrote much of St. Thomas, his miracles, &c. and of the affairs of K. Henry II. He flourished in 1190; Pitfeus gives a large encomium on him (v).

OSBERN DE BRISTO succeeded him in the dignity of prior here (w), with consent both of the King and convent, in 1190. He had before taken part with the archbishop, which so highly offended them, that immediately after his death they deposed him on 6 id. May, in 1191 (x).

JEFFRY, in Latin, Galfridus, sub-prior of this convent, was elected prior on the same day on which Osbern was deposed (y). In this prior's time the controversy between the monks and the suffragans of the province, concerning the choice of the archbishop, was decided by the decree of Pope Innocent III, who by another decree and letters to the archbishop, discarded secular priests out of the church and monastery. He seems to have died about the year 1205.

Contemporary with this prior, was the famous Gervasius Dorobernensis, or of Canterbury, a great historian and antiquary, whose authority, printed in the decim scriptores, is often quoted throughout this work, of whom Pitfeus will inform you more; as also of Nigelus Wineker, another monk here, and chanter of this church, on whom the same author, from Leland, bestows a most ample commendation for his piety and excellent endowments (z).

JOHN DE CHATHAM was promoted to this dignity on the death of his predecessor, in 1205, in which year a charter, granted by archbishop Hubert, to the hospital of Eastbridge, was confirmed by J. prior, and the chapter of Christ church. He died in July, 1217 (a).

WALTER, the third of that name, seems to have succeeded as prior of this church. There is a bull of pope Honorius, directed to him, dated Indict. Sext. (b)—and in one copy anno 1218; in another copy of it 1219. The Indict. Sext. beginning in the former, and ending in the latter of those years, might give occasion for the diversity of the dates of those years, which observation would not have been made, had not the learned writer of the history of these priors (c) misnumbered the year, by calculating the sixth indiction to be anno 1217 (d).

JOHN DE SITTINGBORN, so surnamed, most probably from the place of his birth, succeeded to the priorship in 1222, and was prior in the time of the church's troubles in relation to the election of a new Archbishop, after the death of archbishop Hubert; when the king, in the heat of his anger towards them, sent this prior and his monks, sixty-four in number, into banishment, and caused their places to be filled with others, from St. Augustine's abbey; but the King's wrath being at length appeased, they were, after seven years banishment, called home; full restitution was made, both to him and them, in every shape, and 1000l. given them as a recompence of all detriments they had sustained (e). This prior afterwards, in the vacancy of the see, by the death of archbishop Richard, in 1234, was elected in his room, by the free choice of the chapter; but on his presenting himself at Rome for confirmation (f), though the cardinals appointed for his examination, attested his fitness and sufficiency, yet the Pope persuading him it

(q) Fox, vol. i, p. 303 et seq. (r) See Dart, p. 182.

(s) Parker de Antiq. Brit. Harpsfield, hist. Eccl. Ang. Battely's Somner, p. 142. Gervas, in Decim. Script. col. 1436, 1456, 1533.

(t) Gervas, col. 1551. He was elected 2 non. Oct. 1189.

(u) Ibid. col. 1559, 1564. He was constituted abbat on November 22, 1190. (v) See Dart, p. 182.

(w) Gervas calls him, Osbert de Bristol.

(x) Gervas, in Decim. Script. col. 1188, 1436, 1456, 1570. Battely's Somner, p. 142.

(y) Gervas, col. 1570.

(z) Battely's Somner, p. 143. See some account of their writings, in Dart, p. 182.

(a) Gervas, in Decim. Script. col. 1436, 1456. Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 115. Willis, p. 238. Somner and Warton leave out both this prior and his successor.

(b) In Archiv. Hospital. de Estbridge.

(c) Regist. Eccl. Christi. Cant.

(d) Battely ibid. Ang. Sacr. pt. 1, p. 140.

(e) Matth. Paris, p. 315. Thorne, col. 1865, says, they returned in 1214, and ungratefully required the good offices of the abbat of St. Augustine's; at the same time, the archbishop was recalled from banishment. Mr. Somner has given this charter of restitution, from one of the ledger books of the priory, in his appendix, No. xlvi.

(f) Fox's acts and monuments, vol. i, p. 356.

CATHEDRAL.

was a charge of too great care and difficulty for him to manage, being an aged plain man, he humbly renounced his election, and craved licence to return home; and St. Edmund afterwards filled the chair, by the Pope's provision (g). He died the same year.

ROGER DE LA LEE succeeded him as prior, and continued so for the space of ten years, when, I suppose on his death (h), 9 cal September, 1244.

NICHOLAS DE SANDWICH was elected prior on November the 1st following, and resigned his dignity in 1258. In the register book of Christ church may be seen, the testimonial letters of archbishop Boniface, certifying that he did not depose him for going out of his cloyster contrary to rule, and taking a journey indiscreetly, as some reported; but that he only admitted of his resignation, at his own importunate entreaties. Four years after he had resigned this priorship, the Archbishop made him precentor of this church; and he died in the middle of September, 1289 (i), and was, as is conjectured, buried in the cemetery, a little within the gate, and that his epitaph is that which is cut into the stone, at the foot of a buttress on the south side of Becket's chapel, in strange old fashioned characters, now hardly legible, but may be read as follows, according to Mr. Somner (k):

Respice : care : mere : rogo : defuncti : miserere :
Sandwicensis : vivens : frater : memor : en : sis :
Qui : nunc : in : Limo : : e : stricte : jacet : ymo :
Dic : Pater : hinc : & : Ave : Deus : hunc : & :
protegat : a : ve :

Omni : ne : baratri : penas : sibi : sentiat : atri :
Set : celi : Solio : requiescat : in : agmine : pio :
Omnis : orans : ita : perpete : vila : Amen :

ROGER DE ST. ELPHEGE was elected prior in his room, on November 1, 1258. He is re-

(g) Matth. Paris, p. 317. The Annals of Waverley tell us, that a difference happening in the convent, he was so sensible of his mistake, that he turned Carthusian.

(h) At the foot of a buttress on the north side of Becket's chapel, there is this short epitaph, cut in the stone, in a strange and unusual character, after the old fashion, Hic jacet Rogerus (Here lyeth Roger); as brief a one as is possible to be, and which some think was designed for the epitaph, either of him, or his next successor but one, in the priorship; but if so, most probably, the word prior would not have been omitted. Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury-room of the dean and chapter, is a writing, marked N 27 an. 1243, to which is fixed the seal of this prior, representing him standing, mitred and robed, holding up his robe with his right hand, and a book in his left, and this inscription: SIGILL. ROGERIE. PRIORIS ECCLE CRISTI CANTUARIE.

(i) Battely, pt. 2, p. 115.

(k) Battely's Somner, appendix, No. xlix. Notwithstanding the conjecture of this epitaph having been designed for this prior, and the former one above-mentioned, for Roger de la Lee, yet it remains uncertain, whether they were either of them; for these priors, who were in general recorded to have founded and finished the small chapel, between the dormitory and the infirmary; in several of the windows of which were these words, Rogus de St. Elphege deait hanc fenestram (Roger de St. Elphege gave this window). He died on September 29, 1262 (l); and was buried in this church. In whose room was elected, by the convent, after this office had continued vacant for about seven years, the see of Canterbury being at this time likewise vacant by the death of archbishop Boniface, who died in his native country of Savoy, in 1270, ADAM DE CHILLENDEEN, who became prior of this church in that year (m). He was afterwards elected by the convent to be Archbishop; but by their advice in 1272, he delivered to the Pope with his own hands, the election which had been made of him (n). He died in 1274.

THOMAS DE RINGEMER, (or more properly Ringlemere), a monk of this church, was chosen prior in his room, on the 13 calends of October, the same year. In his time several monks of his convent leaving the monastery, dispersed and seated themselves abroad in the country on the estates belonging to the convent, converting to their own private use the produce of them, and spending their time in the pleasures of the world, contrary to the canons and the rules of monastic discipline. These the prior, an honest and pious man, called home, and provided that for the time to come, the possessions of the monastery should be committed to the care and management of trusty laicks and not to the monks. In this alteration he had the support of archbishop Peckham, who took his part and befriended him in it; notwithstanding which, he found the monks very reluctant and averse to reformation, who being impatient of an unwonted restraint, plotted together to displace him and to scandalize the arch- buried within the walls of the church, or in the chapter-house, and, as has been before observed, the word prior would certainly, as was usual, have been added to them; may they not more probably be for two of the monks, who were usually buried in these cemeteries; and as to the latter, it appears that at that time there were several of the name of Sandwich, in this monastery, particularly John and Alexander de Sandwich. See Dart, p. 183.

(l) Battely's Somner, p. 144. Battely says, he died on that day, 1263, p. 116; and Willis, p. 239. Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury-room of the dean and chapter, there is a writing, marked E 60 an. 1261, to which is affixed the seal of the prior, being an oval almost perfect, and very fine, representing him mitred, holding a book in both hands up to his breast, in a gothic niche; in the back of which is a view of the cathedral, the ground fretted round it; this inscription, SIGILLUM ROGERII PRIORIS ECCLESIE CHRISTI CANTUAR.

(m) The confirmation of his election does not occur till the year 1270, on account, as it is supposed, of the archbishop's being gone into his native country of Savoy.

(n) See Fox's acts and monuments, vol. 1, p. 439. Chron. Eccl. Christi, Cant. MSS.

W. B.

CATHEDRAL.

bishop. Certainly, says Harpsfield, this archbishop and Robert his next successor, made several decrees very useful and conducing to the regulating of the monks, and the keeping of them within the compass of monastic discipline; and as thirty of the due and antient number of them were decreased and wanting, archbishop Robert restored them to their full number. But to return to our prior, who resigned this dignity 16 cal. April, 1285 (o), and put on the habit of a Cistercian, at Beaulieu, in the diocese of Winchester, and afterwards becoming still more rigid, turned anchorite in 1305, having obtained the archbishop's leave for this change.

HENRY DE EASTRY succeeded him as prior, being elected 11th id. April, in 1285, the same year in which his predecessor had resigned this office, and installed the same day by the archbishop. He was a great and valuable man, a person of singular prudence, well learned in the scriptures and diligent in the management of the affairs of the church, to which he was a considerable benefactor, by discharging the convent of a debt of 3000 marcs; besides which, during the time of his presiding over this convent, he is recorded to have done many worthy acts, not only about this church and monastery, but on their several demesnes abroad, among which ought not to be forgotten, his repair of the church and chapter-house, which cost upwards of 1600*l.* the particulars of which have been already mentioned above, in the account of the fabric; besides which he repaired the several parts of the priory; as the prior's great and lesser chamber, with the chapel, the long chamber, the chamber by the treasury, with the lodgings there; the new chamber in the old plumbury, with the chapel; the great barn for hay; a cistern in the fish-pond, and another by the school of the novices; the prior's study; the great hall by the gate of the court; the new chamber of the prior was leaded, with the wardrobe, and the other chambers were paved; the new pantry and new kitchen in the prior's apartments were leaded; the cloysters were new paved, and a new gaol made; a new stable for the treasurer, with a hayloft and small barn; a new barn in the maltery; several new studies made; a new malt-house, with a new barn and other new buildings: all which, with the repairs and buildings in the church and chapter-house, as above-mentioned, and the bells, new vestments and other ecclesiastical ornaments which he gave to the church, and ten new shops which he built of stone in Burgate, amounted altogether to 2184*l.* and upwards (p); and he built besides a new grange at the convent's estate at Barton. In his time, and principally by his means, their estates were plentifully furnished with vines, as at Copton, Barton, St. Martin's, Chartbam, Brookland and Hollingborne, all manors belonging to it (q). They had to all or most of their manors, a domestic chapel, most of which, as well as the bertarys belonging to them, were new-built by him.

In his time a suit was brought by the city against him and the chapter, for building fourscore shops towards Burgate, and for stopping up the way between Queningate and Northgate; as to the latter, they defended themselves by the charter granted them by K. Henry II; and as to the former, the jury found, that though they had made these shops opening to Burgate, yet it was upon their own soil, and without prejudice to the city, as the church did not demand, nor had any stallage for them. In the list of the church's family, in this prior's time, a notary is mentioned as one (r).

In his time, namely, anno 1296, the priory was for some time in great distress, and perhaps deservedly, for denying the King a subsidy, by example of archbishop Winchelsea, who had made a denial of the payment of it; in consequence of which, all their temporalities were confiscated, and all that they had within the gates of the church were seized upon, so that they had nothing to subsist on, but what was sent them by their neighbours of the next monastery, out of charity, and this continued till at last necessity compelled the prior and convent to redeem their goods and possessions, by an humble submission (s).

(o) See the account of the resignation of the priory of Canterbury, by Thomas, who took on him the white habit of the Cistercians, and of the controversies which arose from thence, in Cotton Library Mss. Cleop. c. vii, 12.

(p) The above articles are entered in the prior's book, remaining in the Cotton Library, marked Galba E. iv. 14, f. 103. (q) Liber Eccles. Cant.

(r) The prior of this church most probably had always one, who was a notary, chiefly for the purpose of an amanuensis or scribe, for the dispatch of such business as was brought before him, by delegation, from the see of Rome; for there is a petition of this prior to the pope, for his authority to create two notaries, in the ledger of this church. See Battely's Somner, p. 145, appendix, No. li. Next to which is inserted, a grant of power, delegated to the prior of Christ church, at his humble petition in 1305, by Baf- gianus de Allyate of Milan, Count Palatine, to create three notaries public. Ibid. No. lii. upon which the prior created two of these notaries, viz. Master Richard de Northon, of Lincoln diocese, and John de Berham, of Canterbury diocese; and in 1309, he created a third, viz. John de Watford, cl. of Lincoln diocese. Ibid. No. liii. but K. Edw. II, looking on this intermeddling of foreigners as an affront to his prerogative, sent his writs in his thirteenth year to the several sheriffs and others, to make proclamations within their districts, and to inhibit these notaries from taking upon them and exercising the office within the realm; and that no archbishop, bishop, prelate, or their ministers, should in future give any credit to the instruments of these kind of notaries. See Somner, appendix, No. liii. liii.

(s) See Rayner, Apost. Benedict, appendix, p. 62. But in a petition which they made in 1327, to the bishop of Rochester,

This prior is recorded for his stout and faithful discharge of his duty in the maintenance of such rights and jurisdiction as belonged to and devolved on him and the chapter, during the vacancy of the see, after archbishop Walter Reynolds's death. But archbishop Parker's account of this matter will prove his best eulogium, who tells us, that this prior Henry was a man of great prudence and singular skill concerning the rights of his church; diligent in enquiring into the privileges, and no less diligent and industrious in managing the affairs of it. Within the space of a few months, he renewed and exercised all kind of jurisdiction which belonged to the prior and chapter, during the vacancy of the archiepiscopal chair, which had been before passed over and not exercised. He strictly enquired concerning such clergy as were presented to benefices, and the rights of their patrons; he granted letters of administration of the goods of intestate persons, received appeals, took the probates of wills, demanded accounts of executors and administrators, especially of the wills of deceased bishops, and of the administration of their goods. In particular he compelled the executors of the last will of archbishop John Peckham to give in their accounts; besides these things, prior Henry visited and received procurations, celebrated a synod, cited the clergy to parliament by the King's mandate, punished the contumacious and those that were disobedient against his jurisdiction, and collated to the benefices of vacant sees. Besides which, he claimed as the rights of his church of Canterbury, the choral copes, rings and seals from every suffragan bishop of the province of Canterbury; in short, he exercised in every instance all manner of archiepiscopal jurisdiction, except in the consecration of bishops, which, as he could not perform in his own person, he issued forth by his own authority his mandate and injunction to the bishop of London, that he, together with the rest of the bishops of the province of Canterbury, being assembled in the church of Canterbury on the day appointed for that purpose, chester, soliciting with much humiliation, the appropriation of the churches of Westerham and Etonbridge; they set forth, as the reason for it, that their church had sustained great and heavy losses, from the failure of their crops, the destruction of their effects near the sea, by the breaking in of it, and of their cattle, by a pestilence; that their great and rich estate in the marsh, by the overflowing of the sea was become nothing more than salts; at the same time the strangers which resorted to them continually, from foreign parts, and whom they could by no means get rid of, consumed their sustenance, and that the time of the wars still added to their misfortunes; besides which, they had supported no small burthen, in regard to a new chapel, which they had built, in honour of the B. V. Mary and St. Thomas the martyr, at a great and heavy expence, and for a perpetual chantry of six priests to celebrate in it daily: by all which various and expensive occurrences, the resources should consecrate the bishops of St. David's and Bangor, then elect, and confirm'd by his own authority; and when they were thus consecrated, he gave them testimonial letters of their consecration, sealed with the seal of the convent, &c. (t) Further than this, his acts and benefactions may be seen recorded in the obituary (u); he died 6 id. April, in the year 1331, æt. 92, having governed this church with dignity and honour for the space of forty-seven years (v).

During his time, anno 1324, Stephen Faverham, a monk of this church, was the first of the society of monks, who read theology in the cloyster of it (w).

RICHARD OXINDEN succeeded him as prior, on April 25, the same year, in which office he continued for seven years, and dying in 1338, was buried in St. Michael's chapel, in this cathedral, where his memorial on brass still remains in these words, Hic requiescit in gratia & misericordia dei Richardus Oxinden, quondam prior bujus ecclesie qui ob. Aug. 4, 1338.

Johannes de Teneth, (Thanetensis, Pitfeus calls him) a man famous for his piety and learning, was a monk of this church, contemporary with this prior, and was chaunter of it (an office of some account in those days); he was a witness to the preceding prior's letters or faculty of notaryship above-mentioned (x). He was well versed in the mathematics, and especially skilled in music. At this time likewise, lived Edmund Albone, doctor of divinity, and a monk of this church, whom Leland commends for his enquiries into divine mysteries, and for his other treatises (y).

ROBERT HATHBRAND succeeded to the priorship of this convent immediately after the death of his predecessor, being a pious, modest and discreet man. He was a considerable benefactor to this church, and enriched it with many ornaments; he built and repaired the stone hall and seven chambers adjoining to it, for an infirmary, and another chamber covered with lead, near the gloriol, and the new convent kitchen.

of their church, as was well known, were so much diminished, that the works of hospitality and charity had been through urgent necessity withdrawn, nor could they provide with decency for themselves, or their church. Regis Priorat. Cantuar.

(t) Parker, Antiq. Britan. p. 217.

(u) See Battely, pt. 2, No. xvii.

(v) Battely, pt. 2, p. 116. Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury room of the dean and chapter, is a writing, marked E. 134, dated anno 1291, to which is affixed the seal of this prior, an oval, very fair and fine, and representing the prior standing, holding a book in both hands up to his breast, in a gothic nich, the ground fretted; on each side of him a head in a quarterfoil; inscription, S. HENRICI PRIORIS DE - - - -

(w) See Leland Collect. vol. i, p. 274.

(x) Battely's Somner, p. 147. (y) See Dart, p. 184.

CATHEDRAL.

He gave the great organ, and the two great bells in the south-west tower, called Jesu and Dunstan, and the table at the altar of St. Thomas; besides which, he built many other edifices both within and without the convent, and purchased several manors and much land for his monastery. During his time, K. Edward III, on June 23, in his 12th year, received of the prior and convent several vessels of plate and jewels, towards his voyage into foreign parts; all which he promised by his obligation well and truly to return, or the value in lieu of them, on the All Saint's day following (z); and again in his 16th year, anno 1342, he directed his writs to the several abbats and priors throughout England, to borrow money to carry on his wars in France, specifying the sums he required of each, and promising to repay them out of the first money to be levied of the annual tenth granted to him by the prelates of the province of Canterbury; among the sums set down in which were, of the prior of Christchurch, 200*l.* and the abbat of St. Augustine, 100*l.* and again, in his 20th year, he borrowed great sums of money for the same purpose, of both clergy and laity; among which were, of the prior of Canterbury, 300 marcs, and of the abbat of St. Augustine's, 200 (a).

He governed this church for thirty-two years, and dying in 1370, was buried in the same chapel with his predecessor, his brass plate still remaining, with this inscription: Hic requiescit in gratia & misericordia Dei dominus Robertus Hathbrand, quondam prior hujus ecclesie qui obiit. xvij die. Aug. Anno Domini mcccclxx. Cujus anime propitiatur Deus. Amen.

In his time the monastery being visited with the pestilence, then raging generally throughout the kingdom, the whole convent almost died of it (b).

RICHARD GILLINGHAM succeeded as prior, in 1370, and having sat as governor of this church for six years, died in July, 1376 (c).

STEPHEN MONGEHAM succeeded him on Sept. 10 following; and died the next year (d).

JOHN FYNCH de Winchelsey was upon his death elected prior, in July, 1377, and governed this convent thirteen years, six months, and two weeks; and died on January 9, 1391. He was buried in the martyrdom within this cathedral, having been a good benefactor to this church, as his epitaph implies, which was remaining in part in Mr. Somner's time, as follows, though now the brass is gone: Hic jacet Johannes Fynch de Winchelsey quondam Prior hujus Ecclesie qui obiit

9. die Januarii edificia constructa & plura alia collata bona cujus anime (e). There is a bull of pope Urban VIth, granting to this prior and his successors, the privilege of wearing the mitre, tunic, dalmatic, gloves, and the ring, episcopal ensigns, to which the pastoral staff and sandals were added, and granted to his successor and the succeeding priors for ever, but to be used by them only in the absence of the Archbishop (f).

Stephen Birchington, a monk of this church, lived here at this time; he wrote, says Pitfeus, the lives of the archbishops of Canterbury, until archbishop Courtney; and a catalogue of the bishops of Ely. He was professed a monk in 1382.

THOMAS CHILLENDE, L.L.D. succeeded John Fynch as prior, in 1391, being elected on Feb. 16. Concerning this worthy and excellent prelate, much has been already mentioned in the account of the church's fabric, to which he was a matchless benefactor, and deserves eternal memory for it. Leland, in his Itinerary, vol. vi, f. 3, p. 6, says, "Prior Thomas Chillendene alias Chisledene was the greatest Builder of a Prior that ever was in Christes Chirche. He was a great setter forth of the new building of the Body of the church. He buildid of New the goodly Cloistre, the Chapter House, the New Conduit of water, the Priors Chaumbre, the Priors Chapelle, the great Dormitorie and the Frater, the Bake House, the Brew House, the Escheker, the faire ynne yn the High Streate of Cantorbyri and also made the waulles of mooste of the Circuite beside the Towne Waulle of the Enclosure of the Abbaye. This Chillendene was a Doctor of both the Lawes or he was made a Monke and Bp Wareham saide that he wrote certain Commentaries concerning the Lawes and that Clerkely."

But besides these, he is recorded to have made the new way to the church, and to have curiously guilded the biggest altar, and those of St. Dunstan and St. Alphage, and beautified some others; he enriched the wardrobe with costly vestments and the church with rich jewels and ornaments, and gave many choice books in different faculties. He obtained large privileges; as the grant and confirmation of the pastoral staff, sandals, &c. for the priors of this church, in absence of the Archbishop. The buildings mentioned above by Leland, may be thus further particularized, viz. the bake-house, granary, prior's stables, the walls and towers of the court, the edifice called the paved chamber and two others; the prior's apart- episcopal power and state, they and their successors were called lord priors, but they seem to be called so before this time, as appears by prior Hathbrand's epitaph in particular, above-mentioned; and this prior, John Finch, has not the title of dominus or lord in his epitaph, as may be seen above.

(z) Rot. Aleman, 12 Ed. III, p. 1, m. 10. Rym. Fœd. vol. v, p. 60. (a) Rym. Fœd. vol. v. p. 346, 491. (b) Battely's Somner, p. 147. (c) Regist. Sudbury. (d) Ibid. Regist. (e) Batt. Somn. p. 147, append. p. 62. Weever, p. 236. (f) Somner supposes, that because these were badges o

CATHEDRAL.

ments in the dormitory, and study in the almonry, with the novices hall and other apartments, and was otherwise a great benefactor in all respects to his house. In Canterbury college, in Oxford, he provided a most elegant chapel, and many convenient rooms, according to the number of students; and in the several manors belonging to this church, he re-edified and repaired most of the buildings belonging to them (g). He was well beloved by archbishop Courtney, but more so by his successor, archbishop Arundel, who made him his commissary of Canterbury, and lies buried near him at the upper end of the nave or body of the cathedral, a stately pile, and chiefly of his raising. When he had been prior almost twelve years, he was elected by the monks of Rockester to that see; which preferment he refused to accept of, as chusing rather to end his days in this place, which he accordingly did; and died, after he had so laudably governed this church, on August 15, 1411. His stone, which was formerly richly inlaid with brass, having had on it his portraiture in his prior's habit, remained till the new paving of the choir a few years ago, but the brasses have been all long since purloined. Mr. Somner has recorded the inscription round the edges of it, as follows: Hic jacet Thomas Chyllindenne quondam Prior hujus Ecclesie, Decretorum Doctor egregius, qui navem istius Ecclesie, ceteraque diversa edificia, quamplurima quoque opera laudabilia de novo fieri fecit. Pretiosa insuper ecclesiastica, multaque privilegia insignia huic Ecclesie acquisivit, qui postquam Prioratum hujus Ecclesie Annis viginti. 25. septimanis & quinque diebus nobiliter rexisset, tandem in die assumptionis beatæ Mariæ Virginis diem suum clausit extremum. Anno Domini 1411. Cujus animæ propitietur Deus. Amen (h).

William Gillingham, a monk of this church, was contemporary with this prior, of whom there is great commendation given by Pitfeus, as an historian. He flourished about 1390 (i).

JOHN WOODNESBOROUGH was constituted prior in the room of Thomas Chyllenden above-mentioned, on St. Gregory's day, Sep. 3, 1411. He is noted for having afforded succour to this city on the following occasion. In the year 1415, which was the third year of K. Henry V, the king had prepared an army with the purpose of entering France, and recovering his rights in that kingdom; upon which the French sent the earl of Vendosme, the archbishop of Bourges, and others, as ambassadors, to treat of peace; they being attended with 350 horsemen, landed at Dover, and proceeded to Winchester and Southampton, where the King then was. But the treaty was soon broken off, and the French were ordered to return home; and to prevent all danger of a surprize in their return through Canterbury, the bailiffs of the city set a watch and guard; to strengthen which, the prior of Christ-church armed from his servants and vassals, sixteen spearmen and twenty-four bowmen; and the abbat of St. Augustine likewise nine spearmen and twenty-four bowmen, all well accoutred and furnished with compleat arms, which was indeed as much to the safety of these churches, as of the city itself (k).

This prior continued to govern this church for seventeen years, and dying on February 28, in 1427 (l), was buried next above his predecessor Chyllenden, in the upper end of the nave of it, where his gravestone, once inlaid with brass, having his portraiture, habited as prior, but long since destroyed, remained till it was removed a few years ago on making the new pavement. Mr. Somner has recorded this inscription, in his time, round the edges of it.

*Est necesse substratus Jon Woodnesbergh tumulatus
Hujus erat gratus Prior Ecclesie numeratus;
Quem colie ornatus hic tantus ubique novatus,
Per loca plura datus sit sumptus testificatus:
Auctor erat morum, probitatis, laudis, honorum.
Largus cunctorum, cunctis dator ille laborum,
Quique Prioratum rexit sub schemate gratum.
Annos hunc plenos per septenos quoque denos:
Quadrigenis Mil. ejus bis quoque denis
Annis septenis Domini nondum sibi plenis.
. cum tibi Chrifte agone
Quem precibus pone radiantis forte corone (m).*

John Langdon, a famous monk and sub-prior of this convent, was contemporary with this prior, being admitted in it in 1398; he was doctor of divinity and created bachelor of the same in 1400; he was a very great divine and afterwards bishop of Rockester, of whom more may be seen in Pitfeus.

WILLIAM MOLASH succeeded as prior, on March 31, in 1428. The tower now called Dunstan steeple, built for the most part by archbishop Chicheley, being finished, this prior, in the year 1430, furnished it with a large bell, called Bell Dunstan (n); he also bestowed on the convent brewhouse, a great cauldron, of the weight of 5475 pounds, as is recorded in the church book (o). On his death, on 4th cal. March, in 1438,

(n) The diameter of this bell, at the lowest brim, was two yards, and somewhat more; and weighed 8105lb. See above, p. 553, where prior Huthband is said to have given a bell, named Bell Dunstan, for the use of the fourth-west tower of this church.

(o) Battely's Somner, p. 148, appendix, p. 63.

(g) See Willis's Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 241. Battely's Somner, p. 147.

(h) Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 62.

(i) See Dart, p. 185.

(k) See the record of it, Batt. Somn. append. No. lvi.

(l) Regist. Molash,

(m) Batt. Somn. p. 148, appendix, p. 63. Weever, p. 236.

CATHEDRAL.

JOHN SARISBURY, or Salisbury, S.T.P. custos, or master of Canterbury college, in Oxford, was chosen prior in his room; he died 14 cal. February, in 1445 (p), and was buried at the upper end of the nave of the cathedral, near his predecessors; his gravestone, which had been once ornamented with brass, in like manner as theirs, remaining till a few years ago. Somner has given the epitaph on it, as follows, as it was in his time.

*Preteriens flere discas & dic: miserere,
Et ne subsannes, quia vitæus morte Johannes,
Membris extensis jacet hic Sarisburiensis:
Sic non evades vindice morte cades,
Hic Prior Ecclesiæ Doctorque fuit Theoriæ:
Wulstani festo feria quarta memor esto
Mille quater centium x. v. dant documentum
Sint animæ merces, lux, decor & requies. Amen.*

JOHN ELHAM succeeded him as prior, on March 16, the same year, and governed this church for the space of two years, eleven months and four days; he died on Feb. 20, 1448 (q), and was buried just above his predecessor Woodnesborough, in the nave of this cathedral, under a large stone, having on it his portraiture in his prior's habit and an inscription inlaid in brass, all long since torn from it; but the stone remained till within these few years, when it was removed with the others. Somner has given the inscription round it as in his time, as follows: Hic requiescit Dominus Thomas Elham quondam Prior hujus Ecclesiæ, Qui cum Ann. 2. mens. 11. & 4. dieb honorifice vixisset. 20. Febr. 1440. obdormivit in Domino (r).

THOMAS GOLDSTONE was the next prior, being promoted to this office on April 16, 1449. He was a good benefactor to his church, and the estates belonging to it; for he laid out 1200l. to prevent the inundations of the sea in the church's manor at Apuldore; he erected a chapel in this church, to the honor of the Virgin Mary, which he caused to be arched with stone and covered with lead; he made the belfry in the south part of the nave, at the west end; and built, in the city of Canterbury, an edifice, consisting of many apartments, called the Bole, near the cemetery gate; and finished, at a great expence, the spacious library in Canterbury college, in Oxford. He presided here nineteen years, three months and twenty-five days; and dying, after five months sickness, on the 6th of August, 1468, he was buried in the above chapel of his own building, since called the dean's chapel; but his gravestone has not been there for many years, nor the particular part of it known where he was buried. Leland says, "Prior Goldstone the first, five priors before the Secunde, buildid the stone Tour yn the Weste ende of the chyrche(s)."

John Stone, a monk of this convent, and a man of great piety, was contemporary with this prior; he wrote an obituary of this church and other treatises, now in Bennet college library; of whom more may be learned in Pitsus; he lived to a great age, and flourished about 1467(t).

JOHN OXNEY was next elected prior on Sept. 1 following, and having continued in his priorship near three years, died on July 2, in 1471 (u), and was succeeded by WILLIAM PETHAM, who was constituted prior on August 13, 1471, and died in about a year afterwards, on August 19, 1472; on which

WILLIAM SELLING, S. T. P. was chosen in his stead, the 10th September following. He was a learned monk of this convent, and had before, with leave of his chapter, travelled into Italy, and studying at Bologna, became a great scholar. Out of his affection to antiquities, he gathered together wherever he came in Italy, all the antient authors, both Greek and Latin, that he could procure, and brought them over into England, and to Canterbury (v). Not long after his return, by the common vote and suffrage of the monks, he was chosen their prior, and K. Henry VII. taking notice of his worth, sent him ambassador to the Pope (w), and afterwards to France; in both which he acquitted himself with great honour, and obtained for his convent several large immunities. He was a great benefactor to this convent, on which he bestowed large sums of money; he covered the church with lead, and built a tower of stone from the foundation, afterwards called the prior's study, contiguous to the prior's chamber, called the Gloriet, and covered it with lead, glazed the windows, and otherwise adorned it. He handsomely ceiled the library over the prior's chapel, and placed books in it; he glazed the south side of the cloister and built the precinct wall, which extended from St. Michael's church to the old one, inclosing the convent garden. He built much on the several manors of the church, and many other edifices, both within and without the convent. At his request, archbishop Bourchier gave to the convent twenty-seven rich copes

(p) Regist. Stafford. (q) Ibid.

(r) Batt. Somn. p. 148, appendix, p. 63. Weever, p. 236.

(s) Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 5. (t) See Dart, p. 187.

(u) Battely, in his second part, p. 116, differs much from Somner, in the dates of the elections and deaths of the several priors.

(v) Shortly after his death, these curious books, among which were, Tully's books de Republica, so much desired, and many others of great price were reduced to ashes, by a fire, which happened in the monastery in the night time, by the carelessness of some drunken servants. Battely's Somner, p. 148.

(w) He was sent ambassador in 1490. Rapin, vol. i, p. 667, 668.

and

CATHEDRAL.

and other vestments (x). He died on Dec. 29, 1491 (y), and lies buried in the martyrdom or north cross of this cathedral, under a large stone of marble, round the edges of which was an inscription, and within that his portraiture in his prior's habit, inlaid in brass, but long since lost from it. Somner has recorded the inscription, as remaining in his time, as follows: Hic jacet reverendus pater Wilhelmus Selling hujus sacrosanctæ Ecclesiæ Prior, ac sacræ Paginæ Professor, qui postquam hanc Ecclesiam per ann. 22. mens. 5. & 24. d. optime gubernasset migravit ad Dominum, die viz. passionis Sancti Thomæ Martyris, Anno 1494.

*Doct̃or Theologus Selling Greca etque Latina
Lingua prædoctus hic Prior almus obit
Omnis virtutis speculum, exemplar Monachorum,
Religionis honor, mitis imago Dei.
Adde quod ingenii rivoꝝ tanta cucurrit
Copia cunctorum quantula rara virum.
Regius orator cujus facundia multat
Romanos Gallos Orbis & ampla loca.
Hujus præsidio res ista domestica rata est
Et redimita annis plurimis egregie.
Pervigil hic Pastor damna atque incommoda cuncta
A grege commisso fortiter expulerat.
Dum brevi tumulo latet hoc, tota Anglia famam
Predicat, & tanto luceat orba patre.
Huc iter omnis habens stet, perlegat & memor ejus
Oret ut ascendat spiritus alta poli (z).*

In his time lived Thomas Causton, monk of this church, who wrote an account of the monks professed from 1407 to 1486, and their obits to the year 1286, now among the archives of the dean and chapter (a).

THOMAS GOLDSTONE, S. T. P. the second of this name, succeeded as prior, on the 1st of Jan. following, and was likewise a man of great learning, and much in K. Henry VIIth's favour, who sent him ambassador to Charles the French King; but his memory is still more lasting for the new buildings and the reparations which he made in and about this church and the precincts of it, particularly the great middle tower of the church and the handsome and stately gate at the entrance from the city to it (aa). These, with his other works are easily discovered by his badge or rebus, being three gold-stones, the two first letters of his christian and surname T. G. and the mitre and pastoral staff, set up in many places about the church and monastery; besides which, he adorned the choir of this church with a suit of rich and costly hangings of tapestry.

His good deeds to his church are thus enumerated by Willis (b). He says, that this prior magnificently finished, by the aid of archbishop cardinal Morton, the tower or lantern in the middle of the church, and glazed and adorned it with elegant carved work and gilding, and for the support of it made two large stone arches, and four lesser ones, which were supported by pillars; he caused several books of service for the use of the church to be written, some of which were curiously embellished with gilt letters, flowers and arms; he likewise gave a very fine missal for the high mass; he made the wooden shrine of St. Owen to be curiously carved and inlaid with gold; he caused to be made a certain silver vessel, in which was deposited a part of St. Dunstan's skull, discovered in his time among the relics of the church; he gave a reading desk, a brass eagle, three pieces of arras hangings, setting forth our Saviour's life and death, which were hung up at certain seasons of the year; and provided two copes and other ornaments, and adorned the prior's chapel with certain tapestry, &c. He made a large drain to carry the rain from the church through the precincts, and built the new lodging (near the prior's old mansion, called La Gloriet), consisting of lodging rooms, dining rooms and other necessary apartments, with a handsome porch to the court. He exchanged the old gold and silver vessels for new, and added many others to them; and in the prior's wardrobe, he not only repaired the old, but gave many new vestments to it, and in short there was not a manor or place belonging to the convent, in which he did not make several new and costly buildings, and made reparations of the old ones; and he rebuilt the outward door of the church fronting the city.

He continued his government of this priory almost twenty-three years, and dying on Sept. 16, in 1517, was buried by his immediate predecessor, in the martyrdom of this church, with a like stone and ornaments, the brasses of which has been long since purloined from it; but Somner has given the inscription as follows, as in his time: Hic jacet reverendus Pater Thomas Goldstone hujus sacrosanctæ Ecclesiæ Prior, ac sacræ paginæ Professor qui postquam hanc Ecclesiam per

(v) Willis's Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 244.

(y) Leland, in his Itinerary, vol. vi, f. 3, p. 7, says, "Wylliam Tille alias Selling by his monkes name by cause he was borne at Selling village about a 2 Miles from Faverham. This Tille was the best of all the Priors yn good Letteis that was a late yn Christe Chirche yn Cantwarbyri. This Man was familiar in Bonony with Politiane, and was the fetter forth of Linacre to Politiane." Among the Chartæ Antiquæ of the dean and chapter, in their treasury room, is a writing, marked V. 4. no. 1486, to which is fixed a seal of this prior, representing, under a gothic canopy, the figure of God the Father, sitting and holding a Christ on the cross; underneath in a shield, the arms of the priory, and this inscription round the edge of the seal, S. PRIORIS & CAPITULI XI CANTUARIE.

(z) Batt. Somn. append. p. 63. (a) Dart, p. 187.

(aa) See a representation of this elegant and stately gothic building, the ornaments of which are now much defaced by time, on the following page.

(b) Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 245.

CHRISTCHURCHGATE CANTERBURY

• HOC OPUS CONSTRUCTVM EST ANNO DOMINI MILLESIMO QVINGENTESIMO
SECIMO SEPTIMO

Inscription on the Cornice over the Gateway

*annos 24. 8. mens. & dies 16. optime gubernasset, migravit ad Dominum, 16. Septemb. Anno Dom. 1517.
Cujus anime propitiatur Deus. Amen.*

Tangite vos Citbarum plangentes carmine, mole Hic jacet occulta Religionis bonos.

*Occubuit Doctor Thomas Goldston vocitatus
Moles quem presens saxea magna tenet.*

*Arripit hunc patrem mors pervigilemque Priorem
Sic rapitur quoque lux istius Ecclesie.*

*Grege sibi commissus monachorum plangat eundem
Omissum Patrem, qui sibi fautor erat.*

*Largus in expensis fieri dat plura novata
Istius Ecclesiam vestibus ornat idem.*

*Sic fuit ad Regni laudem canit Anglia largus
Totus & is mitis pauperibus fuerat*

*O vos spectantes hujus jam funera patris,
Nunc estis memores fundite quæso preces
Requiescat in sancta Pace. Amen (c).*

(c) Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 63.

(cc) See Dart, p. 188.

(d) See Wood's Ath. vol. i, Fasti. col. 10.

(e) Leland, Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 6, says, "Goldstone the Secunde began the goodly South Gate into the Minstre and Goldewelle the laste Prior at the suppression performed it."

There were some learned men of this monastery who flourished about this time; among which were, John Uton, who wrote of the obiits and memorable things of this church. Laurence Vade, who wrote the life of Becket; and one Reginald, who wrote the life of Malcbus of Constantinople, in Latin verse, translated from the Greek; and Martyn Chyve, a famous preacher, who left behind him a volume of sermons (cc).

THOMAS GOLDWELL, S. T. P. of Canterbury college, in Oxford, succeeded to this priorship on his predecessor's death in 1517, and was the last prior of this convent (d). He continued in the government of it till the year 1540, anno 31 Henry VIII (e), in which year this priory was dissolved, and the prior and monks ejected (f), and a dean and twelve prebendaries placed in their room. This prior being a person of exemplary

(f) He, with sixty-eight others, on September 12, anno 26 Hen. VIII, signed the act of succession and supremacy. See Rym. Fæd. vol. xiv, p. 497. See a letter of Thomas Goldwell, prior of Christ church, to lord Cromwell, among the Harleian MS. No. 604-28.

CATHEDRAL.

virtue and revered character, was, on the new foundation of this church, offered one of the canonries or prebends of it, which he seems to have refused, for he retired with a pension of 80*l. per annum*, settled upon him during his life (g).

It ought not here to pass unnoticed, that the priors of this church were, in general, men of a noble and public spirit, who undertook and accomplished great and wonderful things for the benefit of this church; and to bring it to that state and magnificence, it at last arrived at, their benefactions to it from time to time were almost incredible, as they are recorded in the obituary of it; and the frequent mention made of their munificence in the account given above of the fabric of the church, cannot but imprint on the reader's mind, a strong and lasting idea of their noble works.

The arms of this priory were—Azure, on a plain cross argent, the letters $\frac{1}{2}$ in old English characters (h).

As to the seals used at different times by this priory, they had three, the latest being still larger than the former ones; the first of them, being two inches diameter, is much of the same size and character with that leaden seal of St. Augustine's bull or charter, set out by sir Henry Spelman, in his Councils, p. 122. It has been said, that there was another seal, still more ancient than these, the words on which, in allusion to the dedication of the church to the Holy Trinity, was, DEUS PATER, DEUS FILIUS, DEUS SPIRITUS SANCTUS; of this, however, Mr. Somner, p. 87, makes some doubt, as well because, though conversant in the church records, he never at that time had met with any such seal; and because, the seal which was in use not long after the conquest, namely, both in the time of archbishop Anselm (Lanfranc's immediate successor) and of Ernulpb the prior, that is about the beginning of the 11th century, which he had often seen, had no other inscription, but the following on it, nor would the proportion of the seal admit of a larger. This, therefore, he judges to have been the first seal of the church. This inscription is, SIGILLUM: ECCLESIE: CHRISTI:—It has no counterseal.

This seal continued in use till the new dedication of the church about the year 1130, when it was again renewed; this new seal being three inches and a quarter diameter, has in the front part the representation of the church, with this inscription round it: SIGILLUM: ECCLESIE: XPI: CANTUARIE: PRIME SEDIS BRITANNIE: and on the other side, the figure of our Saviour, and round it, EGO SUM VIE VERITAS ET VITA. This seal, seemingly the second seal of the priory, continued in use till archbishop Becket's martyrdom, and then was changed again to another, being three inches and three-quarters diameter; it had on one side that martyrdom represented, with these verses round the rim of it: EST: HUIC: VITA: MORI: PRO: QUA: DUM: VIXIT: AMORI.—MORSERAT ET MEMORI PER MORTEM VIVIT HONORI; which, however, appears to be the counterseal; and on the upper side, the representation of the church; under the church door is the word METROPOLIS; over the middle door, under the bust in the pediment is . . . r. DOMVS. I. X. P. on the convent wall surrounding MVRI. METROPOL. ISTI. X.; the inscription being SIGILLUM: ECCLESIE: XISTI: CANTURIE: PRIME: SEDIS BRITANNIE. This seal was not altered afterwards, but continued in use during the existence of the priory.

At the time of the new foundation of the church afterwards, by K. Henry VIII, the common seal was again changed and new made; and as St. Thomas was no longer reputed a saint, and his death no longer accounted a martyrdom, so the representation of it, on the seal of this church, was no longer continued; and on the new seal of it, instead of the murder of Becket, it has on the front a representation of the church, having three towers, with spires, a figure standing in the porch, two angels above incensing, and two stars, and this inscription: SIGILL. CATHED. ET. METROP. XI. CANT. NOVITER. ERCTE. P. REGE. HEN. VIII. On the counterseal the church, in the door a crucifix, two angels over the church, and this inscription: EGO + SUM + VIA + VERITAS + ET + VITA + ANNO + INCARNATI + CHRISTI + 1540; being the church's last seal, and made use of at this time.

Several of the above seals are appendant to writings among the chartæ antiquæ, in the treasury room of the dean and chapter, as are three different seals of the chapter of the priory, ad causas.

The first of these, of the date 1293, has on the front a representation of the church and Becket's murder, knights at the sides, approaching him; over Becket's head, God the Father; on the counter seal, the Salutation; under, the prior praying; diameter three inches. The inscription, NUNCIAT HIC AVE, &c.

The second, anno 1359, the same front, but a different counterseal, being three busts full faced, in three circles, placed triangular; diameter two and a half.

The third, anno 1461, the same front, with this inscription, SIGILLVM ⊕ ECCLESIE XISTI ⊕ CANTUARIE ⊕ AD ⊕ CAUSAS: +. On the counterseal three heads, as above, representing the Trinity, and this inscription, DEUS PATER. DEUS FILIUS DEUS S. PS SANCTUS. Diameter three and a quarter.

(g) Battely's Somner, pt 2, p. 116.

(h) See Tan. Mon. p. 195.

CATHEDRAL.

HAVING now finished the account of the priors of this church, as well as of the fabric itself, it will be proper to make some mention of the several privileges, liberties and revenues belonging to this priory, and of other matters relating to the establishment and government of it.

The archbishop himself was reputed the head of this monastery, in the stead of an abbat, who had the superior power over the convent; hence the monks contended, that no one could be duly constituted archbishop, unless he first professed himself a monk of their own order, that is, a Benedictine (i); and this custom seems to have continued till the year 1123, when the King and bishops, being of the secular clergy, over-ruled it, notwithstanding the vehement opposition made by the prior and convent; and William Corboil, who was a secular, was constituted archbishop (k). Certainly, the archbishop being as their abbat and their father, superior or governor, might be a strong reason why, as to that part of his function, the choice of him should belong to the convent, and as such it must have been most satisfactory, as well as most beneficial, to the common interest of the convent.

The archbishop was visitor of the convent, and though the convent elected and presented the persons to him, yet he had the power of approving and constituting the prior, sub-prior, the obedientiaries, and some other inferior officers; but in other respects the chief government of it was committed to the prior. The disposal of the revenues and the management of all the temporal affairs of it, wholly belonged to the prior and chapter, the archbishop having no concern in them. For the election of a prior, the manner was thus; the death of the late prior being notified to the archbishop, by letters from the convent, he came, attended by his chaplain only, to the chapter-house, within which the monks were all summoned to attend him, for the creating of a new prior; when, after a short exhortation on the occasion, each gave in the name of the person

(i) Thus, when Odo was in 941 promoted to this see, he qualified himself for it, by making the vows and putting on the habit of their order, lest he might give offence to the monks, who had never seen an Archbishop chosen in any other habit.

(k) This remarkable contest between the provincial bishops and the prior and convent, is thus told: On the feast of the purification, the King kept his court at Gloucester, where all the bishops and the prior of this church, with some of his monks were present, and it was proposed to fill the see of Canterbury, then vacant. Several worthy persons were recommended as fit for this dignity, and the prior and his monks recommended likewise to the King, some good men of their own order; and declared, that whichever of these the King should approve of, they would readily accept him, and immediately proclaim their Archbishop elect; but the bishops who were of the secular clergy made their exceptions, alleging, that they would not consent that a monk should he voted for to be prior; which, as well as the person naming, the chaplain wrote down in a roll. Next day the archbishop having taken that time to consider of it, named aloud, in full chapter, that person to be prior, whom the greater and more discreet part of it had voted for. Upon which, the prior elect, having first pleaded his insufficiency, the precentor began the Te Deum, and all rising from their seats, the convent preceding, the archbishop and prior following, they all chanting, solemnly entered the church, and being come into the choir, the archbishop directly installed the prior in his stall, on the north side; which done, the archbishop being seated in the first stall, on the south side, waited there during the time the Te Deum, and the usual versicles and prayers were repeated; after which they all returned to the chapter-house, in the same order as before; where, before the archbishop had seated himself, he placed the prior in the seat next to him, on the north side, and then giving his benediction to the convent, and people, he returned to his apartment in his palace, and the convent to divine service in the church (l). In which manner Richard Oxendin was elected prior of this church in 1331. But if the prior happened to die in the vacancy of the see, the monks proceeded immediately to elect one of their own body; which election, the new archbishop, as soon as he came to his church, was obliged to confirm, unless there appeared a legal and justifiable cause to the contrary, by the bulls of the Popes Alexander III, Innocent III, Urban III, Celestine III, and Gregory IX; of such value did the privilege of electing their prior by themselves, in the vacancy of the see, seem to be to them (m).

The prior, thus seated in his dignity, was esteemed honourable, and received with profound veneration by the convent at all times; Lanfranc's decrees concerning the Benedictines made large provisions for all due respect to be paid to an abbat or prior in these monasteries. This veneration, and even high admiration, was in-prelude over them, as their primate, especially as the secular clergy afforded as fair a choice of excellent persons, and as well qualified to govern the church as any to be found in monasteries; but the prior and his brethren insisted with much vehemence, that none but a monk could be rightly elected; and further, that from the time of St. Augustine, who was a monk, and the first Archbishop, to that day, every Archbishop had been of the Benedictine order; notwithstanding all which, the choice of an Archbishop was at that time determined by the King, against the prior and his monks; and William Corboil, a secular, was accordingly constituted Archbishop. See Decim. Scriptores, Simon Dunelm, and Gervas.

(l) See this form of electing and installing the prior of Christ church, in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. lvii, and an extract from the several Pope's bulls for this purpose, in ibid. pt. 2, appendix, No. xvii.

(m) Battely's Somner, p. 99, appendix, p. 44.

created,

CATHEDRAL:

increased, from his being upon all solemn occasions adorned with rich and glorious vestments, and from its being granted to him to bear the honourable ensigns of episcopacy, the mitre, the pastoral staff, the ring, the gloves, the sandals, and the like. From these grants, as well as from his summons to parliament, his style and title of honour was derived; and he was usually addressed by that of my lord prior.

It may not be improper to recite here these grants in the same order in which they were made, together with some other concessions of honour and privileges made both to the prior and the convent. In the year 1205, Pope Innocent gave the prior licence to wear the episcopal gloves (n), for an ornament to his hands (o). At the same time he invested him with the robe, called the dalmatia, which was the common habit of all bishops; and by the same bull, the Pope gave him licence to use the napkin at the altar; the meaning of which was, when the bishop had put on his habit, in order to administer there, he had a fine napkin or bandkerchief fastened to his left arm. The prior therefore had licence to use the like napkin, when he officiated at the altar. Anno 1220, Pope Honorius, of his special grace, put the pontifical ring, as a token of honour, on his finger; and the mitre, which was called the sacerdotal crown, upon his head, with the licence of wearing them upon all solemnities in synods, at processions, and on the great festivals of the church. Thus the prior appeared in like manner as a bishop. In the year 1378, Pope Urban granted him licence, in the absence of the archbishop, to use the pastoral staff, to put on the sandals or slippers, which were richly embroidered, and to give the solemn benediction.

By the rubric of the Roman missal, it was inhibited to wear the dalmatic robe, or to sing the angelical hymn, Glory to God on High; in the stated seasons of fasting, Pope Alexander granted a dispensation to this church, that the dalmatic robe might be used, and gloria in excelsis might be sung upon certain feasts of St. Gregory, St. Benedict, and St. Alphege, if they happened to be in the time of Lent; and on St. Andrew's day, when it happened within the time of Advent (p).

(n) Licentiam utendi chirothecis, dalmatica, nec non mantello in mensa, Bulla Innocentii.

(o) Chirothecæ ab ordine Romano dicuntur manicæ, quia manuum sunt ornamenta. Gavant. Thefau. Rituum. p. 94.

(p) Pope Honorius further indulged them with liberty to wear on their heads in time of divine service, black caps lined with black fur, from the feast of St. Michael to the feast of the Resurrection. This concession was made to them, as well for honor as for necessity sake, as well for ornament as to defend their heads from the severity of the cold, in winter time; as the bull itself declares. All these bulls above-mentioned, are extant in the registers of the church,

The prior and chapter had a pre-eminent jurisdiction, which of course devolved upon them as often as the see of Canterbury became void, for the canon law put them in possession of an authority to exercise all jurisdiction, as well provincial as diocesan, during that vacancy, when they acted as the dean and chapter does now, in like manner, and equally the same as archbishops (q). They sent forth their commissions according to their power, for the visiting of the dioceses within this province, as well as the abbies, priories, nunneries and collegiate churches. They summoned provincial synods, had the archiepiscopal right of the probate of wills, and all other like privileges (r).

At the provincial synods, the prior was seated with the mitre on his head, on the bench of bishops, in like manner as one of them; to the parliament he had several times summons by royal mandate; of this the registers of the church do not afford any information; however, from Mr. Selden we learn, that the first summons the prior of this church received to parliament, bore date anno 49 Henry III, at which time above 100 regular barons, that is, abbats, priors and masters of orders, besides the deans of York, Exeter, Sarum, Wells and Lincoln, were in like manner summoned to parliament. The next summons, which he mentions, wherein the prior of the Holy Trinity in Canterbury, was present in Parliament, was in the 23d year of K. Edward I, when the chief abbats and priors only, about fifty in number, were called to parliament; another summons to the prior of this church was anno 24th of the same reign, and others again in the 25th and 27th of it; others again in the 13th and 14th years of K. Edward II; and again in the 5th year of King Henry IV (s); after which it does not appear that this prior was any more summoned to parliament.

The last of these summonses seems to have been an act of grace, at the earnest request of Thomas Chilleuden, who was then prior of this church, who was one of a high spirit, a zealous promoter of his own honour and greatness, as well as that of his church. It was this prior who obtained the Pope's bull for the pastoral staff, and afterwards obtained the repetition of the sum- especially the register G. See Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 100.

(q) See Wilkins's Councils, tom. ii, p. 31, 32, 185, 292, 423, 425, 426, 741.

(r) The archdeacons of Canterbury contended a long time with the convent, and tried to wrest this right from them, but could not prevail; of which more will be mentioned below. See the letters procuratory, and the libels exhibited on the part of the prior and convent of Canterbury, against Richard de Feringes, archdeacon, and the process of the dispute between them, concerning jurisdiction, in Mss. Cotton Library, Nero. C. ix, 16.

(s) Selden on Parliaments, p. 720.

CATHEDRAL.

mons to parliament, a privilege which his successors never enjoyed after him.

The prior of this church had a large family, and many officers and servants belonging to his lodgings and his stables; he had his esquires to attend upon his person, as his chamberlain, marshal, &c. He had his clerk, notary, messengers, master of his stables, cook, butler, with a number of others bearing more menial offices (t).

The other officers of account belonging to the priory, were; first, the sub-prior, whose office was to supply the place of the prior in his absence; during which, he took care that all due order should be observed in the monastery. He was much respected by the convent, being next in dignity to the prior himself, not eating or sleeping in common with the rest of the monastery, but having his own proper chamber and apartments, and his table too, to himself.

The chief officers, called the obedientiaries, were next to him in dignity; these were in order, the cellarer, the chamberlain, the sacrist, and the treasurer (u), to which may be added the precentor and the two penitentiaries; all these officers were constituted by the archbishop, by the convent's nominating three monks to him for each place, from which he chose one, who was admitted to the office (v). These obedientiaries were absolved from their offices by every new archbishop, and they resigned them into his hands, as did the superior his, and the archbishop then made a new choice of them.

By the antient charters of our Kings, this monastery had the grants of divers liberties, immunities, freedoms, and privileges, such as have been usually granted to free boroughs, cities, and other civil corporations in the largest extent; the terms of these grants are obsolete, and but little understood; but the monks were absolute masters of this kind of learning; and being even industrious to procure, and pertinacious to maintain, their privileges, they took care to be well skilled in understanding the utmost extent of them. These liberties are all of them, from the change of the times, and the great alteration in the constitution and subsequent laws of this realm, now obsolete, and of no manner of use; I shall therefore only mention, that by the charter of K. Henry II, this monastery was exempt, among many other privileges, from the charge of repairing bridges, castles, parks, and inclosures. It was freed from doing suit and service in the county, or shire courts, and in hundred or latb courts, which exemption was extended to all their lordships, and villages; it had also a grant of free-warren in all its feudal lands, and free mercats in divers places (w).

The papal bulls obtained from time to time by the prior and convent, in which were contained liberties and indulgences, grants and possessions, and the confirmation of former ones, though now of no use, were once esteemed by all of the greatest value and authority (x). The piety and profuse bounty of kings, nobles and other persons had liberally endowed this church with ample possessions and revenues; several bold and strong attempts were made to wrest these possessions at various times from it; to prevent which, the convent betook themselves for protection to the see of Rome, and procured bulls from several Popes to confirm to them their manors, lands, appropriations, and other of their possessions and revenues, all which were particularly specified, and were preserved safe and inviolate by them; for these instruments were at that time esteemed superior to the will of the King, or the laws of the land, being armed with a double-edged sword, of earthly and divine vengeance. By other bulls, they became exempted from the payment of tythes of their gardens, of the increase of their cattle, and the like (y); by others they were impowered to take

(t) See an account of them from the regist. of the church of Canterbury, printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xviii.

(u) The cellarer was, by the decrees of archbishop Lanfranc, styled the father of the monastery; he was an officer of great authority, having many others under him. The names of whose offices may be seen in Somner's appendix, No. xxxv. The chamberlain, by his office, provided cloths, mats, blankets, &c. in the cells and other parts of the monastery. The sacrist, by his office, took care of the ornaments of the altar, church and monastery, of the tolling of the bell at proper hours, and every other matter belonging to divine services in the church; for which purpose he had likewise a number of officers and servants under him; one part of his office was to provide the lights and tapers, or candles of wax set up in the church, and used upon different occasions. The number and weights of them may seem incredible to those, who have not seen them in the greater monasteries abroad; these have already been noticed above, and an account of them may be seen in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 45. The treasurer's office was to take care of the receipts and payments of the church's revenues, the whole of which was under his management.

(v) When the convent nominated no more than two to archbishop Winchelsea for each place, and requested of him to make his choice, he refused to comply, requiring that according to antient custom, three persons should be nominated to him. Battely, pt. 2, p. 102.

(w) K. Edward II, in his first year in particular, issued his writ to the sheriff of Kent, commanding him that the tenants of this church should be exempt from doing suit and service in future, in the county courts. Battely, pt. 2, p. 103.

(x) See Ang. Sacr. tom. i, and Wilkins's Councils passim, in which the grants of these liberties and immunities, and the confirmations of them, are severally noticed.

(y) It is recorded in one of the ledger books of the priory, that pope Gregory exempted the prior and convent, de minutis decimis non dandis, so did pope Alexander; before de decimis gardinorum, pasturarum, molendinorum, pomorum, de fructibus nemorum & de minutis aliis; and by another bull, although their tenants paid their tythes of manors, &c. which they held in lease, yet it provided that this should not be prejudicial in any shape whatsoever to the convent.

CATHEDRAL.

of the oblations and obventions of the altars in the church, as they thought fit, which before had been the archbishop's right, according to the canons of the church. By other bulls, they had a power of excommunicating (z) all those found guilty of sacrilege, committed within the walls of their monastery, and all other malefactors within them, in the absence of the archbishop and vacancy of the see; this was no small safeguard to the monks themselves, as well as to the goods of their church and monastery, and they had by them likewise the liberty of free sepulture of all, who should desire to be buried within their church and cemetery; a privilege which brought in a considerable profit to them.

They had besides those above-mentioned, other bulls which provided for their safety, quiet and honour, especially against such attempts as the archbishops upon every displeasure might make to vex and molest them; an attempt they had at times experienced, and it therefore seemed prudent to make the best provision they could against the like in future. Archbishop Theobald had, by his own authority, deposed two of their priors, an instance never before heard of; his successor Baldwin was forced upon them, to be elected their archbishop, against their will; and there were continual disagreements between him and the monks; and the convent was fearful lest he might do as Theobald had done before, and take upon him to depose their prior at pleasure. For which reason, anno 1187, being the third year of archbishop Baldwin's pontificate, they obtained a bull from Pope Urban, that the prior should not be deposed, or suspended by any one, unless upon manifest and reasonable cause. This privilege was confirmed by the bulls of the Popes Alexander III, Celestine III, and Honorius III. They further obtained licence of appealing to the see of Rome, against all greivances; an injunction likewise, that no monk should be punished for any irregularity, but within the chapter-house; and a declaration, that the prior and convent should not be bound to pay any debts contracted by the archbishop after his consecration (a). They obtained an inhibition, that no archbishop should impose on the convent new and undue exactions in vestments, and the like, and a licence and power of a free administration, disposition of their own affairs, and of keeping their own seal, and of committing to the sub-prior, in the absence or vacancy of the prior, the care and administration of the concerns of the convent; the express reason for which was declared to be, that the archbishop should have no pretence to administer, dispose of, or intermeddle with the affairs of the convent at any time. There was also a papal injunction, that in the vacancy of the see of Canterbury, the comprovincial bishops, or any others, should not withdraw the obedience which they owed to the metropolitan church; and a power was given to the convent to send for any one of the suffragan bishops of the province, the see of Canterbury being vacant, to celebrate the episcopal duties within this church, in case the bishop of Rochester could not come for that purpose; they had also a licence, that whenever the kingdom should lie under a general interdict, to celebrate divine service with a low voice, no bell being tolled, the doors being shut, and excommunicated and interdicted persons being excluded; besides these above-mentioned, there were numbers of papal bulls, licences and provisions, which were granted to this convent upon more trivial matters and occasions, which are too immaterial to insert here; but it ought to be remembered, that all privileges, rights, liberties, and jurisdictions whatsoever, which belonged to, or were used by the prior and convent of this church, and are not now dissonant, or prohibited by the laws and established religion of this realm, are at this time, by the foundation charter of K. Henry VIII, in which they are granted in as full and ample a manner as they were ever at any time enjoyed and used by the prior and convent, vested in the dean and chapter of this church.

(z) However, in these times, the word excommunication may be held in derision, as a harmless ecclesiastical threat, and many there are who have never experienced, or perhaps ever heard of the contrary, as the courts where it is brought forward seem to fear much to awaken the public odium against them; yet the effects of their sentences are even now most cruel and oppressive; and there are, as I am well informed at this time, several poor, ignorant and unguarded culprits, who have suffered in a prison for years, from the sentence of them. In former times, nevertheless it was still worse, for the guilty when delivered over to the civil

Besides the above-mentioned papal grants, there are among the archives of this church, numbers of grants of manors, lands, possessions and appropriations of churches, and of privileges likewise made and confirmed to this church in former times, by the several archbishops of this see. One noted privilege ought not to be omitted, as it survived the dissolution of the monastery itself, for this church has an undoubted right to it at this day. This privilege was, that no suffragan bishop of the province of Canterbury might be consecrated any where, but in the metropolitan church at Canterbury (b), to which he was bound power, after ecclesiastical censure had passed, underwent even condign corporeal punishment.

(a) The payment of debts contracted by an Archbishop, before his consecration, was never charged upon the church or monastery; but after consecration, they had been charged with such debts out of the common stock of the church and convent. This was contrary to reason and equity, since the Archbishop and the church or monastery, had their distinct possessions, rents and revenues. Battely, pt. 2, p. 104.

(b) Wilkins's Councils, tom. ii, p. 113, 287. Brown's Fasciculum, app. p. 313. Harl. Mss. No. 357-13-14.

CATHEDRAL.

to profess obedience and subjection, unless the chapter of it gave him, under their common seal, a dispensation and licence to be consecrated in some other church.

In antient times the archbishops resided chiefly in their palace at Canterbury, or in some of their manors near it, and the suffragan bishops elect came directly to this church for consecration. From common practice this grew up into a general custom, and thence into a privilege claimed by this church; for archbishop Becket perceiving how much it tended to the honour and advantage of it, established this custom as a rule or privilege, by his charter granted to this church, decreeing by it that the suffragan bishops of the province should be consecrated, as ever had been the custom, in it, and no where else; which charter was confirmed by pope Gregory the ninth; and the privilege was established still firmer by the example of archbishop Edmund, who, when he was going to consecrate Robert Grossthead, elect bishop of Lincoln, in the church of Reading, was opposed in it by the monks of this convent, when yielding to them, he forbore to consecrate the bishop, until he had, by entreaties, obtained their consent, and adding a solemn protestation and acknowledgment, that the consecration of a suffragan bishop could of right be celebrated no where but in the metropolitanical church of Canterbury, unless by the dispensation and common consent of the whole convent; which acknowledgment he gave under his own seal, and the seals of the bishops, who were then present at the consecration, namely, Jocelin, bishop of Bath; Robert, bishop of Sarum; Roger, bishop of London; Hugh, bishop of Ely, and Ralph, bishop of Hereford. After which this privilege re-

(c) The following is a letter sent by K. Henry VIth, for this purpose, which is now remaining in the archives of this church, the request of which was granted:

By the Kyng

Right Trusty and well Beloved in God, we greet you well. And forasmuch as for certain Considerations movyng us, We Wull our Right Trusty and well Beloved Clerk Maister Thomas Bechynnton Keeper of our Privy Seal be Consecrated nigh about our Personne: how be hit, that we ben informed ye owe of right to have him Consecrated in your church of Canterbury, which is the notable Metropolitanical church of this our Reaum. We Write unto you desyryng and hartili praying you, that out of Reverence, ye Wull conform you to our Special Desyre at that tyme, trusting therein to do unto us right Singular plesier yeven under our Signet at our Mannour of Henly on the Heth the Second Day of September

To our Trusty and well beloved in God, The Prior and Convent of Christ Church in Canterbury

(d) The names of the martyr and confessor were left out of it, in obedience to the royal injunction, and the authority of the apostolical see was omitted on the same account, and the privilege was asserted to be upon antient, uninterrupted and immemorial custom and practice. See a form of both these licences, the former granted in 1509, maintained, unviolated, so long as the priory continued. In the registers of this church, many of these dispensations or licences for the consecration of suffragan bishops in other churches or chapels, are recorded, for which every bishop had a separate one. At first these licences were not easily obtained; the King, the archbishop, the bishop elect, or some other great persons sent their petitions or requests; without which they were never granted (c).

In the form of these licences granted by the convent, it is said, that this privilege was granted by St. Thomas, the glorious martyr, and St. Edmund the confessor (d), according to custom of antient date. In the time of archbishop Cranmer, before the dissolution of the priory, the form of these licences was altered, to what is still continued to be made use of. At this time a licence is applied for to the dean and chapter of Canterbury by each bishop elect, and immediately granted and returned by their chapter-clerk, as a matter of course (e), so that there has not been a suffragan bishop consecrated in the church of Canterbury for a great number of years past. In every one of these licences of consecration, there was a provision made, that a new decent cope, such as was becoming the dignity and quality of the consecrated bishop, should be given, delivered and sent by him to the metropolitanical church, as a token of that obedience and subjection, which he solemnly professed to it, at the time of his consecration; hence it was called the professional cope; this the church claimed and received of antient right from the time, as was asserted, of archbishop Lanfranc to the dissolution of the priory, without any considerable interruption (f). The professional cope may have ceased to be paid since in favour of Thomas Skevyngton, bishop elect and confirmed, of Bangor, printed by Battely, pt. 2, append. No. xx^a. xx^b.

(c) I am informed that the fee for this licence is 10l.

(f) When Lanfranc contended with Thomas, archbishop of York, about the profession of obedience, which he claimed from him, as due to the see of Canterbury, (Malmibury, p. 66); and the cause was heard before the king, the prelates and the clergy; and that Archbishop had made his profession of obedience before that great assembly; Archbishop Lanfranc received at the same time from that Archbishop, and all the comprovincial bishops then present, a professional cope, together with their profession of obedience, in right of his metropolitanical church: which probably was the beginning of this custom, which remained so long unviolated. In the register of the dean and chapter, anno 1545, the whole claim to this right is collected together, out of the several former ones; after the recital of which, these words are added:—Diverse books, Inventaries and other Mynuments remaynyng in the Vestry of Christ Church in Canterbury, do make maneyon of the Professional Copes of theyse Bysshoppes following which Copes were in the said Vestry at the tyme of the Surrendre of the said Howse of Christ-Church and yet some of them remain there

London—Henry Sandwich etc.

Then follow the names of 112 comprovincial bishops, who had sent their professional copes. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 106.

the

the reformation, because such a garb is not now in use, but the obedience and subjection to the metropolitical church must, and does remain the same as it did before that time (g).

AMONG THE REVENUES of this convent, THE JUBILEE ought to be first mentioned; for though it came but once in fifty years, and was purchased at a dear rate, at the court of Rome, yet it brought incredible gain. The origin of it was, the murder of archbishop Becket in 1170; whose body being buried in the undercroft, was solemnly translated from thence to a shrine prepared for it in the upper part of the church in 1220, being the fiftieth year after the murder; this solemnity was attended with the grant of a jubilee, by the bull of Pope Honorius III, the copy of which is preserved in the church registers; the second jubilee was anno 1270, and the third in 1320, both which have no records left concerning them; the fourth jubilee happened in the year 1370, at which time Simon Sudbury, then bishop of London, being upon the road, overtook a vast multitude of people journeying towards Canterbury, to celebrate the jubilee there; to numbers of them he called out and told them, that the indulgence which they expected to find there, could be of no benefit or value to them; upon this, though many returned back, yet numbers continued their journey, having given him much abuse for his stopping them in their progress, by advice so contrary to their inclinations (h). The fifth jubilee was in the year 1420; the city records inform us, that the confluence of people, who came to it, were no less than one hundred thousand, who were all provided for with meat, drink and lodgings at easy rates, and the estimate of their liberal oblations was almost incredible (i); the sixth jubilee was anno 1470; great suits were made at that time for plenary indulgences, as had been formerly on like occasions, granted to the church of Canterbury. There is in one of the registers of this church, the copies of two letters, full of the most pressing importunities on this occasion, from the King to the Pope, and of two other letters from him to the college of cardinals; of another letter from the Queen, and another from the prior and chapter to the Pope, containing their most humble and earnest addresses and solicitations, for this grant of plenary indulgences, without which there could be no jubilee; for in the bull of Pope Honorius, by which the translation of the body of the martyr, and the first jubilee was granted, it is expressed, that although several Popes had desired it, and the church of Canterbury had from time to time requested the translation of the body of the martyr, yet it could never be accomplished until the fiftieth year, which was esteemed to be a work of Divine Providence and not of human contrivance; for in the bull it is said, that the fiftieth year is a jubilee; a jubilee is a year of remission, and in that sense in which it was understood in the law, he, the Pope, remitted; and as in the year of jubilee burthens and bondages were relieved, so also in the jubilee of the translation of the martyr, the burthens of all penitents were remitted. The arguments (k) made use of in the above letters, obtained at last a bull of indulgence from Pope Urban, dated at Rome on July 4, 1470.

(g) The claim to these professional copes appears to have been extended to all other bishops, of what province or nation whatsoever, who occasionally happened to be consecrated by the Archbishop of Canterbury, either in this, or in any other church. The monks shewed the professional cope of Gerard de Grandison, bishop of Verdun, in Westphalia, whom archbishop Kitwardby consecrated at Merton, in 1276; and wherever a comprovincial bishop happened to be consecrated, though at Rome, by the hands of the pope himself, this right was exacted. Thus, when Robert Orford being consecrated bishop of Ely, in the court of Rome, refused to send or to compound for the professional cope, Archbishop Winchelsea, upon the complaint of the prior and chapter, sent his mandate, anno 1308, to that bishop, enjoining him by virtue of his canonical obedience, either to satisfy the church in this right, or else to appear personally before him, to make answer to the complaint exhibited against him. The same Archbishop, the same year, sent his like mandate to the executors of William de Geynsborough, who having been consecrated bishop of Worcester, by Pope Boniface, had neglected in his life time to pay, or compound for this right. See a list of the professional copes of the suffragan bishops and abbats, deposited in the sacristy of this church, anno 1321, in a manuscript in the Cotton Library, marked Galba, E, iv, 14, f. 114; which is printed in Dart appendix, p. iv, No. vi.

The seventh and last jubilee, was celebrated in the year 1520, in the time of archbishop Warham. Mr. Bastely has inserted in his history of this monastery, some original letters (l), which were

(h) History of the Bishops of London, p. 136.

(i) See a relation of this jubilee, taken from a memorandum of it, drawn up at the time, and remaining in the city chamber, printed in Somner's appendix, No. xlii.

(k) These arguments were: that they had recourse to the apostolical see, in a cause, wherein the honor of St. Thomas the martyr, who died in defence of the liberties of the holy church, was deeply concerned; that they addressed themselves to one, who was reputed to be as zealous to defend the privileges of the church of this martyr, as any one of his blessed predecessors had ever been; that several popes had given order for the translation of his relics, which had been at divers times attempted, but never could be accomplished (Divine Providence interposing), until the 50th year after his death. That the merit of the saint, and the miracles wrought by him, were reported throughout the whole world; and lastly, that the holy martyr might call, as our Saviour did, to all men, come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will refresh you, &c.

(l) These letters are dated in the months of April and May, 1520; by them we learn, that the prior and convent had solicited for a long time, for a bull of indulgence, by John Grigge, LL.D. their proctor in the court of Rome. The King had sent a letter of supplication in this behalf to the pope, which he did not vouchsafe to open, but remitted it to a cardinal, to report the contents of it. A letter from sent from the agent of this convent from Rome, to the archbishop and the prior of it. These letters, which are written in English, discover the whole mystery of the actings of the court of Rome, in granting these indulgences; what arts were contrived to enhance the price of this grant; what delays were invented and made use of, and what gratuities were given from time to time, to buy off these delays. However, after a tedious and dilatory proceeding, and the expence of a vast sum of money and riches, the jubilee was granted, but upon such terms as seemed hard and unreasonable, yet such as could not be resisted; namely, that the Pope should receive half the offerings or oblations made in that church, during the whole year of the jubilee; which was the last ever celebrated in this church (m).

CATHEDRAL.

AS TO THE MANORS, lands, possessions and appropriations of churches belonging to this convent, they were many, and very great and extensive; such of them as lay in this county, which were by far the greatest part of them, are mentioned in the course of the history of the county, in the description of the several parishes in which they were situated (n); the others lay in the counties of Surry, Sussex, Oxford, Buckingham, Essex, Suffolk, Norfolk and Devon, besides several advowsons in the city of London and its suburbs (o). Their revenues amounting, at the time of the dissolution of it, as they were then valued, to 2489l. 4s. 9d. gross yearly revenue; or 2349l. 8s. 5½d. clear yearly income (p).

The small rents, which from time to time were given and duly paid for lights and other uses of the church, and the altars in it, were more in from cardinal Wolsey likewise, was about two days afterwards delivered to the pope, which he was pleased to open and read, and then discourse with the proctor concerning this jubilee; gifts and money were sent for by the proctor, to purchase by them the pope's, and cardinal's favor; letters too were required and expected from the Archbishop, with a certificate, under the common seal of the prior and chapter.

A cup of pure gold was to be sent with all speed, as a present for the pope; for the pope's sister told the proctor, that she was certain such a cup would be very acceptable to him, and would much prevail with him to expedite the cause. Battely, pt. 2, p. 109. See the letters, printed in ibid. appendix, No. xxi et seq.

(m) Battely, pt. 2, p. 110.

(n) Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxiii^d, gives the taxation of the several manors belonging to the priory in this county, amounting in the whole to the sum of 1066l. 8s. 1d. Thorne, col. 2164, gives the temporals as follows: In the diocese of Canterbury 771l. 7s. 8d. In the diocese of Rocheſter 295l. 0s. 5d. In the dioceses of London, Winchester, Oxford, Lincoln and Norwich 324l. 17s. 1d. The total of the taxation 1391l. 5s. 2d. The taxation of the almshouse 84l. 13s. 4d. —again the same almshouse 110l. 13s. 2d.

(o) There are several rolls of parchment lodged in the treasury of this church, containing the ancient donations of lands, manors, and appropriated churches to this priory. In the account in them there is not an exact agreement, as some are larger than others; and the same chronology number than can easily be computed. The copies of the deeds of gift of these rents fill up some of the largest registers of this church, and swell them to a large bulk; these annuities or rents payable out of different lands and tenements, were of considerable value in former times, when they were given, though at this day they appear small and inconsiderable. For this use they had likewise given numbers of small pieces of lands or tenements in the city of Canterbury and its suburbs (q), which now belong to the dean and chapter. Notwithstanding the greatest part of the lands belonging to this priory were at first given by the several benefactors in early times to the different archbishops themselves, and continued in common between them and the convent, till archbishop Lanfranc, in the Conqueror's reign, made a division of these estates, reserving one part to himself, and allotting the other to the convent for their separate use, yet the latter was always understood to be held by the prior, of the King in capite, and not of the archbishop (r).

There was a college or hall in Oxford, called Canterbury hall or college (s), which was a nursery of learning for the use of the junior monks of this priory, whence it derived its name.

It was founded by archbishop Simon Islip in the year 1363, being the 36th year of K. Edward III, with the King's licence, which had been obtained the year before, by which leave was given to appropriate the church of Pageham, then belonging to the archbishopric, towards the maintenance of the students of it. The archbishop likewise purchased eight houses at his own exis not punctually observed, in respect to the times of the several donations. One of these rolls has been printed by Mr. Somner, in his appendix, p. 36, which ends with K. Henry IV.'s reign; another is in Dugdale's Monasticon, vol. i, p. 19; and another is printed in the Decim. Scriptores, at the end of Thorne's Chronicle, col. 2227, under the title of Evidences of the Church of Canterbury; but being a fragment, it ends with the gift of the manor of Stisted, by archbishop Anselm, who died in 1114. Mr. Battely, in his appendix, pt. 2, No. xxiii^b et seq. has given a list of the manors and appropriations belonging to the priory, at the dissolution of it; and a description or survey of such manors, as both the archbishop, and prior and convent possessed in the county of Kent, in the reign of the Conqueror, which Mr. Somner styles, the Survey of Domesday, is printed at length in his appendix, No. xl.

(p) See Bacon's Liber Regis.

(q) There is one or more registers of the several lands, rents, or tenements, given to this church, as they lie in the several parishes to which they belong; and there is another register of the lands, tenements, and rents, according to the several uses to which they were appropriated by the donors; all those given to the same use being registered together. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 110.

(r) See Madox's Exchequer, p. 208, 700.

(s) See some account of this college, in Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 3148.

CATHEDRAL.

pence, for the dwellings of those who belonged to the college; and of his nephew William Ilip, the manor of Wodesford, in co. of Essex, which he gave to the college for the use and support of it (t).

The society was to consist of twelve members, a custos or master, three fellows, who were to be professed monks, and eight students. The election of the custos or master was made in the same manner that the officers called the obedientiaries of the monastery, mention of which has been made before, were elected; that is, the convent nominated three of their own members to the archbishop, who making choice of one of them, committed to him the care, government, and whole concern of this college (u).

The college remained in this state at the dissolution of the priory, when it came into the King's hands, where it continued till the King settled it by his dotation charter, in his 33d year, on his new-founded dean and chapter of Canterbury; but it was with all its lands, houses and appurtenances belonging to it, resigned again by the dean and chapter into the King's hands, who afterwards settled it on the new founded-college of Christ-church in that university, to the library of which, and the buildings of it, called Peckwater, it adjoins. It is still known by the name of Canterbury quadrangle, and continues part of the possessions of that college at this time.

As the above college was a nursery for the young students of this priory, so the priory of St. Martin in Dover, was a cell to it, and continued so till the dissolution of this monastery; the prior of it being usually elected from one of the obedientiaries of Christ-church; and the monks, who were likewise of the benedictine order, were taken likewise from thence; a full account of which, and of that priory, may be seen under the description of Dover, in the history of the county.

THE DISSOLUTION of this priory of Christ-church was not brought on by one sudden blow, but by slow degrees, left, from the veneration

(t) The founder by his will, besides other bequests, gave many books to this house. Tanner, in his Monasticon, p. 438, says, the Archbishop compassionately considering the destruction which the two great pestilences, annis 1349 and 1360, had made amongst the clergy, all over England, and of the scholars of the university of Oxford, bought in 1361, seven or eight old hostles, and obtained the King's licence to found a house for students, both religious and secular, chiefly in the canon and civil law, to be called Canterbury Hall. This he finished and endowed, for the maintenance of a warden and eleven clerks, about the year 1363; shortly after he appointed the famous Mr. John Wickliffe, to be head of this society; who with the rest of the fellows, being seculars, was by sentence in the court of Rome, at the instance of the founder's successor Symon de Langham, removed, and the government and revenues of this hall put into the hands of four monks of Canterbury, one of whom was to be warden; from which time it became a habitation, chiefly and sanctity in which it was held by all ranks of people, the fall of it might have raised a public tumult and commotion throughout the realm. The first step that appears to have been taken towards it, was the abrogating of certain festivals or holidays, which should fall out in harvest time, which was to be accounted from the 1st of July to the 29th of September; by which, as was intended, the high festival of the translation of St. Thomas, annually celebrated on July 7, was prohibited to be observed, otherwise than by the using the accustomed services of the holidays in churches, though without such formal solemnities as were accustomed on high festivals, this being one of those injunctions given by the King in 1536. Thus the glorious and magnificent shews in lights, rich vestments, and other accustomed splendor, with which those festivals were adorned, and which invited and allured throngs of people to be present at the celebration of their solemnities, being withdrawn; the multitude lost their veneration for them, and abstained from coming to the bare celebration of the church service. Two years after which, a second attack was made upon this priory, more bold and daring than the former; for the blow was directly and openly aimed at the reputed glory of this church, and the honour and veneration paid to the relics of their saint, by not only specially prohibiting the observation of the festivals in memory of St. Thomas, but enjoining the entire omission of the commemoration of him; for the festival service of his days were to be laid aside; instead of which, the festival or ordinary service for the day of the week was to be used; and archbishop Cranmer himself gave a fair precedent of disowning all regard to this feast, by not fasting (as was the custom) on the eve of it, but supping on flesh in his parlour with his domestics; a strange and unusual sight to all who were present. This was in the year 1538.

These alterations being acquiesced in, with a quiet submission, in the following year, the

for the student monks of Canterbury, and was subject to the Archbishop, and to the prior and convent of that metropolitane church.

(u) There are many charters and instruments relating to this college, preserved in the registers and archives of this church; as K. Edward III.'s licence for its foundation; Archbishop Ilip's several charters of its foundation, ordination, and his donation of the manor of Wodesford; Archbishop Wilsley's confirmation of the appropriation of the church of Pageham to it, with the bull of pope Urban, for the same purpose; the statutes of the college; the pope's bull, concerning the state of the custos or keeper of it; K. Edward III.'s letter of licence, for annexing certain houses to it; a definitive sentence between the prior of Britton and the rector of Pageham, concerning certain tythes. They are in the register K. fol. 67, but especially in the great register B. in this church. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 107.

King,

CATHEDRAL.

King, determining to bring forward the downfall of this saint effectually, sent forth, in the following year, a new and severe injunction; in the preamble of which archbishop Becket was declared to have been a stubborn rebel, and a traitor to his prince; it enjoined, that he should not be esteemed, or called a saint; that his images and pictures throughout the whole realm should be pulled down, and cast out of all churches; that his name should be razed out of all books, and the festival service of his days, the collects, antiphons, &c. should for ever remain in disuse, upon pain of his indignation, and imprisonment at his grace's pleasure.

As this saint was stripped of the name, honour and adoration, which had for so great a length of time been paid him; so was this church, most probably a principal allurements to the deed, robbed of all the riches, the jewels of inestimable value, and the vast quantities of gold and silver with which this shrine was splendidly and gloriously adorned; his relics and bones were likewise taken away, and so destroyed, and disposed of, that what became of them could not be known, lest they might fall into such hands as might still honour them with veneration.

This shrine was built, says Stow, about a man's height, all of stone, then upward of timber plain, within which was a chest of iron containing the bones of Thomas Becket, skull and all, with the wound of his death, and the piece cut out of his skull, laid in the same wound; but this does not appear to be well authenticated (v).

The timber work of it, on the outside, was covered with plates of gold, damasked and embossed with wires of gold, garnished with broches, images, chains, precious stones, and great orient pearls; which spoils, in both gold and jewels of inestimable value, filled two great chests, one of which six or eight strong men could do no more than convey out of the church; all which was taken to the King's use, and the bones of St. Thomas, by the commandment of lord Cromwell, were then and there burned to ashes, which was in September, anno 1538, being the 30th year of K. Henry VIII.

This certainly portended the sudden dissolution of this priory, which accordingly took place in the year following, when a commission, dated at Westminster, on March 20, anno 31 Henry VIII., for the suppression of it, was directed to the archbishop of Canterbury, sir Richard Rich, chancellor of the Court of Augmentation, sir Christopher Hales, knt. Master of the Rolls; Walter Hendly, attorney of the same court, and five others, that they or any three of them should repair to Christ-church, and draw up a surrender in form, and the same being signed and sealed by the prior and convent, to receive and take possession thereof; and then to take an inventory of all the goods, chattels, plate, jewels, and lead, belonging to the monastery, and to convey to the master of the jewel house, at the Tower of London, all the plate, precious ornaments and money, which they should receive, &c. This commission was signed by Thomas Cromwell; the original of which is in the augmentation office.

This commission was put in execution without delay, viz. on April 4, next following, when the surrendry was signed in their chapter-house, by the prior and twenty-four other members of the convent, and sealed with their common seal. All these on quitting the monastery, had yearly pensions, and many of them had offices and places in the new foundation established in this church.

The following is a list of those assigned to the prior and twenty-four members, signed Rich. Rich.

FIRST to the late prior there,

Thomas Goldwell , with office of one of the pre-	£.	s.	d.
bendaries there; yearly	lxxx.	--	--
Nicolao Clement - - -	x.	--	--
Johanni Gerard - - -	viii.	--	--
Willielmo Gyllyngbam - -	xiii.	vi.	viii
Johanni Crofs - - -	xxx.	--	--
Johanni Langdon - - -	x.	--	--
Johanni Oxny - - -	x.	--	--
Jebanno Elphe , besides one of the offices of the Peti-canons - - -	iii.	vi.	viii
Willielmo Lichfield , besides the office of a Peti-canon there	x.	--	--
Roberto Boxly - - -	viii.	--	--
Ricardo Godmersham - -	x.	--	--
Ricardo Bonyngton - - -	viii.	--	--
Nicolao Herfey - - -	vi.	xiii.	iv
Johanni Thoroughley - -	viii.	--	--
Wilbelmo Causton - - -	vi.	--	--
Quintino Denysse - - -	vi.	xiii.	iv
Wilbelmo Gregory - - -	vi.	--	--
Roberto Anthony - - -	vi.	--	--
Wilbelmo Goldwell - - -	vi.	--	--
Wilbelmo Canterburn - -	vi.	--	--
Johanni Stone - - -	vi.	--	--
Johanni Lamberkerst - -	vi.	xiii.	iv
Edwardo Glastenbury - -	vi.	--	-- Johanni Ambrose , besides the office of a Peti-canon - -	--	xi.	--
Thomæ Goldston - - -	vi.	--	--
Johanni Morton - - -	vi.	--	--
Summe of the yerely
pensions - - -	cclxxxxi.	vi.	viii(w)
(Signed) Rich. Rich.

There is another list in the augmentation office,

(v) See above, p. 527.

(w) See Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 117, appendix, No. xxiv^b. from an original in the Augmentation office.

but

CATHEDRAL.

but without date, of the names of the members of this monastery, at the time of the surrendry, the offices they then held in the convent, and the pensions and rewards allotted to them, together with the preferments intended for them in the new foundation; the particulars of which are as follows:

THE NAMES of the Monks of the late Monastery of Cbryst-church, in Canterbori, with their Offices, Rewards and Pensions.

The Office.	Their Names.	Rewards.			Pensions.
		£.	s.	d.	£.	s.	d.
Prior, - - - - -	Thomas Goldwell, - - - - -	10	0	0	3	6	8
- - - - -	Johannes Menys, - - (Præb.) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Nicolaus Clemente, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	10	0	0
Bartonar, - - - - -	Johannes Gerard, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	8	0	0
Granitor, - - - - -	Wilhelmus Wynchepe, - (Præb.) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
Camerarius, - - - - -	Wilhelmus Gyllyngbam, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	3	6	8
Celerarius, - - - - -	Johannes Cross, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	30	0	0
Mr. of the Frator, - - - - -	Johannes Langdon, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	10	0	0
Supprior, - - - - -	Wilhelmus Hadleigh, - (Præb.) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
Thefaurarius, - - - - -	Johannes Oxny, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	10	0	8
Chaunter, - - - - -	Johannes Elpbe, - (Peti-canon) -	3	solut.	-	3	6	8
Master of the Table, - - - - -	Robertus Boxly, - - - - -	3	-	-	8	0	0
Sexton, - - - - -	Wilhelmus Lichfield, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	10	0	0
Mr. of the Firmary, - - - - -	Ricardus Godmersham, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	10	0	0
- - - - -	Ricardus Bonyngton, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	8	0	0
Penitentiary, - - - - -	Nicolaus Herste, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	13	4
Penitentiary, - - - - -	Johannes Lamberberst, (Peti-canon) -	3	solut.	-	6	13	4
Gardian of the Manors, - - - - -	Ricardus Thornden, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	-	-	-
- - - - -	Johannes Charisburn, (Peti-canon) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
Gardian of Canterbury college, - - - - -	Willielmus Sandwich, - (Præb.) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
Master of the Table, - - - - -	Johannes Chart, - (Peti-canon) -	3	solut.	-	-	-	-
Second Chaunter, - - - - -	Johannes Cranebrook, (Peti-canon) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
Mr. of the Anniversary, - - - - -	Edward Glastenborn, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	-	-
Chancere, - - - - -	Johannes Ambrose, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	2	-	-
Quarte Prior, - - - - -	Henricus Audoene, - (Peti-canon) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
Tertius Prior, - - - - -	Thomas Ickbam, - (Peti-canon) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
Chaplain, - - - - -	Johannes Chillenden - (Præb.) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Thomas Morton, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Wilhelmus Castry, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	-	-
- - - - -	Wilhelmus Austen, - (Peti-canon) -	3	solut.	-	-	-	-
Sub-Sexton, - - - - -	Quintinus Denysse, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	13	4
- - - - -	Wilhelmus Gregory, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	-	-
Fruyterer, - - - - -	Thomas Faverham, - (Scholar) -	3	solut.	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Robertus Anthony, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	-	-
- - - - -	Thomas Wyffride, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	-	-	-
Subcelerer, - - - - -	Wilhelmus London, - - - - -	3	-	-	-	-	-
- - - - -	Johannes Warbam, - (Præb.) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Johannes Cross, - (Scholar) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Wilhelmus Goldwell, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	-	-
- - - - -	Wilhelmus Canterborn, - - - - -	3	solut.	-	6	-	-
Tertius Cantor. - - - - -	Thomas Anselm, - (Peti-canon) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Thomas Becket, - (Scholar) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Johannes Stone, - - - - -	3	-	-	6	-	-
Sub-Chaplain, - - - - -	Georgius Frebel, - (Scholar) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Peter Langley, - (Scholar) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Thomas Bowser, - (Scholar) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Willielmus Sudburn, - (Chorist.) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Jacobus Newenham - (Chorist.) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-
- - - - -	Thomas Goldston, - - - - -	3	-	-	6	-	-
- - - - -	Stephanus Giles, - (Scholar) -	3	-	-	nil.	-	-

Sub-

CATHEDRAL.

Sub-Chaplain, - - - -	Bartholemæus Oisford , (Peti-canon) -	3	- - - -	nil.	- -
- - - - -	Robertus South , - - (Scholar) -	3	- - - -	nil.	- -
- - - - -	Ricardus Marsbal , - (Scholar) -	3	- - - -	nil.	- - (*)

This list contains fifty-three names, of which six were promoted to prebends, ten to be peti-canons, nine to be scholars, and two to be chorists, in all twenty-seven, on the new intended establishment; their rewards amounted to one hundred and sixty-three pounds, and their yearly pensions to 184l. os. 8d. (xx)

This great change could not but seem strange to the people who had still a veneration for their reputed saint; and the violence offered to his shrine could not but fill their hearts with inward regret, and private murmurings; but their discontent did not break out into open rebellion here, as it did on some like occasions in different places in the kingdom. To quiet the people, therefore, and to convince them of the propriety, and even necessity, of these changes, the monks were in general cried out against, as given to every shameful and abominable vice; and reports were industriously spread abroad, that the monasteries were receptacles of the worst of people. Such reports had their effect, and they created a general detestation of all the monastical orders. It must be owned, that there were some of the smaller religious houses, that gave but too much occasion for this scandal; but the greater monasteries were, for the most part, well governed, and lived under the strictest discipline; nor could they be charged with any gross immorality. They promoted learning, they educated youth, and dispensed charity with a liberal hand to all around them (y). Nor are the crimes which many of them acknowledged themselves to have been guilty of, in the surrenders which they signed, to be looked on as the truth; for the craft, promises, persuasions, intreaties and threats, in short, every art and subtil cunning and knavery, that could be, was used to induce or compel them to surrender their houses, and set their names to the instruments, which were frequently brought by the subtil commissioners ready drawn up for the purpose. Policy, and the general welfare of the state might dictate the necessity of their dissolution; but no necessity whatever could palliate the unjustifiable means made use of, to put these measures in execution.

The mistaken surmises and prejudices of Dr. Burnet, owing perhaps to his fondness for defamation, seem now to be pretty well understood, and his authority appears to be estimated accordingly; it certainly is held very light in relation to his defamation of this convent of Christchurch (z).

For a true prospect of the state of it, at the time of its suppression, let us remember, in vindication of it, that the archiepiscopal throne had been adorned with a succession of great and good men for a length of time; some of whom were of an honourable and noble descent; all of them were men of a public spirit, of competent learning, of good conversation and an unspotted reputation. These prelates often visited this monastery and strictly examined the manners and behaviour of the monks; these had a right likewise, which they never failed to exercise, of placing over the convent their chief officers, supervisors, and governors. The prior, who at the time of the dissolution, had presided over this convent for three and twenty years, was a learned, grave and religious man, and his predecessors had been such for a length of time before.— The convent was a society of grave persons; the aged were diligent to train up the novices both in the rules of their institution, and in gravity and sobriety, and the younger were placed in the cells of the dormitory, among the elder; so that

(x) See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxiv^c.

(xx) The prior's pension was vacated by his death, before the year 1553; at which time there remained only 32l. 6s. 8d. payable in annuities, and these following pensions to some of the unpreferred monks, whose names I shall exhibit, says Willis, in his Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 247, from my manuscripts, often cited before.

Pensions remaining in charge, anno 1553, to the monks of Christ church. To John Raspes, Thomas Paine, and William Gillingham 13l. 6s. 8d. each. To Thomas Nicholas, William Thornton, and William Litchfield 10l. each. To John Thoroughly and Richard Bennington 8l. each. To William London, Nicholas Herste, John Lambert, and Quinton Denny 6l. 13s. 4d. each. To William Goldwell, Robert Anthey, William Canterbury, John Stone, and William Gregory 6l. each.

(y) It has generally been supposed, though there have been some few who have thought otherwise, that the dissolution of monasteries occasioned that provision made for the poor, some years afterwards, by the statutes in Q. Elizabeth's reign, passed for that purpose, the necessity for which arose from their being left destitute from that event. That this was the fact, and that K. Henry foresaw this would happen, plainly appears from the express clause and covenant, which was generally inserted in the first grants of the scites and lands of most of these dissolved houses, several of which I have seen, viz. that the grantees should continue the like hospitality and alms to the indigent travellers and poor, which had usually and constantly been afforded to them by the religious, before their houses were suppressed; but these estates often changing owners, and many of them through fear of their uncertain tenure, the above injunction was after some time but little observed, and at length neglected and entirely laid aside; by which means the distress of the poor was felt the heavier, and gradually increasing, at last induced the legislature to make provision for them by those statutes.

(z) See Willis's Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 37, for a further vindication of this and some other religious houses, from the defamation of such testimonies.

they were continually under a kind of guard to prevent them committing any thing unseemly. All their revenues and gains were expended, either in alms and hospitality, or in the stately and magnificent building of their church, of which the present fabric is a convincing proof, or else in decking and beautifying it with the richest ornaments, in which they abounded and exceeded, even to profuseness. Their time was for the most part spent in exercises of fasting, penance and devout meditations, and in attending the divine offices in the church; in the superstitious formalities of which they perhaps placed too much merit, and mistook for godliness itself; certainly they were sincere in it, and intended well; it was the religion they had been brought up in, nor was there any other for them to follow.

In those times there was but little learning in the world, that age being commonly stiled the dark, or illiterate age; but whatever learning was then, was mostly to be found in the cloysters of the monks, where some attained to great reputation for their proficiency in knowledge.

From the above representation, which is a series of facts, the character of this priory, and the state of it, even at the time of its dissolution, may be pretty well ascertained, especially when we call to memory that Dr. Goldwell, a man of acknowledged learning, virtue, and strictness of character, had been prior for a length of time; that Archbishop Cranmer had filled the patriarchal chair of this church for near seven years; that he was visitor of this priory, and had been so much with the members of it, as to know them well, and the manner of their behaviour; and that when this church was new founded and new modelled, the same archbishop being employed in it by the King, took into this new foundation eight prebendaries, ten peti-canons, nine scholars, and two choristers, in all twenty-nine, who had been members of this dissolved priory, besides several others, among whom were Dr. Goldwell and William Wyncebepe, who were marked out and assigned for prebends, but did not accept of them, others were preferred in other churches, and all of them had pensions and rewards.

After the surrendry of the church and priory into the hands of the King's commissioners, the members of it being turned out, the whole was left in a desolated condition, a mere heap of ruin and confusion, for those who took possession of it, made quick havock of their lodgings and houses, and carried away for the King's use all the jewels, plate, rich ornaments and whatever else was valuable from the church and monastery, and all their manors, lands and possessions were seized on and put under the management of the King's new court of augmentation, for his use.

How the scite and buildings of it were afterwards disposed of, among the members of the new establishment, and the new form they then took, as well as their alterations, which brought them forward, to their present state, cannot be so well described, as it is in a manuscript treatise, now in the possession of the dean of Canterbury, containing the orders of the chapter, made in 1546, for the allotment of them among those members, with Mr. Somner's explanation and observations on them. In this treatise are many curious particulars relating to the converting of the different buildings of the monastery into dwellings for this new society; and the new modelling of the whole precincts, in a great measure, into its present form, may be known from it; but the frequent changes which appear by it to have been made between some of the prebendaries of those lodgings, at first allotted to them, and then again to others on the demise of any of their brethren, some with the consent of chapter, and others by order of the visitor, make it very difficult to ascertain to which stall they in reality belonged, and these changes seem to have continued till some time after Q. Elizabeth's accession; since which the lodgings have remained fixed to the prebendaries, according to their respective stalls, as above-mentioned.

The dean's lodgings.—First, from the chapel door next the dorter; to have the chapel with the closet, the old chequer, with all manner of chambers thereunto belonging, both new and old, lately appertaining to the prior there, with the corn-lofts and cellars under them, adjoining to the west end of his great gardens, and also all the brewhouse, separate now from Mr. Parkhurst's lodging (a), and the bakehouse and all other houses, as the whole lodging lately ordained for the master of the choristers, unto the dean's stables; also the great barn next the stables, and the two stables, lately called the prior's stables, and the sumptery stable and the carter's hall; and a division to be made between Dr. Ridley's garden (b) directly from Mr. Dean's gate, and to stop up the walk upon the wall, and Mr. Dean to have the whole room from the barn, with the town-wall and tower, unto Dr. Ridley's orchard pale, and a way to be reserved for Mr. Dean to the postern gate, and the garden before his hall door, with the wine cellar.

The first prebendary's lodgings (c).—To have the vault called bishop Becker's tomb, under our lady's chapel; the house called his bake-house, his kitchen, hall, parlour, buttery, and the south side of the old chapel there, the chancel there,

(a) Fourth prebendary.

(b) Fifth prebendary.

(c) Then bishop of Dover, Dr. Thornton's, now Dr. Benson's.

with

CATHEDRAL.

with all manner of buildings by him there made, his courts before his hall door and kitchen, with the garden before his gallery, and his old garden in the sanctuary, with his orchard and tower therein; and his stable next to the middle gate, and the hay house next to Mr. Seenleger's stable, along the dean's garden.

The second prebendary's lodgings (d).—First, he to have the north side or isle of the firmary chapel, with the garden on the north side; the old table hall, with the kitchen, buttery, the chamber, called commission chamber, and the lodging at the upper end of the hall, the little garden there, and the stable next Mr. Dean's stable, with the little barn.

The third prebendary's lodgings (e).—He to have two lodgings, late Mr. Searle's and Mr. Brooke's, with the rooms squared to the tenements; and to have the stable which Mr. Devenish lately had.

The fourth prebendary's lodgings (f).—He to have the kitchen, with his larder next the court, with all the wall room, tower, town wall, garden to the stables, the whole lodging from Mr. Dean's wall against the wall late made in the brew-house, the kitchen before made, pertaining to his lodging, the stable next the garden, with the hay-house thereto belonging.

The fifth prebendary's lodgings (g).—He to have all the chambers and house, from the chamber now William Wincheap's, being annexed unto the lodgings named the honours, with all manner of houses, there above and under, joining to his garden, and so far cross the great chamber, as his garden wall directly departeth, and a division thereto be made cross the chamber, as the garden wall lyeth, and all the back garden to Mr. Dean's garden, with the town wall, the tower lately in the tenure of Mr. Daniel, and also the stable next the bake-house.

The sixth prebendary's lodgings (h).—He to have the other part of the aforelaid great chamber, in the honours, the rooms underneath, with the gallery and garden, and his old chamber, with

(d) Then Mr. Saintleger's, now Dr. Storer's.

(e) Then Mr. Goldson's, now Dr. Welfit's; this, in the manuscript, is called the eighth prebendary's lodging. It was about two years afterwards new built, from the materials of the frater or old refectory, given to him in consequence of the lord protector's letters to the chapter for this purpose.

(f) Then Mr. Parkhurst's, now Dr. Ratcliffe's; it is called in the manuscript, the third prebendary's lodgings.

(g) Then Dr. Ridley's, now Mr. archdeacon Lynch's; called in the manuscript, the fourth prebendary.

(h) Then Mr. Menys's, now Dr. Moore's; called in the manuscript, the fifth prebendary.

(i) Canon of the first prebend.

(k) Then Mr. Glazyer's, now Dr. Luxmoore's; it is called in the manuscript, the sixth prebendary.

(l) Then Mr. Nevil's, now Dr. Dering's; called in the manuscript, the ninth prebendary.

all manner of chambers, cellars and rooms there inclosed, and the stable next the forge barn, and the hay-house betwixt the barn and the bishop of Dover (i).

The seventh prebendary's lodgings (k).—He to have the whole lodging, from the larder gate to the pentise gate, with the chambers there, called Heaven and Paradise, and so through the fruyter and to the cloyster, and all the fruyter to the dorter wall, the common kitchen with all manner of houses, cellars, and lofts, (the lead, timber, and freestone of the fruyter, taken down for the treasure of the church), and the stable next to Dr. Ridley's.

The eighth prebendary's lodgings (l).—He to have Mr. Cok's lodging, with the plumbery and clofe, and garden impaled upon the hill to the school garden.

The ninth prebendary's lodgings (m).—He to have the whole lodging, that Mr. Crofs had beneath and above, with all manner of rooms within the gate, called the Hogg-ball; the whole garden with the vaults and town wall, provided Mr. Milles have a wood-house so convenient for him, as he now has, else to keep the same (n).

The tenth prebendary's lodgings (o).—He to have the whole lodging, with the garden next the pentise in the court, with the whole lodging over the court gate, the stable with the hay-house, lately the treasurer's storehouse, adjoining near the bakehouse.

The eleventh prebendary's lodgings (p).—He to have the other lodging called honours, with the gallery at the door above and beneath, and the chapel above and under, and the orchard, inclosed with stone walls, next the street, square with his lodgings and the stable, with the hay-house, late Mr. Daniel's, and licence to build a gallery ten yards long, upon the bishop of Dover's garden wall there.

The twelfth prebendary's lodgings (q).—He to have the lodging in the late long hall, from Mr. Dean's lodging to the bishop of Dover's lodging,

(m) Then Mr. Devenish's, now Mr. Weston's; called in the manuscript, the tenth prebendary.

(n) These lodgings were afterwards exchanged with the chapter's clerk or auditor, and are those now let by him as the register-office, &c.

(o) Then Mr. Milles's, now Dr. Vyner's.

(p) Then Mr. Ponet's, now the Hon. Mr. Legge's.

(q) Then the bishop of Catness's, now Dr. Walsby's. These lodgings were in the long hall, long since pulled down; situated where the brick passage is, in front of Mr. Gregory, the minor canon's house, which house was part of these lodgings also; but these continued the lodgings of this prebend but a very few years; for the common table held in the long hall, on the south side of the green court, being laid aside, that building, with some others adjoining westward of it, became by consent of chapter, the lodgings for this twelfth prebendary, and were fitted up accordingly, and they continue so at this time.

with

with all manner of houses and vaults, late in the tenure of Mr. Arthur St. Leger, and a way thro' the Gimew to bring in wood, and the stable between Mr. Ponet's and Mr. Parkburst's.

The greater buildings of the priory, such as the great dormer or dormitory, the refectory, the convent kitchen and the long hall of the sub-prior's lodgings, which though necessary for so large a community, living all together as one family, could be of no use to the new foundation, were all taken down, and the scites of most of them allotted to the several prebendaries, as above-mentioned.

THE ANTIENT and PRESENT STATE of the PRECINCTS of THE LATE PRIORY, and of THE DEAN AND CHAPTER.

THE SCITES of monasteries were in general encompassed with a strong and high wall, partly to form an inclosure, in which the monks should be kept within bounds from wandering abroad at large, without leave of the superior, and partly as a means by which the rich treasures of them might be secured from thieves and robbers, and their persons guarded from the tumultuous insurrections of the rabble.

This church and monastery had such a wall; some remains of which, built of stone, appear at this day; the whole of which is said to have been made by archbishop Lanfranc, soon after the Norman conquest; for this, we have the authorities of Eadmer (r), Ralph de Diceto (s), and the monk Gervas (t), who all agree, that Lanfranc built the edifices within the precinct, together with the wall. The same is recorded in the obituary, and mentioned in a charter of archbishop Theobald, with the three courts that it inclosed; that is, the court of the church, the court of the convent, and the court of the archbishop; the circuits of which were at different times enlarged afterwards, by several grants, purchases and exchanges; the particulars of which may be seen in Thorne's Chronicle, and in both Somner and Battely (u). By some of these, the court, the cemetery, and the convent garden, were all enlarged towards the south; and most part of the south wall seems to have been new built, taking in a larger compass than at first it did, and comprehending the same bounds that it does at this day (v).

(r) Hist. Nov. p. 7.

(s) Dec. Script. col. 404. (t) Ibid. col. 1654.

(u) Decim. Script. col. 1945, 1946, 2142. Battely's Somner, p. 102, pt. 2, p. 88. Ang. Sacr. pt. 1, p. 55. Archiv. Eccl. Christi, Cant.

(v) Archbishop Courtney gave towards the repairing of the walls of the precincts, the sum of 266l. 13s. 4d. Battely, pt. 2, p. 75. The bounds of these precincts at present, are: on the east and north, the city wall from Northgate to Burgate; on the south, partly by Burgate-street and partly by the back of the houses in that street; on the west, by

Towards the east wall, the convent garden was much enlarged by the addition of houses and lands, which the monks had likewise acquired, by purchase and exchange, near Queningate and Queningate-lane; by which acquisitions that wall, towards the south end of it, was extended probably to the same limits that it has at this day (w).

As to the remaining part of the east, and part of the north wall, it is to be observed, that there was a small space between the wall of the convent and the wall of the city, reaching from Queningate to Northgate, called Queningate-lane; this piece of ground K. Henry II, by his charter, gave to this church for the use of their almshouse (x). In the year 1305, the monks were presented by the citizens, for having stopt or made up this way, leading from one of these gates to the other; this the monks acknowledged, but alledged their right by the above charter, upon which they were acquitted; but for their more certain surety in it, they obtained of K. Henry IV, as appears by the church records, a further grant of this way (y).

But the remainder of Queningate-lane, lying between Queningate and Burgate, did not for some time afterwards become the property of the church, for it may be seen in the act of parliament passed in the first year of K. Richard III, by which the aldermanry of Westgate was granted to the city, that this slip of ground was then by it granted to the church, together with the postern and bridge; but in case of eviction of the aldermanry from the city, this ground and premises were to return to the city, a part of whose demesnes it was in fee farm; and it certainly did so, for in the first year of K. Henry VII, the same aldermanry, by another act of parliament, was restored to sir George Brown's heirs, who by the former act were made incapable of it, on account of their father's taking part with the former of those princes.

But this part of the city wall being much neglected, and in a ruinous condition, the monks petitioned the King, for the preventing of such dangers as might befall their monastery on that account, that they might repair that part of it at their own cost, and might take in that part of the lane within the inclosure of their own monastery; which desire they obtained, and a com-

Sun-street, the east side of the precincts of the Archbishop's palace, and the street leading from Palace-street, by the borough of Staplegate, along by the Mint-yard to Northgate.

(w) Battely's Somner, p. 102, pt. 2, p. 88. Thorne, col. 2142.

(x) Battely's Somner, p. 103; where the particular dimensions of this ground, in the words of the charter, are given.

(y) Battely's Somner, p. 103.

CATHEDRAL.

possession was entered into between them and the citizens, in the 7th year of K. Henry VII, (z) by which, among many other things agreed on between them, the church became possessed of this space of ground, with the wall, towers, postern and bridge; after which, prior Selling (who died 1494) new built that part of this wall, which reached from St. Michael's church to the old one that inclosed the garden of the convent (a); the remaining parts of the walls of this monastery retain their first bounds, and therefore require no further observation to be made on them.

THE STATE of the precincts of this church, at the time of the dissolution of the monastery, was this: On the north side of the church was the court of the priory, encompassed with the buildings, lodgings and offices of the prior and of the convent, now called the green-court and brick-passage; adjoining to this court, north-westward, was the almonry, now called the Mint-yard; on the west part was the court of the palace, or of the archbishop, where his palace was; and on the south side was the court of the church, now called the church-yard, in which was the outward and inward cemetery; and beyond that eastward, the convent-garden, now called the Oaks.

There were formerly five gates belonging to these precincts, viz. the grand gate on the south side of the church, in the church-yard; the gate in the court of the priory, leading from thence to Stablegate, through which all the provisions and necessaries for the convent were brought; the gate in the almonry; the gate leading to the Foreigns, and the postern in the city wall, leading towards St. Augustine's monastery, all which will be taken notice of below; and there has been one added in later times, being the postern-gate at the north-west corner of the church, leading to the precincts of the Archbishop's palace.

Besides these, there was in antient times another gate, called St. Michael's-gate (from its being opposite to a large stone image of St. Michael, set up on the roof of the church over the door into the south cross isle) and in the old charters of the church, the old gate of the cemetery, from its leading into the common cemetery of the church in the court of it. To this gate there was a direct passage or street, open from the east end of the late St. Andrew's church, thro' the place where the Corn-market and Butter-market now is, called from the above image, Angel-lane; some part of this gate is yet remaining; but it is, as well as the passage itself, built upon and converted to private use (b).

The present gate of the cemetery, usually called the Church-gate, is built at some distance westward from the other, above-mentioned, in the same south wall of the precincts of the church. There is a passage to it from the High-street thro' Mercery-lane, and thence to the south porch of the church. The use of this gate was to open a more direct and commodious way to all those, who through devotion, continually resorted to this church; and there is a charter among the records of the hospital of Eastbridge, which mentions a house built at the east corner of the lane, called le Mercerie, over against the gate of the church of the Holy Trinity; it is dated anno 41 Henry III. (c)

The present gate succeeding the former one, above-mentioned, on the same spot, is a strong and beautiful building of elegant Gothic architecture, built by prior Goldstone, in the year 1517, as appears by a legend along the whole front of it (d), though now scarcely legible, for that, as well as the rich ornamental carve work, which covers almost the whole of it; among which are the several coats of arms of the nobility and gentry of that time, is now in great measure decayed and mouldered away through length of time (e). In the middle was a large statue of our Saviour, which, in derision, was shot to pieces

(z) This indenture, made between the prior and convent and the mayor and citizens of Canterbury, anno 7 Hen. VIIth, relating to the postern and bridge between Northgate and Burgate, is in the chest of the city chamber.

(a) Battely's Somner, p. 104, pt. 2, p. 89. Ang. Sacr. pt. 1, p. 146. This lane may great part of it be traced at this time; the entrance into it from Burgate yet remains uninclosed, being the back way to the third prebendal house; it is easily perceived again from the postern, along by where Queningate once stood, forwards towards the dean's garden, and again at the back of the garden of the fourth prebend; between these two gardens is a space of ground, along which this lane once led, (now made use of for the stable-yard of the precincts), which is corruptly called the Follings, instead of the Foreigns; a name it gained from its being a place without, or foreign to the jurisdiction of the convent, as great part, if not all of it, was till the time of K. Henry VIIth, as above-mentioned. The antient stone gateway which led northward from the former precincts, or court of the convent (now called the green court) to these Foreigns and Queningate-lane, is still remaining.

(b) Battely's Somner, p. 105, pt. 2, p. 89.

(c) This house now pays rent to the hospital, and is situated opposite to this gate. Somner, ibid.

(d) Viz. Hoc opus Constructum est Anno Dom. Millefimo Quingentesimo Decimo Septimo. On the gates, are the arms of archbishop Juxon, and those of the see of Canterbury; the gates having being new made and set up by that Archbishop, in the room of the old ones, which had been destroyed by the puritans some years before, in the time of the great rebellion.

See a view of this gate-way above, p. 557.

(e) These arms were those of the King, a griffin and greyhound, supporters; and ten others; among which were those of Guldeford, Scot, Fineux, Howard, Newil, Peynings, and Guldeford, with the pomgranet in a canton; at each corner of the gate, the see of Canterbury, impaling Warham; and the same see, impaling Becket; and over the small wicket gate, three shields, viz. prior Goldstone's, with a mitre over it; the see of Canterbury, impaling Morton; and the arms of the priory.

by the parliamentary soldiers in the great rebellion of the last century.

Within this gate, along the greatest part of the south side of the church, formerly called the court of it, was the common cemetery, or burying place, not only for those of the convent, but for such of the city as chose to be buried in it, which were no small number, as appears by the wills in the prerogative office here; the place in general preferred for such purpose, being on each side the path, between the above gate and the south porch of the church, near which was, within memory, one antient tomb stone remaining; but there is nothing left now; the whole, though still called the church-yard, being a plain surface covered over with gravel, and undisturbed by burials for a great number of years past (f); on the middle of the south side of it (where the high mount is now in the 8th prebendal garden) was once a large steeple, called the Campanile, or Clock-house, which was taken down at the dissolution of the priory (g).

At the east end of the common or outward cemetery, is an antient stone arch, being circular and much ornamented with carve-work, coeval at least with this part of the church. This was the gateway, which opened into the inward cemetery, and is still known by the name of the cemetery gate (b). This cemetery or burial place extended, though seemingly for no great breadth, by the remaining part of the south side of the church round by the east end, and so on to a small part of the north side of it. This appears from some inscriptions on both sides, upon the stones of the church wall, two of which being the inscriptions, as has been supposed by some, for two of the priors who lie buried here, have been mentioned above; and there is a third still remaining on a stone on the north side, towards the east end of the church, which is legible as follows, in the same odd fashioned characters.

*Hic jacet Ymbertus, ejus Deus esto misertus:
Vivat cum christo mundo substractus ab isto:
Cujus in ore Dei laus vespere mane diei:
Quod bene cantavit vivens mors ipsa probavit* (bb).

(f) On the south side of the church-yard, almost opposite St. Michael's chapel, are two mean antient timbered houses, which were built and appropriated for the dwellings of the priests of archbishop Arundel's chantry, in this cathedral. The advowson, donation, &c. of the chantry in Christ church, late founded by archbishop Arundel, was sold and conveyed by the Archbishop, and the prior and convent of Christ church, among other premises, to K. Henry VIII. by indenture Nov. 30th, in the 29th year of his reign. Augmentation-office, Box E. 7.

(g) Leland's Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 6, says, "There was a might great Ringe Caullid Conrades Ringe, and that after was broken and made into a smaller Ringe and so hanggid up by likelihood in the low clofche in the churche yarde now a late clene pullid downe."

(b) The reason why the cemetery was divided into two parts, seems to be, as is still practised in the burial grounds

Further on beyond this inner cemetery, was the common garden of the convent, which extended to the east and south walls of the precincts, in the middle of which was a large fish-pond; this, at the dissolution, was filled up, and the space of it, with the rest of the garden, was parted off and allotted in small spots, as gardens for the members of the church; but this did not continue long, before the whole was again laid open for public use. Just within the above gate, at a small distance southward, there is yet standing the old school-house, though for many years past put to other uses (i); yet that it was such, before a school house in the Mint-yard was used for this purpose, is certain. In Mr. Somner's time, there were some who remembered it kept by one Mr. Twyne, sometime a magistrate of this city, it being a free-school, chiefly for the city, and so called, and antiently of the liberty of it, having a passage to it from some part of Bur-gate-street. Of what antiquity this free-school was, is uncertain; indeed archbishop Theodore, the 7th after Augustine, erected at Canterbury, by licence of pope Vitellianus, a school or college (a kind of academical foundation) wherein he placed professors of all the liberal sciences; which, says Lambarde, was the very pattern of that school, which Sigebert, the king of the East Angles, afterwards built; but this latter school must have long since vanished. The face of this city having been so often wasted by the Danes, and by other accidents, and casualties, that it would be a folly to seek or hope to find out the place of it, for there are no footsteps left to trace out even the ruins of it.

As to this free-school here, mention is made in the archives of this church of one Robert, rector of the church of the scholars of Canterbury, who was present as a witness, on an appeal of the prior and convent, in a cause of theirs, then, in 1259, depending before the official of Canterbury. Robert Winchelsea, who some time after this came to be archbishop of Canterbury, in K. Edward I.'s time, and was a scholar at Canterbury, says Harpsfield, and, therefore, I suppose here. In or church yards in London, and other populous town, to distinguish one part as a place more honorable for burials, for which, greater fees are paid, than in the outer one. Battely, pt. 2, p. 90.

(bb) In the obituary of the church, it is mentioned that Thomas Wyking was buried in 1407, without the walls of the church, opposite to the tomb of St. Thomas; and no doubt there were many more buried in this place, of which we find no particular mention made.

(i) It has been for many years made use of, as a workshop, for the plumbers of the church to cast their sheets of lead in. Adjoining to it, is the ninth prebendal house, built on the scite of the house where the sacrist of the priory dwelt; nearly opposite to which is the house allotted to the third prebend, built wholly since the dissolution of the priory, but not of such durable materials as those built before, by the religious.

whose

CATHEDRAL.

whose immediate successor's time, anno 1321, there arose a great controversy between Master Ralph de Waltham, rector of this school, and Robert de Henney, parson of St. Martin's, who, it seems by the right and custom of his church, held and kept a kind of petty free-school there, about the rights and liberties of either school (k). Of this school the archbishop, the see being full, and the church, the see being void, were patrons (l).

On the north side of the church was the priory itself, situated close to it, the gate of which opened into the court of it, now called the Green-court, being a quadrangle or square, having two gates of entrance to it; one of which, the most antient of any, situated at the north-west corner of the court, was called the porter's gate, and in some antient records the gate of the priory, or the old priory gate. It seems a very antient structure, probably made by archbishop Lanfranc, and there is not found mention in any record of its being rebuilt since the first foundation of it. Through this gate all sorts of provisions and necessaries were brought for the use of the convent. The other gate, at the north-east corner of the court, led from the court which was within the jurisdiction of the church, to the space of ground without or foreign to it, called the Foreigns, now vulgarly the Follings, as mentioned above, where the barns and some out-offices of the convent were built, once a part of Queningate-lane, and within the liberties of the city. On the south side of this court, towards the west part of it, stood

(k) Battely's Somner, p. 107. The records of this difference, as registered among the archives of Christ church, are printed by Mr. Somner, in his appendix, No. xxxiii.

(l) The archbishop's right will appear from the records mentioned above, and printed in Mr. Somner's appendix. The church's right from other like records, in which is this note:—The collation of the mastership of the grammar scholars by Richard Prior (of Christ church) upon Mr. John Bolton, whom he invested into that office by delivering to him the ferula and the rod, the said master having first made oath, that he would govern the school faithfully and diligently. This was in the year 1374, at which time the see was void by archbishop Wittlesey's death. See Battely's Somner, p. 106. But it appears before this, anno 1326, 13 cal. Jun. that the prior and chapter of Christ church gave the schools and the government of the scholars in Canterbury, to master John de Elbam, of their own mere right, the see of Canterbury being vacant. See Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 275.

(m) Of these two dormitories, nearly adjoining to each other, the larger has been pulled down; the lesser one upon the dissolution of the priory, was converted into a common hall for the minor canons, and other offices of the choir, where they had a common table, and eat together, after the manner of colleges. This common table being afterwards put down, the building was converted into distinct dwellings for some of the minor canons, and into a house for the twelfth prebendary. The vaults on which this, as well as the other parts of the priory were built, were raised on circular pillars, with plain capitals and bases; the arched roofs of which consist of large rude rubble stones, mixed the back gate into the priory itself (the front entrance being from the cloysters) the greatest part of which was situated between it and the church.

This gate was usually called the larder-gate close on the left or east side of which, was the larder, kitchen, and then adjoining the lesser dorter or dormitory, there being two of them; the other being the more antient and greater one (m), standing in that space or area, across which there is now a brick causeway, over vaults leading from the above gate to the church; they were both built on vaulted arches, and in these the monks slept. On the right hand, or westward of this gate, was the domus hospitum, or strangers-hall, allotted for the entertainment of strangers, and called antiently in the Latin records of this church, both Aula Hospitum and Camera Hospitum, i. e. the Hall or Chamber of the Guests (n); adjoining to which was an arched gateway which led to the convent kitchen, which stood near it on the left side, and then the locutorium; beyond which, adjoining to the cloysters, was the freyter or refectory (o), being the common dining room of the monks, built, as well as the other buildings of the priory, on ranges of vaulted arches, and were composed, as appears by the remains of them, of rubble stones and flints; the windows and doors and quoins of squared ashler stone.

The lesser dormitory, the larder gateway, the stranger's hall, and a remnant of the arch of the kitchen, with some high strong walls, in which with a coarse grout, and are seemingly of great antiquity, at least as early as Lanfranc's time. Many of these pillars are now buried in the earth, the capitals of them appearing to be of no greater height than the surface of the green court, and the pavement of the cloysters.

(n) The strangers hall, a lofty handsome building, was, with the lodgings over it and adjoining buildings, at the dissolution, allotted to the seventh prebendary, now Dr. Lummoore, for his dwelling; adjoining to the back part of which is part of an arch, seemingly the remains of the kitchen, and the only part of it left, which shews it to have been an octagon. This is in the above prebendal garden, against the west wall of which are some handsome remains of the locutorium, which seems to have filled the rest of the space of the garden. This kitchen of the priory was new built by prior Hatbrand, after the year 1338; to the new building of which, John Winborn, commissary of this church, gave 100 marks, and was otherwise a good benefactor to this church, to the use of which he gave 200 marks, for the purchase of lands; 60 marks to the convent, 40s. to the sacrist, for the steeple; all his cups and silver plate, for the use of the table of the master; two acres of land for the use of the cellarer, and all his books to the library. See Somner's MSS. papers in the library.

(o) Christian de Hagbe, by will, in the Prerog. office, gave 60 marks sterling, and John her husband, gave 10 marks, towards the building of the refectory; which shews that the buildings remaining at the dissolution of the priory, were very few, if any of them, those which had been erected by archbishop Lanfranc, though the vaults on which they stood certainly were. See Somner's MSS. papers, ibid.

are

are several large circular arched windows in different parts of them, belonging to those large and spacious rooms of the priory, pulled down soon after its dissolution, and several ranges of the vaulted arches on which they stood, are all that are at this time remaining of them. One of these walls, which is richly ornamented with carve work, and a range of small marble pillars, seems to have been the east end of the refectory, which adjoined the cloysters; on the north side of them there are two handsome arched doorways, the one opening into the cloysters from those vaults which were under the east part of the refectory, and the other from near the western part of it, being the approach to them and the cellarer's lodgings, from the stranger's-hall likewise.

I shall next proceed to the cloysters, which are remaining pretty entire; they seem to be much of the same age as the body of the church, and by the remains of the iron bars in the windows, the whole seems to have been once glazed. The roof throughout is curiously ribbed with stone-work, knotted with many hundreds of shields of coats of arms, probably those of the principal nobility and gentry, especially those who were benefactors to this fabric (p). The south walk or quarter, was built by archbishop Courtney, and his executors, who laid out 300*l.* on it; and prior Selling, who died in 1494, caused it to be glazed and beautified (q). At the west end of it, is an

(p) They are about 633 in number. Prior Henry de Estria soon after the year 1285, is recorded to have new paved the cloysters. See Dart, appendix, p. 3.

(q) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 90. Anglia Sacr. p. 1, p. 146.

(r) The cellarer was one of the four great officers of the monastery, each of whom had separate lodgings, or apartments to themselves, within the precincts. These were the cellarer, the sacrist, the chamberlain, and treasurer of the monastery. When K. Hen. VIII. new founded this church, he restored all the site of the late dissolved monastery to the dean and chapter, except these cellarer's lodgings and the almonry, since called the mint yard, which he reserved to himself. These lodgings were afterwards, through cardinal Pole's means, annexed to the archiepiscopal palace, part of which, the site of them still remains; but the building itself has been pulled down some few years since. The name, arms, and rebus of Richard Dering, monk and cellarer of this church, who suffered death in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, for being an accomplice with Elizabeth Barton, the Holy Maid of Kent, were formerly in the windows of these lodgings.

(s) There are only three monuments in the cloysters, two of which are about the middle of the west side, and the third in the north side against the walls. The first is for Thomas Knowler, gent. late alderman of Canterbury; he had two wives, Martha Twyman, and Jane Parker, by whom he had fifteen children;—by the first, three; Henry, Thomas, and Susan;—by the second, twelve; Anne, Gregory, Thomas, Jane, George, Elizabeth, Jane, Hester, Thomas, Martha, Daniel, and Elizabeth. He was an alderman above thirty years, and several years chamberlain, twice mayor of Canterbury; once in the reign of K. Charles II, in 1673; and in that of K. James II, in 1687. He died in 1705, æt. 67. The second, for Hester Pembroke, late of the precincts, arched door-way, at present leading towards the archbishop's palace, once the principal entrance and place of approach into the monastery, for all comers and goers; on the west side or walk was the door into the cellarer's lodgings, adjoining to it (r). The north side or walk is decorated superior to the others, with small pillars and arches of stone work, which, as well as two arched doorways leading into the refectory, &c. as mentioned above, are richly carved and ornamented. Opposite to the door which led to the refectory, are the remains of stone work, in which formerly stood a double cistern or lavatory, for the use of the hall, and for the convent to wash in. The middle space or area within the cloysters has, since the dissolution, been made use of, as well as the cloysters themselves, for a place of burial for the inhabitants of the precincts and others, who have thought fit to chuse it as such (s).

In the east walk near the north end of the east wall, is a small circular arched door-way, with zig-zag ornaments, long since stopped up. This led into some vaults, rather more elegant than most of the others under the buildings of the priory. Against the same wall, a little southward, is another door-way, but larger and pointed, formerly leading to the prior's chapel, but now into the dark entry, formerly the site of it, towards the Green-court; in the middle of this walk is the entrance to the Chapter-house (t), a spacious who died in 1774, æt. 80; and the third, for Simon May, one of the westrys, who died in 1673, æt. 71. In the cloysters themselves, as well as the middle inclosure, there are a great number of inscriptions, an attempt to notice all which would be too prolix, I shall mention four only; one to the memory of the Rev. John Francis, A. M. head master of the King's school here, and rector of Harbledown. He died unmarried, æt. 41, anno 1736; and for Thomas Francis, who died 1736, æt. 40. Jane Francis, the mother of John and Thomas, died in 1752, æt. 91. One for George Shorey, of London, died an infant, in 1741. And another for Mary, daughter of Edward Hasted, esq; and Anne his wife, who died an infant in 1774; in the same grave with her lies Anne Hasted, of these precincts, the widow of Edward Hasted, of Hawley, esq; barrister at law, and daughter of Joseph Tyler, of London, gent. descended by the mother from the antient and eminent family of Dingley, of the Isle of Wight. By him she had two children, Edward, the editor of this history; and Anne, the wife of Captain James Archer. She died in 1792, æt. 90. Another inscription for Stephen, son of Crisp-Stephen Hall, esq; who died an infant, in 1792; underneath, these verses, by Mrs. Elizabeth Carter, of Deal:—

Though infant years no pompous honors claim,
The vain parade of monumental fame,
To better praise the last great day shall rear
The spotless innocence that slumbers here.

(t) In the windows of this chapter-house, which were formerly much enriched with painted glass, were the arms of the lord Ros and his wife, sir Arnold Savage, fir Thomas Erpingham, Blount, Thomas Raxinston, Pallam, John Norwood, Ufford, impaling azure, a lion azure; and of Simon Sudbury, viz. a talbot hound passant, within a tordure engrailed, argent.

and

CATHEDRAL.

and beautiful structure, the roof of which, made of Irisb oak, is remarkably curious and elegant. It is of the same age with the cloysters and nave of the church, built in the room of a former one which stood close on the north side of it, chiefly by the benefactions of the archbishops Arundel and Courtney, and prior Cbillenden; the name of the latter being on the stone work of the great west window, and the arms of the archbishops Sudbury, Courtney and Arundel, on the other parts of the building in the glass of the windows (u), as well as on the ceiling itself. It is about ninety-two feet long and thirty-seven broad, and fifty-four high, having a circular span roof, so judiciously contrived, that there are no girders to prevent a fair open view of it, and it is without any other incumbrance.

This room is almost surrounded with a stone seat, above which are arches or stalls, divided by small pillars of Betbersden marble; thirteen of these take up the whole breadth at the east end, and have gotbick pyramids of stone above them, adorned with pinnacles carved and gilt; the middle stall being that of the prior, is distinguished superior to the others. The stalls on each side are thirty-five in number, five of which, next to the east corners, have had their capitals and spandrils between the arches gilt, probably appropriated to the chief officers of the convent; the rest in other respects are much the same.

Several persons have been in antient times buried here, and some very antient grave-stones, the inscriptions on which were obliterated, remained on the pavement, till a few years ago the graves of which lay close to the surface of it; these were all removed, when the pavement was new laid with the most antient and largest grave-stones, brought from the nave of the church for this purpose.

In this room the prior and chapter met to consult on the affairs of the convent. Here the elections of archbishops, priors, and other officers were made; here censures, penances and corporal chastisements were imposed and inflicted on delinquents, and in some cases even with rods; but the most remarkable one that ever was inflicted in this house was, that which was submitted to by K. Henry II, to atone for the murder of archbishop Thomas Becket (v).

(u) Somner says, that in the time of prior Henry de Estria, about 1304 or 1305, the whole choir was repaired with three new doors, &c. as was the chapter-house with two new gables; all which cost 839l. 7s. 8d.

(v) In the old chapter-house. See a particular account of this humiliating penance below, in archbishop Becket's life, and in Parker's Antiq. Brit. p. 135.

(w) It was a singular custom, that whilst sermons were preached here, the preacher, twenty minutes before he entered the pulpit, constantly retired to the dean's chapel adjoining, where he walked to and fro, to contemplate and refresh his memory.

When, instead of a numerous fraternity of monks, the chapter was reduced to a dean and twelve prebendaries, such a large room not being required for chapter business, it was fitted up for a sermon-house, with a pulpit, pews and galleries, and this was done so soon after the dissolution of the priory, that the chief gallery, with latticed casements (the royal closet, when the King and Queen should be there) is dated 1545, the 36th of K. Henry VIII. To this use it was put for many years (w); but the inconvenience arising from this removal of the congregation in the midst of divine service, was a very sufficient reason for having the whole performed in one place; accordingly, soon after the restoration the sermons were constantly, as they are at this time, preached in the choir; though this still retains the name of the sermon-house (x).

Notwithstanding the above; for form's sake, the capitular business is still begun here; the archbishop's visitation of the cathedral is still held, and the statutes are publicly read here yearly, on June 22, when all the members of the church are summoned to attend, and the other chapters are opened here, and then immediately adjourned to the modern audit-room.

To return again to the court and priory (y) (now the Green-court), the whole east side of which was taken up by the prior's lodgings. Time has made such alterations in the ruins of the old lodgings formerly belonging to the prior, that it is impossible to mark and describe all the particulars of them. The present deanry, which takes up all the east side of the court, was certainly part of the prior's lodgings, the entrance to which was by the gate at the south-west corner of the court, which was then called the prior's gate. The first part of these lodgings that we can gain any knowledge of, seems to be the repairs and additions made to them by prior Henry de Estria, about and after the year 1317, who besides other beneficent acts to the church and convent, mentioned in the course of this work, repaired the greater and lesser chambers of the prior, the long chamber and that by the treasury and his study. The new chamber of the prior was likewise leaded, together with the wardrobe, the new pantry and his kitchen; the great hall near the gate of the court, was likewise repaired; the (x) Morning prayers at six o'clock in summer, and seven in winter, were, till they were entirely left off within these few years, read in this sermon-house, and it has been lent occasionally to different congregations; as to the French refugees, when the undercroft has been overflowed with water, through incessant rains; to the Hanoverian and Hessian regiments, when quartered in Canterbury; and to the parishioners of St. Andrew's, when their church was taken down and rebuilding.

(y) This antient court of the priory is styled in Eadwyn's drawing, Curia Prioratus

above-mentioned great or stone hall, afterwards commonly called the master's table, where the chief master or steward of the prior's household, with the other officers of his immediate retinue, had their table, was rebuilt by prior Hatbrand, who died in 1370. There is no doubt but this was the same building, which is now the parlour of the deanry, lately fitted up as such; out of this apartment there was a passage and an entrance by some stone steps into a stone chamber, called the paved chamber; and the prior's bed chamber, study, and some other rooms, for his private apartment seem to have been contiguous to this paved chamber, as may be conjectured from the account which the obituary gives of the repairing and beautifying of them by prior Cbillenden (z). The building, rebuilding, repairing and adorning of several other chambers, apartments and offices belonging to the prior, the particular scite of which is now unknown, may be found mentioned in the obituary of this church. The stable, granaries, &c. are likewise taken notice of in it (a).

When, upon the new foundation of this church by K. Henry VIII, and the several buildings of the monastery which were not utterly demolished, were divided among the dean and prebendaries, these lodgings or apartments of the prior are thus recorded to have been allotted. To the dean was assigned, the chapel with the closet, the old chequer, with the chambers belonging to it, with the corn lofts and cellars adjoining to the west end of his garden; the brew-house and bake-house, and gate-house next to his stables, (which latter buildings are situated on the north side of the court, now called the Green-court) the great barn, the livery stables, called the prior's stables, the sumptery stable and the carter's hall, all situated in and adjoining to the Foreigns; the garden before his hall-door and the wine cellars; the commission chamber, on the north side of the hall of the infirmary, (now Dr. Storer's two parlours) were allotted to the second prebendary; part of the long chamber, since pulled down, being part of the scite of Mr. archdeacon Lynch's house, was allotted to the fifth prebendary; the other part of the long chamber, contiguous to the lodgings called the honours (now part of Dr. Moore's house) was allotted to the sixth prebendary; those lodgings, called the honours, were the state apartment, where the prior appeared at times in state, and where he lodged and entertained all guests and visitors of rank and consequence; and such there were, who continually visited this priory, as well through business, as ceremony, convenience, and even curiosity, and were sumptuously entertained here with becoming dignity, both of the prior and his noble guests. This building, which is called in old writings, the master honours, and in others, the great chamber of the prior, which fronts the north end of the convent garden, has a grand and noble appearance, much superior to the other buildings of the priory, and suitable to the purpose it was intended for (b). This building was allotted on the new foundation to the eleventh prebendary, and is now the dwelling-house of Mr. Weston.

In the eastern wall of the precincts, almost in a line with the front of these lodgings, and exactly opposite the east end of the church, is a postern gate, having a causeway over the city ditch, leading to the green opposite the chief gate of St. Augustine's monastery, now reserved for the use of the dean and prebendaries (c).

There is yet to be noticed, an apartment belonging to the prior, called le gloriette, the scite of which is not now known. The obituary mentions, that prior Hatbrand repaired the chamber that was covered with lead next the gloriette; that prior Selling built from the ground contiguous to the apartment called la gloriette, a stone tower, which was covered with lead, and had fair glass windows; that he decently adorned it in the inside, and that this was called the prior's study; and that prior Goldstone reared up a new edifice near the prior's old apartment, called la gloriette, which was called the new lodging, with several rooms, and a new fair porch towards the convent. This, no doubt, is the gate now standing at the south-west corner of the Green-court, afterwards called the prior's gate, as above-men-

(z) These apartments are still remaining, being the dean's study, and those apartments of the deanry northward of the great stair-case, the entrance to which now is, by a door at the space, on the top of the first flight of stairs.

(a) See this part of the obituary, Battely, pt. 2, p. 44.

(b) It is recorded that John Elham, prior of this church, died in 1449, at the master honours; and that John Bockingbam, quitting his bishopric of Lincoln, came to this monastery in 1398, and dwelt at his own charge, at the master honours, as Mr. Somner, in his manuscript collections has observed, from the obituary of this church, in the Arundel library. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 93.

(c) This postern was in use before the first year of K. Richard III, when it was, together with the bridge of it, granted by act of parliament to the church, and they were confirmed to it by a composition, anno 7 Henry VII. made between the prior and convent and the citizens of Canterbury; and this postern and bridge, as well as this part of the wall of the precincts, were afterwards rebuilt by prior Selling, who died in 1494. Hence, (or from the rebuilding of it afterwards), this bridge gained the name of the new bridge; for it appears, by Strype's life of archbishop Parker, p. 44, that in the year 1573, when Q. Elizabeth was at Canterbury, the Archbishop suggested, concerning her coming to the cathedral on Sunday, if it was her pleasure, to come from her house at St. Austin's, by the new bridge, and so enter the west end of the church, or in her coach by the street. This bridge, in 1642, appears to be then broken down, by Culmer's Dean and Chapter News, p. 10. It was not rebuilt at the restoration, but a causeway was made in the room of it, as it now remains, with brick walls on each side.

tioned;

tioned; the gloriolite and buildings above-mentioned adjoining to it, stood most probably on the left, or east side of the dark entry, leading from it between the present deanry and the house granted to one of the six preachers (Mr. Hearne (d)), which might be a part of them, where some ruins are still to be seen. The lucre of the lead, which covered these buildings, was most likely the cause of their being demolished; a spoil, which caused the demolition of many beautiful and magnificent buildings and churches belonging to the late dissolved religious houses throughout the kingdom. This was the cause too here of the demolition of the building, called the long hall, where the inferior officers of the prior used to eat. It was situated at the west end of what is now called the brick passage, extending as far as the first and second prebendal houses, where a wall reached across this passage, pulled down many years since, to make this thoroughfare more convenient.

On the south side and contiguous to the long-hall, was the sub-prior's lodgings, or apartment, which seems to have extended from the prior's chapel to the infirmary; it was formerly allotted to the eleventh prebendary, but is now assigned as a dwelling-house for one of the minor canons (Mr. Gregory) and part of the first prebendal house (Dr. Benson's).

The prior's chapel mentioned above, was situated adjoining to the sub-prior's lodgings, westward, near the dormitory. It was appropriated to the use of the prior and his family, and was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary, and was called the chapel of the Blessed Mary within the priory, as appears from some antient charters, in which it is so called. Archbishop Winchelsea, by his letters, May 27, 1297, granted an indulgence of forty days to all, who should visit this chapel within the priory, and confirming all former and future ones to the benefactors and visitors of it. This oratory or chapel was beautified and richly furnished with tapistry, copes, &c. by prior Thomas Goldstone; upon the dissolution of the priory, it was assigned to the use of the dean and his family, whence it acquired the name of the dean's chapel. Over it was the church library, built in the room of a former one (e), by archbishop Chicheley, who with others, well furnished it with books, most of which were plundered in the time of the great rebellion, and the building itself was, with the chapel underneath, destroyed by fire several years afterwards (f). Since which, the chapel has never been restored; the space it filled being open as the common place of passage to the church and cloysters. Over it was rebuilt the present library, which has a tolerable good collection of books, the improvement of which has been much neglected for some years past. Besides the printed books, there is a collection of manuscripts, some of which were given by Dr. Casaubon, among which are the annals of his life, those of Mr. Somner, and several others; and there is a collection of coins, both Greek and Roman, made abroad and given by dean Bargrave, and Dr. Meric Casaubon.

Prior Sellyng beautified the former library over the prior's chapel, and gave many books to it, and several of the archbishops and priors are recorded as having been benefactors to it, as have several of the prebendaries, both to that and the present one, as appears by their wills; among which were, besides those above-mentioned, the Drs. Peter de Molin and James Jeffrys; to these must be added, Stephen Hunt, of these precincts, gent. who gave to it by his will in 1721, all his Greek, Latin and Italian books, all Mr. Boyle's philosophical works, and all such other books, in whatever language they were, which treated expressly of physic, natural philosophy or mathematics, if there were then none of the same sort in the library. These amounted to a very considerable collection.

Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, appropriated the church of Halstow to the reparation of the books in this library, saving five marcs to the vicar. At the suppression of the priory, this parsonage, among the rest of its possessions, came into the King's hands, who, in his 33d year, settled it on the dean and chapter; but without any reservation of the former use of it.

In the room of this library is a curious octagon table of black marble, inlaid with figures in white; representing in the centre, Orpheus playing, with the beasts; and round, a representation of various kinds of hunting; the whole being well executed. It was the gift of Dr. Bargrave, prebendary of this church in 1680. A large brass eagle, the feet of which are three brass lions, and which formerly was placed in the choir, and served to support the bible, on which the lessons were read, now stands at the end of this library; round it is engraved in capitals, Gulielmus Burroughes Londini me fecit anno D. 1663. At the upper end of the room, over the door, is a very

(d) By Eadwyn's drawing, the steps now leading up to this house, once led to the Camera Vetus Prioris. This house being part of the deanry, was given up to the use of a six-preacher, by dean Godwyn, who had room enough without it.

(e) There was burnt in this library, says Twyne, p. 114, Cicero's Treatise de Republica, and some of the works of Henry Beauclerk, King of England were also there. Dart has given in his appendix, p. xxxi, an account of the books antiently in it, from a manuscript in the Cotton library, marked Julius, C. vi-4-f. 99.

(f) Many of the manuscripts which suffered by the above fire, remain in the same mutilated state as at their first removal, (though many of them might with care be recovered), in a heap on the floor, in one of the rooms over the vestry of the church.

CATHEDRAL.

antient painting of Q. Edyve, in her robes, with her crown and sceptre. In the back ground is a view of Birchington, in the Isle of Thanet, and at the bottom, some verses in antique characters, which, as well as the picture, may be seen engraved in the 1st volume of the History of Kent, under Meopham. On this staircase is likewise a drawing, representing, on a large scale, the ichnography, or plat of the precincts of Christ-church, together with the archbishop's palace, and the houses circumjacent, &c. and the vaults and water-works, measured and delineated by Thomas Hill, A. D. 1680.

Contiguous to the sub-prior's lodgings and the long hall above-mentioned, towards the east, was the infirmary, in which all due provision was made for the sick monks, and the care of it was committed to a particular officer, named the infirmarer. In this building there were separate chambers for the sick; these reached as far as the prior's stone-hall. Prior Hatbrand built seven new rooms for the infirm; here were likewise a kitchen and other necessary offices (g), which with the great hall of the infirmary, built anno 1342, make a great part of the second prebendal house (Dr. Storer's); the latter still made use of as a hall, remains at this day (b).

On the south side of the infirmary was the chapel for the use of it. It has been long since pulled down, and the scite of it, used as a public way, called the brick passage, from its being paved with such materials, towards the oaks; but there are some remains of the walls of it left, viz. part of the wall of it on the north side towards the west end (being the corner of Dr. Storer's house), the whole south wall, with wide circular arches and pillars of small squared stones, (being now the north side of the second prebendal house, (Dr. Benson's) and the two large arches of the chancel at the east end, being pointed and seemingly of a much later date than the others.

This chapel then, consisting of a body and chancel, could not therefore be built at the same time. By the appearance of the remains of it, it was far from small; there were in it, besides the principal altar of the Virgin Mary, before which a wax taper was continually burning, and

(g) Archbishop Courtney new built the lodgings and kitchen belonging to the infirmary, at his own cost of 133l. 6s. 8d. Battely, pt. 2, p. 75.

(b) This hall is a fine structure, built of squared flint, with three large gothic arched windows on the east side; on the stone frames on each side where the arches spring on these windows, are carved the heads of a meagre sick monk, and of a fat healthy one.

(i) It appears in the register of this church, that there was in this chapel an antient stone, on which the bodies of the deceased were used to be laid. This had been an antient custom, but about the year 1401, this stone was taken and carried away, and some time after a new one brought and placed before the holy cross, which was in the inward to whom this chapel was dedicated, others dedicated to St. Benedict and St. Agnes. By the register of this chapel there appear to have been many persons buried in it, most probably all who died in the infirmary had their sepulture here (i).

When archbishop Cutbert, who came to the see about the year 741, had procured, both from the King and the pope, a right of sepulture of the archbishops and others within this church, which the neighbouring monastery of St. Augustine had enjoyed, as appropriated to itself ever since its first foundation, he erected a church or chapel, almost contiguous to this cathedral church, which he dedicated to St. John the Baptist; among other uses for which it was founded, one was, that it might be a place of sepulture for the archbishops, in which he was the first who was buried.

Much enquiry has been made where this church was built, but it is allowed by all to have stood near the east end of the cathedral, and not far distant from it; the greatest probability is, that it stood in the same place where this chapel of the infirmary was afterwards built. If it had escaped the former fires, which is almost impossible, it was certainly destroyed by those flames which burnt the choir of Conrad; for we are told, that the infirmary, together with the chapel of it, perished at the same time. It should seem, when this chapel was then rebuilt and annexed to the infirmary, it lost the antient name and patronage of St. John Baptist, and was dedicated to the Blessed Virgin Mary. There was a door in the south wall of it towards the east end, which opened into the convent garden, by which was the before-mentioned altar of St. Benedict. It was convenient for the sick monks to resort to the garden for air; on the outside, at the south-east corner of the wall, a small figure of St. John Baptist, carved in stone, is still to be seen.

To return now again to the court of the priory or Green-court, as it is called; the south and east sides of which have been already described. On the north side stood the brewhouse, the bakehouse and the malt-house of the priory, all large and spacious buildings; the former, which was allotted to the dean (k) at the dissolution, and con-part of this chapel. Mr. Battely, pt. 2, p. 94, 95, mentions from the register of burials in this chapel, several who were interred in it, viz. Henry Sutton, elemosynary, before the altar of St. Benet, anno 1429. James Grove before the same altar near the door of the garden, in 1430. James Moland, sacrist, before the altar of St. Agnes. Thomas Everard, directly under the wax taper burning here, anno 1405. Hugh Aleyn, anno 1401. Nicholas Canterbury, anno 1404, being the first who was laid on the new stone, as above-mentioned.

(k) Those on the north side the court, allotted to the dean, consist now of a tenement, to which the room over the Follings gateway belongs; the water-house, in which is the great reservoir for the water, which supplies the pre- tinues now the greatest part used for the like purpose, the others to the fourth prebendary (now Dr. Ratcliffe).

CATHEDRAL.

The gate of the priory, at the north-west corner of this court, has been already mentioned; I shall only observe further, that the room over it, as well as the house adjoining on the south side of it, was, at the dissolution, allotted to the tenth prebend (now Dr. Viner).

The stranger's hall (l), at the south-west corner of this court, now allotted for a residence to the seventh prebendary, has been already mentioned above; hither the pentice or covered way, now belonging to the tenth prebendary, Dr. Vyner, led along the whole west side of this court, from the almonry at the north-west corner of it, and so on through the vaulted arch, now under the seventh prebendal house, close by the convent kitchen and refectory, into the cloysters and cellarer's lodgings; by which means an inclosed and convenient communication might be had, in all weathers, from one to the other of them.

There was before the dissolution (as by the rule of St. Benet there ought to be) hospitality kept, and entertainment afforded and allowed, both board and lodging, to such strangers, travellers and pilgrims especially, as resorting to the monastery should crave it of the monks; and, consequently, there was a place in it set apart for that purpose. The cellarer had charge of this place, under whom this hall, which was situated not far from his lodgings, had its proper and peculiar steward, to see after the accommodation of the guests with all necessaries, according to the statutes and customs of the monastery. He was called the steward of the stranger's hall; here was entertainment to be had, of charity for religious and secular guests, and that by the statutes of archbishop Winchelsea, for the space of at least a day and a night, for both horse and man.

At the north-west corner of the court was a large building, which was antiently called the north hall, and sometimes bog-hall; in Edwyn's drawing, Aula nova. It appears to have been a large handsome structure, very lofty, much like some of our parish churches, with a body and aisles, and the dean's brew-house, (from whence the former was taken about eighty years ago) to these the premises of the fourth prebend are contiguous westward.

(l) Over the hall were two lodging rooms, known by the names of Heaven and Paradise; these still remain, and are paved with square tiles.

(m) These apartments were allotted at the dissolution to the ninth prebend, but were afterwards exchanged with the auditor of the church, who before had the house in the Oaks, now the ninth prebendal house, (the Hon. Mr. Legge's.) These apartments are now made use of as the commissary's and archdeacon's offices for the registering of wills, and the auditor has the rents of it.

(n) It is the present way up to the register's office, and the way to it from the green-court fronts the south side of it.

side aisle, having a row of pillars to part them from one end to the other; it was forty feet wide and not less than 150 feet long, being built on ranges of circular arches, vaulted over, and well ornamented; and being like those in the undercroft, only with plainer pillars, may be well supposed to be as antient as the time of Lanfranc. It stood entire till the year 1730, when one-third of it, towards the north, was taken down, as well as the vaults under it; the rest is still remaining, and is converted into various apartments (m) and dwellings. The ascent to the hall by several steps, is still remaining, with several small marble pillars, joined by arches of an antique form on each side (n). This building, which stood in a situation least likely to interfere with the privacy of the monks, or the business of their servants, and was of a size sufficient to contain a number of those people who might have occasion to resort at all times to it, was allotted to the steward of the liberties of the priory, for the keeping of his courts, which had been holden for a great length of time. This appears from the charter of K. Henry VI, in which are these words, concerning the holding of a court; Know ye, that we considering that the prior and convent of the church and their predecessors, have been used time out of mind to hold a court at the north-hall, within the precincts of the said church or priory, before their bailiff for the time being, from three weeks to three weeks, which court was called the high court, and in the same court to hear and determine pleas, &c. (o)

The dissolution diminishing the revenues of the church, and the profits of this court diminishing likewise from time to time, it grew less and less resorted to, and was at last totally disused, inso-much that the memory of its ever having been, has been for many years forgotten (p).

Almost adjoining to the back part of the above building, stood the eleemosnary or almshouse of the church, vulgarly called the ambry, which had a gate opening towards Northgate-street; this place was under the care of a monk, called the dean of the almonry, or the church almoner. Here the poor, who continually waited at this gate in great numbers for the distribution of (o) See Rot. Cart. de an. 25 and 26 Hen. VI, No. 30: This court, it seems, was first set up with the Archbishop's licence, many ages since; the Archbishop granted them freely to hold their court of their own vassals, as Roger Hovenden has it, speaking of archbishop Hubert in the year 1200, and recording there the agreement made between him and the monks, on their first falling out about the chapel, at Lambeth. Battely's Somner, p. 112.

(p) The prison of the dean and chapter under the steward of their courts, was in two of the arched vaults, on the right hand of that under which the passage is into the mint-yard; but this being no more than a dungeon, it was removed into the church-yard; but the court having been disused, there has been no prison for some time.

CATHEDRAL:

alms, were daily fed with the remains of such fare as came from the refectory and other tables kept within the monastery. The private statutes of this church, made by archbishop Winchelsea, say; Let all the fragments and relics of meat and drink, left at the tables of the refectory, of the prior's lodgings, of the master, perhaps cellarer, of the infirmary, and of the stranger's hall, be gathered together into dishes or vessels, fit for that purpose, and be carried all of them to the almonry, and there be disposed of to no other use, but of pure alms only. This was agreeable to that ordinance of the provincial constitutions, that the full portion of victuals should constantly be provided and set before the monks in the refectory, and whatsoever was left, should be given wholly and entirely in alms to the needy; and that no abbat, prior, or almoner might dispense with this rule. Hence we may learn, how great and extensive the alms and charity of these great monasteries were, and how much the poor and needy must feel the want of them, occasioned by their dissolution; for though the King in his grants of the scite and demesnes of these houses, as well to private persons as ecclesiastical and other corporate bodies, enjoined and ordered certain portions of charity and alms to be continued to the poor, yet the custom was continued but for a very few years, and by many, not at all, and the whole was soon laid aside and forgotten. This almonry had several benefactors to it; K. Henry II, by his charter, gave to the monks towards the augmenting of their almonry, the ground between Northgate and Queningate, as has been already mentioned; and archbishop Richard, (Becket's immediate successor) appropriated to the use of this priory, for an augmentation to this almonry, the churches of Monkton and Eastry, with their chapels, and the churches of Meopham and Eynsford, and afterwards the churches, St. Thomas of Fairfield, Seafalter and Farningham, were appropriated to the like use; all which were confirmed by the bulls of pope Lucius and Alexander III (q); and archbishop Courtney, who came to the see in 1381, re-annexed the church of Meopham to it, at his own proper cost (r).

(q) Regist. Ecclef. Cant. Nevertheless archbishop Baldwin, who did all in his power to prejudice the monastery, seized on the churches of Monkton and Eastry, and took the profits of them to himself, and left them to the possession of his successor. These churches remained alienated from the almonry about one hundred and sixty-five years, and then the convent redeemed them of archbishop Illip, who is recorded as a benefactor, for consenting to and confirming this agreement, by giving him the churches of St. Dunstan, St. Pancrace, and All Saints, in Broad-street, in London, in exchange for them. Battely's Somner, p. 112, pt. 2, p. 96.

(r) Battely, ibid. pt. 2, p. 75.

(s) Regist. Ecclef. Cant. A. fol. 195^b. Carta Regis in Archiv. Ecclef. Cant.

(t) By this it should seem, that his intention was to maintain an additional chaplain in this foundation,

In the year 1319, anno 11 Edward II, Henry de Eastry, then prior of this church, erected within this almonry, a chapel, which he dedicated to St. Thomas the Martyr, and founded in it a chantry of six priests or chaplains, to celebrate for the souls of K. Edward I. and II, archbishops Lanfranc and Winchelsea, the founder himself and some others, and contiguous to it he built lodgings for these priests; which foundation was confirmed by archbishop Walter in 1321, and by K. Edward II, in his 19th year (s); after which, in 1327, being the last year of that reign, his successor prior Richard Oxinden, with the consent of the convent, appropriated the church of Westcliff by Dover, to the almonry for ever, for the maintenance of these priests, and the repairing of the chapel and lodgings contiguous to it. In 1358, Alexander Hanekin, clerk, became a great benefactor to this chapel, by the gift of several messuages, lands and rents to it, towards the support and maintenance of seven chaplains (t) in the chapel of St. Thomas the Martyr, near the gate of the priory (u).

This chantry was suppressed as part of the priory, and came with its revenues, as such, into the King's hands.

Soon after the dissolution of the priory, the almonry, with the above chapel and lodgings, being situated without the square of the court of the priory, and as it were apart from it, was re-conveyed back to the King, who retained it in his own hands, and converted it into an office for the minting of money; hence it has been ever since called the mint-yard (v), in which state it remained till Q. Mary, by letters patent under the great seal, dated June 14, anno 3^d and 4th Philip and Mary (w), granted this almonry with all the edifices, (in which the above chapel and lodgings were included) and ground belonging to it, to Cardinal Pole, archbishop of Canterbury, who being then seized of them in fee, afterwards devised them by his will to Aloisus Priobus, his executor, who by deed indented, dated July 30, anno 1 Elizabeth, 1559, gave these premises to the dean and chapter, to hold to them and their successors

(u) It appears by his will in the register office in Canterbury, that he gave by it a messuage, two mills, one hundred and ninety-five acres of arable, thirty-five acres of pasture, twenty acres and one rod of meadow, and eleven acres and a half of woodland, with several small rents. Battely's Somner, p. 97.

(v) Mr. Somner, p. 65, says, he had a piece or two of money of K. Henry VIII, coined at Canterbury, as he conceived at this place, now called the mint-yard, where, after the dissolution he coined money for the service, as is reported, of his French wars; and in a decree of the chapter anno 1545, mention is made of the offices of the King's mint here, to be supplied with water from the cistern in the north court.

(w) At the bottom of the grant, it is said to be made by authority of parliament.

for

for the term of 500 years, for the use and intention of finding and maintaining the school there for boys, during that term, to be instructed in proper learning; paying yearly for the same, one corn of pepper, &c. Since which, the whole has remained part of the possessions of the dean and chapter to this time (x). The chapel and lodgings above-mentioned were, not long after the above period, accordingly converted to the use of the grammar school(y), which was instituted by K. Henry VIII, as part of his new foundation; from whence it is usually known by the name of the King's-school.

It has already been mentioned above (z), that there was a free-school, situated near the convent-garden of these precincts, of which the archbishop was the patron, so early as the year 1259, as appears by the records of the priory (a); and there is mention again made of it in them so late as the year 1374; how long it continued afterwards, there is no mention, but most probably till the dissolution of the priory and the school-house there, though applied to other purposes, is now in being, and has still the reputation of having been made use of as such. The present grammar school was founded by K. Henry VIII, who, by the charter of foundation, which he granted in his 33d year to the dean and chapter of this church, made such school a part of it, to consist of a master, usher, and fifty scholars, who were to eat at the common table, which the provision made by him for it could not, however, long maintain. The stipend of these scholars was to be 4*l.* per ann. and they were to hold them for five years (b).

But the school suffered not only in the suppression of the common table, but from the King's discharging the dean and chapter, afterwards in his 39th year, anno 1546, from the expending of 200*l.* per annum in the support of twenty-four students in Oxford and Cambridge, of which it may reasonably be supposed the scholars of it would have had the preference, which he did, intending, as he says, to found two colleges in those universities; at the same time he took from the dean and chapter on this account, among other estates, Canterbury college in Oxford.

Where the school was kept during the time that the almshouse, now called the mint-yard, remained in the hands of the crown, except it was in the stranger's-hall adjoining, I know not; but soon after the time of the dean and chapter's coming into the possession of it, the school seems to have been removed to its present situation.

The scholars educated at this school have been, in general, of the very best families of this part of the county; many of those educated at it have, from the learning they have imbibed here, been ornaments to the professions they have entered into. Numbers of these might be mentioned and particularized in this place, was there sufficient room for it; those of late years the public is sufficiently acquainted with; and I shall only mention one, the Right Hon. Edward, Lord Thurlow, late high chancellor of Great Britain. Of the former, I shall take notice only of the famous Dr. Harvey, whose extraordinary discovery of the circulation of the blood, has given new light to the study of medicine, and deservedly rendered his name immortal to posterity.

Of the masters who have presided over this school, many of them have been men of eminence, as clergymen and scholars; one of them I can mention of my own knowledge, and whoever knew him will join in this tribute of justice to his memory. I mean, the Rev. Dr. Osmond Beauvoir, late head master of it, first educated here and afterwards of St. John's college in Cambridge; whose great abilities brought this school to the highest degree of estimation; who united the gentleman with the scholar, one whose eminent qualifications and courtesy of manners, gained him the esteem and praise of all who knew him, many of whom are still living to attest it, and regret the loss of him (c).

There have been several benefactions made in favour of the scholars educated at this school, to assist them in their further education at the two universities. Archbishop Parker, in the year 1569, anno 11 Elizabeth, founded, out of the revenues of Eastbridge hospital, two scholarships, each of the yearly value of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in Corpus Christi alias Benet college, in Cambridge, during the space of 200 years, for the maintenance of two scholars, natives of Kent, and educated in this school, to be nominated by the dean of Can-

(x) The passage into the mint-yard from the green-court, is through one of the arches which was formerly under the stranger's hall, or domus hospitum.

(y) The present school house seems to be what was once the old chapel, and the upper master's house what was the lodgings of the chantry priests.

(z) See above, p. 575.

(a) There is no notice taken of it in Edwyn's drawing, which was made between the years 1130 and 1174.

(b) These scholars are elected only at the November chapter, to supply such vacancy as may happen in the ensuing year, and must be between the ages of nine and fifteen. The stipend is now divided, the masters taking one-half for their care and teaching, and the scholars being paid the other half towards buying their books, &c.

(c) Dr. Beauvoir died in 1789, and was buried in the south isle of the nave of the abbey church of Bath; but there is not any grave-stone or memorial over him, to tell where he lies. There is a small tablet of marble erected for him, against the south wall of the nave there, which is a blemish to the church, and an inscription on it; which, as well as the monument, is no credit to those who put it up, from whom his memory surely deserved better treatment.

terbury, and the master of the above hospital; they were to be called Canterbury scholars, and were to have all the benefits which any other scholars enjoyed in the college. Archbishop Whitgift, in his ordinances relating to the above hospital, (which were confirmed by act of parliament, anno 27 Elizabeth), renewed this foundation, which is now perpetual; but instead of the dean's, he made the archbishop's consent necessary to the appointment (d).

Archbishop Parker likewise, by his will, dated in 1575, founded three more scholarships in the same college, of the yearly value of 3l. 6s. 8d. each, to be paid out of the rents of certain tenements in Westminster. One of which is appropriated to a native of the city of Canterbury, educated at Canterbury school, and assigned them chambers in that college (e). An exhibition, scholarship and chamber, is now worth 15l. a year.

Robert Rose, of Bishopborne, in 1618, gave twenty-six acres of marsh land, in St. Mary's and Hope All Saints parishes, in Romney Marsh, for the assistance of four scholars, at either university, being such as were in the King's school, at Canterbury, (of which he had been usher); which exhibitions were to be of the yearly value of six pounds each, and to continue for seven years, if the scholar should remain so long there unpreferred to a living of 20l. per annum above the exhibitions; with other restrictions and rules, as mentioned in the deed of feoffment (f).

William Heyman, of Canterbury, gent. in 1625, by indenture, vested twenty-seven acres of marsh land in Wareborne, in this county, in certain feoffees, to apply five parts out of six of the rents of those premises upon two poor scholars only, to be placed in the King's school at Canterbury, to be nominated by his next heir and the majority of the feoffees; such scholars to be descended from the body of his grand-father, Peter Heyman, esq; or to be natives, or born of such as are natives of Sellinge. The scholar so to be chosen to be full eight years old; who should hold his exhibition for nine years, and if he should go to any college in Cambridge, to be continued for seven years from his leaving school; and if he should take orders in the first five years of the seven, the same to be continued to him for

(d) See the account of East-bridge hospital.

(e) See the will in Battely, appendix, pt. 2, No. xiv^a. Mr. Gosling, from what authority I know not, says, one of these scholarships is appropriated to the county of Lincoln; and the other two for natives of Kent, educated at Canterbury school.

(f) The surviving feoffees are Charles Robinson, esq; recorder of this city; and Mr. Robert Le Geyt, of Canterbury.

(g) The surviving feoffees are only John Carter, of Deal, esq; and the Rev. Mr. John Nairne, of Kingston.

(h) This seems somewhat strange, says Mr. Gosling, considering that most of the estates in the neighbourhood of three years more, that is ten in the whole, at the university (g).

Mr. Abraham Colfe, the founder of Lewisham school, among many other noble benefactions, gave seven exhibitions of 10l. per annum each, for scholars from that school at either university; in default of claimants from Lewisham school, then from the adjacent hundreds, and from members of the company of leather-sellers, (who are patrons of the school, and possessed of the estates bequeathed by him.) He directed these exhibitions to be filled up by scholars from the King's school in Canterbury, and from that in Christ's hospital in London, alternately. But the leather-sellers company have, for near these fifty years past, refused to admit the claim of either, and have totally sunk this 70l. per annum, alledging a failure in their estate (b).

Henry Robinson, by will in 1643, gave certain messuages, &c. called Gore End, in Birchington and St. Nicholas, in Thanet, to St. John's college in Cambridge, for the founding of two fellowships and two scholarships, for two fellows and two scholars, natives of the Ile of Thanet, or in default, of natives of the county of Kent, and brought up at the King's school, in Canterbury. But it being found that the profit of the lands were not sufficient for such as maintenance (i), it was ordered by a decree of the Court of Chancery, with consent of the college and the executors, dated November 26, 1652; that in future four scholarships should be established in that college for ever, instead of the same; and that the profits of the premises should, according to the direction of the donor in his will, be employed for ever, towards the maintenance of such four scholars only, each of whom is to be allowed by the college, in commons, 10l. a year.

George Thorpe, S. T. P. prebendary of Canterbury, gave by will in 1719 to Emanuel college in Cambridge, certain messuages, &c. in Ash near Sandwich, for the endowment of five exhibitions, to enable bachelors of arts to reside, until they take their master's degree; but should there be none such, others might be elected after two years, from their first residence in college; such exhibitioner not to be possessed of an estate of 40l. per annum, and his friends to certify their intention of keeping in college (unless better provided) until he should become master of arts, and to declare his inability thus to continue without some such assistance, and that he purposed to make divinity his study; a preference to be given to the sons of orthodox ministers of the church of England, and of the diocese of Canterbury, and such as had been brought up in the King's-school there.

London have increased in value within that time; but how they are impowered to load one branch of Mr. Colfe's charity with the whole failure, does not appear, or that the schools of Christ's hospital or Canterbury, have not as just a right to share his liberality in the last place, as Lewisham in the first; especially as he assigned this reason, because his father was educated at Christ's hospital, and himself born at Canterbury. He certainly foresaw what has happened, that Lewisham school might not produce enough to fill all his exhibitions, and added two schools, which he judged might at all times supply its deficiency.

(i) The estate was then sunk down to 50l. per ann.

CATHEDRAL.

These exhibitions are never less than 14l. and sometimes 20l. per annum, and may be held with scholarships or exhibitions of other foundations, of which more than 40 belong to that college.

. . . . Brown, in 1736, founded two Greek scholarships in Emanuel college, which have generally amounted clear to 8l. per annum, to be paid in proportion to residence, and the remainder to be applied to the general fund of the college. These are to be filled by the master and fellows, by scholars from the King's-school in Canterbury; in default from thence, then from any other school in Kent; and in default from thence, then from any other school.

George Stanhope, S. T. P. dean of Canterbury, by a testamentary schedule, proved in 1728, devised 250l. in new South-sea annuities, to found one exhibition of 10l. per annum, for one King's-scholar of the school in Christ-church in Canterbury, to be nominated by the dean, and chosen by him, or the vice-dean and chapter, for seven years, such scholar continuing in some college in Cambridge, but to cease at the Michaelmas after his commencing master of arts.

This principal sum of 250l. was transferred by the dean's executors to, and accepted by the dean and chapter of Canterbury; the reduction of interest having made an alteration in the annual value, and the exhibition having been vacant for some years, with this amount, and a contribution from the dean and chapter, the sum of 50l. more stock was purchased; so that the exhibition is now worth 9l. per annum.

In 1712, a society was begun by some gentlemen, educated at this school. They agreed, with permission of the dean and chapter, to attend divine service at the cathedral, and hear a sermon preached by some clergyman, who had been bred up at the school, on a subject suitable to the occasion, on their anniversary in the ensuing year; which afterwards gained the name of the school-feast.

This led to a contribution, or annual subscription from those gentlemen present at it, who caused their names to be entered in a book, as members of the society, whose number was increased by others, who chose from time to time to belong to it; most of whom, as encouragers of it, though occasionally absent, usually sent their contributions to it. Three stewards are appointed from among the members, yearly; those for the ensuing year being nominated by the old ones, to manage the business of the society. The contribution is, with the approbation of the members present, applied to the maintenance of such scholars as go from hence to either university, and stand in need of some assistance there; of which the usual number yearly is, three, four, and sometimes five scholars.

This annual collection amounts to about 50l. A fund has also been made from the occasional surplus, which is vested in the funds and amounts at present to 725l. stock; of the produce of which, one or more exhibitions have most usually been made to such scholars as have been educated at the school.

How the several buildings of the priory, after the dissolution of it, were divided and distributed among the members of the new foundation, has been already described from the manuscript treatise, containing the orders of the chapter, made in 1546, for the allotment of them; the converting of the different buildings of the monastery into dwellings for this new society, and the new modelling of the whole precincts in a great measure into its present form, may be known from it. I shall therefore only further mention, that besides the improvements which have been from time to time made to the houses and buildings in it, there have been many purposely made, to adapt them for the residence of families; for it should be observed, that long after the new foundation, and even to the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, it was the custom for the members of the cathedral to inhabit with their families, wives and young children, in their several houses within the precincts of it, which produced much irregularity and scandal, and gave great offence, inasmuch, that Q. Elizabeth, in her 3d year, issued an injunction to archbishop Parker, to restrain and prohibit the same, under pain of their forfeiting all their ecclesiastical promotions; after this, the women and children were not permitted to reside within the precincts, but lodged, with their husbands and families, in different parts of the town, and these precincts were for some time afterwards inhabited by the members of the church only, as the colleges in the universities now are, and their apartments were used in the nature of college chambers, to which they resorted in the day time, to study and to attend their duties of the church, being constantly habited whilst there, according to their respective degrees, and then they returned again into the town to lodge with their families (k); but this regulation has been long since dropped, and the injunction wholly disregarded, so that the members have for a long time past dwelt within the precincts, with their families and children indiscriminately, in like manner as before the issuing of it.

(k) See Weever, p. 184.

CATHEDRAL.

At present, the several houses within these precincts are, for the most part, large and handsome; many of them have been rebuilt, and others have had great improvements and additions made to them within memory, sufficiently convenient to accommodate the owners, who, in general, are men of large preferments, as well as good private fortunes, and when they are not resident here, let their houses to genteel families, who form a very respectable neighbourhood within these precincts, which are kept remarkably clean and neat, and being gravelled and well planted with rows of trees, make a most pleasant and desirable residence.

The precincts of the church are abundantly provided with excellent water, which is conducted into a large reservoir in the Green-court, and thence again by pipes to every habitation belonging to the members of the church within them. This water arises from two springs, near each other, at about half a mile distance from the precincts, at the upper end of the fields, called the North Holmes, where they empty themselves into the cisterns, under the cover of two water-houses.

This water, so highly necessary and beneficial to these precincts, appears to have been conducted hither for the use of the priory, from the early time of it; and there seems to have been every care and attention used by the convent, to continue their right to it, and the preservation of it, in passing through the several grounds of the different owners, till it reached the precincts of the monastery.

In the deed dated Nov. 24, anno 37 Henry VIII, the King discharged the dean and chapter from the expending of 200*l. per annum*, in the support of certain students in the two universities; and for the establishing of certain charges of manors and premises in lieu of it, he granted them, in consideration that their water, which used to be conveyed from his park to the convent, was of late spoiled by the deers coming and foiling in it, that they should have the pipe that conducted and conveyed the water from the above park, to the scite in the late St. Augustine's monastery, for ever, and the free liberty of conveying the water from the King's park there to the cathedral, at all times in future, without interruption and molestation, in as full and ample a manner as it had been heretofore conveyed to that monastery (1).

That the priory was supplied with water from the North Holmes, in very early times, is plainly evident from the remains of the old aqueducts, which have been discovered, quite dry, when found by accident several years ago, in digging in the yard at the back part of the house at the north-east corner of Ruttington-lane, in Broad-street, being formed of a row of earthen pipes, which lay in a proper direction. The form of them was tapering, in length about twenty inches; the diameter of the bore at the bigger end five inches and an half, the lesser end fitted to enter such a bore, with a shoulder or collar rising about three-quarters of an inch, and about an inch from the end, to make the better joint and to prevent its leaking, which was still further provided against, by burying the whole in a thick bed of terras.

Whatever the age of this aqueduct might be, some remains of another, in all probability of still greater antiquity, were found in 1737, in digging Dr. Grey's grave, in the body of the cathedral; which being sunk deeper than usual, the workmen came to a pavement of the broad Roman bricks, and under it several earthen pipes, of a different construction from those just now described, each being made in two pieces, as if split the long way, so that two were laid together to form a pipe; the length of them was about seventeen inches and a half each, the bore at the bigger end (for these were made tapering to enter one another like those found in Broad-street) full five inches, and the thickness about three-quarters of an inch.

Edwyn, in his drawing already mentioned above, probably made between the years 1130 and 1174, though he carefully notices the method of providing water from rain, for the different parts of the monastery, yet he takes no notice whatever in it, of any supply from the springs in the North Holmes; but besides the above drawing, which is published, there is another in the same manuscript, which seems to have been the first rude sketch of that, which he afterwards finished; it appears from this, that his intention was to shew the different courses of the water collected from the roof of the church, and of that from the springs in the North Holmes, of which they had not long been in possession. These different water courses are distinguished on this first draft, by the colours yellow and red, that from the North Holmes being yellow. At the north-east corner of the print, there is a circle for the water-house; it is brought thence under a tower of St. Gregory's priory, through a field, a vineyard, an orchard and under the city wall into this priory. As the drawing from which the print is made, is coloured, it is to be wished, that the different water courses had been expressed by a difference in shading them, that these two aqueducts might have been distinguished one from another, and from the great sewer, which runs across what is now called the green-court (m).

(1) Augmentation office, deeds of purchase and exchange, Kent, Box E. 31.

(m) See Gosling's Walk, large edit. p. 118, 375, 400

CATHEDRAL.

THE DEAN and CHAPTER.

THE PRECINCTS of the late priory of Christchurch, and the church itself, having remained in the King's hands for about two years, he at last thought proper, by his letters patent, dated April 8, in the 33d year of his reign, anno 1542, to establish a new foundation here (n), consisting of a dean and twelve canons or prebendaries, with other inferior members, and incorporated them by the name of the dean and chapter of the cathedral and metropolitane church of Christ, in Canterbury (o); to them he committed the solemn celebration of divine service in this church, and at the same time ordained and declared this church to be the mother church of the province, and the see of the archbishops of Canterbury for ever, confirming to them all jurisdictions belonging to their church, and re-granting them this church, the site of the late monastery, and all buildings, gardens and places whatsoever, within the precinct, circuit, and compass of the walls of the same, excepting the palace of the archbishop, and the cellarer's hall and lodgings (afterwards granted to the archbishop). At the same time he ordained for them a body of statutes or canons, which they were to be sworn to the due observance of; these were compiled and particularly inspected, for the use of this church, by archbishop Cranmer, and contain rules and precepts, excellently well drawn up and adapted for the well regulating of such a collegiate society as this, and for the due attendance on and decent performing of the sacred offices of religion in a cathedral church.

The members of the cathedral, according to the foundation, consist of a dean, twelve prebendaries, six preachers, (nominated by the archbishop), six minor-canons, six substitutes, twelve lay-clerks or singing men, one of which is organist, a master of the choiristers, which are in number ten, a chapter clerk, two masters of the grammar school, fifty scholars, twelve alms-men (nominated by the crown), two virgers, two vestry keepers, with other inferior officers, as bell ringers, &c.

In the same year (though the next of his reign) the King, by a dotation charter, dated on May 26, endowed this new founded dean and chapter with several manors, lands, rectories, and advowsons, partly belonging to the late priory here, and partly to other suppressed religious houses, which, though he afterwards by some disadvantageous exchanges forced on them, in some measure lessened (p), yet by the increased value of lands, they now produce an ample and splendid revenue for the support of this foundation, and the members of it (q).

When the King erected and founded this and several other cathedral churches about this time, he appointed, that the deans and chapters of them should distribute and give in alms yearly, among poor householders and other poor people, the sum of one hundred pounds sterling; and yearly in and upon making and repairing of highways, the sum of 40l. sterling. To the success therefore and better proceedings in this intent, the King granted a commission in his 37th year, anno 1545, to certain bishops, to call these deans and chapters before them, and all other persons, to enquire into the bestowing and ordering of the same; and if they should think the same could be better bestowed elsewhere, and in other places than the same then was, that they should have full power and authority to order and appoint the same otherwise, and in other places, as they should think fit and judge more expedient, &c. &c (r); and a like commission was directed by K. Edward VI, in his 1st year, to sir Edward North, knight, and others (s).

The statutes (t) or canons, which the dean and chapter had received when they were incorporated, admitting, through the different alterations made in the forms of religious worship, of some interpretations and additional amendments, such were added by archbishop Parker, being called his injunctions, and were published in the chapter-

(n) This cathedral is one of the churches upon the new foundation. The distinction of the old and new foundation came in after the dissolution of monasteries, in 1540. For K. Henry VIII. having ejected the monks from the cathedrals, placed in them secular canons in their room; those which he thus regulated, are called deans and chapters of the new foundation, viz. Canterbury, Winchester, Worcester, Ely, Carlisle, Durham, Rochester and Norwich; besides these, he erected five cathedrals, de novo, and endowed them with estates out of the dissolved monasteries, viz. Chester, Peterborough, Oxford, Gloucester and Bristol; which were by him made episcopal sees.

(o) There are copies of the letters patent of this foundation, among the Harleian Mss. No. 1197-18, 7044-14, of the incorporation, ibid. 17.

(p) Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 77.

(q) The deanry is not in particular charged with the payment of first fruits or tenths. It is now of the yearly value of about 1000l. The prebends of between 3 and 400l. each. The income of the dean arises from his share as a double prebend, and his severalties being the rents of particular estates, to the whole of which he is entitled.

(r) The King, particularly in his 37th year, took the almonry to himself, for a mint-office, and likewise Canterbury college in Oxford; six valuable manors in the county of Essex, one in Bucks, and another in Kent; for all which he most graciously gave them in exchange, the single manor, rectory and advowson of Godmerham, in this county; valued at 80l. 11s. 0½d. and charged with a rent to the crown, of 10l. 1s. 8d. Such were the exchanges this King graciously made with this church. There is a copy of this deed in Harleian Mss. No. 1197-19.

(s) Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 134.

(t) There is a copy of the statutes given by Henry VIII. to this church, among Harleian Mss. No. 1197-15.

bouse

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

WOTTON.

house on October 7, 1573; in which state the statutes of this church remained till the time of archbishop Laud, who having the King's licence for the purpose under his great seal, reviewed them; and having, with great care and pains, made such alterations as appeared to him necessary for making them more absolute and complete, he presented them to the King, who confirmed them by his letters patent, dated January 3d, in the twelfth year of his reign (u). These statutes, which still continue in force, the several members of this church, at their entrance into it, are sworn to obey, and by them they are at this time in a great measure governed.

A LIST OF THE DEANS OF CANTERBURY (v).

I. NICHOLAS WOTTON, L. L. D. was, by the King's charter of foundation, constituted the first dean of Canterbury. He was a person of so distinguished a character, that he ought not to be passed over with the bare naming of him. But the truth is, his eminency of character shone far brighter in the several high employments and offices of state which he was entrusted with, and which he executed with singular prudence, than in his station in the church. He was descended of a good family, which had been for some time seated in this county, of which some account has already been given in the second volume of the History of Kent; being the fourth son of sir Robert Wotton, of Boughton Malberb, knt. by Anne Belknap his wife. He was educated at Oxford, where he studied the canon and civil law; his skill in which recommended him to Tunstall, bishop of London, to whom he became official, in 1528, being at that time L. L. D. (w)

His first preferment in the church was the rectory of Iwechurch, to which he was collated in 1530 (x); after which it appears that he acted as a civilian; for in 1536, he appeared as proctor in court for Q. Anne Boleyn, when sentence was pronounced upon her. In 1538, archbishop Cranmer appointed him commissary of the faculties, and he became chaplain to the King, who the next year preferred him to the archdeaconry of (u) See Rym. Fœd. vol. xx, p. 99.

(v) The following account of the deans of Canterbury is chiefly taken from the authentic and well written lives of them, lately published by the Rev. and learned Mr. Todd, a member of this church.

(w) Fuller's Worthies. Strype's Cranmer, p. 72.

(x) He resigned this rectory, in 1555, to John Armerar, but a yearly pension of 14l. 3s. 4d. being a third part of the reputed value of the benefice, was reserved out of it to him during his natural life. Battely, pt. 2, p. 122. Fuller's church history, B. 5, p. 207.

(y) This was on the promotion of archdeacon Bell to the see of Worcester, and this possibly, says Brown Willis, might be one of the first instances of the crown taking that liberty, on making bishops, to dispose of their former preferments. See survey of Worcester cathedral, p. 667.

Gloucester (y). His next promotion was to the deanry of Canterbury, being nominated to it, by the foundation charter, in 1542, in addition to which he obtained, in 1544, the deanry of York (z); and in the year following, was presented to the prebend of Osbaldwick, in that church (a). In 1553, he resigned the archdeaconry of Gloucester; and in 1557, was presented to the treasurer'ship of the church of Exeter, which, however, he relinquished the succeeding year (b). And he is said to have declined more exalted situations, even the sees of York and Canterbury (c).

But the dean must be considered more in the character of a statesman, than as an ecclesiastic, from his continued employment on foreign embassies and negotiations, during the times of which he had a royal dispensation for non-residence, and to receive the profits of all his preferments. In which instrument (d) he is styled the King's chaplain and counsellor. He was twice ambassador to the Emperor Charles V; once to Philip, King of Spain; once to Francis I, King of France; thrice to Henry II, his son; once to Mary, Queen of Hungary, and governess of the Netherlands; and twice to William, duke of Cleves.

At the time of K. Henry's death, he was ambassador in France, who made him one of the executors and supervisors of his will, and besides, as a mark of his esteem, gave him a legacy of 300l. (e) In the reign of K. Edward VI. he was continued of the council, and for a short time held the office of principal secretary of state, to which he was appointed in 1549 (f); and afterwards was again employed abroad, in negotiations of state; and at that King's death likewise, was one of his ambassadors in France, in which office and as one of her council, he was continued by Q. Mary, after her accession to the crown (g); and was afterwards intrusted by her during the whole of her reign (h).

Sensible of the dean's political abilities, Q. Elizabeth, on her succession to the throne, scrupled not to retain him in her service; he was accordingly appointed a privy counsellor, and continued a commissioner in the negotiation, begun in the late Queen's reign, for the treaty of a peace

(z) Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 10.

(a) B. Willis's survey of York cathedral, p. 69, 157.

(b) B. Willis's survey of Gloucester cathedral, p. 732. Le Neve's Fasti, p. 91.

(c) Biog. Brit. 4339, note A. Strype's Life of Parker, p. 35. Lloyd's Worthies.

(d) Battely, pt. 2. This instrument was dated in September, 1546.

(e) Rymer's Fœd. vol. xv.

(f) Hayward's Life of K. Edward VI. On the duke of Somerset's commitment, Dr. Wotton was, in October, 1549, joined with sir William Petre, as his Majesty's secretary. Harleian Mss. No. 284.

(g) Strype's Cranmer, p. 304.

(h) Speed. Hume's History of England.

between

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

WOTTON.

between England, Spain, and France (i), which he appears to have accomplished; and though it lasted but a short time, yet when it was again renewed, he was one of those who was appointed to adjust the terms of it. After this we find him employed in behalf of the English merchants, who had been ill treated, particularly in the Netherlands (k); and this probably was the last public employment of the dean, which, indeed, he did not long survive. He died at London, on January 26, 1567, aged near 70; having continued dean of this church almost 26 years.

Hollingsbed and Camden have both left testimonies of his good conduct and prudence as a statesman, and of his worth and learning; but his temporizing and compliance with the different changes of religion at those times, cannot but diminish from that esteem his character would otherwise have entitled him to; for he found means to continue in favour, and a privy counsellor, for the space of twenty-six years, during four precarious and troublesome reigns; in which time, religion underwent as remarkable changes, as have been known in the christian church; yet upon none of them was he dismissed the council board, or from his state employments, or forced to quit his church preferments. To serve his prince, seems to have been the sole maxim by which he acted; and to enhance that religion which his prince favoured, let him change it ever so often, seems to have been his creed likewise.

His person was small and slender, but very upright; his constitution was healthy, his countenance open; he was so sparing of food that he eat but once a day; his mind was much addicted to books and learning, and he was thoroughly master of the Latin, Italian, French and Dutch languages. The dean died unmarried, and his body being brought to Canterbury, was buried in the Trinity chapel, in the eastern part of this cathedral, where there is an elegant tomb, erected to his memory by his nephew and heir, Thomas Wotton, esq; having his effigies in white marble kneeling on his tomb, with his hands joined and uplifted before a desk, on which is an open book. The whole is much admired for its excellent sculpture, the head especially, which is said to have been executed by an eminent artist in Italy, during the dean's residence there. Over it is the following inscription:—

NICOLAUS WOTTONUS, ROBERTI WOTTONI Equitis Aurati ex ANNA BELKNAPPA Filius, utriusque juris Doctor, Ecclesiæ hujus primus, itemq; Metropolitanæ Ecclesiæ D. PETRI EBORACENSIS Decanus; HENRICO VIII. EDOVARDO VI. MARIÆ & ELIZABETHÆ, ANGLIÆ Regibus, a secretis Consiliis. Ad CAROLUM V. Cæsarem bis, et ad PHILIPPUM HISPANIARUM Regem semel, ad FRANCISCUM Primum FRANCORUM Regem semel, ad HENRICUM II. ejus Filium ter, ad MARIAM HUNGARIÆ Reginam BELGARUM Præsidem semel, ad GULIELMUM CLIVENSIVM Ducem bis, legatione functus. Renovatæ pacis inter ANGLOS, FRANCOS, et SCOTOS, inter GUINAS et ARDERAM, Anno 1546; similiter et ad Castrum CAMERACENSE, Anno 1559; denique EDINBURGI SCOTIÆ, Anno 1560, Oratorum unus. Hic tandem fere septuagenarius requiescit.

Hæc ille ante mortem et ante morbum, quasi fatalem diem præsentens, et cigneam cantionem propheticæ canens, sua manu in Musæo scripta reliquit.

Qui apud tales Principes, Divina Providentia gubernante, laudabiliter, et in tot, et in tantis causis (quarum magnitudo gravissima utilitas publica fuit) feliciter bonam vitæ suæ partem consumpsit; eum Virum sapientem et experientissimum ipsa invidia judicare debet. Quam semper ab omni contentione Honorum fuerit alienus, illud declarat, quod ad hanc Ecclesiasticam Dignitatem non ambitione ulla sua inflammatus, nec amicorum opera usus aspiravit, sed eam utramque Henricus VIII. (hominis merito et virtute provocatus) ultro detulit. Cumque idem Rex illustrissimus morbum lethalem ingravescere persentisceret, et Edovardi Principis sane excellentissimi, adhuc tamen pueri, et Republicæ administrandæ imparis, imbecillam ætatem senili prudentia secretioris sui consilii regendam esse existimaret, illis ex sedecim, quos supremæ voluntatis suæ Testes et Vindices Testamento instituit, hunc Nicolaum (absentem tunc in Francia Legatum) unum esse voluit. Edovardo Regi jam medio Regni curriculo prope confecto, unus é primariis Secretariis fuit; quem locum diutius tenere potuisset, nisi et suis et assiduis amicorum precibus abdicandi veniam impetrasset.

Corpus illi erat gracile quidem et parvum, sed rectum; habitudo sana, vultus liberalis, victus exquisitus, quem semel tantum in die carere consueverat. Valetudo adeo firma, ut raro morbum aliquem senserit. Animus vero totus, libris ac literis dicatus, Artium, Medicinæ, Jurisprudentiæ, et Theologiæ studiis intentus; Linguarum Romanæ, Italicæ, Gallicæ, et Germanicæ inferioris cognitione pulchrè exornatus. Ita vir iste genere clarus, legationibus clarior, domi ac foris clarissimus, honore florens, labore fractus, ætate confectus, postquam Decanus huic Ecclesiæ annos 25 dies 293 præfuisset, Londini, Januarii 26, Anno nostræ Salutis 1566, piè et suaviter in Domino obdormivit, Thoma Wottono, Nepote, Hærede relicto; qui ei hoc Monumentum, non Honoris ergo, quo abunda-

(i) Forbes's Pref. to his State Papers.

(k) Baker's Chronicle.

vit vivus et florescet mortuus; sed Amoris causa, quem Memoria colet, ut debet, sempiterna consecravit.

2. THOMAS GODWIN, S. T. P. prebendary of Lincoln, and dean of Christ church, in Oxford, was, in 1567, on the death of dean Wotton, promoted to this deanry. He was born at Oakingham, in Berks, and received his first rudiments of learning at the grammar school in that town, from whence going to Oxford, he entered at Magdalen college, of which, in 1545, he became fellow, and two years afterwards took the degree of M. A. (l)

His situation in college being rendered uneasy by his known attachment to the reformation, he accepted the free-school of Brackley in Northamptonshire, in the gift of his college, and resigned his fellowship in 1549, and soon after married Isabella, the daughter of Nicholas Purefoy, of Sbalston, in the county of Bucks, esq; (m)

His intention was, no doubt, to take orders, but the accession of Q. Mary frustrated his intention, for he was suspended from his office, and so severely threatened, that he was obliged to remove his habitation, to seek refuge in obscurity; during which time he practised physic for the maintenance of himself and family, and in 1555, proceeded to the degree of bachelor in that faculty. On the Queen's death, however, he resumed his former design of entering into the church, and accordingly he was ordained at the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, to whose notice he was introduced as an excellent preacher, and for the space of eighteen years he was always appointed to preach before her in Lent. In June 1565, he was promoted to the deanry of Christ church, and in the December following, to the prebend of Milton Ecclesia, in the church of Lincoln (n), and on the 17th of that month, he took the degrees of bachelor, and doctor of divinity; and on the death of dean Wotton, he was instituted, on March 10, 1567, to this deanry of Canterbury. In 1569, the buildings of the deanry had been much damaged by an accidental fire, this the dean repaired, as plainly appeared by his name, and the date 1570, recorded on stone, at the upper part of the front of the house, shewing both when and by whom it was done (o). He relinquished this deanry in 1584, on being promoted to the see of Bath and Wells,

(l) See Godwin de Præsul. Biog. Brit. Ant. Godwin, and Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 709.

(m) There is a good portrait of him, painted on board, remaining in the deanry.

(n) He quitted this prebend in 1574, on being promoted to that of Leighton Buzzard, the richest in that church.

(o) On the new fronting of the deanry some years ago, these stones were removed.

(p) The bishop died at his native town of Oakingham, whither he had retired for the benefit of the air, on November 19, 1590, æt. 73, and was buried in the chancel of that church, where there is a mural monument to his being consecrated on September 13, that year, being then of about the age of 70, having presided over this church eighteen years (p).

3. RICHARD ROGERS, S. T. P. and suffragan bishop of Dover, was next appointed dean of this church, being installed on September 16, 1584.

He was a native of Sutton Valence, in this county, a descendant of an antient family there; he was educated at Christ college in Cambridge, where he took the degree of B. D. in 1562, and became afterwards doctor in the same faculty. About the latter end of the year 1559, being then only in deacon's orders, he was preferred to the archdeaconry of St. Asaph, which he resigned in 1566 (q), at which time it is probable, that he was presented by the bishop of that diocese to the sinecure rectory of Llanarmon, in the county of Denbigh, of which he was possessed when he was installed dean of Canterbury, as he was of the rectory of Great Chart in this county, to which he had been collated in 1567, by archbishop Parker (r), as he had been the next year, 1568, to a more conspicuous station, being consecrated by the same prelate, suffragan bishop of Dover (s).

Archbishop Parker, who died in 1575, had such friendship and respect to him, that as the last testimony of it, he appointed him one of the overseers of his will, and left to him by it, the best advowson he should chuse in his gift, excepting the advowson of a prebend in the church of Canterbury. In 1594, he was collated by archbishop Whitgift to the rectory of Midley, in this county, and to the mastership of East-bridge hospital in Canterbury (t); of these last preferments his possession was but short, for he died on May 19, 1597, æt. 64 (u), having been dean of this church for the space of thirteen years. He was buried in the chapel of the Virgin Mary, now called the dean's chapel, in this cathedral, where, on a table monument of black marble, is the following unfinished inscription in capitals, memory, erected by his son Francis Godwin, sub-dean of Exeter, afterwards bishop of Hereford.

AN. DOM. 1597, MAII 19, RICHARDUS ROGERS SUTTON VALLENSIS CANTIANUS VIR ANTIQUA FAMILIA ET ANTIQVORVM VIRTUTE, ARCHIEPISCOPI CANTVARIENSIS ANOS, 28, SUFFRAGANEVS, EJVSDEMQUE ECCLESIE DECANVS ANOS, 13. ÆTATIS SVÆ ANO, 64. HIC SEPULTVS JUSTISSIMÆ TIBI VITÆ MEMORIAM RELIQUIT: EXEMPLVM FUIT. Cætera desunt.

(q) Willis's survey of St. Asaph, p. 287.

(r) Strype's Annals, vol. ii, appendix, p. 63. Register of Inductions. (s) See Dover, hist. Kent, vol. iv.

(t) Battely, pt. 2, p. 172.

(u) He left his wife Mrs. Anne Rogers surviving, who was buried in this cathedral, in 1613; by her he left a son, Francis Rogers, D.D. rector of Denton, and vicar of Akham in Kent, and rector of St. Margaret's in Canterbury, where he lies buried. He died in 1633. See Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 686.

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

NEVIL.

4. THOMAS NEVIL, S. T. P. dean of Peterborough, succeeded next to this deanry in 1597.

He was descended from the antient and honourable family of Nevil, being the son of Richard Nevil, of the county of Nottingham, esq; by Anne his wife, daughter of sir Walter Mantel, of Heyford in the county of Northampton, knt. He was born at Canterbury, to which city his father, who had spent his younger days at court, had in his decline of life retired.

He was educated in the university of Cambridge, at Pembroke-hall, of which he was elected fellow in 1570 (v), and in 1582, was presented to the mastership of Magdalen college (w), at which time he was rector of Dodington, in the Isle of Ely, to which he had been presented the year before. In 1587, in the month of November, the Queen, to whom he was chaplain, conferred on him a prebend in the church of Ely; and the same year he was presented to the rectory of Chariton in Hampshire, and in 1590 was promoted to the deanry of Peterborough (x), to which the Queen added, in February 1593, the mastership of Trinity college in Cambridge (y), upon which he quitted that of Magdalen college. In March 1594, the dean was presented to the rectory of Feverham, near Cambridge, on which he resigned that of Dodington (z).

On the death of dean Rogers, the Queen promoted Dr. Nevil to the deanry of Canterbury, in his room, in which he was installed on June 28, 1597; on the death of the Queen he was sent by archbishop Whitgift into Scotland, with an address to K. James, in the name of all the clergy, with assurances of their loyalty and affection, and was most graciously received; the King declaring, that he would maintain the government of the church, as Elizabeth had left it (a).

Soon after the accession of K. James, archbishop Whitgift died, who shewed his confidence in the dean, by appointing him one of the overseers of his will. In March 1615, the King visiting the university of Cambridge, paid a royal visit to the dean in his college there, who was too infirm to come to him, to thank him for the liberal entertainment, and the reception which he, with the prince and nobles in his train, had met with in the university; the King telling him at the time, that he was proud of such a subject. The dean did not long survive this royal visit, for having been for some time much enfeebled by the palsy, he died at Cambridge, an aged man, says Fuller, on May 2, 1615; having filled this deanry about eighteen years.

Few men ever possessed a more liberal heart than dean Nevil. By his munificence to Trinity college, he secured to himself the gratitude and admiration of posterity. He expended more than 3000l. in rebuilding that fine quadrangle, which, to this day, retains the name of Nevil's court. He was also a contributor to the library of that college, and was a benefactor to East-bridge hospital, in his native city. He died unmarried, and was buried on May 7, in the small chapel on the south side of the nave of this cathedral, which he had fitted up for a burial place for himself and his relations; and in which he had in his life time erected a monument on the east side, for himself and his brother Alexander; but the dates of their deaths and their ages, which were left on them blanks, were never afterwards inserted; this monument has been lately destroyed (b). On that part for the dean, was his figure kneeling, in his habit, at a reading desk and this inscription:

THOMÆ NEVILLO, SACRÆ THEOLOGIÆ
DOCTORI PRÆSTANTISSIMO.

Ortu illustri, pietate insigni, ingenio optimo, eruditione haud vulgari, moribus suavissimis, et spectatissimo Theologo dignissimis: In flore primæ indolis (Cantabrigiæ in Aula Pembrochiana ad annos fere quindecim) omnibus iis ornamentis, quibus adolescentior ætas illustrari solet, egregiè perpolitò: Magdalenis Collegii in eadem Academia (quod et ornavit, et studio atque industria sua, quoad potuit, locupletavit) Præfectorio gratiosissimo: Reginæ Elizabethæ (cujus a sacris fuit) excellentissimi judicii Principi ob singulares et verè laudabiles animi dotes acceptissimo: Petroburgensis Ecclesiæ (cui ad annos octo haud mediocri cum laude præfuit) Decano eminentissimo: Sacræ et Individuæ Trinitatis Collegii, jam non ejus Academix tantum, sed totius Europæ, celeberrimi (labantis non ita pridem et prope cadentis, necnon ob veterem structuram male coherentis, ipsius consilio, auspiciis atque ære etiam suo liberalissime collato, disjectis male positis ædificiis atque in elegantiore formam redactis; viis arcisque veteribus directis et ampliatis, novis pulcherrime constitutis, auctis, ornatis ad hanc, qua nunc conspicitur, eximiam pulchritudinem evecti) Moderahimself and his relations; accordingly there were buried in it, the dean himself, his father and mother, his uncle Thomas, and his elder brother Alexander, whose monuments have been already described above, among the others in this church. This chapel having been pulled down a few years since and the monuments destroyed, the site of it, (which was without the wall of the church), under which the Nevils lie buried, is laid into the church-yard, and in common with it, is open to the air.

tori,

(v) Fuller's Worthies, Kent. (w) La Neve's Fasti.

(x) Willis's survey of Peterborough cathedral.

(y) Burleigh's notes, at the end of Murdin's State Papers, p. 800. (z) Bentham's Ely.

(a) Strype's Life of Whitgift.

(b) This chapel, formerly called Brenchley's chantry, which has been mentioned already above, having continued useless from the time of the reformation, was repaired by the dean, and cleansed and beautified for a place of burial for tori, Amplificatori, Instauratori felicissimo: Hujus denique Ecclesiæ, quam summa æquitate, rara modestia, fide singulari ad annos gubernavit, Decano moderatissimo, integerrimo, amplissimo: Hoc Monumentum memoriæ ergo Virtus et Honos, invita morte, suis quasi manibus construxere. Obiit Anno Dom. Ætatis suæ Mensis Die atque in hac capella, quam (dum vixit) sibi ac suis adornavit, non sine ingenti suorum mærore huic tumulo illatus advenientis Domini nostri Jesu Christi gratiam et gloriam sempiternam expectat. Etiam Veni, Domine Jesu, Veni Cito.

5. CHARLES FOTHERBY, S. T. P. prebendary and archdeacon of Canterbury, was advanced to the dignity of dean of this church, in the room of dean Nevil, in 1615.

He was a native of Great Grimby, in the co. of Lincoln, being the son of Martin Fotherby, of that place, esq; whose family had long resided in it, and brother of Martin Fotherby, bishop of Salisbury (c). He was educated at Trinity college in Cambridge, of which society he was a fellow; but though he was afterwards advanced to so conspicuous a dignity, he proceeded as an academic, no further than to the degree of B. D. In 1587, he was collated to the vicarage of Cbislet (d), which he resigned in 1692, being presented by the Queen to the rectory of Aldington (e); about which time he was commissioned with Dr. Rogers and others, to visit the churches and hospitals of Saltwood and Hythe.

Soon after this, he received additional marks of the Queen's favour, being promoted, on the removal of Dr. Redman, to the see of Norwich, to the archdeaconry of Canterbury in 1594 (f), and the year after to the vicarage of Tenbam, and by archbishop Whitgift to the fourth prebend in this church of Canterbury (g); nor did the kindness of the primate towards him end here, for on the death of the learned and pious Hooker in 1600, he was collated by him to the rectory of Bishopborne (h), on which he resigned the vicarage of Tenbam; and such was the archbishop's esteem and confidence in him, that he was appointed one of the overseers of his will; the other, being

(c) See vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 673.

(d) Reg. Whitgift, pt. iii. (e) Ibid.

(f) Ibid. pt. ii. (g) Chapter Register.

(h) Reg. Whitgift.

(i) He married Cecilia Walker, of Cambridge, by whom he had a numerous issue, as his monument records; of which only one son and four daughters survived him: of these, Mabella, the youngest, then single, afterwards married John lord Finch, baron of Fordwich, lord keeper of the great seal, but died without issue. He left his wife surviving, who died in 1674, aged upwards of 60, and was buried in the same tomb in this church, close to which there is an inscription to her memory. In the beginning of K. James I.'s reign, he had purchased, among other estates in this county, the manor and seat of Donham court, near dean Nevil, on whose death in 1615, he was nominated dean of Canterbury, to which he was instituted on May 12, that year; on this advancement he relinquished his prebend, but retained his other preferments, all which he enjoyed but a short time, for he died on March 29, 1619, æt. 70, having presided over this church only four years (i), and was buried in the Virgin Mary's chapel, now called the dean's chapel, in this cathedral; on the south side of which is a table monument of black marble, placed to his memory, the emblems of mortality round which are finely carved. The inscription on the monument is as follows:

Charissimo Patri suo

CAROLO FOTHERBY de GRIMSBY MAGNA in Comitatu LINCOLNIENSI; olim Collegii Sanctæ et Individuæ Trinitatis apud CANTABIRGIENSES Socio; Sacræ ibidem Theologiæ Baccalureo, CANTUARIENSIS Diocæsiæ annos circiter 24 Archidiacono; Metropolitanæ in ea Ecclesiæ 20 Præbendario; ejusdem Decano 4^{tuor}; sedulo et sincero Verbo Præconi, cordatoque divinæ Veritatis Propugnatori; viro pietate, gravitate, hospitalitate perquam insigni, 29 Martii Anno humanæ salutis 1619, Ætatis suæ 70. Vitæ mortalis fortem cum immortalis gloria commutanti.

JOHANNES FOTHERBEIUS Filius et Hæres devotissime posuit.

Habuit uxorem unam et unicam Annos 31 CECILIAM WALKER CANTABRIGIENSEM. ex qua liberos suscepit decem; eorum quinque tantum moriens reliquit superstites, JOHANNEM Elizabethæ ex Antonio Coco Milite Essexciensi Maritum; PHÆBEN Henrico Henrici Palmeri Militis Cantiani Militi nuptam; et Roberto Johannis Moyle de Buckwell in eodem comitatu Armigero PRISCILLAM: Innuptas reliquit duas ELIZABETHAM et MABELLAM.

6. JOHN BOYS, S. T. P. rector of Great Mongeham, and of Betsbanger, in this county, succeeded to this deanry in 1619 (k).

He was a native of Kent, being the fourth son of Thomas Boys, of Eythorne, esq; (l) Being educated at Cambridge, he became a scholar of Beut

Canterbury; which by one of his descendants, went in marriage to the Derings, who now possess it. The dean's will is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury, proved April 17, 1619. In it he desired to be buried in the chapel, called our Lady's chapel, in Christ church, a place where usually the preacher did retire for his meditations, before he did go to his sermon; in such a convenient place, as should be thought fit by his loving brethren, the prebendaries of the said church.

(k) See Wood's Ath. vol. i, f. p. 153.

(l) By his wife Christian, daughter and coheir of John Searles, of Wye, esq; and he was nephew to fr John Boys, of St. Gregories, in Canterbury, knt. See the account of St. Gregories, below.

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

BOYS—BARGRAVE.

college, and proceeded to the degree of A. M. in 1593, about which time he was elected to a fellowship of Clare hall, which is appropriated to a native of this county. His first preferment seems to have been the rectory of Betshanger, to which he was presented by his uncle, sir John Boys (m), who had been his patron at the university; and the same year he was collated to the mastership of Eastbridge hospital, in Canterbury (n); and in 1599, to the vicarage of Tilmanstone (o), at which time he had acquired the character of a distinguished theologian, and proceeded soon afterwards to the degree of S. T. P.

In 1610, he was appointed by the King, one of the first fellows of the new institution of a college at Chelsea, for the management, by learned divines, of all controversies against papists; a design, which, for want of support, fell to the ground, even before the college was finished (p).

In 1618, Dr. Boys was collated to the rectory of Great Mongeham, on which he relinquished the vicarage of Tilmanstone, and in 1619 was nominated by the King to the deanry of Canterbury, to which he was admitted on May 3, that year; but he did not live to enjoy this dignity little more than six years. He died suddenly in his study, on September 26, 1625, æt. 54; and was buried in the Virgin Mary's, commonly called the dean's chapel, in this cathedral, where there is a handsome monument erected to his memory, by his wife Angela, who survived him (q). He is represented on it in his doctor's habit, as in his study, sitting in his chair, and leaning his head on his hand. Among the books, which form the back ground of the monument, is the following inscription:

Bonorum Lacrymis!

JOHANNES BOISIUS S. T. P. hujus Ecclesiæ Christi CANTUARIENSIS Decanus, nuper diligentia Christianæ, mox mortalitatis humanæ, nunc gratiæ divinæ exemplum: Ecclesiam ore, vitâ, scriptis docuit, ædificavit, illustravit: et Opus quo non extat Clero ANGLICANO gratius aut utilius, Liturgiæ universæ præclaram Elucidationem sui perpetuum Monumentum reliquit.

Hoc minus et indignius, sed tamen debitum felicibus Manibus tanti viri, Mariti amantissimi amantissima mæstissimaque Uxor

ANGELA posuit.

His learned and judicious Commentaries on

(m) Register of Inductions. (n) Ibid. (o) Ibid.
(p) Newcourt's Rep. vol. i. Fuller's church History, B. 10, p. 51.

(q) He married Angela, daughter of Robert Bargrave, of Bridge, in this county, esq; and sister to his successor dean Bargrave; she survived him many years, and lived to be very unhandfomely treated by the parliamentary rebels, in 1642, at the age of 80.

(r) See a list of his works, in Masters's History of Corpus Christi college, p. 241.

the Holy Scriptures, his Posills, or Defence of the Liturgy, Lectures, Sermons, and other theological works, were published, with a dedication to K. James, in his life time, and again in a folio volume, in 1629 (r).

7. ISAAC BARGRAVE, S. T. P. prebendary of this church, and one of the King's chaplains, was next promoted to this deanry, the King's letters patent for his installation bearing date October 11, 1625 (s).

He was 6th son of Robert Bargrave, of Bridge, in this county, esq; and was born in 1586 (t); being entered early at Clare hall in Cambridge, he there took his degrees in arts, and was incorporated A. M. at Oxford, in July 1611 (u). In October 1614, he was preferred to the rectory of Eytborne in this county (v), and became soon afterwards minister of St. Margaret's, Westminster (w), and chaplain to the Prince of Wales, whom he served in the same quality after his accession to the throne; and in 1622, at which time he was S. T. P. he was promoted by the crown to the fifth prebend in this church of Canterbury; and K. Charles I., soon after his accession to the throne, nominated him, on the death of Dr. Boys, to the deanry of it, to which he was admitted on October 14, 1625. In January 1626, he was presented by the chapter to the vicarage of Tenterden (x), which he held by dispensation, with the rectory of Eytborne; but in the following year he resigned the former, being then preferred by the King to the vicarage of Lydd, in Kent, then in the King's disposal, jure prærogativo; and in 1628 he was collated by the archbishop to the rectory of Chartbam, near Canterbury (y).

The account of dean Bargrave, from this time, becomes closely connected with the misfortunes of those unhappy times, when rebellion and fanaticism trampled on religion and decency; when the cathedrals were plundered and their revenues seized. Deans and chapters were abolished in 1641, and the former members of them oppressed and cruelly treated. At this time the dean had become so obnoxious to the ruling powers, that he was fined 1000*l.* by the House of Commons, as a member of the Convocation, in which he was looked upon by them as a forward assertor of the clergy's rights (z). This does not seem to have deterred him from exerting himself in

(s) Rym. Fœd. vol. xviii, p. 648.

(t) See more of this family and of the dean's descendants, in the History of Kent, under Eastry.

(u) Wood's Fasti, vol. i, p. 190.

(v) Book of Inductions, &c.

(w) Lloyd's Memoirs, and Walker's Suff. of the Clergy.

(x) Book of Inductions, &c.

(y) Ibid.

(z) Rushworth, vol. v, p. 235, says, The Dean of Canterbury, anno 16 Charles I. (1640) was fined 1000*l.* for the convocation business,

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL:

BARGRAVE—AGLIONBY.

behalf of the church, for that year he undertook with Dr. Hacket, archdeacon of Bedford, to appear before the House of Commons, in behalf of the establishment of deans and chapters; but this did not prevail, and in the same session an act passed for their abolition (a).

Next year the fanatic spirit of these reformers, as they stiled themselves, more fully displayed itself. In August the rebel Colonel Sandys, with his troop, arrived at Canterbury; after they had defaced the cathedral, they violently intruded themselves, late at night, into the deanry, terrifying the family, (the dean himself being absent) and regardless even of that respect due to the weaker sex, they treated his wife and his aged sister (the widow of dean Boys), with the most unmanly behaviour, and pillaged the house, though they afterwards, by the persuasion of one of their own party, restored the gold which they had unjustly seized. Their treatment of the dean's son was no less brutal, whom they took from his bed and carried prisoner to Dover (b). The sufferings of the dean were still greater, for having been acquainted with the affliction of his family, he was hastening to them, but Colonel Sandys interrupted his design, for hearing where he lodged at Gravesend, he went there, and rushed with his banditti into his chamber, as he was preparing for bed, made him prisoner, and without any reason for this insolent outrage, he was hurried to London, and committed to the Fleet-prison (c). The dean continued in confinement for three weeks, but was neither examined nor called before the house; he was, indeed after that time released, but the sense of his persecution and the prospect of its future increase, so much affected him, that he died in the Jan. following, anno 1642; aged 56.

The dean had been a great traveller, and his friendships, made abroad, were such as testified his discernment and the esteem he was held in; he attended sir Henry Wotton in one of his embassies, as his chaplain, and he appointed him afterwards one of the supervisors of his will, expressing his unremoveable affection to him in it (d).

During his residence at Venice, he enjoyed the intimate acquaintance of the celebrated Father Paul, usually stiled Padre Paolo, who wrote the History of Trent; whose moderation and learning were alike conspicuous.

The dean was a firm defender of our civil and

(a) Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 1, p. 10.

(b) Dugdale's View. Mercurius Rusticus. Walker, ibid. and Lloyd's Memoirs.

(c) Walker's Suff. ibid. It must have added to the dean's distress, to find Sandys the author of this cruelty towards him; for that unprincipled rebel owed his escape from an ignominious death, when indicted for a rape at Maidstone, to the dean's interest, made then in his behalf.

(d) Life of sir H. Wotton.

(e) The dean published only three sermons, which were religious rights; his abilities, which were very considerable, had been greatly improved by attentive travel. He was much respected, for he was hospitable, as well as upright, and his opinions were manly and liberal (e).

He was buried in the Virgin Mary's, now called the dean's chapel, on Jan. 25, 1643; against the north wall of which is a monument erected to his memory, in a taste not common; being his portrait, a half length, painted on copper, in a beautiful oval frame of white marble, and an inscription under it, as follows,

ISAACUS BARGRAVE,

CANTIANUS S. T. P. Hujus Ecclesiæ DECANUS, et ingens decus; amæno ingenio Pietatem et Eruditionem ornavit: In sæculo Novitatis nimium avido fide vixit ac moribus antiquis; Gentibus exteris, domique Nobilibus gratissimus Hospes, Hospitio generosissimo reposuit. Bello civili ex partibus Regiis CAROLI Martyris Stetit ac cecidit.

Post varia per Europam itinera

Hic tandem fixus.

Ob. an salutis reparat. } 1642
 { Ætat. 56.

JOHANNES BARGRAVE, S. T. D. CANTIANUS

Posterum expensis

Ponendum curavit

Anno Domini

MDCLXXIX.

Underneath which, follows the inscription for Elizabeth Dering, his wife, as mentioned above.

8. GEORGE AGLIONBY, S. T. P. succeeded next, as dean of this church; the letters patent for which are dated at Oxford, on Feb. 8, 1642 (f).

He was educated at Westminster school, and elected from thence to Christ-church in Oxford, in 1619, at which time he was sixteen years of age, as he is entered in the university matriculation book, Oxon. Docis. Fil. There is little doubt but he was the son of Dr. John Aglionby, principal of Edmund hall, and the descendant of a very antient and genteel family in the county of Cumberland (g).

Whilst he resided in the university, he was distinguished as a person of superior abilities; Wood tells us, that Lord Falkland often went to Oxford, to enjoy the conversation of the learned and the witty there, among whom was George Aglionby, of Christ church (b).

printed in the years 1624, and 1626. He married Elizabeth, the daughter of John Dering, of Pluckley, in the county, Essex; by whom he had several children; from Thomas, the eldest son of whom, is descended Isaac Bargrave, one of Eastry court, Essex. The dean's wife survived him many years, and dying in 1667, æt. 74, was buried near her husband, in the dean's chapel, where there is an inscription to her memory. (f) Rym. Fœd. vol. xx, p. 545.

(g) Burn's History of Cumberland, p. 327.

(h) Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 587.

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

TURNER.

In June 1623, he took the degree of B. A. (i) about which time he left the university, and became probably an assistant-master at Westminster school, and afterwards tutor to George, the young Duke of Buckingham; in 1634, he proceeded to the degree of S. T. P. (k) and in 1638, was promoted to a prebend in the collegiate church of Westminster (l), and it is probable that he was also prebendary of Woodham, in the church of Chichester.

Whilst attending the court of K. Charles I, at Oxford, in 1642, he was nominated by the King, on the death of Dr. Bargrave, to the deanry of Canterbury; but in this dignity he never was installed, nor did he reap any advantage from it; the parliament having, as is said above, abolished these dignities and seized on the revenues of all capitular bodies, and he survived his nomination to this deanry but a few months; for he died at Oxford, in November 1643, in the 40th year of his age, and was buried in Cbrist church cathedral, near to bishop King's monument in the south aisle; but there is neither monument or inscription to his memory, nor is there any portrait of him in the deanry at Canterbury; the want of which interrupts the regular series of portraits of the deans of this church.

9. THOMAS TURNER, S. T. P. was next admitted dean of this church. He was the son of Thomas Turner, of Heckfield, in the county of Hants, alderman and mayor of Reading, in the county of Berks, and was born in the parish of St. Giles in that borough. In 1610, he was admitted on the foundation at St. John's college in Oxford, two fellowships in that college being appropriated to persons from the town of Reading. He was there placed under the tuition of Dr. Juxon, then fellow of the college, afterwards archbishop of Canterbury (m), and having entered into holy orders, he was in 1623 presented by his college to the vicarage of St. Giles, in the suburbs of Oxford, with which he retained his fellowship, but resigned it in 1628.

Dr. Laud, who had become president of the college soon after his admission to it, appointed him his domestic chaplain, and in April 1629, being then bishop of London, collated him to the prebend of Newington in the church of St. Paul; and in October following, to the chancellorship of that church, in which he was afterwards appointed by K. Charles I, a canon residentiary (n).

He had been recommended by bishop Laud to the King's notice, who appointed him one of his chaplains in ordinary, and presented him to the rectory of St. Olave, Southwark, with which he held the rectory of Fetcham, in the county of Surry.

In 1633, the King having resolved on a progress into Scotland, for his coronation, Mr. Turner was commanded to attend him; previous to which, he was on April 1, 1634, created S. T. P. by the university of Oxford.

In 1641, he was promoted by the King to the deanry of Rochester, and on the death of Dr. Aglionby, in 1643, to this of Canterbury, of which, however, he did not obtain possession till after the restoration; but when he was nominated to this dignity, he resigned the rectory of St. Olave into the King's hands.

When the King was removed to Hampton-court, and was suffered to resume the mock appearance of majesty and freedom, dean Turner was among those divines who there attended him; and when he fled to the Isle of Wight, the dean was one of those servants, to whom the liberty of visiting him was granted (o); the King's death followed not long after, of which the dean was a sincere, but silent mourner.

His adherence to the royal cause, as might be expected, brought him into much distress; he was abused, pillaged and imprisoned. Three of his houses were plundered of his furniture and library (p). Being at his church of Fetcham, he was seized (probably in the time of divine service) by a party of horse, who carried him in an ignominious manner prisoner to an inn in Southwark, and his house and rectory were forcibly taken from him; upon which he retired to an estate he possessed in Hertfordshire, but persecution followed him there likewise for being summoned before the committee of sequestrations, at Hertford, he was charged and convicted of malignancy, for attending the King and praying for him, upon which his estate was decimated, and he was compelled to fly for safety into Wales (q).

The dean survived these unhappy times, and joined in the general joy which King Charles II.'s restoration inspired, and on the 10th of August 1660, entered into the full possession of the deanry of Canterbury; and so far was he afterwards from seeking addition to his preferment, that he soon resigned the rectory of Fetcham. Having enjoyed an uninterrupted state of good health during thirty years, he was at length attacked with that severe disease, the stone, the sharpness of which he endured with exemplary fortitude and resignation, till his death, which happened on October 31, 1672, at the age of 81. (r)

(i) Wood's Ath. Fasti, vol. i, p. 260.

(k) Ibid.

(l) Newcourt's Repert. vol. i, p. 928.

(m) Wood's Fasti, vol. i, p. 259.

(n) Newcourt's Repert. vol. i, p. 189. Wood's Ath.

(o) Parliamentary Journals.

(p) Walker's Suff.

(q) Walker's Suff. of Clergy.

(r) The dean married Margaret, the daughter of sir Francis Windebank, knt. secretary of state to K. Charles I. By her he had three sons, each of whom attained to distinguished stations in the church; for Francis was D.D. and fellow of New college, Oxford, and after a series of intermediate preferments, was made bishop of Ely, in 1684, but was deprived.

His

His disposition was generous, disinterested and humble; and his example afforded an excellent lesson to those, who imagine that dignity is better supported by avarice and insolence, than by a liberal condescension; for never was a clergyman more free from pride and covetousness.

To the church and library of Canterbury, he was a considerable benefactor; in thankfulness for his deliverance from an imminent danger, he dedicated to the holy table in this cathedral, a costly folio bible, with covers of beaten silver, double gilt; to the church of St. Paul, his liberality was extensive; for, when, in 1661, the ruinous state of that cathedral required a general assistance, Dr. Turner, then a residentiary, subscribed, as well as his brethren, 500*l.* each. He built likewise a good house for his successors in the canonry there, on which he expended the better part of 1000*l.* Two colleges in Oxford also received some share of his bounty, for he gave 40*l.* towards the building of a new quadrangle at Trinity in 1665, and two years afterwards, the same sum towards completing a building in Corpus Christi college. In 1667, when K. Charles II. requested a supply from the clergy, by way of loan, Dr. Turner advanced on his own account, 100*l.* besides his share of 1000*l.* as a residentiary of St. Paul's. He had before contributed on a similar proposal 120*l.* besides his proportion of 1000*l.* contributed by the dean and chapter of St. Paul's. To these instances of his public spirit must be added, his generous conduct to his relations; for here signed his paternal estate of considerable value, to his younger brother; he gave portions to several of his sisters, and settled them and others of his kindred handsomely in the world, at the time when he was a married man and a father: and when the storm of persecution raged against him, and his fortunes were at a low ebb, even then he took into his care his aged parents, harassed and ruined by the iniquity of the times, for their eminent loyalty. The dean was buried at the east end of the Virgin Mary's, now called the dean's chapel, where, under the window, there is a handsome mural monument erected to his memory, with the following inscription (s),

H. S. E.
 THOMAS TURNER, S. T. P.
 Beati Pauli apud Londinenses Canonicus Residentiarius
 Ecclesie { Deinde Rossensis Anno MDCCXXXI } Decanus Tandem hujus Christi Cantuariensis MDCLXIII }

at the revolution, and died in 1700. William was D.D. of Trinity college, Oxford, and afterwards archdeacon of Durham, and died in 1685. And Thomas was likewise D.D. fellow, and afterwards president of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, prebendary of Ely, and St. Paul's, besides other preferments. He died in 1714, unmarried; remarkable for his munificence and liberality in his life time, and left the bulk of his fortunes, which were very considerable, to charitable uses.

(s) His wife survived him, and dying July 1692, æt. 84,

Quem Carolus primus et Archiepiscopus Laud,
 Gloriosi et Sanctissimi Martyres,
 Sacellanum habuerunt et una cum illis fortissimum Confessorem.
 Quem Rex in ultimis ferè Agenibus
 In Curà Hamptoniensi et Insula Vectis
 Unum e paucis fidelissimum ascevit sibi.
 Generosâ Prosapia Redingie
 Natus, si quis alter, Bono Publico.
 Fortunâ magnâque rerum copiâ reverentèr usus est,
 Ingens { Humilitatis profundissimæ } Exemplar.
 { Simplicитatis Christianissimæ }
 { Zeli pro Ecclesia ferventissimi }
 Calamitates sub tyrannide perduellium animo æquissimo toleravit,
 Et utriusque fortunæ expertus
 Utrique par existit.
 Juxta felicem Caroli secundi reditum
 Novas dignitates minimè ambitabat,
 Et octogenarius Senex adhuc in concionibus dominabatur.
 Jamque maturus cœlo
 Post multa immortalia facta, nihil optavit mortale
 Nisi mori in Domino,
 Et obiit Anno Domini MDCLXXII
 Ætatis suæ LXXXI.

10. JOHN TILLOTSON, S. T. P. and prebendary of this church, succeed that same year 1672, to the deanry of it (t).

He was descended from the antient family of the Tilstons, of Tilston, in Cheshire, from which name his grandfather, Thomas Tilston, changed it to Tillotson (u). He was the son of Mr. Robert Tillotson, a respectable clothier at Sowerby, in Halifax, in the county of York, where he was born in 1630, and his father being a rigid puritan, he was educated in the same principles. In 1647, he went to Clare hall, in the University of Cambridge, where he was placed under the tuition of an eminent presbyterian divine; in 1650 he took the degree of A. B. and in the following year was elected fellow of that society, and became a tutor there; in 1654, he took the degree of A. M. and three years afterwards left college to superintend the education of the son of Edmund Prideaux, esq., then attorney-general to Oliver Cromwell, and by this connexion he obtained a considerable benefaction to Clare bill.

At the restoration he lost his fellowship, but conformed to the church of England. Having been ordained by Dr. Sydserse, bishop of Gallogway, who required of him neither oath nor subscription, he became curate of Cheshunt, in the county of Hertford, and in 1662 was elected by the parishioners to the donative of St. Mary Aldermanbury, London, but declined the acceptance of it. In June 1663, he was presented to the rectory of Kedington, in Suffolk, where he continued was buried in St. Giles's church, in Oxford, near the remains of their son William.

(t) The reader may find an ample account of the life of Dr. Tillotson, published by Dr. Birch, in the Biographia Britannica, the General Dictionary, Le Neve's lives of the Archbishops, and other books; all which are much too copious to be inserted here, but from them this receipt abstract, is mostly taken.

(u) Watson's History of Halifax, p. 294.

but

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

SHARP.

but a short time, for in November he was elected by the Society of Lincoln's-inn, their preacher, on which he resigned that preferment; the reputation of his discourses here attracting general notice, it procured him, in addition to that appointment, the Tuesday lectureship at the church of St. Laurence Jury.

In 1666 he took the degree of S. T. P. in which year he published his treatise, entitled the Rule of Faith, in opposition to a book written in the defence of the tenets of the church of Rome, which brought on a long controversy between him and the author of it; this caused him to be much noticed, and in 1669, the King promoted him to a prebend in this church of Canterbury, and about the same time he was made one of the King's chaplains; and though he seems to have been no favourite of the King, yet at the recommendation, principally of archbishop Sheldon, he was nominated dean of Canterbury, and was installed on November 14, 1672.

In 1675, the dean was presented to the prebend of Ealdlond, in the church of St. Paul's, London, which he resigned in February, 1678, on being admitted to that of Oxgate, and to a residentiaryship in the same church. In 1683, he attended the unfortunate Lord Ruffel, during his confinement, and at his death on the scaffold, where the earnestness with which he urged him to a declaration against the lawfulness of resistance, has been much censured, yet he is said to have justified his conduct to Lady Ruffel upon this occasion. Towards the end of K. Charles II.'s reign, he published a Discourse on Transubstantiation, which gave rise to a controversy between him and the Papists, which was carried on during the whole of K. James II.'s reign; and in 1688, he attended the meeting of the bishops at Lambeth, when the well known petition to the King to be released from his injunction of reading and distributing the declaration for the liberty of conscience was framed, to which the dean, among others, added his subscription.

The government being soon afterwards settled, and K. William and Q. Mary placed upon the throne, the dean was, from a remembrance of the attention which he is said to have shewn them, in 1677, in their passage through Canterbury, in their way to Holland, appointed in 1689, clerk of the closet, and advanced to the deanry of St. Paul's; on which he relinquished this deanry of Canterbury, and two years afterwards was promoted still further to the metropolitanical see of this church, in the list of the archbishops, of which, below, a further account of him may be seen.

(v) Thoresby's History of Leeds, p. 36. His life is in the Biographia Britannica, where may be seen a more extensive account of him.

II. JOHN SHARP, S. T. P. dean of Norwich, was nominated to this deanry, in the room of Dr. Tillotson, in 1689.

He was descended from the family of this name, seated at Little Horton, near Bradford, in county of York, a family of good antiquity; he was the son of Mr. Thomas Sharp, an eminent tradesman, and was born at Bradford, in February 1644 (v).

In April 1660, he was admitted at Christ's college, in Cambridge, where he obtained the degree of A. B. in December 1663, with much reputation; but the favourite studies of his youth are said to have been botany and chemistry. He took the degree of A. M. in 1667, and was ordained both deacon and priest; in the same year he was recommended as domestic chaplain to sir Heneage Finch, attorney-general; to four of whose sons he was tutor, two of whom having afterwards entered into orders, he successively collated, when archbishop of York, to the rich prebend of Wetwang, in that cathedral (w).

At the opening of the Sheldonian theatre at Oxford, in July 1669, he was incorporated A. M. with several other Cambridge gentlemen, and in 1672 was preferred to the archdeaconry of Berks, then in the nomination of the crown; and the same year, on his patron sir Heneage Finch being made lord keeper of the great seal, he was appointed his chaplain, and at his especial request, undertook the recommendation to him of such, as he thought most deserving, for those benefices as were in the disposal of the seals.

In 1674, he preached a sermon, the first in his printed collection, which occasioned a controversy to which we are indebted for his excellent discourse on conscience, and next year was preferred, through the lord keeper's favour, to a prebend of Norwich, and to the rectory of St. Bartholomew, near the Exchange, London, and not long afterwards to that of St. Giles in the Fields. In 1679 he took the degree of S. T. P. in which year he had accepted the lectureship at St. Laurence Jury, which he resigned in 1683. In 1681 he was promoted, by the interest of his former patron, then lord Chancellor, to the deanry of Norwich; upon the death of K. Charles II, he drew up the address of the grand jury for the city of London. He had been chaplain to that monarch, as he was also to his successor James II; in whose reign, however, he was among those distinguished preachers, who boldly vindicated the reformed religion, and exposed the errors of Popery; and on May 2, 1686, he delivered in his church of St. Giles, a memorable discourse, in which he (w) Le Neve's lives of Archbishops of Canterbury and York, p. 280.

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

HOOPER.

pointedly expressed a contempt for those who suffered themselves to be converted by any arguments in favour of the Romish tenets. This was considered as a reflection, even upon the King himself. It is no wonder then, that he experienced his resentment, and notwithstanding Dr. Sharp's humiliation, he was suspended from his parochial functions by the ecclesiastical commission. During this suspension he resided at his deanry of Norwich (x). He did not however, remain long in disgrace, for in January, 1687, he was informed from Lord Sunderland, that he was restored, and might return to his parochial charge; but in August 1688, he was summoned, with the other archdeacons, before the ecclesiastical commission, for disobeying the King's injunction, relating to the declaration for liberty of conscience; to this they agreed not to appear, and Dr. Sharp drew up their reasons for it.

On the 27th of Jan. following, he preached before the prince of Orange; and on the 30th, before the convention. On both occasions he prayed for K. James, the first time it gave no offence, because the abdication of the throne had not been voted; but it being declared vacant on the 28th, Dr. Sharp's prayer, as well as some passages in his sermon on the 30th, occasioned not only surprise but disgust; however, after some debate, he had a vote of thanks, and was requested to print it, which he thought proper to decline. Unfavourable as this might seem to his future promotion, he explained himself in such a manner to K. William afterwards, that he received him into his favour again; and on Dr. Tillotson's relinquishing the deanry of Canterbury, he was nominated to it, and was installed on November 25. The merit of dean Sharp was now in high estimation, and it reflects the highest honor on his character, when upon the deprivation of those bishops who refused to take the oaths to K. William and Q. Mary, and he was considered as a proper person to succeed to one of the vacant sees; that neither the King's favour nor the persuasion of his friends, could prevail on him to accept the offer; for he entertained a particular esteem for the prelates who were deprived. This displeased the King, but Dr. Tillotson, then archbishop, found means to soften his displeasure, by prevailing on the dean to promise to accept of the see of York, when it should become vacant, grounding his former refusal on pretence of his wish to be preferred in his native country. To this the King signified his approbation, and Dr. Lamplugh, the archbishop of York, dying a few days afterwards, the dean was promoted to that see, and was consecrated on July 5, 1691; upon which the deanry of Canterbury became vacant. His elevation to this archiepiscopal dignity, says Mr. Thoresby, was not only to the comfort and honour of his native country and family, but to the universal joy and satisfaction of the whole nation (y).

(x) During the dean's stay at the deanry, he amused his leisure hours in collecting antient coins, British, Saxon and English, as well as Greek and Roman; of which he obtained sufficient to furnish a choice and valuable cabinet. He afterwards drew up some ingenious and accurate remarks on the English, Scots, and Irish money, which he communicated, in 1689, to Mr. Thoresby, in an introductory letter, to whom he acknowledges his partiality to the study of antiquity, but modestly fears that he made that a business, which should have been only a recreation. The remarks have been lately published in the Bibl. Topog. Brit. vol. vi.

12. GEORGE HOOPER, S. T. P. was next advanced to this dignity in the church of Canterbury, in the same month and year, viz. July, 1691 (z).

He was the son of George Hooper, gent. and was born at Grimley, in the county of Worcester, on Nov. 18, 1640. He was first admitted at St. Paul's school, and afterwards at Westminster, whence he was elected to Christ church, Oxford, in 1657. In the university, he directed his studies with success, not only to philosophy, mathematics, and the Greek and Roman antiquity, but to the more difficult attainments of eastern learning; in the pursuit of which he was assisted by that eminent Orientalist, Dr. Pocock. Of the Arabic language he made great use, in explaining the obscurer passages of the Old Testament. He took the degree of A. B. in January 1661, and that of A. M. in December, 1663. In 1672 he became chaplain to Dr. Morley, bishop of Winchester, who soon afterwards collated him to the rectory of Havant, in Hampshire, the situation of which being unhealthy, he resigned it for that of East Woodbay, in the same county. In July 1673, he took the degree of B. D. and not long afterwards became chaplain to archbishop Sheldon, by whom he was in 1675, collated to the rectory of Lambeth, and two years afterwards, to the option of the precentorship of Exeter, in which church he became likewise a canon residentiary; and in the same year, he took the degree of S. T. P.

He was about this time appointed almoner to the princess of Orange, and waited on her in Holland, where he regulated her chapel, according to the usage of the church of England. After one year's attendance there, he came back to England and married (a), and then returned to Holland, where he continued, however, not more

(y) Archbishop Sharp died on February 2, 1714, et. 69, and was buried in the cathedral at York, where there is a handsome monument erected to his memory. His sermons, which are collected in seven volumes, are remarkable not less for piety and fervor of religion, than for judicious and energetic argument.

(z) His life is in the General Dictionary. See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 1048.

(a) He married Abigail, daughter of Rich. Guildford, gent.

than

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

STANHOPE.

than eight months; when having obtained the princess's permission, he came home again.

About the year 1680, he was appointed one of the King's chaplains, and after K. James's accession, in 1685, he attended, by his command, the duke of Monmouth, the evening preceding his execution, and afterwards waited on him in his last moments. Soon after the government was settled upon William and Mary, he became a royal chaplain; and on the promotion of Dr. Sharp, the Queen, (during the King's absence in Holland), advanced him to the deanry of Canterbury, in which he was installed, on July 19, 1691, on which he resigned the rectory of East Woodbay. In February 1701, he was chosen Prolocutor of the Lower House of Convocation; but in the December following, when a new convocation was summoned, he would not re-accept the office; and the same year he refused the offer of the primacy of Ireland. In the famous dispute concerning the rights of convocation, which at this time commenced, he joined with those who defended the Lower House, and published a narrative of their proceedings; which on bishop Gibson's answering, the dean replied with a summary defence of that house. In the year 1703, the dean was nominated, by the Queen, to the see of St. Asaph, and was consecrated on October 31, on which he relinquished the rectory of Lambeth, but retained this deanry, and the other preferments with the bishopric, in which indeed he continued but a few months, for he was translated on March following to the see of Bath and Wells, and upon his consecration, the deanry of Canterbury became vacant (b). The character of Dr. Hooper cannot be better summed up than in the words of Dr. Busby, the famous master of Westminster school, under whom he received that part of his education. That he was the best scholar, the first gentleman, and would make the compleatest bishop that ever was educated at that school.

His works were collected into one volume, and published at Oxford, in 1757; the contents may be seen, in the Rev. Mr. Todd's account of him, among the deans of Canterbury, p. 182.

13. GEORGE STANHOPE, S. T. P. was on the vacancy of this deanry, by the translation of bishop Hooper, nominated to it in March 1704.

He was the son of the Rev. Thomas Stanhope, and was born on March 5, 1660, at Hertisborn, in the county of Derby, of which parish his father was rector, as well as vicar of St. Margaret in Leicester. His mother, whose name was Allestree, was of an antient family in the county of Derby. His grand-father Dr. George Stanhope, precentor of York, and rector of Wbeldrake, in that county, was one of those persecuted ecclesiastics, who for their loyalty to K. Charles I. experienced the greatest distress; for being dispossessed of all his preferments, he was driven out of doors, with eleven children. He died in 1644 (c).

The dean received the first rudiments of education at the school of Uppingham, in the county of Rutland, whence he was removed to that of Leicester, and again to that of Eton, from which he was elected on the foundation at King's college, in 1677, where he took the degree of A. B. in 1681; and that of A. M. in 1685. Having acquired a valuable stock of learning, for of the French, as well as of the Latin, Greek and Hebrew languages, he had acquired a critical knowledge; he entered into holy orders, and seems afterwards to have remained at the university till he was in 1688, preferred to the rectory of Tewing, in the county of Hertsford; and the year following to the vicarage of Lewisbam in Kent; having been chaplain to lord Dartmouth, the patron of it, and tutor to his son; soon after which he was appointed chaplain in ordinary to K. William and Q. Mary, and he enjoyed the same honour under Q. Anne (d).

On July 5, 1697, he took the degree of S. T. P. the exercises of which he performed publicly and with great applause; and in 1701 was appointed preacher at Boyle's Lectures. In 1703 he was presented to the vicarage of Deptford, which, relinquishing Tewing, he held with Lewisbam by dispensation, and soon afterwards was promoted to the deanry of Canterbury, in which he was installed on March 23, 1704. He was now also Tuesday lecturer at the church of St. Laurence Jury, in which appointment, as well as in the deanry, he was no mean successor to Tillotson and Sbarn. The lecture had indeed been long supplied by eminent divines, and was reputed to be an office of honour, rather than profit, and he continued in it till 1708, when he resigned it.

In February 1714, he was elected prolocutor of the convocation, and was twice afterwards re-chosen. But the life of dean Stanhope is best known by his literary labours, in which his abilities distinguished him as an excellent scholar, as well as a judicious critic. He published a number of sermons, many of which had been delivered before public bodies, and for the service of public charities, and many other religious

(b) The bishop died at Barkley, in Somersetshire, whither he sometimes retired, on September 6, 1721, æt. 87, and was buried in the cathedral of Wells, where a monument is erected to his memory; and adjoining to it, a monument with an inscription to the memory of his wife, who died in 1726, æt. 71; by her he had nine children, of whom only the fourth daughter Abigail, survived who married Mr. Prowse, of Somersetshire.

(c) Bowyer's Anecdotes, p. 498, Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 83.

(d) Bowyer's Anecdotes, p. 7. See Hutton's account of Dr. Stanhope.

tracts

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

STANHOPE—SYDALL.

tracts and translations, besides a paraphrase and comment upon the epistles and gospels, in 4 vols. — a list of all which may be found in Mr. Todd's account of him, among the deans of this church. After having lived an example of cheerful and unaffected piety, the dean died at Bath, on March 18, 1728 (e).

He was of a mild and friendly disposition; to the misfortunes of others, he was remarkably attentive, and that concern which he expressed, conveyed at once consolation to the heart, and improvement to the understanding. His care as a parish priest and as dean, was exemplary, and the advice he gave to others, was always the rule of his own practice. As he had been remarkable for the many good works which he did whilst living, so he shewed his charity in his last will, for among other benevolent legacies, he gave the sum of 250l. to found an exhibition for a scholar of Canterbury school continuing at some college in Cambridge, till the Michaelmas after he had commenced A. M. The dean was buried in Lewisbam church, where, within the altar rails on his gravestone, is this inscription :

DEPOSITUM GEORGI STANHOPE

S. T. P. DEC. CANT. ET

ECCLESIAE HUIUS VICARI, 1728.

And on the north side of the altar, is a handsome mural monument erected by his widow, with this inscription :

In Memory

Of the very Rev^d GEORGE STANHOPE, D. D.

38 Years Vicar of this Place, and 26 of the Neighbouring Church at DEPTFORD;
Constituted Dean of CANTERBURY, A. D. 1703.
And thrice PROLOCUTOR of the Lower House of Convocation.

Whose Piety was real and rational,

His Charity great and universal,

Fruitful in Acts of Mercy, and in all good Works:

His Learning was Elegant and Comprehensive,

His Conversation Polite and Delicate,

Grave without Preciseness, Facetious without Levity:

The good Christian, the solid Divine and the fine Gentleman, in him were happily united;

Who, tho' amply qualified for the Highest

Honours of his Sacred Function,

Yet was content with only deserving them.

In his Pastoral Office a Pattern to his People,

And to all who shall succeed him in the Care of them.

His Discourses from the PULPIT

Were equally pleasing and profitable,

A beautiful Intermixture of the clearest Reasoning with the purest Diction,

Attended with all the Graces of a just ELOCUTION;

As his Works from the PRESS have spoke the Praises

Of his happy Genius; his Love of God and Men,

(e) The dean had been twice married; first, to Olivia, daughter of Charles Cotton, of Beresford, in the county of Stafford, esq; by whom he had one son and five daughters; secondly, to Miss Parker, half-sister to Mr Charles Wager, who survived him, and died in 1730, æt. 54.

(f) Masters's History of C. C. C. C. p. 368 et seq.

for which Generations to come will bless his Memory.

He was born March the 5th. He died March the 18th 1727.

Aged 68 Years.

14: ELIAS SYDALL, S. T. P. prebendary of this church, was next nominated dean of Canterbury in April 1728. He was a native of Norwich, and but of mean parentage, being the son of a glover in that city, and his education began equally the same; for he was admitted in April 1688, a bible clerk, on the foundation of archbishop Parker, at Benet college, in Cambridge, where he took the degree of A. B. in 1691 (f), and that of A. M. in 1695; in which year he was elected fellow of the same society; he had been ordained the preceding year.

Continuing to reside in the university, he engaged in the duty of St. Benet's church in Cambridge, to which his college, as impropiators, supplied the minister. This he relinquished in 1702, for having been appointed chaplain to archbishop Tenison, he was collated by him in March to the rectory of Biddenden in Kent, which occasioned him to quit his fellowship; this benefice, however, he resigned, on being collated by the same patron, in June 1704, to the rectory of Ivechurch, in Romney-Marsh (g), and in 1705 he obtained the degree of S. T. P. (b)

In 1707 he received additional proofs of the primate's regard to him, being collated in June to the rectory of Great Mongebam, which he held by dispensation with Ivechurch, and in July to a prebend in the church of Canterbury; and in 1710 he was chosen professor in convocation for the clergy of the diocese, and the next year he was appointed by the archbishop to the mastership of the hospitals of St. John, Northgate, and St. Nicholas, Harbledown, near Canterbury; to the duties of which office he faithfully attended, till the year 1731, when he made a resignation of it.

In 1716, he was nominated one of the King's chaplains, and on the death of dean Stanhope was promoted to the deanry of Canterbury, in which he was installed on April 26, 1728. Three years after which he was advanced to the bishopric of St. David's, and was consecrated at Ely house, in Holborn, on April 11, by a commission from the archbishop, to the bishops of London, Ely, and Bangor (i), and in the November following he was translated to that of Gloucester, with both bishoprics he retained the deanry of Canterbury, till his death, which happened on December 24, 1733, in the 61st year of his age, leaving behind him the character of having been

(g) Book of Inductions. (h) Cambridge Graduates.

(i) Dr. Sydall married the only daughter of Dr. William Dudes, a physician at Canterbury, by whom he had no issue. She survived him some years, and died in 1753, æt. 69, and was buried in St. James's church, Westminster, near the remains of her husband.

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

LYNCH.

a polite scholar, and of having been much beloved as a mild and diffident man (k).

His publications were only six sermons, the last of which, preached at the cathedral on Nov. 5, 1715, is a very remarkable one, which was much animadverted on by many of his hearers; the titles of them may be seen in Mr. Todd's account of him, among the deans of this church.

The dean was buried in the chancel of St James's church, in Westminster, on December 31, 1733, where, on a flat stone, is the following inscription, now greatly effaced, to his memory.

Spe felici Resurrectionis
Hic Situs est ELIAS SYDALL S. T. P.
NOROVICI ex Parentibus ingenuis natus,
CANTABRIGIÆ Literis infitus
Et in Collegii Corporis Christi Societatem cooptatus; Inde a Thoma nuper Archiepiscopo Cantuariensi.
Ut ei a sacris esset, vocatus;
Et Ecclesiæ Cantuariensis Canonicatu,
Præter alia Beneficia donatus.
Tandem a Rege Georgio 2^{do}.
Ad istius Ecclesiæ Decanatum,
Postea ad Episcopatum MENEVENSEM
Mox ad GLOCESTRIENSEM Eiectus.
Ex his Viator Satis superque discas
Quis hic Homo fuerit,
Cujus Cineres atque ossa jam calcas;
Qualis autem fuerit,
In die illo extremo
Cum Deus occulta Hominum indicaverit
Sat cito Intelliges.
Tu interea
Noli ante Tempus quicquam judicare;
Obiit, si id tibi interfit,
24^o. Die Mensis Decembris
Anno { Æræ Christianæ 1733.
Ætatis suæ 61.

He bore for his arms—Argent, a chevron between 3 joiners squares, gules.

15. JOHN LYNCH, S. T. P. prebendary of this church, was the immediate successor in this deanry, being nominated to it in January 1734.

He was descended from an antient family in this county, settled near Cranbrook, where Symon Lynch founded a grammar school in Queen Elizabeth's reign; and afterwards purchased the seat of Grove, the continued residence of this family ever since, situated about eight miles from Canterbury, and was member in two successive parliaments for Sandwich in the reign of Q. Mary. From him, in a lineal succession, descended John, the father of dean Lynch, who was high sheriff of this county in the last year of Q. Anne; an active magistrate, a deputy lieutenant, and colonel of the militia of it (l).

(k) Masters's History of C. C. C. and Church Register. Willis's Manuscript Notes to Le Neve's Fasti, in the Bodleian library.

(l) See a further account of the family of Lynch, in vol. iii. of the History of Kent.

(m) Cambridge Graduate Book. Masters's History of C. C. C. p. 401.

Dean Lynch was born on December 5, 1697² and was educated at the King's school in Canterbury, from which he was removed, in his 18th year, to St. John's college in Cambridge, and took the degree of A. B. in 1717, and of A. M. in 1721; in the same year he was ordained a deacon, and in 1723 was collated by archbishop Wake to the rectory of Alballows, Bread-street.

On the promotion of Dr. Sydall to the deanry, he was preferred by the same patron to a prebend in this church of Canterbury; in which year he obtained the degree of S. T. P. at Cambridge, having attended the King, as one of his chaplains, to Newmarket, and was afterwards collated to the rectory of Sundridge, in this county, which he held by dispensation with his living in London (m).

In April following he married Mary, the youngest daughter of archbishop Wake (n), who soon afterwards conferred on him the valuable option of the mastership of St. Cross hospital, near Winchester; soon after which he exchanged the rectory of Bread-street for that of Alballows the Great, in Thames-street. In May 1731, he obtained from the archbishop the valuable rectories of Ickham and Bishopborne, near Canterbury, and in the October following, the secure rectory of Eynesford, upon which he relinquished his London living, as well as that of Sundridge. In this year he accepted the mastership of the hospitals of St. Nicholas, Harbledown, and St. John, Northgate; an appointment attended with no emolument, but requiring much trouble in regulating the concerns of them, and he continued the care of them till 1744, when he resigned this office.

In January 1734, on the death of bishop Sydall, Dr. Lynch was promoted to the deanry of Canterbury, and was installed on the 18th of that month. He was prevented from residing regularly on this preferment, by the declining health of the archbishop, his father-in-law, and he continued at Lambeth to assist in managing the archiepiscopal business there till that primate's death in January 1737. After this dean Lynch divided his time chiefly between his deanry and his paternal seat of Grove; and as he was distinguished no less for his extended and open hospitality, than for the cheerfulness of his conversation, his company was much solicited, and his social qualities were greatly esteemed by a large and respectable neighbourhood. In 1747 he was appointed prolocutor of the lower house (n) She survived him between seven and eight years. Their second son Dr. John Lynch, now the only surviving male descendant of the family, is prebendary of this church of Canterbury, and archdeacon of the diocese, and is unmarried. See more of the descendants of dean Lynch, under the parish of Staple, vol. iii. of the History of Kent.

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

FRIEND.

of convocation. The dean in 1757 was seized with a paralytic stroke, which greatly impaired his faculties; he made, however, an effort to exert himself again, by preaching in the cathedral, but he delivered his sermon so little to his satisfaction, that he never more repeated the attempt. He therefore obtained a royal dispensation to excuse him from all duty, though he still continued his usual residence and hospitality at the deanry; nor was he inattentive to his affairs, till his faculties began to leave him some months before his death, which happened on Whitsunday, May 25, 1760, in his 63d year. His remains were conveyed to the family vault in the church of Staple; but as yet there has been no monument or memorial placed there to his memory.

To the preferments which he possessed, as already mentioned, must be added, the treasurership of Salisbury, another of archbishop Wake's options. Notwithstanding which, large as his income may appear, both as to his ecclesiastical preferments, and his private fortune, yet from his hospitality, his expences were equal to his income; on his prebend and deanry houses he had expended no less than 3000l. and his private charities were known to equal his public spirit. To the society which was formed in 1751, for the support of the widows and orphans of the clergy in this diocese, he was an early and liberal benefactor, and there were very few public charities of which he was not a member, and few occasional, to which he did not contribute. The interest of the school at Canterbury he warmly and successfully promoted, gratefully remembering the scholar in the dean; nor could he do this more effectually than by placing so accomplished a gentleman and a scholar, as Dr. Beauvoir, to preside over it, whose abilities raised it to the highest reputation.

The dean was much admired as a preacher, and while his health continued, he seldom failed to officiate on Sundays, either in his parishes, or in the cathedral. He has, however published only one sermon, delivered in 1735, before the society for the propagation of the Gospel, and printed at their request; yet other public bodies, before whom he preached, paid him the same compliment, which he always declined.

16. WILLIAM FRIEND, S. T. P. canon of Christ church, in Oxford, was, on the death of dean Lynch, appointed his successor, being nominated to it in June 1760.

He was son of Dr. Robert Friend, head-master of Westminster school, by Jane, daughter of Dr. Samuel Delangle, prebendary of Westminster; his grandfather was the Rev. Mr. William Friend, rector of Croughton, in Northamptonshire. He was admitted a scholar at Westminster school in 1727, whence he was elected in 1731, at the age of sixteen, to Christ church in Oxford, where he took the degree of A. M. in June 1738. He had a better view than a continuance of his studentship, for as he was designed for the church, his father, who was rector of Witney in Oxfordshire, had solicited the resignation of that valuable living in his favour, when he should be qualified to take it; a permission which he obtained from Dr. Hoadly, the patron of it; and accordingly, on his father's resignation, March 26, 1739, he was instituted to the rectory, on April 4th following. In 1744 he obtained a prebend of Westminster, and in 1747 he was presented by that collegiate body to the rectory of Islip, near Oxford, with which he held by dispensation the rectory of Witney. In July 1748, he accumulated the degrees of bachelor and doctor of divinity, for which he went out grand compounder (o). In 1756 he was promoted to a canonry of Christ church and relinquished the prebend of Westminster, and on the death of Dr. Lynch in 1760, he was advanced to the deanry of Canterbury, in which he was installed on June 14 that year. In 1761 he was elected prolocutor of the lower house of convocation, and on November 6 he delivered, before the clergy in the church of St. Paul, an elegant and animated Latin sermon (p). The dean enjoyed this dignity but a short time, for he died at the deanry here, on Nov. 26, 1766, æt. 55. Few deans have been more esteemed than Dr. Friend; for his attainments as a scholar and a gentleman were eminent; his conduct, as a divine, was exemplary; he possessed a most benevolent heart, and he was modest and unassuming.

He published a sermon, preached before the House of Commons January 30, 1755, and the Concio ad Clerum, November 6, 1761. There is in the Oxford collection, a copy of Latin verses by him, on the marriage of the Prince of Orange with the Princess Anne, daughter of George II, in 1734. He wrote likewise an epitaph on his friend Dr. Morres, vicar of Hinckley; whose great accomplishments he has displayed with peculiar energy. He was a great lover of music, which he patronized and practised. Concerts at the deanry, in his time, were frequent, and many of the performers were the principal gentlemen in Canterbury and the neighbourhood of it; he was a great collector of choice prints, of which he left behind him a very valuable collection. He was chaplain in ordinary both to the late and present King, and married one of the sisters of sir Thomas Robinson, the late Primate of Ireland, by whom he left issue three sons and one daughter (q).

(o) Bowyer's Anec. p. 325, 330. Bishop of Oxford's Register. Oxford Graduates.

(p) Bowyer's Anec. p. 330, 537. Church Register.

(q) Viz. Robert, who was a student of Christ church, and died

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

POTTER—NORTH—MOORE.

The dean's remains were removed to Witney, and interred near those of his father and mother; under the handsome monument, erected within the rails of the altar in that church, is this inscription, on a small piece of marble, to the memory of the dean. Here lieth the body of WILLIAM FRIEND, D. D. (son of the above-mentioned Robert and Jane) dean of Canterbury, and rector of this parish, who died on the 26th of November, in the year of our Lord 1766, aged 55.

17. JOHN POTTER, prebendary of this church, succeeded next as dean of it, being nominated to it at the end of the year 1766. He was the eldest son of Dr. Potter, archbishop of Canterbury, and after a private education, was entered a member of Christ church in Oxford, in 1727, where he was soon after appointed a canon student, his father being at that time canon of that church, as well as bishop of the see. He took his degree of A. M. in June 1734.

His first promotion in the church was the vicarage of Blackburne, in the county of Lancaster, in the patronage of his father, as archbishop of Canterbury; by whose interest he obtained likewise in 1739 the valuable snecure of Elme cum Emne-h, in the Ise of Ely; and in 1741 the archdeaconry of Oxford, which was an option of his father's; and the same year, in November, he took the degree of B. D. In 1742, he was collated by his father to the vicarage of Lyd, in Kent, with which he held by dispensation the rectory of Chidingstone, in the same county, conferred on him by his father likewise. In 1745 he was presented by the crown to a prebend of Canterbury, in which he was installed on September 27; in the October following he took the degree of S. T. P. for which he went out grand compounder, as he had also for that of B. D. In 1747 he relinquished the rectory of Chidingstone, being collated by his father to the rich benefice of Wrotham, in this county, with which he kept likewise the vicarage of Lyd; to the former church he was a very liberal benefactor in beautifying it, and he greatly improved the parsonage house there, at the expence of mote than 2000l. In 1766, on the death of Dr. Friend, he was advanced to the deanry of Canterbury, in which he was installed on December 23, but on his promotion to this dignity, he resigned the archdeaconry of Oxford.

His health was declining some time, but the died young. William Maximilian, a student likewise of Christ church, where he proceeded A. M. in 1771, and afterwards had preferments in Ireland, which he soon relinquished, and returned to Oxford. He is at present rector of Chinnor, near Thame; and John, elected from Westminster school to Christ church, and proceeded A. M. in 1779; he is now preferred in Ireland. Elizabeth the daughter, married Captain Duncan Campbell, an officer of the Chatham division of marines.

illness which occasioned his death was but short, of which he died at Wrotham, on September 20, 1770, aged 57. He was chaplain in ordinary both to the late and present King. He does not appear as an author, except of a copy of verses in the Oxford Collection of Congratulatory, in 1734.

He had married very imprudently in his early part of life, and consequently highly to the disapprobation of his father, who though he presented him as is mentioned above to several valuable preferments in the church, yet disinherited him, by leaving the whole of his fortune to his eldest son, Thomas Potter, esq;

His remains were brought from Wrotham, and interred in the dean's chapel in this cathedral, on September 27, where there is a gravestone over him, with this inscription (r):

JOHANNES POTTER S. T. P.

CATHEDRALIS ECCLESIAE CANTUARIENSIS
DECANUS

OBIIT—20—SEPTEMBRIS

ANNO { POST NATUM CHRISTUM MDCCLXX.
ÆTATIS SUÆ LVII.

18. THE HON. BROWNLOW NORTH, D. C. L. and canon of Christ church, was, on Dr. Potter's death, nominated to this deanry. He was the youngest son of Francis, earl of Guildford, and was formerly a fellow of All Soul's college, and then canon of Christ church, from which he was, on Dr. Potter's death, preferred to this deanry of Canterbury, in which he was installed on October 9, 1770 (s). In the following year he was on September 8, consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, upon which this deanry became vacant. He was afterwards translated to the see of Worcester, and from thence to that of Winchester.

19. JOHN MOORE, S. T. P. succeeded Dr. North, as dean of this church. He was formerly of Pembroke college, Oxford, and became prebendary of Durham, and canon of Christ church, in Oxford, both which preferments he held at the time of his being nominated to this deanry (t), in which he was installed on September 20, 1771; but he kept this preferment only four years, for on February 12, 1775, he was consecrated bishop of Bangor, upon which this deanry became vacant, and the dean left it, much to the regret of all those whom he presided over, and of the respectable neighbourhood who were admitted to the society of himself and family; at the same time,

(r) His widow Martha survived him five years, and dying in 1775, at. 70, was buried in the same grave, in which lies likewise an infant son, removed to it from the nave, at the time of the dean's burial.

(s) He married Miss Banister, daughter of Mr. Banister, a West India merchant.

(t) Dr. Moore married one of the sisters of Mr. John Eden, of the county of Durham, bart. being his second wife, by whom he has several children.

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

CORNWALLIS—HORNE.

time, no dean had ever more joy expressed at his promotion, or good wishes for his still further advancement, which were happily realized in his elevation to the highest dignity of the church, the metropolitical see of Canterbury.

20. THE HON. JAMES CORNWALLIS, D. C. L. succeeded, on the consecration of Dr. Moore, to this deanry, in which he was installed on April 29, 1775. He was second surviving son of Charles, earl Cornwallis; and was formerly a fellow of Merton college, Oxford; he was afterwards promoted to a prebend of Westminster, which he relinquished on his acceptance of this deanry. In September 1781, he was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry (u).

21. GEORGE HORNE, S. T. P. president of Magdalen college in Oxford, succeeded Dr. Cornwallis in this deanry, to which he was nominated in September 1781. He was born in 1730, at Otham, in this county, of which parish his father, the Rev. Samuel Horne, was rector, under whom he received his early education; after which he continued a small time at Maidstone school, from whence he went to Oxford, where, in March 1746, he was admitted at University college, having been previously chosen to a scholarship there, from the above school. In October 1749 he took the degree of A. B. and following year was elected to the fellowship of Magdalen college, which is appropriated to a native of Kent.

In the university he was a laborious student, and gave many elegant testimonies of the various learning which he had acquired; and he became critically acquainted with the Hebrew language, and studied successfully the fathers of the church. Soon after he had obtained the fellowship, he began to attract particular observation, by the warmth with which he espoused the philosophy of Mr. Hutcheson; and in 1751 he commenced an attack on the Newtonian system, in favour of the former. This produced numerous publications on both sides, but those of Mr. Horne had a vein of ironical humour peculiar to himself.

In 1752 he took the degree of A. M. and in the year following entered into holy orders; and he now became a frequent and earnest preacher.

From scenes of controversy we return to those of academical employment, in which we find Mr. Horne in 1758 junior professor of the university; at the expiration of which office he took the degree of B. D. In 1760 he attacked Dr. Kennicott's method of correcting the Hebrew text, in which his endeavours were to prove that divine unequal to the business in which he was

(u) His lordship was afterwards dean of Windsor, and is now dean of Durham. Dr. Cornwallis married Catherine, one of the sisters of sir Horace Mann, bart.

(v) The dean was the most agreeable, as well as the most instructive companion. He abounded with pleasant anecdote and valuable information. His manner too, gave additional humour to whatever was facetious. They who knew him best, will often reflect on those happy hours, in which they enjoyed his company, and will acknowledge how pleasantly they passed, and moved smoothly and swiftly along, in the enjoyment of his entertaining conversation.

engaged; four years after which he took the degree of S. T. P. As yet, he was advanced to no conspicuous station. He never, indeed, obtained a parochial benefice. But on the vacancy of the presidency of Magdalen college, he was elected to succeed in that important station on January 27, 1768; and in the following year published his Considerations on the Life and Death of St. John the Baptist, being the substance of several sermons, which he had delivered before the university in Magdalen chapel, on the Baptist's day. In 1771 he was appointed one of the King's chaplains in ordinary, in which quality he officiated till his appointment to the deanry of Canterbury. Next year he exerted his abilities in defence of our civil and religious establishment; by firmly opposing the designs of those who would have abolished subscriptions, and have altered the liturgy; an application for which purpose having been made to parliament, and on this account he published a letter to lord North, with Considerations on this projected Reformation. In 1776 he published his Commentary on the Psalms; in which, although a unanimous consent has not been given to all his explanations, yet all confess it to be a work, in which the earnestness of the christian teacher, and the modesty of the critic are alike conspicuous. In the same year he was appointed vice chancellor of the university, in which station he continued till October 1780, and perhaps few ever presided in that distinguished station with greater attention or greater popularity. During which time, Dr. Adam Smith having published an eulogium on the life of David Hume, whereas Dr. Horne thought a reprehension more necessary, he published in 1777, a letter to him on the occasion, in which, styling himself one of the people called Christians, he lashes with keen and deserved irony, both the philosopher and his panegyrist. In 1779 he published two volumes of Sermons, many of which had been preached before the university. His preferment at present, consisted only of his headship, the income of which was, however, very considerable; but on the promotion of Dr. Cornwallis to a bishopric in 1781, he was advanced to the deanry of Canterbury, in which he was installed on September 22. His time was now divided between Oxford and Canterbury; and as at the former place he was beloved as the amiable governor, so at the latter he became no less esteemed as the friendly and hospitable dean (v); and indeed his hospitality at both would

DEANS.

CATHEDRAL.

BULLER—CORNWALL—POWIS.

would have been much more liberal, had it been left to his own inclinations.

During his residence at Canterbury, he was always ready, as he had ever been, both in the metropolis and in the university, to exert his services from the pulpit, not only in the general course of Sundays in the cathedral, on which days he preached almost without intermission, but on every public occasion. In 1784 he published his Letters on Infidelity, in which, armed with the weapons of sound arguments and exquisite humour, he exposes the vain pretensions of science, falsely so called, and defeats the dark and wretched system of Hume; the theological opinions of another philosopher, Dr. Priestley, occasioned in 1787, the publication of a letter to him as from an Under Graduate of Oxford, in which the mutability of the doctor's creed is exposed with much humour. This was soon known to come from the pen of the dean of Canterbury.

The earlier promotion of Dr. Horne to the mitre, would not have been more grateful to the world, than it would have been due to his merit. However, on the translation of Dr. Bagot from the see of Norwich in 1790, he was nominated to it, and was consecrated at Lambeth chapel on June 7, upon which the deanry of Canterbury became vacant (w).

22. WILLIAM BULLER, S. T. P. succeeded Dr. Horne in this deanry; he was formerly of Oriel college, Oxford, and afterwards dean of Exeter, from whence he was removed to this of Canterbury, in which he was installed on June 22, 1790. He continued in it but a short time, for on December 2, 1792, he was consecrated bishop of Exeter; upon which this deanry became vacant.

23. FOLLIOTT HERBERT WALKER CORNEWALL, S. T. P. on the promotion of Dr. Buller, was nominated to this deanry. He was formerly a fellow of St. John's college, Cambridge, and was afterwards preferred to a canonry of Windsor, and from thence to this deanry, in which he was installed on January 26, 1793. He continued in it but a short time, as he was promoted to the bishopric of Bristol in 1797, when the deanry became vacant.

(w) On Dr. Horne's advancement to a bishopric, his health was but in a precarious situation, and it afterwards decayed rather than improved. He repaired however to his palace at Norwich, and a paralytic stroke some weeks before his death, frustrated all hopes of his recovery; and the 17th of January, 1792, put an end to his severe infirmities, and his exemplary patience. Thus ended the life of bishop Horne, in the 62d year of it; a prelate whom few have surpassed in real learning, none in piety. His works, besides those above-mentioned, were numerous, all which may be found noticed, in Mr. Todd's life of him, among the deans of Canterbury. He married in 1768, the daughter of Philip Burton, of Hatton-street, esq; by whom he left three daughters, the eldest of whom married the Rev. Mr. Selby Hele, rector of Colmworth in Bedfordshire. His remains were interred in the family vault of his father-in-law, above-

24. THOMAS POWIS, S. T. P. on the promotion of Dr. Cornwall, was nominated to this deanry, in which he was installed on May 13, 1797. He was formerly of St. John's college, Oxford, and had been a prebendary of Bristol, and canon of Windsor. He is the present dean of this metropolitical cathedral church of Canterbury (*).

THE ARMS of the deanry of Canterbury are—Azure, on a cross argent, the letter Æ sable, surmounted with the letter i, of the last.

ON THE FOUNDATION of the dean and chapter of this cathedral church of Canterbury, the King reserved to himself the nomination of the dean and canons, or prebendaries of it. The former, and nine of the latter still continue so, but the nomination of the remaining three, being the first, fourth, and sixth prebendaries, were granted in exchange by K. Edward VI. in his 1st year, to the archbishop of Canterbury (y), in whose nomination they still continue at this time.

A LIST OF THE CANONS OR PREBENDARIES OF THIS CHURCH.

CANONS IN THE FIRST PREBEND.

I. RICHARD THORNDEN, alias STEDE, S. T. P. was, by the foundation charter, named the first prebendary in this stall. He had been one of the monks of the late priory of Christ church, and had been master or custos of Canterbury college in Oxford. In 1541 he was elected by the dean and chapter to be proctor for the chapter in convocation; in 1539 he was consecrated suffragan bishop of Dover, and died in 1558, being the last year of Q. Mary's reign, at Bishopborne, of which church, as well as Adisham, he had been rector, and was buried in the former (z).

King Henry VIII. in his 31st year, granted to Richard, bishop suffragan of Dover, the site of the monastery of Childrens Langley, and several manors and lands in Kent, late belonging to it, to hold without any rent or account, during his life, or until he should be promoted to one or more ecclesiastical benefices, dignity, or annuity of the annual or greater value than 100l. (a) mentioned, at Eltham in Kent, where a monument is erected in the church-yard to his memory, with an elegant and just inscription; and the same, with only a slight alteration, has also been put on a monument erected to his memory in the cathedral church of Norwich.

(x) In the great drawing-room in the deanry house, at Canterbury, is a continued series, (one only excepted, of dean Agilnoth), of the portraits of the deans of this church, from dean Wotton down to dean Cornwallis.

(y) Augmentation office, deeds of purchase and exchange, Kent, box F. 33.

(z) I find his name written both Thornton and Thorndon. See Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 123; and more of him above, in the History of Kent, under Dover.

(a) Deeds of Inrolment, in Augmentation office.

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL:

PREBENDARIES.

2. GEORGE LILYE, son of William Lilye, the famous grammarian, was educated at Magdalen college, in Oxford; leaving which, though without taking a degree, he travelled to Rome, where he was known to Cardinal Pole, and was taken under his protection, when he became noted there for his singular endowments and proficiency in various parts of learning. Soon after his return home he was made canon of St. Paul's cathedral, and afterwards, through the Cardinal's favour, was preferred to this dignity in the church of Canterbury, upon the death of bishop Thornden (b), being collated to it on March 13, 1557, and was the first nominated since the grant of it to the archbishop by King Edward VI. He erected a monument for his father in St. Paul's church, in London, and in the epitaph styles himself a canon of it. He died in 1559 (c), and was buried in the church-yard of that cathedral (d).

3. THEODORE NEWTON, A. M. succeeded him in this stall, and was rector of St. Dionis Backchurch, London. He died in 1568, and was buried in the chapter-house here (e).

4. THOMAS LAWSE, L. L. D. the archbishop's commissary, was collated in his room, in 1568, and was master of Eastbridge hospital, in Canterbury. He resigned this prebend some little time before November 27, 1589, but continued his mastership till his death, which happened on Aug. 9, 1594 (f).

5. WILLIAM REDMAN, S. T. P. archdeacon of this diocese, was installed on November 27, 1589, and was afterwards rector of Bishopborne and of Upper Hardres. On January 12, 1594, he was consecrated bishop of Norwich (g), on which this prebend became vacant (b).

6. RICHARD BANCROFT, S. T. P. was collated and installed on January 14, 1594. He vacated this prebend, being consecrated bishop of London in 1597 (i), and was afterwards promoted to this archiepiscopal chair.

7. RICHARD WOOD, S. T. P. was installed on April 29, 1597. He died on September 15, 1609 (k), and was buried in this cathedral (l).

8. HENRY AIRAY, S. T. P. provost of Queen's college, Oxford, succeeded him in this dignity. He died in 1616 (m).

9. JOHN WARNER, S. T. P. was next promoted

(b) See Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 2970.

(c) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 123. See Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 2970, note [1].

(d) See more of him, Newcourt's Repert. p. 171. Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 16, where see an account of him and his writings.

(e) His will is in Prerog. office, Canterbury, proved February 7, 1568. (f) Batt. Somner, pt. 2, p. 123.

(g) He was son of Thomas Lawse, of Ayleham, in the county of Norfolk; and bore for his arms—Or, on a chief sable, 3 stars of 6 points of the field.

to this stall. He was educated at Magdalen college, in Oxford, of which he became fellow; which he resigned about 1610, on being presented to the rectory of St. Dionis Backchurch, in London, and in 1616, was collated to this prebend. In 1633 he was promoted to the deanry of Lichfield, and on January 14 was consecrated bishop of Rocheſter; on which this preferment became vacant. He gave the beautiful marble font to this church. To the church of Rocheſter he was a generous benefactor (n); but the college at Bromley, which he founded and endowed for clergymens widows, will ever remain a monument of his great and liberal munificence.

10. WILLIAM BRAY, B. D. was next collated to it, and was installed on November 13, 1637. He died in 1644 (o), after which it remained vacant, till

11. JOHN CASTILION, S. T. P. was, after the restoration of church and monarchy in 1660, collated the next to it. He was educated at Christchurch, in Oxford, and in 1676 was made dean of Rocheſter. He was rector of Merſham in this county, and vicar of Minſter in Thanet, and dying on October 21, 1688, was buried in the lower south cross isle of this cathedral (p). On his gravestone was this short memorial inscribed for him. JOHANNES CASTILION, S. T. P. ecclesie cathedralis Roffensis decanus & hujus ecclesie canonicus obiit 21 Octob. A. D. 1688 ætatis sue 75. Margareta uxor ejus obiit 12 Julii An. Dom. 1716, ætatis 80.

12. JOHN BATTELY, a native of St. Edmundsbury, in Suffolk, fellow of Trinity college, in Cambridge, and chaplain to archbishop Sancroft, was collated to this prebend on November 5, 1688, being then archdeacon of this diocese, rector of Adisham, and master of Eastbridge hospital, to which he appears to have been a good benefactor (q). He died in October 1708, and was buried in this cathedral; his epitaph may be seen among the list of archdeacons.

13. EDWARD TENISON, L. L. B. was collated next to it, and was installed on March 19, 1709. He was of Benet college, in Cambridge, and was first rector of Wittersham, and vicar of Lydd in this county, and then of Sundridge and Chiddingstone, and became likewise in 1708 archdeacon of Carmarthen, in Wales, and a prebendary of the

(h) See more of him, among the list of archdeacons.

(i) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 124. (k) Ibid.

(l) His will, proved September 22, 1609, is in Prerog. office, Cant. (m) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 124.

(n) See an account of him and his benefactions, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 373.

(o) Rym. Fœd. vol. xx, p. 219. Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 6.

(p) Lewis's Thanet, p. 102. Newcourt's Rep. p. 332. Wood's Ath. vol. ii, facti, p. 138.

(q) Battely, p. 172.

church

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

church of Lichfield. In 1731 he was promoted to the bishopric of Ossory, in Ireland (r); upon which this stall became vacant, and was conferred on

14. WILLIAM GEEKIE, S. T. P. who succeeded him in this stall in July 1731. He was archdeacon of Gloucester, and had first the rectories of Deal and Woodchurch, both which he resigned, and afterwards held the rectories of Chevening and Southfleet, in this county, the former of which he resigned on being inducted to Alballows Barking, London. He died in 1767, æt. 77.

15. JOHN BENSON, S. T. P. (s) was collated that same year to it, being then one of the six preachers of this church; he had been rector of Rucking, and vicar of Shepherdswell with Coldred, which latter he resigned and held the former with the rectory of Great Chart, as he afterwards did that rectory with that of Harbledown, and in 1780 exchanged both these rectories for the vicarage of Boxley, in this county, which, on being presented to the vicarage of Littleborne in 1789, he held therewith; but resigned the latter in 1794, and now holds only Boxley. He is the present prebendary of this stall.

CANONS in the SECOND PREBEND.

1. ARTHUR ST. LEGER was installed in 1542, being appointed to it by the foundation charter. He attended upon sir Anthony St. Leger, the Lord Deputy of Ireland, and had a dispensation, anno 38th Henry VIII, for non-residence, during his stay there (t). He resigned this prebend in 1568.

2. ANTHONY RUSH, S. T. P. born in the diocese of Norwich, and fellow of Magdalen college in Oxford, afterwards one of the Queen's chaplains and an excellent preacher, was next promoted to it, being installed on April 6, 1568. He was canon of Windsor, and dean of Chechester, and died in the beginning of the year 1577.

3. JOHN LANGWORTH, S. T. P. educated in New college, Oxford, being the son of Lancelot Langworth, of Kettlebury, in Worcestershire, esq; was next installed in this prebend in 1578, and in 1579 was likewise promoted to a stall in the church of Worcester, and became archdeacon of Wells in 1588. He died in 1613, and was buried in Canterbury cathedral on January 13 that year (u).

4. RICHARD HUNT, S. T. P. was installed in 1614. He was made dean of Durham in 1620, and in 1631 resigned this prebend (v).

5. THOMAS BLECHYNDEN, S. T. P. was the next prebend (w), being installed on December 4, 1631 (x), but in 1642 he was ejected by the puritans, and this preferment remained vacant till the time of the restoration, before which he died:

6. PETER GUNNING, S. T. P. was admitted on the restoration into this prebend, being installed on July 9, 1660, before which he had suffered much by sequestrations and other losses, for his loyalty. He was born at Hoo, in this county, of which parish his father was vicar, in which neighbourhood his family remains at this time. He was educated at the King's school, in these precincts, and became fellow of Clare hall in Cambridge, afterwards chaplain of New college in Oxford, master of Benet and St. John's colleges in Cambridge, Lady Margaret, and Regius professor in that university; besides which, he was rector of Cotesmore and Stoke Bruern, in co. of Northampton, and minister of St. Mary's the Less in Cambridge. In 1669 he was consecrated bishop of Chechester, on which this stall became vacant (y). In 1674 he was translated to Ely. He was a person of most diffusive charity, a universal benefactor to all places to which he had any relation, and what he had not spent in his life, he gave by his will to charitable uses, particularly the endowment of poor vicarages. He died much lamented in 1684, and was buried in that cathedral, æt. 91.

7. JOHN TILLOTSON, A. M. was admitted fellow of Clare hall, in the room of Peter Gunning, above-mentioned. He was inducted in 1663 to the rectory of Ketton, alias Keddington, in co. Suffolk, and was installed into this prebend on March 14, 1669, and afterwards, upon the death of dean Turner, was promoted in 1672 to the deanry of this church; in the list of the deans of which, and of the archbishops of this see, more may be seen of him.

8. SAMUEL PARKER, S. T. P. was installed in this prebend on November 18, 1672, being then archdeacon of this diocese and rector of both Chartbam and Ickbam, in this county. He was a native of Northampton, and was educated at Wadham college in Oxford first, and afterwards went to Trinity, where he changed his principles from strict presbyterianism, to those of the church of England, and became chaplain to archbishop Sheldon. In 1673 he was made master of Eastbridge hospital in Canterbury; he resigned this prebend in 1685, and was next year consecrated bishop of Oxford, on which this prebend became

(r) See an account of both Tenison's prebendaries, in Biog. Brit. vol. vi, p. 3929. The bishop of Ossory died in 1735, at Dublin, æt. 62.

(s) Created S. T. P. by the Archbishop, 1770. He was nephew to Dr. Benson, bishop of Gloucester, who gave him the register of the diocese of Gloucester, which he now enjoys.

(t) Battely, p. 172.

(u) His will, proved January 22, 1613, is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury. See Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 668.

(v) He died in 1638, and was buried at Durham. Willis ibid. p. 252. (w) Rym. Fœd. vol. xix, p. 543.

(x) Rymer's Fœd. vol. xix, p. 349. Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 7.

(y) See an account of him in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 766.

vacant,

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

vacant, though he afterwards held the archdeaconry with the rectory of Ickham, and the mastership of Eastbridge hospital in commendam (z).

9. JOHN BRADFORD, S. T. P. succeeded him in it, and was installed in October 1685, and died about six weeks afterwards; he was buried, his body being wrapt in fore cloth, on December 12, that year, in this cathedral (a).

10. JOHN YOUNGER, S. T. P. of Magdalen college in Oxford, succeeded him, and was installed on the 30th of that month, in which his predecessor died. He resigned his prebend in 1691, and was afterwards canon residentiary and dean of St. Paul's, and clerk of the closet to Q. Anne (b).

11. JOHN WILLIAMS, S. T. P. succeeded him and was installed on April 27, 1691. He was born in Northamptonshire, and was sometime of Magdalen hall in Oxford. After the restoration he became minister of St. Peter's, Paul's wharf, in London, rector of Gillingham, and vicar of Wrotbam, in this county, and afterwards rector of St. Mildred's, Poultry, London, and canon of St. Paul's, being then chaplain to K. William, and in 1697 was consecrated bishop of Chichester on which this stall became vacant (c).

12. JOHN ROBINSON, S. T. P. was next advanced to this prebend, being installed on June 16, 1697; he was at that time the Queen's envoy to the K. of Sweden; he was afterwards made, in 1703, dean of Windsor, and on November 19, 1710, was consecrated bishop of Bristol (d), upon which this stall became vacant.

13. EDWARD FINCH, S. T. P. son of Heneage, Earl of Nottingham, Lord Chancellor (e), and brother of Henry Finch, dean of York, was installed on February 8 following. He was canon residentiary likewise of the church of York, and rector of Wigan, in co. Lancaster. He died in 1738.

14. JOHN GRIFFITH, S. T. P. was installed in 1738, and next year was inducted to the rectory of St. Michael Queenhithe, London. He died in 1765, and was succeeded by

(z) See an account of him and his writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 814. Willis's Cath. vol. ii, p. 436. He was intruded by K. James II. on Magdalen college for their president, whose humour he seemed entirely disposed to comply with; and, as Anthony Wood intimates, would have changed his religion for that of Rome, but for his wife, who was unwilling to be parted from him, and being thus riveted in the King's measures, he procured him to be elected September 18, and consecrated October 17, 1686, bishop of Oxford, of which he had little enjoyment; for dying March 20, 1687, æt. 47, at Magdalen college, he was buried in the chapel there without any memorial. See more of him among the archdeacons, below. (a) Battely ibid.

(b) See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, fasti, p. 214.

(c) See an account of him and his writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 1119.

(d) He was afterwards lord privy seal, and in 1713, translated to London.

15. THOMAS DAMPIER, S. T. P. who was installed that year; he was a native of Somersetshire, and had been fellow of King's college in Cambridge, and afterwards under-master of Eton school. In 1769 he was promoted to a canonry of Windsor, on which he resigned this stall. He afterwards, among other preferments, was made dean of Durham (ee).

16. BENET STORER, S. T. P. (f) late of Trinity college, Cambridge, was installed in his room, on July 3, 1769, and is the present incumbent of it.

CANONS in the THIRD PREBEND.

1. RICHARD CHAMPION, S. T. P. appointed in the foundation charter of this church, was installed in 1542. He was chaplain to archbishop Cranmer, and died in May, 1543 (g).

2. ROBERT GOLDSON, alias Goldsey, then one of the King's chaplains, was next promoted to this prebend and installed on June 7, 1543; he was likewise chaplain to the princess, afterwards Queen Elizabeth. He was deprived of this prebend in 1554.

3. WILLIAM DARREL was installed in April that year (h); he wrote a Treatise De Castellis Cantie, the manuscript of which is in the library of the Herald's office, in London. He died in 1580.

4. ROBERT HOVENDEN, S. T. P. a native of Kent, was installed that year; he had been fellow of All Souls college, Oxford, and then warden, when taking orders he was entertained as domestic chaplain by archbishop Parker, by whose interest he was promoted to this prebend, and was advanced likewise to prebends in the churches both of Wells and Lincoln. He wrote the Life of archbishop Chicheley, the founder of the above college, and dying on March 25, 1614, was buried in the chapel of it (i).

5. THOMAS JACKSON, S. T. P. a native of Lancashire, was installed in 1614, being at that time rector of Ivechurch, after which he was, at times, rector of Great Chart, Cbilbam, St. George's

(c) See the grant of this prebend, in Harleian Mss. No. 2264, 236.

(ee) In 1771 he was installed prebendary of Durham, which two years afterwards, he exchanged for the mastership of Sherburn hospital, a preferment which he afterwards being then dean of Durham, resigned in favour of his son the present dean of Rochester. He died at Bath in 1777.

(f) So created by the Archbishop, 1770.

(g) By his will, proved in the Prerog. office in Canterbury, on June 20, 1543, it appears, that he had a benefice in London, and was vicar likewise of Eastry. He mentions his friends Drs. Nicholas and Lancelot Ridley; he appears to have been a learned man, by the several books he left among his friends, and mentioned in his will.

(h) He had Q. Mary's letters of presentation on April 2, 1554. Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 382.

(i) See an account of him and his writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 393.

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

in Canterbury, and of Milton, near that city, and likewise minister of Wye, in this county. He found such favour with the puritans, having been a witness against archbishop Laud, who had been his good friend and patron (k), that the state committee allowed him 100*l.* pension (l). He was buried on November 13, 1646, in this cathedral; after which this prebend remained vacant till the restoration, when

6. WILLIAM BELK, S. T. P. was installed prebendary of it in July 1660. He was first rector of Wootton, afterwards of Chilham, and then of Wickham Breux, in this county. He died on August 12, 1676, æt. 74, and was buried in the lower south cross of this cathedral, where his gravestone still remains, and this inscription: Hic jacet GULIELMUS BELK, S. T. P. canonicus hujus ecclesie uxorem habuit Elizabetham Thomæ Hardres de Hardres, in comitatu Cantiano, equitis filiam obiit 12 die Augusti, Anno Domini 1676, ætatis sue 74.

7. THOMAS BELK, S. T. P. son of the former prebendary, succeeded him in his rectory of Wickham, as well as in this stall, in 1676. He died on September 17, 1712 (m), and was buried in the south cross of this cathedral, close to the grave of his father, and this inscription on the same stone: Hic etiam jacet THOMAS BELK, S. T. P. canonicus hujus ecclesie, filius Gulielmi Belk, s. T. P. uxorem habuit Annam Henrici Oxenden, de Deane, in comitatu Cantie, Baronetti filiam obiit 17 die Septembris, An. 1712, ætat. 72.

8. WILLIAM HIGDEN, S. T. P. was the next prebendary, being installed on May 9, 1713. He was rector of St. Paul's church, in Shadwell, and dying on August 28, 1715, was buried in the new chapel at Westminster.

9. THOMAS BOWERS, A. M. succeeded him, and was installed on September 26, 1715. Next year he commenced S. T. P. in 1721 he was promoted to the archdeaconry of this diocese; in 1722 he was consecrated bishop of Chichester, but kept both these preferments, which he held in commendam till his death, which happened on August 13, 1724.

10. WILLIAM AYERST, S. T. P. was installed in this prebend on November 5, 1724. He was educated at Maidstone school (n), and then at University college, Oxford, and afterwards was fellow of Queen's college in Cambridge; in 1703 he attended Lord Raby, afterwards Earl of Stafford, to the court of Berlin, as chaplain and secretary to the embassy; and again to the Hague in 1711, and to the congress of Utrecht in 1712; in the succeeding reign he attended sir Robert Cotton, as chaplain of the embassy, to France. He had been, at times, rector of Gravesend and Sturmouth, and vicar of Northfleet, and was afterwards rector of St. George and St. Mary Magdalen, Canterbury, all which he resigned, and in 1724 was promoted to this prebend. He published an elegant edition of Salust, which he dedicated to sir Joseph Williamson; he died on May 9, 1765, æt. 83, being then rector of North Cray, in this county, and of St. Swithin's, London Stone. He was buried in the middle of the nave of this cathedral (o).

11. RICHARD SUTTON succeeded to this stall on June 1, that same year; he was rector of Aisbam near Newark, at the parsonage of which he died in 1786, and was succeeded by 12. WILLIAM WELFITT, S. T. P. who had this stall conferred on him that year. He was vicar of Walton in Yorkshire, but which he exchanged in 1795, on being collated to the rectory of Hastingleigh and vicarage of Elmsted, in this county; both which he now holds with the vicarage of Ticehurst in Suffex. He is the present prebendary of this stall.

CANONS in the FOURTH PREBEND.

1. RICHARD PARKHURST was nominated in the foundation charter, to be the first canon of this prebend, in which he was installed in 1542. He died in 1558.

2. NICHOLAS HARPSFIELD, LL. D. archdeacon of this diocese, and rector of Saltwood, was promoted to this prebend, in which he was installed on Nov. 1, 1558; but being a Papist, he was, on Q. Elizabeth's accession to the crown in 1559, deprived of all his preferments, and committed prisoner to the Fleet, for denying the Queen's supremacy, where he continued several years (p).

3. THOMAS BEACON, S. T. P. was next installed in this prebend in 1559. He laboured as much to overthrow the power of the Pope, and the church of Rome, as his predecessor had done to promote it; for which purpose he wrote several very bitter treatises. He died in 1567 (q).

4. JOHN BUNGEY, vicar of Lewisbam, was installed on July 7, 1567. He died November 20, 1595, and was buried in Chartam church (r), of which he was rector.

(p) See more of him among the archdeacons.

(q) His will is in Prerog. office, Canterbury, proved on July 3, 1567. See Granger's Biog. Hist. vol. i, p. 156.

(r) He was son of John Bungey, of Filbye in Norfolk; and married Margaret, daughter of Thomas Parker, of Norwich, brother of Mattherw, archbishop of Canterbury, by whom he had eight sons and four daughters. He built the seat of Mysole in Chartam; and bore for his arms—Argent, a lion passant, or; 3 bezants, two in chief, and one in base. There

5. CHARLES

(k) Wood says, the Archbishop had given him an hospital.

(l) Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 7. See an account of him and his writings in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 636.

(m) His will, proved October 18, 1712, is in Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(n) History of Maidstone, p. 164.

(o) He bore for his arms—Argent, on a chevron engrailed gules, in the upper part a sun; in the lower, a falcon volant, or; in the sinister chief, a cross pomal, gules.

5. CHARLES FOTHERBY, B. D. was admitted in 1595, and was next year instituted to the archdeaconry of this diocese, both which dignities he resigned, on being promoted to be dean of this church, in the year 1615.

6. PETER DU MOULIN, S. T. P. (in Latin Molinæus), a native of France, who fled into England for religion sake, was collated by the archbishop to this prebend in 1615. He was the author of several elegant Latin Poems and learned Treatises (s). He died at Sedan, on March 10, 1658, before which time this prebend had remained vacant several years, and it continued so till the restoration of church and state.

7. PETER DU MOLIN, S. T. P. succeeded his father in this stall in June 1660. He was a Doctor of Leyden, and was incorporated both in Oxford and Cambridge, in the same degree. He was chaplain to K. Charles II, and died in Oct. 1684, æt. 84 (t) and upwards, being then rector of Adisham, and was buried in this cathedral. He was the author of several Treatises, and was a zealous Calvinist. His last words, says Wood, which he uttered on his death-bed, were, Since Calvinism is cried down, ætium est de Religione Christi apud Anglos (u).

8. WILLIAM BEVERIDGE, S. T. P. succeeded him, and was installed on November 5, 1684. He was a native of Leicester, educated at St. John's college, Cambridge; he was afterwards rector of St. Peter's, Cornhill, London, and archdeacon of Colchester. He was consecrated bishop of St. Asaph in 1704 (v), on which this prebend became vacant.

9. JOHN MILLS, S. T. P. was installed in it on August 14, 1704; he was principal of Edmund hall, Oxford, and editor of the large Greek Testament. He died in 1707.

10. ELIAS SYDALL, S. T. P. was next installed in this prebend, on July 13, 1707, he had been chaplain to archbishop Tenison, and was rector of Iwechurch and of Mengebam, which he held together by dispensation, and was master of St. John's and St. Nicholas's hospitals. In April 1728, he was promoted to the deanry of this church, on which this prebend became vacant (w).

11. JOHN LYNCH, S. T. P. was installed in it in 1728, in the room of Dr. Sydall, being then rector of Alballows, Bread-street, London, and being afterwards collated to the rectory of Sun-is a pedigree of them in the heraldic visitation of Kent, anno 1619. (s) See Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 265-112.

(t) His will, proved October 13, 1684, is in Prerog. office, Canterbury. By it he gave his book in folio, which had cost him much labour and expence, being the defence of K. James's book against cardinal Perron, englished by him; and also all those books composed by him, for the defence of the church and the King, in the most perilous times; and other books wrote by him for God's holy truth, to the dean and chapter of Canterbury, to be kept in the common library there for ever. He gave to his kinsman, John Maximilian Delangle, D. D. canon of Christ church, Canterbury, the pictures of his father and Dr. Rivitt, and all his manuscripts and writings that do not concern his estate.

12. EDWARD DONNE, L. L. D. was made prebendary in his room in 1734. He was rector of Alballows, Lombard-street, and dying on Jan. 1746, was buried in the north cross isle of this cathedral.

13. THOMAS TANNER, S. T. P. was next collated to it, and was installed in it on Jan. 31, 1746. He was rector of Hadleigh, and of Monks Idleigh, in the county of Suffolk, and died at the parsonage house of the former, on March 11, 1786, æt. 69.

14. THOMAS KING, S. T. P. was made prebendary in his room, and installed on April 1, the same year, which he vacated in 1795, on being presented by his grace the archbishop of Canterbury to the chancellorship of the church of Lincoln, an option. He is also rector of Bladon cum Woodstock, in the county of Oxford. And in his room

15. HOUSTONNE RADCLIFFE, S. T. P. was installed in it the same year, having been domestic chaplain to archbishop Moore. In 1780 he was presented to the rectory of Gillingham, in the deanry of Shoreham, by Brazen Nose college in Oxford, of which society he was a member; and in 1788 was collated by the archbishop to the rectory of Ickham near Canterbury, both which he now holds by dispensation. On Oct. 4, 1796, he preached at St. Paul's church in London, the Conscio ad Clerum, which he afterwards published, by the command of the archbishop. He is the present incumbent of this stall.

CANONS in the FIFTH PREBEND.

1. NICHOLAS RIDLEY was appointed by the foundation charter, to be the first prebendary of it, and was installed in 1542. He was born at Wyllysmoedwick, in Northumberland; first educated at Cambridge and thence removed to Oxford, where he afterwards became fellow of University college in 1521, afterwards master of Pemand chapter of Canterbury, to be kept in the common library there for ever. He gave to his kinsman, John Maximilian Delangle, D. D. canon of Christ church, Canterbury, the pictures of his father and Dr. Rivitt, and all his manuscripts and writings that do not concern his estate.

(u) See an account of him and his writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 112. (v) Ibid. p. 176.

(w) See more of him among the deans, above, p. 600.

(x) See ibid. p. 600.

broke

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

broke ball in Cambridge, vicar of Herne in this county, chaplain to K. Edward VI, and prebendary of Westminster and of this church, and continued so whilst he was bishop of Rochester, in which see he was consecrated on September 5, 1547, and until he was consecrated bishop of London in 1549, when it became vacant. There is a remarkable transaction of his at the visitation of Cambridge, whilst he was bishop of Rochester, recorded in the history of the reformation, which gives an instance of his integrity, and bishop Goodwyn in his account of the bishops of London, has made an honourable mention of him (xx).

2. THOMAS WILLOUGHBYE, dean of Rochester, succeeded him in this prebend, being installed on June 23, 1550. He was educated at Cambridge, where he took the degrees of Doctor, both in law and divinity; he was rector of Bishopborne and Barbam in this county. He was deprived of this, with his other preferments in 1553 (y), and was succeeded in this prebend by

3. RALPH JACKSON, who was installed in 1554. He held this prebend in 1557.

4. RICHARD WILLOUGHBYE.

5. RICHARD COLF, S. T. P. a native of Calais (z), but educated at Christ church, in Oxford, was the next prebendary; being installed in 1585, in which year he was vicar of Milton, near Sittingborne, and then of Herne, in this county. He died on Oct. 7, 1613, and was buried in the north isle, at the upper end of the nave of this cathedral (a), where there is a small mural monument placed to his memory, with this inscription:—Hæc quam vides (Lector) Memorialia in Gratiam Reverendi Viri RICHARDI COLF. Sacræ Theologiæ Doctõris, hujus Ecclesiæ Præbendarii posita hic est, Natus is Calati Angliam petiit, adjuc parvulus, studii Oxonii in Æde Christi: tædium gravis morbi longum patientissime ferens, atq; in ea quam verbo & vita professus est fide ad finem perseverans Circiter LXIII & Incarn: MDCXLVIII die Octob 7 cum ad ejusdem anni in hac Metropolitana Ecclesia vic decanus esset placidissime in Domino obdormivit.

(xx) He was translated to London in 1549, and burnt at Oxford in 1555. See an account of him and his writings in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 94; and his life in Biog. Brit. vol. vii, appendix, p. 150. Fox, vol. iii, p. 434.

(y) He was afterwards bishop of Salisbury.

(z) See an account of him in Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 180. He was son of Amande Colf, of Calais, and afterwards of Canterbury. They bore for their arms—Or, a fess Sable between 3 colts of the second. There is a pedigree of them, in the heraldic visitation of the county of Kent, anno 1619.

(a) His will, proved October 27, 1613, is in Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(b) See the Mercurius Rusticus. Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy, p. 6, pt. 2, p. 141.

(c) Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 152. Wood's Ath. vol. ii, fasti, p. 152. His will was proved in Prerog. office, Canterbury, on May 28, 1680. By it, he ordered his body to be buried in the earth, and the chain which he took from one of the English slave's legs, which he redeemed from An-

6. WILLIAM TUNSTAL succeeded him, being installed in 1613. He died in November 1622, and was buried in this cathedral.

7. ISAAC BARGRAVE, S. T. P. was the next prebendary, being installed on November 6, 1622, from hence he was promoted to the deanry of this church in the year 1625; a further account of whom may be seen, in the list of deans. On his promotion this stall became vacant.

8. THOMAS PASK, S. T. P. was next promoted to it, in 1625. He was master of Clare hall in Cambridge; archdeacon of London, and rector of Much Hadham, in the county of Herts. From all which preferments he was sequestrated in the time of the civil wars; but living till the restoration of K. Charles II, he was then reinstated in them. He died in 1662 (b).

9. JOHN BARGRAVE, S. T. P. succeeded him, and was installed on September 26, 1662. He was educated at Peter House in Cambridge, and afterwards became rector of St. Michael, Harbledown. He died on May 11, 1680, æt. 70 (c), and was buried under a flat marble stone, on the going into the martyrdom.

10. GEORGE THORP, S. T. P. succeeded next, and was installed on May 26, 1680. He was chaplain to archbishop Sancroft, and was rector of both Bishopborne and Ickham. He died in November 1719, and was buried in this cathedral, in the south cross.

11. JOHN HANCOCK, S. T. P. had the prebend conferred on him, and was installed on December 14, 1719. He died, æt. 80, in 1728.

12. JOHN HARRIS, S. T. P. succeeded to this stall in 1728, being dean of St. Buriens, in Cornwall, and was installed on August 2, that year. In 1729 he was consecrated bishop of Landaff, but held this prebend in commendam till his death, in 1738, on which this preferment became vacant.

13. THOMAS TENISON was installed in it, anno 1738. He died in May 1742, and was buried in the nave of this cathedral (d).

14. SPENCER COWPER, S. T. P. second son of giers, to be hung aloft over his grave, with some small motto for a memorandum over him. He gave his cabinet of medals with the antiquities that stood on it, in his study, and all his other greater medallions that hung upon the shelves, unto the library of the cathedral church of Canterbury; to which he gave likewise, the great octangular round marble table, that stood in his dining room; and he gave several books to the library of St. Peter's college in Cambridge, viz. two vols. of Mathiolus upon Dioscorides, in Italian, the cuts all illuminated; a rare piece, presented formerly by the States of Venice to the King of England's eminent ambassador, sir Henry Wootton; and several other valuable books named therein. He gave, to the library of Canterbury all his large and lesser maps of Italy, Old Rome and New, in sheets at large, very fair, together with all the cuts in trunks, of all the antient ruins, the palaces, statues, fountains, the cardinals, soldiers, philosophers, &c. of Italy, France and High Germany.

(d) See an account of both the Tenisons, prebendaries of this church, in Biog. Brit. vol. vi, p. 3929.

William,

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

William, earl Coxper, was preferred to this stall in 1742, being then rector of Fordwich, in this county. In 1746 he was promoted to the deanry of Durham, upon which this stall became vacant.

15. ARTHUR YOUNG, L.L.D. chaplain to the House of Commons, succeeded to it in 1746, being installed on June 28; and in 1748 was inducted to the vicarage of Ixning in Suffolk. He died in 1759.

16. JOHN HEAD, S.T.P. archdeacon of this diocese, was next promoted to this prebend, being installed on July 17, 1759, and on the death of his elder brother in 1768, succeeded him in the title of baronet. He was rector of Pluckley and of St. George's, Canterbury; both which he resigned for the rectory of Ickham, in this county, in the chancel of which church he was buried. He died on December 4, 1769 (e).

17. JOHN PALMER, S.T.P. (f) late of Jesus college, Cambridge, chaplain to the House of Commons, succeeded him, in the same month and year. He was afterwards presented to the rectory of St. Switbin's, London Stone. He exchanged this prebend with his successor, in 1781, for the rectory of Adisbam, which was conferred on his son; upon which

18. JOHN LYNCH, L.L.D. second son of Dr. John Lynch, dean of Canterbury, was promoted to it that year, being installed on April 28, 1781. He is rector of St. Dionis Back church, London, and archdeacon of this diocese, to which he was collated on November 7, 1788, and is the present incumbent of this stall (g).

CANONS in the SIXTH PREBEND.

1. JOHN MENYS, a monk of the late suppressed priory, was nominated in K. Henry VIII's charter of foundation, the first prebendary in it, in which he was installed in 1542. He died in 1549, and was buried in the north isle of this cathedral (h).

2. EDMUND CRANMER, brother to the archbishop, being then archdeacon of Canterbury and provost of Wingham, was on March 4, 1549, promoted to this prebend likewise; and had besides the rich benefices of Cliff and Ickham conferred on him. In the year 1554, he was deprived of all his preferments, and forced to fly into Germany, to save his life, for being married; and is said to have died abroad in 1571 (i).

3. ROBERT COLENS or Collins, L.L.B. was admitted canon, and installed on April 12, 1554, in his room (k). He was commissary to the archbishop and official to the archdeacon. He was deprived of this prebend in 1559.

(e) See more of him among the archdeacons.

(f) He was so created by the Archbishop in 1770.

(g) See more of him among the archdeacons.

(h) His will is in Prerog. office, Cant. proved March 8, anno 4 Edw. VI. He desired to be buried in the north isle of the cathedral, where the first mass was wont to be said.

4. ALEXANDER NOWEL, S.T.P. was the next prebendary, being installed on February 14, 1560. Upon Q. Mary's accession to the throne, he was one of those who fled into Germany, and returned again in the beginning of the next reign of Q. Elizabeth, when he had several ecclesiastical dignities conferred upon him; for on February 14, 1560, as above-mentioned, he was constituted canon of this church, and of the church of Westminster; but in the year 1564, being promoted to the deanry of St. Paul's, in London, he seems to have resigned both his prebendal stalls. He was buried in the church of St. Paul.

5. JOHN PORY, S.T.P. succeeded dean Nowel in this prebend, in which he was installed on May 1, 1564. He resigned it in 1567.

6. JOHN HILL, alias Bury, of Christ church in Oxford, who had succeeded dean Nowel in the prebend of Westminster, resigning it in 1567, was installed prebendary of this church June 29th that year, and his predecessor John Pory was admitted to the canonry of Westminster in his room; so there seems to have been a mutual exchange of these dignities. He was afterwards vicar of Minster in the isle of Tbanet, and dying in 1597, was buried in this cathedral (l).

7. WILLIAM WHITAKER, S.T.P. Regius professor and master of St. John's college in Cambridge, succeeded on May 10, 1597, and died in the same year.

8. ADRIAN SARAVIA, S.T.P. prebendary of Gloucester, was, on the death of Dr. Whitaker, admitted canon of this church, on December 6, 1597. He was a native of Flanders, being born in the town of Hedin, in Artois; he received his doctor's degree at Leyden in Holland, and about the year 1582 became preacher to the French church there, and about five or six years afterwards, came into England, when he was incorporated in the university of Oxford, and taught school in several places, particularly the free-school at Southampton; but growing in esteem for his learning, he was preferred to a prebend in the church of Gloucester, then to one in this church, Archbishop Whitgift, the Lord Chancellor Hatton, and the Lord Treasurer Cecil, were his singular good friends and benefactors. He had also contracted an intimate familiarity with the venerable Mr. Hooker, then rector of Bishopsborne, not far from this place, with whom he held several conferences concerning the ecclesiastical hierarchy. Isaac Casaubon, a contemporary canon of this church, a man of solid learning and judgment, speaks with high commen-

(i) See more of him among the archdeacons, below.

(k) He was presented that year. See Rymer's Fœdera, vol. xv, p. 382.

(l) His wife Mary survived him, and dying at the latter end of the same year, was buried near him.

dation

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

dation of Saravia, for the book which he wrote on episcopacy (m), in a manuscript diary of his own life. He was vicar of Lewisham, and rector of Great Chart, and in 1601 was further promoted to a prebendary of Westminster; he was a grave and venerable divine. Dying on January 25, 1612, et. 82 (n), he was buried in the north isle of the nave of this cathedral, where there is a small monument, against the wall, erected to his memory. He was twice married; first to Catherine D'Alliz, who died in 1605, and lies buried by him; secondly to Margaret de Wyttis, who survived him, and erected this monument to his memory, on which is this inscription: Dilecto conjugi HADRIANO de SARAVIA, Margareta Wiits, adjuc superstes qua cum ille nuptias secundo inuit, annosq; sex pie & feliciter vixit. Memoriale hoc sincerum licet exiguum amoris sui quasi pignus ponendum curavit: Fuit is dum vixit Theologiae doctor egregius, Cathedralis hujus ecclesiae prebendarius, meritissimus vir in omni literarum genere, eximius pietate, probitate, gravitate, suavitate morum insignis; scriptis clarus, fide plenus, & bonis operibus dives valde, natione Belga, natus Hedinae Artesiae rexit quondam Lugduni Batavorum, Angliae Petiit primo sub initium Regni beatæ memorie Elizabethæ. Doctor (Lugduni ante Creatus) Oxoniae post incorporatus est.

In Memoria Æterna erit Justus 1612.

Near the monument, on his gravestone, was once this inscription, long since obliterated. Hic Inhumata Jacent Corpora ADRIANI SARAVIA, ejus prius nuptæ CATHERINÆ D'ALLEZ. Obiit illa placide in Domino Anno Ætatis suæ 82 Salutis nostræ 1612, Jan. 25. Hæc 2 Febr. 1605, Anno a Nuptiis 15.

9. JOHN ABBOT, S. T. P. succeeded him and was installed in 1612. He died in August 1615, and was buried in this cathedral.

10. JOHN SANDFORD, S. T. P. rector of Ivechurch and Snave, was collated to this prebend by archbishop Abbot, whose chaplain he was, in the year 1615. He was the son of Richard Sandford, of Chard, in Somersetshire, of which county he was a native (o), and was educated at Baliol and afterwards at Magdalen college, in Oxford, of which last he was chaplain. He was a good scholar, a sound divine, master of several languages, and had a taste for poetry; he wrote an introduction to the Spanish, Italian and French tongues. He died on September 24, 1629, et. 60 (p), and was buried in the north isle of the nave of this church, where his gravestone and inscription on it, remained till very lately as follows: Depositum Venerabilis JOHANNIS SANDFORD, viri inter literatos paucis, nulli inter liberales Secundi, Deo hic quasi ab Eleemosynarii, viduis Mariti, orphanis Patroni, Quem tu, Lector, rudes instruendo, esurientes pascendo, nudos vestiendo imitare et mercede nunquam peritura frueri obiit 24 Septembris

Anno {
Salutis 1629
Ætatis 60
Canonicatus 12

11. JOHN JEFFRYS, S. T. P. was installed in his room in 1629, being then rector of Old Romney; he was living in 1645.

12. JOHN AUCHER, S. T. P. was, on the restoration of K. Charles II, admitted to this prebend, being installed on July 9, 1660. Among other charities, he left by his will, a legacy towards the support of clergymen's widows for ever, and was besides, a benefactor to Alballows church in Lombard-street, London (q). Having filled this stall for the space of forty years, he died on March 12, 1700, et. 82, and was buried in the north isle of the nave of this church (r), where his gravestone, with this inscription, remained till very lately. JOHANNES AUCHER, S. T. P. Qui ob fidem Deo & Ecclesie & Regi Egregie prestanti cum reduce Carolo II. ad Canonicatum hujus Ecclesie admissus est quem ultro 40 annos excoluit & redditus 80 librarum viduis clericorum alendis in perpetuam reliquit obiit 12 Martii anno Domini 1700 etatis 82.

13. THOMAS GREEN, S. T. P. was next promoted to it, being installed on March 19, 1700. He was born in the city of Norwich, and educated at Benet college in Cambridge, of which he became first fellow, and afterwards master. In 1695 he became vicar of Minster in Thanet, and in 1708 rector of Adisham, and was the same year promoted to the archdeaconry of this diocese. In 1716 he was inducted to the vicarage of St. Martin's in the Fields, Westminster; after which he was consecrated, on October 8, 1721, bishop of Norwich, and thence in 1723 translated to Ely, on the former of which promotions this stall became vacant (s).

14. EDWARD WAKE, S. T. P. was next collated to this prebend, being installed on Nov. 9,

(m) His works were collected together and printed at London in 1611.

(n) See Walton's Lives, p. 215, 256. Newcourt's Rep. p. 927. Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 744. Strype's Annals, vol. i, p. 524, vol. iii, p. 283. Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 140. His will, proved January 21, 1612, is in Prerog. office, Cant.

(o) He bore for his arms—Argent, a chevron between 3 mullets sable; an amulet or, on the chevron, for difference. There is a pedigree of them in the heraldic visitation of the county of Kent, anno 1619.

(p) His will is in Prerog. office, Canterbury. He gave in it a legacy of books to the library of Christ church, heretofore demolished, and then intended by the governors of it to be repaired and rebuilt. See an account of him and his writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 540.

(q) See Strype's Survey, B. 2, p. 156.

(r) His will, proved March 27, 1701, is in Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(s) See more of him among the archdeacons of this diocese.

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

1721; he was likewise a prebendary of the church of Lincoln (t), and rector of Whetbamsted, in the co. Hertford. He died at Canterbury on November 7, 1732, æt. 68, and was buried in this cathedral, in the south cross isle.

15. EDWARD WAKE, A.M. succeeded next on his father's decease to this stall, in November 1732, being fellow of All Soul's college, in Oxford. He died in 1738, and was buried in the south isle of this cathedral.

16. SAMUEL STEDMAN, S. T. P. was collated to this stall in 1739. In 1756 he was promoted to the archdeaconry of Norfolk, and died in 1768.

17. GEORGE BERKELEY, L. L. D. succeeded him and was installed in 1768, being the second son of the well-known bishop of Cloyne, in Ireland. In 1764 he was collated by the archbishop to the valuable rectory of Acton, in Middlesex, which, with his patron's leave, he exchanged for this stall. He was first vicar of East-Garston, then of Bray, and in 1768 was inducted to the vicarage of Cookham, which preferments all lay in Berkshire; the latter he held with the vicarage of East Peckham, in this county, but resigned it on being promoted to St. Clement's Danes, in London, which, having resigned Cookham, he held with the vicarage of Tycehurst in Suffex. He likewise was chancellor of the collegiate church of Brecon in Wales. He died on Jan. 13, 1795, æt. 61, and was buried in Christ church in Oxford, in the same vault with the bishop his father.

18. GEORGE MOORE, A.M. was his successor, being installed on Feb. 12, following. He is son of the most Rev. the archbishop of Canterbury, rector of Brasted, in this county, and is the present incumbent of this stall.

CANONS in the SEVENTH PREBEND.

I. HUGO GLAZIER, a friar minor of Oxford, and B. D. was nominated in K. Henry VIII.'s foundation charter, the first prebendary in this

(t) Willis's Cath. vol. ii, p. 206, 233.

(u) Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 61.

(v) His will, proved Feb. 23, 1569, is in the Preg. office, Canterbury, in which he desires to be buried in the chapter-house beside Mr. Newton; he was then vicar of Minster, and parson of Kingston. It appears by his will, that he was owner of several houses and lands in and about Calais, in one of which he had dwelt, all of which he bequeathed to different persons, should that place ever become English again.

(w) His will, proved January 13, 1605, is in Preg. off.

(x) From which see he was translated in 1608, to that of Lincoln. He died in 1613, and was buried in the chancel of Bugden church. Willis's Cath. vol. ii, p. 68.

(y) See Strype's Annals, vol. i, p. 567.

(z) John Sympson, S. T. P. was inducted, in 1619, to the rectory of Aldington in this county; and in 1626 held it by dispensation with Sandhurst. Rym. Fæd. vol. xviii, p. 874; but whether the above-mentioned person, I know not.

(a) His father Nicholas died in 1609, æt. 60; and Nicholas, son of John, above-mentioned, died in 1680, æt.

stall, and was installed in 1542. He was rector of Deal, and succeeded Dr. Harvey, as commissary-general of Calais, to archbishop Cranmer. He was a great favourer of the reformation, and preached the first Lent sermon at St. Paul's cross, after K. Edward VI.'s accession to the crown (u); he died in 1557, upon which

2. JOHN BUTLER was installed in it that same year and died in 1569. He was buried in the chapter-house here (v).

3. RALPH CAVELAR succeeded to it, and was installed on January 27, 1569. He died on January 4, 1606, but is supposed to have resigned this prebend some time before, for

4. JOHN WINTER was the next prebendary of this stall, and was likewise rector of Southfleet and dying in Jan. 1606, was buried in this church (w).

5. WILLIAM BARLOW, S. T. P. sometime fellow of Trinity-hall in Cambridge, was next installed in this prebend, and was likewise prebendary of St. Paul's and of Westminster, and dean of Chester, whence he was promoted to the see of Rochester (x); he held this prebend in commendam, till the year 1608, when he was translated to Lincoln, when, on its becoming vacant

6. BENJAMIN CARRIER, S. T. P. was installed in it in 1609. He died in 1614 (y), and was succeeded by

7. JOHN SYMPSON, S. T. P. of Corpus Christi college in Oxford, the son of Nicholas Sympson, a prebendary likewise of this church, who was installed in 1614 (z). He died in May 1630, æt. 51, and lies buried with his father Nicholas, above-mentioned, in the middle of the nave of it (a).

8. THOMAS WESTLY, S. T. P. was his successor here, being installed on May 8, (b) that same year. He was rector of Great Chart in this county, and minister of the Savoy church in London, when dying about 1639 (c), he was buried in the latter church.

58; being at first bred a merchant (as the inscription on the grave-stone informed us, which was put down after his death, and removed on the new pavement of the nave), and afterwards retired into the country, where he remained quietly, during the confusion of the rebellion. They all three lie buried near each other here. Wood, in his Athenæ, vol. i, fasti, p. 180, says, by mistake, that this Nicholas was likewise a canon of this church, but he never was in orders. It was his grand-father Nicholas, who was the canon, of whom mention will be made below, among those of the eighth prebend, and the inscription on the grave-stone inserted. His will, proved June 1, is in Preg. court, Canterbury, by which he appears to have been possessed of different estates, in several parishes in this county, and mentions the lease of his house wherein he then dwelt.

(b) He had the King's letters patent, for the next prebend that should become vacant, dated August 13, 1628. Rym. Fæd. vol. xix, p. 43.

(c) Ibid. vol. xx, p. 387-5. See Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 252.

9. SAMUEL

9. SAMUEL BAKER, S. T. P. was next installed in this prebend, in May 1639 (d). He was of Christ college in Cambridge, afterwards chaplain to bishop Juxon, rector of St. Mary Hill and St. Christopher's, in London, prebendary of St. Paul's, and canon of Windsor, but being deprived in the time of the rebellion, by the Puritans, as being an Arminian, this stall continued vacant till the restoration of church and monarchy, before which he was deceased (e), and

10. THOMAS PEIRCE, S. T. P. was, on the restoration, in 1660, installed in it on July 9. He was born at the Devizes in Wiltshire; fellow of Magdalen college in Oxford, from which he was ejected by the parliament visitors in 1648, after which he became rector of Brington in Northamptonshire. After the restoration, he was made King's chaplain, and canon of this church, as above-mentioned, and created S. T. P. and prebendary of the church of Lincoln. In the year 1661 he was made president of Magdalen college, which he resigned on being promoted to the deanry of Sarum, but he seems to have held this prebend in commendam, till his death on March 28, 1691, being buried in the church-yard of North Tidworth in Wiltshire (f); upon which

11. ZACHEUS ISHAM, S. T. P. was next admitted prebendary in it, and installed on May 19, 1691. He was born at Barby, in co. of Northampton, was student of Christ church in Oxford, afterwards chaplain to bishop Compton, rector of Bishopsgate in London, and prebendary of St. Paul's, and lastly of this church. He died in July 1705 (g).

12. HENRY JAMES, S. T. P. was next installed in it on August 4, 1705. He was president of Queen's college in Cambridge, and Regius Professor of divinity there. He died on March 15, 1716, and was buried in the chapel of that college.

13. WILLIAM BRADSHAW, A. M. succeeded him in it, being installed on March 24, 1716. He was a native of Abergavenny, and then rector of Fawley, in co. Hants, afterwards S. T. P. He resigned this stall in July 1723, being made first canon, and next year dean of Christ church, Oxford, and afterwards bishop of Bristol (h).

14. JOHN CLARK, S. T. P. succeeded him, and was installed on August 15, 1723. He was afterwards made dean of Salisbury, upon which this stall became vacant.

15. SAMUEL LISLE, S. T. P. was installed in 1728. He was then archdeacon of this diocese,

(d) He had the King's letter of presentation on May 18, 1639. Rym. Fœd. vol. xx, p. 387. (e) He was living in 1645.

(f) See an account of him, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 226. Newc. Rep. p. 215. Walk. Suff. Clergy, pt. 2, p. 7.

(g) See an account of him and his writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 401, 858.

in the list of whom, below, more may be seen of him. In 1744 he was promoted to the bishopric of St. Asaph, on which this stall became vacant, and

16. FRANCIS WALWYN, S. T. P. succeeded to it in 1744; he was educated at Maidstone school. He was at times rector of Great Mongebam, St. Mary Breadman Canterbury, and East Peckham, which he resigned, on being collated to that of Adisham, in this county. He died on May 19, 1770, at his prebendal house, and was buried in the church at Maidstone (i).

17. WILLIAM BARFORD, S. T. P. chaplain to the House of Commons, succeeded to this prebend in 1770, being installed on June 22. He was educated at Eton, whence he became fellow of King's college, and was afterwards elected public orator of the university of Cambridge in 1763, and next year instituted to the rectory of Pilton, in co. Northampton, which he vacated, and became afterwards rector of Fordingbridge, in co. Hants, which he resigned for that of Kimpton in Hertfordshire, of which he was rector at his death, as well as of Alballows, Lombard-street, London, and fellow of Eton college. He died at his parsonage house of Kimpton, in Nov. 1792, universally respected by all learned and good men; upon which

18. JOHN LUXMOORE, A. M. was promoted to this stall that year, being nominated on February 14, 1793, and was installed in the same month. In June 1795 he had the degree of S. T. P. conferred on him by the archbishop; in 1796 he was presented to the vicarage of Tenterden, which he now holds with the rectory of St. George the martyr, Queen's-square; and is the present incumbent of this stall.

CANONS in the EIGHTH PREBEND.

1. WILLIAM HUNT, alias HADLEY, formerly a monk, and at the dissolution of this monastery, sub-prior of it, was named in the charter of this foundation, the first prebendary in this stall, in which he was installed in 1542. He died in 1545.

2. JOHN PONET, S. T. P. a native of this co. was presented to this stall on Jan. 29, 1545. He was chaplain to the King, who granted him at his request, a licence to travel with two servants, three horses, twenty pounds in money and other necessaries; on June 28, 1550, he was consecrated bishop of Rochester, in the list of the bishops, of which more may be seen of him in vol. ii. of the History of Kent; but he had licence to hold this stall with his other preferments (k) in commendam; he vacated this preferment, and

3. PETER ALEXANDER, a native of Arras,

(h) He died on December 16, 1732, æt. 60, and was buried in Bristol cathedral.

(i) See History of Maidstone, p. 164.

(k) Viz. the vicarage of Ashford in this county, and the rectories of St. Michael, Crooked-lane, London; and of Towen, in Merionethshire.

was was installed in his room, on April 14, 1551. He was deprived of this prebend in the reign of Q. Mary, when

4. JOHN WARUM was presented in his room by the Queen, on May 1, 1554. He died in 1558, and was buried in this church.

5. J. KNIGHT, for so he appears to have written his name; but what his Christian name was further, I cannot find, seems to have succeeded him in this stall, but when, or the year in which he died, I have not found; however, on the accession of Q. Eliz. Peter Alexander, the former incumbent, was reinstated, and had the Queen's licence for non-residence, dated July 29, 1560, anno 2 Eliz. (1). When he died, I know not.

6. STEPHEN NEVINSON, LL. D. the archbishop's commissary, was the next prebendary in this stall. He obtained a licence of plurality, dated Nov. 1, 1570, to hold three benefices at the same time. He died in October 1581 (m).

7. NICHOLAS SYMPSON, S. T. P. of Corpus Christi college in Oxford, father of John, prebendary in the seventh stall above-mentioned, was next admitted canon in this stall. He died in 1609, æt. 60, and was buried in the middle of the nave of this cathedral, as mentioned above (n). The inscription on his grave-stone, lately removed into the lower south cross, is as follows:

NICOLAS & JOHN SYMPSON.

Exuvie { NICOLAI
 { JOHANNIS } SYMPSON.
 { NICOLAI }

Avi, Patris, Filii, in spem lætæ Resurrectionis depositæ, Avus & Pater uterq; S. T. P. & hujus Ecclesiæ Canonici obiere hic An. Dom. 1630 ætat. 51. ille An. Dom. 1609. Ætat. 60. Filius primis annis Mercaturæ additus Flagrante Bello civili, Rus recepit, vitamq; degit splendide. Vir acri ingenio, singulari industria, Pius, Probus, Pacificus, Privatim illibatus, Publice probatissimus, Regi & Ecclesiæ fidelis: Amicus integer, charus omnibus & ab omnibus desideratus: Quem nemo non honorosissime appellat: obiit vero Aug. 22. An. Dom. 1680. ætat. 58.

8. ISAAC CASAUBON came into England on an invitation from K. James I, and was by him promoted to this canonry, in which he was installed on January 16, 1610. K. James granted to him, Jan. 3, in his 8th year, anno 1611, letters of denizen, and by his special mandate, dated a few days afterwards to the dean and chapter, reciting that he had by his letters patent, dated Dec. 17, in his 8th year, anno 1611, granted to him, being a man very deserving in every kind of literature, a prebend or canonry in the church of

(1) See Rym. Fæd. vol. xv, p. 599.

(m) His will, proved October 12, that year, is in Preg. office, Canterbury.

(n) Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 180. His will, proved Feb. 27, 1609, is in Prerog. office, Cant. He bore for his arms—Per bend, a lion rampant counterchanged, or and sable.

Canterbury, which Nicholas Sympson, deceased, had lately enjoyed; he therefore granted to him of his especial grace, &c. that although the said Isaac Casaubon was a layman and married, yet he should enjoy the same and every profit belonging to it, &c. and although he should not keep any kind of residence there whatsoever, he commanded them to allow him a stall in the quire, and a place and voice in the chapter, as was accustomed; after which, on the 19th of that month, the King granted him a pension of 300*l.* per ann. during pleasure, mentioning, that he had invited him hither out of France, to be useful as he should see cause, for the service of the church, and had granted him the above for his better support and maintenance (nn). He died in 1614.

9. WILLIAM KINGSLEY, S. T. P. fellow of All Souls college in Oxford, succeeded him in this stall in 1614, and was likewise archdeacon of this diocese. He died on January 29, 1647, and was buried in the lower south cross, or wing of this cathedral, where there is a mural monument erected to his memory, the inscription on which, as well as a further account of him, may be seen below, among the archdeacons of this diocese.

10. JOHN READING, B. D. succeeded him in this stall. He was born in Buckinghamshire, educated in Magdalen college in Oxford, and afterwards of Alban hall; he afterwards became minister of St. Mary's church in Dover, where he was plundered and imprisoned, and afterwards banished. In the year 1642 archbishop Laud, then in the Tower, through the King's letter, collated him to the rectory of Chartham, and in 1644 he was nominated to this prebend, after which he was presented to the rectory of Cheriton, but was imprisoned again in Dover Castle, and then in that of Leeds, from which last he obtained his release, but he was sequestered from the whole of his preferments, and continued so till the restoration, when he congratulated King Charles II, in an eloquent oration, on his landing at Dover, and was at the same time restored to his ecclesiastical benefices, and to this dignity. He died at Chartham on October 26, 1667, and was buried in the church there (o).

11. EDMUND CASTEL, S. T. P. was next admitted to this stall in November 1667. He was celebrated for his knowledge in the Oriental languages, and was Arabic professor in the university of Cambridge, where he published the Lexicon Heptaglotton. He died in 1685.

12. CHARLES ELSTOB, S. T. P. was next in-

His pedigree is in the heraldic visitation of the county of Kent, anno 1619.

(nn) Rym. Fæd. vol. xvi, p. 707, 709, 710.

(o) See an account of him and his writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 406. Nich. Hist. Libr. p. 169. Walker's Sufferings of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 8.

stated

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

stalled in this canonry, in his room, in December 1685. He died, and was buried in this cathedral in November 1721, in the north cross isle, near the monument of archbishop Peckham.

13. SAMUEL HOLCOMBE, S. T. P. was nominated to it in January 1722, and in 1742 was promoted to a prebend likewise in the church of Worcester. He died in 1761, æt 95, and was buried in this cathedral, where, in the south cross, there is a monument erected to his memory, with this inscription:—H.S.E.—SAMUEL HOLCOMBE, S. T. P.—Hujusce Ecclesie Canonicus; Vir sane integritate morum Simplex, Et in Sacris imprimis eruditus; Veram Strenue Coluit Religionem, Doctrina & Exemplo Christianus. ob. Apr. die 1 mo Æt. anno 96. Salutis 1761—SAMUEL HOLCOMBE, A. M. Eccl. Wigorn Canon et FRANCISCA Filii ejus Hoc monumentum posuere (p).

14. GEORGE SECKER, S. T. P. nephew to the archbishop, late of Christ church in Oxford, was next installed in it, in 1761. He had a dispensation in 1751, to hold the vicarage of Yardley, in the county of Hertford, with that of Sanddown in the same county; and in 1754 he was installed in the prebend of Willeston in St. Paul's cathedral, and next year had a dispensation to hold the vicarage of Yardley, above mentioned, with the rectory of St. Mildred, Bread-street, London. He resigned his prebend of Canterbury in 1766, on being made a canon residentiary of St. Paul's, being at that time rector of Brasted in this county, and of Alballores Thames-street, London.

15. HENEAGE DERING, S. T. P. son of the dean of Rippon, descended from a collateral branch of the Derings of Surrenden, succeeded next to this stall in 1766. He was first vicar of Tadcaster; and in 1752, was presented to the rectory of Burley on the Hill, near Stamford. He was in 1754, for some small time perpetual curate of Wye in this county, which he resigned the same year; he was afterwards promoted to the rectory of Milton Keynes, in the county of Buckingham, which he holds at this time, and is the present incumbent of this stall.

CANONS in the NINTH PREBEND.

I. WILLIAM GARDINER, alias SANDWICH, ONE

(p) Near the above, is a monument to the memory of his wife, and this inscription:—Juxta hoc marmor situm est—Quicquid mori potuit FRANCISCE HOLCOMBE—Reverendi Viri S. HOLCOMBE. S. T. P.—Et hujus Ecclesie Canonici, Uxor is—Femine prudentis, piæ, pudicæ—non solum Conjugi suo dilectissimæ,—sed et ab omnibus plurime æstimandæ—Parentes habuit—GALFRIDUM HETHERINGTON, —LONDINENSEM Generosum—Et SUSANNEM ex antiqua WILMENORUM Stirpe,—In agro EBORACENSI oriundam E quatuor quos enixa est liberis,—SUSANNA præmaturâ morte est abrepta,—FRANCISCA, SAMUEL, ANNA,—superfunt—Post graves et longos Corporis Dolores—Quos tamen invicta patientia—Reddidit leviores—Tandem xxx die Mensis Martii—Anno Dom 1725, ætatis 62—Pie ac Religiose, prout vixerat, obiit—Plorantibus undiq; amicis.

VOL. IV.

7 S

of the monks of the late priory, and warden of Canterbury college in Oxford at the time of the dissolution of it (q), was named in the foundation charter of this church, to be the first prebendary in this stall, to which he was admitted in 1542 (r). He died on the feast of St. Michael in 1545, and was buried in the nave of this cathedral, where his grave-stone remained till very lately, but the inscription has been long since obliterated; Weever has given his epitaph, as follows (s):

*Heus tu sistito gradum, qui Obambulas,
Et quod Scriptum est legito Gulielmi
Gardneri Candidati Theologie
Hujus et Ecclesie olim Prebendarii
Ossa hoc clauduntur sub marmore
Obiit qui Sancti Michaelis . . . luce
Anno post Milesimum & Quingentesimum
Quadragesimo quarto cui det
Christus Vitam & tibi Lector perennem.*

2. WILLIAM DEVENISH (t), L.L.B. one of the King's chaplains, was installed on Nov. 26, 1545. He was some time fellow of Merton college, then provost of Queen's college in Oxford, and canon of Windsor, and was chaplain to K. Edward VI; but he was deprived of all his preferments in 1553, for being married (u).

3. HUGH alias HENRY TURNBULL, S. T. P. was next installed in his room, on March 1, in the 1st year of Q. Mary, anno 1553 (v).

4. GEORGE BOLEYN, S. T. P. dean of Lichfield and a prebendary of Chichester, was installed next in it, on December 21, 1566. He died in January, at the beginning of the year 1603, and was buried in Lichfield cathedral, of which he then continued dean (w).

5. WILLIAM MASTER, S. T. P. was installed on January 25, 1603. He died in May 1628 (x).

6. MERIC CASAUBON, S. T. P. the son of the learned Isaac Casaubon, prebendary in the eighth prebend as above-mentioned, was next promoted to it, being installed on June 19, 1628. He was born at Geneva in 1599, and being brought into England at eleven years of age, received his education at Christ church in Oxford, of which he became student, and received the King's letters

(q) A specimen of his learning may be seen, in Strype's Memorials of archbishop Cranmer, p. 103.

(r) His will is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(s) Funeral Monuments, p. 237.

(t) In a manuscript of this church, he is called Thomas.

(u) Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 65.

(v) Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 382.

(w) See Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 400. Strype's Annals, vol. iii. p. 174.

(x) His will is in the Prerog. office, in Canterbury. In it he mentions his lease of his new house, in the common garden; and gives five marks towards the amending of the highways, on Boughton-hill, to be paid whenever the ways thereabouts should effectually go in hand to be amended; and gives towards

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

of denizen, dated January 13, 1625 (y). He was grandson of the famous and learned Henry, and great-grandson of Robert Stephens. He was first beneficed at Bledon in Somersetshire, and afterwards was vicar of Minster and of Monkton in the isle of Thanet (z), the latter of which he resigned for the rectory of Ickham in this county. He died in July 1671, æt. 75 (a); having enjoyed this prebend near forty-six years; and was buried in the lower south cross of this cathedral, where there is a marble monument erected to his memory, with the following inscription:

Sta & Venerare viator
Hic Mortales Immortalis spiritus exuvias deposuit
MERICUS CASAUBONUS.

Magni Nominis }
Eruditiq; Generis } par Heres :

Quippe Qui { Patrem Isaacum Casaubonum } habuit
 { Auum Henricum Stephanum }
 { Proavum Robertum Stephanum }

Heu quos viros! Quæ Literarum lumina! Quæ ævi sui decora! Ipse Eruditionem per tot erudita capita traductam excepit, Excoluit, & ad Pietatis (quæ in ejus pectore Regina Sedebat) ornamentum & incrementum feliciter consecravit: Rempublicamq; literariam multiplici rerum & linguarum supellectile locupletavit. Vir, incertum, Doctior aut melior, in Pauperes Liberalitate, in amicos utilitate, in omnes humanitate, in acutissimis Longissimi Morbi tormentis Christiana Patientia insignissimus Gaudeat primaria hæc Ecclesia Primariis Canonicis CASAUBONIS ambobus, qui eundem in Eruditione quo ipsa in Ecclesiarum Serie, ordinem obtinuerent. Obiit noster pridie Idus Julii anno 1671, ætatis suæ 75, Canonicatus Sui 46.

7. LEWIS HERAULT, S. T. P. was the next prebendary in it, being installed on August 25, 1671. He died in 1682 and was buried in Nov. that year in this cathedral (b).

8. JAMES JEFFERIES, S. T. P. brother to then sir George Jefferies, was installed in this prebend, on November 18, 1682, and dying on Sept. 4, 1689, æt. 40 (c), was buried in the martyrdom, or lower north cross of this cathedral, where his gravestone, with this inscription, yet remains: Sub hoc marmore depositæ sunt reliquiæ JACOBI JEF- wards the choir of Christ church 20l. which he had lent them, towards the buying of the patent of Thornden.

(y) Rym. Fæd. vol. xviii.

(z) See Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 8.

(a) See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 485; for an account of him and his writings, and his life, in Biog. Brit. vol. ii, p. 1192. His will, proved on August 8, 1671, is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury. There is a particular and curious account in it, but of too great length to be inserted here, of his father's and his own Mss. many of which he gave to the public library of the university of Oxford, and others to that of Christ church, in Canterbury; to which latter he gave his old coins of gold, silver, brass and copper. He gave 20l. to the same library. To the buildings of Christ church in Oxford 100l. and legacies to his two parishes of Ickham, and Minster in Thanet.

FERIES, S. T. P. bujus Ecclesiæ Canonici Qui obiit 4. Septembris Anno Domini 1689, ætatis suæ 40.

9. THOMAS NIXON, S. T. P. was next installed in it on Nov. 4, 1689. He died in Nov. 1712, and was buried at Queenhithe in London, of which church he was rector (d).

10. JOHN GRANDORGE, S. T. P. succeeded next to it, being installed on May 4, 1613. He was fellow of Magdalen college in Oxford, where he died in Jan. 1732. By his will he bequeathed to Magdalen college 500l. to this cathedral 500l. for repairs and ornaments; to the corporation of the sons of the clergy the like sum, to be distributed among the daughters of poor clergymen, besides many other charitable legacies.

11. THOMAS GOOCH, S. T. P. was next installed in 1732. He was archdeacon of Essex, master of Caius college in Cambridge and rector of St. Clement's, Eastcheap, in London. He died in 1738.

12. JULIUS DEEDES, A. M. was next promoted to this stall in 1739. He was rector of Great Mongebam and of Dimchurch, in this co. and died on April 19, 1752, and was buried in the family vault in Hytbe church.

13. WILLIAM TATTON, S. T. P. succeeded him in it in 1754. He was afterwards vicar of East Peckham in this county, and rector of Ratberfield, in the county of Suffex; the former of which he resigned on being presented to that of St. Dionis Backchurch, London, and was likewise a prebendary of the church of York. He died on Feb. 11, 1782, and was buried in the family vault of the Lynch's at Staple near Sandwich (e).

14. RICHARD FARMER, S. T. P. was made the next prebendary in this stall, on February 23 that year. He was a native of the town of Leicester, and became master of Emanuel college, Cambridge, and Margaret preacher in that university, which latter he soon afterwards resigned. On March 22, 1788, he was promoted to be a canon residentiary of St. Paul's church in London, on which he resigned this prebend, and

15. SAMUEL RYDER WESTON, B. D. rector of Marwood, in the diocese of Exeter, was installed on April 19, 1788, in his room, and he is the present incumbent of this prebend.

(b) His will is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(c) His will is in the same office, proved September 19, that year. In it he mentions his nephews, sir Griffith Jeffreys, and John, lord Jeffreys, baron of Winton, and his brother sir Thomas Jeffreys. He gave to this library of Christ church in Canterbury 20l. worth of books, to be taken out of his study; and to Jesus college in Oxford 20l. to be laid out in books for their library. He was possessed of several estates in the county of Derby.

(d) See Newcourt's Repert. p. 488.

(e) He married Sarah, daughter of Dr. John Lynch, late dean of Canterbury, by whom he left a daughter and heir, married to William-Drake Bruckman, of Beechborough, Essex.

CANONS in the TENTH PREBEND.

1. JOHN MYLLYS, alias WARHAM, was one of the monks of the late dissolved priory, and was named in the charter of foundation by King Henry VIII, the first canon in this stall, to which he was admitted in 1542, and was afterwards rector of Chartbam and Ringwold, in this county. He died in 1565, and was buried in the nave of this cathedral (f).

2. WILLIAM KING, B. D. succeeded him, being installed on January 19, 1565. He was first fellow of King's college in Cambridge, chaplain to Q. Eliz. then archdeacon of Northumberland, canon of Windfor, and vicar of Apledore in this co. He died on Sept. 23, 1590, and was buried in St. George's chapel at Windfor (g).

3. WILLIAM BIRD, S. T. P. was installed in September 1590, on the death of the former prebendary, above-mentioned. He died in June 1609, and was buried in this cathedral.

4. GEORGE HOVENDEN, S. T. P. succeeded him, and was intalled the same year. He died in 1625, and was buried in St. Mary's church-yard in Oxford.

5. ACCEPTED FREWEN, S. T. P. had a grant given him by K. James I, in his 8th year, of a prebend in this church, which he made use of on the death of George Hovenden, last mentioned, the mandate for his installation being dated on September 1, 1625. He was a native of Kent, educated first at the King's school at Canterbury, and then at Magdalen college in Oxford, of which he was afterwards president, and made one of the King's chaplains. He was afterwards successively promoted to the deanries of Gloucester and Wells, besides which he was rector of Stanlake, in co. of Oxon and Wansford, in co. of Hants. In 1643 he was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, on which this prebend became vacant, after which he was lastly promoted to the see of York (b). On this stall's becoming vacant as above-mentioned, Stephen Goff was nominated to it, but he seems never to have been installed in it, and is said afterwards to have turned Papist, so that it remained vacant till the restoration, when

6. PETER HARDRES, S. T. P. was installed in

(f) His will, proved August 4 that year, is in Prevog. office, Canterbury; in which he writes himself John Mylles, cl. in it he gives to the school master and usher, and to the scholars of the common hall, towards their bread to be then eaten, two seams of wheat; and legacies to the several petty canons, vesturers, vergers, &c. and twenty shillings to the prisoners of the castle and Westgate. To the children stable, several utensils; and to Master Engcham's wife, his round ball of brass, to warm her hands, only as a remembrance.

(g) See Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 38, 128. Ashmole's History of Berkshire, vol. iii, p. 263. Harwood's Alumn. Etonenses, p. 164.

(h) He was the eldest son of John Frewen, rector of Nor- it in July 1660, being then rector of Upper Hardres in this county. He died in July 1678, and was buried in this cathedral (i).

7. JOHN MAXIMILIAN DE L'ANGLE, S. T. P. was next installed in it on July 27, the same year; he was rector of Chartbam, where dying on Nov. 11, 1724, he was buried in the chancel of that church (k).

8. WILLIAM EGERTON, LL. D. was made prebendary in his room, being installed on Nov. 25, 1724. He was grandson of John, Earl of Bridgewater, and was educated at New college in Oxford. After his becoming prebendary of this church, he was presented in 1732 to the rectory of Alballows, Lombard-street, London, which he held with that of Penshurst, and was likewise rector of Cowden, both in this county. He died on February 26, 1737, et. 55, and was buried in the chancel of Penshurst church, where, within the altar rails, on the north side, there is a memorial for him (l).

9. SAMUEL SHUCKFORD, S. T. P. succeeded to it in 1738. He was formerly of Caius college in Cambridge, and was made a chaplain in ordinary to K. George II. He was promoted to the rectory of Alballows church, Lombard-street, London, and died on July 14, 1754, and was buried in the middle of the nave of this church.

10. JOHN DAVIS, S. T. P. was next promoted to this stall in 1755. He was rector of Hansley in Suffex, and of East Peckham in this co. and died on Feb. 9, 1766, and was buried in the middle of the nave of this cathedral.

11. LYNFORD CARYL, S. T. P. was next promoted to this stall on March 1, 1766. He was first fellow and then master of Jesus college in Cambridge, and promoted to prebends, both in the collegiate churches of Soutbwell and Lincoln. He died in his prebendal house here, on June 18, 1781, and was buried in Jesus college chapel, in Cambridge.

12. THOMAS VYNER, LL. D. was his successor in this prebend the same year, being installed on March 21, 1782. He is vicar of East Peckham in this county, and the present incumbent of it.

CANONS in the ELEVENTH PREBEND.

1. JOHN DANIEL, alias CHILLENDEY, a monk thiam, in the county of Suffex, and was buried in York cathedral in 1664. See Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 57, 393, 730. Atk. Glouc. p. 94. Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 1146.

(i) He was third son of fir Thomas Hardres, of Hardres, kent. by Eleanor, daughter and heir of Thoresby. See Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 8.

(k) See some account of his father, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, fasti, p. 220, whom he mistakes for this prebendary.

(l) He married Anne, daughter of fir Francis Head, bart. and left one son, who died unmarried, and two daughters who became his coheirs; Charlotte, married to William Hammond, of St. Albans in this county, esq.; and Jane, who married Edward Brydges, of Wotton, in this county, esq.

of

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

of the late priory, was named in the foundation charter by K. Henry VIII, the first canon in this stall, to which he was admitted in 1542. He died in February 1546 (m).

2. ROBERT STEWART was admitted at Lambeth, by proxy, canon of this church succeeding the former one, above-mentioned, in this stall. He was bishop of Catbness in Scotland, and brother to Matthew, Earl of Lenox, as Spotwood, in his catalogue of Scottish Bishops, informs us; in his procuratorial letters, he styles himself Clerk only, omitting his episcopal title.

3. BERNARD OCHINUS, or Ocbine, was presented May 9, anno 1549, being the 2d year of K. Edward VI. In the instrument of his presentation, there is a clause of dispensation for non-residence, and for his cohabitation with his wife. He was an Italian born, and came over with Peter Martyr into England and was kindly received by archbishop Cranmer. He wrote a Latin dialogue against the Pope's supremacy, which was translated into English by Ponet, bishop of Winchester (n).

4. THOMAS WARD, S. T. P. was presented by the Queen and installed on April 2, 1558 (o), and was afterwards consecrated bishop of St. Asaph, upon which this stall became vacant.

5. JOHN BALE the centurist, succeeded him in this stall, in the 2d year of Q. Elizabeth (p). He lies buried in the body of this church.

6. ANDREW PEERSON was admitted canon in this stall on Nov. 30, 1563, and had a licence for non-residence, dated Jan. 4, 1570; he had been rector of Brasted, of Cbidingstone, and of Wrotham in this county. He died in Nov. 1594 (q).

7. RALPH TALBOYS, S. T. P. upon the death of Peerson, was presented to this prebend on November 13, 1594. He died in 1596.

8. MARTIN FOTHERBY, S. T. P. was admitted canon of this church, July 3, 1596. He was educated at Cambridge, and fellow of Trinity college there; afterwards he became vicar of Cbistlet, and then rector of Mongebam and of Chartham, all three in this county; he was consecrated bishop of Sarum on April 18, 1618, on which this stall became vacant. He died in 1619, and was buried in the church of Albal-

(m) His will, proved March 3, is in Prerog. office, Canterbury. By it, masses and other ceremonies for the dead appear not to have been left off then. He styles himself John Daniel, clerk of the collegiate church in Canterbury; and bequeaths his soul to Almighty God, the virgin Mary, and all the blessed company of Heaven; and that there be done for his soul and all christian souls, and every of his burial, and month's day, two solemn masses, viz. one of the glorious Trinity, and the other of requiem; and gives to every prebendary present at dirge or masse, or being sick within the precinct of the college, 2s.; and in like manner smaller sums to every member of the church being present, or at that time sick in the college.

(n) See Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 100, 139. Rapin, vol. ii, p. 11.

lows, Lombard-street, London, where his monument was burnt, together with the church, in 1666 (r).

9. ALEXANDER CHAPMAN, S. T. P. succeeded him in this prebend the same year. He was a native of the county of Norfolk, and was chaplain to the Princess Elizabeth, consort of the Prince Frederic, Elector Palatine, and became archdeacon of Stow, in the county of Lincoln, and a prebendary of that church. He died on September 6, 1629, æt. 52 (s), and was buried in this cathedral, in the martyrdom, where there is a monument, with his bust on it, in white marble, erected to his memory, and this inscription: ALEXANDRO CHAPMAN Norfolciensi Sacre Theologie Doctori in Academia Cantebriensi: Senerriffime Elizabethæ, Frederici Electoris Palatini Consorti, a Sacellis, Domine suæ Clementissimæ: Archidiacono de Stow in Comitatu Lincolnensi & Metropolitice hujus Ecclesiæ Prebendario: viro Multiplici Linguarum ut et Literarum Scientia instructissimo, Conscionator mire Flexanimo, dumq; per vires licuit & Valetudinem, non sedulo minus quam solido: Pietate erga Deum, charitate erga proximum, & morum suavitate erga omnes eximio: Charissimo Fratri suo optimeq; de se Merito (qualem, qualem) gratam erga defunctum animi Memoriam posuit h. c. Sabbatho Mortalitatæ in Æternitatis mutato, spiritum Deo reddidit 6 Septembris. Anno salutis, 1629, ætatis 52.

10. JOHN GERARD VOSSIUS, was next installed in it in 1629. On the sequestration of the revenues of the dean and chapter in 1644, he found such favour with the Puritans, that he, and Dr. Jackson, had both pensions of 100l. a year each allowed to them. He died in 1650, after which this prebend continued vacant till the restoration (t), when

11. EDWARD ALDEY was admitted canon in it, and was installed on July 9, 1660. He died on July 12, 1673, and was buried in St. Andrew's church in Canterbury, of which he was rector (u).

12. THOMAS BLOMER, S. T. P. was next installed in it on August 6, 1673. He resigned this preferment in 1706.

13. RALPH BLOMER, S. T. P. son of the former prebendary, succeeded him in it, being in-

(o) See Rym. Fæd. vol. xv, p. 381. Bately erroneously calls him Wood.

(p) In his letters of presentation, this prebend is said to have become void by the deprivation of Thomas Ward, S. T. P. the last incumbent of it. See Rymer's Fædera vol. xv, p. 563.

(q) His will is in Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(r) See Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 726. Newcourt's Rep. p. 439. Willis's Cath. vol. ii, p. 130, 213.

(s) His will is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(t) See Biog. Brit. vol. vii, Append. p. 181 [A]. Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 8.

(u) His will is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury.

Added

PREBENDARIES.

CATHEDRAL.

PREBENDARIES.

stalled on May 22, the same year (v). He was rector of Albhalows church, in Lombard-street, London, and of Horndon on the Hill, in the county of Essex, and one of the King's chaplains (w). He died on April 6, 1732, and was buried in the nave of this cathedral.

14. The Hon. HENRY DAWNEY, S. T. P. a younger son of Henry, Viscount Downe, succeeded to this stall in June 1732. He was rector of Piddle Town, and of Corfcombe, in the county of Dorset; and died in July 1754.

15. THOMAS CURTEIS, S. T. P. was installed in his room, in 1755. He was vicar of Sevenoke and possessed the secure rectory of that church, of both which he was patron. In 1756 he was inducted to the rectory of St. Dionis Backchurch, London. He died at his house at Sevenoke, in 1775, and was there buried.

16. RICHARD LUCAS, S. T. P. rector of Editb Weston, was, on his death promoted to this prebend, and installed on June 17, 1775. He died in 1789.

17. PHILLIP WILLIAMS, A. M. succeeded him, and in 1797 exchanged this stall for a prebend of Winchester and other preferment, with

18. The Hon. EDWARD LEGGE, a younger son of William, earl of Dartmouth, who is the present incumbent of this stall, vicar of Lewisham, in this co. and chaplain in ordinary to his Majesty.

CANONS in the TWELFTH PREBEND.

1. JOHN BAPTISTA DE CASIA, L. L. D. was named by the King, in his foundation charter to be the first prebendary in this stall, and was admitted to it in 1542. He had a licence of non-residence for his whole life. He died in 1544.

2. ROBERT NEVIL succeeded him, and was installed that same year. He died in 1550.

3. JOHN JOSEPH alias SOLLEPH, B. D. was installed on July 18, 1550 (x); he was deprived by Q. Mary, for being married, in 1553.

4. RICHARD FAUCET (y), S. T. P. was admitted next to it in April 1554 (z), and installed on the 23d of the same month; but was deprived in 1559.

5. HENRY GOODRICK, S. T. P. was next promoted to it in his room, being installed on July 10, 1559. He died in 1566.

6. PAUL FRENCH, B. D. of All Souls college, was admitted canon, and installed on September 4, in 1566; and died on November 1, 1600,

(v) See the grant, in the Harl. Mss. No. 2262-157.

(w) He married one of the daughters of fir Anthony Aucher, of Bishopstorn, bart. by whom he left two sons and five daughters.

(x) The King's letters of presentation are dated July 18, 1550. Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 237.

(y) Called Nicholas, in a manuscript of this church.

(z) See Rym. Fœd. vol. xiv, p. 382.

(a) Wood's Ath. vol. i, fasti, p. 75. (b) Wood's ibid. p. 198. Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 741.

and was buried at Windsor, of which church he was a canon (a).

7. GREGORY MILNER was next presented, and was installed on Nov. 6, 1600. He died in 1614.

8. THOMAS ANYAN, S. T. P. president of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, was next installed in it the same year. He was born at Sandwich, became one of the King's chaplains, and afterwards prebendary of Gloucester. He died in January 1632, and was buried at the upper-end of the north isle of the nave of this cathedral (b).

9. HUMPHREY PEAKE, S. T. P. was installed in it in his room, in 1632, and was rector both of Acrise and of Liminge in this county; in 1626 he had been installed in the prebend of Marston St. Laurence, in the church of Lincoln. He died after the year 1645, and this stall continued vacant till the restoration (c), and

10. WILLIAM BARKER, S. T. P. was then installed in it, in July 1660. He had been of New college, Oxford, and was rector of Hardwyck in Buckinghamshire, where he died in March 1669, and was buried in the church there.

11. EDWARD STILLINGFLEET, S. T. P. dean of St. Paul's church in London, was next admitted canon in this stall, on April 21, 1669. This learned prelate was born at Cranborne, in the county of Dorset. He had been fellow of St. John's college, Cambridge; then rector of Sutton, in the county of Bedford, and of St. Andrew's, Holborne, and one of the King's chaplains; afterwards prebendary of this church, and canon of St. Paul's cathedral, and then dean of the same. On October 13, 1689, he was consecrated bishop of Worcester, on which he vacated this stall (d).

12. The Hon. LEOPOLD WILLIAM FINCH, B. D. son of the earl of Winchelsea, was next admitted canon in it, being installed on November 4, 1689. He was born at Constantinople, educated at Christ church, first fellow and then warden of All Souls college in Oxford. He died in Dec. 1702 (e).

13. JOHN ADAMS, S. T. P. was installed on Jan. 9, 1702; being promoted to a canony of Windsor in 1708, he resigned this preferment. He was afterwards provost of King's college, Cambridge, and at different times had various parochial preferments conferred on him (ee).

14. WILLIAM WHITFIELD, A. M. was installed in it on February 4, 1709 (f). He was vicar of St. Giles's, Cripplegate church, in London, where he died in 1716, and was there buried.

(c) See Willis's Cath. vol. ii, p. 218. Walker's Suff. of Clergy, pt. 2, p. 8.

(d) He died at Westminster, æt. 63, in 1699, and was buried in his own cathedral of Worcester. See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, fasti, p. 11, for an account of him and his writings. Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 654.

(e) See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, p. 1063, fasti, p. 226.

(ee) See Harwood's Alumn. Etonenses, p. 48.

(f) See the grant of it, in Harleian Mss. No. 2264, 236.

PREBENDARIES.

15. LILLY BUTLER, S. T. P. was installed in it by proxy, on March 23, 1716. He died on May 7, 1717.

16. JOHN TURNER, S. T. P. vicar of Greenwich, was next installed in it, in June 1717; he was a prebendary likewise of the church of Lincoln (g). He died in December 1720, and was buried in this cathedral, in the north isle of the nave, where there is a monument erected to his memory, with this inscription:—Prope Hoc marmor quod Mortale habuit reliquit Vir Pietate, Doctrina & Morum Suavitate insignis JOHANNIS TURNER S. T. P. Qui in defendendis Ecclesie Anglicanæ Juribus Strenuum se gessit Athletam in asserenda Doctrina Redemptionis Salvatoris nostri mysticam, pium, in debito Regi obsequio prestando subditum fidelem. Utoxor in Com. Stafford, eum nascentem Cunis excepit Anno Dom 1660 Die 16 Novembris. Schola Patria in primis Doctrinæ Elementis Erudit; Collegium S. S. Trinit. Cantab: ad penitiora Scientiarum adita investiganda admissum Brabeis & Honoribus auxit quam Schola in Erica nigra Ludimagistrum Doctissimum, Grenovicum Pastorem fidelissimum, habuit Cui Canonicatum in Ecclesia Cathedrali Lincoln. Gracia Episcopi, in Metropolitana Cantuariensi Regia assignavit. Uxorem duxit Saram Tucker Clerici in agro Suffolciensi filiam, Ex qua filium & filias duas genuit: Tandem cum nihil in rebus humanis firmum & stabile, Febri Correptus, in Domo sua Cantuariensi, Sexagenario Major, extremum obiit Diem, Anno Reparatae salutis 1720. 7 Decemb. Vidua hoc pietatis Monumentum posuit. At top are the arms of Turner, impaling Tucker and quarterings.

17. DAVID WILKINS, S. T. P. was next installed in it on Jan. 26, 1721. He was chaplain to archbishop Wake, who conferred on him the rectories of Hadley and Monks Idleigh, and the archdeaconry likewise of Suffolk (h). He died on Sept. 6, 1745, æt. 62, at his parsonage house at Hadleigh.

18. JOHN POTTER, S. T. P. was the next prebendary, being installed on Sept. 27, 1745. He was the eldest son of archbishop Potter, and was at that time archdeacon of Oxford, vicar of Lyd, and rector of Chidingstone, which latter he resigned for On Dec. 23, 1766, he was installed dean of this

(g) Willis's Cath. vol. ii, p. 216.

(h) Tan. Mon. p. 458. He had been rector of Great Chart.

(i) See more of him, among the deans of this church.

(k) This precinct of the White Friars is extraparochial. Several attempts have been made, to render it a ville, but without effect; and there have been great disputes between the mayor, &c. of the city, and the owners of it, from time to time, concerning the city's claim to a jurisdiction over it; this was brought to issue at a trial, had at the assizes at Maidstone in Lent, 1790; when it was determined, that this precinct was wholly exempt from the liberty and jurisdiction of the city. The bounds of it are towards the east, a part of Sheepshank-lane. Towards the south, the gravel walk, or alley, leading from St. Mary Bredin's church towards the city wall eastward. To Rose-lane towards the west; and to the gar-church, on which this stall became vacant (i). the valuable benefice of Wrotham, in this county.

WHITE FRIARS.

19. DAVID DUREL, S. T. P. a native of the island of Jersey, was, on this vacancy, promoted to it in 1767, being then principal of Harford college in Oxford. He was afterwards promoted to the vicarage of Ticehurst, in co. of Sussex, and died in 1775, at Oxford, and was there buried.

20. EVERARD BUCKWORTH, S. T. P. was installed in his room, on November 11, 1775, being rector of Walsingham in co. Lincoln. He died at his house in London, in 1793.

21. EDWARD WALSBY, S. T. P. was promoted to this prebend on his death in February 1793. He is rector of the church of Alballoes, Lombard-street, London; and of Lamborne, in the co. of Essex, and the present incumbent of it.

PRECINCTS EXEMPTED FROM THE CITY LIBERTY.

THE NEXT PRECINCT to be described within the circumference of the walls of this city, though exempted from the liberties of it, being esteemed to lie within the hundred of Westgate and jurisdiction of the county at large (k), is that of

THE WHITE FRIARS,

in which was a convent, situated at a small distance southward from St. George's street, in this city, to which it had an handsome gate or entrance; the friars who possessed it, being likewise called Augustine Friars, and Friars Erémite (l).

The generality of these friars came first into England, says Bale, from Italy, about the year 1252. These in particular came and settled themselves here, about the year 1325; for that very year the archbishop sent his mandatory letters, dated from Tenham, to his commissary concerning them, in which he recited, that these friars, of the order of St. Augustine, had built themselves a chapel, and tolling a bell, had publicly celebrated mass in it, and as had been affirmed, had received oblations due to the parochial church, without licence from him, and the chapter of Christ church, contrary to the privileges granted to the archiepiscopal see and the metropolitane church; and he therefore commands behind the houses on the south side of St. George's street, towards the north.

(l) They had the name of Augustine Friars, because St. Augustine, the famous African father, as is said, was their founder; who living in the wilderness, erected and instituted their order, and prescribed them a rule of living, whence they were likewise sometimes styled friars erémite of St. Augustine; and they were sometimes called the white friars, (though properly and strictly, the carmelites were understood by that name), because they wore a long white coat of cloth, down to their heels, all loose, with a cow or hood of the same, when they were in their cloisters; when they were abroad, however, they wore a black coat over the other, with another cow, having both their coats then bound close to their bodies, with a broad leather girdle or belt-

manded

WHITE FRIARS.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

manded his commissary to make enquiry into these matters, and to inhibit them by an ecclesiastical interdict from celebrating mass in that chapel, and to cite them to appear before him, &c. (m)

For the friars having purchased and taken possession of a house, with its appurtenances, of one Thomas de Bonynton, in the parish of St. George in this city (n), began immediately afterwards to build a church on it, and erect altars in it, entirely of their own authority; and so busily did they bestir themselves, that the convent of Christ church, and the parson of St. George's, were in great danger of losing their interests in these premises, the one in a yearly payment of 20d. payable from them, and the other in the tythes and other ecclesiastical rights, payable out of them. At length, however, within about a year afterwards, the convent came to a composition with the friars for their pension, and the parson, John de Natynden, after having brought his action against them, before the archbishops' chancellor, and auditor of causes, to compel them, by course of law, to secure him and his church from any detriment, or prejudice, by reason of their alteration of the state and property of the premises they had bought, which before their time, besides first fruits, tythes and oblations, yielded other commodities to him; and his church came likewise to a composition with them, by which the house was quietly yielded and confirmed to them, with liberty for them to make their abode in it, and to obtain the dedication of their chapel, oratory or church and altars, already erected upon the place, and likewise a certain plat of ground laid out for a church-yard; and they agreed by it, that the sum of 9s. should be paid by them yearly, for, and in lieu of all dues, to the parson of St. George's, for the time being for ever, subjecting themselves to the archbishop, or any other judge, ordinary or delegate, for compulsion in case of non-payment, the parson being tied to obey, under pain of excommunication, and the friars under pain of interdict.

The friars afterwards enlarged their habitation here, by purchasing of John Cbicke, of Canterbury, a place or court within the parish of St. George, lying upon the highway or street, at the cloth market; upon part of which they built their outward gate (o), and in the year 1356, they entered into an obligation and bound themselves and their house to the prior and convent of Christ church, of whose see it was, to pay them yearly 2s. 4d. for it.

As for benefactors to this convent, I read of two, of some consequence (p); of which, one was, a widow named Amabilia Gobyon, who made choice of the church of it for her burial-place, and gave by her will 10 marks to the repair of it in 1405. The other, sir John Fineux, who, in K. Henry VII.'s time, became a most liberal benefactor to it. He was Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, both in the reigns of K. Henry VII. and VIII, and is highly commended as a person of singular worth and excellency. He had expended of his bounty much more than the sum of 40l. in repairing their church, refectory, dormitory and walls; out of gratitude to so liberal a benefactor, the friars bound themselves by their indenture, anno 1522, that they would provide one chaplain from among their brethren, who should every day for ever, celebrate mass and other divine services, at the altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary, in the chapel of the same name, for the souls of sir John Fineux, Elizabeth his wife, and others mentioned in it (q).

Richard Pargate, citizen of Canterbury, by his will in 1457, gave 40s. to these friars, towards making their new gate.

A great ornament afterwards to this place, and to the whole order, was John Capgrave; in his

(m) These letters are printed at large, in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. xxi, p. 17.

(n) Pat. 17 Ed. II. m. 18, pt. 2. Mr. Somner, p 68, has given the bounds of these premises, which were, by a certain lane, sometime called Lambert's-lane, afterwards Brewers-lane, that is, between the same lane and another tenement of the said Thomas, towards the north; and a certain place called Ealdgaole, and the tenement of Cicely at Gayole, towards the west; and the tenement of Thomas Chiche, towards the east; and the tenement of Thomas Clement and the hospital of priests, towards the south. Tanner, in his Monasticon, p. 225, says, that these friars obtained a settlement and house, in St. George's parish, by the gift of Richard French, baker.

(o) See Pat. 11 Ed. II, p. 2, m. 4, pro domibus Construendis—Pat. 18 Ed. III, p. 1, m. 4, pro manso elargando; and Pat. 17 Ric. II, p. 2, m. 26, pro mess. et gard. pro manso elargando.

(p) Tan. Mon. p. 225, says, K. Edward III. was a benefactor to it. The several authenticated pedigrees of the family of Haut, once so eminent in this county, assert, that one of them was the founder of this convent; certainly it was for several descents the usual burial place for them, and they were good benefactors to it, particularly William Haut, of Bishopshorne, esq; who was buried in the middle of the choir here, in 1462, as appears by his will, before the image of St. Katharine, between his wives. He was likewise a great benefactor by it, to the church of Borne, to the prisoners of the castle of Canterbury, and of Westgate, &c. and to this convent, by repairing the church and refectory of it.

I find by the wills, proved in the Prerog. office, Canterbury, several others buried here, viz. William Benet, citizen of Canterbury, anno 1464, in this church, beside Alys his wife; John Brempe, of St. Andrew's, in 1462, in the nave of it; William Bonynton of St. George's, in 1464, in the church; William Walpole, chaplain of the lord Thomas Arundel, in 1483, in the nave of it; William Faunt of St. Mary Bredin's, in 1485, in the house of Augustine friars, near the burial-place of his father and mother there.

(q) Viz. of K. Henry VII, John Morton, cardinal, formerly archbishop; William Apolderfeld, Mildred his wife, and for the souls of all faithful people deceased. This instrument is recited at length, in Somner's Appendix, p. 18, No. xxii; it appears by it, that William Mallabam was then prior of this convent, and William Wederhall, S. T. P. was at that time provincial of this order.

time,

KING'S BRIDGE HOSPITAL.

time, that is, about the year 1484, a noted friar of this house and provincial of the order. He was a great writer, the catalogue of whose works may be seen in Pitfeus, who is very lavish in his commendations of him, as a man of most excellent parts (r). In 1462 John Godewyn was prior of this house of St. Augustine friars.

After the dissolution, the scite of it, with its two orchards, a garden, and their adjoining appurtenances was granted, in the 33d year of K. Henry VIII, in exchange to George Harpur, esq; and his heirs, to hold in capite by knight's service (s); and he alienated these premises next year to Thomas Culpepper of Bekeborne (t), who in the 35th year of the same reign passed them away to Thomas Browne (u), whose heir Robert died seized of them two years afterwards, when John Browne was found, by inquisition, to be his son and heir (v), and his descendant John Browne had livery of them in the 4th and 5th of Philip and Mary (w). After which this estate came into the possession of the Berrys, who resigned it in Q. Elizabeth's reign; many of whom lie buried in St. Mary Bredin's church. Sir Henry Finch, serjeant at law, resided here at the latter end of K. James I.'s reign, and retired from hence to Boxley through fear of the plague; where dying, he was buried in the church of Boxley on October 13, 1625. It afterwards passed into the possession of the Turners, of whom William Turner, of Gray's Inn, and of the Friars, esq; died possessed of this house in 1729, and was succeeded in it by his son of the same name (x), who afterwards resided here; and left by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Thomas Scott, of Liminge, esq; an only daughter and heir Bridget, who in 1753 carried it in marriage to David Papillon, of Acrise, esq; (y) and he in 1791 alienated it to Wm Hammond, of St. Alban's, in Nonington, esq; who made great additions and improvements to the mansion of it, and now resides in it. A fee farm rent of 11s. 1d. is yearly paid to the crown for this estate.

THE HOSPITAL OF KING'S BRIDGE, alias EASTBRIDGE, is likewise situated in the same hundred, being

(r) Battely's Somner, p. 63.

(s) Inrolled in Augmentation office, on May 21, anno 34 Hen. VIII. Rot. Esch. 33 Hen. VIII, pt. 6.

(t) Rot. Esch. anno 34 Hen. VIII. pt. 11.

(u) Rot. Esch. ejus an. pt. 4.

(v) Rot. Esch. ejus an. In all these rolls, the premises are said to be situated within the liberty of the city of Canterbury.

(w) Viz. the scite and priory of le Augustine brothers, in the city of Canterbury; and five messuages and four gardens, in the parish of St. George the martyr, in capite by knight's service. Rot. Esch. ejus an.

(x) He left likewise by Anna Maria his wife, youngest daughter of Thomas Papillon, of London, merchant, and afterwards of Acrise, esq; two daughters, Anna-Maria, married to Jeremiah Rawsterne, of London, esq; who died without issue; and Elizabeth, married to Charles Fagg, of My. stole, esq; grand-father of the Rev. sir John Fagg, bart.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

(y) See more of the Papillons, in vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 346.
(z) See Dugd. Mon. tom. ii, p. 458.
(a) Some have supposed this hospital to have been of archbishop Lanfranc's foundation; however, if the confirmation of what Robert Drus gave to the church of East-burch, and the regular brethren there, mentioned by Mr. Speed, belongs to this place; it was as ancient as K. Henry I, and so before Becket's time, whom the statutes of archbishop Stratford mention as the founder of it. See Tan. Mon. p. 212. (') See Tan. Mon. p. 219.

martyr

KING'S BRIDGE HOSPITAL.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

martyr of Eastbridge (c). Eastbridge hospital becoming thus by union or consolidation possessed of and owners of Cokyn's hospital, it ceased soon afterwards, probably, to be used as one, and was hired or rented out, among the possessions of the hospital of Eastbridge; in which state it continues at this time (d).

To return now again to the hospital of St. Thomas of Eastbridge, for which there being no statutes for the government of it, archbishop Stratford, anno 15 Edward III, drew up certain ordinances for that purpose (e), the effect of which was, that the hospital being founded for the receiving, lodging and sustaining of poor pilgrims, was then, owing to the negligence of the masters, who had wasted the revenues of it, but meanly endowed; and that the buildings of it were in a ruinous condition: to remedy which, and to continue the charitable intent of it, he decreed, that the church of St. Nicholas, Harbledown, should be for ever appropriated to it; that for the government of this hospital, there should be a master in priest's orders, appointed by the archbishop and his successors, who should keep a proper secular chaplain, or vicar, under him, to be removed at the master's will and pleasure. That such poor pilgrims as happened to die within this hospital, should be buried in Christ church yard, in the place heretofore allotted to them there. That every pilgrim, in health, should have no more than one night's lodging and entertainment, at the expence of 4d. that there should be twelve beds in the hospital, and that some woman, upwards of 40 years of age, should look after the beds and provide all necessaries for the pilgrims; that those who were not in health, should be preferred to such as were; that no lepers should be received into it; that if there was a smaller number of pilgrims resorting to the hospital, at any one time, a greater number should be received into it, in lieu of such deficiency, at other times, as far as the revenues of the hospital would allow of it; and further, he inhibited them from having any common seal in the hospital, with several other particular orders and injunctions, as may be seen in the instrument more at large.

This hospital had several very liberal benefactors in early times. Among others, Hamo de Crevequer gave the church of Blean to it, which gift was afterwards confirmed by archbishop Stephen Langton, and was afterwards appropriated to it by archbishop Sudbury in 1375. Thomas, Lord Roos of Hamlake, in the 33d year of K. Edward III, gave the manor of Blean to it, and the year afterwards for John Lee, knt. as appears by the leger of the hospital, gave to it a messuage, with 180 acres of land and divers rents of assize, in the same parish, for the increase of works of piety in it (f).

In the year 1362, archbishop Islip founded a perpetual chantry in this hospital, and transferred to it, for the benefit of it, at the request of Bartholomew de Bourne, the chantry founded in the church of Livingborne, alias Beakborne, by his ancestor James de Bourne (g).

By the instruments of the archbishops Islip and Sudbury, dated in the above year, it appears, by the former, that there was founded in this hospital, a perpetual chantry for divine services; the priest of which was to receive a yearly stipend of 10 marks, of the master of the hospital, out of the revenues of it; for which he was to celebrate divine service, and minister the sacraments and sacramentals in it, to such poor and infirm as should resort hither; and that the priest and his successors should possess the mansion, within the bounds of the hospital, between the infirmary and the great gate of it, and the chamber over it. After which K. Edward III, having given a messuage, called the Chaunge, at the time almost wholly in ruins, to Thomas Newe de Wolton, then master of this hospital, and his successors, in aid of the maintenance of the priest who should celebrate in it for his health, for his soul afterwards, and that of John at Lee, who in part founded the chantry, &c. and the said messuage having being repaired and rebuilt by the executors, and at the cost, though charity, of his predecessor, the value of the rent amounted to seven marks yearly, and would, as it was presumed, amount still higher in future; and it being difficult at that time, to find a proper priest, who would undergo the duty and residence required in it, for the salary of 10 marks, the King's piety in augmenting the priest's stipend, was as yet frustrated—Archbishop Simon Sudbury, therefore, by his instrument dated in 1375, in which he recited the above ordination of his predecessor, ordained and decreed, in addition to that above-mentioned, and by the consent of the said Thomas, master of this hospital, and the executors of his predecessor, that the endowment of this chantry of 10 marks, should be augmented with five marks and an half out of the seven marks of rent of the messuage given by the King as aforesaid, with

(c) Pat. 7 Ed. II, p. 3, m. 31. Dugdale's Monasticon, tom. ii, p. 458.

(d) Battely's Somner, p. 60, 61, pt. 2, p. 170. The site of it seems to have been where the house stands, which is now called Cogan's hospital, being a charitable bequest, for the benefit of poor clergymen's widows.

(e) This instrument of archbishop Stratford is printed at large, in Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 13, No. xvii.

(f) See this instrument, in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. xix, et seq.

(g) Battely's Somner, p. 62.

KING'S BRIDGE HOSPITAL.

power of distress, &c. and whereas the presentation of the chantry of Bourne, united to this hospital, as in the ordination of the first chantry aforesaid made by his predecessor, more plainly appeared, belonged to Bartholomew de Bourne, his heirs, or assigns, before the union; he therefore decreed and ordained, that the presentation and collation to be made to the same, when vacant, should belong to him and his successors, and to the said Bartholomew de Bourne, his heirs or assigns alternately; the first turn to belong to the archbishop, because the assigns of Bartholomew de Bourne (d) had presented the then incumbent to it, &c. (bb)

Though the revenues of this hospital lay chiefly in the parish of Blean, yet it was possessed of other rents, lands and tenements in Canterbury, Harbledown, and in Bircbington. It was likewise possessed of lands in Herne, Reculver, Swaycliffe, Cbisset, and Beckesborne, belonging to the above-mentioned chantry, which at the suppression of it were seized on, as such.

By a bull of pope Honorius III, this hospital had the privilege of not paying tythes of their gardens (i).

By the return made to the King's commissioners in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, it appears, that there was here a neat handsome chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, to which had belonged two bells, to ring to service, as was reported to them by the parson and churchwardens of All Saints; who said further, that this hospital was a parish church, in which there was ministred all sacraments and sacramentals, to the poor people resorting thither, and to the keeper of it, and his household, and all others remaining within the precinct of it, by the chantry priest; the matter of fact was, that this chapel was formerly served by the chantry priest of the chantry in it, mentioned above, to have been transferred to it, who had 10l. 6s. 8d. yearly stipend or wages, besides his mansion or dwelling, which was at the west end of the hospital, of all which it was deprived at the suppression of it by the statute of the 1st

(b) See his will, in Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(bb) Alanus Blunt was chaplain of the chantry of East-bridge. He died in 1469, and was succeeded by Henry Newel, cl. who died in 1476; then styling himself chaplain of the hospital of St. Thomas the martyr. (i) Batt. Som. p. 62.

(k) The return of the King's commissioners upon the survey, anno 2 Edward VI. was, that the chantry of our Blessed Lady the Virgin, within the hospital of the King's-bridge in Canterbury, was founded by one James de Bourne, to the intent that one priest should celebrate Divine Service within the hospital; and to pray for the soul of one Isabella, sometime Queen of England; and for the soul of the founder, and all christian souls for ever. The yearly value of the lands, tenements, and annuities thereto belonging, being 10l. 11s. 8d. the outgoings from which were 6d. —perpetual tenths 20s. 8d.—clear 9l. 10s. 6d.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

year of K. Edward VI, (k) when a pension of 6l. per annum was granted to Nicholas Thompson, alias Champion, the incumbent of it, which was remaining anno 1553 (l).

The value of the revenues of the hospital itself, as returned anno 26 Henry VIII, according to both Dugdale and Speed, were 23l. 18s. 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per ann. but this must have been the clear income, for according to Sancroft's manuscript, valor, they amounted in the whole to 43l. 12s. 3d. (m)

The state of this hospital, as it stood in the time of Cardinal Pole, at archdeacon Harpsfield's visitation in 1557, was, as appears by the entry in the book of it; that they were bound to receive way-faring and hurt men, and to have eight beds for men, and four for women; to remain for a night, and more, if they were not able to depart; and the master of the hospital to be charged with their burial, and they had twenty loads of wood yearly allowed, and 26s. a year for drink; that there was 10l. land a year, with a mansion, which the priest always had for officiating in the chapel, taken away by the King, and that it was the head church to Cosmus Blean, but that they had no ornaments but organs (n).

This hospital, though it outlasted the general suppression of most of the foundations of the like sort in the reigns of K. Henry VIII, and K. Edward VI, yet in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, the lands and tenements belonging to it, as well as the hospital itself, then converted into tenements, were occupied and possessed by private persons, until archbishop Parker, in the 10th year of that reign, recovered, by his prudent care, some of the lands and possessions, and restored the house again to pious and charitable uses. He framed new ordinances for the government of it, which he wisely contrived should be suitable to those times, as well as agreeable to the first foundation of the hospital, and the former statutes of archbishop Stratford, as far as might be; reserving nevertheless, a power to his successors, archbishops of Canterbury, to revise, alter, abolish and new make

That Nicholas Champion, cl. was incumbent or chantry priest there, of the age of forty years, of honest learning, qualities, and conversation, and had nothing whereon to live, over and above the revenue of it. That the same was no parish church, nor was any parish church thereto appropriate, wherefore it required no new endowment of a vicar there; that there had not been any grammar school kept, preacher maintained, or poor people relieved by the said chantry. That there had been no sale of lands, &c. spoil of woods, or gift of them, goods or jewels none. See this survey, printed at the end of Battely's Somner, pt. 1.

(l) Willis's Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 104.

(m) See Tan. Mon. p. 212.

(n) Battely's Somner, from the original visitation book of archdeacon Harpsfield, p. 63.

KING'S BRIDGE HOSPITAL.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

all, or any part of them; they are dated May 20, 1569 (o).

In them it appears, that in consequence of the ordinances of archbishop Stratford, the master of the hospital might take all the profits of it to his own use, bestowing only for the relief of wandering and wayfaring brethren, and poor, in bread and drink, after the rate of 4d. a day, and one night's lodging for twelve persons, if so many came there at one time, in the whole not above 6l. 2s. 6d. per ann. but the archbishop (Parker) by the authority in the above former ordinance concerning the disposition of the profits of this hospital, to him and his successors reserved, to alter and change the same, did by these ordinances in that behalf made, under his hand and seal, not only increase the above sum, to be from thenceforth bestowed on certain poor inhabiting within the county of the city of Canterbury, but also appointed other sums of money thereout, yearly to be paid towards the keeping of a free-school, for a certain number of poor children of the county of the said city, to be taught to write and read freely within the hospital.

By the same ordinance, as well as by an indenture, between the master of this hospital and the master of Corpus Christi or Benet college in Cambridge, dated May 22, anno 11th Elizabeth, the archbishop founded out of the revenues of this hospital, two scholarships, each of the yearly value of 3l. 6s. 8d. that sum to be paid yearly from thence, by the master of the hospital to the master of the college; the two scholars to be chosen, named, examined and approved by the master of this hospital and the dean of Canterbury, if any such there should be; if not, then by the master only, and to be taken from the free-school in Canterbury, being such of the scholars there, as were born within the co. of Kent, and being sent to Cambridge, should be called Canterbury scholars; who, after their admittance and receipt there, should remain and continue in that college, according to the orders and statutes of it, and should have of the provision of it, convenient chambers, commons, reading and other necessaries, as other scholars in it, according to common custom, for the term of 200 years next, from the date of the indenture, with other rules and regulations in it relating to them (p).

Not long after this, Q. Elizabeth issued a commission of charitable uses, to enquire into the state and condition of this hospital, which was done, and a return thereof made accordingly; and again, soon after the death of archbishop Parker, there was a second commission, directed to for James Hales and others, who certified, that the hospital house stood ruined, and neither master nor brethren were resident, or dwelling of long time. The house was let out into tenements for yearly rent. The beds that were wont to lodge and harbour poor people resorting thither, were gone and sold, contrary to the old order and foundation of the same; and that the hospital was relinquished and concealed from the Queen, &c. Upon which, she granted it, with all its revenues, by letters patent, dated July 20, in her 18th year, to John Farnham, one of her gentlemen pensioners, to hold in fee farm for ever. He soon afterwards conveyed his interest in it for 550l. and the release beside of a debt owing by him to George Hayes. After this, archbishop Whitgift recovered this hospital, with the revenues of it, from Hayes, and then settled it upon a new foundation, so firm and sure, that it has continued to the present time, and remains a perpetual monument of the archbishop's piety and prudence, who may be justly reputed the founder and restorer of it (q); and he framed new ordinances and statutes, for the better government of it, by which the hospital is now ruled. In these it is, among other things, ordered and decreed, that the archbishop should collate the master, who should be in holy orders, and should be instituted and inducted according to the usual form and custom, who should have the lodging known by the name of the master's lodging, in the hospital; and a yearly stipend of 6l. 13s. 4d. and twenty loads of wood from the lands belonging to it, to be delivered cost free. That the master should appoint a school-master, who by himself or deputy, should freely instruct twenty poor children of this city, above the age of seven years, to write, read and cast accompts, and to have books, paper, &c. provided for them, out of the profits of the hospital, and not to remain in the school above three years. The school-master to have a lodging in the hospital, and a stipend of 4l. and for his further relief, if the master approved of it, to be receiver of the rents, &c. of the hospital; for which he should receive 26s. 8d. and two loads of wood yearly, to be delivered cost free, and one summer livery cloth. That out of the profits of the hospital, there should be paid for ever, to the two scholars to be taken out of the common school at Canterbury, commonly called the mynte, by the master of the hospital, with the consent of the archbishop, and placed in Benet college, 3l. 6s. 8d. each, according to the former ordinances made of it. That whereas by former ordinances, the master of the hospital

(o) Battely, pt. 2, p. 171. These ordinances or statute, of Archbishop Parker, are printed at length, in Battely's appendix, p. 63, No. xxxviii^a. See Strype's Life of archbishop Parker, p. 114, and appendix, n. 58.

(p) See this indenture printed at length, in Battely's appendix, pt. 2, p. 65, No. xxxvii^b.

(q) See Strype's appendix to the Life of archbishop Whitgift, lib. iv, n. 31. A. B. C. being three papers, concerning the state of this hospital.

KING'S BRIDGE HOSPITAL.

hospital was only tied to pay in time of peace, unto the poor passengers, or to such other poor people as the master should think good, thirty pence a week; and in time of war that payment ceasing, to provide twelve beds for the lodging of poor soldiers, passing through this city, within the hospital, for the space of one night only, which is now grown wholly out of use, especially since the loss of Calais; therefore, for the better relief of the poor inhabiting within this city and the suburbs of it, it was ordered, that the former last recited orders should cease, and instead of them, there should be five in-brothers, and five in-sisters, to be permanent and have their habitation in the hospital; and after the space of twenty years next ensuing, there should be five other out-brothers, and five others called out-sisters; each of the said in-brothers and in-sisters to have a several dwelling and lodging within the hospital, and 26s. 8d. by the year, and one load of wood to be delivered cost free, between Midsummer and Michaelmas; and each of the out-brothers and out-sisters to have 26s. 8d. by the year only; that the mayor of this city should from time to time, nominate to the master of the hospital for every of the brothers and sisters rooms, when they should be void and unfurnished, two poor persons, men or women, as the places should require, being lame, impotent, blind, or aged, above fifty years of age, who should have inhabited within the city, or suburbs seven years before; of which two, the master should chuse and admit one; and in default of the mayor's nominating for the space of three months, the master to make choice, and admit any, qualified as above-mentioned. That in the room of every out-brother and sister, the mayor should nominate such persons as above specified, whereof one at least should be such as had dwelt in the city or suburbs, by the space of three whole years at least, to the end that such as dwelt there, and not within the county of the city, should receive the whole benefit of these ordinances. That the master, out of the profits of the hospital, should repair and sustain it, and every part within the precincts of it, and also sufficiently sustain and maintain the bridge, called the King's bridge, alias Eastbridge, within the city of Canterbury (r); and pay to the Queen, her heirs and successors 7l. 10s. yearly, due to her for the pension of a chantry, sometime within the hospital, and all other dues and payments going out of it.

(r) In the city chamber, there is an exemplification of a record under the great seal, dated in the 12th year of K. Richard II, anno 1396; by which it appears, that the master of the hospital ought to repair, erec, and sustain the neighbouring bridge of Kingsbridge. See Pat. Ric. II. p. 1, m. 2. The account of the hospital's estate given up to the commissioners upon the statute of 37 Hen VIII. cap. 4. charged

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

That the master should not let for years or lives, the lands or tenements, nor make any woodsales of the wood, without the express consent, in writing, of the archbishop, and should yearly make an account to him, if demanded, so that of the surplussage all charges deducted, the portions of the brethren and sisters might be increased at the will of the archbishop, as theretofore had been used. That the in-brethren or sisters, master or schoolmaster, who should die within the precincts of the hospital, might be buried within the church-yard of the cathedral, according to a former agreement made between the archbishop, his predecessor and the then prior and convent of Christ church, with many other orders and regulations mentioned in them (s), all which were confirmed and ordered to be inrolled in chancery, by an act passed in the 27th year of that reign (t), by the means of which, the rights of this hospital have been preserved to this time.

There have been some few modern benefactors to this hospital.

Mr. Avery Sabin, sometime an alderman of this city, by his will in 1648, gave a rent charge out of his estate at Monkton in Tbanet, of 20l. per ann. for charitable uses to the poor of this city, of which, ten marcs were assigned yearly to be paid to the five in-brothers and five in-sisters of this hospital (u).

Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, widow, by her will in 1694, gave, out of her personal estate, the sum of five pounds yearly to this hospital, to be shared and divided among the poor of it, in like manner as her gift to Cogan's hospital, above-mentioned. Besides which, this hospital receives yearly the sixth-part of the interest, due from 163l. 16s. 3d. being the sum due from Mrs. Masters's legacy, who died in 1716, which is vested in the mayor and commonalty, in trust, for the several hospitals in Canterbury, of which a full account may be seen among the charitable benefactions to this city.

In 1708 John Battely, D. D. archdeacon of Canterbury, and master of this hospital, new built three of the sisters lodgings, and did several other great repairs; and at his death left by his will, to the in-brothers and sisters, 100l. the interest of which he ordered should be proportioned by Mr. John Bradock, of St. Stephen's, and Mr. Somerscales, vicar of Doddington.

Mr. John Bradock, master of this hospital, in 1719 gave by his will, 25l. 13s. 4d. for the the master also with the paving of the street there. See Battely's Somner, p. 63.

(s) These ordinances are dated July 20, 1534, and are printed at large, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 66, No. xxxviii. See also Strype's Life of Whitgift, p. 207, 497; appendix, p. 208.

(t) This act is printed at length, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 69, No. xxxviii. (u) See Batt. pt. 2, p. 171.

better

KING'S BRIDGE HOSPITAL.

better payment of the poor people, at Lady-day and Michaelmas.

Mr. Matthew Brown, of St. Peter's in Canterbury, in 1721, gave by his will 10s. per ann. for ever, to the in-brothers and sisters of this hospital.

In 1768 Thomas Hanson, esq. of Crosby-square, London, gave by will, the interest of 500l. for ever, to the in-brothers and sisters of this hospital; which being now invested in the three per cents. reduced Bank Annuities, produces 17l. 10s. per ann.

Besides these, the hospital had many temporary benefactors, as well towards the repairs of it, as in money; among which were, the archbishops Juxon, Sheldon and Sancroft. The yearly tenets of this hospital, amounting to 2l. 7s. 10d. are payable to the archbishop.

In 1691 the yearly revenues of this hospital amounted in the whole to 101l. 5s. 9d. besides which, were the fines upon the renewals of the leases, and alderman Sabine's gift of 13s. 4d. a piece, by the year, which came not into the master's hands, but was paid by one of the aldermen of the city.

The present building is antient; it has a decent hall and chapel, where the schoolmaster, who has a good apartment in the house, and is called the reader, instructs twenty boys gratis, in reading, writing, and arithmetic. There are rooms also for five in-brothers, and five in-sisters, but some of these rooms are subject to be flooded in a very wet season (v). The master has a neat handsome house, situated in a court near the hospital, but on the western or opposite side of the river.

The antient common seal of this hospital having been for a long time missing, the late master, Dr. Backhouse, at his own expence, supplied the hospital with another in the year 1783.

The south-side or part of King's bridge, as far as the middle of it, from end to end, adjoining the front of the hospital, is esteemed exempt from the liberties of the city, and within the county of Kent at large, and is repaired and maintained by the master of it. The north or opposite side is

(v) This was owing to the mill just below the bridge, to benefit which, the water used to be penned up above it, to a much greater height than formerly; and this happened at times notwithstanding the ground on which the hospital stands has been in process of time considerably raised, as appears by the bank at the back part of it adjoining the river, where the capitals of a row of pillars are to be seen but a small matter above the surface of the earth. But since the new building of Abbots mill, the water has been drawn by at King's bridge, and by the mill here not being now worked the scite of the hospital is much less liable to be flooded, and the several estates besides above the bridge are much benefited.

(w) When this bridge was widened in 1769, there was an agreement entered into, between the mayor and commonalty and Henry Heaton, cl. master of the hospital, under their respective seals; wherein the latter acknowledged that the master of it had, time out of mind, repaired and maintained the bridge and the pavement of it; and the mayor and commonalty being desirous of improving it for public utility, had esteemed within the city and its liberties, and is repaired and maintained by the corporation; it arises from the bridge, having been widened to double its former width, within these few years (w).

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

NAMES OF THE MASTERS OF KING'S BRIDGE, alias EASTBRIDGE HOSPITAL.

1. RALPH was the first master or custos of this hospital, whose name is to be found in the most antient charters of this house. He is called custos, sometimes procurator, and sometimes master of the hospital; he was witness to an antient charter of the hospital of St. Nicholas and St. Catherine, founded by William Cockyn, before that hospital was united to this of Eastbridge.

2. PETER was master in the years 1236 and 1240, as appears by antient charters in the archives of Christ church, to which he was witness.

3. JOHN succeeded Peter, as may be learned from some charters in the chest of this hospital, dated 1242 and 1247.

4. GEOFFRY is called master, in an antient charter of this hospital, dated anno 1261.

5. WALTER, in another charter, is said to be master, anno 1264.

6. JOHN, vicar of Wycham, is called master, in a charter dated anno 1280.

7. JOHN DE TYNODEN is recorded to be master, in a charter dated in 1320.

8. JOHN DE THUIGDEN was admitted master, May 23, 1323, and demised lands in 1324, and is recorded in the archbishop's register.

9. WILLIAM BURGOOS succeeded him, as appears by the archbishop's register.

10. RICHARD DE IVINGO was master, anno 1334. He was rector of Faukkingge, and by exchange of that rectory was presented to the church of Brooke in Kent, anno 1335.

11. ROGER DE RONDES was master at that time when archbishop Stratford framed the statutes for this hospital, viz. September 23, 1342.

requested of him, to which he had consented, permission to pull down the parapet, at the extremity of the bridge next the river, as low as the pavement; and the master had agreed, that he would from time to time, repair and maintain the bridge and the pavement over it, extending from the wall of the hospital, to the extremity of the place where the parapet then stood; sixteen feet and nine inches next to the High-street, and fifteen feet and eleven inches next to St. Peter's-street, in all manner of reparations in the same manner as the former masters had heretofore done (except the parapet wall which was agreed to be pulled down), and the mayor, &c. agreed to pull down the parapet wall, and carry away the materials for the use of the hospital; and if any damage should accrue from thence, or by making or adding any new works to the bridge, they agreed that they would at all times make it good, and that they would always at their own cost repair and maintain all such new additional works and buildings which should be erected by them, and built adjoining to the bridge.

KING'S BRIDE HOSPITAL.

He is mentioned in the registers of Christ church in the years 1344 and 1348.

12. WILLIAM DE FARRHAM was collated by the prior and chapter of Canterbury (the see being then vacant) to this mastership, on June 18, 1349.

13. WILLIAM GRADEEL was admitted master on August 1, 1351.

14. THOMAS DE WOLTON was collated on Dec. 18, 1351. He is called Thomas de Wilton and Thomas Newe de Recolore. He was rector of Aldington and vicar of Recolure; he founded and endowed a chantry in the church of Reculver, anno 1354. He was an eminent man, and in his time great benefactions were conferred upon this hospital, as has been already mentioned above.

15. JOHN OVINGS, being master, presented Simon Crawle to the vicarage of Blene, anno 1381.

16. JOHN LUDHAM was collated on July 2, 1382.

17. JOHN WITTICLIFF was instituted master on April 9, 1383.

18. WALTER CAUSTON, monk and precentor of the church of Canterbury, was admitted on November 25, 1383; he continued in that office in 1392. He was constituted prior of St. Martin's in Dover, by archbishop Arundel.

Robert de Bradegare had been nominated to this mastership by the archbishop in 1378, but refused to accept of it; for which reason his name is omitted among the number of masters.

19. JOHN MOUNTAQUE was collated on Aug. 26, 1395.

20. THOMAS PELICAN was inducted on April 4, 1400, and resigned this office in 1405.

21. THOMAS BURTON, rector of Snargate, was admitted on July 5, 1405, and continued master in 1418.

22. THOMAS CHICHELEY was admitted on June 24, 1429.

23. THOMAS KEMP. He resigned this office.

24. THOMAS CHICHELEY occurs again. He was archdeacon of Canterbury, prebend of St. Paul's, provost of Wingham college, prothonotary to the Pope, and was inducted to this mastership on July 30, 1445 (x); he died on January 26, 1446.

25. JOHN BOURCHIER, LL. D. archdeacon of Canterbury, was collated on April 20, 1467; he was provost of Wingham, and prothonotary likewise to the Pope; he died on Nov. 6, 1469, and was buried in the cathedral of Canterbury (y).

(x) He was great-nephew to archbishop Chicheley, being grandson of his younger brother William. He was buried at Wingham. See Stemm. Chich. præf. ix. See the list of archdeacons, below.

(y) See the list of archdeacons, below.

(z) Duncombe's Hospitals, p. 373.

(a) Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 62, No. xxxvi.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

26. JOHN FITZWARREN was master on June 17, 1469.

27. THOMAS HALLIWELL was collated on May 24, 1494.

28. PETER LYGHAM, LL. D. was collated in 1538, and was dean of the arches at that time (z).

29. WILLIAM SWORDER was admitted on April 27, 1538 (a).

30. WILLIAM MORPHET, anno 1562.

31. THOMAS LAWSE, LL. D. was admitted on Feb. 18, 1569, being canon of Christ church, Canterbury, which he resigned, but continued master of this hospital until his death, which happened on August 9, 1595 (b).

32. RICHARD ROGERS, S. T. P. bishop suffragan of Dover, and dean of Canterbury, was collated on Aug. 25, 1595; he died on May 19, 1597 (c).

33. ISAAC COLF, A. M. was inducted master of this hospital on June 18, 1596. He was the fourth son of Amandus Colf, alias Colt, of Calais in France, and afterwards of the city of Canterbury, was born in Kent, and educated at Oxford. He died on July 15, 1597, and was buried in the chapter house of Canterbury cathedral (d).

34. JOHN BOYS, S. T. P. dean of Canterbury, was inducted on August 14, 1597, and died on September 28, 1625 (e).

35. ROBERT SAY, S. T. P. was inducted on October 26, 1625. He was rector of Harbledown, and dying on April 8, 1628, was buried in the chancel of Mongebam church (f).

36. JOHN SACKETTE, S. T. B. rector of Great Mongebam, was inducted on May 27, 1628, and dying on August 24, 1664, was buried in the chancel of Mongebam church (g).

37. EDWARD ALDEY, A. M. canon of Christ church in Canterbury, was collated on October 20, 1664. He died on July 12, 1673, and was buried in the chancel of the late St. Andrew's church in Canterbury, where he had a monument erected to his memory.

38. SAMUEL PARKER, S. T. B. archdeacon and prebendary of Canterbury, was inducted Sept. 10, 1673. He was rector of Chartbam and Ickbam, in this county, and continued master of this hospital after he was bishop of Oxford, to his death, which was on March 20, 1687.

39. JOHN BATTELY, S. T. P. archdeacon of Canterbury, and prebendary of that church, was

(b) Register of this hospital. He was the archbishop's commissary.

(c) Register of this hospital. See more of him among the deans, below. (d) Wood's Ath. Regist. of this hospital.

(e) Register of this hospital. See more of him, among the deans of Canterbury, below.

(f) Hospital Register.

(g) Ibid. Register.

KING'S BRIDGE HOSPITAL.

inducted on September 1, 1688, who is recorded as having been a good and generous benefactor to this hospital, as well in the extraordinary reliefs, which he afforded to the poor of it, as in the repairing and beautifying the buildings, chapel, and hall of it (b). He died in October 1708 (i).

40. JOHN PARIS, A. M. was admitted that same year; he was rector of the united parishes of St. Mary Bredman and St. Andrew in Canterbury, and vicar of Bekeborne in this county. He died on November 5, 1709, and was buried in St. Andrew's church.

41. JOHN BRADOCK, A. M. was collated to this mastership in January 1709. He was vicar of Hackington, alias St. Stephen's, near Canterbury, and dying on August 14, 1719, was buried in the chancel of that church.

42. JOHN LEWIS, A. M. was admitted on Dec. 16, 1719, of whom and his preferments, more may be seen under Minster in Tbanet, in the History of Kent. He died on Jan. 16, 1746.

43. JOHN SACKETTE, A. M. was admitted master on March 14, 1746. He was minister of Folkestone, and rector of Hawking in this co. and is well known by his publications as an antiquary and a poet. He died in 1753 (k).

44. HENRY HEATON, B. D. was the next master collated to it, being admitted on July 2, 1753. He was a prebendary of the church of Ely, rector of Ivychurch, and vicar of Boughton Blean in this county. He died on July 7, 1777, and was buried in the latter church.

45. WILLIAM BACKHOUSE, S. T. P. was admitted on September 23, 1777. He was archdeacon of this diocese, and rector of Deal in this county, before which he had various preferments in it, which he either resigned or exchanged at different times for others. He died Sept. 29, 1788, at his parsonage-house at Deal, and was buried in the chancel of that church (l).

46. WILLIAM GREGORY, A. M. was inducted in 1788. He is one of the six preachers of this cathedral, and rector of St. Andrew's in this city; and has been collated to the vicarage of Blean, of which he himself is patron. He is the present master of this hospital.

THE SEVERAL PRECINCTS AND VILLES without the walls of the city, in the suburbs of it, which are exempt from the liberties of it, being usually called extraparochial, and esteemed within the hundred of Westgate, and within the jurisdiction of the county of Kent at large, come next, in turn, to be described.

(b) Battely's Somner, pt. 2. p. 171, 172.

(i) See more of him and his predecessor, among the archdeacons, below.

(k) See an account of him, in Masters's History of Corpus

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

Of these, the villes and precincts of the antient priory of St. Gregory, and of the hospital of St. John, are situated in the suburb without Northgate.

THE VILLE or PRECINCT of ST. GREGORY is situated in the above suburb, on the east side of the high road leading to the island of Tbanet.

It has been a matter much controverted between the city and this priory, whether the precinct of it is within the liberties of the city or not; the following is an account of what has passed in former times, to investigate this matter and clear up the truth of it. In the year 1269, anno 53 Henry III, the prior of St. Gregories, by the same writ with the prior of Christ church, the abbat of St. Augustine, and others, after a legal discussion of the case, by the enquiry and verdict of select men of the city and vicarage, was acquitted of tallage, i. e. of being within the compass of tallage with the city. And in the argument drawn up by the abbat of St. Augustine, in defence of himself and his abbey against the city's challenging the abbey, and some of its neighbouring domains, to be, of and within the liberty of the city, in K. Henry VI.'s time; among other heads of it (that it might not seem strange, that the abbey being in the suburbs, and so near the city wall, should nevertheless be exempt from the franchise of the same) by shewing how the matter stood, in the same state with other like places about the city, this priory was pleaded to be without the walls, so without the liberties also of the city, in these words—and also there are some places as near the walls of the said city, as those places are, which are contained in the aforesaid articles of the bailiffs aforesaid, which always were without the said city, the precinct, liberty or suburbs of the same, namely the street of Westgate, the street of St. Martin, the priory of St. Gregory, the hospital of St. John, Northgate, &c.

In K. Henry VIII.'s time, certain articles were concluded between the prior of St. Gregory's and the convent of the same, on the one part, and the mayor and commonalty of the city, on the other part, for the composing of this difference about the temporal jurisdiction of the place; when it was agreed and allowed by the mediators, that this priory, as it was then inclosed, with the new houses built, as well on, and by the south part of their church gate, as by the north part of the court gate of the said church, should be fully and entirely within the liberties and franchises of the city of Canterbury—and yet, notwithstanding this award, this priory and its precincts have been for Christi college, p. 363. He was grandson of the former master of this hospital, of the same name.

(l) See more of him, among the archdeacons of this diocese, below.

a long

ST GREGORY'S PRIORY.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

a long time past acknowledged to be within the jurisdiction of the justices of the county of Kent at large, who sometime since created it a ville, and now exercise every jurisdiction over it, the same as in the other parts of the hundred of Westgate, which are exempt from the liberties of the city (m), of which hundred it is now esteemed an extraparochial district.

Eadmer gives us an account of the foundation of this priory, by archbishop Lanfranc, without the Northgate of this city. He says, on the opposite side of the way, (that is, to St. John's hospital), archbishop Lanfranc built a church, in honour of St. Gregory, in which he appointed canons; who should be bound to order the course of their lives, according to certain constitutions and canons, and who should administer to the infirm people of the above-mentioned hospital, whatever was necessary, for the good of their souls, and take care likewise of their burial; and that for these, he provided so much lands, tythes and rents, as seemed sufficient for their maintenance (n).

Thus archbishop Lanfranc, in 1084, established this priory, as a house of secular canons, which archbishop William Corboil, in K. Henry I.'s reign, changed to regular canons (o), otherwise called black canons, from the habit which they wore (p), of the order of St. Augustine, as appears by the catalogue of monasteries of that order, among which it is reckoned one (q). Contrary to this Mr. Somner says, that Lanfranc founded this priory, at first for regular canons, being the first house of this kind in the whole kingdom. If that is true, it certainly was erected long before the priory of the same order at Nosthill, in Yorkshire; which Rayner says, was the first in the kingdom, being built by Adelwold or Ethelwolp, K. Hen. I.'s Confessor, who, he continues, first brought the order into the land; but in this he seems, by the opinion of most, to be mistaken. What number of canons were required here by the foundation, does not appear; but by an entry of a visitation of the priory by cardinal archbishop Bourchier, only five canons gave in their names with the prior, who, indeed, then complained of the paucity of his canons, which, as he said, was occasioned by the diminution of their revenues, or, as he termed it, of their lands, revenues and rents.

As to any remarkable matters or occurrences

(m) This composition is printed at large, in Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 12, No. xiv^c.

(n) Hist. Nov. lib. i., p. 9. The charters of the archbishops Lanfranc and Hubert, though imperfect, are printed in Dugdale's Monasticon, vol. ii, p. 373, 375.

(o) See Tan. Mon. p. 210. Leland's Coll. p. 89, vol. i.

(p) They wore a habit, which was a white coat, and a linen rochet under a black cope, with a scapular to cover their head and shoulders. Polidor Virgil de Invent. Rer. lib. vii, cap. 3.

relating to this priory, I have read of very few. But there happened a great dispute, about the year 1085, between the convent of St. Augustine and this priory, concerning the relics of St. Mildred; each affirming that they had been removed to their monastery, the former claiming them from K. Canute, the latter from archbishop Lanfranc; who, as they affirmed, at the founding of their priory, bestowed upon it, among other things of great price, the translated relics of St. Mildred and St. Edburga. On July 2. 1145, the church of this priory was burnt down (r).

Besides these I find mention, that John Knyvet, the King's chancellor, having attended K. Edward III, on his embarking at Sandwich for foreign parts, in his 46th year, returned to Canterbury, and lodged in this priory on the 1st September, where he executed his office, by sealing several writs (s).

In the 3d year of K. Edward III, Queen Isabella being then at Canterbury, and taking up her abode at Christ church, master Henry de Cliff, with the Lord William de Herlafton, lodged at this priory of St. Gregory, when the former, appointed by the King, then abroad, keeper of the great seal, exercised his office on May 31, that year, anno 1329, by the sealing of certain writs; and he afterwards resigned up the seal in the presence of the King and many of the nobility, in the hall of the chancellor, in this priory, where he took up his abode, to the bishop of Lincoln, the King's chancellor, who after dinner caused several writs to be sealed there, after which the King stayed at Canterbury till the 23d of June (t).

By a record among the archives of Christ church, it appears, that the archbishop was patron, and in the vacancy of the see, the prior and chapter of Christ church were patrons of this priory, who upon every vacancy nominated and promoted the succeeding prior, and presented to such ecclesiastical benefices as were in the patronage of it.

As to the revenues and possessions belonging to it, mention is made in the survey of Domesday, in the description of the archbishop's manor of Stursate or Westgate, as it is now called; of such of them as lay within this city, as follows:

Et initi sunt iterum xxx & ii mansuræ & unum Molendinum quæ tenet clarici Sancti Gregorii ad eorum Ecclesiam. Ibiq; manent xii Burgenses qui reddunt eis xxxv. & Molendinum reddit v.

(q) It is reckoned as such among those, which coming in and compounding with K. Edward I. about a subsidy, (for a general denial of which by the whole clergy, regulating themselves by the pope's constitution, and the archbishop's example, they were by parliament excluded from the King's protection, and their goods declared confiscated to his use); obtained letters of protection. See Rayner, appendix, p. 66. Battely's Somner, p. 48.

(r) Batt. Somner, p. 49. (s) Rym. Fæd. vol. vi., p. 747.

(t) Rym. Fæd. vol. iv. p. 389, 391.

which

ST. GREGORY'S PRIORY.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

Which is: And therein are further xxxii dwellings and one mill, which the Clerks of St. Gregory's hold as belonging to their church. And there remain xii burgeses, who pay them xxxv shillings, and the rent of the mill is v shillings.

In another place in the same record, under the title of the city, the same is mentioned, with some little variation, thus:

Archiepiscopus habet infra Civitatem Cant. xii Burgenses & xxx mansuras quas tenuet Clerici de Villa in gildam suam & reddunt xxxv. & unum Molendinum reddit v.

Which is: The archbishop has within the city of Canterbury xii burgeses and xxx mansions, which the clerks hold of the villa towards the maintenance of their Guild, and they pay xxxv sh. and the rent of one mill is v sh.

This priory had endowment as well in tythes as temporalities. As for their temporalities; in the year 1292, they lay in Canterbury, Natyndon, Hugesfelde, Chartbam, Tanintone, and Herboldown, and they were together valued at 25l. 15s. and their tytheries, being the parsonages of Taninton, Westgate, Northgate, St. Dunstan's, Natindon, Livingborn, Waltbam, Elmefted, Betrickefdenne, Ores and Stallesfeld, together with the tytheries in Goldstanton, Gosball, Heresland, Holdan by Wingbam, Bishopborne near Berbam, Plukele and Risseburn, and in Northfleet, at 108l. 11s. The sum total being 133l. 15s. (u).

In a custumal of the manor of Northfleet, it is recorded, that the canons of St. Gregory's were to have four acres of the best wheat, and four acres of the best barley which grew yearly upon the lands of the lord of that manor (v).

Archbishop Hubert, in the time of K. John, having dissolved the nunnery of Remsted in Suffex, upon account of the ill lives of the nuns, annexed their estate to this priory of St. Gregory; but the prior and convent afterwards regranted the whole of it again to archbishop Edmund, who re-established that nunnery again (w).

At the time of the dissolution, there were thirteen religious in this priory, the yearly revenues of which were, according to Dugdale, 121l. 15s. 1d. According to Speed, 166l. 4s. 5½d. the latter being the gross, the former the clear annual value (x).

The coat of arms belonging to this priory was—Per chevron sable and argent; in chief, 2 mullets pierced of the 2d; in base a ducal coronet composed of leaves and crosses patee, or.

There was a cloyster belonging to this priory, as appears by the will of Thomas Sydrake, chaplain of Canterbury, who in 1516 gave 6s. 8d. to the reparation of it. As to the church itself of this priory, it is so entirely demolished, that the place where it stood is unknown.

By the wills in the prerogative office, Canterbury, it appears, that the following persons were buried in this church and the cemetery of it, and were benefactors to it, viz. Geffry Holman, of Northgate parish, in 1478, was buried in the church of St. Gregory of canons regular, before the window of St. Martin, on the north side of the church.—John Garwynton, of St. Andrew's, in this church, besides Emmot his wife there, in 1464, and gave five marcs towards the building of the bell tower here; Robert Smyth tarrying within the hospital of St. John, Northgate, in 1476, in the cemetery of it; Henry Trewonwall, registrar of the consistory of Canterbury, in the nave of the church, before the high cross, in 1483; Henry Lovericke, of St. Dunstan's, gent. who in 1487 gave 10l. to the making the new steeple here; John Coke, of the parish of St. John without Northgate, in 1515, was buried in this church-yard; Elizabeth Snowden in 1533; Margaret Fryer, of St. John Baptist's parish in Canterbury, was buried in this church-yard in 1522; Alyce Consaunt, widow of Thomas Consaunt the elder, of the hospital of St. John, by her will anno 1495, ordered to be buried in the belfry of St. Gregory's, beside the sepulture of her late husband; Henry Cooper, B. L. in 1500, was buried in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary, within the church of this priory.

The following is a catalogue of some of the priors of this house.

PRIORS OF ST. GREGORY'S.

(y) RICHARD was prior about 1183, and resigned in 1187.

(z) DUNSTAN, who is mentioned by Gervas, was prior anno 1187.

(a) THOMAS in 1227.

(b) NICHOLAS in 1244.

(c) HUGH in 1263.

(d) WILLIAM in 1271.

(e) HENRY in 1275 and 1278.

(f) GUIDO in 1293.

(g) ELIAS DE SANDWICH was made prior 1294.

ROBERT DE WINCHEAP died in 1349.

WILLIAM ATTE THORNE, canon of this house, was made prior in 1349, and was confirmed 4 id. June, and installed the 10th of the same month.

See Reg. Roff. p. 170. He resigned on being promoted to the abbatskip of Cirencester. Willis's Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 61.

(z) Register of Christ Church.

(a) Ibid.

(b) Ibid.

(c) Ibid.

(d) Ibid.

(e) Ibid.

(f) Thorne, col. 1961. (g) Regist. of Christ church.

(u) Thorne, col. 2166. (v) Libr. Eccl. Christi Cant.

(w) See Tan. Mon. p. 559.

(x) There is a rental of the possessions of this dissolved priory, as in 1648, among the Harleian Mss. No. 1833, and No. 7048-40—excerpt; ex Chartulario Priorat Sci Gregorii.

(y) He was witness to a charter of Waleran, bishop of Rochester, who came to that see in 1182, and died in 1184.

ST. GREGORY'S PRIORY.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

(b) THOMAS in 1403.

(i) WILLIAM DE CANTERBURY in 1413.

(k) THOMAS in 1426 and 1443.

(l) EDWARD GYLDFOURD in 1498.

(m) CLEMENT HARDING in 1507.

(n) THOMAS WELLYS, S. T. P. bishop of Sidon, succeeded him; he is styled doctor, and was rector of Woodchurch in Kent, and vicar of Westgate in Canterbury, in 1523. He died in September 1526, and was buried in the church of this priory, next his predecessor Gyldford.

(o) WILLIAM BRABORNE, cl. in 1528.

(p) JOHN SYMKINS was the last prior of this house at the dissolution of it, which happened in the 27th year of K. Henry VIII.'s reign, this being one of those houses which were suppressed by the act passed that year, as not having revenues of the clear amount of 200l. per ann. and for giving them to the King.

Upon the suppression of this priory it came, with all its possessions, which for the most part consisted of parsonages appropriate and portions of tythes in different parishes, into the King's hands, where it remained but a small time; for that same year the King was enabled by an act then passed (q), to exchange the site of the late dissolved priory of St. Gregory, and the possessions belonging to it (excepting the manor of Houghfield, and some small parcels of land therein mentioned)

(b) Regist. Christ Church. (i) Ibid. (k) Ibid.

(l) He is buried in the church of this priory, as is mentioned in prior Wellys's will.

(m) Browne Willis's additions, at the end of Tanner's Monasticon.

(n) Register of Christ church. His will is in Prerog. office, Canterbury. See an account of him, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 663.

(o) He is thus written in John Roper's will in 1527, in Prerog. office, Canterbury.

(p) Upon the dissolution of the priory, he obtained from the King an annual pension of 20 marks, until he should be preferred to one or more benefices of that yearly value which he was, on being advanced to one of the prebends of the cathedral of Rocheſter, on the new foundation of the dean and chapter of it. He possessed this prebend till March 14, 1553, when he was deprived for being married. He had been once a monk of St. Bartholomew's in London. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 169. In 1534, January 9, he, with five other canons of this house, subscribed to the King's supremacy. Rym. Fæd. vol. xiv, p. 497.

(q) I have seen an exemplification of this act, under the great seal, dated September 4, anno 28 Henry VIII.

(r) See vol. ii. of the History of Kent, p. 445 (i).

(s) On the sale of this lease, under the decree of the Court of Chancery in 1774, the particulars of the value of it were as follows:—The site of the priory with other houses and pieces of land and gardens in Canterbury, 182l. 11s. per annum. The tythes of Poldhurst in Harbledown; the parsonages of St. Dunstan's, Westgate and Northgate, in Canterbury; the parsonage of Thanington; the tythery of Goldstanton, in Ash and Wingham; the parsonages of Beakſborne, Nackington and Owre; the tythery of Rusſborne; the parsonages of Stalisfield, East Lenham, Elmsted, Walſham and Betherſden, and a pension of 1l. 6s. 8d. yearly for the vicar with the archbishop of Canterbury, for the site of the late dissolved abbey of St. Radigund near Dover, with all its possessions (r).

This estate becoming thus part of the revenues of the see of Canterbury, was the whole of it demised by the archbishop, in one grand lease, in which all advowsons and nomination of churches and chapels were excepted, for the term of twenty-one years, under which same kind of demise it has continued ever since, the inheritance of it still remaining vested in his grace the archbishop (s).

In K. Edward VI.'s reign, the lessee of this estate was Richard Neville, of Canterbury, esq; who died possessed of the lease of it in the 5th year of that reign, and by his will gave it, after his wife's death, to Alexander Neville, esq; his son.

In Q. Elizabeth's reign, the lease was in the possession of ſir John Boys, knt. descended of those of Fredville in Nonington. He resided in the house of the late priory, and was a person of great wisdom and sanctity of manners, and was the founder of Jesus, otherwise called Boys's hospital, still remaining in the suburbs of Northgate, near this priory. He died in 1612 and was buried in Canterbury cathedral, where his monument still remains, with his effigies at full length on it (t). By his will he devised his interest in this lease to his widow, who resided of Elmsted; the yearly value and other particulars of all which have been already noticed under their several heads, in the former part of this work; and amounted to the yearly value of 935l. Total 1117l. 16s. 8d. per annum; and were demised by the earl of Chesterfield, the principal lessee under the archbishop, for the yearly rent of 540l. to George Gippi, of Canterbury, esq; clear of the archbishop's reserved rent, and all other deductions and out-goings whatsoever.

The payments and out-goings from this estate were as follows:—To the archbishop yearly, in money, 110l.—for twenty wethers 20l.—two acquittances 5s. To the vicars of Betherſden, Stalisfield, Elmsted, Walſham, Beakſborne and St. Dunſtan, together 106l. 6s. 8d. To the curates of Aſh, Nackington, Thanington and Owre 105l. Procurations to the archdeacon 2l. 15s. 2d. Quit-rents to the dean and chapter of Canterbury, for Okerland, 13s. 4d. To the manors of Boughton, Stalisfield, Thanington and Goldstanton 1l. 17s. 11d. Procurations to the archbishop at his visitations, 2l. 9s. 6d.—amounting altogether to 348l. 14s. 3d. so that the whole paid by the under lessee for this estate was 888l. 14s. 3d. per ann.

(t) He was the youngest son of William Boys, of Fredville in Nonington, by Mary Ryngely his wife. He was knighted at the tower in 1603. He served in parliament for Canterbury anno 43 Elizabeth. He was a counsellor at law and steward to five archbishops, recorder of Canterbury, judge of the Chancery Court for the five ports; and from his residence here, was usually styled ſir John Boys, of St. Gregory's, knt. He purchased many lands in this county, and founded Jesus hospital, in the suburbs of Northgate, as above-mentioned. Dying in 1612, he was buried in the cathedral; having directed by his will, in Prerog. office, Canterbury, to avoid the concurrence of poor at his burial, several legacies to the poor of different parishes, and a number equal to his age, which was 77, to be clothed. He was twice married; first, to Dorothy, daughter of Tea.

Pauly,

ST. GREGORY'S PRIORY.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

here, and after her death to his nephew Thomas Boys, who was afterwards of St. Gregory's, esq; whence he removed to the precincts of Christ church (u), having alienated this lease to fir Charles Hales, of Bekeborne, knt. who died possessed of it in 1623, leaving his interest in it to his son Thomas Hales, esq; from whom it passed into the name of Honywood, and in 1643 I find that fir Robert Honwood, of Charing, knt. was the lessee of it; sometime after which the interest of it appears to have been vested in the family of Wotton, of Boughton Malberb, from whom it descended, with much other inheritance in this county, to Philip Dormer Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield, who died possessed of it in 1773, without issue; after which it was sold, under a decree of the Court of Chancery, to George Gipps, esq; of Canterbury, M. P. for that city, who is the present lessee of this dissolved priory and ville of St.

Gregory, with the rest of the possessions belonging to it (v).

The antient house of the priory seems after the dissolution to have been fitted up as a mansion of some consequence, most probably in Q. Elizabeth's reign for the residence of fir John Boys, and there are the remains of several noble and lofty apartments in it; but the whole has been ruined for a number of years past, and only the bare walls of them left, without a window frame or pane of glass to keep out the weather. It is now made use of as a potter's workshop, and for store-rooms for his manufactory.

Adjoining the back part of the priory buildings, is a large garden ground, formerly the canons orchard or garden, in the midst of which was, within these few years, the ruin of an ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Thomas the martyr of Canterbury (w).

St Gregory's Priory, Canterbury.

Pauley, by whom he had a daughter Dorothy, who died an infant; and secondly, Jane, daughter of Thomas Walker, of London, by whom he had no issue, who survived him at his decease. He devised this lease to his nephew for life, and afterwards to his nephew Thomas, son of his elder brother Thomas Boys, of Eythorne. See vol. iii. of this History; p. 565. He bore for his arms—Or, a griffin segreant sable, within a bordure gules, for Boys; quartering Phalick, Al-day and Ryngeley; over all, an escutcheon of pretence, for Pauley;—Argent, 3 lions passant, gules; on a bend azure, 3 mullets of the 1st.

(u) He was usually called Dr. Boys, being son of Thomas Boys, of Eythorne. He married in 1588, Sarah, daughter of Richard Rogers, dean of Canterbury, and suffragan of Dover, who died in 1602, as he did in 1625, and was buried in the cathedral, as appears by the register of it. He left issue several children, of whom John, the eldest, was of Hoad court, and ancestor of the Boys's of that place, now extinct.

(v) He is descended from Thomas Gipps, esq; who was of the cloth-workers company in London, to the livery of which he was admitted in 1608. He left a son Roger, and a daughter Sarah, married to James Bunce, esq; afterwards knighted, and an alderman of London. Roger Gipps, the son above-mentioned, married in 1637, Helen, daughter of fir William Brockman, of Beechborough, knt. sheriff of Kent anno 18 Charles I, by Anna, only daughter and heir of Simon Bunce, of Linsted, and uncle of fir James Bunce, of Kemsing, knt. above-mentioned; by her he had issue three sons. Simon the eldest, who left issue; George the second son, of Wye, cl. who died in 1706, leaving a son John, of whom below, and two daughters; and William the third son, of Smeth, gent. who died in 1694, and left by Mary his wife, five daughters; of whom Ellen married the Rev. John Richards, of Braborne; and Elizabeth, Mr. Thomas Johnson. John Gipps, the only son above-mentioned of the Rev. George Gipps, of Wye, married Sarah Flint, by whom he had three sons, viz. Henry, who had issue two sons, Henry, now of Canterbury, banker; George, rector of Ringwold; and a daughter Elizabeth, married to Mr. John Bolland, of London. Richard, the second son, is now in Jamaica, unmarried; and George the third son, is of Canterbury, esq; and M. P. for that city, and lessee of this precinct and ville of the dissolved priory of St. Gregory; he has been thrice married, first, to Elizabeth Jobanna, daughter of Mr. John Roberts, of Harbledown, who died without issue; secondly, in 1780 to Sarah, daughter of Mr. Stanton, by whom he has issue two sons, George and Henry; and thirdly, in 1792, to Elizabeth, daughter of Dr. Lawrence, late of Canterbury, M. D. He bears for his arms—Azure, a fess ingrailed between 6 estoiles or.

(w) For this note, see the next page.

Through

ST. GREGORY'S PRIORY.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

Through this ground runs the common water-course, formerly belonging to the prior and convent, but now to the dean and chapter of Christ church in Canterbury, concerning which, among the archives of that church, there is a memorandum of a charter made in 1227, by the prior and convent of St. Gregory, in which they agree to preserve, as far as they can, this water-course free from damage, and to grant free liberty of passage to and from it, through their court and gate, to the workmen of Christ church, as often as it should be necessary for them to repair it^(x).

Belonging and adjoining to this priory, both before and after the dissolution of it, there was a cemetery or church-yard, not appropriated to the priory only for the burial of the domestics, but which was, whether of right or by courtesy only, I know not, common to others also with them, and those, not the hospitallers only, who were destitute of any church-yard within themselves till the beginning of the last century, but the parishioners of Northgate, their neighbours likewise; of which church this priory had the patronage; and these used constantly by their wills, to appoint their burials in this church-yard, and never mention any of their own; for it was with them the same, as with those other parish churches of this city, which belonging some to Christ church, and some to St. Augustine's, and had their want of church-yards supplied by the cemeteries of those monasteries.

This cemetery or church-yard at St. Gregory's continued to the use of the parish of Northgate, after the dissolution, until, as it is said, sr John Boys, the lessee of the priory, obtained the appropriating and inclosing it, upon exchange of the modern church-yard ground for it with the churchwardens of Northgate, for the time being. Till this time then it continued to that parish, as to the fact, a burial place, but was not acknowledged theirs of right; for at a visitation holden in the year 1560, a presentment from the parish of Northgate was made by sworn men; that Mr. May, then it seems lessee of the priory, did withhold part of the church-yard, &c. upon which he, in defence of himself, being convened upon this presentment, produced the King's letters patent, as the act of court ran, by which it appeared, that the church-yard was the hereditary right of the archbishop of Canterbury and his successors (y).

(w) This appears by the will of one William Harry, of St. Martin's, in 1461, who gave a legacy to it by the description of the chapel of the brotherhood of St. Thomas the martyr, situate in the garden of St. Gregory's. Regist. Cur. Consistor. Cantuar.

(x) There is added in this agreement, that they should send in dinner time into the refectory of Christ church, a basket of the best fruit, on or before the 15th day of Sept. yearly; and should further pay the sum of 8d. as a yearly is situated on the opposite, or west side of the road to the priory of St. Gregory last mentioned, with which it was founded by archbishop Lanfranc at the same time, in the year 1084, and is, in like manner, exempt from the liberties of the city, being esteemed to lie in the hundred of Westgate and in the jurisdiction of the county of Kent at large.

THE HOSPITAL OF ST. JOHN

Eadmer, in his account of the foundation of this hospital (z), informs us, that without the north gate of this city, archbishop Lanfranc built a fair and large house of stone, and added to it several habitations, with a spacious court, contrived in the best manner, for the benefit of those who should dwell in it; this building he divided into two parts, and designed one part for infirm men, the other part for infirm women; and he provided them with food and raiment at his own charge. He appointed officers, who should see that they wanted nothing, and that the men and women should not come to one another; on the other side of the road he built a church in honour of St. Gregory, in which he appointed certain canons (being the priory last described) who should administer to the infirm people of this hospital, whatsoever was necessary for the good of their souls, and take care also of their burial; and for these, he provided so much land, tythes, and rents, as seemed sufficient for their maintenance.

Much has already been said of this hospital, in the description of that at Harbledown, in the history of Kent (a), which was the other twin hospital, as it may be called, to this, for their parity, as well in time as manner both of their erection and original endowment (b).

Archbishop Richard, Becket's immediate successor, in a charter of his to these two hospitals, relating first their erection by his predecessor Lanfranc, shews, that he endowed them with seven score pounds per annum, to issue and arise out of his manors of Reculver and Boffon; that is, to either hospital, after an equal division, 70l. per annum (c). This was the original endowment of both these hospitals, with which, however, the archbishop finding them scarce well able to subsist, added 20l. per ann. more to their former income, payable out of Reculver parsonage, which 160l. per ann. continued afterwards paid to rent, for a small piece of land there, formerly belonging to the archdeacon. See Battely's Somner, p. 50.

(y) Liber Consistor. Cant. Battely's Somner, p. 49.

(z) Hist. Nov. lib. i, p. 9.

(a) See vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 573.

(b) Battely's Somner, p. 43, 48, 50. Tan. Mon. p. 209.

(c) Inter Cartas S. Johis Hospital. This charter is printed at length, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 61, No. xxxv.

them,

ST. JOHN'S HOSPITAL.

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

them, and unaltered until archbishop Kilwardby's time. For so it appears by an exemplification made of certain charters of these hospitals, under the seal of Thomas Chicheley, doctor of the decrees, archdeacon of Canterbury, and protobonary to the Pope. But archbishop Kilwardby disliking this method of payment, withdrew their stipend, and in lieu of it assigned over and appropriated to them his parsonage of Reculver, with the chapels annexed; but on account of some inconveniences arising from the infirm condition of the people of the hospitals, which rendered them both unable and unfit to attend and intermeddle in a tythery, especially one so remote, his next successor, archbishop John Peckham, altered and revoked what archbishop Kilwardby had done, and restored the hospitals to their former estate (d).

Afterwards archbishop Stratford obtained licence of K. Edward III, of whom the above-mentioned parsonage was held in capite, by his charter to appropriate it to the archbishop's table, charged nevertheless with the old payment or stipend to these hospitals, which archbishop Islip afterwards, with consent of the prior and chapter of Christ church, confirmed to them; ever since which time they have peaceably enjoyed it (e).

The same archbishop in the above-mentioned reign, when he erected and endowed the vicarage of Northgate, expressly reserved and excepted from the vicar of it, the tythes of St. John's hospital of Northgate (f).

In the 38th year of that reign, anno 1384, the revenues of the chantry of Lukedale, denominated the chantry in Well, called Lukedale, consisting of thirty-two acres of land, and several annual rents in money, cocks, and hens, with the appurtenances at Wyke near Canterbury; which chantry was forsaken on account of the smallness of its income, were alienated and transferred by Thomas de Garwynton the patron, with the licence of the King and the lord of the fee, being within the lordship of Longport, to this hospital of Northgate, that they might pray for the souls of Reginald de Cornhill, formerly founder of it, and others (g).

In the above-mentioned reign of K. Edward III, this hospital was great part of it destroyed by a fire, as appears by some letters of the hos- pital, under their seal, still extant, framed after the manner of a brief, and directed to all prelates in general; in which they in a piteable manner deplore their miserable estate, occasioned, as they say, by a late lamentable fire happening in their house, which had wasted their hospital and adjacent edifices, in which were more than 100 poor people sustained, with desire of their charitable relief, letting them know, by way of persuasion, what indulgences had been granted to their benefactors by several archbishops and bishops of former times (b).

In the 26th year of K. Henry VIII, the revenues of this hospital were valued at 93l. 15s. in the whole, and 91l. 16s. 8½d. per ann. clear; of which sum 80l. was a stipend paid by the archbishop (i).

Mr. Somner says (k), he could instance in some particulars, in which this hospital suffered by the King's Commissioners in that reign; and he continues, that he suspects much the fleecing of it, as well as other such like places, by the sacrilegious pilferers of those revenues, and wretched times, who were set upon the spoil of the very spital itself.

At a visitation of this hospital by archdeacon Harpsfield, in 1557, it was presented, that the ornaments of the chapel had been taken away by the mayor. Memorandum, delivered again one chalice with the paten of silver, four table cloths, four surplices, two towels, three bells in the steeple. Memorandum, they say they are of no parish, but a parish of themselves.

On the 24th of October 1674, there was an account of the two hospitals given to the archbishop, by which the state of them at that time may be known. By it we learn, that the hospital of St. John the Baptist contained a prior, a reader, eighteen in-brothers, twenty in-sisters, and the like number of out-brothers and out-sisters; the revenues of it being in the whole 195l. 8s. 9d. (l).

Mr. Somner tells us, that in his time, about the middle of the last century, this hospital had a fair chapel to it, decently kept, in which divine service was said, the sacraments administered, and God's word preached to them of the house; the chaplain's stipend was the same as his predecessors of old, 8l. per ann. The chapel had some domestic benefactors (m); among others, one William Gardre, a priest, who was buried in it

(d) In Prynne, vol. iii, p. 422, pat. 18 Ed. I, m. 26, de revocatione appropriat. eccles. de Reculver.

(e) Battely's Somner, p. 43, 44.

(f) The words are, the oblations and obventions of the hospital of Northgate only excepted. Battely's Somner, p. 51.

(g) Battely's Somner, p. 35. See Hist. of Kent, vol. iii, p. 666.

(b) Battely's Somner, p. 50.

(i) Tan. Mon. p. 209. (k) Battely's Somner, p. 51.

(l) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 169.

(m) There is mention made in several of the wills, in the Prerog. office, of different persons buried in this chapel, who were benefactors to the members of it. Among these, Alexander Smith, one of the brothers of the hospital, was buried in this chapel of it, in 1585; and by his will gave to the hospital 5s. yearly, to be employed to the maintaining of the drinking, called Mr. Lewises drinking, for ever. Andrew Goodlad, cl. was buried in 1604, in the church of this hospital. John Daniel, one of the brothers of this hospital, by his will in 1612, desired to be buried in this church under the communion table, and gave to the hospital 8s. for the

ST. JOHN'S HOSPITAL.

in 1511, and by his will gave 40s. to the mending of the steeple, and 4l. for a new bell. John Roper, gent. living in this hospital in 1527, by his will, took order with his executors for the making as large a window at our Lady's altar of the said hospital, as there then was at the high altar of it, to be glazed with such imagery as he should shew to his executors, to be done within two years after his decease (n).

The window above-mentioned, over the high altar in the choir, was a fine one, having in as many panes, a figure of one of the twelve apostles portraied with the several articles of the creed, which they are said to have made.

This chapel (o), which is dedicated to St. Gregory, has suffered much since the above time; the bells of it have been sold, the steeple and north isle have been taken down (p), as have many of the houses, and smaller and less convenient ones have been erected in their room; and a pentized wall, called by the poor people their cloysters, has been likewise taken down, greatly to the hindrance of their former comfort.

There have been some few modern benefactors to this hospital, viz. Mrs. Elizabeth Lovejoy, widow, by her will in 1694, gave out of her personal estate the sum of 10l. per ann. to be paid to this hospital, to be divided among the poor of it, in like manner as her gift to Cogan's hospital, as mentioned above.

Ralph Snowe, gent. of Lambeth, by his will dated in 1707, left to this hospital 200l. of which 160l. were laid out by archbishop Tenison in 1714, in the purchase of fourteen acres of marsh land, in the parish of Wickham Breaus, which now let for 8l. per ann. which estate was vested in trustees; the Rev. Dr. Hey, of Wickham, is now the only surviving trustee. This hospital receives yearly the sixth part of the interest of 163l. 16s. 3d. Old South Sea Annuities, being the money from Mrs. Masters's legacy, who died in 1716, which sum is vested, in trust, in the mayor and commonalty of Canterbury, for the benefit of the several hospitals of this city; of which a further account the yearly continuance of the drinking above-mentioned, for ever; and that there be had in a sheep of four years old, at the said feast. Thomas Tatnall, then the clerk, and John Ushorne, the prior of the hospital, and Elizabeth Owre, of St. Gregory's, widow, were all buried in 1612, in the chancel of this church.

(n) His will is in the Prerog. office, Canterbury, by which it appears that he was possessed of Brenley, Hawe and other manors, in the county of Kent.

(o) In this chapel was formerly, a memorial for Alice Ashburnham, who lay buried in the side chancel, being the daughter and heir of William Tooke, esq. and Alice Woodland his wife; and before, was the wife of Thomas Roper, gent. who died in 1524, and these arms, viz. Ashburnham—a fess between 6 mullets, impaling Tooke, of Bere; and another shield, Tooke, impaling Woodland,—a chevron ermine, between 3 squirrels sejant. In the east window of the chancel was a legend of these words, in old English letters, then legible may be seen above, among the charitable benefactions to this city (q).

WESTGATE HUNDRED.

Matthew Brown, by his will proved in 1721, gave to this hospital an annuity of ten shillings, to be paid yearly on the 20th of March, out of two houses in the Borough of Staplegate, with power of distress, &c.

Archbishop Secker in 1769, left by will to this hospital 500l. in the three per Cent. Bank Annuities, in reversion, after the death of Mrs. Talbot and her daughter; both of whom being deceased, this hospital is now become intituled to it.

Thomas Hanson, of Crosby-square, London, esq. who died in 1770, left by will, 500l. to this hospital, which being vested in the three per Cent. Bank Annuities, produces the sum of 17l. 10s. yearly dividend, which is paid half yearly to this hospital.

Besides which, this hospital is entitled to a contingent interest in the benefaction of Leonard Cotton, gent. who by his will in 1605, gave the reversion of divers tenements in Canterbury to it, after the several entails made of them, as therein mentioned, had ceased; and he ordered further, that in case the lands and tenements which he had settled on the poor of that part of Maynard's Spital, since called Cotton's hospital, founded by him, should be applied or disposed of by the mayor and commonalty, or such other persons as should be possessed of the trust of them to any other use or purpose, than what he had given them for, to the said poor, or that they should in any sort abuse his gift, that then his bequest should be void, and that such persons and their heirs, which should be seized of the premises to such uses, should thenceforth be seized thereof, to the use of the brethren and sisters of St. John's hospital, without Northgate, and their successors for ever, for their relief and comfort. At which time this hospital consisted of a master, and a reader, of eighteen in-brothers, one of whom was prior; twenty in-sisters, and the like number of out-brothers and out-sisters.

The statutes by which the two hospitals of Herin Mr. Somner's time—Orate pro Rooper & pro bono Thomafine uxoris ejus Domini 1629. In the choir window was this legend—Orate pro bono statu Hyllys fratris istius Hospitalis & Prior qui ab hoc Seculo migravit & fenestram istam fieri fecit anno Domini 1474. In the south window—Orate p. aibs Domini Willielmi Septuans Militis & Eliz. uxoris ejus; having above it his figure, with those of his two wives kneeling, and these arms on his surcoat—Azure, 3 wheat sheaves or; on her mantle—Azure, a lion rampant crowned. In the east window of the chancel which Roper made, were painted his arms, impaling Tooke, of Bere; and of Roper, impaling Naylor.

(p) These were taken down in 1744, to diminish the expence of repairs, and all the bells but one were then sold as useless, by virtue of a faculty from archbishop Potter.

(q) Mr. Duncombe, in his Hospitals, p. 196, says, it produces to the hospital no more than 7s. 6d. yearly.

baldownt,

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

balldowne and St. John's are at this day governed, were framed by archbishop Parker, who made some additions to them on Aug. 20, 1565, and he again reviewed them on May 24, 1574 (r). There have been some additional decrees made since, by the archbishops Whitgift, Abbot, Laud and Sancroft, who took the well governing of these hospitals under their care (s); and under these statutes and decrees they are both at this time governed.

The present establishment of this hospital consists of a prior, reader, eighteen in-brothers and in-sisters and twenty-two out-brothers and sisters, who have only a pension of 11. 4s. per ann. each, paid quarterly; of whom twenty resident in or near Lambeth, are nominated by the archbishop, and the other two are recommended by the master, who is the same as of St. Nicholas hospital in Harbledown.

The revenues of this hospital, in the whole, amount to 299l. 17s. 7½d. per ann. (t) which affords, after the disbursements are discharged out of them, above 6l. 10s. to each resident member.

THE MONASTERY OF ST. PETER AND ST. PAUL, usually called ST. AUGUSTINE'S ABBEY.

IN THE eastern suburb of the city, is the precinct of the once magnificent abbey of St. Augustine, much of the ruins of which is still remaining; the abbey stood mostly in the western part of it, the whole being inclosed with a strong wall, containing within it about sixteen acres of ground.

This precinct is exempt from the liberties of the city and county of the city of Canterbury, being esteemed to be within the jurisdiction of the justices of the county of Kent at large; a small part of it on the south side, next the wall of this precinct, adjoining to the public high-road of Longport, is within that borough (u). The whole of it is extra-parochial.

Between this monastery and that of Christ church, there was ever an apparent jealousy and emulation; though no episcopal chair had been placed in it, yet the abbat had the privilege of the mitre and of other ensigns of episcopacy; and that the abbey might not seem second to any, or inferior to Christ church itself, they put themselves under immediate subjection to the Pope, and procured to themselves an exemption from professional obedience to the metropolitanical church, and the jurisdiction of the metropolitan; and if the profound veneration, which all men bore to St. Thomas the martyr, had not surmounted all opposition, they would at least have maintained their pretences to an equality, if not to a superiority of glory and dignity, against their rival monastery.

K. ETHELBERT having seated St. Augustine in his royal palace in Canterbury, as has been fully related above, began by his persuasions in 598, on a large spot of ground, situated without the city walls eastward, the building of a monastery to the honour of St. Peter and St. Paul; after which, in 605, the King, with his Queen Bertha and their son Edbald, St. Augustine, and the nobles of the realm, celebrated the solemnity of Christmas, at Canterbury; when, with the general consent and approbation of all present, as well clergy as laity, the King, on the 5th id. Jan. delivered up this monastery, with the endowment of it, at the instance of St. Augustine, to God and the monks, who should serve perpetually in it; and he enriched it with different possessions of lands and other ample gifts, and placed Peter, the first abbat, over the monastery and the congregation of monks in it (v).

In this monastery St. Augustine placed Benedictine monks, that is, followers of the order of black monks, after the rule of St. Benet, of which order he himself was, and they were of the same sort as those placed in the neighbouring priory of Christ church.

K. Ethelbert's two printed charters of the donation and foundation of this monastery, are both dated in the same year, anno 605; the variations of these one from the other, may well cause a suspicion of their not being genuine, and sir Henry Spelman, though for other reasons, is of that opinion (w), although they are printed

(r) See Strype's Life of archbishop Parker, p. 75. The statutes in the appendix, No. 12.

(s) Battely, pt. 2, p. 170.

(t) Duncombe's Hospitals, p. 197.

(u) The antient public highway from Canterbury to Sandwich went once in a direct line from Burgate to St. Martin's hill, the south side of which was the northern boundary of the borough of Longport; but the monks, desirous of enlarging their precincts, built their wall in its present circuitous form, and turned the public road round the outside of it. After this the great cemetery gate of the monastery, opposite Burgate, was built, and a public foot-path only was left, in a direct line where the old road above-mentioned went, from thence through this precinct eastward, to a smaller postern gate in a nook of the wall of it, near St. Martin's, now stopped up, but yet plainly visible; so that all the ground between the above direct line of the foot-path, between these two gates, and between it and the south wall of the monastery, is within the borough of Longport, and no more.

(v) It appears that this monastery was not entirely finished until the time of archbishop Laurence, successor to St. Augustine, when it was consecrated solemnly to the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul; and it was again afterwards dedicated anew, in the year 978, in honor of the holy apostles Peter and Paul, and St. Augustine; of all which, further notice will be taken below.

(w) See Spelman's Councils, p. 125. Battely's Somner, p. 5. To this may be added, what Gervas, col. 1458, relates of the producing these charters in 1181, before archbishop Richard and others, at London, by mandate from the pope; from the manuscript registers of the monastery and other ancient documents of the like sort, belonging to it (x), and the former of them is recited in the charter of inspeximus of K. Edward III, in his 36th year, confirming the possessions of this monastery to it (y).

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

K. Ethelbert, by another charter, granted that same year, having constituted Peter, a monk, the first abbat of this monastery, as above-mentioned, gave to it for the increase of its revenues, the ville of Sturiag, otherwise called Cbistelet, with all its lands and appurtenances, together with his golden sceptre, and other rich gifts, mentioning in it, that Augustine had also enriched this monastery with relics of the apostles and martyrs, and with other ecclesiastical ornaments, sent him from Rome, and had directed (and that with the Pope's licence) that he and all his successors should be buried in it, for that the city was not for the dead, but for the living, where he, the King, likewise had ordered the sepulture both pope; when, he says, the abbat, &c. produced two schedules, which they affirmed to be originals; of which the first, being the most antient, was razed and interlined, as it had been amended and was without a seal; this they said, was the charter of privilege of K. Ethelbert. The other was much more modern, to which hung a leaden seal, (bullæ) with the image of a bishop, very new. This charter they said, was the privilege of St. Augustine. Of these charters, in the judgment of those who saw them, these remarks occurred. In the first, there was indeed a commendable antiquity, but it was razed and interlined, nor was it strengthened with the authority of any seal. Of the other, what was much to be found fault with was, that the writing, as well as the leaden seal (bullæ) appeared new; whereas, it ought to have been of the old age of 580 years, that is, from the time of St. Augustine, whose it was said to be. It was likewise remarked, and was notorious and worthy observation, that the seal (bullæ) of it was lead; whereas the Cisalpine prelates and primates, were not accustomed to put leaden seals to their authentic charters. Besides which, the method of the Latin, and the form of the diction seemed dissonant from the Roman style. These two charters only were brought in proof of their privileges; whereas the monks had boasted, that they had several others; and in some manuscript copies of Thorne, it is mentioned, that archbishop Richard ordered these charters to be burned, as being forged; and abbat Nicholas, elected in 1273, at his own expence, provided himself privately, with several of these bullæ of privileges, to strengthen their cause against their enemies.

(x) By these charters, K. Ethelbert gave a portion of land for the purpose above-mentioned, lying on the east side of Canterbury, to build a monastery on, with dreadful imprecations on the violators of them. In the first of them, the boundaries are said to be: on the east, the church of St. Martin; on the south, Burgate-way; on the west and north, Drouing-street. In the second charter, in which the monastery is said to have been already built, the boundaries are, in the east, the church of St. Martin, and thence eastward to Swennedowne; and so to the north, by Wykenmearke; again from the east, southward by Burewaremearke; and so by the south to the west, by Kyngesmearke; and the west by Redercheape, so northward to Drouing-streete. Thorne, in of himself and his successors (z); and that none of the bishops or Kings, his successors, should presume to hurt or disturb the peace of it, or should dare in any shape to usurp any subjection of it to them, but that the abbat himself, who should be so constituted, should, with the advice of his brethren, freely govern and order it both within and without, &c. (a) Which charter was confirmed and corroborated by one of Augustine, usually styled the privilege of St. Augustine (b).

After which, Mellitus, bishop of London, being in 609 sent by K. Ethelbert and archbishop Lawrence to Pope Boniface IV, on some business relating to the English church, and likewise to obtain the confirmation of this monastery by the apostolic see, prevailed on the Pope to convene a synod of the Italian bishops next year, for this purpose, at which Mellitus was present, in which the same was confirmed, and the privilege of the confirmation was recited in the bull for that purpose (c).

his Chronicle, col. 1762, has explained these bounds, by names adapted to his time, viz. on the east, St. Martin's church, and so eastward by Mellebelle; and so to the north by Wibescrouch; again from the east, southward by Fisfede, so to the south and west by the highway, leading from Chaldane Crouch even unto Canterbury; and so toward the west to Rederchepe, and so on the north to Drouington.

The charters of the donation and foundation of this monastery, are printed in Reyner's Apost. Benedict; in Thorne's Chronicle; in Decim. Script. col. 1761; and in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. viii^a, et seq. See likewise Tan. Mon. p. 203; and an extract, being the substance of them, in Battely's Somner, p. 26.

(y) Thorne, col. 2123; and Reyner's Apost. Benedict, where are also several other charters of Kings to be found, granting or confirming privileges to this monastery; as of Eadbald the son of Ethelbert, of Edmund, of Adelwulph, of Canute, and of Edward the Confessor. See Battely's Somner, p. 26. Weever, p. 239.

(z) Gervas, col. 1631. Thorne, col. 1760, 1762.

(a) See this charter recited, in the inspeximus of the 36th year of K. Edward III. Thorne, col. 2123.

(b) The charter of the privilege of St. Augustine is in Thorne, col. 1763. This charter is said to have been written in capital Roman letters; the seal to it, being round and of lead, having on one side, the effigies of our Saviour, with an inscription; on the other side, the figure of the church of Christ, with this inscription, Sigillum Augustini Episcopi. See Leland Coll. vol. iv, p. 8. From an extract from Godfeline's Life of St. Augustine, this Godfeline was first a monk of St. Bertin's in Flanders, and afterwards of Canterbury. He says, in his Life of St. Augustine above-mentioned, that the donations of Ethelbert, and Eadbald his son, plainly antient and venerable monuments of old times, were then extant, in the archives of the monastery, which he had seen and read, and therefore had held in his hands.

These two charters above-mentioned, are printed at length, in Somner, appendix, No. viii^a, viii^b.

(c) This bull, says Thorne, col. 1767, with the leaden seal, was kept in the archives of this monastery, with the bulls and privileges of Ethelbert and Augustine.

By

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

By the above charters it appears, that the chief intent of setting apart this space of ground in the suburbs of the city, and the founding of a monastery on it, was, that it should be a place of sepulture for them and their successors, as well in the kingdom, as in the archbishopric, for ever afterwards (d); for it was not then, nor long afterwards, the custom to bury within cities (e); in compliance with this injunction, many kings and archbishops were buried within it afterwards. Of these, Thorn and others have recorded the following: K. Ethelbert, with Bertha his Queen, and Letard, bishop of Soissons, her chaplain and confessor, in the portico of St. Martin (f); Eadbald, with Emma his Queen, in the portico of St. Catherine (g); the kings Ercombert (h) and Lothaire, with his daughter Mildreda; Mulus, a stranger king, brother of K. Cedwalla, and Wistred, who was the last king interred in this church; the archbishops Augustine, Laurence, Melitus, Jusus, Honorius and Decadatus, were all interred in the porch of this church. The archbishops Theodore, Brihtwald, Tatwin and Nothelm (i), were buried in the church itself; but archbishop Cuthbert procured a licence from the Pope, and a grant from the King likewise, wherein a right of sepulture, within his own cathedral of Christ church, was given and confirmed to it; by which this monastery was, in great measure deprived of a fundamental privilege, if it may be so styled, as having been appropriated solely to it from its first foundation; but although the cathedral of Christ church was allowed a right of burial, equally with this monastery, by which it was deprived of the sepulture of most of the archbishops, and several other persons of nobility, yet there were many prelates and nobles of high title and distinction afterwards, from time to time, buried within this church and monastery, besides a multitude of others, whose memories have been for ages lost, and few of whom have at this time one bone lying near another.

Among others whose sepulture is known to have been here, archbishop Janibert or Lambert, as he was variously called, the next but one in succession to archbishop Cuthbert, was buried in the chapter-house, by his own particular directions, being the last archbishop buried here (k); S. Brinstan, archdeacon to St. Alpbage, was buried in the north portico of the church (l). Elmer, bishop of Skirburne, and many of the abbats were buried the church, and other parts of the monastery, several of whom are mentioned below in their lives. Here was also buried in St. Ann's, commonly called the Countess's chapel, Juliana, Countess of Huntingdon, the rich Infanta of Kent, as she was called, who died in 1350, and endowed a chantry here for the repose of her soul, with many charities to be distributed to the poor, on the day of her anniversary yearly for ever.

Besides these burials in the church, there were others within the precincts of this monastery, for they had within it an ancient cemetery for burial (m), not private, and proper only to this abbey and the several members of it, or for such as made choice of it for that purpose; but still further until the dissolution, the proper and only cemetery belonging to some of the parish churches of the city in the patronage of the abbey, which had not church-yards of their own; these were, those of St. Mary Magdalen, St. Andrew and St.

(d) See Kenet's Parochial Antiq. p. 592.

(e) Leland says, that the whole space of ground, from the two gates of the monastery to the ditch without the city wall, was once the area of an ancient cemetery, though then a great many houses were built on it; and that not long before his time an urn had been found there, which by an inscription on it, appeared once to have contained a body. He also mentions another urn, which had been found near St. Pancrase chapel within the cemetery, with a heart in it; so that this part of the suburbs appears to have been a place of public burial, long before the building of the monastery.

(f) See Leland's Collect. vol. iv, p. 90. K. Ethelbert, who died anno 616, was buried, says Weever, p. 41, on the north side of this church, with this inscription engraven:

Rex Ethelbertus hic clauditur in polyandro

Fana pians certa Christo meat ~~at~~sq; meandro; near whom was likewise interred, Bertha his Queen, daughter of Chilperic, K. of France, for whom this distich was composed:

Moribus ornata jacet hic Regina beata

Berta-Deo grata fuit ac hemini peranata.

(g) K. Eadbald, son of K. Ethelbert, was buried in 640, in the chapel which he had built to the honor of the blessed virgin Mary, and afterwards his wife Emma, daughter of Theodebert, K. of Lorraine, was buried by him. Weever, p. 43; at the altar of St. John, says Thorn, col. 1769.

(h) K. Ercombert, and Sexburg his Queen, were both buried here. He died in 664. See Weever, p. 43, who says, that Egbert their son, who died anno 673, was buried here likewise, by his predecessors.

(i) See further of their burials here, under their lives, among the archbishops.

(k) Nomina Confessorum quiescentium in monast. Sci Augustini extra muros Cantuar. Ms. Cotton library, Claudius, A. ix, 3. (l) See Leland's Collect. vol. iv, p. 7.

(m) When the proprietor of these precincts a few years ago ransacked this cemetery for the stone coffins, several were dug up with the skeletons in them, among which, were some of the religious. In particular, in opening the cemetery they found a stone coffin of one block with a cover, having a ridge running along its middle, and containing a skeleton, wrapt in a coarse woollen cloth, tied or gathered at the hands and feet, which bore handling very well, but was easily torn. The bones were entire, the hair red, curled, strong and elastic, and about two inches long; under the head was a hollow stone like a pillow. Other coffins, composed of several stones set edgewise, and cemented together with mortar, were found at the same time, in these was a small projection for the head; the skeletons were all entire, but no cloth or hair with them, all lay at the depth of about seven feet, and fronting the east. Great quantities of human bones, of different sizes and at different depths, were dug up likewise at the place, which was the common burial ground of the city; all these, the coffins being taken away, were again turned into the ground at random, and

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

Paul; but on the suppression of this monastery, this cemetery being dissolved and converted to other purposes, those parishes buried their dead in the church-yards of other churches, to their great inconvenience, till they found opportunity to purchase others for this purpose, to themselves elsewhere.

The foundation of this abbey being thus laid, it soon advanced to stateliness in the enlargements of its buildings, and the augmentation of its endowments; among those who added to the former, was K. Eadbald, the son of K. Ethelbert, who, at the instance of archbishop Laurence, built a fair church in this monastery, which he called St. Marie's. After Eadbald, King Canute the great monarch of this realm, Egelsine, the abbat of it, who fled through fear of the conqueror; abbat Hugh Florio, who was of kindred to K. William Rufus, and by him made abbat; these, with others, several of whom will be noticed below in the list of the abbats, were the persons who chiefly increased the buildings, some adding churches and chapels, some dorters and refectories, or some other kinds of edifices.

In relation to its possessions and endowment, it would be too tedious a matter to particularize them here, and there is the less occasion for it, as they are all taken notice of throughout the course of the history of this county; but certainly the multitude of benefactors of all sorts, who made their donations and grants of lands to it, out of the warmth of their devotion to the place, for the double founder's sake, strove thro' a pious zeal to outstrip one another, in an open handed liberality to this abbey; among these were most of the Saxon kings, and besides them, King Canute, the Danish monarch, must not be forgotten, down to K. Edward the Confessor. The succeeding Kings, for the most part were rather confirmers or restorers of the old, than contributors of the new possessions of the abbey, their charters, as well the former ones, are recorded in the registers of it, and are printed in Reyner, Thorn, and other books.

The revenues of this monastery are exactly recorded by Thorn, in his Chronicle of this abbey, by which it appears, that they were possessed in their so covered up again; but the indecency of it was so flagrant, that a stop was soon put to this work, before it had proceeded any farther. Almost the whole of this cemetery has been lately demised to the trustees of the new county hospital, which is built on part of it. In digging the foundations of this building adjoining to Longport, the workmen in June 1791, from the depth of one to about six feet, were much incommoded by a great quantity of human bones and skulls, many of which had the teeth entire and found; the bones lay in a promiscuous manner, and not the least remains of a coffin lay near them. These must have been much disturbed since their first interment. Near the place were some hollow spaces in the earth, resembling the human shape, and certainly formerly contained human entire bodies, several manors, of 11862 acres of land (n), and that in K. Richard II.'s time, their spiritualities were taxed at 42*l.* 13*s.* 4½*d.* and their temporalities at 808*l.* 0*s.* 12½*d.* the whole of both were taxed at 1232*l.* 14*s.* 4½*d.* (o)

Whenever the Kings of this realm were under any necessity for money, for the carrying on their wars, or on any other pressing occasions, they in general directed their writs to the several bishops, abbats, priors, &c. to supply them with specific sums therein set down to each, promising to repay them at a particular time. Thus K. Edward III. in his 12th year, borrowed of this abbat and convent fifty marcs; in his 16th year, 100*l.* in his 20th year 200 marcs (p), and K. Richard II. in his 10th year, borrowed of them 100*l.* and again in his 20th year, 100 marcs more.

It has been said that that the art of printing in England was used in this monastery, under the care and patronage of the abbats of it, before it was exercised elsewhere, not long after the middle of the fifteenth century (q). But Stow contends for its having been first used in 1471, by a press set up by archbishop Iflip, in St. Peter's church in Westminster (r).

This monastery had many great and extraordinary privileges conferred upon it, both by royal charters, and by papal bulls; the royal charters seem to have been free acts of grace, purchased either through benevolence and favour, or at no greater expence than that of entertaining the several Kings in it, who are said by the reports of our English Chronicles, to have been more frequently received and lodged here, than in the neighbouring monastery of Christchurch; but the papal bulls were purchased at the dearest rate, with great sums of money, as if the seal affixed to every bull of privilege had been, not of lead, but of pure gold. These privileges are recorded at large in Thorn's Chronicle, to which the reader is referred. K. Ethelbert's grant of freedoms and privileges to this abbey, has already been mentioned, as has the charter of St. Augustine to it, confirming and corroborating them, as it was esteemed in those times, being usually called the privilege of St. Augustine to this monastery, other succeeding Kings (s) and some though when plundered of them is not known. In this cemetery, as appears by the wills, in the Prerog. office, was a chapel, called capella de charnell, that is, the chapel of the charnel, in which mass was perpetually celebrated for the souls of the deceased. (n) Thorn, col. 2203.

(o) Thorn, col. 2161 et seq. (p) See Rymer's Fœdera, vol. v, p. 48, 346, 491; vol. ix, p. 268.

(q) Ames's printing, p. 474. British Topography, p. 514. Chauncy's Hert. p. 449. (r) See Stow's Survey, B. 6-84.

(s) Dugdale, in his Origines, p. 33, says, that K. Ethelred appointed and ordained, that the abbats of Ely, St. Augustine's, Canterbury and Glastenbury, should exercise the office of chancellor by turns annually, dividing the year into three parts.

of

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

of a much later date granted others and confirmed the former ones, and there were some on writs of quo-warranto brought against the abbat, confirmed and recorded in the several itineraries of the justices itinerant for the county of Kent, all which are given at large by Thorn. These privileges were exemptions from toll, sheriff's tourn, and such like, now entirely obsolete and useless; and the liberties were such as were claimed in their several manors; all which are particularly mentioned in the description of them, under their respective parishes, in the several part of the history of this county.

The abbat of St. Augustine's had by the grant of K. Athelstan, the privilege of mintage and coinage of money, which continued until the time of K. Stephen, and then was utterly lost; Silvester, the 45th abbat, who died in the year 1161, being the last who enjoyed it (t).

The abbat of this monastery was possessed of the aldermanry of Westgate, in this city, in fee, by grant from the crown, and it was afterwards held of the abbat at a certain rent, in lieu of all services to him (u).

In the year 1103, the King granted a fair to this monastery for five days, that is, from two days before the day of, and the two days after the translation of St. Augustine (v); which fair was continued to be kept till the time of K. Edward I, at which time it was disused, on account of the many quarrels and disturbances, which continually happened from it in their churchyard; and on account of the heavy exactions on bread and ale, which the bailiffs of the city claimed during the time of it; afterwards, K. Stephen granted to this monastery, a fair on the feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, which, through neglect, was not used but for a short time; and there was another fair for the sale of husbandry and cattle only, yearly on a Friday, viz. after the feast of the exaltation of the Holy Cross, in recompence of the former fairs above-mentioned (w).

The privileges granted to this abbey by the papal bulls were numerous and extensive; in the first of them it is called, the first born, the first or chief mother of monasteries in England, and the

(t) Thorn, col. 1816, tells us, that Silvester, abbat, and many abbats his predecessors had cuneum monete, the coinage of money in the city of Canterbury, as appeared by inquisition, made in the time of K. Henry II, and K. Richard his son. That the above abbat Silvester, had in the above city, a mint for money, and that Elured Porre was keeper of the same, on behalf of the abbat; and when that abbat died, the monastery was seized and put into the King's hands together with the mint; and no abbat who succeeded, had ever since recovered the seizure of the said mint. See Battely's Somner, p. 27.

It is to be observed, the words cuneum monete mentioned by Thorn, is in general taken to mean, the mark or stamp on the piece of money, and not the coinage of it.

(u) See Thorn, col. 1926.

Roman chapel in England, adding, that the archbishop was not to visit it as their prelate, but as their brother, not out of a pretence of prelacy, but out of the duty of love, and that he was to repute the abbat as a legate from Rome, as a fellow minister of the gospel of peace.

The monastery had likewise by these bulls large immunities, in respect both of secular and ecclesiastical matters. In 611, the Pope granted a bull, that no bishop should intrude upon this monastery, on pretence of exercising any episcopal function within it, but only such as should be freely invited and admitted to it by the convent, to perform the divine offices within their church. In 955, Pope John XIII, commanded the monks of Christ church, who are said to have envied those of St. Augustine, not to molest this convent upon any pretence whatever. Afterwards the Pope by his bull, took this monastery entirely under his own protection, which meant the exemption of it from every intermediate power of the archbishop, or any ordinary whatever, and subjecting it only and wholly to the Pope himself; and Pope Alexander II, in the year 1063 conferred on Egelsine, abbat of this monastery, who was sent to Rome on an embassy to him, such honours and powers, as belonged to the episcopal dignity only, so that he in some respects appeared and acted as one, for he permitted and granted licence to him and his successors, to wear the mitre, sandals and gloves, after the manner of those who exercised that function. Notwithstanding this, these ornaments were soon laid aside by the abbat, for archbishop Lanfranc would not suffer any such innovation, nor were they resumed till the year 1179, when the Pope made a new grant of them, from which time they were constantly made use of, and the abbat was accounted a mitred abbat; which, as Cowel interprets it, was an abbat sovereign, exempt from the jurisdiction of the diocesan, having episcopal jurisdiction within himself, and he had place and voice not only in parliament as a spiritual baron, being constantly summoned there by writ (x), but also in the general councils, where by the gift of

(v) The day of this translation was on the 1d. September, the fifth day after the birth of our lady; this grant was confirmed by the inspeximus of the 36th year of K. Edward III. Thorn, col. 2130. This fair I find by the Rotul. Cartarum, from the 21st to the 24th of K. Henry VI, was confirmed by him, among other liberties, to the abbat and convent of St. Augustine. There is a fair now held on the second Monday after the feast of St. Peter, in the borough of Longport, which must arise from the grant made to this abbey.

(w) Thorn, col. 1796. Battely, pt. 2, p. 162.

(x) The abbats were not summoned to parliament because they were mitred, but because they held their lands in capite per baroniam, and received their temporalities from the King; and of these, only such had this privilege as were

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

Pope Leo IX, his place was next to the abbat Montis Cassini (y).

The abbat of this monastery was empowered to pronounce the solemn benediction, when mass was ended, and at sometimes the sentence of excommunication against such as should withhold or privately withdraw tythes, or other ecclesiastical dues to the convent and the churches of it; and he had authority to celebrate the offices of religion in those churches and chapels, which were appropriated to their own convent; he had power likewise to reconcile and consecrate anew any of their own churches or church-yards, which happened to be desecrated by the shedding of blood, or by any other pollutions. These are mentioned, among many other privileges, which were granted from time to time by the several Popes to this monastery.

Their exemption from archiepiscopal jurisdiction claims however some further particular notice, for as it infringed on the rights and dignity of the metropolitan, so it caused continued disputes and animosities between them.

This monastery, from the first foundation of it to the time of the Norman conquest, was subject to the mother church, and the archbishop was accustomed at all times, whenever he pleased to come and have access to it, to celebrate publicly in it the offices of religion, and to pay his devotions privately at the shrine of St. Augustine. He frequently endowed it with rich ornaments, delighting to confer honours on it, and to defend it from every injury it was subject to.

The abbats at the times of their benediction, professed obedience to the archbishops, as is computed by Ralph de Diceto, for 500 years (z), or rather according to the account of Gervas, for the space of 575 years. Some of these original professions are still remaining among the archives of Christ church, one of them was made in the presence of seven bishops, who certified it under their seals; this was the profession of abbat Sylvester (a); however, after a long contest between the archbishops and the successive abbats, concerning this privilege, it was decreed, in order to compromise the matter, that the archbishops were especially, as through the King's favour, called thither by writ. Thus, among other instances, the abbat of Fa-versham was founded by K. Stephen, to hold by barony, but the abbat not being called to parliament by writ, did not sit there. See Coke, 2 Instit. p. 585. Weever, p. 183. Cowel, sub voce Mitred, and others.

(y) Battely's Somner, p. 28. Thorn, col.

(z) Thorn, col. 602.

(a) This instrument is printed at length, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxxiv.

(b) Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter, marked A. 69.

(c) These were the particulars of it: to the bishop of should in future give the benediction to the abbat of St. Augustine's, within the abbey church, without exacting the profession of obedience to the archbishop, or his metropolitan church (b); but to gain and keep this privilege was attended with a vast expence, and great sums were paid at the election and benediction of an abbat; Thorn mentions one instance of its amounting altogether to no less a sum than 1008l. 13s. 8d. (c)

Notwithstanding these many instances of royal munificence, aided by the fostering hand of papal favour and indulgence; this abbey met with detriments and misfortunes, which at times obscured the sunshine of its prosperity, till it at last was overtaken by that impetuous storm, which wholly extinguished the glory and majesty of this once famous and opulent abbey.

To pass by the loss of that long enjoyed right and interest of the burials of Kings and archbishops, which has been already taken notice of, in order to mention a much more dreadful calamity which befel this abbey; I mean the frequent and grievous infestation of this place by the Danes; and however their chroniclers for their abbey's greater glory, sometimes ascribe their safety and deliverance from those invaders, to miraculous preservation; yet doubtless it either suffered from their violence, or at least purchased its peace, and so prevented a much greater calamity at a dear rate, and with costly redemptions, especially in that lamentable spoil and devastation of the city, made by those merciless tyrants in the reign of K. Etelred, in the year 1011, when Elmer, then abbat of this monastery, was suffered, as it is said, to go away unhurt (d); because, as may reasonably be thought, he had ransomed himself and his abbey, by composition with the enemy (e). Is it credible, says archbishop Parker (f), that among so many storms and invasions of the Danes, by which so many monasteries were overthrown, that this haughty abbey should remain safe and secure from the Danish ravages, which so miserably destroyed this city?

In the year 1168, the dreadful calamity of fire, nearly destroyed this monastery; it hap-

Winchester, from whom the abbat received his benediction, 9l. 3s. 4d.—to the bishop's officers, 6l. 13s. 4d.—to the pope and college of cardinals, 1434 florins, each florin valued at 3s.—to the same, that the abbat elect might receive his benediction in England, 183l. 2s. 6d.—given for the exchange of the florins 6l. 15s.—for the expences of the proctors at Avignon, and for gratuities whilst the cause was prosecuted, 124l. 3s. 2d.—for gifts and rewards to messengers who came from the court of Rome to England, 30l. 13s. 4d.—being in all 559l. and 16d. besides the expences to the bishop of Winchester and to the King. Total 1008l. 13s. 8d.

(d) Hoveden. (e) Battely's Somner, p. 29.

(f) Antiq. Brit. Eccl. p. 72.

pend

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

pened on August 29, when the greatest part of it was burnt; in this fire many of their antient codicils and charters perished, and the church itself being destroyed, the shrines of St. Augustine and many other saints, were miserably spoiled; upon which the Pope, in order to afford them some assistance towards the repair of their monastery, granted to the abbat and convent, the appropriation of their three churches of Faversham, Minster and Middleton, for that purpose (g).

Another misfortune happened to this monastery, though of quite a contrary nature to that last mentioned, for as that was by fire, so this happened by water, though more than 100 years between the one and the other; for in the year 1271, on the day of the translation of St. Augustine, there came on a storm and flood, which proved a general calamity to this city; it thundered and lightened that whole day, and the night of it, in which time dark clouds were continually gathered together, great torrents of rain flowed down for many days, flocks and herds were driven by it out of the fields, and trees were overthrown and torn up by the roots; in this inundation of rain, the city of Canterbury was almost drowned, and the flood occasioned by it was so high, both in the court of the monastery and the church, that they had been quite overwhelmed with the water; continues the chronicler, had not the virtue of the saints, who rested there, withstood the waters (h).

But the greatest obstacle this abbey met with, which in a great measure put an end to the further aggrandizement of it, though it was felt in common by it with others, was the restraint of the laity from any longer extending their bounty in passing over their fee estates to the abbey, without the King's special licence, by the statute of Mortmain, passed an. 7 Edward I; without which prudent measure the overactive charity of this

(g) Thorn, col. 1815.

(h) Thorn ibid. Battely's Somner, p. 30.

(i) According to Roverius, in his history of the monastery of St. John, called Reemans, the chief view of the bishops, when they at first in early times assigned churches to the monks, was for the peace of it; for many churches were built on ground possessed by the monks, and were frequented by their servants, who cut down their woods and tilled their grounds. To prevent any disagreement therefore between the clerks and the monks, equity and peace both required that those churches should be committed to the government of the monks; and when that reason ceased, charity suggested a new one to the bishops, namely, that provision should be made for the maintenance of the monks, to which at last was added, that the monks would take the best care of those churches, for the good of the people, &c. Hence many donations of this kind expressly provided, that the choice of presbyters and the government of the churches should be wholly in the power of the monks. We in England have thought quite different from this author, concerning the churches appro- kind of operative devotion, would in time have put the abbeyes and monasteries in possession of the greatest part of this kingdom, leaving so small a share to others, as to endanger the safety of both prince and people.

To supply this loss however, as far as possible, and make it felt less sensibly by the religious, they brought forward a piece of policy, which they quickly put in use; which was, the procuring not only privileges and immunities from payment of tythes, but also appropriations, or the annexing of churches to their houses; I mean the parsonages of them, leaving the church a bare vicarage or curacy, which though invented and set on foot long before, yet now, the other current of their gain being stoppt, became more abundant than ever (i). But it ought to be remembered, that though these were improperly enough in the hands of these religious, yet they became much more so afterwards, as many of them continue at present in the possession of laymen; an evil, says Mr. Lambard, suffered to exist in this day-light of the gospel, to the great hindrance of learning, the impoverishment of the ministry, the decay of hospitality, and the infamy of our profession.

Whatever else occurs worthy of notice concerning this abbey, to the time of its dissolution, will be mentioned below, under the respective abbat, in whose time it happened.

ABBATS OF ST. AUGUSTINE'S ABBEY.

I. PETER, from the first beginning of the building of this monastery, was designed and appointed, through the King's favour, to be the first abbat of it; hence the chronological tables put the foundation of it, and the constituting of Peter in the same year, 598 (k), as Thorn does in 605. This abbat was sent in 607, by the King, into France, and was drowned in his passage (l); apriated to the monks; we never found that the monks took good care of their churches, or that they were the best parish priests, where they were allowed to officiate in them; but on the contrary, their negligence caused laws to be made, by which they were forced to put vicars into their churches, because they themselves grossly neglected to take care of them. See statute 15 Richard II, c. 6. 4 Henry IV, c. 28. Battely's Somner, p. 31.

(k) Chron. Sci Aug. col. 2229, 2230.

(l) He is said to have been drowned in the bay of Amfleete, and to have been buried first by the inhabitants, in an ignoble manner, but being afterwards known, his body was translated to St. Mary's church in Bologne, with proper dignity. See Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 209. Brompton, col. 733. Thorn, col. 1766. Weever, p. 50, who says, he was drowned in 614, and that an honorary monument was erected to his memory in this abbey, with this inscription:

Quem notat hunc metrum meritis & nomine Patrum
Abbas egregius primus laus extitit hujus.
Dum semel hic transit mare ventus in urbe remansit
Bologna celebris virtutibus est ibi crebris.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

he was afterwards, on account of his sanctity, canonized (m).

2. JOHN, a benedictine monk, one of Augustine's companions, was made abbat in his room, being approved of by K. Ethelbert, and receiving the benediction from archbishop Laurence in 607. In his time, anno 613, the church of this monastery was dedicated by archbishop Laurence, when the body of St. Augustine, with those of others, which had been deposited without the church, were removed into it. This abbat died in 618, and was buried within this monastery, in the church of the Virgin Mary; but his body, with those of other holy persons, was afterwards removed from thence and placed in the wall behind the altar of St. Gregory (n).

3. RUFFINIAN, another of those monks, who came over with Augustine into England, was made abbat in 618. He died in 626, and was buried near his predecessor. His body was afterwards removed into the larger church to the others (o).

4. GRACIOSUS, another of Augustine's companions, a Roman by birth, succeeded; and died in 638 (p).

5. PETRONIUS, a Roman likewise, was next made abbat in 640. He died in 654 (q).

6. NATHANIEL succeeded him in 655, a man noted for his probity, who had been sent with Mellitus and Justus into England. He died in 667, but there is no mention where he was buried (r).

7. ADRIAN, born in Africa, was constituted abbat by the pope, after a vacancy of about two years (s). He had been abbat of Niridia near Naples, and was taken prisoner on his journey into England, and detained in France till the year 673, when being freed, he came to this monastery and took possession of his dignity (t). He was, it is said, appointed a kind of coadjutor and inspector over the actions of archbishop Theodore. He is said to have been very expert in the liberal sciences of astronomy and music, and was the first, who with that archbishop, brought into fashion the singing in churches with tunes and notes. Having governed this monastery for 39 years, he died a reverend old man in 708 (u), and was entombed in the church of it, at the altar of St. Gregory in our lady's chapel (v).

8. ALBIN, an Englishman, Adrian's disciple, received his benediction as abbat in 708. He was a person well skilled in the Latin and Greek languages. Venerable Bede made use of his assistance, when he made his collections for his ecclesiastical history (w). By some, he is said to have died abbat of this church in 732, and to have been buried in this church; and by others, to have been in his latter days, abbat of Tournay in France, and if so, probably buried there (x).

9. NOTHBALD, a monk of this abbey, was shortly after the death or resignation of Albin, chosen abbat in his room, in 732. He died in 748, and was buried near his predecessors in this monastery (y).

10. ALDHUNE succeeded as abbat in 748, in whose time the burials of the archbishops were taken from this monastery, which his brethren

(m) See his life in Brit. Sanc. vol. i, p. 9.

(n) See Thorn, col. 1766, 1768; and Chron. Tab. 2230; and the print of the high altar below, taken from the manuscript in Trinity college library. Weever, p. 50, says, he had this epitaph:

*Omnibus est annis pietas recitanda Johannis
Culmine celsa nimis patribusq; simillima primis.
Vir probus & mitis fuit hic si fare velitis
Integer & mundus, sapiens Abbasq; secundus.*

(o) Thorn, col. 1768; and Chron. Tab. 2230. Weever, p. 50, says, he was interred here, with this epitaph:

Pausa Patris sani patet isthæc Ruffiniani Abbatis terni, quo frenditur hostis averni.

(p) Thorn ibid. who says, there is no mention where he was buried. Weever, p. 50, says, he died in 640, and was here interred, with this inscription:

Hic Abbas quartus Graciosus contulit artus Cujus adest pausa mihi spiramine clausa.

(q) Thorn says, it is not mentioned where he was buried, col. 1769. Chron. Tab. 2230. Weever says, he was buried here, with this epitaph:

Abbas Petronius bonitatis odore refertus Subjectos docuit vitiorum serde piavit.

(r) Thorn, col. 1769; and Chron. Tab. 2231. Weever, p. 50, says, he was buried with this distich:

*Spiritus in celis Abbatis Nathanielis
Nos faciat memores Patres memorare velitis.*

(s) Gervas, col. 1326, says, archbishop Theodore gave the abbatship to Benedict, one of his chaplains, surnamed Bishop, who going to Rome with the archbishop's leave, this dignity was conferred on Adrian.

(t) Thorn, col. 1769, 1771. Chron. Tab. 2231, 2234. Godwin, p. 60. Weever, p. 51, says, he had this epitaph:

*Qui legis has aspices, Adriani pignora, dices
Hoc sita sarcephago sua nestro gloria pago.
Hic decus Abbatum, patriæ lux vir probitatum
Subvenit a celo si corde rogetur anelo.*

(u) See his life in Brit. Sanct. vol. i, p. 17, 25.

(v) Weever, p. 51, says, he was offered the archbishopric by the pope, which he declined, and recommended his friend Theodore.

(w) See Bede's Præf. to his Eccles. Hist. in which he acknowledges the assistance he received from this abbat.

(x) See Leland Col. vol. iv, p. 9. Thorn, col. 1772, says, he was buried in this monastery, in the church of St. Mary, close to Adrian his predecessor; but on the translation of St. Augustine and his companions, he was, with Adrian and the rest buried there, removed from thence into the greater church, and placed in the wall behind the altar of St. Gregory. Weever, p. 51, says the same, and that he had this epitaph:

*Laus Patris Albini non est obnoxia fini
Gloria debetur sibi quam sua vita meretur
Multa quippe bonos faciens virtute Patronos
Abbas efficitur bonus hic et honore petita.*

(y) Thorn, col. 1772. Weever, p. 51, gives him this epitaph:

*Notbaldi mores rutilant inter seniores
Cujus erat vita subiectis norma petita.*

imputed

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

imputed to his supineness. He died in 760, and was buried here (z).

11. JAMBERT succeeded him in 760 as abbat, and in 762 was elected archbishop of Canterbury (a).

12. ETHELNOD succeeded that same year, and died in 787, nor is it known where he was buried (b).

13. GUTTARD was the next abbat, who died in 803 (c).

14. CUNRED succeeded the same year, and died in 822 (d).

15. WERNOD was the next abbat, and died in 844. He and his predecessor Cunred, the first being near of kin to K. Offa and Cudred, and the latter to Kenulph, all three Kings of Kent, procured from them different lands to this monastery. It is not known where he was buried (e).

16. DIERNOD succeeded next, and died in 864 (f), of whom, as well as of his eighteen next successors, there is nothing known more than their bare names.

17. WYNHERE was abbat, and died in 866 (g).

18. BEADMUND died in 874 (h).

19. KYNEBERT died in 879 (i).

20. ETAUS died in 883 (k).

21. DEGMUND died in 886 (l).

22. ALFRID died in 894.

23. CEOLBERT died in 902.

24. BECCAN died in 907.

25. ATHELWALD died in 909.

26. GILBERT died in 917.

27. EDRED died in the same year 917.

28. ALCHMUND died in 928.

29. GUTTULF died in 935.

30. EADRED died in 937.

31. LULLING died in 939 (m).

32. BEORNELM died in 942 (n).

33. SIGERIE died in 956 (o).

34. ALFRIC died in 971, who in Thorn's Chronicle is confounded with his predecessor Sigerie (p).

35. ELFNOTH, in whose time, anno 978, this church received a new dedication in honor of St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Augustine. He died in 980 (q).

36. SIRICIUS was first a monk of Glastonbury,

(z) Thorn says, there was no monument nor any writing to point out where he lay buried, col. 1775. On account of his want of attention to the affairs of his monastery; the following epitaph given by Weever, p. 52, is said to have been fastened to a pillar near the place of his burial, about twelve years after his death.

*Fert memor Abbatis Alabumi, nil probitatis
Pontificum pausam cassat tutans male causam,
Prisca premens jura dum Cutbertas tumulatur,
Fulta sepultura sanctis per eum reprobat.*

(a) Thorn, col. 1775. Chron. Tab. 2236.

(b) Ibid. (c) Ibid. col. 1775; and Chron. Tab. 2238.

(d) Ibid. (e) Ibid.

(f) Thorn, col. 1776; and Chron. Tab. 2240.

(g) Ibid. col. 1777 and 2240. (h) Ibid. (i) Ibid.

whence he was promoted to be abbat of St. Augustine's, and thence to the bishopric of Bath and Wells in 988 (r); from which he was preferred to the see of Canterbury in the year following (s).

37. WLFERIC, called the elder, succeeded him in his abbatship in 990 (t); and died in the year 1006, and was buried in the crypt, before the altar of St. Richard (u).

38. ELMER, a person noted for his great sanctity, succeeded him as abbat, from which dignity he was in the year 1022, advanced to be bishop of Shirburne; and after some years falling blind, he returned to this monastery again, where he spent the remainder of his days in the infirmary of it; and dying there, was buried in the habit of a private monk in the church of it, opposite to the altar of St. John.

This Elmer appears to have been abbat when the Danes sacked the city of Canterbury, in the year 1011, when this monastery was spared by them, and the abbat was suffered to depart unhurt. In the time of this persecution, says Thorn, many relics of the saints and the precious jewels of this monastery, were hidden in different places, nor were they in his time taken away again; for those being dead, who had been present at the hiding of them, the memory of the places, as well as of the persons themselves, was become extinct (v).

39. ELSTAN, or Ethelstan, succeeded him, and received his benediction at the altar of St. Peter, in the church of this monastery, from archbishop Agelnoth. In his time the body of St. Mildred was translated from Minster in the Isle of Thanet, to this church in 1030, or, according to others, in 1033 (w). He died, according to the Saxon chronicle, in June 1044; but according to the chronological tables, in 1047, and was buried in the crypt, before the altar of St. Thomas (x).

40. WLFERIC, whom we may call the younger, was his successor, being constituted abbat, according to the Saxon chronicle, in 1044; or according to the chronological tables, in 1047, and received his benediction at the altar of St. Peter from archbishop Eadwin, with the King's leave, and that of Ethlan, who was then abbat, who was

(k) Ibid. col. 1777 and 2242. (l) Ibid. (m) Ibid.

(n) Thorn, col. 1778; and Chron. Tab. 2243.

(o) Ibid. (p) Ibid. col. 1779 and 2243.

(q) Ibid. col. 1780 and 2243.

(r) Chron. Tab. col. 2245.

(s) Thorn, col. 1780. Godwin, p. 75, and 387. Weever, p. 52.

(t) Chron. Tab. col. 2246, anno 989. (u) Thorn, col. 1780. Chron. Tab. 2246. Weever ibid.

(v) Thorn, col. 1781, 1782. Chron. Tab. 2246. Biog. Brit. p. 128. (w) See above, p. 632.

(x) Thorn, col. 1783, 1784. Chron. Tab. 2247. Weever, p. 52, says, K. Knute would have preferred him to the see of Winchester, which he refused; nor would he have taken this abbatship, but by the importunity of his brethren.

yet

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

yet alive; but labouring under bodily infirmities, K. Edward the Confessor in 1046, sent him with others to the council of Rhemes, and in 1056 he was sent by the King to Rome, to transact some business for him there, when he obtained the apostolical authority to sit in councils next to the abbat de Monte Cassino. He translated the body of St. Mildred to another place in the church of this monastery, which church he began to rebuild, but was prevented by his sudden death with going on with his design, for he died, according to the above tables, in 1059, or as others have it, in 1061 (y).

41. EGELSIN, a monk of Winchester, was, upon the death of Wlfric, made abbat by the King, and received his benediction from archbishop Stigand at Windsor, upon the feast of St. Augustine, about the year 1063. He was sent on a message to Pope Alexander II, and received from him the grant of the mitre and other pontificals; which, however, he was afraid to make use of at his return to England, lest he should incur the King's, or indeed rather the archbishop's displeasure; on which account, the privilege of them was laid aside for a long time, and the archbishop does not seem to have forgiven him, for he fled out of England into Denmark, through fear of him, or rather, as Thorn says, of the Conqueror, in 1070, being the same year that the archbishop came to the see; and if what the chronicler tell us is true, of this abbat's accompanying archbishop Stigand and the Kentish Men, to oppose the Conqueror at Swanscombe, there can be no wonder at his dislike to him, and the abbat's flying to avoid the King's resentment. In the above year, the Conqueror, in violation of his promises, caused the monasteries to be searched, and commanded the money, as well as the charters, in the liberties of which the nobles put their confidence, and which he had, when placed on the throne, sworn to observe, to be taken from the churches where they had lain in security, and to be deposited in his treasury (z).

42. SCOTLAND, or, as he is called by some, Scoland, a monk, and a Norman by birth, was, upon the flight of Egilsin, constituted abbat in his room by the King, who had seized on this monastery, which, with all its possessions, he confiscated to his own use, and most probably he might owe this promotion to archbishop Lanfranc. The power which this abbat had, through the favour of both the King and archbishop, he made good use of to the benefit of his monastery, by recovering some lands and procuring the grants of others to it. He much improved the buildings of it, for on his return from Rome, whither he had been sent by the King on some business with the Pope, he turned his thoughts to the enlarging of the church of the monastery; those buildings of it which his predecessor Wlfric had intended to carry forward, being too small and contracted, and the rest being ruinous and in danger of falling, he obtained the Pope's leave to pull the whole down, and rebuild them anew, according to his own pleasure, and to remove the bodies buried in it; these therefore, he first removed, being the relics of St. Adrian, which he placed in the portico of St. Augustine; of the abbats Albin and John II, of that name, and of the other saints whose inscriptions had been formerly destroyed by the flames; the bodies of the four Kings, Eadbald, who had built the oratory, Lothair, Mulus and Withred, with their wives and children, and a long list of grand-children, who likewise rested there. He then levelled this oratory to the ground, and in the place of it built the crypt of the Blessed Virgin, and upon that a place for the reception of the relics of St. Augustine, with his companions; thus this abbat made the new work, beginning from the above oratory, as far as the portico of St. Augustine, where he antiently lay, but death prevented his proceeding further in this work, which his successor completed, as will be further mentioned below. He died either on September 3, or 9, in the year 1087 (a), and was buried in a vault under the choir in St. Mary's chapel, with this inscription:

*Abbas Scotlandus prudentibus est memorandus
 Libertatis dare gratis
 Actu magnificus generosa stirpe creatus
 Viribus enituit Sanctis Sancte quoq; vixit.*

43. WIDO, a monk, was next elected abbat, and received his benediction from archbishop Lanfranc. The Saxon chronicle tells us, that he was by violence obtruded on the monks, by the archbishop, on the feast of St. Thomas, in the year 1087. The new church begun by his predecessor, was finished by this abbat (b), who translated the bodies of St. Augustine and those others which had been buried in the chapel of the Virgin Mary, as above-mentioned, into it. The body of St. Augustine being privately repositied in a stone coffin in a wall under the east window, where it lay hid for upwards of 130 years (c). Abbat

(y) Thorn, col. 1784, 1785, 1790. Chron. Tab. 2248. Weever, p. 52. (z) Thorn ibid.

(a) Thorn, col. 1787. Chron. Tab. 2250. Obituar. Cantuar. Weever, p. 53.

(b) Anglia Sacra, p. ii, p. 285. Thorn, col. 1793. Chron. Tab. 2250. Weever, p. 53.

(c) The body of St. Augustine had, in the year 613, on the former church of the monastery being finished, been entombed in the north portico of it, on the site of which the church of St. Mary was afterwards built, where it lay for 478 years, till it was in 1091, by abbat Wido, in his third year, removed into the new church, begun by abbat Scotland and now finished. Thorn says, col. 1793, that the greater parts of these relics were removed and hidden privately, (through fear of their being taken away on any invasion of an enemy), in the presence only of the abbat and

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

Wido died on August 6, 1099 (cc), and was buried in the crypt at St. Richard's altar, with this epitaph engraved on his tomb-stone:

*Hunc statuit poni tumulum mors atra Widoni
Cui stans fede throni superi det guardia doni.*

44. HUGH DE FLORIAN, a Norman, being of kindred to K. William Rufus, received the benediction from the bishop of London, archbishop Anselm being then in banishment (d). He built the chapter-house and dormitory from the ground, out of the riches he had brought with him, and the pulpitum, or space between the nave and the choir of the church. He bought a great brass candlestick for the choir, which was called Jesse; he made the lower silver table of the great altar and other costly ornaments of his church, which from his name, was called Florie. He appointed the yearly commemoration of the benefactors of the abbey to be celebrated on July 3, and that thirty poor persons should be fed in the hall for ever, on his anniversary (e). He died on 7 cal. April 1124, and was buried before the steps on the south side of the chapter-house, built by himself from the foundation (f), for whom this epitaph was made:

*Abbas, eheu! Floris specimen vertutis, honoris, Hic jacet intumulo presul peramabilis Hugo.
Floruit ut terris, pater hic, pace & quoque guerris;
Florent nunc celo Christi pugil iste sereno.*

45. HUGH DE TROTESCLIVE, a monk of the church of Rochester, and chaplain to K. Henry, being a man equally learned in monastical and and a few antient monks, in the night time, and laid as above-mentioned; and that they concealing the fact, the memory of it became with them extinct, till the year 1221, when it was discovered in the time of abbat Hugh III, as will be further mentioned below. The small remains being part of the bones and ashes of St. Augustine, were closed up in two small leaden vessels and hidden, and the one placed at the very bottom, and the other at the summit of the shrine, with divers other precious relics; and that it was reported, that there were many other relics of saints hidden in different places of the church, which were not then discovered.

(cc) Thorn, col. 1794; and Weever, p. 53, say anno 1091. Chron. Tab. 2250, anno 1099.

(d) Thorn, col. 1794. Chron. Tab. 2250. Weever, p. 53. Thorn says, he had been a knight of esteemed valour, who had been much employed in the wars, not only in this reign of William Rufus, but of his father the Conqueror; and had on a time coming to Canterbury with K. William Rufus, and visiting this monastery, been so captivated with a religious life, that refusing to quit it he turned monk in it; after which, going over to Normandy, he there distributed the greatest part of his property among his relations, and in acts of charity; the remainder of it he brought home to this monastery, and resigned it to the abbat for its use. Before he had completed the years of his noviciate, the abbat Wido died, and the monks petitioned the King for the liberty of choosing an abbat, but were refused; upon which, the convent again sent two monks, together with this Hugo to the King, to intreat him to give them this licence. As soon as he saw his kinsman, who had ever appeared before him in all military pomp, but secular discipline, the year after the above abbat's death (g), procured the government of this abbey, when the bishop peremptorily refused to give him the benediction in his own monastical church; upon which the matter was controverted in a provincial council before the King and cardinal Cremona, the Pope's legate, who notwithstanding the opposition of the archbishop to the contrary, commanded, by virtue of the apostolical authority, Sifred, bishop of Chichester, to perform that solemnity. This abbat restored to his convent the full number of monks, being sixty; he founded the hospital of St. Laurence, and left behind him the character of a prudent and good manager of the concerns of his monastery. He died on the morrow of St. John Baptist in 1151, and was buried before the steps in the chapter-house, on the north side, opposite to Hugh de Florian, his predecessor.

46. SYLVESTER, prior of this monastery, was elected abbat in his room. Archbishop Theobald refused to give him the benediction, objecting to his want of character; to clear himself from which, the abbat elect went to Rome, when having so done, the Pope Eugenius, confirmed him in his office and recommended him to the archbishop, and he received the benediction from him, by the Pope's mandate, on St. Augustine's day 1152; but this was not without much delay, and a peremptory rescript from the apostolic see (h).

Archbishop Theobald carried his inveteracy against the abbat and convent of this monastery to such a then, in the humble garb of a religious, he burst into tears, saying, that he granted them this his kinsman to be their abbat, whom unless they directly received as such he would burn down their monastery to ashes; to which the monks submitted, and received him as such; and he accordingly received the benediction at the hands of Maurice, bishop of London, in the King's chapel at Westminster, with a protestation, however, of its not being drawn into a precedent.

(e) Thorn, col. 1798. Weever, p. 53, says, he died, as full of years as of goodness, on March 26, 1120.

(f) Chron. Tab. col. 2252, say, he was buried on the north side of the chapter house; as does Weever, p. 53.

(g) Thorn, col. 1798 and 1810. Weever ibid. Chron. Tab. col. 2251, anno 1126, which latter might perhaps be the year of his receiving the benediction.

(h) When the abbat on his return from the pope attended the archbishop, with the pope's letters on this occasion, the archbishop delayed the performance of it with many objections from time to time, till receiving a peremptory rescript from the pope, which fearing, or at length not daring to oppose, he came to this monastery and gave the benediction to the abbat elect, according to antient custom, on the day above-mentioned, in the presence of the bishop of Norwich; Roger, archdeacon of Canterbury, and an innumerable crowd of clergy and laity. Thorn, col. 1811. Gervas, col. 1370; and among the archives of the dean and chapter in their treasury, is the profession of this abbat Sylvester, before archbishop Theobald, with the archbishop's seal appendant, and those of Richard, bishop of London; Robert, bishop of Bath; Hilary, bishop of Chichester; William, bishop of Norwich, and others.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

height, that having excommunicated them, he deposed this abbat Sylvester from his office, and prohibited the celebration of divine service in the church of it, so that there was none in it from the time of Lent to the month of August (i), when the excommunication was taken off, and the abbat was restored to his office again. Before his death, he ordained that there should be yearly received into the hall of the monastery, on the first day of Lent, as many poor persons as there were monks in it, who should there receive food and drink, during the whole time of it, for ever. He died in August 1161, and was buried in the chapter-house, at the distance of twelve feet westward from the reading-desk, under a plain white stone (k).

Thorn, the chronicler of this abbey, and Gervas the monk, the writer of the history of Christ church, have given opposite characters of this abbat, accordingly as they stood affected to him.

47. CLAREMBALD, a secular (l), was obtruded in 1163 upon the monks as their abbat, by the King against their will; upon which account the convent never owned him as such, or admitted him into their chapter, or suffered him to celebrate any offices in their church (m), nor would they insert his name among the catalogue of their abbats; he offered himself to archbishop Becket, to receive his benediction, but the monks making an appeal against it, it was deferred, and he was afterwards deposed by papal mandate directed to the bishops of Exeter and Worcester, and the abbat of Faversham (n), principally on the allegation of the monks, that he was a bad man, and had wasted the goods of the monastery. However, since, he is by others styled abbat elect, during which time they had no other abbat, and although the monks would not permit him to exercise any spiritual government in the monastery, yet he had the management of the whole temporalities of it, having obtained the custody of their common seal (o), and being formally deposed as abbat, he is here inserted as such. In his time, in 1168, this abbey was the greatest part of it burnt (p). Clarembald was deposed in 1173, or, according to the chronological tables, in 1176.

(i) In this time K. Stephen's Queen used to frequent this abbey, the building of the abbey of Faversham being then carrying forward by her and the King; and because this silence was imposed on the monks of St. Augustine, she used to send for the monks of Christ church to celebrate before her in it. See Gervas, col. 1366.

(k) Thorn, col. 1799, 1811, 1814. Chron. Tab. 2256. Weever, p. 54.

(l) So Thorn, col. 1815, but he afterwards, col. 1819, says, he was a fugitive and apostate monk in Normandy, whence K. Henry II. brought him to preside over this monastery. (m) Thorn, col. 1815, 1816. Chron. Tab. 2255. Weever, p. ibid.

(n) R. de Diceto, col. 561. Gervas, col. 1432.

(o) Thorn, col. 1816.

(p) Thorn, col. 1815.

(q) Thorn, col. 1825.

Upon his deposition, the King, highly incensed at it, seized on this monastery, and kept it in his hands for two years and an half (q), when 48. ROGER, a monk of Christ church, and keeper of the altar in the martyrdom there (r), was elected in 1176. He refused to make professional obedience to the archbishop; who, upon this, refused to give him the benediction, and he took a journey to Rome, when in 1179, he received it from the Pope himself at Tusculana, near that city, and at the same time the mitre and ring; after which, he sent him several presents, as special marks of his favour, together with the sanctals and pastoral staff (s), and his letters likewise to the archbishop, in which he pronounced a definitive sentence, that in future the archbishops should give the abbat elect, the benediction in his own monastery of St. Augustine, within forty days, without exacting any profession; which if they failed in, the abbat elect should go to Rome, and receive it from such bishop as the Pope should appoint for that purpose (t). But this does not seem to have put an end to these disputes with the several metropolitans, which were still carried on with much animosity on both sides; an account of them, and the various compositions entered into between them on this subject, are inserted at length throughout Thorn's chronicle, and are again related by Gervas, but are by far too tedious and uninteresting to recapitulate in this work.

The intercourse and favour which this abbat obtained at the court of Rome, together with the suggestions of the archbishop, highly incensed the King against him, who being softened by the Pope's pressing letters in his behalf, restored him to his favour, and the monastery to its possessions, which he had seized on and retained in his hands, and a reconciliation seems likewise to have taken place between the archbishop and this abbat (u); after which, I find the latter making fine to the King for a perambulation of his barony (v). He died an old man, having sustained much trouble in defending the rights of his church, on 13 cal. November, in 1212 (w), and was buried in the chapter-house, on the (r) Thorn, col. 1819, says, it was on this account that they elected him for their abbat, hoping he would purloin and bring with him some relics of the martyr; in which they were not deceived.

(s) Gervas, col. 1443. R. de Diceto, col. 602. Chron. Tab. 2256. (t) Thorn, col. 1824, 1835.

(u) Gervas, col. 1475, says, that on the feast of St. Augustine next after archbishop Baldwin's intronization, the archbishop at the intreaties of the abbat and convent coming to the church of this monastery, was honourably received there, and celebrated mass; and at the same time dedicated two cemeteries; at which reception of the archbishop, the abbat reverently laid down his mitre, nor would he afterwards replace it on his head, till he was ordered to do so by the archbishop. (v) Madox's Exchequer, p. 351.

(w) Thorn, col. 1864.

norib

north side, under a white stone, with this inscription,

*Antistes jacet hic Rogerus in ordine primus
Pastor devotus quondam nunc nil nisi finis
Mortuus in cista requiescit nunc semel ista
Qui vivus mundo parum requievit eundo.*

49. ALEXANDER succeeded in 1212, and received his benediction from the Pope himself at Rome (x). He was a monk of this monastery, and a noted professor of sacred theology, a man of universal eloquence and exceedingly learned, as well in secular, as ecclesiastical knowledge, being most dear to K. John, so that he was most graciously received by him; accordingly, he most firmly adhered to the King, at the time when most of the prelates and barons of the realm had left him, and when Lewis the French Dauphin invading the kingdom had landed in Thanet, the abbat opposing him to the utmost of his power, and excommunicated him and all his adherents (y).

Matthew Weston says, he was elegant in his person and of a venerable countenance, and that for taking part with his sovereign, he endured much trouble and suffered great indignity (z). He died on 4 non. Oct. in 1220, and was buried on the south side of the chapter-house (a).

50. HUGH, the third abbat of this name, monk and chamberlain of this convent, was elected abbat in his room on 7 cal. Sept. anno 1220, by general consent (b), and afterwards went to Rome, where he received his benediction on April 1, next year. In his return through France, he made some stay with K. Lewis, with whom he was in intimate friendship; during the above time, John de Marisco, prior of this monastery, desirous of knowing where the body of St. Augustine was deposited, caused the wall to be broken near his altar, in the eastern part, under the middle window, where they found a tomb of stone, exceedingly well closed with iron and lead, on which was written

*Inclitus Anglorum presul pius & decus altum
Hic Augustinus requiescit corpore sanctus.*

After which, the silver shrine, the altar, and all the stone work, on which the shrine stood, being broken; in the middle of it, at the bottom, was found a large piece of lead, almost seven feet long, on which was written in Latin; In this is contained a part of the bones and ashes of St. Augustine, the apostle of the English, who being formerly sent by St. Gregory, converted the English nation to the Christian faith, whose precious head and greater bones, Guido the abbat honourably translated to another small stone vessel, as the leaden table placed with those same bones shews, in the year from the Incarnation of our Lord 1091.

But because this work could not be effectually done, unless the lead being removed, the above vessel of stone was removed likewise; it was carried thence to the great altar by the abbats of Battel and of Langdon, and by the priors of St. Edmund of Faverham, and of St. Radigund's, and many other religious persons, with great veneration, where it was watched by the monks; after which it was opened in the presence of the abbats, priors and great men of the land, in the sight of the clergy, people, master H. Sandford the archdeacon, being invited to it; when there was found a leaden plate, with the head and bones, the superscription of which, was—In the year from the Incarnation of our Lord 1091, William, K. of the English reigning, the son of K. William, who acquired England; abbat Guido translated the body of St. Augustin, from the place where it had lain for 500 years, and placed all the bones of that saint in the present casket, and he deposited other parts of the sacred body in a silver shrine, to the praise of him who reigns for ever. And in a third place, viz. on the summit of the silver shrine there was found a small piece of lead, in which was some of his flesh, but yet reduced to earth, but which was like moist earth and coagulated blood; the superscription of which was—*This lead contains part of the dust of the body of St. Augustine, and in this his bowels were likewise placed; near which were found several other precious relics, and by these discoveries, it came to be known, that the body was to be found in three different places; for K. Henry III. and the convent had caused the body to be so deposited; the major part being placed as before, under the silver shrine, strongly bound with iron, and well closed with lead; the second part lower under the marble tomb, and the third part under the middle window in the eastern part; but the head, at the instance of the great men present, and to excite the devotion of the people, was retained without the shrine, and was wonderfully decorated, at the abbat's expence, in gold, silver and precious stones, as it was then to be seen (c). This abbat Hugh had the character of being religious, honest and provident, adorned with learning and with a godly life. He died on November 3, 1224, and was buried in the nave of this church, in the north wall, by*

(x) Chron. Tab. col. 2260.

(y) Thorn, col. 1864 and 1870.

(z) Matt. Westminster, anno 1209, says, a summo honore in summam Confusionem viliter precipitatus est.

(a) Thorn 1864, 1872. Chron. Tab. 2260. Weever, p. 55.

(b) Thorn, col. 1873. Chron. Tab. 2260. Weever, p. 55, says, he was elected, sworn, and blessed, by the pope's legate at Winchester, before the King and many peers of the kingdom.

(c) Thorn, col. 1876.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

the altar of the Holy Cross, under a flat stone, with this inscription (d).

Profuit in populo domini venerabilis Hugo Et tribuit sanctæ subjēctis dogmata vitæ.

51. ROBERT DE BATHEL, a monk and treasurer of this convent, was next elected abbat, on 8 cal. December 1224 (e), and received the benediction at Rome, by the hands of the cardinal bishop of Albania, on Ascension Day, an. 1225 (f). During his time, in 1240, the high altar of this church was new made and dedicated anew in honour of St. Peter and St. Paul, apostles, and St. Augustine, and the altar behind it, at the eastern extremity of the church, placed before the shrine of St. Augustine, was dedicated to the Holy Trinity (g); and the altar of St. Adrian was new made likewise. He died on 17 cal. Feb. 1252, and was buried within the body of the chapel of St. Mary, in the nave of this church, at the entrance of the chancel, with this epitaph:

*Abbas Robertus virtutis odore refertus
Albis exutus jacet hic à carne solutus.*

52. ROGER DE CHICHESTER, chamberlain of this convent, succeeded as abbat on 3 non. Feb. 1253 (h), being elected by way of compromise (i), and received by virtue of the Pope's letters, the benediction in his own church, from the bishop of London, the archbishop refusing to perform the ceremony (k). In his time, anno 1260, the new refectory was begun and finished six years afterwards (l), and in 1270, the altar, which was placed before the shrine of St. Mildred, in the church of this monastery, her body having been laid in a new tomb, was dedicated to the Holy Innocents (ll); and three years after this, the lavatory, which was before the door of the refectory, was finished by this abbat at his sole cost of 300 marcs (m). He founded the chapel of Kingsdown in this county, and dying on St. Lucia's day, 1272 (n), was buried before St. Katherine's altar, under a marble stone, on which was engraved his effigies in brass, and this epitaph:

Prudens & verus jacet hac in scrobe Rogerus Constans & lenis, populi pastorq; fidelis.

(d) Thorn, col. 1879. Chron. Tab. 2262. Weever, p. 55. (e) Ibid. (f) Thorn, col. 1889 to col. 1899.

(g) See the print below, from the ancient manuscript in Trinity college library.

(h) Thorn, col. 1899. Chron. Tab. 2268. Weever, p. 55.

(i) This meant, an authority delegated by the whole convent in chapter, to a select number of their body, to the amount of four or five, to make the election; which on their report, was confirmed by the rest in chapter; and this was done to prevent the frequent disputes and animosities which former open elections of their abbats had occasioned.

(k) Chron. Tab. col. 2268. (l) Thorn, col. 1905.

(ll) See the print above-mentioned.

(m) Thorn, col. 1905.

(n) On id. Dec. 1273. Chron. Tab.

(o) Thorn, col. 1915.

(p) This abbat being duly elected by the monks, with

During the time of his presiding over this monastery, Adam de Kyngefnolke, chamberlain of it, was a great benefactor to it; among other things, he built the bathing room entirely new, and made the baths in it; he caused to be made one bell in the church, and gave different cloaths, ornaments and vestments, for the use of it, as well as garments and coverings, for the use and comfort of the monks; he caused seventy shillings to be allotted to the making of the prior's chamber; 100*l.* to covering the dormitory with lead; 30*l.* in aid to the charge of the bakehouse and malthouse; 20 marcs to the building of the chapel over the gate, and 20 marcs to the repairing of the infirmary; 20 marcs to increase the ornaments of the church, and 60 marcs to make the lavatory decent, besides many other beneficent acts conferred on the monastery. He was afterwards, for his worthiness, promoted to preside over the monastery of Cbertsey (o).

53. NICHOLAS THORN, written in Latin De Spina, then third prior of this convent, was elected abbat, by way of compromise, on January 2, 1273, and was confirmed at Rome, where he received the benediction from the cardinal bishop of Portsea, on Easter-day 1273; after which, on his return, he received a subsidy from all his tenants, in the name of his palfrey (p). During his time, anno 1276, the inner chamber of the prior next to the kitchen, and the cloyster, with the pillars and roof, were new made, and the refectory was ornamented (q). In the year 1277, this abbat was appointed conservator of the order of the Premonstratensians in England (r); in 1283 he went to Rome and intreated permission of the Pope to resign his dignity of abbat (s), being, as it is said, discovered to have privately procured several bulls of privileges to this monastery to be fabricated, in order to make use of them at proper seasons against their adversaries (t). After this, he turned monk of the Carthusian order, at Selby in Yorkshire, and was relieved by his successor in this abbatship, with a yearly pension of ten marcs, the license and assent of the King's lieutenants in England, he being then abroad, repaired to the pope for confirmation, where he was put to vast expences; but meeting K. Edward there, in his return from the Holy Land, and informing him of this, the King sent his letters to his viceroy in England, to grant the abbat writs to levy such an aid from his tenants, towards his expences, as had been formerly used; and for the restitution of his temporalities, which the monks had obtained, during the vacancy, a fine of 500*l.* Original writs in the tower, anno 1 Ed. I. n. 6. Ibid. n. 18, pat. 1 Ed. I, ps. 2, m. 19—m. 15. See Prynne, vol. iii, p. 123, 176, 313, 315.

(q) Thorn, col. 1923.

(r) Ibid. col. 1925.

(s) Thorn, col. 1937. Chron. Tab. col. 2272.

(t) This is said, in two manuscript copies of Thorn, printed at the end of the Decim. Script., among the Variantes Lectiones.

being

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

being fallen into a languishing condition, or rather into extreme poverty (u).

54. THOMAS DE FYNDON, the third prior of this monastery, was nominated abbat by his predecessor, for so it seems the Pope required; accordingly he was constituted and received the benediction at London, from the bishop of Dublin, by the Pope's mandate, on 11 non. April (v), but before his temporalities were restored, he was fined by the King 400 marcs, for being constituted abbat without his royal licence; however, at the request of the bishop of Bath, the King's chancellor, a fourth-part of the fine was remitted (w). In his time, in 1287, the new kitchen for the convent was begun, though it was not finished in less than four years, at the expence of 414l. 10s. (x) the roof of the dormitory was new made and leaded, the stalls made in the choir, and the window in front, and many other things; the charge of which, was 596l. 7s. 10d. The stone tower (Torule) was built, as was the chapel of the abbat, with the new chamber and the great gate; by his care, about the year 1300, St. Augustine's relics were again removed, with several of his successors, and placed near the high altar, in a sumptuous monument, and the former inscription put on it, with these two additional lines:

*Ad cumulum laudis Patrisalmi ductus amore
Abbas hunc tumulum Thomas dilexit honore.*

About this time, K. Edward I, being highly incensed at the Pope's usurpation of his prerogative, called a parliament of his nobility and commons, from which he, however, excluded the bishops and clergy, and caused to be enacted in it, that these should be out of his protection, and their goods subject to confiscation, unless they would, by submitting themselves, redeem his favour. Upon which, the abbat of St. Augustine, with many others, made liberal offers to be again taken into his favour and protection; this abbat giving to the King for that purpose, 250l. in money, though notwithstanding his haste in doing it, he had lost of the goods of his abbey, during this confiscation, 250 quarters of corn, which the King's officers had seized to his use, and had shipped for Gascony (y).

In the 2d year of K. Edward II, anno 1309, being the last year of his abbatskip, he obtained licence from the King to embattle the gates of his monastery (z), at which time it appears, that the abbat was charged with six horses with their appurtenances, to the ward of the coast.

Between this abbat and archbishop Winchelsea, the disputes concerning the privileges of this monastery were carried on with increased vigor, and the abbat having had them strengthened by a declaratory bull of Pope Boniface VIII, ventured to institute three new deanries, in which he included all the churches of the patronage of his monastery; this new jurisdiction was, of course, opposed by the archbishop, by the chapter of Christ church, and by the archdeacon, who jointly appealed to the court of Rome. At last, after violent proceedings and animosities on both sides, the abbat was compelled to humble himself, and to sue to the archbishop for peace between them, which was, in 1303, by the intercession and mediation of the Earl of Pembroke and other friends, at last obtained, and various articles and concessions were agreed to, and ratified between them; one of which was, the abolition of these new deanries, and the restoring of the churches of them to their old jurisdiction (a).

This abbat made a great feast, at which were present all the prelates of the county, and sixty-six knights, besides a great many other persons of note; among which were J. de Berewick, and his Sociates, Justices Itinerant, here at that time; the whole company amounting to 4500 persons. He had the character of being watchful and assiduous in the government of his church, sage and just in his determinations, greatly attentive to the afflicted and infirm, and compassionate in relieving the wants of the poor (b). He died on 14 cal. March 1309 (c), and was buried before the altar of St. Mary, in a small chapel where he had daily celebrated mass, opposite the place where St. Augustine was formerly buried under a marble stone, on which was his portrait in his mitre and pontificals, inlaid with brass, and this inscription round it:

*En Jacet hic Thomas morum dulcedine tinctus
Abbas egregius, equitatis tramite cinctus.
Firma columna domus, in judicio bene reclus
Nec fuit hic presul donorum turbine flexus
In pietate pater, inopum damnis miseratus
Nec fraudis patiens curarum presbyteratus
Jussu pontificis summi Capit iste Cetibus Angelicis nos Thome jungito Chrifte.*

In the time of this abbat, John Peckham, one of the monks of this monastery, who was steward or bailiff of part of their estates, became a great benefactor to it, from the increase he made of them beyond his annual account, being of service to them in many difficult affairs, and paying many large sums of money to the different and urgent uses of the monastery, among which was 40l. to the casting of a new bell, 20 marcs to the beginning of a new gate, 20 marcs to the (u) Thorn, col. 1964.

(v) Weever, p. 56, says, at Civita Vecchia, by the pope's appointment.

(w) Thorn, col. 1938.

(x) Ibid. col. 1943.

(y) Thorn, col. 1965. Lambarde, p. 297.

(z) Pat. ejus an. ps. 2, m. ult.

(a) Thorn, col. 1976, et seq. (b) Ibid. col. 2009.

(c) Ibid. col. 1938. Chron. Tab. 2278. Weever, p. 56.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

making the new tower; and he devised to it by his will 300l. besides which, he made three good granges, large and fair, beyond the charges in his account, which he built anew, one in the parsonage at Littleborne, another at Little Mungbam, and the third at Norborne (d). It appears, by the writs of K. Edward I, of the time of the death of the above abbat, that the King, by his prerogative, claimed the palfry, cup, ring, and cry or kennel of dogs, of every abbat after his death, as his due from the abbat and convent; and the King, accordingly, always on these occasions, issued his writs to his eschators for the purpose (e).

55. RALPH BOURN was elected abbat in his room, on March 7, 1309 (f), and received the benediction at Avignon, on 11 cal. July, from the cardinal, bishop of Hestia. On his entering upon this dignity, he made on his return a sumptuous and splendid feast, at which 6000 guests, of whom many were of good quality, are said to have been entertained with 3000 dishes of meat. The bill of fare, the prices of the provisions, and the whole expence of the entertainment, which amounted to 287l. 5s. are printed in a table in Thorn's Chronicle (g); and next year, anno 1310, he received a subsidy from his tenants; as for his palfry, as his predecessors had done before (h).

In his time, Peter Dene, LL. D. being canon of the churches of York, London, and Wells, retired to this monastery, and was made a monk of it, in order to avoid the enmity of the nobles against him, on account of the death of Thomas, earl of Lancaster. He was in his life-time, as well as by his will, which is dated in 1322, a very considerable benefactor to this monastery; by it he left his books, which were many, as well as his silver plate of various kinds, to it (i).

At this time the archbishop of Armagh, consecrated five crosses to be used in processions, and one cross for Easter, and two for the chief altar, and the image of the blessed Virgin, in the chapel of the dormitory. In the year 1324, the high altar was repaired, and reconsecrated by one

(d) Thorn, col. 2008. (e) Prynne, p. 930.
 (f) Thorn, col. 2009. Chron. Tab. 2278.
 (g) Thorn, col. 2010. Stev. Mon. vol. i, Supplem. p. 304. (h) Thorn, col. 2011.
 (i) His will is printed at large, in Thorn, col. 2037, in whose Chron. col. 2054, and the twelve following columns there is a long story of his escaping from the monastery, and being taken and brought back, and the dispute which his being taken in the archbishop's liberty occasioned, between him and the convent. (k) Col. 2038.

(l) The print of the antient high altar, with the shrines placed round it in the church of this monastery, taken from the antient manuscript in Trinity college library in Cambridge, serves at least to shew us the form of the antient building of this church in the eastern part of it; the places of the several altars and shrines, and the decorations and ornaments of the high altar; and in what parts of it the

Peter, an Hungarian bishop, to the honor of St. Peter, St. Paul, and St. Augustine. He afterwards, says Thorn (k), dedicated it anew to the Blessed Trinity, St. Augustine, and his companions (l). He consecrated likewise the altars of St. John Baptist, St. Katherine, St. Stephen, and St. Laurence. The altars likewise of the Blessed Virgin, St. Michael, Gabriel and Raphael in the undercroft. The altars of St. Thomas, St. Blaze, and St. Cosmus and Damian. The altar of the Blessed Virgin in the infirmary; and all this he did by a general commission as the vicar of archbishop Walter. The altar of St. Adrian was then dedicated to the martyrs St. Stephen, Laurence and Vincent. The altar of St. Mildred had been before dedicated to the Holy Innocents, and therefore was not dedicated anew (m). By means of these dedications we come to the knowledge of such altars as this church abounded with, in the different parts of it. At this time the abbat caused vines to be planted near the Northolmes, then called Nordhome, which was before a hiding place for thieves, and a resort for every kind of wickedness, to which there was a common way by le Kenile, by the subterfuges of which this iniquity was the more easily carried forward. To remove this scandal, the abbat, by the King's licence and authority, levelled their dark holes and hiding places, grubbed up the thorns and bushes, cut down the trees, surrounded the whole with a wall, and planted a choice vineyard in it, as above-mentioned, much to his honor and the advantage of the monastery (n). He died on 3 non. Feb. 1334, in a good old age, and was entombed under the north wall, opposite the Countess's chapel, near the altar of the Annunciation, with this epitaph (o):

*Pervigil in populo morum probitate decorus
 Abbas hoc tumulo de Borne jacet ecce Radulphus,
 Mille trecentenis triginta quater quoque plenis
 In Februari mense celo petebat inesse.*

56. THOMAS PONEY (p), S. T. P. was elected on March 1, 1334, and received benediction at Avignon on June 12 following (q); the expences of which, till his return into England, several saints were buried; all which have been mentioned above at the several eras, in which they happened, or were made.

(m) Thorn, Chron. Tab. 2039.

(n) Thorn, col. 2036. In 1332, there were certain constitutions put forth by the abbat, for the reformation of the state of this monastery, and inserted in the martyrology, that they might be read at all times; but on his death two years afterwards, before he was buried, they were, by order of the president of the chapter, torn out and burnt, on account of their unusual strictness. Thorn, col. 2054.

(o) Thorn, col. 2067. Chron. Tab. 2282. Weever, p. 56.

(p) Thorn, col. 2082, writes his name Pocyn; as do the Chron. Tab. 2282; and Weever, p. 56.

(q) Chron. Tab. col. 2282.

A DRAWING of the High Altar in the Monastical Church of S^t Augustine, Canterbury, with the Shrines of Relics standing round it, & their Inscriptions, as inserted in an antient Mss, once belonging to that Monastery, but now in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge.

Ano Dni MCCXL. istud altare dedicat in honore Ap^{osto}lor^{um} Pet^{ri} et Pauli et s^ci Augustini v Kal. Nov.
 Ano Dni MCCCXXV istud altare dedicat in honore Ap^{osto}lor^{um} Pet^{ri} et Pauli S^ci. Augustini Anglor^{um} Ap^{osto}li et S^ci. Æthelberti Regis. Kal Marty^{rum} aⁿo Petro Ep^{iscopu}m Corbanienfi.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

were 1481. 4s. 0½d. (r) He died on id. September, in 1343, and was buried at the altar of St. Katharine, under a stone, on which was his figure, engraved on brass, and this inscription (s):

*Est abbas Thomas tumulo presente reclusus,
Qui vite tempus sanctorum expendit in usus.
Illustris senior, cui mundi gloria vilis.
L. V. à primo pastor fuit hujus ovilis.*

57. WILLIAM DRULEGE, chamberlain of this monastery, was elected abbat on October 2 the same year, and had the benediction at Avignon. Thorn says, he was, like Zaccheus, small of stature, but in keeping and defending the rights of his church, powerful and great (t). He died on September 11, 1346, and was buried at the upper end of the chapter-house, with this epitaph (u):

*En parvus abbas hic parva clauditur arca,
In gestis magnus, major nec erat patriarcha.
Willelmus Druleg illustri dignus honore,
Conventum claustrum qui multo rexit amore.
Pro dilectoris anima tui dulcitur ora
Sancti Augustini conventus, qualibet hora.*

During this abbat's time, in 1335, Solomon de Ripple, bailiff of the convent's manors of Nordborne, Stodmerch, and Chifflet, built at Nordborne a most fair chapel from the foundations, and a barn there; and at Little Mungam he built much; and at Chifflet a chapel, similar to that at Nordborne and Littleborne; besides other improvements, all the buildings of that manor were, as it may be said, wholly rebuilt, and were sumptuously erected from the ground (v).

58. JOHN DEVENISSE was constituted abbat, by papal provision in 1346 (w). He was a monk of Winchester, and had been elected by that convent bishop of that see, but the pope made void the election at the King's entreaties (x); and on his being constituted abbat here, the King not only refused to restore the temporalities of this abbey to him, but commanded the convent, upon pain of the forfeiture of all their goods, neither to admit him to come within their monastery, nor to suffer him, in any shape whatever, to intermeddle in the ordering or disposing of the affairs of it, as far as was in their power; so he kept his abode at a small distance from hence, on the estate belonging to the abbey at Nackington. In the mean time the convent elected William Kenington to be their prior, who ordered all the concerns of the monastery at his pleasure, and appointed the obedientaries and other officers, as was usual for the prior to do, when there was no abbat presiding over the convent. It should be observed, that this William had, upon the death of abbat Drulege, been elected by the convent for their abbat; but the pope took upon him to cassate the election, and to put in John Devenisse, as above-mentioned, who never had more than the bare name of abbat (y); in his room therefore, with both the King's and Pope's consent, the dignity was conferred on

59. THOMAS COLWELLE, sacrist of this monastery, a sage and discreet person, was next made abbat by the Pope's bull of provision, in October 1349, anno 22 Edward III (z), and received the benediction at Avignon (a) immediately afterwards, for he was in great favour and familiarity with Pope Clement VI, infomuch, that he is said to have often offered him this abbey. On his return, having performed his fealty to the King, he had the temporalities restored to him, and on Christmas Eve was installed into his abbatship. At length, having governed this monastery wisely for twenty-seven years, he died full of years, on 4 cal. June, in 1375, and was buried in the north wall in St. Anne's, commonly called the Countess's chapel, opposite the altar of the Annunciation (b). During his time, in 1358, the bells which were called Austyn, Mary, and Gabriel, and four in the tower, were cast by Thomas Hickham, sacrist (c).

60. MICHAEL PECKHAM, chamberlain of this monastery, was elected abbat, and by the Pope's licence received the benediction in England, from the bishop of Winchester (d), and had the temporalities immediately restored to him. To avoid the charges of a public feast at his installation, he kept it privately with the convent, in

(r) Thorn, col. 2067. (s) Ibid. col. Weever, p. 57.

(t) Thorn, col. 2082.

(u) Thorn, col. 2067. Chron. Tab. 2282. Weever, p. 57.

(v) Thorn, col. 2068.

(w) Thorn, col. 2082. Chron. Tab. col. 2283. Weever, p. 57.

(x) Thorn, col. 2082.

(y) Thorn, col. 2081. He died at Avignon, on the wigil of St. John Baptist, anno 1348, and was there buried. Chronolog. Tables, col. 2284. This agrees with two manuscript copies of Thorn, which say, that Devenisse having with great fatigue and expence prosecuted his suit at the pope's court to no purpose, died of grief, on the day and in the year above-mentioned, and was buried in the church of the friars minors at Avignon, at the entrance of the church, on the right hand; and that the prosecuting the cause of this lamentable provision, run the convent in debt, to the amount of 1000 pounds and more. See at the end of Decim. Scriptorum, variantes lectiones.

(z) In Rymer's Fœdera, vol. iii, p. 350, there is an autograph of a bull of provision of pope Clement VI, by which he appointed Thomas de Colewell, a monk of this monastery, to be abbat of it, in the room of John, the late abbat, who died lately at Rome, dated at Avignon, 5 non. Oct. in the seventh year of his pontificate.

(a) In Chron. Tab. col. 2284, he is said to have been elected abbat on August 5, and to have received the benediction on 4 non. October, and is said to have been elected by scrutiny, on the recommendation of William de Clynton, earl of Huntingdon.

(b) Thorn, col. 2150. Chron. Tab. 2286.

(c) Thorn, col. 2121.

(d) At Easter. Chron. Tab. col. 2286.

the

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

the refectory (e). He died on Feb. 11, 1386, and was privately buried in the chapter-house, on the south side of it. After his death there was a vacancy of the abbatship, till the year 1389 (f).

61. WILLIAM WELDE, doctor of the canon law, was promoted next to this dignity, by way of compromise, on Feb. 28, 1389 (g); but before he could be installed, he was forced to undergo the fatigue of long and tedious journeys, and to be subject to great expences; for as soon as he was elect, he was obliged to go to the King, who was beyond Lincoln, to obtain his assent to the election. He then sent his proctor to Rome, to sue out the papal confirmation, who followed the Pope from city to city, presenting his supplication with large gifts. Several English noblemen who were at that time at the court of Rome, intreated the Pope for a quick dispatch in this business, but the delays were still prolonged; the proctor remonstrated to his holiness, that this monastery had been destitute of an abbat for near thirteen months, during which vacancy the King had received 100 marcs every month for the temporalities of it, which then amounted to the sum of 1250 marcs; and that the abbey was, besides, charged with 600 marcs towards the defence of the coasts opposite France and Flanders; that it was dangerous for the abbat to cross the seas, lest he should be taken prisoner by the enemy; that the abbat elect lay sick of a quartan ague, and was unable to undertake a journey to Rome, without evident danger of his life, and that more than 10,000 florens had been already spent, besides the proctor's charges during his attendance at the court of Rome; but all these representations were made in vain, for the abbat elect was cited to appear personally in the Pope's court, and there prove the right of his election; this he was obliged to do, and then, after some further delays and expences, he received the benediction on St. Lucia's day (gg), and returning into England, his temporalities were restored to him on April 5. By these delays the abbat's stall remained vacant two years, two months and four days; the ex-

(e) The whole of the expences of the vacancy and election amounted to 1008l. 13s. 8d. See Thorn, col. 2150.

(f) See the expences the convent was put to on the vacancy by his death, in Stev. Mon. vol. i, Suppl. p. 305. See Thorn, col. 2151. Chron. Tab. 2286. Weever, p. 57.

(g) Thorn, col. 2184. Chron. Tab. 2286. Weever, p. 57.

(gg) See a long account of it, in Thorn, col. 2183, et seq.

(b) Thorn, col. 2194.

(i) He died in the year 1391. Thorn, col. 2196, enumerates his several good acts to the benefit of this monastery. Among others there mentioned, he caused to be made four bells in the choir, at the price of 60 marcs; a new roof on the north side of the church, 80 marcs; two great bells in the belfry, 174 marcs; two bells in the tower pences, which were very great, were, to the King for the temporalities 1418l. 18s. to the apostolical court for first fruits, 1532 florens and four bolon, viz. to the Pope's chamber 600 florens; to the chamber of the cardinals 600 florens; to the Pope's attendants 405 florens, 37 bolon; to the servants of every one of the cardinals (who were present, to the number of fourteen) 46 florens, 16 bolon; besides the expence of the proctor's journey, and his attendance on the court of Rome (b). Thus, this convent, by renouncing all obedience to the archbishop, threw themselves into the power of the court of Rome, which devoured great part of their substance. During this abbat's time, Thomas Ickham, sacrist of this monastery, died, who had expended no less than 3251 marcs in repairing the church, chapel and chapter-house of it (i).

In the year 1293, K. Richard II, with his Queen, made their abode in this monastery from the octaves of the Ascension, until the morrow of the Holy Trinity; and being accompanied by the prelates and nobility of the realm, and a multitude of people, on Whitsunday and the day following, the King, as well in the processions, as at the table, took the lead, and being crowned, sat in his royal splendour, when he commanded, that the feast of St. Ethelbert should be constantly held in due veneration (k). This abbat died on the vigil of St. Mildred, on July 12, anno 1405, and was buried in the chapter-house, between the reading-desk and the tomb of abbat Sylvester (l).

62. THOMAS HUNDEN was next elect abbat in 1405 (m), and received the benediction in St. Paul's church in London, from archbishop Arundel, on May 6, that year (n). It appears by the patent rolls, that he had a licence in the 13th year of K. Henry IV, anno 1412, to take a journey to the Holy Land (o); he continued abbat till the year 1419, according to the chronological tables, at which time they end, and till his death, which happened on August 17, 1420.

63. MARCELLUS DANDELYON occurs abbat in 1426 (p).

at the end of the church, 60 marcs; the bell Gabriel, 42 marcs; the great window in the church, 186 marcs; and he made the chapel of St. Pancrase, at the cost of 100 marcs; and expended for the making of the new chapter-house, 1320 marcs. He made the new hall, with the chambers at Salmonstone, at the price of 100 marcs. He paid for the new gate of the cemetery, 610 marcs; besides much money laid out in ornaments, for the use of the church. The whole sum of what he expended, being 3251 marcs, as above-mentioned. (k) Thorn, col. 2197.

(l) Chron. Tab. col. 2290.

(m) Concil. Brit. tom. i, p. 118.

(n) Chron. Tab. col. 2290.

(o) Pat. ejus an. ps. ii, m. 17, vel. 18.

(p) Chron. Tab. col. 2290. Weever, p. 57.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

64. JOHN HAWKHERST was the next abbat (q), who was succeeded by

65. GEORGE PENSHERST, prior of this monastery, who being elected, obtained the King's consent, by his writ, dated February 27, 1430, anno 8 Henry VI (r); but his temporalities were not restored to him till June 22 following (s). He occurs abbat in the year 1450 (t).

66. JAMES SEVENOCK was elected the next abbat in 1457 (u).

67. WILLIAM SELINGE probably succeeded him, but resigned this dignity.

68. JOHN, who is said to be John Dunstar, prior of Bath (v); but this disagrees with an account of the succession of the priors of Bath (w), for John the prior died in 1412, but John the abbat died towards the end of the year 1497 (x).

69. JOHN DYGON was elected on the vacancy of the abbat's stall, by the death of John, the last abbat, and had the temporalities restored to him on February 17, 1497, anno 12 Henry VII. He died in 1509 (y).

70. THOMAS HAMPTON was next elected abbat, and had the temporalities restored to him on July 21, 1509 (z). He is said to have died in 1522, anno 13 Henry VIII, but that could not be, for

71. JOHN HAWKINS occurs abbat in 1511 (a).

72. JOHN ESSEX succeeded him as abbat, about the year 1523 (b), and outlived the monastery itself, for now the fatal blow of its utter dissolution approached; little had all the former casualties been to the ruin of this goodly abbey, had not this sudden and tempestuous storm, which bore down before it all the religious structures of this kind throughout the kingdom, falling upon it, brought this with the rest, to irrecoverable ruin; to perpetuate which, this abbat, with thirty of his monks, among whom were the several officers of the monastery, signed the surrendry of it into the King's hands, on the last day but one of July, anno 30th Henry VIII. (c)

The deed of the surrendry of this abbey, which is in Latin, is dated in their chapter-house, July 30, anno 30th Henry VIII (d), by which the abbey, with the scite and precinct of it, and debts, chattels and goods, manors, houses, lands, advowsons, and churches, and all other possessions whatsoever and wheresoever situated, are surren- dered to the King, to the use of him and his heirs for ever. It is signed by John Essex, abbat of the same.

Infirmarer, Thomas Barham.

John Langdon, precentor.

Edward Benet, sacrist.

John Sandwiche, sub-prior.

Richard Compton, ij prior.

Richard Canterbr. refectorer.

William Mylton.

David Franklyn, fourth prior.

William Holyngborne, chaplain of the Lord Abbat.

John Ryvas.

Laurence Goleston.

John Antoni.

Ralph Adrian.

William Horsemunde.

George Amys.

And there is indorsed on the back of the instrument,

Robert Glasconbury.

William Bangos.

John Dygun, prior.

John Langport, treasurer.

William Wynchelse, celerer.

Robert Cenett, vesterer.

John Story, gate-keeper.

Robert Garwinton, sub-celerer.

Robert Saltwood, keeper of the chapel of St. Mary.

Thomas Strykynbow, chamberlain.

William Hawkherst, sub-sacrist.

John Haylsam.

John Shroynsbery.

Thomas Haplys.

Edward Hales.

Received, recognized and delivered before me Richard Layton, one of the masters of the chancery of our Lord the King, in the year and on the day aforesaid.

More on the back on the instrument; Inrolled on the back of the close rolls of the King's chancery under-written.

The following pensions appear by the rescripts in the augmentation office, to have been granted to the abbat and the monks of this abbey, after the surrendry, for their lives, or until they should

(q) Chron. Tab. col. 2290.

(r) Rym. Fœd. vol. x, p. 451. (s) Ibid. p. 494.

(t) Register Abb. Sci Aug. cart. 51.

(u) Pat. 36 Hen. VI. Weever, p. 57.

(v) Weever, p. 57. (w) Anglia Sacra, p. 1.

(x) John was abbat of this monastery in 1489. Regiff. Abb. Sci Aug. cart. 32.

(y) This date, as well as the names of the seven abbats last mentioned, are taken from a manuscript, entitled Liber de Diversis Evidentiis Monast. Sci. Aug. Cant. de acquisitione Frat. W. Bybolt. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 168.

(z) See Weever, p. 57, anno 1 Hen. VIII, rot. 37.

(a) Anth. Wood's manuscript, in Willis's Mitred Abbeyes.

(b) Weever, p. 57. Willis's Mitred Abbeyes. He had been admitted Bachelor of Divinity at Oxford, anno 1515, 7 Henry VIII. This abbat's family name was Foche, his brother Henry was of Ripple in this county; where more may be seen of them, in vol. iii, of the Hist. of Kent, and Twine de Rebus Albion.

(c) There is a tradition, that the monks opposed the King's commissioners, who came to take the surrendry of the abbey, and shut their gates against them; till terrified by two pieces of ordnance placed on a neighbouring hill, they hastened to deliver up the keys to them.

(d) This deed is printed at length, in the Decim. Scrip-tores, col. 2293.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

be promoted to one or more benefices of the same value or upwards.

To the abbat for his support, a grant of lands equal to 200 marcs per ann. on the 3d of Feb. following, being the manor of Sturry, with the lands and appurtenances belonging to it, for his life, or until he should be promoted to one or more benefices, of the same or superior value (e).

The several pensions to the monks, granted on 3d Sept. 30 Henry VIII, were as follows :

To Edward Sawyer,	monk,	100s. sterling.
William Curle,	ibid.	6l.
John Ding,	ibid.	5l.
Thomas Crofton,	ibid.	5l.
William Mynes,	ibid.	5l.
John ..ylinin,	ibid.	5l.
John Hytbrocke,	ibid.	6l.
Robert Winstanley,	ibid.	100s.
Robert Butter,	ibid.	5l.
Edward Mynes,	ibid.	10 marcs.
George Amys,	ibid.	100s.
David Franklyn	ibid.	6l.
William Burgis,	ibid.	100s.
Robert Whyte,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Thomas Ware,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Thomas Brecher,	ibid.	6l.
William Myllis,	ibid.	100s.
John Baynes,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Robert Davyson,	ibid.	6l.
Thomas Edmund,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Richard Stonard,	ibid.	6l.
William Jurdyn,	ibid.	6l.
John Hall,	ibid.	10 marcs.
John Burden,	ibid.	8l.
William Okynfold,	ibid.	8l.
Laurence Marden,	ibid.	100s.
John Snowtbe,	ibid.	100s.
John Dyer,	ibid.	8l.
Richard Orgar,	ibid.	6l.
... Wydebere,	ibid.	13l. 6s. 8d.

In all, thirty monks, being the exact number of those, who, together with the abbat, signed the instrument of surrendry; but how strangely they had altered their names immediately afterwards, cannot escape observation (f).

The revenues of the abbey of St. Augustine were valued, according to Dugdale, at 1413l. 4s.

(e) Deeds of Inrolments, Augmentation office. He was deceased before the month of February, anno 32 Hen. VIII.

(f) Anno 1553, there were only sixteen of these monks upon the pension roll, of whom four were returned to be dead.

(g) Tanner's Monast. p. 203. The taxation of this abbey to the see of Rome, was 1300 florins of gold. See Harleian Mss. No. 1850—16.

(b) At the back of this gate-way is one of the most beautiful pieces of squared flint work that can be imagined; the flints in it are squared to such a nicety, that the thin edge of a knife cannot be insinuated through, or between the joints without a great deal of difficulty, and it is no easy task to make out, that they were laid with lime; most of them are the size of the very small bricks, and as smooth and level, as if they had been ground, and they are laid with such great exactness, that no brick work or even hewn stone can appear more regular in its courses. This art which our ancestors knew, of cutting or rather breaking flints into uniform equal sizes, with smooth surfaces, seems to have been lost for some length of time; besides the above, there are some few other buildings remarkable for the same sort of materials thus excellently fabricated; as the antient bride-well at Norwich, and the gate of St. John's abbey at Colchester, and the gate some years since pulled down at Whitehall, was much in the same taste.

(i) This gate-way was new built by Thomas Ickham, a monk and sacrist of this monastery, at the latter end of K. Richard II.'s reign, at the charge of 466l. 13s. 4d. as has been 11½d. being the gross value of them, the clear sum being, according to the manuscript valor, 1274l. 0s. 10½d. yearly value (g).

A schedule of the plate and vestments delivered at the surrendry of the monastery to the King's Commissioners, may be seen in Steveris's Monasticon, supplement to the 1st volume.

The coat of arms belonging to this abbey, was—Sable, a plain cross, argent.

The common seals of this abbey were only two; the earlier, was the smaller of the two, a very antient one, representing on one side the names and portraits of St. Peter and St. Paul the apostles, with this inscription round it: + Hoc sigillum factum est anno primo Ricardi Regis Anglorum; and on the other side, the effigies of an archbishop in his pontifical habit, (probably meant for St. Augustine) with this inscription: + Sigill ecclesie Sancti Augustini Cantuarie Anglorum Apostoli. The other and later seal, the larger of the two, and of more curious work than the former, representing on one side a church, and in the middle of it both the name and effigies of St. Augustine, together with the arms of the abbey, viz. a plain cross, and some other embellishments, with this inscription round it:

*Anglia quod Domino fidei Sociatur amore
Hoc Augustino debetur patris honore.*

On the other side, a church also, with the figures of both those apostles, Peter and Paul, this with a sword, the other with a key in his hand, and underneath, what seems to represent the christening or baptizing of St. Ethelbert, by St. Augustine, with these words round it: Sigillum Monasterii beatorum Apostolorum Petri & Pauli Sociorum Augustini Anglorum Apostoli Cantuar.

In the following page is an engraving of the seal, taken from the original.

THE FRONT of this stately abbey was towards the west, extending 250 feet, having at each extremity of it two handsome gateways, the northern one, being the most superb, was the chief approach to the monastery (b), which was situated mostly at the back part of it; the other was the gate through which the entrance was to the cemetery (i). After the dissolution of this abbey, and level, as if they had been ground, and they are laid with such great exactness, that no brick work or even hewn stone can appear more regular in its courses. This art which our ancestors knew, of cutting or rather breaking flints into uniform equal sizes, with smooth surfaces, seems to have been lost for some length of time; besides the above, there are some few other buildings remarkable for the same sort of materials thus excellently fabricated; as the antient bride-well at Norwich, and the gate of St. John's abbey at Colchester, and the gate some years since pulled down at Whitehall, was much in the same taste.

(i) This gate-way was new built by Thomas Ickham, a monk and sacrist of this monastery, at the latter end of K. Richard II.'s reign, at the charge of 466l. 13s. 4d. as has been been

East View of the Abbey of St. Augustine, near the City of Canterbury.

be promoted to one or more benefices of the same value or upwards.

To the abbat for his support, a grant of lands equal to 200 marcs per ann. on the 3d of Feb. following, being the manor of Sturry, with the lands and appurtenances belonging to it, for his life, or until he should be promoted to one or more benefices, of the same or superior value (e).

The several pensions to the monks, granted on 3d Sept. 30 Henry VIII, were as follows :

To Edward Sawyer,	monk,	100s. sterling.
William Curle,	ibid.	6l.
John Ding,	ibid.	5l.
Thomas Croston,	ibid.	5l.
William Mynes,	ibid.	5l.
John ..ylinin,	ibid.	5l.
John Hytbroke,	ibid.	6l.
Robert Winstanley,	ibid.	100s.
Robert Butter,	ibid.	5l.
Edward Mynes,	ibid.	10 marcs.
George Amys,	ibid.	100s.
David Franklyn	ibid.	6l.
William Burgis,	ibid.	100s.
Robert Whyte,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Thomas Ware,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Thomas Brecher,	ibid.	6l.
William Myllis,	ibid.	100s.
John Baynes,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Robert Davyson,	ibid.	6l.
Thomas Edmund,	ibid.	10 marcs.
Richard Stonard,	ibid.	6l.
William Jurdyn,	ibid.	6l.
John Hall,	ibid.	10 marcs.
John Burden,	ibid.	8l.
William Okynfold,	ibid.	8l.
Laurence Marden,	ibid.	100s.
John Snowtbe,	ibid.	100s.
John Dyer,	ibid.	8l.
Richard Orgar,	ibid.	6l.
... Wydebere,	ibid.	3l. 6s. 8d.

In all, thirty monks, being the exact number of those, who, together with the abbat, signed the instrument of surrendry; but how strangely they had altered their names immediately afterwards, cannot escape observation (f).

The revenues of the abbey of St. Augustine were valued, according to Dugdale, at 1413l. 4s.

(e) Deeds of Inrolments, Augmentation office. He was deceased before the month of February, anno 32 Hen. VIII.

(f) Anno 1553, there were only sixteen of these monks upon the pension roll, of whom four were returned to be dead.

(g) Tanner's Monast. p. 203. The taxation of this abbey to the see of Rome, was 1300 florins of gold. See Harleian Mss. No. 1850—16.

(b) At the back of this gate-way is one of the most beautiful pieces of squared flint work that can be imagined; the flints in it are squared to such a nicety, that the thin edge of a knife cannot be insinuated through, or between the joints without a great deal of difficulty, and it is no easy task to make out, that they were laid with lime; most of them are the size of the very small bricks, and as smooth

and level, as if they had been ground, and they are laid with such great exactness, that no brick work or even hewn stone can appear more regular in its courses. This art which our ancestors knew, of cutting or rather breaking flints into uniform equal sizes, with smooth surfaces, seems to have been lost for some length of time; besides the above, there are some few other buildings remarkable for the same sort of materials thus excellently fabricated; as the antient bridewell at Norwich, and the gate of St. John's abbey at Colchester, and the gate some years since pulled down at Whitehall, was much in the same taste.

(i) This gate-way was new built by Thomas Ickham, a monk and sacrist of this monastery, at the latter end of K. Richard II.'s reign, at the charge of 466l. 13s. 4d. as has been 11½d. being the gross value of them, the clear sum being, according to the manuscript value, 1274l. 0s. 10½d. yearly value (g).

A schedule of the plate and vestments delivered at the surrendry of the monastery to the King's Commissioners, may be seen in Stevens's Monasticon, supplement to the 1st volume.

The coat of arms belonging to this abbey, was—Sable, a plain cross, argent.

The common seals of this abbey were only two; the earlier, was the smaller of the two, a very antient one, representing on one side the names and portraits of St. Peter and St. Paul the apostles, with this inscription round it: + Hoc sigillum factum est anno primo Ricardi Regis Anglorum; and on the other side, the effigies of an archbishop in his pontifical habit, (probably meant for St. Augustine) with this inscription: + Sigill ecclesie Sancti Augustini Cantuarie Anglorum Apostoli. The other and later seal, the larger of the two, and of more curious work than the former, representing on one side a church, and in the middle of it both the name and effigies of St. Augustine, together with the arms of the abbey, viz. a plain cross, and some other embellishments, with this inscription round it:

Anglia quod Domino fidei Sociatur amore
Hoc Augustino debetur patris honore.

On the other side, a church also, with the figures of both those apostles, Peter and Paul, this with a sword, the other with a key in his hand, and underneath, what seems to represent the christening or baptizing of St. Ethelbert, by St. Augustine, with these words round it: Sigillum Monasterii beatorum Apostolorum Petri & Pauli Sociorum Augustini Anglorum Apostoli Cantuar.

In the following page is an engraving of the seal, taken from the original.

THE FRONT of this stately abbey was towards the west, extending 250 feet, having at each extremity of it two handsome gateways, the northern one, being the most superb, was the chief approach to the monastery (b); which was situated mostly at the back part of it; the other was the gate through which the entrance was to the cemetery (i). After the dissolution of this abbey, and level, as if they had been ground, and they are laid with such great exactness, that no brick work or even hewn stone can appear more regular in its courses. This art which our ancestors knew, of cutting or rather breaking flints into uniform equal sizes, with smooth surfaces, seems to have been lost for some length of time; besides the above, there are some few other buildings remarkable for the same sort of materials thus excellently fabricated; as the antient bridewell at Norwich, and the gate of St. John's abbey at Colchester, and the gate some years since pulled down at Whitehall, was much in the same taste.

(i) This gate-way was new built by Thomas Ickham, a monk and sacrist of this monastery, at the latter end of K. Richard II.'s reign, at the charge of 466l. 13s. 4d. as has been been

East View of the Abbey of St. Augustine, near the City of Canterbury.

100

The North View of the Ruins of S. Augustines. Abbey of Canterbury.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

the great buildings of it, such as the dormitory, kitchen, halls, and the like, to which may be added the church, being covered with lead, were, for the lucre of it, at different times, stripped of it; after which, the walls of them were either demolished for the sake of the sale of the materials, or being left uncovered, perished by the inclemency of the weather, and the mouldering hand of time; so that the very ruins of the far greatest part of this once extensive monastery scarcely appear, and the very foundations of them are with difficulty traced at this time (k).

Notwithstanding, soon after the suppression of this monastery, many of the buildings of it had been demolished, there was sufficient left to accommodate K. Henry VIII, as a palace for his own use (l); but whether he or any of his royal successors ever took up their residence in it, for been mentioned above, and was called the west gate of the cemetery of St. Augustine. It was called the west gate in distinction, as there was another gate in the wall of the monastery in a straight line eastward near St. Martin's, there being a path or footway through the cemetery, from one of these gates to the other in former times, and indeed after the dissolution, and till within Mr. Somner's memory; but the west gate has been for many years inclosed and converted into a dwelling-house, and the eastern one in the wall of the precinct, has likewise been closed up.

The ancient public highway from the city gate of Burgate to St. Martin's bill, is supposed to have once led in a straight line thither, but that it was inclosed with the precinct of the monastery soon after the first building of it, and to have been then turned to its present angular course by Longport, of which, mention has already been made above, p. 639.

(k) K. James I. in his 16th year, anno 1618, granted his letters patent (See Rym. Fœd. vol. xvii, p. 104) to certain persons therein named; for that having been informed of their art, skill and industry, in discovering, searching, and finding out treasure trove, plate, jewels, copies, vestments, books, and things of like nature, hid or supposed to be hid in abbeys, priories, monasteries, churches, chapels, and other places within the realm. He therefore granted to them full and free licence, authority, &c. by themselves or their deputies, servants, &c. at all times, for seven years, lawfully to enter any the said abbeys, &c. and into the grounds, lands, or soil, belonging to the same, and into every other place where they should think fit, for the searching and finding out the same; and there to view, search for, dig and break up any of the earth of the said abbeys, &c. or other places, thereby to put in practice the said art, skill, &c. and to use all lawful means, for the finding out and obtaining the same; one moiety of which to go to them, and the other moiety to the King; proviso that they should not enter upon the said abbeys, &c. to the hurt of any of his subjects, and without having first agreed and compounded with the owners or occupiers of them, for the doing of the same; and all mayors, justices, &c. were ordered to be aiding and assisting in the furtherance of the same; and all parsons, vicars, curates, churchwardens, &c. belonging to the said abbeys, &c. and all owners, occupiers, &c. of the same, were required to deliver up the keys of the said abbeys, &c. to them or their deputies, on receiving a proper caution for the delivery of the same.

In consequence of these letters patent, many dissolved abbeys and monasteries, among which was this of St. Augustine, were searched, and the soil among the buildings and ruins of them was dug up and overturned; but what was the issue of their search here, or what, or if they made any discoveries within these precincts, I have not found mentioned.

(l) By the account of George Nycolls, surveyor of this palace, under sir Thomas Moyle, surveyor of the King's works, in the last year of K. Edward VI, it appears, that the any time, is not mentioned, till Q. Elizabeth in her 15th year, anno 1573, being on one of her royal progresses, kept her court in it for several days.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

At this palace, on June 12, 1625, K. Charles I. consummated his marriage with the Princess Henrietta of France, whom he had met at Dover, and married at Canterbury that day; after which, the Dowager Lady Wotton resided here during the time of the great rebellion; and K. Charles II, lodged in it on his passage through this city, at his restoration; many of the buildings of it therefore, must have been demolished since that time, as there now remains of the whole of it, no more than is sufficient for the use of a common ale-house, into which it has been for some years converted.

Dugdale, in his Monasticon, has given a print of it, as it was in his time, anno 1655. The view was taken from the high tower of the cathedral, and shews how small a part was then left standing, being no more than remains at present, excepting the refectory and an apartment adjoining to it, since pulled down; so that considerable buildings must have been destroyed before that time (m).

When we enter the scite of the monastery, the first object is Ethelbert's tower, whose beauty, though much defaced (n), especially by sacrilegious hands of late years, will witness to succeeding ages, the magnificence of the whole, when all stood compleat in their glory together (o). This tower was named in honour and memory of K. Ethelbert, being built about the the demolished buildings lay then spread over the ground in heaps of ruins and rubbish, which were then selling by degrees, by the load, to all the neighbouring places. This rubbish was particularly from the old steeple, small round marble pillars, the walls of the undercroft, the asblar stone of the church, and other broken windows, broken grave-stones, corbel stones, the walls of the old church, and the south isle, and the pillars of the church southward.

The repairs then accounted for, shew some of the buildings which were remaining; these repairs were, to the roof of the King's great hall, the great chamber called the wardrobe chamber; over the stair-case coming up into the great hall; the great cellar, the dresser kitchen, next the great hall; the stairs going down into the great kitchen, the two covers over the cellar entry, the cloyster door, the door of the westry, the chimney of the porter's lodge, the cloyster at the end of the great hall southward, the King's housing, called the amery, and other buildings of less account.

(m) Bishop Kennet, in his life of Somner, says, he furnished for William Dugdale with the draft of the monastery, which, with another, representing the high altar, in the church of this abbey, with the several chapels and shrines behind it; and added above to this history, may be seen likewise, in Battely's Somner, p. 25, pt. 2, p. 161.

(n) Since the above mentioned print was taken, this tower has lost its whole north side down to the ground.

(o) See Battely's Somner, p. 31. Weever; and Speed's Hist. in vita Ethelberti.

(p) The print given above, of the antient high altar of the abbey church, seems designed to shew, that behind it year 1047, when, as Thorn, in his chronicle, tells us, archbishop Eadwin, besides other marks of his bounty to this abbey, gave 100 marks to the compleating of the tower, which they were then building; meaning, as Mr. Somner conceives, this tower. There are but small remains of the antient abbey church; the above tower, a wall of one of the isles on the southern side, and the east end of another, or at least of a chancel, with the stone case or frame of a pointed Gothic window belonging to it, are all that are left of it; so that what the dimensions of it were, can hardly be traced with any degree of certainty (p). The west side, however, of Ethelbert's tower being adorned with small pilastres from the top almost to the bottom of it, seems to shew that there never were any cross isles, nor any part of the church continued westward from it. This tower seems to have stood either in the centre of the west front of the church, or perhaps towards the southern part of it (q); about sixty-six feet southward from it, was, till lately, a very massive ruin, composed of flint and rubble stone, of an extraordinary thickness, seemingly a part of the two sides of a hollow square tower, having to all appearance been once a campanile or belfry, but whether separate from the building of the church itself, or contiguous, can only be conjectured (r); an effort had been made, many years past, to undermine it, by which means it had been thrown much out of its perpendicular, and hung tremendous to the view in a very inclined position (s).

were several circular porticoes or chapels, furnished with altars and shrines of other saints, which the monkish writer knew no otherwise how to express. It appears by a lease in the Augmentation office, that there was payable out of the rectory of Kennington, belonging to the abbat and convent, the yearly sum of 6s. 2d. and three cocks and six hens, the same being so reserved to the keeper of the chapel of St. Mary in criptis, within this monastery.

(q) Mr. Somner supposes, that Ethelbert's tower was sometime a steeple or bell tower, annexed and contiguous to St. Augustine's church, standing by the north side of the west end thereof, and opening on the south side or quarter of it, as it is a square piece, into the nave or body of the church, as on the east into the north isle thereof, even just as that we call Arundel steeple in Christ church doth, from which it differs but a little in the work. Of certain, this and the church when standing, were contiguous; and there are those that remember that north isle standing in their time, entire and undemolished. Battely's Somner, p. 32.

(r) William Berne, by his will anno 1461, gave towards the rebuilding of the bell tower of this monastery 9l. to be paid as soon as the work should be begun; and John Vardage in 1463, gave 53s. 4d. to the repair of the new bell tower of this monastery; and there were afterwards, legacies in different wills, devised for the same purpose; and some towards the building of a new steeple, in the church yard of St. Augustine's, so late as the year 1516.

(s) It was composed of chalk, flints, and mortar, in regular layers, cemented so firmly, as to be nearly as hard as a solid rock, appearing to have been once faced with asblar

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

The only thing that remains further for observance among these heaps of ruins, is the chapel of St. Pancrase, built, as Thorn tells us (t), before the arrival of St. Augustine in this kingdom, and used by K. Ethelbert, before his conversion to Christianity, for the place of his idol worship. If so, it was a very small temple for a King's devotions, being only thirty feet long, and twenty-one wide; the walls, which are yet standing, have quantities of British or Roman bricks among them. In the south wall is a small circular arch of a door-way, regularly composed of such bricks, being the work of the times; in the east wall is a large pointed gothic window, with an arch of those bricks, of the same pointed form, above the stone work of it. In this chapel, or a former one here, St. Augustine is said to have celebrated mass, having first purged it of its former idolatrous worship, though many suppose that this chapel was used before Augustine's arrival by Queen Bertha, as an oratory for her christian devotions (u).

During the great storm of wind, which happened in the night time in the year 1361, one Ralph, a chaplain, a very devout man, took shelter from it in St. Pancrase's chapel, to avoid the danger of it, and staid in the chancel as the safest part, it having been but lately new roofed; but a great beam being thrown down by the fury of the wind, over the image of the Blessed Virgin, fell on him, whilst on his knees before it, and killed him; and he was buried in the chapel before the cross, under a marble stone (v).

ashlar stone. It measured thirty-two feet in height, and in the part where it had separated, more than twenty in breadth, and had every appearance of having formed the angle, or corner of a square building, the walls of which, exclusive of dilapidations, were more than ten feet thick; the solidity of it, and its very shallow foundation, seemed to shew its antiquity. This huge fragment was taken down in June 1793, having been undermined by the united efforts of near two hundred men, and with the assistance of jacks and ropes, was, not without great difficulty, thrown down, its immense weight seemingly shaking the ground to some distance. In its fall it separated into three parts; the materials of it were supposed to amount, exclusive of the rubbish, to near five hundred cart loads.

(t) Col. 1760.

(u) Hamon Beale, anno 1492, gave by his will to the reparation of St. Pancrase's chapel, within the precincts of St. Augustine's church-yard, and of the chapel where St. Augustine first said mass in England, annexed to the former, 3l. 6s. 8d. but that this was the place where he first did so (St. Martin's being the place, according to Bede, lib. i, cap. 26) there is much doubt. Joane, widow of William Manston, late of St. Laurence, esq; by her will in 1475, left a sum, for finding a chaplain to celebrate mass in the chapel of St. Pancrase, in the cemetery of St. Augustine's. Alice Brode, of Canterbury, was buried in this chapel in 1525. John Alcock, who was mayor of this city in 1525, was buried in it, beside his wife. John Casjer in 1526, beside John Ashenden there. William Casjer, of Canterbury, in 1532,

The ground north-westward from this chapel, being now a meadow of about two acres, is all over it very uneven, consisting underneath the surface, entirely of ruined foundations of buildings. Close to the wall of the east end of the ruins of the abbey church, is a plentiful spring of most excellent water (w), with which the city, by the bounty of the family of Hales, owners of these precincts, is in a great measure supplied.

Just without the principal gate of entrance into the monastery, was that of the eleemosinary or almonry, vulgarly called the ambry, being under the government of an officer of the monastery, called eleemosinarius or almoner. At this place the alms of the monastery, the remains of their food being sent thither, were distributed, as a main part of their subsistence to certain alms people, consisting of a society of brothers and sisters. It had a chapel belonging to it, long since tumbled into ruins (x).

After the suppression of this monastery, the King retained the scite and precincts of it, with great part of the adjoining domains, in his own hands; those buildings belonging to the abbey, which, on a survey, had been judged useless, were taken down, and the remainder fitted up as a palace for the King's use, that part of the domains adjoining to the precincts, retained likewise, was formed into a park for deer and beasts of chase, and called the King's new park (y). In the 2d and 3d year of Philip and Mary, the scite of this abbey was, by the Queen, granted to car-next to his brother Robert. William Rutland, citizen and alderman of Canterbury, was buried here, next to Joane his wife, in 1532; and Francis Rutland, citizen and alderman, was buried here, near his late wife, as appears by their several wills in Prerog. office, in Canterbury.

(v) Thorn, col. 2122.

(w) I find in a will, in K. Henry VIIth's reign, mention made of the conduit, within the cemetery of this monastery.

(x) Battely's Somner, p. 31.

(y) In the Augmentation office, are several sales of small parcels of land, from different persons to the King, which he had included within his new park here; and in the deed granted by the King, in his 37th year, to the dean and chapter, for the preservation of the water running through his park, mention is made of the deer in it. This park was so named, to distinguish it from one in St. Martin's parish, called le old park, belonging to the abbat and convent of St. Augustine's, as appears by a lease demised by them, June 30, anno 30 Henry VIII, to Willian Coppyn; by the description of a parcel of land, called le old park, in the lordship of Longport, with its appurtenances, and the profits of conies in the park; and a piece of land, called the new purchase, in St. Paul's parish, to hold for forty years, at 40s. rent per annum, viz. for the old park 20s.—and for the rest of the premises 20s.—and he covenants, not to cut down any trees, except for the pales of the park, and for firing to be used in the lodge of it. Involments, Augmentation office.

MONASTERY of ST. AUGUSTINE.

dinal archbishop Pole, for life; on whose death, in the last year of that reign, it reverted to the crown, where it remained no long time; for although Queen Elizabeth, in one of her royal progresses, in the year 1573, kept her court here, during which time she was magnificently entertained with all her attendance, and a great concourse of other company, by archbishop Parker, at his palace, on her birth-day; yet she had, some years before, on July 7, in her 6th year, anno 1564, granted it to Henry, Lord Cobham, on whose attainder, in 1603, it was granted by letters patent, March 27, anno 3 James I, to Robert Cecil, Lord Effenden, Viscount Cranbourne, afterwards Earl of Salisbury, at the yearly rent of 20l. 13s. 4d. (z) from whom it came into the possession of Edward, Lord Wotton of Marley, who at times resided at it, and at his death in 1628, gave it to his widow Margaret for her life; she was succeeded in it by her only son Thomas, Lord Wotton, who kept it likewise in his own hands, and died possessed of it in 1630, leaving four daughters his coheirs; by his will, he gave this palace, with its adjoining lands and appurtenances, to his wife Mary, who resided in it during the time of the great rebellion; when her house here was plundered, and the furniture of it destroyed, by order of the usurping powers (a), from which time it has retained the name of Lady Wotton's Palace, and the space before it, that of Lady Wotton's Green.

She died here on March 17, 1658, and was buried in Boughton Malherb church. Upon her decease, and the partition of the Lord Wotton's estates among their four daughters and coheirs, Anne, the youngest, marrying with sir Edward Hales, of Woodchurch, in this co. bart. entitled him to the possession of this estate, which consisted not only of the site and precincts of this monastery, but of the grounds called the Old Park, eastward of them, the North Holmes adjoining the north side of them, and much other contiguous land, amounting in the whole to upwards of 1000 acres, all parcel of the dissolved monastery; and in his descendants this estate has

(z) To hold to him and his heirs male; remainder, in like manner, to Francis, earl of Kildare; remainder, to William son of George Brook, and his heirs male; remainder, to Frances, lady Stourton, and Margaret, lady Sands, two of the daughters of William, lord Cobham; remainder, to the said Robert, viscount Cranbourne in fee. Roll of Particulars, temp. inter regni, roll 43, No. 152.

(a) During the time of lady Wotton's residence at this palace, it was twice broke open and plundered; her effects in it, to the amount by appraisement, of 330l. were taken away and sold, by order of the state; and one large picture of nearly two ells square, of the passion of Christ, valued in the appraisement at 20l. was taken away by the authority of the mayor, and publicly burnt; at which time continued down to sir Edward Hales, of St. Stephen's, bart. the present owner of it (b).

THE HIGH COURT OF ST. AUGUSTINE.

THERE was belonging to the abbat and convent of St. Augustine, a COURT, which they had the privilege of holding, which was usually called the High Court of St. Augustine, being of the same kind as that which was held by the prior and convent of Christ church, within their precincts, as mentioned above; this was a court of record, which in like manner was held of their own vassals, before their bailiff for the time being, from three weeks to three weeks, to hear and determine pleas, actions of debts, &c. and subject to its authority, they had a gaol near the precinct of the monastery, within their borough of Longport.

At this court were paid the several chief rents due to the abbat and convent, from the estates held under them, and it continued in force after the dissolution, being from thenceforth held by a high-steward, appointed by the crown, from which it appears never to have been granted away, and it continued to be so held till within the memory of some now living; but the profits of the court diminishing, from the suits being removed and prosecuted in other courts, the increase of stamps on their proceedings, and various other causes, it grew less and less resorted to, and was at last totally disused, inasmuch, that the memory of its having been, begins now to be almost forgotten.

After the death of K. Charles I, the liberty commonly called the high court of the liberty of the late dissolved monastery of St. Augustine, was surveyed in 1652, as part of the estates of the late King, by ordinance of parliament, in order to its being sold. In this survey it was returned, that the chief or hamlet rents, called lath or tythe silver, payable out of the several townships, tythings and lands within the liberty, were 15l. 15s. 0½d. suit of court for the inhabitants of Minster, 23s. 4d. profits of courts of record and court baron and the palace and the adjoining lands belonging to her, were of the value of 500l. per annum, out of which, she was paid for her support one third part, after deducting all charges of the committee of sequestration out of it. Original papers of the sequestrators of the state.

(b) So little is the veneration paid at this time to the remains of this once sacred habitation, that the principal apartments adjoining the gate-way, are converted into an ale-house; the gate-way itself into a brew-house, the steam of which has defaced the beautiful paintings over it; the great court-yard is turned into a bowling-green; the chapel and isle of the church on the north side, into a fives-court; and the great room over the gate, into a cock-pit.

royalties

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

royalties 23l. coroner and clerk of the market 70s. schedule of the green wax 25l. (c) Total 67l. 14s. 7½d. (d) and it was returned, that there was a court of record belonging to it, held every three weeks, in which all actions, both real and personal, might be tried and determined, without limitation of any sum, the perquisites of the courts being the amerciaments of the bailiffs belonging to them and the liberties. The issues of the jurors, the fines of responsors, together with the court baron, with the waifs, estrays, treasure trove, deodands; felon's goods, &c. amounting yearly as above, that the court was held every three weeks, near the site of the monastery; that the jurisdiction of it extended to some ten whole parishes, and part of an hundred parishes besides, and into part of the city of Canterbury. That all actions as well real as personal, might in it be tried and determined without limitation of any sum; and that the court baron had been neglected of late.

The officers belonging to the court were,

The Right Hon. sir Henry Vane, the elder high-steward, by grant from the committee of the late King's revenue; his deputies, Thomas Twisden, esq. and Nicholas Oliver, gent. the late keepers of the game, within the said liberty; Sir Peter Heyman, knt. and sir Henry Crispe, knt. John Sbarpe, chief bailiff of the liberty and keeper of the prison, who substituted several under him; eight attorneys and a collector of the hamlet rents. All which shews the consequence and high estimation this court was then held in; however it may since have been suffered to sink into oblivion.

THE BOROUGH OF LONGPORT

is a district and manor in the eastern suburbs of this city, exempted from the liberties of it, and now esteemed as a borough, lying within the hundred of Westgate, being subordinate to the jurisdiction of the justices of the county of Kent at large, by whom a boroughholder is appointed for this district (e).

Somner calls the manor of Longport, the antient and first manor of St. Augustine's abbey; the description of it in Domesday, under the general title of the land of the church of St. Augustine, is as follows:

Ipsa abbat tenet in Lanport. Et ibi e. un solin Et un jug. Et sep qetu fuit Et sine Csuitudine. Et un jugu jacet in alio hund qd ptin isti m. Et 70 burgenfes erant

(c) These schedules were under the great seal of the green wax office, estreated out of the public exchequer within this liberty.

(d) The particulars of these chief rents are in the original survey, in the Augmentation office. In the roll of particulars of the sale of the late King's estates, in the same office, roll H. 14, Robert Gibbon is set down as the purchaser of in Cantuaria civit buic m plinent. In hoc m sunt. 2. car. Et dim in dno Et 28 villi cu 63 bord bnt. 6. car. Ibi. 17. ac pti. T. R. E. valeb 20 lib Et post 18. lib. modo. 35. lib. Et 4 solid.

Which is: The abbat himself holds the manor of Lanport, and there is one suling and one yoke, and it was always acquitted and without custom, and one yoke lies in another hundred, which belongs to this manor; and 70 burgeses were in Canterbury city, belonging to this manor. In this manor are 2 carucates and an half in demesne, and 28 villeins with 63 borderers, having 6 carucates. There are 17 acres of meadow. In the time of K. Edward, it was worth 20 pounds, and afterwards 18 pounds, now 35 pounds and 4 shillings.

And a little further in the same survey, under Stowing hundred; Ipsa abbat tenet in Lanport 2 solins Et un jugu Tra e 6. car. ibi sunt 9 villi cu 4 bord bntes 6 car. ibi 10. ac pti Et silva. 2. porc. T. R. E. valeb. 6. lib. Et post 4. lib. modo 8 lib.

Which is: The abbat himself holds in Lanport, two sulings and one yoke. The arable land is 6 carucates. There are 9 villeins and 4 borderers, having 6 carucates. There are 10 acres of meadow, and wood for the pannage of two hogs. In the time of K. Edward, it was worth 6 pounds, and afterwards 4 pounds, now 8 pounds.

It appears by the register belonging to the treasurer of this abbey, that in the reign of K. Edward I, the demesne lands of the manor of Longport were 475 acres, and one rood; and that it had in demesne, a park, called Langport-med, near the park of Trendele; and a certain park near the garden of Bertram the tanner, in Fordwich; and that there were held of this manor the hamlets of Vispole, St. Laurence in St. Paul's, and Wyke.

In the year 1313, anno 7 Edward II, in the iter of Henry de Stanton and his sociates, Justices Itinerant, the abbat was summoned to shew by quo warranto, how he claimed to have sundry liberties in this manor of Langeport, among others, and the view of frank pledge, and all that belonged to it, and the liberty of weif, &c. and the abbat by his attorney answered, that the same had been granted to his monastery, by the charters of former Kings, and had been allowed in the last iter of J. de Berewick and his sociates, Justices Itinerant, in the 21st year of K. Edward I, who confirmed the whole of them by his charter, as the then King, Edward II, had done likewise, by his them; and he appears to have been lord of the court and liberties, by the style and preamble to the several court-rolls, till the time of the restoration.

(e) The borough of Longport is now charged to the county rate, the sum of 31. 18s. being its settled portion to the county stock.

charter

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

charters dated at Dover, on May 22, in his 6th year; all which were allowed in the above iter to the abbat, who had licence to depart, sine die, saving the King's right, &c. (f) And the jurors in the same iter presented, that the bailiff of the abbat held view of frank pledge twice in the year at la Berton, of his tenants of Langport, Fispole, and the hamlet of St. Laurence, in the suburbs of the city of Canterbury; whereas, he nor his bailiffs ought to hold any such view of those tenants, by reason that those tenants were used to come twice in the year, at the two lagbedays, before the bailiffs of the city to the ward of Burgate and Redyngate, until the time when by means of a certain predecessor of the then abbat's, the said bailiff drew the tenants to his said place, to the King's residence, &c. but they knew not quo warranto. Therefore the sheriff was commanded to cause the abbat to appear, &c. who afterwards came and said, that Berton, Langeport, and the suburb of the city of Canterbury, of the tenancy of the abbat were the same; and he said, that he had view of frank pledge in Langeport, and that his tenants of Fispole, and of the hamlet of St. Laurence in the same suburb, ought to come to the said view, and there to present all things which belonged to the view, and as it was allowed in the last iter, before J. de Berewick, and his sociates, &c. and so it was found in the said iter; and Geoffry de Hertpol, who appeared for the King, said, that all the tenants of the abbat of Fispole, and the hamlet of St. Laurence, in the suburb of the city, always used to come before the bailiffs of the city at the two views, and there to present all matters, &c. and that before the last iter, and always afterwards for the ten years past, and that the predecessor of the abbat had withdrawn the said tenants to the King's damage, &c. and he demanded, that it should be enquired into, in the King's behalf, and the abbat the same likewise, and the jurors chosen for this purpose said, upon their oaths, that all the tenants of the abbat of Fispole, and of the hamlet of St. Laurence, in the suburb of the city, never came, nor were used to come before the bailiffs of the city, to present before them, at the said two views, neither before the last iter, nor afterwards; therefore the abbat should depart sine die, as to this matter, saving the King's right, &c. (g) And the jurors further presented, that the abbat of St. Augustine claimed to hold in his court of Langeport, within the liberty of the city, pleas of the crown, viz. of thieves taken in the fact, in prejudice of the aforesaid city, and they knew not quo warranto; and the abbat appeared and said, that he had in his manor of Langeport, infangenethef; and further, that the aforesaid liberty was allowed in the last iter of J. de Berewick and his sociates, justices, &c. and to this he vouched the records of the said iter, which being searched, it was found in them, that the abbat had the aforesaid liberty of infangenethef in his manor of Langeport, and that it was allowed to him, therefore the abbat as to this, should depart sine die, saving the King's right, &c.

And they presented, that William Pecock was taken in the Berton of the abbat within the city for burglary in the granary of the hospital of St. Laurence, in Canterbury, and his corn stolen from thence, and carried away to the value of ij sh. and there, before the bailiffs of St. Augustine and the suitors of the court of Berton, was hung, and because the said bailiffs and the suitors proceeded to pass judgment on the said William Pecock in the court of Berton, concerning the theft committed within the liberty of the city, which was the King's, &c. therefore it was commanded that the sheriff, &c. and afterwards the abbat appeared and said, that the place, in which William Pecock was taken, viz. in Berton, was within the liberty of the abbat, and in like manner the aforesaid hospital of St. Laurence, was within the liberty of the said abbat of Langeport, in which liberty he had infangenethef; which liberty was allowed him in the last iter before J. de Berewick and his sociates, justices, &c. and this was found in the rolls of the same; and the jurors testified, that the said Berton and the hamlet of St. Laurence, were within the liberty of the said abbat of Langeport, and therefore the abbat, as to this, should depart sine die, saving the King's right, &c. (h) All which liberties above-mentioned were confirmed to the abbat and his successors by K. Edward III. in his 36th year, by his letters of inspeximus (i).

Somner says, that the bounds of this borough are still the same as are described in the charter of K. Ethelbert's foundation of the monastery of St. Augustine, mentioned above. This the reader will judge of, by comparing the present boundaries, which will be found below, with those of that charter. What the western and northern boundaries of it were, as well as the liberties and franchises claimed within it, both by the abbat of St. Augustine's and the citizens of Canterbury, in the reign of K. Henry III. may be known by an agreement made between them in the year 1263, and the 42d of that reign, at Westminster, before

(f) Thorn, col. 2015. This liberty was confirmed to the abbat and his successors, by the King's writ under his great seal, directed to his chancellor, dated at Wyndsove, May 1; and by his writ of supersedeas, directed to the sheriff of Kent, dated at Westminster, May 17, that same year. See Thorn, col. 2022, et seq.

(g) Thorn, col. 2019.

(h) Ibid. col. 2020.

(i) Ibid. col. 2134.

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

the King, with his consent; which agreement, at the request of the citizens and bailiffs of Canterbury, was exemplified by the King's letters patent, dated on May 20, anno 43 Henry III, and inrolled in the court of chancery. This agreement was made on account of certain disputes which had arisen between them, and was to the following purpose; THAT if any thief should be taken in the fact (k), so that he should be called infangtheof, i. e. a thief within the boundaries, from the western gate of the cemetery of St. Augustine's, as far as the house of Henry the smith, and from thence to the house of Nicholas de le Berson, and then by the way called Loder's lane (l), as far as New-street (m), and so from New-street to St. Sepulchre on the right hand, he should remain in future to the citizens and their liberty without any contradiction of the abbat or his successors, or the monastery of St. Augustine, for ever; whether he should be taken of the tenancy of the abbat, or of his liberty within or without.

And if any one should be taken, who should, in like manner be called infangtheof, on the left part of the said bounds and metes, either from St. Sepulchre to Caldene (n), as much as should be of the fee of the abbat on both sides, and in like manner from the house of the aforesaid Henry the smith, by the way which led to Fispole on both sides, as far as Fispole, viz. whatever was of the fee of the abbat; and in like manner, if such a thief should be found in the fields of Northome, and by the way which led to the gate of St. Augustine, he should in future remain to the abbat and his successors, and his monastery, for ever; so that the officers of the abbat might lawfully take such within the aforesaid metes and bounds, and execute justice on them, according to their charter, and the law and custom of England, without the contradiction of the citizens, or of their heirs, for ever; whether he who should be taken was of the ville, or of the liberty of the city, or otherwise, so that on account of this agreement, no detriment should come to the citizens in relation to their rights, which they had in the tenancy of the abbat, that dwelt within the aforesaid metes and bounds, which should remain as well to the abbat as to the aforesaid citizens; but that those who should exercise trades, should be in lot and scot and in tallage and in defence of themselves, as they were before, without any contradiction of the abbat or his successors, so that when a tallage should be assessed upon them, it should be collected by the view of the bailiff of the lord abbat, if he chose to be present at it; if that was not convenient, then by the bailiffs of the city.

But that the citizens should, notwithstanding, have within the aforesaid metes and bounds, by their coroner, the view of persons dead and wounded, and presentment, which belonged to the King's crown, before the justices at their coming, as they had before, the attachment and prison of all those on whom the abbat could not execute justice in his court; and if he who should be taken by the abbat, within the aforesaid metes and bounds, should escape from the prison of the abbat, the citizens should not be answerable for that escape before the justices, but that the abbat and his successors should acquit themselves before the same; and it was agreed, that from thence forward, if any dispute should arise between them on any articles which perhaps the abbat might affirm he had used, or the citizens should affirm, that they had in the fee of the abbat, and could not agree without the bringing of it to some plea; the plaintiff should come into court, and should have the King's writ to the sheriff, that by the oaths of 12, as well knights as others, free and legal men of the foreign, by whom the truth of the matter might be the better known, or who were not connected by any affinity, either to the abbat or the citizens, he should inquire the truth of the matter of right, and use, so that by them the dispute might be determined; because both parties had agreed, that without any cavil, they would hold themselves satisfied, to which the said jurors should bind both parties by their oaths (o).

THE PRESENT BOUNDARIES OF THE BOROUGH OF LONGPORT

are as follows: beginning at Mr. Tyre's house, take half the road on the left hand side through Love-lane, then turn the corner and take half the road all the way through Ivy-lane to the corner of Mr. Bunce's garden-wall, from thence take half the road on the left hand side so far as three houses near Oaten-hill; the two first houses are in the borough, and the third is in the city; then from the back part of the second house proceed across two orchards caterwise, until you come to an ash pollard in the hedge by the Bridge road side near the sign of Canterbury, where mark; from thence take half the road until you come about half way between the stile which leads you to the foot-way to Nackington and the gate that goes into St. Laurence field, in the hedge of which field did lately stand a crab-tree, where the said borough used to mark, then to a stone about two or three rods from the hedge behind St. Laurence-houfe, from thence as straight as you well can go (k) Cum manu. opera.(l) Now called Love-lane.(m) Now Chantry-lane.(n) Now the lime-kiln field.(o) See this composition, printed in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. lxxi; and Thorn, col. 1916.

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

to an oak pollard near the lone-barn in Nackington-lane, which oak pollard is lately cut down, but did stand on the left hand side as you go to Nackington; from thence straight through the upper part of Barnsfield until you come to the end of the Heathen-land, where mark upon an elm, then down by the side of a dike against William Hatcher's land unto a stile and mark, then into Bridge road, taking one half of the road, still keeping the left hand side until you come to about the middle of Gutteridge-bottom, where mark upon a black-thorn, then cater the corner (below Mr. Andrews's house) of a field belonging to Nutt and Walker, and mark upon an ash tiller; from thence keep straight along the hedge for something more than half a mile until you came to land called Hompits, in the occupation of Mr. Collard, of Little Barton farm, and about forty rods before you come to the corner of the field, where mark upon an ash tiller; then cater up into a little wood at the lower side of Lieudown, and mark upon the stool of an oak, then straight until you come into the Beaksbourn road at the bottom of Paternoster-hill; from thence climb the bank into a wood belonging to fr Philip Hales, bart. and mark upon an oak near the wood side; from thence through the wood, taking in all the Hoath land, until you come to a drill of running water, keeping the water close upon your right hand until you come to Fishpool-bottom, to a bridge, which bridge is repaired part by the parish of Littlebourn, and part by the borough of Longport; from this bridge to a pollard oak in a meadow belonging to the Right Hon. earl Cowper, about three or four rods from the remains of the old dog-kennel, then as straight as you well can go through about the middle of the cherry orchard, leaving the Moat house upon your right hand until you come to the wall against the road that leads to Fordwich and Stodmarsh, and mark against the wall at the road side about 12 rods from the corner of the wall against the Littlebourn road, then cross the road and mark upon an oak pollard, upon land belonging to fr Edward Hales, in the occupation of Mr. John Austen; from thence down to a spot of land called the Bogs, and mark upon an ash pollard standing in the hedge, from thence as straight as you well can go to the third gate coming from earl Cowper's wall towards Canterbury, belonging to Mr. Austen's land and opposite Mr. Hammond's hop-ground, then take half the road of that side next Hammond's land until you come within about eight rods of a small piece of pasture land

(p) The above boundaries were taken in 1788, from the parole evidence of Mr. John Wildish, a respectable inhabitant of this borough.

(q) In the Augmentation office, there is a lease of this manor of Langport, alias Barton, in the parish of St. Paul, belonging to the said Mr. Hammond at the top of St. Martin's bill, and mark upon an elm tree, then cater down the hill into land belonging to Mrs. Austen, where stands a stone with a mark upon it, then straight through the said Mrs. Austen's hop-ground to a gate leading out of the said hop-ground into a small passage leading to the sign of Sandwich, and is between the said hop-ground and said Austen's garden, where mark upon a post in the paling of the said garden; then cater the said garden and so to a doorway, (taking in a small barn now converted into a stable, for the use of Mr. John Austen.) and so to a walnut-tree standing opposite to the east end of the hospital founded by John Smith, esq. near St. Martin's bill, and come up to the turn water over against the monastery wall in the front of the hospital, which is repaired by this borough of Longport, from thence proceed to a large door-way through the monastery wall into a garden, now in the occupation of Daniel Hayward, gardener, and so on quite through the monastery grounds until you come to a house in the street, commonly called Broad street, now in the occupation of William Bootb, taylor, from thence to an ale-house called the Chequers, leading into Lady Wotton's green; then cater the gardens behind the Chequer ale-house until you come to a certain house, lying and being at the corner of Church-street, and near the parish church of St. Paul, now in the several occupations of John Wildish and Ann Barton, spinster, and from thence to Mr. Tyre's house, where we first began (p).

THE MANOR OF BARTON, alias LONGPORT.

The Berton, (Bertona), or Barton, mentioned above, was the court or mansion of the farm of the abbat's manor of Langeport, now called Longport. It is situated within the bounds of that borough, on the south side of the highway called Longport-street, and is at this time called which, with the other buildings, consisting of two spacious barns, being the repository of the corn and other increase of their adjoining demesnes, was, with the manor itself of Barton alias Longport, and the adjoining demesne lands, surrendered up, with the scite of the abbey and other possessions of it, in the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, to the use of him and his heirs for ever (q); and the fee of it seems to have remained in the hands of the crown, till K. Edw. VI, in his 7th granted by the abbat and convent, anno 29 Henry VIII, to Robert Best, of Ash, yeoman, to hold for thirty years, at the yearly rent of forty-eight quarters and two bushels of wheat, one hundred and five quarters of barley, and four quarters of green peas, and 53s. 4d. in money, excepting rents of assize.

BARTON-HOUSE,

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

year, granted this manor of Langporte, lately belonging to the above dissolved monastery, and the capital messuage in Langporte, in the parish of St. Paul, in the tenure of Clement Kempe, and the messuages and lands called le old Park, together with sundry other premises, to hold in capite by knight's service (r). He died possessed of this estate in the 1st year of Q. Elizabeth, leaving Henry Cheney his son and heir, who had livery of it in the 3d year of that reign, and was afterwards created Lord Cheney of Tuddington (s); he dissipated all the great possessions left him by his father, and alienated this manor to sir Edward Herbert, who, in the 21st year of Q. Elizabeth, passed it away by sale to Thomas Smith, by the description of the manor of Langport, alias Sturrey Barton, and 21 messuages in Langport, Barton, St. Paul's, &c. and the tythes of grain (granorum), &c. in the parish of St. Paul, assize, &c. belonging to courts, the advowson of the vicarage of St. Paul, and several lands therein mentioned; which lease came into the hands of Clement Kemp, yeoman, who anno 34 Henry VIII, surrendered the lease up, and had another for twenty-one years, granted by the King. Bundle of leases in Augmentation office, Kent-7.

The corn rent above-mentioned, so reserved after the suppression of the monastery, was demised by the King, in his 32d year, to sir Anthony St. Leger, knt. for twenty-one years, at the yearly rent of 34l. 18s. 4d. Inrol. Augment. office.

(r) Rot. Esch. ejus an. pt. 6.

(s) Rot. Esch. ejus an. See an account of the Cheney's, under Eastchurch in Shepey, vol. ii. of the Hist. of Kent.

(t) Rot. Esch. ejus an. pt. 5.

(u) It appears by the deposition of sundry aldermen and commoners, made in 1582, concerning the breaking up of Babbs-hill, that Thomas Smyth, esq; who purchased this manor anno 21 Elizabeth, was he who was customer to Q. Eliz. and of Westenbanger; his descendant, living in 1657, was Robert Smyth, of Bidborough, esq; nor was there any, then or afterwards, of the name of John. If so, the above John Smith, esq; who founded the alms-houses on this manor in 1657, as appears by the inscription on them, could not be a descendant of the customer, or of the Westenbanger family, and must have been an after purchaser of this manor, of the same name. The deposition mentioned above, concerning the plowing or breaking up of Babbs-hill, being a part of the demesnes of this manor, and the usual place of shooting, was, on account of its having been done by Mr. Smyth's tenant; complaint of this it seems had been made to the lords of the Queen's council, by the mayor and commonalties, who had referred them to Mr. Smyth; and on their attending on him at Westenbanger, he had satisfied them that it should not be so again. It appears, that the like had been attempted about thirty-five years before, but was prevented by the interference of the lords of the council at that time.

(v) The first of this family of HOUGHAM, which is commonly pronounced and sometimes spelt HUFFAM, that is mentioned in the Heraldic Visitation of the county of Kent, anno 1619, is William Hougham, who was of Ash near Sandwich, at the latter end of K. Henry VII, and the beginning of K. Henry VIII's reign. By Elizabeth his wife he left a son Solomon, who lies buried in that church, the effigies on whose tomb has been long since destroyed. His son Stephen was of Ash likewise, who died in 1555; by his will desired to be buried there likewise. By Bennet Brooke his wife, who was of Ash, and died in 1560, and was bu-

St. Laurence, St. Martin and St. George, in the city of Canterbury (t), in which name it continued down to John Smith, esq. who died possessed of it about the year 1657 (u), whose widow afterwards became entitled to it; after which it passed next into the name of Hougham, for Solomon Hougham, esq. descended from those of Weddington in Ash, near Sandwich, was become possessed of this manor in the reign of K. Charles II; he served the office of high sheriff of this co. in the year 1696, being then of St. Paul's in Canterbury; the year after which he died, et. 73, and was buried in St. Mary's church in Sandwich (v), leaving no issue; his nephew, Solomon Hougham, of London, merchant, became his heir, and possessed this manor, but dying likewise without issue in 1714, was buried near his uncle, upon which Charles Hougham, his next brother, became his heir in this manor, and was succeeded by her husband, he had two sons, and a daughter Elizabeth, married to Stephen Solly. Richard the second son, was of Eastry, and had a son Thomas, who was of Dover priory, and other children. Michael Hougham, the eldest son of Stephen, was of Weddington in Ash, and died in 1583, having married Judith, daughter of Austen, of Adisham, by whom he had three sons; Richard, of Weddington; Stephen, of Norborne, who married Joan, daughter of Thomas Beke; and Michael, who married first Elizabeth, daughter of Andrew Joade; and secondly, Jane Brooke, by both of whom he had issue. The three daughters married Country, Paramor, and Bateman. Richard Hougham, of Weddington, the eldest son, died in 1606, and was buried in Ash church; having had by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Edward Saunders, of Norborne, (remarried to Thomas Hawks) three sons and a daughter Anne, who died unmarried in 1661, and was buried in Ash church. Of the sons, Michael the eldest, was of Weddington, gent. and lies buried in Ash church, having married Margaret, daughter of William Courtbope, of Stodmarsh, whose descendants resided in London till within these few years. Edward, the second son, left by Margaret his wife, an only daughter Anne, married to John Bettenham. Solomon, the third son, was of Sandwich, where he died in 1658, et. 59, and was buried in St. Mary's church there, leaving by Mary his wife, three sons and a daughter Anne, married to Tho. Harvey. Of the sons, Solomon, the eldest, was a merchant in London, and afterwards having purchased the manor of Longport alias Barton, was of Barton-house, esq; where he resided and kept his shrievalty there for the county in 1696; the year after which he died without issue, leaving his nephew Solomon his heir and executor. Richard, the second son, was of Sandwich, where he died in 1662; and Henry was the third son, who left issue three sons and a daughter Elizabeth. Of the sons, Solomon was his uncle Solomon's heir and executor, and died without issue in 1714; John died without issue; and Charles Hougham, the third son, became heir to his eldest brother Solomon, and possessed this manor of Longport alias Barton, which is now in the possession of his great-grandson, William Hougham, jun. esq. They bear for their arms—Argent, 5 chevrons sable; quartering Saunders and Brooke; to which Mr. William Hougham, jun. adds the quartering of Corbet, with an escutcheon of pretence, for Robinson; being—Vert, a chevron between 3 roe bucks trippant, or.—There are many of their wills in the Prerog. office in Canterbury, in which the name is seldom spelt Hougham, in general it is Huffam, as now pronounced.

by

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

by his son Mr. Henry Hougham, gent. who died possessed of it in the year 1726, leaving his widow, Sarah, daughter of Mr. William Hunt, surviving, and the inheritance of this manor to his son, then an infant, William Hougham, esq. (w), who afterwards rebuilt the present mansion of it and resided in it till of late, when he gave the possession of it up to his only son and heir William Hougham, jun. esq. who now resides in it.

A court leet and court baron is held for this manor.

At a small distance eastward from Barton-house, is Smith's hospital or Alms-houses, so called from their founder John Smith, esq. in 1657, being built on the demesnes of Barton farm, of which, and the manor of it, he was owner, for the dwellings of four poor men and four poor women, who repair their several dwellings, and have each paid to them eight pounds yearly, out of lands which he devised in his will for that purpose.

This hospital is entitled to the sixth-part of Mrs. Masters's legacy, in common with the other hospitals in Canterbury; of which, a further account may be seen above, among the charities given to this city.

On the south side of Longport-street, is Chantry-lane, formerly called New-street, the former of which names it took from a religious foundation built in it, called from its having been built by one Hamon Doge, official to the archdeacon of Canterbury, and the last rector of St. Paul's, in the reign of K. Henry III. and the year 1264 (x), who endowed it with this then capital messuage, with its appurtenances, situated in New-street, in the parish of St. Paul, with 57 acres of land, and 4l. 6s. 9d. annual rent (y); and he ordained in it two chaplains for ever, of which one should celebrate in the said messuage in the free chantry, and the other at the altar of St. John the Baptist, in the church of St. Paul, for the souls of himself, his

DOGE'S CHANTRY,

(w) He married first, Margaret-Hannah-Roberta, one of the daughters and coheirs of John Corbet, of the county of Salop, esq. who died in 1755, and was buried in St. Martin's church; and secondly, Mary, widow of John Brakenbury, gent. who died in 1788, æt. 70, without issue, and was buried in Deal church. By his first wife he had issue William Hougham, now of Barton-house, esq. born in 1752, and a daughter married to Richard Sandys, esq. who afterwards took orders, by whom she left issue; William Hougham, jun. esq. the son married the daughter and heir of Charles Robinson, esq. barrister at law and recorder of Canterbury.

The tythes of the lands of this manor being given to the hospital of St. Laurence at its foundation, continued part of the possessions of it at the time of its suppression, and have ever since had the same owners as the site of the hospital down to John, lord viscount Dudley and Ward, and are usually called the St. Laurence tythery, being wholly within the parish of St. Paul's; and they now belong to his heirs and assigns, of which more may be seen under St. Paul's parish.

parents, and of Roger de Chichester, abbat of St. Augustine, and his successors, for the convent of the same, its benefactors and their successors; and be ordered, that on the constituting of every new chaplain admitted to this chantry, the said chaplain should pay to the abbat and convent of St. Augustine, 13s. 4d. as a relief for all the lands and tenements, which he should hold of them; but he gave and confirmed the right of conferring, instituting, inducting into corporal possession, and of defending the chaplain so inducted to the abbat and convent, &c. (z) all which he confirmed by his last will, and appointed Martin de Dovor chaplain of it (a).

After this, the chantry continued in the same state till the general dissolution of these sort of religious foundations, in the reigns of K. Henry VIII. and K. Edward VI. when it was suppressed, and the house, chantry and lands belonging to it, were surrendered to the King's commissioners, to the use of him and his heirs for ever.

There is some part of the building of it remaining, which is converted into a cottage, and the adjoining land to it into a gardener's ground.

ABOUT a quarter of a mile distance, south-eastward from the above chantry, on the south side of the Watling-street road to Dover, is situated formerly an hospital, and being built within the bounds of the borough of Longport, partakes of the same exemption from the city's liberties, and is esteemed within the jurisdiction of the justices of the county of Kent at large.

ST. LAURENCE HOUSE,

This hospital, dedicated to St. Laurence the martyr (b), was first built and founded, as appears by the private ledger of it, by Hugh, the second of that name, abbat of the monastery of St. Augustine and the convent of it, in the second year of K. Stephen, anno 1137, for 16 brethren and sisters, and for one priest or chaplain, and one clerk officiating in it (c); which foundation was con-

(x) Battely's Somner, p. 36. He was buried at the altar of St. Katherine, in the monastery of St. Augustine, near Roger de Cirencester, late abbat of it. Thorn. col. 1922.

(y) Arising from the heirs of John de Criol, in Nether Hardres, at Cobbisdane. Regist. Abb. Sci Aug. cart. 189.

(z) Battely's Som. app. p. 8, No. ix^c, in the year 1290.

(a) The abbat, &c. of St. Augustine's, patrons of this chantry, granted to sir William de Chertbam, chaplain of Coppedocke, this chantry, founded by master Hamon Doge, vacant by the death of Martin de Dovor, chaplain of it. Regist. Abb. Sci Aug. cart. 389.

(b) On one of the piers, being that on the west side, built of flint, of the antient gate leading into this hospital, adjoining to the high road, is a stone, on which is carved a figure of St. Laurence on a gridiron, with one man standing at his head and another at his feet.—Now obliterated.

(c) Battely's Somner, p. 38. See the charter of endowment, printed ibid. appendix, No. x. Thorn. col. 1810. Tan. Mon. p. 213. In a visitation made by archdeacon Harpfield, formed by Pope Eugenius, as appears by a manuscript register of the abbey in Trinity college library.

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

This hospital was intended for the leprous of the abbey; so that whenever it should happen, that any profeſt monk of it should be infected with any contagious diſtemper, but above all with the leproſy, on account of which, he could not live within the precincts of the abbey, without prejudice and scandal to the rest of the fraternity, that then he should be provided for in this hospital, with a convenient chamber, and with meat, drink and apparel, in as full a measure, as any one of his brethren living in the monastery; and that when it should happen, that the father, mother, sister, or brother of any monk of this monastery should come to such great want and indigency, so that, to the reproach of any of these brethren, he or she should be forced to ask at the gates, the alms of the fraternity, that then such of them should be provided for in this hospital with sufficient maintenance, according to the ability of the house, by the advice and consideration of the abbat of St. Augustine's, and of the master of this hospital for the time being; as appears by the hospital's private ledger (d), and confirmed by many of his successors (e).

Abbat Hugh and his convent, for the purpose of erecting this hospital, had purchased and given in alms nine acres of land, of their demesne, lying contiguous, near the way which led from Canterbury to Dover, on the right side of it, within the abbey's lordship of Longport, on which this hospital was afterwards built; and they gave for the maintenance of it, and of the sick and poor people in it, the tythe of all sorts of provisions yearly arising from all that land which they had in demesne, on the right side of the way, and the tythes of wheat and peas of all the land, which lay towards Longport of their demesne of that manor, on the left hand side of the way; to which was added, the blessing of God upon all those, who should be charitable to the poor and sick in this hospital (f).

The revenues of it were, in process of time, much improved by the benevolence of many de-

Harpſfeld, so late as the year 1557, it was returned upon inquisition, that K. John was the founder of this hospital, for blind and lame people, and it had been sometimes called the King's hospital; but this inquisition, taken so great a length of time after the foundation of it, upon what grounds is not known, cannot avail against the account given by Thorn in his Chronicle, as mentioned above. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 173.

(d) The orders and regulations for the better government of the brothers and sisters of this hospital, were made by Thomas, abbat of St. Augustine's, in 1294; to which were made some additions by abbat Thomas Colewelle, in his visitation of the hospital in 1356; both which are inserted in the ledger of this hospital.

(e) Battely's Somner, p. 38. Weever, Fun. Mon. Thorn, vout people, who became benefactors to it: among whom, one of the first and most liberal, was Richard de Marci, owner of the neighbouring lordship of Dodingdale, who gave the tythes of his land of Dodingdale to this hospital, in perpetual alms, for the health of his soul, &c. and that they might hold his gift in remembrance, he ordered, that they should have them particularly for the purpose of buying linen cloth, on the feast of St. John Baptist (g). Afterwards, in the year 1320, Robert de Malling, commissary of Canterbury, gave sentence in favour of this hospital, for the tythes both of the above manor, and also of 300 acres of land and upwards, of the land of Thomas Chicb and his tenants, lying within the limits and bounds of St. Mary Bredin's parish, and this upon the clear evidence of the hospital's right to them, by antient muniments, as well as otherwise (h). In the ledger book of this hospital there is this entry relating to these tythes; that the hospital received all the tythes of 300 acres of land and more, of John Chicb's, of which 50 acres lay at Havefeld, and the rest nigh their own court, and in Mellefeld near St. Laurence; and that the said John should receive of the hospital in autumn, for his servants, five loaves of wheaten bread, and two flagons and a half of beer, and half a cheese of the price of 4d. and that he should receive likewise one pair of dee-ſkin gloves (i) for himself, and one pound of wax candles, and for his servants three pair of gloves (k).

Waretius de Valoyns, lord of the manor of Swerdling, appears by the ledger of this hospital to have confirmed to it in 1331, the great tythes arising from twelve acres of land in a certain field of that manor, &c. in which ledger there are several more benefactors of small rents, parcels of lands, &c. not of any consequence to mention.

The chief governor of this, as generally of all hospitals, was called the warden or keeper of it, and he was always one of the monks of St. Augustine's abbey.

It appears by the rules and ordinances for the government of this hospital, inserted in their ledger, that the community of it consisted of

col. 1810, who says further, that abbat Hugh founded this hospital, and gave to it nine acres of land, on which the hospital was situated; and the tythe of the demesne of Langeport; and three load (carucates) of hay, one from Langeport, another from the sacristy, and the third from the chamberlain; but in the recital of the abbat's grant, the land granted to it is seven acres, instead of nine, as above.

(f) Ledger of this hospital. Thorn, col. 1810. Battely's Somner, appendix, No. x.

(g) Ledger of the hospital. Thorn, col. 1810; and Battely's Somner, appendix, No. xi^b.

(h) Liber pauperum sacerdot. Batt. Somner, p. 39.

(i) Unum par chirothecarum ferinarum, in orig.

(k) Battely's Somner, p. 39, appendix, p. 9, No. xi.

The BOROUGH of LONGPORT.

brothers and sisters, under a keeper or master, and a prioress, who was next in authority under him; that the sisters, on their entrance, took the veil, and that the whole was subordinate in all things, to the abbat of St. Augustine.

In the 30th year of K. Henry VIII, a lease was made by the prior and sisters, to sir Christopher Hales, for nine years, of the scite and all the revenues of this hospital, without paying any rent, but on condition of his finding them with all necessaries during their natural lives; at which time the whole revenues of it were valued at 31l. 7s. 10d. clear, or 39l. 8s. 6d. gross annual revenue (l). This being an hospital, seems to have escaped the general dissolution of religious foundations in the above reign, and after the suppression of the monks in St. Augustine's abbey, to have been entirely occupied by a prioress and sisters, the former being the chief or senior of them, and they in the 6th year of King Edward VI, made a feoffment of this hospital, in fee, to one Tisfel; but in the 3d and 4th year of Philip and Mary, the Queen, in consideration of a certain sum of money, by her letters patent, under her great seal, granted this hospital in fee, to sir John Parrot (m).

In an ordinary visitation of this hospital, in cardinal archbishop Pole's time, anno 1557, this account was given up to the visitors, of the state of it at that time, by the sisters of it, viz. Jane Francis, prioress, Elizabeth Oliver, sister, and Florence Young, not yet admitted sister, who being examined, said, that Mr. Christopher Hales had a lease of their land, and since his death, from one to another, until it came to one Tisfel of London, who made all the spoil of the house; and they said, that there should be seven sisters and a prioress, and a priest, found out of the profits of their lands, which they esteemed to be of the value of 20l. (n) In May, anno 16 Eliz. it was found by inquisition before the escheator

(l) See Tan. Mon. p. 213. (m) Battely, pt. 2, p. 173.

(n) Battely's Somner, p. 40. See Tan. Mon. p. 213; and Strype's Life of archbishop Parker, p. 113, in which it is said, that anno 1562, Mr. Trapps, of London, enjoyed the lease, that the house was greatly decayed, and had only two sisters in it.

(o) Battely, pt. 2, p. 173. (p) Rot. Esch. pt. 3.

(q) Viz. of one capital messuage and mansion, and scite of the hospital of St. Laurence, near the walls of the city of Canterbury; and one hundred and eighty acres of land to the said hospital belonging, lying in the parishes of St. Paul, St. Martin, Westbere, Stodmarsh, &c. Rot. Esch. ejus an.

(r) He was descended from the Bests, of Bibroke in Kennington, of whom there is a pedigree in the Heraldic visitation of the county of Kent, anno 1619, and appears to have been the eldest son of John of that place, by his first wife Anne Knatchbull. They bore for their arms—Sable, an orle of cross-crosets fitchee, in the centre a cinquefoil argent; quartering Barrow, of Hinxhill.

(s) In his will, proved 1666, he styles himself John Best, of the city of Canterbury, gent. and as he had removed from of Kent, that this hospital was concealed and worth 4l. a year; the return of which was made into the exchequer, and one Honywood took a lease of it for 21 years, at the rent of 4l. per annum (o).

By the above, it should seem, that there was great struggling for the possession of this hospital, some by obtaining grants, and others leases of it at the same time; for by the escheat rolls it appears, that in the 38th year of K. Henry VIII, Jocosa Saxey, widow, held this hospital with its appurtenances, of the King in capite, as of his manor of East Greenwich, by the 20th part of one knight's fee, which she had passed to her by fine, made by Francis Trapps, gent. and Anne his wife.

In the 3d and 4th years of Philip and Mary, sir John Parot, knt. had a grant, inter alia, of all that scite of the mansion of the late priory of St. Laurence, near Canterbury, to hold of the manor of East Greenwich, by knight's service (p). Edward Isaac appears afterwards to have possessed sir John Parot's interest in these letters patent; next to whom it was granted, anno 12 Elizabeth, to one Senbouse, and then four years afterwards, to Honywood; after which it passed into the name of Lovelace, for in the 25th year of that reign, William Lovelace died seised of this mansion, with the lands, &c. belonging to it, holding it of the above manor by knight's service, and William Lovelace, his son, had livery of it that year (q).

It next came into the possession of the Bests, who resided at it, of whom Mr. Richard Best, gent. died at it in 1633, and was buried in the chancel of St. Paul's church (r); his son John Best, esq. alienated this estate, together with the tybery called St. Laurence tybery, to William Rooke, of Monkton, esq. (s) afterwards knighted, and of St. Laurence house, of which he died possessed in 1691, et. 70 (t), and was buried in the east chancel of St. Paul's church in Canterbury (u).

St. Laurence, and mentions nothing of this estate in his will, it is plain he had alienated it before his death; but in it he mentions his contract made with Mr. Rooke, for the sale of this tybery, for 2080l. There are many entries of them in St. Paul's register.

(r) His will is in Prerog. office, Canterbury, in which he styles himself of St. Laurence, in the parish of St. Paul's near the city of Canterbury, and desires to be buried as above. He gave to Dame Jane his wife, the use of his house and garden at St. Laurence, with the furniture in it during her widowhood; and to George Rooke, his eldest son and his heirs, the fee of his capital messuage, called St. Laurence, and the farm-house, barns, lands, &c. thereto belonging, with their appurtenances in the parishes of St. Paul, St. Mary Bredin, St. Martin, the manor of Barton, or elsewhere, and the rectory or parsonage of St. Paul, and the tithes, portions of tithes, or tybery, within the said parish of St. Paul, or elsewhere.

(u) Sir William Rooke was descended from the family of this name, seated at Horton Monks in this county, and bore the same arms, (See vol. iii, of the Hist. of Kent, p. 317.)

He

FOUNDATION of the ARCHBISHOPRIC.

His eldest son was fir George Rooke, knt. vice-admiral of England, who succeeded to this seat, and resided here, as did his son George Rooke, esq. who died in 1739, without issue, and devised this estate, with the tybery of St. Laurence, to his widow Frances, daughter of William Warde, esq. who was afterwards in 1763, created Viscount Dudley and Warde; on her death in 1770, she devised the whole of it, with her estates at Stonar and elsewhere in this county, to her brother the Hon. John Warde, who in 1774 succeeded his father as Viscount Dudley and Warde. He at times resided here till his father's death, when succeeding to his seat in Staffordshire, he not long afterwards quitted this of St. Laurence, which he sold with its appurtenances, reserving to himself the tybery, to Lieutenant-Colonel Grabam, who resided at it, and died possessed of it on Feb. 11, 1791, leaving his wife surviving, and one son Charles Grabam, esq. and several daughters by her (v), and she is the present possessor of St. Laurence house, and now resides at it.

The yearly tenths of this hospital are 3l. 2s. 9½d. and are payable to the archbishop.

OF THE FOUNDATION OF THE ARCHBISHOPRIC OF CANTERBURY.

AUGUSTINE the monk, who arrived in England with his companions, about 40 in number, in the year 596 (w), during the reign of K. Ethelbert, as has been already mentioned above, having converted the King to Christianity, and obtained through his favour, a settlement in Canterbury, by the gift of the royal palace; soon afterwards went over to France, and was consecrated a bishop at Arles, in that kingdom (x). But as it seems without title to any particular church, being, as it were, appointed to be the

He had a sister Mary, who married Thomas Gibbon, gent. Sir George Rooke, knt. his eldest son, being Admiral of the British fleets, destroyed those of the enemy at the battle of La Hogue and at Vigo, where he burnt and took many of them, and brought the galleons laden with great treasure home to England. He took Gibraltar, and put the enemy's fleet to flight, which, though much superior to his in force dared not hazard a battle with him. After he had served his country with the greatest bravery and integrity, he retired to St. Laurence, (to which he had given the name of Rook's Nest, which, however, does not seem to have continued after his death,) where he died on January 4, 1709, æt. 58, and was buried near his father in St. Paul's church, in Canterbury, though there is a costly mural monument, with his bust on it, in St. Michael's chapel in the cathedral, and a long inscription to his memory, enumerating his many eminent services to the public; his son George Rook, esq. resided and died here, being buried in St. Paul's church. See more of this family under Stonar, in the History of Kent.

(v) One of the daughters married Edward Knatchbull, esq. now fir Edward Knatchbull, bart. M. P. for the county of Kent; another married Henry, only son and heir of fir Henry Oxenden, bart. and another married the Rev. Charles Cage, vicar of Brasted.

apostle or universal bishop of this nation at large; after which, when it was determined by Pope Gregory, that he should be vested with archiepiscopal authority, the pall (xx), the badge and confirmation of it, was sent directly to London, which at that time was reputed at Rome to be the chief city of this nation, wherein the patriarchal chair had antiently been fixed; for Giraldus Cambrensis tells us, that Augustine himself proposed at first, to fix his metropolitcal chair in the imperial city of London, but afterwards changed his mind; upon which he so managed this affair with Pope Gregory, that according to his desire, the archiepiscopal see, which had been at London from the time of K. Lucius, was then translated to Canterbury (y), and not long after, in 604, he provided for the episcopal chair at London, by consecrating Mellitus, one of those companions who arrived in England with him, bishop of that see (z).

Augustine had, no doubt, many reasons for fixing on Canterbury for this purpose; it was then the metropolis of the kingdom of Kent, as Bede names it, and in some respects the chief city of the whole nation, on which account it was agreeable to the antient rule of the universal church (a). K. Ethelbert had received him hospitably, had afforded him protection, and was still able to continue it; had given him his palace, and as some say, a church near it; on these accounts, as well as through gratitude to his royal benefactor, he might well be inclined to this choice (b); but there were other inducements to it besides these, Ethelbert was a victorious prince, and by a continued success in war, had subdued all the kingdoms of the Saxons round about, except the Northumbrians. The city of London belonged to the East Saxons, whose King was Sebert, nephew to K. Ethelbert, and (w) See Thorn, in Decim. Script. col. 1758.

(x) See Bromton, col. 730. Gervas, col. 1629.

(xx) See below, concerning pope Gregory's sending the pall to Augustine.

(y) Anno 603. Spelman's Councils, tom. i, p. 116.—Pope Gregory certainly intended to establish three archiepiscopal sees, viz. Canterbury, London, and York, probably of equal rank; for which purpose he sent three palls to Augustine, to be bestowed when those cities and the neighbouring parts had embraced Christianity; but the pope dying in the interim, Augustine kept the three palls, one of which he used himself, and the other two were used by his two next successors in the archbishopric. See Gervas, col. 1632. Polidore Virgil Hist. lib. 3. Hereby the prophecy of Merlin was fulfilled, viz. that the dignity of London should grace Canterbury, and such was the antient interpretation of it. Alanus de Insulis, who lived in 1250. Battely, pt. 2, p. 37.

(z) Matthew Westminster. Gervas, col. 1631.

(a) Viz. that the metropolitcal chair should be placed in the metropolis of a kingdom, as Canterbury was at that time. Battely, pt. 2, p. 38.

(b) See Malmesbury; Bede Hist. l. i, c. 33; Lamb. Per. p. 78.

reigned

FOUNDATION of the ARCHBISHOPRIC.

reigned under him in that tract (c); all which were strong reasons for his fixing his archiepiscopal see here.

It must be confessed, however, that no claim to this honour could have been made by London at that time, when it ought to have been made, and the plea might have been most effectual, for in 604, as has been mentioned above, Augustine himself consecrated Mellitus, one of the companions who came with him, and was firmly attached to him, bishop of London and after the death of K. Sebert, which happened in the year 612, paganism prevailed so much among the East Saxons, that the bishop was banished, and there was no bishop of London, till the year 654, and consequently there could be no dispute about the primacy, which by that time became settled beyond dispute, nor afterwards did any bishop of London, till the time of Gilbert Foliot, which was about 550 years, lay any claim to it. Archbishop Laurence succeeded Augustine in the see of Canterbury, being appointed to it by him before his death, whose next successor was Mellitus, late bishop of London, as above-mentioned. I do not find any mention, that either of these two received the pall from Rome, to empower them to exercise the archiepiscopal function, or any letters from the Pope to settle their chair at Canterbury; notwithstanding which, they sat all their days quiet and undisturbed by any opposition or claim, in respect of the primacy of this church.

Archbishops Justus and Honorius, their successors, had the pall sent to them, and with it each of them a letter from the Pope, which are to be seen in Bede; but there is not one word in those letters of the confirmation of the archiepiscopal dignity to this church (d). The sending of the pall to them and their successors, was esteemed a sufficient confirmation of the metropolitcal dignity and authority to the church, and the person likewise to whom it was directed (e); but for the more direct confirmation of the primacy to this church, care was taken to strengthen it by several letters, rescripts and decrees from the papal authority; for which purpose, archbishop Justus having applied by letters to Pope Boniface V, in which he asserted his right to the primacy, received an answer, in which the Pope adds these words, we will and command you, that the me- ropolitcal see of all Britain be ever hereafter in the city of Canterbury; and we make a perpetual and unchangeable decree, that all provinces of this kingdom of England, be for ever subject to the metropolitcal church of that place (f).

To this, Malmesbury annexes a rescript of Pope Honorius, anno 634, to archbishop Honorius, in which are these words; We therefore command all the churches and provinces of England, to be subject to your jurisdiction; and that the metropolitcal see and archiepiscopal dignity, and the primacy of all the churches of England be fixed and remain in Canterbury, and never be transferred, through any kind of evil persuasion by any one, to any other place (g).

If these rescripts had not been omitted by Bede, it would have added much to their authenticity; but besides these two, there are several other letters and decrees, all relating to the same purpose, collected together, which may be seen in Malmesbury, the Decim Scriptores, and in Wilkins's Councils (h); all which are put together and inserted by archbishop Lanfranc, in a letter which he wrote to Pope Alexander, concerning the privileges of the primacy of his see, on account of the contest between him and the bishop of York.

In the registers of this church there are remaining two bulls concerning the primacy, one of them from Pope Eugenius III, to archbishop Theobald, the other from Pope Alexander III, to archbishop Becket, dated anno 1167; in both which bulls are the same words to this effect; That he granted to him and his successors, the primacy of the church of Canterbury, in as full and ample manner as the same then appeared to have been enjoyed by the archbishops Lanfranc and Anselm, and the rest of his predecessors; and he confirmed by that his writing, all dignity and power, which was known to belong to the holy church of Canterbury, which it appeared his predecessors, from the time of St. Augustine, had and exercised by the authority of the apostolical see. The diploma of K. Canute, anno 1018, by which he confirmed the primacy of this see, is also extant in the first tome of the British Councils, p. 533, but the learned publisher of it gives a caution (i), to inspect such charters warily, and not without a distrust of their being counterfeits. The like (c) Dugd. History of St. Paul's, p. 4. See Higden Polychron. p. 204.

(d) See Gervas, col. 1634.

(e) Battely, pt. 2, p. 38.

(f) Malmesb. de gestis Pontif. l. i, p. 208.

(g) Malmesb. de gestis Pontif. l. i, p. 209. Wilkins's Councils, tom. i, p. 35. Ralph de Diceto, col. 438. See the decree of pope Boniface, concerning the dignity of the church of Canterbury, addressed to archbishop Justus, Decim. Script. col. 1749—the privilege which pope Honorius granted to the church of Canterbury of the primacy of all the churches of Britain; addressed to archbishop Honorius.

Ibid. col. 1750. And the decree of pope Formosus, in the time of archbishop Plegmund, that the metropolis and chief see of all the kingdom of the English should be in the city of Canterbury. Ibid. col. 1751.

(h) Most of these letters are printed in the Decim. Scriptores, together with a letter of archbishop Rodulph, relating to the same subject, under the title of Papal Decrees concerning the Primacy of Canterbury, col. 1335. See Spelman's Councils, tom. i, p. 519. Wilkins's Councils, tom. i, p. 41 et seq. in which are several charters and bulls relating to this primacy.

(i) Wilkins's Councils, tom. i, p. 126.

FOUNDATION of the ARCHBISHOPRIC.

charter of K. Edgar is to be met with in the same tome (k), but with the like caution and suspicion of forgery; for it was the custom of the monks, as has been already more than once mentioned above, frequently to forge the confirmation of their rights and privileges by royal charters; and they were not wanting on all occasions to furnish their archives and registers with plenty of such pretended letters of royal confirmation; but it ought to be observed, if the truth of these charters are suspected, the papal bulls seem by no means liable to any such suspicions.

Although the primacy and metropolitanical dignity was, by the papal authority, from time to time confirmed, established and immoveably fixed to the church of Canterbury, yet it was not without meeting with strong opposition, by which, however, it was never shaken, and it overcame them all. The first attempt against the dignity of this see was made by Offa, K. of the Mercians, who was at first a good benefactor to this church, but afterwards conceiving great displeasure against the citizens of Canterbury, though he was not able to deprive the city of the metropolitanical chair, yet he found means to lessen the honour and dignity of it, by contracting the bounds and limits of the archbishop's province, by procuring a pall (which was no difficult matter to obtain by money) for Adalpb, bishop of Lichfield, and with it also the title of archbishop. He obtained a decree likewise, that all the bishops, which were four, of the kingdom of Mercia, and two bishops of East Anglia, should become suffragans, and consequently subject to this new metropolitan. This encroachment, Lambert, then archbishop of Canterbury, was not able to oppose, though his successor archbishop Aibelard, after the death of K. Offa, soon regained his whole right and jurisdiction, by the general suffrage of the whole kingdom, and the consent of K. Coenulph, who succeeded Offa (l), who in one of his letters to Pope Leo for that purpose, says; Because Augustine of blessed me- mory, who in the time of Pope Gregory, preached the word of God to the English nation, and presided over the Saxon churches, died in the same city, and his body was buried in the church which his successor Laurence dedicated to St. Peter, the prince of the apostles, it seemed good to the wise men of the nation, that the metropolitanical dignity should be fixed in that city, where rested the body of him who planted the truth of the Christian faith in those parts (m); and afterwards the same Pope pronounced all that K. Offa had done null and void (n).

The next contests which the archbishops of Canterbury met with, came from the north, in respect both of the extent of the provinces, as of the primacy of this see; for the boundaries of the province were often invaded by the archbishop of York, on the pretence, that when the whole British island was divided into two provinces, Canterbury and York; to the province of the former, were assigned those bounds, which it enjoyed till K. Henry VIII.'s reign (o); to the province of the latter, besides what now remains to it, was allotted almost all Scotland or Albania, as it was then called (p); but the bishops of Scotland having a primate of their own, desisted from acknowledging any obedience to the archbishop of York, by which that province was contracted into a narrow compass, in comparison of the province of Canterbury; therefore, under an idea of bringing the two provinces to a nearer equality, the archbishops of York contested, tho' without success, that the dioceses of Lincoln, Worcester and Hereford, should be taken from the province of Canterbury, and added to that of York (q).

As to the primacy, the disputes between the archbishops of the two provinces were more eager and of longer continuance (r). The privileges for which they contended, were chiefly those of the consecration and benediction of the archbishops of York, by the archbishops of Canterbury, at the metropolitanical church of Canterbury; the profession of obedience and subjection to the see of Can-

(k) Wilkins's Councils, tom. i, p. 432.

(l) See the letter of K. Coenulph for this purpose, anno 801, in Spelman's Councils, tom. i, p. 320.

(m) Malmesb. de gestis, Reg. Ang. l. i, p. 3. Decem. Script. Ralph de Diceto. Abreviat. Chron. Thorn, col. 1775. Gervas, in vita Lamberti. See Battely's Somner, p. 116, pt. 2, p. 39.

(n) According to Stow and some other Historians, K. Offa translated the archiepiscopal see from Canterbury to Lichfield; but they certainly misrepresent the fact, for the metropolitanical dignity was not removed from Canterbury, for Lambert, who was then archbishop of Canterbury, continued so till his death. Lichfield was indeed erected into an archbishopric, and had some of the provinces which before belonged to Canterbury given to it, but Lambert still presided as archbishop over the rest, the same as before. Bishop Godwin has given a true account of this matter accordingly, in his History De Præfulibus Angliæ.

(o) In the 33d year of K. Hen. VIII, an act passed that the bishopric and diocese of Chester; and the bishopric and diocese of Man in the Ile of Man, and the archdeaconry of Richmond, and the bishop of Chester's house at Weston, should be annexed to the bishopric of Chester; and all people in the same diocese should be united to the province and archbishopric of York, and should be severed from that of Canterbury.

(p) Ad Extremos Scotiæ fines. Ralph de Diceto, col. 484. Higden Polychron. p. 204.

(q) Bromton, col. 1101, in Decem. Script. Antiq. Britan. p. 17.

(r) See Chronica Pontificum Ecclesiæ Eborac, autore Thoma Stubbs, in Decem. Script. col. 1686, &c. and the epistle of archbishop Ralph to the pope, asserting the privileges of his church, and its primacy over that of York, against Thurstan, archbishop of York; which is printed in Decem. Script. col. 1735. Knyghton, col. 2345-2348.

FOUNDATION of the ARCHBISHOPRIC.

terbury, to be made by the archbishops of York, at their benediction, and the bearing of the cross before the latter; the former of these privileges was aimed at directly, at the same time that they contended to have the sees of Lincoln, Worcester and Hereford added to the province of York, alleging further, as authors tell us, that the archbishop of York might hence be, from time to time, as the archbishops of Canterbury were, consecrated in his own church at York, in a provincial synod, or by his own suffragan bishops, and consequently there would remain no obligations on the archbishops of York, to promise, swear, or acknowledge any kind of subjection or obedience to the metropolitan of Canterbury. All these attempts proved unsuccessful, but the contention concerning the profession of obedience was the greatest of all; Kings and Popes, and bishops were engaged in it; the case was pleaded at Rome, and debated in England. Our historians in general abound with narratives and instruments relating to this controversy. Archbishop Lanfranc carried it on with a high and powerful hand; he procured a bull from Pope Alexander, and the consent of K. William the Conqueror, to have it argued in the presence of the latter, the bishops, and the nobility at Windsor Castle. The whole proceedings and the decree thereupon, in favour of the archbishop of Canterbury, are related at large by different authors, particularly by William Malmsbury (s), the author of the Antiquitates Britannicæ (t), and the Anglia Sacra (u). The registers of the church of Canterbury abound with the reports of this controversy, and there are in the archives of this church, some originals of the professions of obedience, made by the archbishops of York (v); but to relate more of this matter, would only be tedious, and would answer no purpose of further information to the reader.

The last matter which occasioned disputes between the two archbishops, was, the carrying of the cross erect before the archbishop of York, within the province of Canterbury (w). This encroachment, as it was deemed, was chiefly made by the archbishop of York, at that time, when Robert Winchelsea, archbishop of Canterbury, was in banishment, and lived at Rome; when Henry, prior of this church, the archbishop's vicar-general, sent his letters to the bishop of London, requiring him, that as the archbishop of York was about to pass through his diocese with his cross borne erect before him, he should watch his coming, and inhibit his passing forward in that manner;

(s) Ralph de Diceto, col. 484. Bromton, col. 970, 1005, 1107, 1109, 1263. De gestis Pontif. Angl. lib. i. See Spelman's Councils, tom. ii, p. 5-11, et seq.

(t) In vita Lanfranci. (u) Vol. i, p. 65, &c.

(v) Spelman's Councils, tom. ii, p. 5-11, where the professions of several archbishops of York are inserted.

and that he should put under an interdict all places which he should pass through, for such time as he remained there (x); which letters were more strictly and severely enjoined by archbishop Winchelsea, on his return, by his own special mandate (y), which appears by the tenor of it, to have been issued out a little before the meeting of the parliament, that is, soon after Easter in 1309, being the 2d year of K. Edward II; notwithstanding which, the archbishop of York came to his house near Westminster, with his cross borne erect before him all the way, which the archbishop of Canterbury being informed of, immediately put an ecclesiastical interdict upon all those places through which he had passed, or in which he had resided. The King hearing of this, sent the earls of Gloucester and Lincoln, with some others, to come to parliament, proposing, by way of accommodation, that the two archbishops should each day come to parliament alternately, in each others absence; but the archbishop of Canterbury, after consultation with his suffragans, sent in answer to the King by the bishops of London, Sarum and Exeter, and the prior of Canterbury, that neither himself nor any of his suffragan bishops would come to parliament, so long as the archbishop of York was there, or in the city or suburbs of London, with his cross borne before him; and that he never would upon any terms consent, that the archbishop of York should bear up his cross in any place within the province of Canterbury. Upon which the King, with advice of his nobility, commanded the archbishop of York to depart from London and its suburbs, as the King's progenitors were wont in like case to do to the archbishop's predecessors. The archbishop of York, in consequence of this, returned home, and the archbishop of Canterbury with his comprovincial bishops, came to parliament (z).

This controversy continued for a long time; Lambarde, whose zeal frequently outruns his judgment, insinuates that this cross was an ensign of their own pride, whereby they sought to insult and triumph one over the other (a). But it was far otherwise; for as the sword and mace borne before the civil magistrate are the ensigns of authority, not of pride; so the cross carried before the archbishops was an ensign, not of pride, but of power and jurisdiction; and as the magistrate causing his sword and mace to be borne up before him, beyond the limits of his jurisdiction, might justly be looked on as an assuming of a jurisdiction where he had none, and an en-

(w) Concerning this dispute, see Wilkins's Councils, tom. ii, p. 43, 119, 128, 255, 488.

(x) See this letter, Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 10.

(y) See this letter inserted, Battely, pt. 2, app. p. 11.

(z) Regist. Eccl. Christi P. Battely, pt. 2, app. p. 11.

(a) Peramb. p. 85.

croachment

ARCHBISHOPS.

croachment upon the rights of another; so when the archbishop of York caused his cross, the ensign of his authority and jurisdiction, to be borne up before him within the province of Canterbury (b), it was interpreted, as meant to inroach upon the jurisdiction and rights of the archbishop of Canterbury. Indeed the very beginning of this contest plainly appears to have been grounded upon a pretence of jurisdiction, which the archbishops of York claimed within the province of Canterbury; for in the 27th year of K. Henry I, the King being at the chapel of Windsor castle, the archbishop of York appeared there with his cross erect, and claiming it as his right, would have set the crown on the King's head, the custom being then for our Kings to wear their crowns upon solemn occasions, equally with the archbishop of Canterbury; but he was repulsed, the bearer of his cross, together with the cross itself, was thrown out of the chapel; and it was affirmed, that no metropolitan, out of his own province, might have any cross borne before him (c). At length, in the year 1353, as it is in the registers of the church of Canterbury, this contention, which had continued near 300 years, was finally concluded. The instrument of the composition, confirmed by pope Innocent, is in the registers of this church, and agrees with that which is printed by Mr. Wharton in his Anglia Sacra (d), by which it was compounded between them—That each archbishop in the other's province should freely and without molestation have the cross borne up before him; and that the archbishop of York should solemnly send a messenger with an image in gold, of an archbishop carrying a cross in his hand, or some like sort of jewel in gold, of the value of forty pounds sterling, to be offered at the shrine of St. Thomas in Canterbury, &c. William Botke, archbishop of York, in compliance with this composition, sent by sir Thomas Tirel, on November 30, 1452, a jewel to the church of Canterbury (e).

Mention has been made above, of an attempt made by Gilbert Foliot, bishop of London, in K. Henry II.'s time, to transfer again the patriarchal chair from Canterbury to London, and to re-establish it there. This attempt was bold and vigorous, and was made at a time when all things conspired to favour the design, for it was brought

(b) The cross borne before the archbishop of Canterbury was esteemed so sacred, that when he went with it to parliament, the Lords and Commons were sworn with much solemnity on it; of which, see many instances in Cotton's Records.

(c) Stow's Annals, anno 1126.

(d) Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 77. E. Registro Bothe Eborac Archiep.

(e) In Wilkins's Councils, tom. iii, p. 31, is inserted the confirmation of the composition between the archbishops of Canterbury and York, concerning the bearing of the cross by pope Innocent VI, anno 1354.

forward at the time when archbishop Becket lay under the King's severest displeasure.

Bishop Foliot was a man of singular parts, of unwearied industry and of great courage, openly and avowedly claiming, that the metropolitan dignity did of most antient right belong to the see of London. The bishop wanted neither skill nor resolution to manage this cause, and he openly and professedly opposed the archbishop, for the space of seven years together, and sided with the King against him. He was one of the ambassadors sent by the King to the earl of Flanders, the King of France, and the Pope, to complain of the archbishop, as rebellious, and no less than a traitor to his royal crown and dignity; at which time he asserted, that the metropolitan dignity did of right belong to him, as bishop of London, and that he owed no obedience to the church of Canterbury (f). Gilbert had indeed been translated from the see of Hereford to that of London. and at his translation had not renewed the profession of obedience, and upon this pretence made an appeal from the sentence of the archbishop, alledging that he was not subject to it, which he would undertake to prove, which archbishop Becket heavily complained of, and in his charter concerning the liberties of his church, he forbids, under an anathema, any one to attempt a claim of this kind again (g).

A LIST OF THE ARCHBISHOPS OF CANTERBURY.

I. AUGUSTINE, or as he is usually styled, St. Augustine, from his being the apostle of the English nation, being a monk of the order of St. Benedict and abbat of St. Andrew's in Rome, a convent founded by the Pope himself, was sent into Britain by Pope Gregory, in the year 596, to preach the Christian religion to the unbelieving Britons. He had come part of the way on his journey, when wanting courage to go forward, he wrote to the Pope, to request his leave to return back; but this the Pope refused, and earnestly exhorted him to proceed, which at last Augustine consented to, and arriving with his companions, forty in number, and several interpreters, in the Island of Thanet, he was received hospitably by Ethelbert, K. of Kent, and conducted to Canterbury, where he then resided with his Queen Bertha, who was at

(f) The writers of the life of Becket all accuse bishop Foliot of aspiring to the archiepiscopal honour; John of Salisbury makes heavy complaints against him upon this very account. "Behold, says he, the bishop of London has publicly protested to the grief of all good men, that he owes no obedience to the church of Canterbury, the prime see of Britain, and that he will cause the metropolitan chair to be translated to that place, where he pretends, I will not say with what untruth, that it ought to be fixed, namely, in his church at London, where he boasts that the Archflamen was in the time of Paganism". Epist. p. 272. (g) See Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 43.

that

ARCHBISHOPS.

that time a Christian, to which faith Augustine, by his persuasive doctrine soon converted the Pagan King, whom he baptized with multitudes of his people, as is said by the writers of his life; after which the King gave him his palace to reside in, and retired with his court to Reculver, about seven miles distant.

Augustine having thus acquired for himself and his companions, a settled place of residence at Canterbury, went over into France, to Arles, where he was consecrated a bishop, by Eleutherius, bishop of that place (b), but without a title to any particular church, as if he was appointed at large to be the apostle or universal bishop of the nation (i), which was, in a great measure, restored by him to the Christian faith, which, tho' it had formerly flourished in England, was at that time almost entirely lost from it.

Upon his return from Arles, Augustine sent Laurence and Justus, two of his companions, to Rome, to acquaint the Pope with his success in Britain, and to request his direction in several articles concerning his religious government. They came back in 601, and brought with them the Pope's answers (k), and a number of monks to help them in their labours of converting the Pagans here; and as a reward of his success, Pope Gregory invested him with archiepiscopal authority in 603, by sending him the pall (l), which was esteemed the badge and livery of it (m); but it appears that Augustine had the liberty of fixing the patriarchal chair wherever he pleased; for the Pope having sent the pall to him at London, he changed his determination, and fixed it at Canterbury, the chief city and royal residence; the metropolis, as Bede calls it, of the Kings of Kent; a strong inducement, ad-

(b) Gervas, col. 1632, gives his conjectures why Augustine went over to Arles for this purpose, when there were bishops in England, by whom he might have been consecrated with more propriety.

(i) When the word archbishop is applied to St. Augustine, it is speaking in the language of more modern times, for that was not the term in his days, nor is he so styled by pope Gregory, even when he sent him the pall; and Spelman observes, that when Bede calls him archbishop, he uses the language of his own times, for this title is not among any of the forms of Marcellus, who wrote about this time, but it was used in the east some time before it came into our western parts.

(k) These questions and answers may be seen in Bede, Spelman's Councils, Langhorne's Chronicle, Rapin, &c.

(l) Gervas, col. 1632, says, that he had both read and heard it reported, that pope Gregory sent three palls to Augustine, for the churches of Canterbury, London, and York, should these cities with the neighbouring parts receive the Christian faith; but as this could not be fulfilled, and Gregory dying in the mean time, Augustine took one of the palls which was buried with him; the second, his successor archbishop Laurence had; and the third, archbishop Mellitus had, who succeeded Laurence; and that pope Boniface sent a lawful pall, thirty years after Augustine's arrival in England to Justus, who was in number the fourth archbishop.

AUGUSTINE.

ded to those already mentioned above, for his giving the preference to it; on the reception of the pall, Augustine having been consecrated, was intoned in his see, with the apostolic ornaments (o).

In Canterbury, he founded two monasteries of the benedictine order, one of which, situated close to his palace, he dedicated to our Saviour Christ, in which he built his cathedral church, and fixed the patriarchal chair of his archbishopric in it; the other, situated at a small distance further eastward, but without the walls of the city, he dedicated to the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, which was afterwards known by the name of St. Augustine's abbey, as a place of sepulture for the King and his successors, Kings of Kent, and for himself and his successors in the see of Canterbury. In the year 604, Augustine ordained Mellitus and Justus, bishops, the latter to the see of Rochester, where he had prevailed on K. Ethelbert to found a cathedral church, the former to that of London, where the King had founded another like church, in order to convert the East Saxons to the Christian faith.

When he perceived his end to draw near, he prudently ordained a successor in his see, lest upon his death a vacancy should be a detriment to his church, which as yet, from its infant state, was but weak, and therefore the more easy to be shaken (p).

Writers differ much as to the year of Augustine's death, some stating it to have happened as early as 604, and others as late as 613 (q), tho' the year 605 seems to have been that in general adopted. He was buried within the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul, above-mentioned, without the walls of the city (r).

(m) Chron. Sci August. col. 2230. Thorn, col. 1762, 1761. Laurence and Peter were the two sent to Rome, who brought back the pall from him to the pope.

(o) Thorn, col. 1761.

(p) Bede, lib. ii, c. 4. Higden, p. 227. Gervas, col. 1632.

(q) Matthew Westminster says, anno 608. Polidore Virgil, anno 611. Somner says the same, which agrees with Malmesbury, and that he sat fifteen years Gervas says, sixteen years; but Battely places it in 604. Weever says, he died on May 26, in the thirteenth year after his arrival in England, on which day, when he was canonized after his death, the day of his translation was kept. Thorn, in his Chronicle, col. 1765, tells us, many have been in an error concerning Augustine's death, making the year of it to have been 613, the cause of which was a false writing in some of the Chronicles, in which it is said that he sat sixteen years; but that this could not be, for in the year 596, he was sent into England; in the following year, he was ordained archbishop. In 603, he received the pall, and in 605 died.

(r) Thorn, col. 1765, says, he was buried without the church there, which was not then finished, nor even dedicated; but that as soon as it was, his body was brought in and buried in the north portico of the church, with becoming honour, by his successor Laurence; long after which

ARCHBISHOPS.

Augustine is represented to have been as one of stature exceeding tall, and of a very graceful appearance, and is said to have been rather religious than learned.

Godseline, who was first a monk of St. Bertin's in St. Omer's, and afterwards of St. Augustine's in Canterbury, and wrote the life of St. Augustine, says, that the cross which Augustine, on his coming into England, had in his hands, was remaining in his time in this monastery, with this inscription, Crux Augustini; and that there was there too another cross, made of poppy marble, ornamented with small plates of silver; and there were some who asserted, that this too had been likewise the cross of St. Augustine (s).

As to the chronology of the archbishops, it cannot be more properly mentioned, than in this place, that great is the difference of writers relating to it, and Mr. Battely differs very widely from almost all the rest of them; but he tells us, in his Cantuaria Sacra, part ii, p. 65, that he has followed that most accurate writer, Mr. Wharton, whose authority may be relied on with more assurance, than that of Mr. Somner; for that the former was an author, who had, as he deserved, the general reputation of exactness and faithfulness in his writings; and his particular dissertation concerning the true succession of the archbishops of Canterbury, was diligently and judiciously compiled. Dr. Burnet had indeed been pleased to charge the two volumes of his Historical Collections, called Anglia Sacra, (in the first of which is the above dissertation) with being exceedingly faulty, but without any particular instance being mentioned by him. However, being thus warned, he, Mr. Battely, had not ventured to take his chronological account of the archbishops upon trust, but had carefully examined it, with a full purpose to have corrected the errors, if he had found any such in it; and that he had confirmed the chronology of some of the archbishops, from the registers of this church, the Saxon chronicle, Bede, and other writers.

in the year 1091, it was removed into the new church began by abbat Scotland, and then just finished. After which, in the year 1221, John de Marisco, the prior of this monastery, with the rest of his convent, being desirous of knowing the identical place where the body of this archbishop, their patron, was deposited, caused a wall to be broken near St. Augustine's altar, where they found a tomb of stone, sealed and close shut up with iron and lead, having this inscription:—

Inclitus Anglorum presul pius & decus altum
Hic AUGUSTINUS requiescit corpore sanctus.

And in the year 1300, his body was again moved with several of his successors, and was placed by the care of Thomas Fyndon, the abbat, near the high altar, in a sumptuous monument, and the former inscription put on it, with these two additional lines:—

Ad tumulum laudis patris almi ductus amore
Abbas hunc tumulum THOMAS distavit honore.

See Weever, p. 44.

VOL. IV.

8 K

LAURENCE—MELLITUS.

2. LAURENCE, who had been nominated by Augustine, before his death, as his successor, became accordingly the next archbishop of this see (t), and made use of one of those palls which Pope Gregory had sent to his predecessor, of which there were two then left (u), and trod in the footsteps of his predecessor. As he succeeded him in the patriarchal chair, so he did in his labours of propagating the Christian faith, even to the remotest part of Britain (v), to the Northern Scots, and to the Irish likewise. In his time K. Eitelbert died, whose son and successor K. Eadbald, in the beginning of his reign, being a Pagan, became an avowed enemy and persecutor of the Christians and their religion.

In the year 613, archbishop Laurence returning from the conversion of the Irish and Scots, consecrated the church of this monastery, in the presence of K. Eitelbert and a large multitude of people, and then removed the body of Augustine into the north portico of it; but those of Letard and Bertha, which had been buried without the church, on account of its not being consecrated at the time of their deaths, he buried in the portico of St. Martin, where likewise the remains of K. Eitelbert, who died three years afterwards, were deposited near to his Queen (w). But Eadbald at last being convinced of his errors, renounced them, and being converted to the Christian faith, was baptized by archbishop Laurence, and founded a church within this monastery, to the honour of the Mother of God; and was besides, a good benefactor to it (x). Having sat in this see for five years, he died on Feb. 3, in 619 (y), and was buried in the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul, near his predecessor (z).

Weever says, he wrote a learned book on the Observation of Easter, and Exhortative Epistles to the bishops and abbats of the Scottish, Irish and British churches.

3. MELLITUS, who has been already mentioned above, succeeded him in the patriarchal chair. He was one of Augustine's companions,

(s) The life of St. Augustine, beside that written among the other archbishops, in the Antiq. Brit. Eccles. is added, more at large at the end of that book, in the edition of it published by Dr. Drake, 1729. It is in the Biographia Britannica, vol. i, p. 192; and in the Britania Sancta, by Dr. Butler. See Leland's Collections, vol. iv, p. 8.

(t) Bede, l. ii, c. 4.

(u) Gervas, col. 1632.

(v) Bromton, col. 737.

(w) Thorn, col. 1767.

(x) Thorn, col. 1768.

(y) Chron. Tab. col. 229. Gervas, col. 1633. Bromton, col. 739, says, he sat sixteen years, and died in the time of K. Eitelbald. Mr. Somner says, in 616. His life is written in Brit. Sancta, vol. i, p. 96.

(z) Weever, p. 46, who says, this epitaph was composed for him:—

Hic sacra LAURENTI sunt signa tui monumenti,
Tu quoq; jucundus pater, antistesq; secundus
Pro populo Christi scapulas dorsumq; dedisti Artibus huc lacris multa vibici mederis.

who

ARCHBISHOPS.

who came over into Britain with him, and was afterwards made by him bishop of London, where he made himself eminent by his conversion of the East Saxons, and of Sebert their King to Christianity; but on the death of Sebert and his three sons, who succeeded to his kingdom, becoming Pagans again, Mellitus was driven from his bishopric, and retired first into Kent, and then into France (a); from whence, however, he returned into England in less than a year, upon the invitation of K. Eadbald, who yet could by no means obtain permission for him to return to his diocese, so that he continued at Canterbury, being entertained by archbishop Laurence, to the time of his being constituted archbishop himself.

The pall which he made use of, was the third and last of those which Pope Gregory had sent over to his predecessor Augustine. Having sat in this see for the space of five years, discharging his office with great care, piety and integrity, he died on April 24, 624, of the gout (b), and was buried with his predecessors in the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul, without the walls of Canterbury (c). Bede gives him the character of being infirm in body, being afflicted with the gout, but strong in mind, that his birth was noble, but the greatness of his mind still more so (d).

4. JUSTUS succeeded him as archbishop; he was a Roman born, and a monk of the order of St. Benedict, before he was sent into England by Pope Gregory, which was in the year 601, that he might assist Augustine in replanting Christianity throughout Britain; his diligence and success in which, were equally wonderful. He was first constituted bishop of Rochester, and thence translated to this see, and as a confirmation of his metropolitan dignity and authority, Pope Boniface V. sent him the pall, being the first since those trans-

(a) Higden, p. 228. Bromton, col. 735, &c.

(b) Chron. Saxon. Thorn, col. 1768; and Battely. Chron. Sci Aug. col. 2229, says, anno 625. Gervas, col. 1632.

(c) Weever, p. 46, 47, says, he was an abbat at Rome, and died on April 24; and that this epitaph was engraved on his tomb:—

*Summus Pontificum flos tertius & mell apricum
Hac titulis clara refoles Mellite sub arca
Laudibus eternis te predicat urbs Dorovernis
Cui simul ardenti restas virtute potenti.*

(d) Hist. Eccles. lib. ii, c. 7. Higden, p. 228.

(e) See this letter above, in which he is highly commended, both for his virtue and learning.

(f) See Battely, p. 66. His life is written in Brit. Sancta, vol. ii, p. 263.

(g) Chron. Saxon. Thorn, col. 1768, says, he died in 635; and Chronol. Sci Aug. col. 2229, 4 id. November that year. Gervas, col. 1634, says, he sat three years. Somner, p. 117, that he sat ten years, and died in 634, as does Weever, p. 47, and that he was buried near his predecessor, with this epitaph:

JUSTUS—HONORIUS—DEUSDEDIT.

mitted to Augustine, as mentioned above, and afterwards in an answer to a letter from Justus, for the purpose, more strictly confirmed the primacy of this church to him (e). Archbishop Justus afterwards consecrated Romanus, bishop of Rochester, and Paulinus, whom he sent to York; he died in the year 627 (f), and was buried in the same monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul, with his predecessors (g).

5. HONORIUS was next made archbishop, after the see had continued vacant about eighteen months. He was a Roman by birth, and had been a disciple of Pope Gregory the great, and was a venerable and learned man; he was confirmed at Rome, and afterwards received the pall from the Pope (h) with a letter, in which was a confirmation of the primacy to him; on his return he was consecrated at Lincoln, by Paulinus, archbishop of York (i). He is said by some, to have divided his province into parishes in 636, that he might with more ease appoint ministers to particular congregations (k), though Mr. Selden and others judge otherwise, and that he only divided his province into bishoprics or dioceses, of which he established some new ones in it, and that the division of it into parishes, may, more probably be attributed to archbishop Theodore his next successor but one. He sat in this chair 26 years, promoting the cause of religion, and lived to the end of September, anno 654 (l); he was, as his predecessors had been, buried in the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul, without the gates of the city (m). He is said by Capgrave to have been canonized after his death.

6. DEUSDEDIT, or Adeodatus, for I find him called by both these names, which were given him at his consecration, his own original name having been Fritbona, succeeded next as archbishop, being the first native of this land pro-

*Istud habet bustum meritis cognomine JUSTUM,
Quarto jure datus cui cessit pontificatus,
Pro meritis justis sancta gravitate venusti,
Gratia divinam divina dat bis medicinam.*

(h) Gervas, col. 1634, says, pope Honorius sent two palls, one for Honorius, archbishop of Canterbury, and the other for Paulinus, archbishop of York.

(i) Bede, l. ii, c. 18.

(k) Antiq. Brit. Eccl. Battely, pt. 2, p. 117.

(l) Chron. Saxon. Battely, p. 66. Mr. Somner, p. 117, says, that he sat almost twenty years, and died in 653. Thorn, September 30 that year, col. 1769. Chron. Sci Aug. col. 2231. Gervas, col. 1635, says, he died 11 id. October, in the 19th year of his rule.

(m) Weever, p. 47, says, that Honorius sat about twenty years, and died on February 28, anno 653, for whom this epitaph was engraved:—

*Quintus honor memori versu memoraris HONORI
Digna sepultura, quam non tenet ulla litura
Ardet in obscuro trea lux vibramine puro
Hoc scelus omne premit, fugat umbras, nubila demit.*

ARCHBISHOPS.

moted to this see, which was after a vacancy of eighteen months (n); he was consecrated by Ithamar, bishop of Rochester, at Canterbury, and received the pall from the Pope. He was a man of good learning, and eminent for his holiness of life, qualities which recommended him for the government of this church, in which he acquitted himself faithfully till the day of his death, which is said to have been on July 14, in the year 664 (o), and was buried, as all his predecessors were, in the church porch of the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul (p). He is said by Capgrave to have been canonized after his death. Pitfeus says, he wrote memoirs of the lives and actions of his predecessors.

After his death, one Wigbard, who was an Englishman, was sent with a recommendation from the Kings of Kent and Northumberland, to Pope Vitellianus to Rome; but the pestilence raging there at that time, he died with most of his attendants, of it, upon which the Pope appointed Adrian, abbat of Tbiridanum, near Naples, an African by birth, to be archbishop in his room, but he would not be persuaded to undertake the charge of it, but after some delay on the Pope's strong importunity, recommended Theodore to it, whom the Pope approved of, on condition that Adrian, afterwards made abbat of St. Augustine's in Canterbury, would accompany him unto England, to assist him in his office, and for fear, lest being a Greek, Theodore being born at Tbarsus in Cicilia, should introduce any Asiatic ceremonies or usages.

7. THEODORE being thus appointed archbishop, after a vacancy of the see for four years, was consecrated in 668, at Rome, being then aged 66 years; whence he set off for England with Adrian, but was a year and an half before he arrived, though without his companion, who was detained some time longer. He was a man of courage, good sense and of singular learning, being eminently skilled in the Latin and Greek tongues, as well as in the customs of both those churches.

He is said to have been the first, who, properly speaking, exercised the authority and power of an archbishop here (q), to whom the whole bishops and clergy of Britain consented to submit, for he extended his jurisdiction even on the other side of the river Humber, and being intrusted

(n) Gervas, col. 1636. Higden, p. 243, says, that Britwold was the first archbishop, who was an Englishman, all before him being Romans; but this archbishop's original name contradicts this.

(o) Battely, p. 66. Weever, and Chronol. Sci Aug. Gervas says, he sat ten years, col. 1636.

(p) Weever has given him this epitaph:—

Alme DEUS DEDIT cui sexta vacatio cedit,
Signas hunc lapidem lapide signatus eodem

THEODORE.

with a legantine power over England, Scotland and Ireland, he visited all places, deposed and ordained bishops at his pleasure, and reformed and corrected whatever appeared to him amiss (r). He introduced several new doctrines and practices into the church; one of the most important of which, was, that of auricular confession, as necessary to absolution. By his influence, all the English churches were united and brought to a perfect uniformity in discipline and worship; bishoprics, too large, were divided, and many new ones erected, great men were encouraged to build parish churches, by declaring them and their successors patrons of those churches; a regular provision was made for the clergy in all the kingdoms of the Heptareby, by the imposition of a certain tax on every village, from which the most obscure ones were not exempted; by these and other wise regulations, introduced by this prelate, one of the greatest men that ever filled this patriarchal chair, the church of England became a regular compact body, furnished with a competent number of bishops and inferior clergy under their metropolitan, the archbishop of this see.

He held three councils; one at Hartford in 674; a second at Hatfield in 680, and another at Twiford in Northumberland in 684, and at the second of them, at the King of Mercia's request, he divided his kingdom into five provinces or bishoprics (s), and he is said by some, to have first divided his province into distinct parishes, though as has been mentioned above, this is attributed by others to his predecessor next but one, archbishop Honorius. He was a great promoter of learning, and so liberal a patron of learned men, that whoever wished to be instructed in divinity, had immediately masters to teach them. He founded a school at Canterbury, of which mention has been made above, and the method of singing in churches, which before was only known in Kent, was by his means spread, and began to be learned in all the churches of England (u), and it was chiefly by his endeavours that learning so flourished in this island, that from a nursery it became a peculiar seminary of philosophy.

He brought over with him a large library of Latin and Greek books, the names of some of which, as well as the acts of his pontificate, which were considerable, are recorded in the antiqui-

Prodit ab hac urna virtute salus diuturna
Qua melioratur quicumq; dolore gravatur.

(q) Bede. Higden, p. 236.

(r) Bede, lib. iv, c. 2. Battely, pt. 2, p. 134. Thorn, col. 1768, &c.

(s) Chester, Worcester, Lichfield, Leicester, and Hereford. See Flor. Vigorn. p. 559. Bede, lib. iii, c. 7, lib. iv, c. 6 and 12, and lib. v, c. 19.

(u) Gervas, col. 1638, 1639.

tics

ARCHBISHOPS.

ties of the British church, by archbishop Parker (v). Having sat in this see for near 21 years, which are recorded as being most happy ones to the English nation (w), he died on September 19, in 690, very aged and infirm, being 88 years old, and was buried in the church of the monastery of St. Peter and St. Paul, afterwards called St. Augustine's monastery, and not in the porch of it, which was full, all his predecessors, six in number, having been buried there (x). He is said by Capgrave to have been canonized after his death. Pitfeus says, he wrote a book of the bishops of Canterbury, his predecessors, and among the Harleian manuscripts, No. 438—2, is one written by him called Liber Penitentialis (y).

8. BRITHWALD was the next archbishop, being the second Englishman preferred to it. He had been first a monk and then abbat of Glastonbury, where having presided for 10 years, he quitted it for the abbatship of Reculver, whence he was advanced to this patriarchal chair on July 1, 692, and was consecrated the next year (z) by Bregwine or Godwine, metropolitan of Wales (a). He had been trained up in the knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, and in the exercise of strict ecclesiastical discipline; he is said to have done many things for the good of his church (b). He held a synod at Cliff, and another at Bacanceld in 694 (c), and in 697 another council at Berkbampstede, and six years afterwards he held another with Alfred, K. of Northumberland, in that prince's dominions, at a place called Onestufield

(v) Among these there are said to have been a fine Greek psalter, several Greek homilies, and the works of Homer, which Lambarde, p. 316, says, was shewed to him very fairly written on thick paper, with the name of Theodorus prefixed. The Homer is also mentioned by bishop Godwin.

(w) Gervas, col. 1637, 1640. Malmesbury, lib. i, p. 11. Battely, pt. 2, p. 66. Higden, p. 238. Thorn, col. 1770.

(x) This porch in the old church, was where afterwards was the chapel of the blessed virgin Mary, in the middle of which was an altar, dedicated to St. Gregory, as Bede relates it, lib. iii, c. 3. See Thorn, col. 1765. Weever, p. 48, says, these verses were written on the wall in the church, to the memory of him and his six predecessors:—

*Septem sunt Anglia primates & protopates
Septem rectores, septem cœloq; friones
Septem cisternæ vitæ, septemq; lucernæ
Et septem palmæ regni, septemq; coronæ
Septem sunt stellæ quas hæc tenet arca cœli.*

(y) It was published at Pavis, with John Petit's Notes, anno 1677, with some other things added to it.

(z) Chron. Sax. Malmesbury, p. 354. De gestis Pontif. de Antiq. Glaston. Eccl. p. 308. Godwin, p. 6. Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 94. Willis, vol. i, p. 100, says, he was son of Merciline Penda, K. of Mercia.

(a) Givallorum Metropolitanus. Thorn, col. 1771, writes it Gallorum.

(b) Gervas, col. 1640. (c) Thorn, col. 2208.

(d) Bromton, col. 732, says, he sat thirty-seven years.

BRITHWALD—TATWYN—NOTHELM.

or Osterfeld, in which Wlfred, bishop of York, was again deposed.

The Saxon chronicle says, that he caused written charters to be made, to confirm to the church of Canterbury and other religious houses, their lands, donations and privileges; and Spelman and Causabon agree with Somner, that the monasteries in Canterbury, had no written charters nor muniments before this.

In a charter of K. Wigtred, this archbishop is styled Primas Totius Britannie, which title Birchington says, was first given to him by Pope Sergius. No archbishop continued so long in this see as he did, either before or since his time, for he sat in this patriarchal chair 31 years and an half, and dying 27th June, anno 731, worn out with old age, he was buried near his predecessor in the same monastery (d).

9. TATWYN, born in the province of Mercia, being a priest in the monastery of Brodun or Bredun, in Mercia (e), succeeded him as archbishop in June 731 (f), and was consecrated the same month in his own church, by the bishops of Winchester, London, Lichfield and Rockester, and afterwards received the pall (g). He is much commended for his love of religion, and his skill in the Holy Scriptures (b); having sat in this see for the space of three years; he died on July 30, anno 734 (i), and was buried with his predecessors in the church of the monastery of St. Augustine (k).

10. NOTHELM succeeded him as archbishop. He was a priest, or according to Thorn, arch-priest of the church of St. Paul in London (l);

Gervas, col. 1640, thirty-seven years, and six months. Simon, col. 98, says, he died January 28, 732, and that he sat thirty-seven years, six months, and fourteen days. See Battely's Somn. p. 117, pt. 2, p. 66; and Thorn, col. 1771. Weever, p. 48, says, he died on January 9 that year, and that this epitaph was framed and engraved on his monument:—

*Stat jua laus feretro BRITHWALDUS, stat sua metro
Sed minus est metri laus omnis laude feretri
Laude frequentandus, pater hic est glorificandus
Si prece fleatur dat ei qui danda precatur.*

(e) See the same writers above-mentioned.

(f) Chron. Sci Aug. col. 2235.

(g) Simon Durham, col. 100. (h) Bromton, col. 774.

(i) Chron. Saxon. Bromton, col. 742. Gervas, col. 1640. Chron. Sci Aug. col. 2235. Somner and Battely, p. 117 and 66.

(k) Thorn, col. 1772; and Weever, p. 49, says, he died on the last day of July, anno 735, to whose memory this epitaph was engraved on his stone coffin:—

*Pontificis glebe TATWINI Cantia prebe
Thuva, decus, laudes, & ejus dogmate gaudes
Hujus doctrina caruisti mente ferina
Et per eum Christi portare jugum didicisti.*

(l) Decem. Script. col. 1772. The author of the Antiquities of the British church, in his Life of Nothelm; and the editor of the Decem. Scriptores, in the index, Vertum Nothelmus, do by a mistake add, that he was likewise bishop of London, which was the place of his nativity. Bromton writes, that he was consecrated archbishop in 735, and received the pall from the Pope (m), and dying on 17th Oct. in the year 741, was buried by his predecessors, in the church of St. Augustine's abbey (n).

ARCHBISHOPS.

CUTHBERT—BREGWYN.

11. CUTHBERT was his successor, who was translated from the see of Hereford, about the year 741, and afterwards received the pall from the Pope at Rome. He was descended of an illustrious family, a man of severe manners and made up of goodness itself (o); five years after his translation to this see, that is, in 747, by the council of Boniface, bishop of Mentz, he held a synod of the English bishops at Cliff near Rochester (p), to regulate the monks and to reform the irregularities with which the church of England was at that time overspread (q), Eitelbald, K. of Mercia, with his nobles, being then present and consenting to it (r); the constitutions of which may be seen in the British Councils and other books. He was the first who obtained the privilege of having church-yards to the churches in this kingdom, within the walls of towns and cities, for the purpose of burying in them (s); for it was a law among the Romans, borrowed of the Grecians, and inserted into their twelve tables, that none should be buried or burned within any town, so that all were buried either in the fields, along the highway-side (to put passengers in mind of their mortality) or at the top, or the feet of mountains; and this kind of interment, by general custom, was used both by Jews and Gentiles, as may be found illustrated at large by Weever in his Funeral Monuments (t). Hence it was, that Augustine had procured the ground on part of which he afterwards erected his abbey, lying without the city walls, for a place of sepulture for all the succeeding archbishops of this see.

Having obtained this general privilege, he procured in 743, that which rendered him most gracious and dear to this convent, which was a licence from Eadbert, K. of Kent, and from the Pope likewise, that the bodies of the archbishops which before had been buried at St. Augustine's, should in future be buried within his monastery of Christ church; for which purpose he erected, near the east end of the cathedral, a church or chapel, which he dedicated to St. John Baptist, and ordained, that it should be the burial-place for the future archbishops, and dying 7 kal. Nov. in 758, his funeral was accordingly solemnized in it (u). He is said to have borne for his arms—Argent, on a fess gules, 3 cross-crosets fitchee of the 1st.

12. BREGWYN succeeded him (v) on the feast of St. Michael, next year (w). He was a native of Saxony, though educated in England, and is recorded to have been a man much devoted to piety and religion; he was consecrated and received his pall from the Pope in 759, and dying on Aug. 25, 762, was buried within this monastery, near his predecessor, in the new chapel that Nothelm of London, succeeded Tarwine in the see of Canterbury, without mentioning his being a priest of the church of London, as other historians do. Hence, to supply such an omission, they style him bishop of London, which seems to be the ground of this mistake; for it is certain that Ingwald was at that time bishop of London, being one of those who consecrated Tarwine, as is agreed on by all the above writers, and that he continued bishop there to the year 745, is very probably asserted. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 66. Higden styles him Londinensis Præsul, p. 248.

(m) Gervas, col. 1640. Thorn, col. 1772, says, he died in 736, and that he sat three years in the see. Somner and Battely, p. 117 and 66. Chron. Sci Aug. col. 2235, says, he died in 740. Simon Durham, anno 739, col. 100.

(n) Weever, p. 49, says, he was a great lover of venerable antiquity, and one to whom Bede acknowledges himself, in his epistle to K. Ceonulph, much beholden for information to his Ecclesiastical History; and says, that he died on October 17, 740, and that his epitaph was as follows:—

*Hac scrobe NOTHELMUS jacet Archiepiscopus almus
Cujus vita bono non est indigna patrono.
Cunctis iste bonus par in bonitate patronus
Protegit hic justos vigili munimine custos.*

Pitæus says, he wrote two books of the Life of St. Augustine, one of his miracles, one of the translation of him and his companions, one of homilies, and one of epistles to Bede and Alcuinus.

(o) Eadmer in vita Bregwini.

(p) Clovestoe. Thorn, col. 2209. Langhorn cites Spelman's Councils and some manuscripts, to prove that there was before this, a council held by this archbishop and K. Eitelbald at this place in 742. It is mentioned likewise in the Saxon Chron. A third council was likewise held by this archbishop in 756, but the name of the place where, is lost. See Spelman, vol. i, p. 289.

(q) Malmesb. Antiq. Britan. (r) Thorn, col. 1772.

(s) Dugd. Mon. vol. i, p. 2.

(t) Battely's Somner, p. 118, pt. 2, p. 66. Gervas, col. 1641. Thorn, col. 2210. Chron. Tab. col. 2235.

(u) Gervas, col. 1641, who highly commends him for it. Thorn, col. 1773, who abuses him with much virulence for this act of treachery, as he terms it, to the mother church of St. Augustine. He tells us, that the archbishop finding his end approaching, occasioned through grief at what he had done, called his family and the monks of his convent about him, and bound them by an oath not to divulge his sickness or death, till his body should have been buried for some days, which they strictly complied with; and this being done, on the third day afterwards, the bells were rung and his death was openly divulged, on which the abbat of St. Augustine's went with his monks to fetch the body according to custom, but finding the archbishop to be already buried, and that the ancient custom of burial had been changed by royal authority, the abbat returned back much vexed at his disappointment. After the church or chapel of St. John had been burnt down, his body was removed, and deposited in the upper north wing of the cathedral, near the altar of St. Stephen, on the right side.

(v) R. de Diceto, col. 444, calls him Bregwin. Bromton, col. 742, Lyzregwin. His life is written by Eadmer, and epitomized by John of Tinmouth, though published under the name of Osbern. Aug. Sacr. pt. 2, p. 184; and it is in Brit. Sanct. vol. ii, p. 98. (w) Gervas, col. 642.

ARCHBISHOPS.

erected by him, and, as is said, with the same precipitation (x).

13. LAMBERT, called by others, both Lambritb and Lambert, being abbat of the neighbouring monastery of St. Augustine, was promoted to this see in 762, on the feast of the Purification, was consecrated next year (y), and received his pall from the Pope. Whilst abbat, he came twice to this convent of Christ church, to demand the corpse, first of Cuthbert, then of Bregwyn, to be delivered to him, in order for their interment in the church of his monastery, according to usual custom; the latter time he came attended with armed men, resolving to take the corpse of Bregwyn by force, in case his demand was not complied with; but the monks fearing this might be the case, had secured it safe under ground before he came for it, so he returned without success; upon which the convent of St. Augustine made their appeal to the court of Rome, and prosecuted the cause with the utmost rigour. To silence this dispute, the monks of Christ church elected Lambert for their archbishop, and their adversaries, out of respect to him, ceased to give them any further trouble (z). In his time, K. Offa having taken great displeasure at the inhabitants of Canterbury, it was the occasion of continual troubles to him, for that King erected a new archbishopric at Lichfield, and obtained of the Pope authority for Eadlufb, bishop there, to add as a province to it, the dioceses of Worcester, Leicester, Sidnacester, Hereford, Helmbam, and Dunwich, so that there was left to the archbishop

(x) Battely's Somner, p. 119, pt. 2, p. 67. Thorn, col. 2210. Chron. Tab. 2235. After this new chapel had been burnt down, his body was removed, and deposited in the upper south wing of the cathedral, near the altar of St. Gregory, where it was afterwards inshrined.

(y) Gervas, col. 1642. (z) Thorn, col. 1773.

(a) Higden, p. 250, says, Offa deprived Lambert, archbishop of Canterbury, of the dignity of his primacy, which he placed at Lichfield, so long as he lived, with the consent of pope Adrian.

(b) Thorn, col. 1774; and Chronol. Sci Aug. col. 2237, says, he died in 789, Præd. id. Aug. Sax. Chron. and Florence of Worcester, anno 790. Hoveden and Chron. Mailros, anno 791. Weever, p. 50, says, he sat as archbishop, 27 years, and died æt. 94.

(c) Gervas, col. 1642, says, when he saw his end draw near, desirous of changing the regulations of his predecessors, he ordered that whilst alive he should be carried to the monastery of St. Augustine, that when dead he might be buried there; which was done.

(d) Thorn, col. 2210. Battely's Somner, p. 119, pt. 2, p. 67. Weever, p. 49, says, he died on August 12, aged 94 that year, having ordered his body to be entombed in the chapter-house above-mentioned, and this epitaph was engraven to his memory:—

Gemma sacerdotum decus a tellure remotum
Clauditur hac fossa JAINBURTUS pulvis & ossa
Sub hac mole cinis sed laus tua nescia finis
Incola nunc celi populo succurre fideli.

(e) Chron. Saxon.

LAMBERT—ATHELARD—WLFRED.

of Canterbury, for his province, only those of London, Winchester, Rochester, and Sherborne (a). On his death on Aug. 12, 790 (b), he disappointed the monks of Christ church very much, for perceiving his end approach, he took care by his own express will and desire, to be buried in St. Augustine's (c), where he was very honourably interred, with much pomp, in the chapter-house (d).

14. ATHELARD was elected to this archbishopric in the same year that his predecessor died. He was a learned, pious and good man, and is said to have had great abilities; he had been first abbat of Malmesbury, then bishop of Winchester, and thence promoted to this see, being consecrated in 793 (e), and receiving his pall from the Pope at Rome; by his means K. Offa became a good benefactor to this church (f), after whose death he prevailed with his successor K. Ceonulph and Pope Leo III, to abolish the above-mentioned new archbishopric of Lichfield, and reduce the whole into its former state (g). In the year 798, he held a great council at Baccancelde, in which he presided, K. Ceonulf with several bishops and abbats being present at it, and another next year at Clovefho, in the presence of the same King (h). The obituary records his having recovered several alienated lands to his church. Having sat 13 years, he died in 803 (i), and was buried, by his own particular order, in his own monastery of Christ church, in the new church or chapel of St. John Baptist (k).

15. WLFRED from the stalls of the monks, or rather from the archidiaconal dignity, was ad-

(f) K. Offa's charter, says Somner, p. 119, (it is printed in his appendix, p. 41) is dated in the year DCCXC, and the 38th of his reign; if it be authentic, and may be credited, as he saw not why to question it, it discovers an error in the computation and account which the current of our Historians and Chronologists make, both of the beginning of K. Offa's reign and this archbishop's government.

(g) Gervas, col. 1642. Battely's Somner, p. 119.

(h) Thorn, col. 2211. Gervas, 1642. In this year, anno 799, he is said to have gone to Rome; but Langhorn says, he held a council at Cliff this year. In 800, he held another at Beccancelde. See Spelman's Councils, vol. i, p. 318; and in 803, he is said to have called another council at Clovefho, when K. Kenulf and twelve other bishops were present, and where it was determined that the metropolitan chair should be fixed at Canterbury, and the new archbishopric of Lichfield abolished.

(i) Florence of Worcester, and the Saxon Chron. anno 803. Annals of St. Aug. anno 802. Chron. Mailros, and Matthew Westminster, anno 805; and Henry Hunt anno 804. By the gift of the village of Bourne to this church, if not spurious, he must have been living anno 805. Hoveden places his death so late as anno 806, which agrees with the obituary of this church.

(k) Bromton, col. 742. Gervas, col. 1642. Thorn, col. 1774. Ang. Sacr. pt. i, p. 53. Battely, p. 67, whence after the fire of it, his remains were removed, and placed at the altar of St. Stephen, in the upper north cross wing on the left side of it.

ARCHBISHOPS.

vanced to the archiepiscopal throne in the year 803, and was consecrated by the Pope, and received the pall from him at Rome, next year. The compiler of the antiquities of the British church, and bishop Godwyn, have recorded, that this archbishop (who kept possession of this see a good number of years, viz. about 28,) did nothing worthy of remembrance (l); but if they had regarded the records and evidences of the ancient benefactions to this church, they would have seen that those of this archbishop by far exceeded in number and greatness, the benefactions of any one of his predecessors. This appears in the instrument of donations, published in Mr. Somner's appendix (m), and yet more fully in the evidences of Christ church, printed at the end of Thorn's Chronicle, in the Decem Scriptores (n), and in the obituaries of the archbishops (o). In these they would have learned that he not only bought lands and gave them to the church, but procured others from the King, and recovered some which had been taken from the church; indeed his particular benefactions amount to twenty-nine in number. This agrees well with the character which Gervas gives of him, of being a most prudent man, acting at all times with courage and resolution, stoutly asserting the rights of his church, and ever consulting the good of it (p). In the year 816, he held a council at Ceale-bytbe (q), and in 821, he presided with Beornulph, K. of Mercia, at a synodal council, held at Clovefho (r). In his time the monks of this church died, all but five (s). Archbishop Wilfred died on 30th Aug. 829 (t), and was buried in his own church, in the church or chapel of St. John (u).

16. FLEOLOGILD, or as others call him, Theologild, succeeded him, but continued in the see only for the space of three months (v), and dying in 830, he was buried in the monastery of Christ church (w); one, named Syred (x), succeeded him, but deceasing before he had taken full possession of this patriarchal chair, he is not reckoned among the list of archbishops (y).

(l) Antiq. Brit. Eccl. p. 34. Godwyn de Præfulibus Angl. Ralph de Diceto, col. 448. There is a dispute how long he sat; Bromton, Stephen Birchington, and Gervas say, thirty-eight years, but others, more truly, twenty-eight.

(m) No. xxxvi, p. 36. (n) Col. 2213.

(o) Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 53. (p) Gervas, col. 1642.

(q) See Spelman's Councils, vol. i, p. 327.

(r) Thorn, col. 2213. Spelman's Councils, p. 332, anno 822. (s) Lib. Eccles. Cantuar.

(t) Battely, pt. 2, p. 67. Chronol. Tables, col. 2239. Bromton, col. 742. Gervas, 1642.

(u) After this church or chapel was destroyed, the remains of the archbishop were removed, and laid in the upper north cross wing, on the right hand of the altar of St. Martin.

(v) Chron. Saxon. Gervas, col. 1642.

(w) His remains were deposited before the altar of St. Michael, in the north cross of the nave, where they remained after the rebuilding of it by Lanfranc.

FLEOLOGILD—CEOLNOTH—ATHELRED—PLEGMUND.

17. CEOLNOTH was elected archbishop on Aug. 27, the same year (z), received his pall from the Pope, and continued in this see upwards of 38 years, all which were full of troubles and dangers, by the continual invasions of the Danes. He brought secular clerks into his church to assist the five remaining monks who were left in it in archbishop Wilfred's time (a), and purchased with his own money the village of Cbart, which he gave to the church; a great benefaction in those times (b). He died in 870, and was buried in his own monastery of Christ church (c), in the south cross of the nave, before the altar of St. Benedict, where his body remained after the rebuilding of it by Lanfranc.

18. ATHELRED, a monk of this church, succeeded to this archbishopric, with the consent of Ethelred and Alured his brother, soon after the death of Ceolnoth being confirmed, and receiving the pall from the Pope's hands; he continued in this see near 18 years, during which, the times were full of storms and perils, by the continual invasions of the Danes. He expelled those seculars out of his church, which his predecessor had brought into it, and made up the number of the monks again (d). He is said to have consecrated two bishops of Landaff successively, and a bishop of St. David's, in his own cathedral church; he restored five bishoprics among the West Saxons, which had been left destitute of their bishops (e). He died in 888, and was buried within the monastery of his own church (f); on the death of Athelred or Eldred, as he is written by some, K. Alfred bestowed the archbishopric on Grimbald, who then lived in a monastic state at Winchester, of which he was afterwards abbat; but he peremptorily refusing to accept of it, Plegmund was, by his recommendation, made archbishop (g).

19. PLEGMUND was accordingly elected archbishop in 890 (h). He was a native of Mercia, and having retired from the world had led a kind of hermit's life (i). He was a man of liberal education, being one of those learned men who

(x) He is by some, named Swithred.

(y) Battely's Somner, p. 119, pt. 2, p. 67.

(z) Gervas, col. 1643. (a) Liber Eccles. Cantuar.

(b) Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 53. (c) Gervas, col. 1643. Bromton, col. 742. Battely's Somner, p. 119.

(d) Liber Eccles. Cantuar. See Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 342. (e) R. de Diceto. Bromton, col. 742.

(f) Battely's Somner, p. 119. His body was afterwards deposited in the crypt, on the south side of the altar of St. Thomas Becket. (g) Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 18.

(h) Matthew Westminster, p. 351. R. de Diceto, col. 452. Bromton, col. 831. Gervas, 1643. Simon Durham gives him a great character, col. 131. Battely's Somner, p. 119, pt. 2, p. 67. See Higden, p. 259, 260, 266. R. de Diceto, col. 454. This church or chapel being consumed, his remains were removed, and deposited in the upper south cross wing at the altar of St. Gregory, and afterwards infringed. (i) Gervas, col. 1643.

ARCHBISHOPS.

had been preceptor to and had instructed K. Alfred; being elected archbishop, he was consecrated and received the pall from Pope Formosus at Rome, where he purchased for a great sum of money the relics of St. Blase, which he gave to his church. He died in 923, having sat thirty-four years, in a good old age, and was buried in the monastery of his own church, in the chapel or church of St. John Baptist.

20. ATHELM, by some called Aldbun, bishop of Wells, and uncle to St. Dunstan (k), succeeded him as archbishop, and received his pall from the Pope (l). He is said by some, not to have been a monk as all his predecessors had been, though according to others he had been abbot of Glastonbury (ll). In 924, he crowned K. Atbelstane at Kingston (m). He died in 925, and was buried with his predecessors (n).

21. WLFELM bishop of Wells, was next elected to this see (o), and received the pall from the Pope. He died, according to Matthew Westminster, in 934 (p), or as others say, so late as 941 (q), and was buried in the church or chapel of St. John, within his own monastery (r). He was present at a great synod held at Greateley, in which were present all the great and wise men that K. Atbelstane could get together, when all those laws which the King had made were confirmed (s).

22. ODO, surnamed Saverus, bishop of Sherborne, succeeded him in 941, and received his pall from the Pope. He was a Dane by birth, and is by some said to have been a soldier before he took to the church. His parents having in vain dissuaded him from embracing Christianity, turned him out unprovided into the world; thus exposed, he applied to Athelm, a nobleman and Christian in the court of Alfred; who, pleased with the lad's appearance, sent him to school and (k) W. Malmf. de Antiq. Glaston. Eccles. p. 324. He appears to have died the year after St. Dunstan was born, which renders this rather improbable.

(l) Bromton, col. 738. Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 214.

(ll) Godwin, p. 414. Willis, vol. i, p. 101. Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 556.

(m) Matthew Westminster, p. 363. Huntingdon, p. 354. Bromton, col. 837.

(n) Battely's Somner, p. 119, pt. 2, p. 67. His body was afterwards deposited in the south cross isle of the nave, behind the altar of St. Benedic towards the right hand, where it remained after the rebuilding of it by Lanfranc.

(o) Bromton, col. 838, calls him Wlfelin, and 840, Wlfelm.

(p) Chron. Tab. col. 2241.

(q) Battely, pt. 2, p. 67. Somner, p. 119, says, he died in 934. In the evidences of Christ church, in Decem. Script. col. 2218 et seq. some donations of this archbishop to that church, are recited in the years 923 and 939; one of K. Athalstan in 927; and of duke Eadulf in 940, made in the presence of this archbishop.

(r) His body was afterwards deposited in the south cross wing of the nave of this church built by Lanfranc, in the educated him in the Latin and Greek tongues. Having entered into holy orders, he, by his own merits and the interest of his patron Athelm, passed rapidly through the inferior stations in the church, and was ordained a priest before the age prescribed by the canons, and was not long after consecrated bishop of Sherborne; and on the death of Wlfelm, the world turned their eyes towards this pious, learned, and valiant bishop, as the fittest person to fill this patriarchal chair, in which, though his zeal for religion seemed to be sincere and fervent, yet his bold aspiring spirit, no longer under any restraint, led him to exercise his power with a very high hand. On his promotion to it, that he might be received with more welcome and propriety at Canterbury, he went over to and received the Monastic tonsure abroad, which made him the more acceptable to the monks here (t).

ATHELM—WLFELM—ODO.

In 945 Archbishop Odo consecrated K. Edmund at Kingston, after whose murder next year, he consecrated Eadred his brother at the same place, who received his crown from him; and he afterwards consecrated there, Eadred's successor Eadwin (u). He was a good benefactor to his cathedral, by new making the roof of it, which had become ruinous through length of time (v), and in 948 removed into it the bones of Wilfrid, archbishop of York, who died in 711, that church having fallen down (w). In 943 he published his famous pastoral letter to the clergy and people of his province, commonly called the constitutions of Odo. Besides these there were several ecclesiastical canons made, in a great council of the clergy and laity which was held at London, the year following, by K. Edmund. Tho' some place his death so late as the 961, yet it happened more probably in 958 (x), when he was buried in his own cathedral church (y).

lower portico, before the altar of St. Benedic on the left hand. (s) Gervas, col. 1644. Bromton, col. 845.

(t) Simon Durham, col. 230. Bromton, 863.

(u) Chron. Tab. col. 2243. Battely, p. 2, p. 68.

(v) Gervas, col. 1645.

(w) R. de Diceto, col. 455. Bromton, col. 863. Gervas, 1645. Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 30.

(x) S. Dunelm, col. 156. Matthew Westminster, p. 369. R. de Diceto, 454, 455. Higden, p. 264, says, anno 957, he crowned K. Eadwyn, eldest son of Edmund, at Kingston.

(y) His body was buried on the south side of our Saviour Christ's altar in this church, in a tomb built in a pyramidal form. It was afterwards removed by archbishop Lanfranc, and placed in the chapel of the Holy Trinity behind the altar, where it was inscribed on the right hand of archbishop Wlfred of York, whom Odo had translated from Rippon to Canterbury. After the choir of Conrad was burnt, and the present one built, he was taken up in his leaden coffin and placed under the relics of St. Dunstan, that is on the south side of the high altar; but there is no monument remaining, nor has since the reformation. Bishop Godwin, in his catalogue of bishops, mistakes archbishop Mepham's tomb for his. His epitaph is said to have been as follows:—

Sternate

ARCHBISHOPS.

ELSIN—DUNSTAN.

Ostern has left us the history of his life, and praises him much for his sanctity and integrity (z). He was canonized after his death, and is therefore usually styled St. Odo.

23. ELSIN, bishop of Winchester (a), succeeded Odo as archbishop, whose inveterate enemy he was, and continued his hatred to him after his death, which he shewed by trampling over his grave. Being named to this see by the King's authority, he is said by the monkish writers to have been intruded into it (b). He was of affinity to the blood royal, and is said to have been of very extraordinary learning. He perished on the Alps with cold, as he was travelling towards Rome for his pall (c). He died in 958 or 9 (d), and was brought into England by his attendants and buried at Winchester. On his death Brihelm, bishop of Wells, was elected to this see, but feeling himself unequal to the weight of it, and being of a soft and gentle disposition, he declined it, and by the King's command returned to the see of Wells again (e), where he died in 973, and was there buried.

24. DUNSTAN, bishop of London, was upon this appointed to succeed Odo in this patriarchal chair, in the year 960, and that with the unanimous consent of the church (f), and went the same year to Rome for his consecration and pall. He is said to have been descended of a noble family in Somersetshire, and to have been educated in Glastonbury abbey, of which he became abbot, and being a great favourite of K. Edmund, that King endowed it for his sake with many peculiar privileges. He was afterwards promoted to the see of Worcester, and from thence was translated to London (g). On K. Edmund's death he stood still higher in the favour of his brother and successor K. Edred, to whom he was confessor and chief confidant, during which he employed all his influence in promoting the interest of his own, the Benedictine order of monks, of which he was a most active and zealous patron.

Having the treasures of the above two princes at his command, he built and endowed monasteries for that order, because almost all the the antient ones were in the possession of secular canons.

The conduct of Dunstan whilst he was in power, which was exaggerated by his persuading Edred to give by his last will, immense treasures to churches and monasteries, by which the crown was left in a state of indigence, rendered him so very odious to Edwi, who succeeded his uncle Edred in 955, and his rude behaviour to him and his beloved Q. Ediva, raised the resentment of that prince so high, that he deprived him of all his preferments, and drove him into exile.

The banishment of Dunstan was a severe blow to the monks, who were upon that expelled from several of their monasteries, and the married secular clergy were placed in them, in their room. But their sufferings were not of a long continuance; for Edgar, the younger brother of Edwi, having raised a successful rebellion against his unhappy brother, and usurped all his dominions on the north side of the river Thames, recalled Dunstan, and gave him the bishopric of Worcester in 957; from which time he was the chief adviser and confidant of K. Edgar, who became the sole monarch of England, by the death of his brother, and presently afterwards advanced Dunstan to the archiepiscopal chair.

Being now possessed of the primacy, and assured of the royal support and assistance, the archbishop, with St. Oswald and St. Ethelwald, began the execution of the design he had long meditated, of endeavouring to persuade the secular canons in their cathedrals and other monasteries, to put away their wives and take the monastic vows and habits; but finding these of little or no avail, they proceeded to effect it by violence, and the King gave them a formal commission to expel the married canons out of all the cathedrals and larger monasteries, and promised to assist them in the execution of it with all his power. Under the influence of these prelates,

*Stemmate savenus jacet hic sacer Odo severus
Moribus excellens acriter peccata refellens
Presul & indulgens omni pietate resurgens.
Ecclesie & Christi pugil invictissimus isti.
O bone hunc Christe quia sic tibi servivit iste Celi Solamen sibi des te deprecor. Amen.*

(z) Anglia Sacra, p. 11.

(a) Wallingford in his Chron. says Exeter, by mistake.

(b) Bromton, col. 864.

(c) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 68. Mr. Somner does not mention him among the archbishops. See Chron. J. Wallingford, p. 544. S. Durham, col. 157. Bromton, col. 864. Gervas, col. 1645.

(d) Anno 963. R. de Diceto, col. 456.

(e) See Simon Durham, col. 157. R. de Diceto, col. 456. Bromton, col. 864. Gervas, col. 1645.

(f) In 959. Chron. Tab. col. 2243. S. Durham, col. 157. Bromton, col. 864.

(g) W. Malmf. de Antiq. Glaston. Eccl. p. 324. In 973, archbishop Dunstan with Oswald, archbishop of York, and all the rest of the bishops, consecrated and anointed K. Edgar, surnamed the Peaceable, in the 15th year of his reign, on the Whit sunday, in the presence of all his nobles at Akeman-cestre, now called Bath; after whose decease, anno 975, there arising a contest which of his sons should succeed him, archbishop Dunstan with archbishop Oswald, and the suffragan bishops, abbats, bishops, and nobility met together, and having elected Edward for their King, they consecrated and anointed him at Kingston; upon whose murder, his brother Ethelred, in 972, was crowned and consecrated at the same place, by archbishop Dunstan with archbishop Oswald, and ten bishops. See S. Durham, p. 159. R. de Diceto, col. 458. Bromton, col. 864. Flor. of Worcester, p. 353, &c. Matthew Westminster, 374, &c. Hoveden, p. 426. H. Hunt, p. 357.

ARCHBISHOPS.

the King, however profligate he might otherwise be, shewed a constant attention to ecclesiastical affairs, and held several councils (b), one of which, in particular, was at Winchester in 975, in which several canons were made for the regulation of the church, among which were those 67, called the canons of K. Edgar (i).

The commission for expelling the secular canons was executed with great rigour, but on the King's death in 975, it received a check. The sufferings of the persecuted canons had excited much compassion, and many of the nobility now espoused their cause, and in some measure effected their restoration. In the reign of K. Ethelred, surnamed the Unready, who succeeded his brother Edward in 979, the English were engaged in such continual wars with the Danes, and involved by their invasions in so many calamities, that they had no leisure to attend to ecclesiastical affairs, which renders the church history of these times as barren as the state of it was melancholy (k).

As archbishop Dunstan was so great a patron and restorer of monastic institutions, the grateful monks, who were almost the only historians of those dark ages, have bestowed the most extravagant praises on him, and have represented him as the greatest worker of miracles, as well as the highest favourite of Heaven that ever lived. Having sat in this see for upwards of 27 years, he died on May 19, in 988, æt. 64 (l), and was buried in his own cathedral, that is (and so it must be understood of all his predecessors, said to be there buried) in the old church, not in the modern; Osburn says, near the altar, and Gervas says, in the undercroft (m).

After his death he was, like his predecessor St. Odo, canonized (n), for his piety and miracles; and his relics soon became of such high account, that archbishop Lanfranc, when he rebuilt this church in the Conqueror's reign, very solemnly translated his corpse, from the place of its first (h) Viz. anno 969 at London. Spelman, vol. i, p. 479; anno 970 at London. Ibid. 484; anno 975 at Winchester. Ibid. p. 490; anno 977 at Kirtlington, or as some say at Winchester. Ibid. p. 493; anno 978 at Calne in Wiltshire.

(i) See S. Durham, col. 158. Bromton, col. 870. Gervas, 1646.

(k) Tan. Præf. to Monasticon, p. iii, says, that great contests ensued between the monks and the seculars, in K. Edward's reign, at the synods of Winchester, Caln, and Ambresbury; who being convinced by the power of archbishop Dunstan and others of the monks party, the seculars were silenced, and the monks quietly enjoyed their lands till the conquest.

(l) Chron. Tab. col. 2245. Gervas, col. 1647, says, he died æt. 70, and in the 34th year of his Pontificate, Battely's Somner, p. 68.

(m) Bale says, he wrote several books, but I know of none that are preserved but that called Concordia Regularum, containing twelve chapters, which may be found in Reyner's Apok. Benedict. appendix, p. 77.

DUNSTAN

sepulture, into his new church, and there new intombed it (with the pontificals, in which, according to the times, it was habited, and a plate of lead, bearing an inscription, to shew whose body it was) near unto the high altar on the south side, from which time the tomb had the denomination of St. Dunstan's altar (o). Whoever observes the pavement on the south side of the steps between archbishop Stratford's and Sudbury's monuments, with the gilded work on the wall and pillar there, will easily discern some such thing taken from thence, as questionless this altar was at the clearing of the church of such ornaments at or shortly after the reformation.

Whilst it was standing there, this saint and his relics were of such high estimation, and they became so beneficial to the place that enjoyed them, by the offerings to his altar, that the monks of Glastonbury began to boast in King Henry VII.'s time, that they had them in possession, having been translated thither from Canterbury, as Capgrave, in the life of St. Dunstan, affirms, in the year 1012. Upon which, those monks built him a shrine, by which and other means, the benefit formerly accruing to Christ church, was turned to Glastonbury. This so troubled the archbishop of Canterbury and his monks, that bethinking themselves of a speedy remedy, they resolved to make a scrutiny in his tomb or altar, by opening it, to see whether his corpse and relics were really inclosed there or not. The scrutiny was accordingly made, and the searching found in favour of the monks of Christ church, that the corpse and relics were really in it; upon which archbishop Warham, who then sat in the see of Canterbury, immediately directed and sent his letters to the abbat and convent of Glastonbury, straightly charging them to desist from all further boasting of their possession of St. Dunstan's relics; which letters he was forced to repeat, before they would obey, so loth were they to forgo so great a profit (p).

(n) The day celebrated as his feast was May 19.

(o) The remains of St. Dunstan seem fated not to have lain long undisturbed in one place. He died in 988, and Lanfranc's coming to the see was about the year 1070.—When the fire happened in 1174, his remains were again removed with those of St. Alphege, to the altar of the holy cross in the nave of the church, and after being newly habited, were both brought back again to the tombs prepared for their reception, at the opening of the church after the rebuilding of it. See Harpfield Hist. Eccles. Ang. in ejus vita. Battely's Somner, p. 120.

(p) Harpfield. Battely's Somner, p. 120. W. Malmib. de Antiq. Glaston. Eccles. p. 301 et seq. Mr. Somner's account of this scrutiny is very circumstantial; an abridg. of it may be entertaining to the reader.

On April 20, 1508, by order of the archbishop and prior, three or four of the fraternity went about it in the evening after the church doors were shut, that none of the laity might interfere. Before day-light they discovered a wooden chest seven feet long, and about eighteen inches broad, covered

ARCHBISHOPS.

ÆTHELGAR—SIRICIUS—ELFRIC.

25. ÆTHELGAR succeeded him as archbishop (q) in 988. He was first a monk of Glastonbury, and was then made abbat of Hide, from whence he was promoted to the bishopric of Selsey, or, as it is now called, Cbichester, and from thence to this see of Canterbury; upon which he went to Rome for the pall, which he received from the Pope's hands (r). He continued archbishop only one year and three months, when dying, he was buried in his own monastery, in the church or chapel of St. Jobu Baptist (s).

26. SIRICIUS was elected in his room (u). He had been first a monk of Glastonbury, and then abbat of St. Augustine's, after which he was made bishop of Bath and Wells, from whence he was translated to this see. By his advice, the King, who in his distress readily consented to any means of getting rid of his inveterate enemies the Danes, was persuaded to bribe them with 30,000*l.* in ready money, to quit the kingdom, and to bind them by an oath to be quiet from thenceforth; but what little policy there was in this scheme of the archbishop, might easily be judged, and how pernicious it proved afterwards, may be seen in the course of this volume (w). Having sat in this see somewhat more than four years, he died in 994, and was buried in his own church (x). He died in a good old age, and gave his books, which were very good, by his last will, to his church (y).

27. ELFRIC succeeded next in 996, to this archbishopric. He was a man of great sanctity, and was bishop of Sberborne (z), from whence he was translated hither, being elected in a synod held at Ambresbury (a); and going to Rome, he received his pall from the Pope there; he was a laborious compiler of Sermons and Homilies, and translated great part of the Scripture into the Saxon tongue (b), and wrote besides several other tracts of divinity. His sermon for Easter Sunday has often been printed, and shews very plainly, that the church of England had not at that time embraced the doctrine of Transubstantiation, and it is hardly possible to express the present sentiments of the church of England, and of other Protestant churches on this subject in plainer terms, than Elfric did in this discourse. He expelled the regular canons who would not abandon their wives from this cathedral, and brought in monks in their room. He died in the year 1005, having sat in this see 11 years (c), and was buried first at Abingdon, but afterwards covered with lead inside and out, and strongly guarded with iron bands, and many nails immersed in the stone work; and of such bulk and weight, that though six of the brethren were added by the prior to their number, and they had called in other assistance, the chest was not till the next night with great labour raised above the stone work. When they had with much difficulty forced open this, they found a leaden coffin of elegant workmanship, containing another of lead likewise, appearing as if decayed, in which the archbishop had been, as was supposed, at first buried; within these two coffins, they found a small leaden plate lying upon the breast, inscribed with these words in Roman characters—HIC REQUIESCIT SANCTUS DUNSTANUS ARCHIEPISCOPUS—and under that a linen cloth, clean and entire, spread over the body, which was clothed in the pontifical habit, much of which had perished through age; and then the whole having been inspected, the crown of the head was delivered to the prior to be placed among the relics of the church, and the remainder was immediately closed up again with great strength. At this sight there were present the greatest part of the convent, the archbishop's domestic chaplains; Dr. Thornton, prior of Dover, the archbishop's suffragan; Dr. Cuthbert Tunstall his chancellor, and several others, besides public notaries, who were called in to assist at the whole of it; and in this state the relics were left to rest in quiet till the reformation, when K. Henry VIII. sent commissioners to seize and destroy such remains of superstition; and they demolished this altar and monument, and probably disposed of his bones in like manner, as they did those of St. Anselm, St. Thomas, and others in the same church. A record of this scrutiny is kept among the archives of this church. Mr. Somner has printed a true copy of it, in his appendix, No. xxxviii.

(q) Bromton, col. 879, calls him Stilgar.

(r) W. Malmsh. de Antiq. Glaston. Eccl. p. 325. R. de Diceto, col. 460. Gervas, col. 1648, who says, that this archbishop having expelled the clerks from Canterbury, brought the monks into it.

(s) After the above chapel was consumed, his remains were removed to the upper south wing of the cathedral, and deposited at the altar of St. John the Evangelist there. S. Durham, col. 162. Bromton, col. 872, 877. Gervas, col. 1647. Thorn, col. 1780.

(u) Gervas, col. 1648, calls him Siricus.

(v) Episcopus Wiltoniæ.

(w) Gervas, col. 1648. Knyghton, col. 2315, says, it was a tax or tribute of 10,000*l.* as does S. Durham, col. 162. Bromton, col. 879, says, this was the first tribute paid to them; the second being, 16,000*l.* the third, 24,000*l.* the fourth, 30,000*l.* and the fifth, 40,000*l.* till at last money being wanting, they again went on in plundering the country.

(x) Chron. Sax. Bromton, col. 879. Somner, p. 120, says, he died in 993.

(y) Bately's Somner, p. 120. His body was afterwards deposited in the crypt, at the altar of St. Paulinus, which was directly under that of St. John, in the south upper cross wing above.

(z) He is said by some, to have been first a monk of Glastonbury, afterwards abbat of Abbingdon; but this Wharton denies, and says, he was only a monk there. Capgrave says, he was abbat of St. Alban's, which Eadmer, in the Life of Osberne, confirms.

(a) The Pagus Ambri of Matthew Westminster.

(b) Several of his writings are in the Benet, Cottonian, and other libraries, and part of his translation of the Scriptures is among the Bodleian Mss. His sermon for Easter Sunday has been printed in Latin and Saxon, at London, anno 1566, with a preface by archbishop Parker, concerning the author and his writings—Epistolæ duæ ad Wulfinos Eboraci & Shireburnie Episcopos, were published at London, 1623 and 1638, octavos, as they had been before, in Fox's Acts and Monuments, vol. ii, 1538.

(c) Gervas, col. 1648. Chron. Tab. col. 2245, place this archbishop, who is called Alric, before Siricius, and say he succeeded to this see in 989, and died in 1000; and that Siricius succeeded, who died in 1005. Bromton, col. 885, calls him Alfric, alias Wolric, and says, he sat eleven years.

removed

ARCHBISHOPS.

removed to his own church of Canterbury, and deposited in the south cross of the choir, at the altar of St. John Baptist (d).

28. ELPHEGE succeeded next to this archbishopric (e). He was a native of Gloucestershire, and had been first a monk at Deiburst near Gloucester, then a monk and prior of Glastonbury, after which he turned anchorite, from which state of life he was taken and made abbat of Bath, the church of which he repaired; after which he was promoted to the bishopric of Winchester, over which he presided five years, and from thence in 1006, to this patriarchal chair of Canterbury, being then of the age of 52 or 53 years, and afterwards went to Rome for his pall, which he received there (f).

Having sat in this see the space of six years, he was barbarously stoned to death by the Danes at Greenwich, on Saturday April 19, 1012 (g), whither they carried him prisoner, for refusing to pay the prodigious ransom they demanded of him, after having destroyed the city and church of Canterbury, and murdered the greatest part of the inhabitants, of which a full relation has already been made above. The archbishop being thus put to death, was buried first in the church of St. Paul in London (h), but his body was afterwards, with the consent of K. Canute, conveyed in 1024, by archbishop Agelnoth, with great solemnity to Canterbury, where it was deposited in his own church (i). He was afterwards canonized, the day of his translation being kept on April 19, and he had an altar appropriated to him and a shrine, which stood opposite the present high altar, as is plain from the words of archbishop Winchelsea's statutes, which mention the high altar and the two altars nearest to it, namely, of St. Dunstan and St. Elphege (k).

29. LIVING, bishop of Wells, was about a year after the death of St. Elphege, translated to this archbishopric, and received his pall from the Pope

(d) Some have thought that Elfric the learned grammarian, and this archbishop, were one and the same person; but Wharton, in his Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 125, has a dissertation—De Duobus Elfriciis—in which he asserts the contrary, and that the grammarian Elfric, was archbishop of York.

The last will and testament of this archbishop, in Saxon, is in the Cotton library, marked CLAUDIUS, B. 6, which shews him to have died wealthy; in it, he mentions his sisters and their children, and his kindred; and gives lands at different places to Christ church, Abbingdon, and St. Alban's monasteries, to which latter he gave all his books and furniture. See Hickes's Thesaurus Dissert. Epist. p. 62. Harris's History of Kent, p. 515; in the former is a Latin, in the latter an English translation.

(e) His life is in Brit. Sanct. vol. i, p. 233.

(f) W. Malmfbury de Antiq. Glaston. Eccl. p. 325. Higden, p. 272. Bromton, col. 886, 890. Gervas, col. 1648.

(g) After which his head is said to have been struck off with a hatchet.

ELPHEGE—LIVING—AGELNOTH

at Rome (l). He consecrated K. Edmund Ironside, at London, whom the Londoners and those of the nobility, at that time there, had, with unanimous consent, chosen King, as right heir to the crown, in opposition to K. Knute, whom he afterwards crowned at the same place (m). He was deeply involved in the calamities of those unhappy times; notwithstanding which, he appears to have been a great benefactor to his cathedral church, both in land and ornaments, and repaired the roof which had been burnt by the Danes. Having sat in this see about seven years, he died about the year 1020 (n), and was buried in his own cathedral (o).

30. AGELNOTH, who was a monk of Glastonbury, was his successor in this see in the same year (p). He was of noble extraction, and for his excellent natural disposition, was surnamed the Good (q). Gervas says (r), he was at the above time, dean of this church, for there were, continues he, at this time, monks, as if cathedral canons, bearing indeed the habit of monks, but not observing the rule of the order in so strict a manner; for the monks taken in after the martyrdom of St. Elphege, with whom almost the whole convent, excepting only four monks, fell by the swords of the Danes, could neither be so fully informed, nor be restrained from their own will, so as to observe the rule in every part of it, they called their head or chief; the dean, who after the arrival of Lanfranc, was called prior.

He went to Rome for his pall, where he was received with much honour by the Pope (s). He consecrated after his return, the bishops of Landaff and St. David's, in his church of Canterbury, and in the year 1037, he crowned K. Harold at London. Having sat in the chair of this see upwards of 17 years, in the interim of which time he perfected the works of his church's repair, which had been burnt and destroyed by the Danes, as has been mentioned above; he

(h) Hist. Eccl. Elien, cap. xiii. R. de Diceto, col. 464.

(i) S. Durham, col. 177, anno 1023. Bromton, col. 909. See Osbern in vita Elphegi. Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 19, 84.

(k) Battely's Somner, p. 121. (l) Chron. Saxon.

(m) Bromton, col. 903, 906. Leland's Collect. vol. iii, p. 400. (n) Battely's Somner, p. 121, pt. 2, p. 68.

(o) His body was afterwards deposited at the altar of St. Martin, in the upper north cross wing.

(p) See Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 66.

(q) W. Malmfb. de Antiq. Glaston. Eccl. p. 325. He was the son of a noble person named Agelmar. S. Durham, col. 177. R. de Diceto, col. 467.

(r) Col. 1650. (s) Gervas. Battely's Somn. p. 120.

(t) During his stay at Rome, he purchased from the pope an arm of St. Augustine, bishop of Hippo, for 100 talents, or 6000 pounds weight of silver; and one talent, or 60 pounds weight of gold; so astonishing a sum, as to make the story of it almost incredible.

died

ARCHBISHOPS.

died on October 29, in 1038, and was buried in his own cathedral, before the altar of St. Benedict, towards the right hand, in the south cross wing of the nave of this church. He was canonized after his death.

31. EADSIN, chaplain to K. Harold and bishop of Winchester, succeeded Agelnoth as archbishop in 1038 (u), and though he continued as such almost 11 years, yet he was that whole time afflicted with bodily infirmities (v); he died on October 28, anno 1050, and was buried in his own church (w). In the year 1040, he consecrated Hardicanute, as King, at London, who had been sent for from Flanders, on the death of K. Harold Harefoot, by the unanimous consent of the nobles, both English and Danes; after whose short reign, he, with Alfric, archbishop of York and the suffragan bishops, in 1042, crowned, anointed and consecrated Edward, surnamed the Confessor, whom the clergy and Londoners had chosen as King, with great pomp, at Winchester (x), or according to others, at Westminster (y). Archbishop Eadsin, was, after his death, canonized as a saint.

32. ROBERT, surnamed Gemetricensis, from the place of his birth, being a Norman born, succeeded to this archbishopric on archbishop Eadsin's death in 1050 (z). He was bishop of London, and a familiar friend of K. Edward, by whom he was appointed to this see out of gratitude for his having received some favours, when he was in exile, from him, he being then a monk at Gemetica (a). He had continued in this chair scarcely two years, when he was ejected in 1052, and being adjudged a disturber of the nation's peace, he was obliged to fly into Normandy, (u) Bromton, col. 932. Hist. Ramesiensis, p. 50. Battely's Somner, p. 68.

(v) On account of his infirmities, he committed the charge of his see to Siward, abbat of Abingdon, and afterwards bishop of Rochester, who nevertheless, says Lambard, p. 88, did not vouchsafe to find him necessaries.

(w) Battely's Somner, p. 68, pt. 2, p. 68. Chron. Tab. col. 2247. R. de Diceto, col. 475. The Saxon Chron. places his death in September, anno 1047. His remains were afterwards deposited in the crypt, on the north side of Becket's altar there.

(x) Anno 1043. Simon Durham, col. 179. Ralph de Diceto, 474. Gervas, col. 1651.

(y) Bromton, col. 936. Knyghton, col. 2329, an. 1042.

(z) The Saxon Chron. places the succession of Robert, in the time of Lent, anno 1048. Higden in 1051.

(a) Higden. Gervas, col. 1651. Leland's Col. vol. i, p. 144. (b) Battely's Somner, pt. 1 and 2, p. 68.

(c) R. de Diceto, col. 475. Gervas, 1652. Knyghton, 2345. Higden, p. 276.

(d) S. Durham, col. 197. R. de Diceto, 482. Gervas, col. 1652. Knyghton, 2343. Bromton, col. 966, says, that he lived in prison on a daily allowance, at the King's expence, solemnly affirming upon oath that he had no money; the falsity of which the monk says, was proved after his death, by the discovery of his riches.

EADSIN—ROBERT—STIGAND.

where he died and was buried in the abbey of Gemetica, in which he had been brought up (b).

33. STIGAND, chaplain to K. Edward, succeeded next to this archbishopric, in the year 1052. He had been K. Harold's chaplain, and had been first bishop of Sberburne, and was translated from thence to Winchester, which he kept together with this archbishopric, with the King's consent, whilst his predecessor was yet alive (c). He was guilty of, what was deemed a flagrant irregularity, in making use of his predecessor's pall, which was contrary to the canon; and he was afterwards guilty of one still greater, in receiving his own pall from Pope Benedict, whom the church of Rome had excommunicated. As soon as the Conqueror was seated on the throne, Stigand was deposed by him; and so fearful was he of this prelate's disposition towards him, that, when he returned into Normandy in 1067, he took Stigand with him; among others, this archbishop was, on his coming back, first formally suspended by the papal interdict, and at last in the octaves of Easter, anno 1070, in a great council held by the King's command at Winchester, and in his presence, he was degraded and deprived of the archbishopric, with the Pope's consent, by his legate and two presbyter cardinals, for the three causes abovementioned; after which he was cast into prison (d), where he died and was buried at Winchester, with the King's licence (e), and, it is said, with much solemnity (f).

If we may believe the chronicler of St. Augustine's monastery, this archbishop Stigand, by his advice and cunning, together with Egelsine, abbat of that monastery, preserved to the Kentish men, their ancient liberties and customs, when they

(e) Battely, pt. 2, p. 68.

(f) He was, and that through the King's favour to him at last, very solemnly interred in the church of Winchester, in a leaden chest, on the south side of the high altar near the bishop's chair, where his remains rested till the 14th century, when bishop Fox built two curious partition walls in the church, dividing the presbtery from the side isles and placed three coffins on each wall, containing the bones of Saxon and other Kings and bishops; and in one of them, on the north side, those of Stygand, with Wyne the bishop, and this inscription on the north side of the chest: Hic jacet STYGANDUS Archiepiscopus. But in the great rebellion of the last century, when the rebel Colonel Sandys came with his forces, and committed such outrages in that church, they threw down the chests and forced them open, employing the bones in breaking the curious painted glass windows; but the scattered bones being by some good persons collected together, were, after the restoration, inclosed in two chests, and placed upon the same wall; and upon that in which archbishop Stygand's were inclosed, this inscription: IN THIS CHEST IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD 1661, WERE PROMISCUOUSLY LAID UP THE BONES OF PRINCES AND PRELATES, WHICH HAD BEEN SCATTERED ABOUT WITH SACRILEGIOUS BARBARITY, IN THE YEAR OF OUR LORD 1642.— See Dart's Canterbury, p. 118.

ARCHBISHOPS.

were invaded by the Norman Conqueror, who never had a cordial affection to him before, and certainly had much less afterwards; indeed his aversion to him was so great, that he refused to be crowned by him, preferring for that purpose Alured, archbishop of York, though that prelate had consecrated and crowned his enemy King Harold (g).

Stigand was certainly no favourite with the monks, for they have branded his memory with the crimes of covetousness, pride and ambition. Higden, p. 276, says, that he was a man who made a public market of all ecclesiastical matters, a man in every shape illiterate, but well fraught with riches, and soft speeches; and Bromton sums up his character by telling us, he was vir pessimus & simoniacus.

The above is the dark representation of Stigand's character, drawn up by his inveterate enemies the monks; the true one it may be perhaps difficult to draw. However, he seems to have been a man of a great spirit, and undaunted by opposition, but not so discreet as he ought to have been, as well in relation to the Conqueror, as in trusting to the precarious power of the pseudo Pope Benedict. His actions otherwise, in relation to his country, in opposition to the Norman Conqueror, are in all respects highly justifiable, and give us a favourable opinion of him as an Englishman and true friend to it. Malmesbury says, he was illiterate, as all were who were not monks; a prejudice which needs no comment. It is certain, that age of hurry and confusion abounded with the darkest ignorance; but if Stigand had been remarkably so, it would certainly have been objected to him at the council, as it was at that time, to Wulfstan, bishop of Worcester, which it does not appear to be, nor is it likely, considering his attendance at court as a royal chaplain. His covetousness is the most unjustifiable part of his character, and is by no means to be palliated, but it is yet to be doubted whether even this was so great as

(g) Bromton, col. 962.

(h) He gave to the church of Ely, a rich vestment of great value, than which the nation could not shew a richer, which the Conqueror took away afterwards; and a large cross, gilt, with our Saviour's image, and those of St. John Baptist and the Virgin Mary, which Nigelus the bishop made away with. It ought not to be omitted that William the Conqueror delivered out of the bishop's treasury a large silver cross, gilt, with the image of St. John, and the blessed Virgin, to the church of Winchester, for the health of the archbishop's soul, which had been given to him by Q. Emma, and this was placed in the pulpitum of the church till the reformation, when it was, as appears by the inventory, seized to the King's use. Dart's Canterbury, p. 118.

(i) See Dart's Canterbury, p. 117.

(k) His liberality in this was not confined to his own church, for when Gundulph, bishop of Rocheſter, on the church and priory of Rocheſter having been rebuilt, translated the bodies of his predecessors into the new fabric with represented; certainly in some cases he was very liberal, as to the churches of Ely, Winchester, and this of Canterbury (h). On due investigation of the whole, it may be said, that he lost his see for not being a bigot to the church of Rome; his liberty for not being a traitor to his country, and his reputation with posterity for not having been a monk (i).

LANFRANC.

34. LANFRANC, abbat of Caen, and before prior of Bec, in Normandy, a native of the city of Pavia, was called over by the Conqueror, on the deprivation of archbishop Stigand in 1070, to preside in this archiepiscopal see, being constituted archbishop on the feast of the Ascension, August 15, and consecrated in the year following, on Sunday the feast of St. John Baptist, June 24; immediately afterwards he went to Rome and received the pall there from the Pope's own hands (k). He was a prelate of a great and magnanimous mind, and carried all things as powerfully in the church, as the Conqueror did in the state, and becoming greatly in favour both with the Pope and the King, he is said to have presumed on it, and to have treated his comprovincial bishops contemptuously, and to have upbraided them with their inexperience, as well as ignorance.

He performed great things, not only in his own church of Canterbury, but in that of Rocheſter, for he rebuilt both those cathedrals almost from the ground (l), together with all the edifices belonging to the two monasteries, and his own palace likewise at Canterbury, and furnished both churches with rich and costly ornaments (m). He re-established in them both more strictly, the rules of the Benedictine order (n), for turning out the seculars, he filled the stalls of both with monks, and increased the former number of them (o). In the church of Canterbury he appointed, that the president over the convent should in future be styled prior, who before was dignified with the name of Dean. In the church of Rocheſter, he constituted successively, two great solemnity, Lanfranc was present there with his purse, and of his own charge incoffered in a curious work of clean silver the body of Paulinus, the 3d bishop of Rocheſter; which shrine was afterwards held in great estimation. See Lambarde, p. 410.

(l) Antiq. Eccles. Brit. p. 95. Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 55, 56, 337. Gervas, col. 1654. Knyghton, col. 2361.

(m) R. de Diceto, col. 483. Bromton, col. 963.

(n) He found in them a deviation by the remissness and neglect of former times from their first institution, for their better observance of it, therefore he gave them in writing certain ordinances, which were entitled the statutes of Lanfranc for the order of the Benedictines. They may be found printed in Reyner's Apostolatus Benedictinorum; and in Wilkins's Councils, tom. i, p. 328. See Battely's Somner, p. 122.

(o) Gervas says, he increased their number to one hundred and forty or one hundred and fifty.

bishops,

ARCHBISHOPS.

bishops, Earnest and Gundulph, both of them from Normandy; by these means he fixed the monastical profession so firm in these and other churches, that it continued undisturbed and flourishing in them till the general dissolution of monasteries in England. Nor was Lanfranc's liberality confined only to the buildings of the abovementioned churches, for he purchased with his own money, different lands, and obtained for them, from the King, several grants of others (p). His zeal for religion appeared still further in his building and endowing the priory of St. Gregory, in Canterbury, and in re-building the church of St. Albans, which he enriched with many valuable ornaments. He was abundantly charitable in relieving the poor, expending yearly 500*l.* in alms; and he built and endowed besides the two hospitals of St. John, without Northgate, and St. Nicholas in Harbledown, both near Canterbury, and endowed them with sufficient revenues (q).

Before his time, the archbishop and the monks of his church, had but one and the same revenue and lived together in common. This the archbishop changed and put upon another footing, after the manner of foreign churches, for he separated the revenue, allotting one part for himself and his successors, and the other part for the maintenance of the prior and convent (r), in like manner, as they are described in the survey of Domesday. He caused the sees of many bishops which were then in country villages, to be removed from thence into cities, according to the canon, so that a city with us (Westminster excepted, which once had its own bishop) has ever since been, and yet is known by having in it a bishop and a cathedral church (s). The archbishop of York contending with him for the primacy, he brought the suit of it before the King at Windsor, and there by the judgment pronounced by Hugh, the Pope's legate, ascertained his right to it (t), but his greatest and most undaunted act was, when Odo the great Bishop of Baieux and Earl of Kent, the King's half brother, exercised more arbitrary power in this country than even the Conqueror himself dared to do, by violently taking from the churches of Canterbury and Rochester, many of their lands and estates; Lanfranc contended with this most powerful adversary, and in a public hearing before the whole people of Kent, which lasted for three days, he obliged him to restore them again (u), those to

(p) Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 392.

(q) Batt. Som. p. 122, pt. 2, p. 69. (r) Gervas, col. 1311.

(s) Gervas, col. 1654. Battely's Somner, p. 122.

(t) Gervas, ibid. R. de Diceto, col. 484. Bromton, 970. Gervas, 1653. Knyghton, col. 2345, 2348.

(u) Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 339. R. de Diceto, col. 429. Lambarde, p. 236. See vol. ii, of the Hist. of Kent, under Boxley. Gervas, col. 1655. (v) Knyghton, col. 2359.

LANFRANC.

this church amounting to 25 manors; nor was it a small testimony of the esteem he was held in, for the excellency of his wisdom, as the greatness of his mind and power, that when the King went beyond sea, which he often did upon weighty occasions, he constituted the archbishop sole justiciary of the kingdom, during his absence; indeed the King confiding in him, consulted him upon every important occasion, especially in whatever the church was concerned; a remarkable instance of which occurred, when the King wished to seize on his brother Odo, bishop of Baieux and Earl of Kent, but was afraid of it, for fear of offending the Pope, Lanfranc advised him not to fear, but to commit him to safe custody, adding, that if the Pope should call him to account for it, for laying hands upon a bishop, and an ecclesiastic, to tell him, that he had not imprisoned the bishop of Baieux, but the Earl of Kent, his own liege man and subject (v).

It is said, that he persuaded the Conqueror to leave England to his younger son, William Rufus, with whom he took part, and crowned him King at Westminster, and afterwards, when the nobility took up arms against him, in favour of his brother Robert, Lanfranc alone kept faithful to him, but he required an oath from the King however, to perform certain conditions, which he then dictated to him; upon which account, when the King afterwards had made his cause good, he bore such a secret hatred to the archbishop, especially when he reproved him for breaking his oath, that he ungratefully forgot his services and banished him the realm, and he continued for some time abroad, till by the intercession of many friends, he was permitted to return home.

Lanfranc, not long after his return, fell sick of an ague, of which he died on May 28, 1089 (w), having sat in this see 19 years, and he was buried in his own cathedral, in the presence of the archbishop of York, and other bishops, in the Trinity chapel, at the east end of the church, on the south side the altar there; but on the pulling of it down afterwards, to erect the present chapel of the same name, his body was removed and buried by order of the convent, at the altar of St. Martin, but there is no trace of it left, nor any monument or memorial extant of him (x).

During his time, he held several councils at different times at London in 1075, at Winchester

(w) See Bromton, col. 986. Gervas, 1655. Knyghton, 2360.

(x) Gervas says, that on the pulling down of the Trinity chapel, archbishop Lanfranc was found in a very weighty shield of lead, in which he had lain from the first day of his interment, his limbs untouched, mitred, pinned, to that hour. He was carried into the vestry and replaced in his lead, till it was generally agreed what was to be done with

ARCHBISHOPS.

ANSELM.

in 1076, and at London again in 1077, and another at Gloucester (y). As a specimen of his learning, it is said, that he amended the texts of the Old and New Testament, that is, the faulty versions or corrupt copies of the sacred writings (z); and he wrote several treatises, which are among the Harleian manuscripts, and among those in the Bodleian library (a). Besides what has been mentioned above, he did many great, good and pious acts; an account of which may be found in Parker, Godwin, and other writers.

Capgrave says, he was canonized. His anniversary was afterwards celebrated by the monks with great solemnities and a large distribution of alms (b).

Lanfranc has been celebrated by all our historians as a man of wisdom, learning and munificence, of great magnanimity of mind, and of universal piety and approved goodness. He certainly deserved to be highly spoken of; but it should be remembered, that he was a foreigner and a favourite of the Conqueror, and was besides a monk, and that his character is given and handed down to us by the grateful monks, who were then almost the only historians of the age, and never failed to bestow extravagant praises on their benefactors, especially if belonging to their own order.

35. ANSELM, a native of the city of Aouft, in Piedmont (c), and abbat of Bec in Normandy, was nominated to this see by K. William Rufus, in the year 1093, after a vacancy of it for more than four years (d); for that King, who is recorded in history as notorious for all manner of sacrilegious rapine, had, upon Lanfranc's death, kept the see vacant for that time, making waste of all the revenues and possessions of this church, as he had done of several others; but falling sick and thinking himself at the point of death, with so considerable a prelate; from the length of time, his bones were much decayed and almost all reduced to dust, a decay occasioned by the moisture of the cloaths, the natural coldness of the lead, and above all, the transitory condition of mortality; however, the larger bones collected with the other dust, were re-interred in a leaden coffin at the altar of St. Martin, as above-mentioned.

(y) Bromton, col. 975, 976. Knyghton, col. 2351.

(z) Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 55. Gervas, col. 1655. Archbishop Parker, as appears from Brown's Fasc. Rerum, p. 34, directed Mr. Lambarde, author of the Perambulation, to insert in the Textus Roffensis, the following remarkable words: Quando Willielmus Rex gloriosus morabatur in Normannia, Lanfrancus erat princeps & custos Angliæ, subiectis sibi omnibus principibus & iuvantibus in his quæ ad defensionem vel pacem pertinebant regni secundum leges patriæ: Lectioni assiduus & ante episcopatum & in episcopatu quando poterat.— Et quia scripturæ, scriptorum vitio, erant nimium corruptæ, omnis tam veteris quam novi Testamenti Libros, nec non etiam scripta sanctorum sacra secundum orthodoxam fidem studuit corrigere. Mr. Lambarde, accordingly inserted this passage in 1573.

Archbishop Lanfranc, it is said, bore for his arms—Girony, gules and azure, on a globe, a cross potent or.

he nominated Anselm, who was then in England, to the archbishopric, though upon his recovery, he is said to have repented that he had not sold it at the best price (e).

Anselm was some time before he could be prevailed on to accept of the archbishopric, and when he did, he seems to have been constituted without any formal election. The convent having been destitute of a pastor for so long a time, were desirous of accepting one at any rate, and he was consecrated by the archbishop of York, assisted by most of the bishops of England, on the 2d of the nones of December, that year, and before the Easter following he received the pall in his own church, by the hands of the Pope's legate (f). When Anselm came to the archbishopric, he found the lands and revenues of it miserably wasted and spoiled, so that beyond the satisfying of the King's demands, there was not sufficient remaining for his bare subsistence; and the first year he sat in the archiepiscopal chair, he struggled with poverty, want and continual vexations through the King's displeasure, and the three next years he spent in banishment, during which time he was forced to borrow money for his maintenance; when K. Henry came to the crown on the death of William Rufus, Anselm was in banishment, and the King was crowned at Westminster in his absence, by Maurice, bishop of London; soon after which, he recalled the archbishop home, promising by letters, to direct himself and his kingdom by his advice and counsel. Soon after his return, Anselm crowned at Westminster, Queen Maud, daughter of Malcolm, K. of Scotland, whom the King had then married (g).

Two years after this, Anselm held a great council at Westminster, at which almost all the bishops were present; soon after which, the dissention

(a) His works were printed by Dacherius, in folio, at Paris, in 1648, and some other tracts were published by Lucas. Dr. Cave thinks some of his tracts are lost; as his Commentary on the Psalms, his Ecclesiastical History, and Life of William the Conqueror.

(b) Ang. Sacr. p. i, p. 56.

(c) W. Gemeticen, p. 672. Knyghton, col. 2377. See his life in Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 161, 240. He was then in his 60th year. (d) Gervas, col. 1658.

(e) Though the King could not retract Anselm's promotion, yet he strove to make himself the best amends he could for it, by demanding of him 1000l. for his present use, alledging the justice of his demand, from his having given the promotion to him gratis. See R. de Diceto, col. 495. Gervas, col. 1658. Bromton, col. 988, says, that although the King had given the archbishopric to Anselm, yet he was not suffered to receive any thing from it beyond the King's orders until the yearly sum, which he imposed on the archbishopric, after the death of Lanfranc was paid. Stow's Chron. p. 129.

(f) Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 109. Knyghton, col. 2376. Simon Durham, col. 219, 221.

(g) Simon Durham, col. 225. Gervas, 1338, 1659.

begun

ARCHBISHOPS.

began between the King and him, concerning the investiture of churches, which continued for some time with much altercation, when Anselm having suffered many injuries and affronts, left the kingdom, and the King seized upon all his revenues, which he retained in his hands no less than four years. The archbishop remained abroad till the year 1106, when on the feast of the Assumption, the King came to Bec in Normandy, where the archbishop then was, when meeting together they were reconciled, and in a little time after, Anselm, by the King's command, returned to England (b).

Notwithstanding the archbishop's absence, and these hard circumstances, incredible as it may seem, the church of Canterbury is recorded to have been in a great measure rebuilt, and the choir which Lanfranc had built pulled down, and the rebuilding of it begun and carried forward, to which Anselm is said to have contributed all he could, by authorizing the employing of the stock of the church towards it; and Eadmer tells us, that those things which he could not perform himself, he accomplished by his steadfast friends the priors of it, two of whom successively, Ernulpb and Conrad, he had promoted to that office, to whose care he committed the management of it (i). In the synod held in London in 1102, he made a decree forbidding priests to marry, which H. Huntingdon observes, was not forbidden before. Having languished under a consumption for some months, he died, in the 76th year of his age, and the 16th of his primacy, in the year 1109 at Canterbury (k), and was buried in this cathedral, at the head of his predecessor Lanfranc (l). But afterwards, says Malmfbury, he had a more worthy monument in the east part of the church; for his body being removed to that part of it, was laid in the chapel of St. Peter and St. Paul, which has since been called by his name, on the south side of the high altar (m).

He was a man of great austerity of manners,

(b) Eadm. p. 108. Ypodigma Neustria, p. 441. Knyghton, col. 2369, 2377. Simon Durham, col. 227. Bromton, col. 995. Gervas, col. 1659. See a full account of the dissensions between the King and archbishop, in R. de Diceto, col. 493. (i) Eadmer, l. iii, p. 55. Battely's Somner, p. 12, 69. Gervas, col. 1311.

(k) Simon Durham, col. 232. R. de Diceto, col. 501.

(l) Eadmer's words are, In majori ecclesia; and in relation to the sepulture of his successor archbishop Ralph, he says, he was buried in medio aulae majoris ecclesiae, which words were plainly a reference to a lesser church, which must have been that of St. John Baptist in the infirmary. Leland says, Itin. vol. vi, three bishops were buried in the chapel of St. Peter and St. Paul. Anselm, behind the altar.

(m) For the finding of a light before his tomb, K. Stephen gave the manor of Berkesfore near Shepey to this convent. Lib. Eccl. Cant. See Battely's Somner, p. 122. Weever has given him this epitaph:—

Hic jacet ANSELMUS post mortem vivere certus, Cantuar. archiepus qui omni bonitate refertus.

RALPH.

severe and grave in his discourse, of piety and learning, according to the mode of the times in which he lived. He is said to have founded the nunnery of St. Sepulchre near Canterbury. Archbishop Anselm wrote at least fifty different treatises, many of which are still extant among the Harleian Mss. and those in the Bodleian library (n). Almost 400 years after his death, by the procurement, and at the great expence of archbishop Morton, in K. Henry VII.'s time, he was, on account of his piety and sufferings, canonized a saint. The archbishop is said to have borne for his arms—Argent, gutte de sang, a cross forme gules.

After the see had continued five years vacant, K. Henry I. invited the bishops and nobles of the realm to meet at Windjor, and sent for the prior and some of the monks of this church, to be present at this assembly, the occasion of which was unknown. When they were assembled, the King's intention was to have recommended Fabricius, abbat of Abindon, to be their metropolitan; but the bishops and some of the nobles proposing Ralph or Rodulph, bishop of Rochester, and having obtained the King's consent, they, with the assent of the prior and monks, elected and proclaimed him archbishop elect (o).

36. RALPH, or RODULPH, bishop of Rochester, called by some by the surname of De Turbine (p), was preferred to this archbishopric on Sunday May 2, 1114, five years after the death of Anselm, from whom he was a very different character. Next year, anno 1115, on Sunday July 3, he was consecrated, and received the pall, which had been sent him from the Pope, handsomely inclosed in a silver coffer, in his own church of Canterbury, where were assembled the several bishops of England, and the same day he consecrated Tegulf, bishop of Worcester (q).

Having sat in this see for the space of eight years and an half, he died, worn out with a long sickness, on Oct. 20, 1122 (r), and was buried, according to Eadmer, in the middle of the body

Vir sobrius, castus, vir vitans undique fastus.

Vir gremiis plenis, largus largitor egenis.

Vir bene politus, sagax, doctus, eruditus.

Dogmata maturusque inter contagia purus.

An. dcmini mil. cent. que nono, que die quoque mensis

April vicefimo uno mortis hunc enecat ensis.

(n) One of these, No. 876-3, shews that the treatise called Elucidarium, was falsely attributed to him. His works were printed at Nuremberg, in folio, 1491; and at Cologne, in three volumes, 1573; and there again in four volumes, in 1612.

(o) See Eadmer, p. 109 et seq. Knyghton, col. 2380.

(p) Eadmer, f. 34, 113. Bromton, col. 1004. Sigefred, brother of archbishop Ralph, was first abbat of Glastonbury, and then bishop of Chichester.

(q) Simon Durham, col. 236. R. de Diceto, col. 502. Gervas, col. 1660.

(r) Gervas says, 3 cal. November, col. 1660, 1662. Knyghton, col. 2380.

ARCHBISHOPS.

of this cathedral, or according to others, in the south cross wing (s). He is said, by William Malmfbury, who was well acquainted with him, to have been a man of eminent piety and learning, of a generous disposition and affable deportment, but too much addicted to jocularities for the dignity of his station, which gained him the name of Nugax, or the Trifler. Certainly neither his temper or state of health qualified him for so venerable and great a trust, for he was satirically jocose and ridiculously merry upon trifles, playing with men and words, and this most dangerous kind of mirth was attended with a peevish and morose temper, infomuch, that he was always vexed himself, or vexing others (t); otherwise indeed, he is said to have been totally unfit for his station, being sometime before his promotion to it, while he lived in Normandy, seized with a palsy, which never left him, and was much afflicted with the gout; the former of which maladies occasioned at last his death.

Archbishop Ralph gave a penny a day out of his manor of Liminge, to Harbledown hospital, for ever; which gift was renewed and confirmed by his successor archbishop Theobald (u). There is a long epistle, written by this archbishop, addressed to Pope Calixtus, complaining of the injuries done to him and his church, by Thurstan, archbishop of York, and in defence of the see of Canterbury and its primacy over that of York, which is printed in the Decem Scriptores, col. 1735. He is said to bear for his arms—Sable, a patriarchal cross argent.

37. WILLIAM CORBOIL, prior of St. Osyth in Essex, was next seated in the patriarchal chair of this see, in the year 1122, on the feast of the Purification, and was consecrated by the King's com-

(s) Gervas says, he was buried in the south cross of the nave of the church built by Lanfranc, towards the left hand as you enter near the lower portico, where was the altar of St. Benedict. Howbeit, says bishop Godwyn, I see not any monument or other sign of his sepulture there at all. But no marvel, continues Mr. Somner, because the modern nave or body of the church was built long since this archbishop's time. His burial place was in the elder or former body of the church, which archbishop Sudbury some time afterwards took down, and which was after his death rebuilt; besides, it is hard to find a monument, much more an epitaph so antient any where in England, for the age, it seems, was not very ambitious of either. The antient custom was to put a plate of lead, with the interred party's name inscribed on it, into the sepulchre, with the corpse, so had archbishops Dunstan, and Richard the immediate successor of Becket. Simon Islip is the first of the archbishops that has an epitaph on his tomb in the whole church, about whose time they became common and frequent; thus far, Mr. Somner, p. 123. See Matthew Paris ad. ann. 1257, p. 1258, edit. Lond.

(t) Besides this, he seems to have added to these manners, those of baughtiness and insolence; an instance of which he shewed most shamefully, at the solemn coronation of Ade-

WILLIAM CORBOIL.

mand, in his own church, by Richard, bishop of London, with the assistance of William, bishop of Winchester, and other bishops of the realm (v).

Immediately after his consecration, he departed for the court of Rome, as did Thurstan, archbishop of York, at the same time, each on their own affairs; and the King sent thither the bishop of St. David's, and others, to assist the archbishop elect of Canterbury, should he meet with any obstructions. On their arrival there, Corboil found many objections had been raised by the archbishop of York, who had arrived there before him, to his receiving the pall; all which, through the mediation of the Emperor and the King, who strongly interceded for him by their ambassadors, being removed, he received the pall with much solemnity; but at the same time he complained to the Pope, in the full hearing of the senate of the church of Rome, that his church was injured by the incroaching proceedings of the archbishop of York; for that it had from the time of the first bishop of it, down to Ralph his immediate predecessor, been possessed of the primacy of all England, which he then earnestly requested for his church, and which, both antient custom and the authority of privileges preserved for so many years, had allowed; but the archbishop of York replying, that he was not summoned to Rome for that purpose, nor had he with him the proper evidences of his church's privileges, to answer these matters, without which he could not enter into them, they both returned home without any further investigation of the business, which was afterwards agitated by the Pope's command in England, in the great council of the nation at Westminster in 1127 (w).

He returned from Rome with the title of apostolic legate, throughout England; after which licia, K. Henry's Queen, when in the midst of his celebration of masse, perceiving the King present with his crown on, he imperiously commanded him to pull it off, and could hardly be persuaded by the nobles not to force it from the King's head, because neither he nor any of his predecessors had set it thereon. The archbishop, inflexible to their entreaties, took the crown off, the King humbly and meekly submitting; and immediately afterwards, all those who stood round and had seen what had passed, petitioning the archbishop to relent and place the crown on the King's head again, he condescendingly acquiesced in it, and immediately with uplifted hands crowned the King again himself. See Parker. Antiq. Brit. Eccl. p. 111, 112. Eadmu. p. 137. Knyghton, col. 2379.

(u) Archives of Harbledown hospital.

(v) He was nominated to this see by the King at Gloucester, on the above feast, which he then celebrated there with great solemnity with his bishops and nobles; and there at this feast he seems to have been elected, after the same manner that his predecessor had been at Windsor. See Simon Durham, col. 247. R. de Diceto, col. 504. Battely, p. 2, p. 48.

(w) Simon Durham, col. 248. R. de Diceto, col. 504. Gervas, col. 1662.

ARCHBISHOPS.

THEOBALD.

he crowned K. Henry at Windsor, at which time there was great contention between him and the archbishop of York, not only concerning the right of crowning the King, but the carrying of the cross; after this he celebrated a general council at Westminster, at which were present thirteen bishops, and in 1130, he performed the new dedication of his church of Canterbury, with great splendor and magnificence, in the presence of David, King of Scotland, and all the bishops (x). At which time the seal of the priory of this church was renewed, being seemingly its second seal (xx); underneath is an engraving of it.

Archbishop Corboil obtained of K. Henry, by his charter dated at Winchester, the custody and constabulary of the castle of Rochester, to be possessed for ever in future, and that by the advice of his barons; and he granted that the bishop and his successors should make a fortification and tower, according to their pleasure, in it, and that the knights who should be deputed to the custody of it, should have the keeping and defence of it, saving, nevertheless, their fealty, &c. (y) He restored the antient nunnery at Minster, in the Ile of Shepey, which had been destroyed by the Danes, long before the conquest, and about a year before his death, he rebuilt the church of St. Martin in Dover, at a further distance from the town than where it stood before, with proper lodgings and accommodations, intending to fix in them a society of regular canons, whom he brought from Merton for that purpose; but the convent of Christ church opposing his designs and threatening to make an appeal to the court of Rome, if necessary, it put a stop to the further progress of this design, and the archbishop dying not long after, the convent took this opportunity of sending thither twelve monks of their own house, and of constituting a prior over them (z).

It was no small reproach to his character, that he set the crown upon the head of K. Stephen, contrary to the oath which he had before made to the Empress Maud (a); but he is said to have reflected on this action with so much sorrow, that he fell sick at Mortlake, and being carried to Canterbury in a horse litter, he died there on December 19, 1136, having presided over this church almost 14 years (b), and was buried in his own cathedral (c).

Archbishop Corboil appears to have been a weak man, too easily prevailed upon to forget the dignity of his station, and the obligation of his oaths; to which reproachful conduct he was most probably induced by the flattering promises made by K. Stephen to the church, at his coronation. He is said to bear for his arms—Azure, a bend wavy in the sinister corner, in chief a cross coupé argent.

38. THEOBALD, abbat of Bec in Normandy.

(x) Gervas, col. 1663. S. Durham, col. 254. Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 89. (xx) See above, p. 558.

(y) Regist. Priorat. Christi, Cant. 31.

(z) See Dover in the History of Kent.

(a) Hollinghed Chron. vol. iii, p. 96. R. de Diceto, col. 505. Bromton, col. 1016, 1023. Knyghton, col. 1384. Hoveden, pt. i, p. 481.

(b) Steph. Birchington. Bromton, col. 1027. Gervas says, fifteen years, col. 1664.

(c) Gervas says, he was buried in the south cross of the nave of the church built by Lanfranc, towards the right hand as you enter near the lower portico, where was the altar of St. Benedict.

ARCHBISHOPS.

THOMAS BECKET.

was elected to this see in 1138, after it had been vacant upwards of two years. He was elected by cardinal Albert, at a legantine synod convened for that purpose at London, though our historians in general say, that he was elected by the bishops of England, and that Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, declared publicly the election, and that he was afterwards consecrated by the legate, in the presence of the prior of this church. On the other hand, Gervas tells us, that Theobald was elected by the prior and monks, who were sent for to London for that purpose, and who publicly pronounced the election of him made by them, in the presence of the King, the legate, the bishops and nobles (d).

He was consecrated by the legate about the east of the Epiphany, and received his pall at the same time, in his own church, in which year he had the title of legate of the apostolic see confirmed to him (e). He crowned K. Stephen, together with his Queen, in the church of Canterbury; the King in his rich habit was conducted by the archbishop and earls, to the church where the King stood in the archbishop's seat, the Queen opposite to him; the archbishop put the crown on both, and afterwards celebrated mass before them (f). In 1146, he went to the council which Pope Eugenius had convened at Rheims, without the King's licence, upon which all his goods were confiscated; on the other hand his suffragans were suspended by the Pope, because the King prohibiting them, they did not come to it (g). On the archbishop's return to Canterbury, where he was joyfully received, the King highly angered at his disobedience, hastened there, where tho' several messages passed between them, none of them effected a reconciliation, and the archbishop was compelled by him to quit the realm, and he remained abroad till peace was restored between them (h). He again incurred the King's anger for refusing, together with the rest of the bishops, in the 15th year of that reign, to anoint and crown his son Eustace King, and notwithstanding the King used force to compel them, yet the archbishop, with the rest, continued resolute in their refusal, upon which his goods were again confiscated (i).

During his dissensions with the King, his courage was so great, that he interdicted King Stephen and the whole realm, and taking advantage of the times, which were very troublesome, he went into Norfolk and lived retired there, till by the interposition of some of the bishops, he was restored to the King's favour, which he afterwards enjoyed, and was the chief means of concluding that final peace at Wallingford, between him and the Empress Maud.

In 1151, he, as being legate of the apostolic see, celebrated a general council in the middle of Lent, at London, at which K. Stephen and his son Eustace, were both present (k). After K. Stephen's death, he crowned K. Henry II, at Westminster, in the presence of the archbishop of York and other bishops. Q. Alianor, who had been divorced from Lewis, K. of France, being crowned at the same time (l).

By his last will, which is printed from the registers of this church (m), he gave whatever he had remaining, at the hour of his death, to the use of the poor; intimating that he had already given them almost all he had, reserving to himself only so much, as was absolutely necessary for the occasions of his family, and for the exigencies of his own languishing condition. Having sat in this see for 22 years, he died purely of age, on April 18, 1161 (n), beloved by all people for his courteous disposition, and was buried in his own church, in the east end of the chapel of the Holy Trinity, opposite to the tomb of Lanfranc, but when this chapel was demolished to build up the present one, archbishop Theobald's remains were removed and buried before the altar of St. Mary, in the nave of this church, in a leaden chest, the place which he had desired in his life time, and a marble tomb as before, was placed over him (o). He is said to have been a man of no great learn-

(d) See M. Paris, &c. Gervas, col. 1348, 1665. R. de Diceto, col. 507.

(e) Gervas, col. 1348, 1665. Though the title of legate of the apostolic see had been before conferred on his predecessor, yet this archbishop seems to have been the first who had that of Legatus Natus conferred on him, by pope Innocent II. This title was retained until archbishop Cranmer's time, when the pope's authority ceasing, a decree passed in the synod, anno 1534, that the archbishops, laying aside that title, should be styled primates and metropolitans of all England. Parker, in Cranmer's Life.

(f) Gervas, col. 1588.

(g) R. de Diceto, col. 509. Gervas, col. 1666.

(h) Gervas, col. 1363.

(i) H. Hunt. l. viii, p. 395. Parker Antiq. Brit. Eccl. p. 127. Gervas, col. 1371, 1668; and others.

(k) Gervas, col. 1369, 1667.

(l) M. Paris, p. 88. Gervas, col. 1376, 1668. R. de Diceto, col. 529.

(m) Ang. Sacr. p. xi, p. 11.

(n) In 1160. Chron. Tables, col. 2255. Among the Chartæ Antiq. of the dean and chapter, in their treasury, are several seals of this archbishop appendent to them, viz. one oval; archbishop robed with pall, crozier, &c. blessing—Counterseal, a head bearded in profile; legend SIGNUM SECRETUM, marked A 69-74-84—One 3 $\frac{3}{8}$ by 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ diam. H. 145—One 3 $\frac{1}{4}$ by 2 $\frac{1}{4}$ diam. archbishop sitting robed and mitred, with crozier, blessing; legend SIGILLUM THEOBALDI DEI GRATIA CANTUARIENSIS archiep. Counterseal, as before, p. 115-122-123.—One 3 by 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ diam. the archbishop robed, blessing, his crozier in his left hand; legend SIGILLUM THEOBALDI DEI GRA ARCHIEPISCOPI CANTUARIENSIS. No counterseal. R. 1. 2. 65-89.

(o) Gervas says, that on the demolition of the chapel, when the tomb of archbishop Theobald, which was constructed of marble, was opened, and the stone coffin was discovered; on the removing of the upper stone of it, he appeared perfect and stiff, adhering together by the bones and nerves, and a small degree of skin and flesh. The spec

ARCHBISHOPS.

THOMAS BECKET.

ing, but of gentle and affable behaviour, being wife withal, that he was highly esteemed by all ranks of people, and charitable to the poor in a very extensive degree.

Gervas says, he was a great enemy to his own convent of Christ church (p), which well agrees with the general character given of him. The archbishop is said to bear for his arms—Azure, 3 bars or, a chief dancette gules.

39. THOMAS BECKET, the King's chancellor, succeeded as archbishop in 1162, after the see had continued vacant little more than a year. He was born in London in 1119, being the son of Gilbert Becket, a merchant of good note, his mother Maud being a Syrian by birth (q). He was first educated at the monastery of Merton, from whence he went to Oxford, and was made chaplain to archbishop Theobald, after which he studied in the universities of Paris and Bononia, the most celebrated seats of learning in those times, in the latter of which he made a great proficiency in the civil law; on his return, he proceeded S. T. P. at Oxford, and being greatly in the favour of the archbishop, he was received into his family, and made by him archdeacon of Canterbury, and provost of Beverly, after which he was preferred to the parsonage of Bromfield, and of St. Mary le Strand, and to prebends in the churches of St. Paul and Lincoln, and was made one of the King's chaplains (r); and lastly, at that prelate's earnest entreaty, he was promoted to be chancellor of England in 1154 (s), in which station he became a perfect courtier, and carried himself so highly to the King's satisfaction, not only by his dexterity in the management of the affairs of his office, but by his splendid manner of living, and by his affable and engaging behaviour, that he became his chief favourite and the companion of his amusements. The King was in Normandy when he heard of archbishop Theobald's death, and immediately resolved to raise the chancellor to the primacy, in hopes of governing the church of England, by his means, in perfect tranquility. The Empress Maud, the King's mother, endeavoured to dissuade her son from this design, and the clergy and bishops of England opposed this promotion, which retarded it above a year; but such was the King's partiality to his favourite, that he was deaf to all advice, and through his directions, Becket was elected archbishop on June 3, 1162 (t), and being then only a deacon, he was, on the eve of Trinity Sunday, ordained a priest in Christ church in Canterbury, and the next day, being then 44 years of age, he was consecrated in the same church, by the bishop of Winchester, though not without great altercation among the bishops concerning their right to the performance of this ceremony, and he afterwards received his pall there (u).

As soon as Becket found himself seated in the archiepiscopal chair, he suddenly changed his whole deportment and manner of life, and from the greatest and most luxurious courtier, became the most austere and solemn monk. One of the most remarkable actions after his promotion to it, which equally irritated and surprized the spectators were surprized, and placing him on the bier, thus carried him to the vestry; mean while, the story was divulged abroad, and many on account of his unusual preservation, styled him St. Theobald. He was taken out of his tomb, his corpse uncorrupted, and his linen garments entire; and by order of the convent, he was buried before the altar of St. Mary, as above-mentioned, which stood at the east end of the north isle of the nave of this church, that is, in the old nave of it, before it was pulled down by archbishop Sudbury; since which, we have heard no more of St. Mary's altar. Probably those were his remains, which were discovered on the new paving of the choir, a few years ago, in the wall at the north east end of the present nave, as has been mentioned above, in the account of this church; but there is no knowledge left of any tomb for him here. Of late years, the marble tomb in the Trinity chapel against the south wall has been supposed to have been his, but how true, the above account shews. Weever, in his Funeral Monuments, p. 27, has given the following inscription, as having been on his tomb:—Hic jacet THEOBALDUS Cantuar. archiepiscopus ob morum placabilitatem atq; constantiam. Hen. II. valde graciosus, affabilis, veridicus, prudens, & amicus firmus, in omnes liberalis, & in pauperes munificus; qui sue tandem senectutis & languidæ vitæ pertæsus anteaquam vitam morti perfolvit. An. Dom. 1160 cum 22 annis sedisset. Anima ejus requiescat in pace. Amen.—If this epitaph was ever on his tomb, that last mentioned could not belong to him.

(p) Col. 1367, 1666.

(q) Mary, the archbishop's sister, was in 1172, made abbess of Barking in Essex. Chron. Tables, col. 2250.

VOL. IV.

8 P

(r) Weever, p. 199.

(s) Spelman. Gloss. verbum Cancellarius, says, he continued chancellor till 1162, when being made archbishop, he resigned. M. Paris says, he was made chancellor in 1155.

(t) The election of Thomas Becket was made, as those writers say, who favoured the claim of the bishops to a right of election, in an assembly of the clergy of the whole province of Canterbury, who were solemnly called together for this purpose at London, and that the election was proclaimed by the bishop of Winchester, in the refectory of St. Peter's at Westminster, without opposition or contradiction. But the monk of Canterbury, on the contrary, says, that the King sent his mandate requiring the prior and some of his monks to meet the bishops and clergy, then assembled at London, to choose an archbishop; upon which, the prior with some of the elder monks of his church went thither, where they found the bishops convened, and after much discourse had passed between them, concerning the election, the prior and his monks elected and proclaimed Thomas, the King's chancellor, to be archbishop; and Stephen Birchington, a monk of Canterbury, likewise says, that Becket was elected by the prior, with the consent of his whole convent. On the whole it seems plain, that the archbishop was first elected, and proclaimed elect by the bishops; and that afterwards to continue their right, the prior and his monks proceeded to a new election of the same person. See R. de Diceto, col. 553. Gervas, col. 1382. Decem. Script. col. 711, &c. See Matthew Paris, Birchington, Hoveden, and others, Gervas, 1669, Battely, pt. 2, p. 150.

(u) Gervas, col. 1382.

King,

ARCHBISHOPS.

THOMAS BECKET

King, was his resignation of his office of chancellor the next year, without having ever consulted the King's inclination, or having given him the least intimation of his design. Before the King returned to England in Jan. 1163, he had received so many complaints of the archbishop's severities, that he became sensible, when it was too late, of his having made a wrong choice; when the archbishop therefore waited on him at Southampton, it was plainly observed, that he was not received with the same marks of friendship, as on former occasions. The King at the same time gave a still plainer proof of his dissatisfaction, by obliging him to resign the archdeaconry of Canterbury, which he did with great reluctance.

Pope Alexander III. held a general council of the prelates in his interest, at Tours, in April 1163, and the archbishop was present at it, and was treated with every mark of respect and honour by the Pope and his cardinals, who were not ignorant that vanity and the love of admiration, were Becket's predominant passions. It is highly probable, that at this interview, the archbishop was animated by the Pope in his design of becoming the champion for the liberties of the church and the immunities of the clergy; thus much, at least, is certain, that soon after his return, he began to prosecute his design with less reserve than formerly, which produced an open breach between the King and him, the archbishop maintaining with much passion and peremptory obstinacy, that the clergy were subject only to the laws of the church, and amenable only to spiritual courts, and to be punished only by ecclesiastical censures; to which may be added the archbishop's claim to several rights and privileges belonging to the see of Canterbury, which were withheld from it, and which he then demanded to be restored to it (v).

These differences caused the long and troublesome contest which followed; to avoid the King's resentment, Becket fled abroad (w), where he staid, till a feigned reconciliation took place between them; but fresh discontents soon arising, the King obliged him to confine himself within the precincts of his church, where he resided in great solitude, receiving daily accounts of fresh insults offered to his friends, and depredations committed on his estates, he was obstinate in his pursuit, though he foresaw it would not end without bloodshed, and that he himself would be the victim of it. So much is written in all our chronicles and histories concerning these unhappy differences, that there is hardly any one that is not acquainted with them, and therefore the less necessary to repeat them here more at large. The archbishop's life has been written by several, and in particular by John Grandison, bishop of Exeter (x), and one of a much later date, printed in English at Cologne, in 1639, and dedicated to the archbishop of Calcedon.

(v) Archbishop Becket required of the King the custody of the castle of Rocheſter, the castle of Saltwood, and Hythe, which he claimed, as especially belonging to the domain of his see. Of the earl of Clare, he required the homage of the castle of Tunbridge, with the adjacent lowy; the see likewise of William de Ros, and others of the like sort. Gervas, col. 1384, 1669.

At length the archbishop put the finishing stroke to the series of vexations which he had suffered, by pronouncing at the end of his sermon, which he preached on Christmas-day, in his cathedral, a sentence of excommunication against Ralph de Broc, his great enemy, Robert de Broc, and almost all the King's most familiar servants, and that with visible marks of the most violent anger in his voice and countenance.

Soon after this the archbishop of York, with the bishops of London and Salisbury, arriving in Normandy, threw themselves at the King's feet, and implored his protection from that disgrace and ruin with which they were threatened by the archbishop, painting the violence of his proceedings, against themselves and others whom Becket had excommunicated, in such strong colours, that Henry fell into one of those fits of passion to which he was liable, lamenting bitterly, that no one would deliver him from this turbulent priest, or revenge the continual injuries he received from him. This passionate exclamation made too deep an impression on those who heard him, particularly on four of his courtiers, Reginald Fitzurse, William Tracy, Hugh de Morville and Richard Bryto, who bound themselves by an oath, either to terrify Becket into a dutiful submission, or to put him to death.

Having laid their plain, they left the court at different times, and took different routes to prevent suspicion, and meeting together near Canterbury, on Dec. 28, they settled the whole scheme of their proceedings, and next morning early set out thither, accompanied by a body of resolute men, with arms concealed under their cloaths, and these they placed in different parts of the city, to prevent any interruption from the citizens. The four principals then went unarmed, with twelve of their company to the archiepiscopal palace, where they found the archbishop sitting and conversing with some of his clergy; after a long silence which ensued, Reginald Fitzurse informed the archbishop, that they were sent by the King's command to him, to ab-

(w) R. de Diceto, col. 537. Bromton, col. 1052. Gervas, col. 1384.

(x) See R. de Diceto, 512, 536, 550. Gervas, col. 1671. Bromton, col. 1064. Leland's Coll. vol. iii, p. 422. Gervas, col. 1670, mentions the names of several who had written the archbishop's life.

solve

ARCHBISHOPS.

THOMAS BECKET.

solve the prelates and others, whom he had excommunicated, and then to go to Winchester and make satisfaction to the young King, whom he had endeavoured to dethrone; on this, a violent and very long altercation ensued, in the course of which they gave several hints, that his life was in danger if he did not comply; but he remained undaunted in his refusal. At their departure his friends blamed him for the roughness of his answers, which had inflamed the fury of his enemies, and earnestly pressed him to make his escape; but he only answered, that he had no need of their advice, and knew what he had to do. Reginald Fitzurse and his three companions, finding their threats ineffectual, put on their coats of mail, and taking each a sword and a battle-axe in their hands, returned in the afternoon to the palace, and having at last gained admittance, for it had been shut, they searched throughout it for the archbishop, who had been hurried, during the cry which their entrance armed had occasioned, almost by force into the church, hoping, that the sacredness of the place would protect his person from violence, and they would have shut the door of it, but he would not permit them. The assassins having searched the palace throughout came next to the church, which they entered promiscuously with the crowd, it being about the time of vespers, thro' the door from the cloyster, where they found the archbishop, who having entered it had passed thro' the nave, and was standing on the third or fourth step in the lower north wing, going upwards to the choir. Upon their entrance the foremost of them cried out aloud, Where is the traitor? where is the archbishop? Upon which the archbishop turned back and came down the steps, saying Here is no traitor, but here is the archbishop, here I am! Upon which William Tracy seized on him by the robe and a scuffle ensued, and by the blows which he received from them altogether, his skull was cloven almost in two, and his brains were scattered about on the pavement (y), and he sunk down lifeless at the altar of St. Benedict (z). Thus fell archbishop Becket, on December 29, 1170, in the fifty-third year of his age, and the ninth of his pontificate.

He was evidently a man of great abilities, particularly of consummate cunning, undaunted courage, and inflexible constancy in the prosecution of his designs; but his schemes were of a most pernicious tendency. On the other hand, he was vain, obstinate, and implacable, as little affected by the intreaties of his friends as by the threats of his enemies, and his ingratitude to the King, his benefactor, admits of no excuse, and has fixed an indelible stain on his character. Though his murderers were highly criminal, his death was very seasonable, and probable prevented much mischief and confusion. Few events in history have made a greater noise than this murder, which was generally imputed to the King's commands, and represented as the most execrable deed that had ever been perpetrated (a).

Some affirm archbishop Becket to have been the founder of St. Thomas's, alias Eastbridge hospital, in Canterbury; but others suppose its origin to have been of a much earlier date, of which further mention will be found in the account of that hospital. There are several treatises written by archbishop Becket, among the Bodleian and Harleian MSS.

The apprehensions of the the thunders of church of Rome had such an effect upon the King, that he appeared exceedingly shocked at the murder, and immediately sent his ambassadors to the Pope, to clear himself from the guilt of this deed, who were but roughly received by his Holiness and the court of Rome; nor could they procure the King's pardon till they had strengthened their application (Romano More, as Gervas calls it) by a present of 500 marcs, and by swearing, in the name of the King, that he would submit himself to whatever judgment, that church should impose on him. On these conditions they obtained, that neither he nor his kingdom should be laid under sentence of suspension or excommunication (b).

To obtain this peace with the Pope, the King on his return to England, in the humble habit of a pilgrim, and his feet naked, walked thro' the city to the tomb of Becket, where, having prostrated himself in sorrowful repentance, he underwent afterwards, in the chapter-house, the punishment of being whipped by every one of the monks, and some writers say, by all others of the clergy present, bishops, abbats, and others, some giving three lashes, and others five, with much harshness and severity. The next night he passed on the bare ground at the tomb, with fasting and prayers and much outward sign of

(y) It is a vulgar notion that the stones of the pavement on which he fell down dead, have still the marks of his blood stained on them, but it is a mistaken one; for those stones have been removed several hundred years ago, being carried away by Benedict the prior, to the abbey of Peterborough, where he made two altars of them, in 1177. See Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 22. On one of the stones there is at this time, a small square piece neatly let into it, perhaps in the room of a part of the stone which might have been stained with his blood, and was probably taken away as a valuable relic of the saint.

(z) See W. Neubrigen. l. ii, c. 25. Gervas, col. 1414. Bromton, col. 1063. Hoveden, p. 525. Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 629, Speed, Hollinshed, and other chroniclers. After the murder the assassins fled to Knareborough in Yorkshire, which then belonged to Hugh de Moreville.

(a) See Bromton, col. 1095. Gervas, col. 1427.

(b) R. de Diceto, col. 556. Gervas, col. 1419.

affliction,

ARCHBISHOPS.

THOMAS BECKET†

affliction, and in the morning, having at his request heard mass, he departed from Canterbury with much appearance of joy; no doubt, at his having got through so disagreeable a business.

After the confusion which the murder of the archbishop occasioned in the church, and the concourse of people, which the tumult of it had brought together, had dispersed (c), the monks took the body and carried it to the great altar, where it remained till the next morning, when a rumour prevailing that the assassins would come and take the body away, and throw it without the walls, as a prey to the dogs and fowls of the air, the prior and convent, together with the abbat of Boxley, who happened to be present at the time, after consultation, resolved to bury it immediately, stripping it therefore of the hair-cloth and habit of a monk, which the archbishop always wore underneath, they cloathed it in his pontifical dress, and buried him in a new stone coffin in the crypt, at the east end of the undercroft of the church (d).

The monks tell us, that not long afterwards, miracles began to be wrought at his tomb, and in process of time throughout the whole world; and that there were in this church two volumes, filled with the records of these miracles. The fame of them and the still more prevailing reason of his dying in defence of the privileges and immunities of the church, procured him the honour of being inrolled in the list of saints, by a formal canonization from Pope Alexander III, whose bull declaratory of it, bore date March 13, and our historians place it in the year 1172 (e). In the ecclesiastical history, as it is styled, of the life of St. Thomas, it is said, that there is a manuscript in the Vatican library, in which it is recorded, that among the acts of the above-mentioned Pope, in the beginning of the year 1173 (computing the year to begin in January) upon the feast of the Purification, the Pope assembling together at Signia, the bishops and abbats of Campania, celebrated a solemn mass in honour of St. Thomas the martyr, and ordained, that the memory of his passion should be celebrated for ever

(c) The church of Canterbury, after the death of Becket, remained in a most dirty condition, occasioned by the multitude of people who had flocked into it at the time of the murder; the celebration of divine service was suspended, the ornaments were taken away from the altars, the pillars were stripped, and the cross was veiled as in the time of Lent, and the whole rendered a place of solitude, and the sound of bells and the voice of chaunting was heard no more, and divine service ceased in the church for almost a year. The suffragan bishops therefore met on the feast of St. Thomas the apostle, to reinstate the mother church of Canterbury, cast down by this long suspension, and to restore it by command of the pope to its former state, and to the great joy of the clergy and people of Canterbury, Bartholomew, bishop of Exeter, at their petition, celebrated a solemn mass, and preached to them, that to upon the 29th day of Dec. and that he published his apostolical letter concerning his canonization, on the fourth of the ides of March, at Signia, directed to the clergy of the church of Canterbury, and the like letters to all Christian people whatever; and this declaration of the Pope being soon known in all places, the reports of his miracles were every where sounded abroad.

Hence a blind devotion lead vast crowds of zealous people to his tomb; kings, princes, noblemen and all ranks of people resorted to it, to be forgiven, through his merit, for their sins, and to insure his protection and the certain success of their undertakings in future, all of whom came with their hands filled with rich oblations, to offer at his tomb, which produced an almost incredible income to this church, even whilst his body lay in the undercroft (ee). In the meantime, a new chapel, at the upper part of the east end of the church (in the room of the former one, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, which had been demolished) was prepared with all splendor and magnificence, ready for this new saint to be placed there, and an altar erected in it, both chapel and altar being called by his name, nay the whole church lost its former name, and was thenceforth called the church of St. Thomas the martyr (f).

On July 7, in the year 1220, this saint was translated from his tomb in the undercroft to his shrine; the ceremony of it was performed with the greatest solemnity and rejoicings. Pandulph, the Pope's legate, and the archbishops of Canterbury and Rheims, assisted by many bishops and abbats, carried the coffin on their shoulders, and placed it on the new shrine; the King too graced this solemnity with his royal presence; but the expences arising from this ceremony was so great to Stephen Langton, then archbishop of Canterbury, that it left a debt upon this archbishopric, which Boniface, his fourth successor, could hardly discharge (g). Let us now view this saint placed in his new shrine, the object of adoration, and consider the excessive honours done to him.

the days spent in grief they should oppose the comfort of the celebration of joy. R. de Diceto, col. 558. Gervas, col. 1417, 1421, 1672.

(d) R. de Diceto, col. 555. Bromton, col. 1063. Gervas, col. 1413, 1417, 1672.

(e) R. de Diceto, col. 715, in whose history the bull is twice printed.

(ee) See a more particular account of those who from time to time visited this tomb and shrine, and the offerings they made at them, above.

(f) The legend of St. Thomas Becket was curiously represented in the windows of this chapel, great part of them remain at this time; the colours of them are very beautiful.

(g) Besides other vast expences of the sumptuous entertainment made in his palace, he provided at his own cost,

ARCHBISHOPS.

LANFRANC.

The titles of glorious, saint, and martyr were conferred upon him immediately after his death, and were confirmed by a speedy and formal canonization; his murder and death were usually styled his martyrdom and passion. The reports of his miracles were published every where; the humblest devotions and richest oblations were poured forth at the foot of his shrine, where his altar was continually frequented by crowds of people of all ranks and nations; the relics of the saint, even the meanest things that had any relation to him, as his hair, his shirt, his cloaths, and his shoes, were obtained as invaluable trea-asures by all who could procure them, either by purchase or favour; and several cathedral and monastical churches obtained some of them (b), and thought themselves rich and happy in the possession of them; his effigies was engraved on many seals of the public bodies (i) and religious houses, with the arms he bore, being—Argent, 3 cornish ebougs sable; and besides this veneration, there were erected and dedicated to his honour in many places, altars, churches and chapels; of the latter, the ruins of one remained till within these few years, in the grounds of St. Gregory's priory; underneath is a representation of it.

St. Thomas's Chapel, Canterbury.

The profit continually flowing in to the convent from the oblations made at this shrine, enriched it amazingly, with a large and constant annual income, and enabled the monks to rebuild and adorn this church magnificently from time to time, and it continued as a plentiful supply to them till the reformation, when the hay and oats on the road between London and Canterbury, for the horses of all who came to the solemnity; and he caused several pipes and conduits to run with wine, in several parts of the city. Battely, p. 19.

(b) Many of his relics, as well as of every part of his cloathing, were pretended by the monks of Glastonbury, to be in that abbey. Dugd. Monast. vol. i, p. 7.

(i) His effigies was on the antient seal of the city of London, and on that of London-bridge. See Stow's Survey, B. iii, p. 128—B. iv, p. 24. The seal of the cathedral of Canterbury was changed, and had on one side of it, the representation of his martyrdom, added on it; a like representation was made on that of East-bridge, and the poor priests hospitals in Canterbury. Several of the archbishops had his martyrdom represented on their seals, in preference to their own effigies, and others on the reverse of their seals.—Numbers of private seals had a like representation of it, and no doubt but there were many other religious societies who did the same throughout the kingdom.

(k) See a further account of this shrine from Erasmus, above; and of the demolishing of it, and the total abolishing of the festival of St. Thomas, and every other honour paid to him, even to the mention of his name, and the erasing it and his figure out of all books, writings, windows, &c. by the King's command, at the time of the dissolution of this monastery by K. Henry VIII, related above. Besides the annual profits arising to the convent, from these oblations at St. Thomas's shrine, there was another, which tho' it happened more seldom, yet it was productive of incredible gain to it. This was the grant of a jubilee, made by the pope to this church, in honour of this saint; the first of which was solemnized here in 1220, on the translation of his body from the undercroft to his shrine, just fifty years after his death; and there were six more at the same distance of fifty years between each of them; the last being in 1520, at all which, plenary indulgences were granted to the church of Canterbury, for all such as should visit and offer their oblations at the saint's shrine, and the multitudes that flocked to the city on these occasions is scarce credible. See farther particulars of these jubilees, above; and Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 51.

After archbishop Becket's death, K. Henry II. granted licence to the prior and convent, to choose a successor, not recommending any particular persons, but advising and requiring them to make choice of a person of gravity and prudeance,

ARCHBISHOPS.

dence, and of a gentle disposition. In this election, the disputes between the bishops and the prior and convent were carried to a great height, and there were great contests concerning the right of election; at last the former were willing to compromise the matter, and to act jointly with the monks in it; but to this and other proposals made by them, the convent would by no means acquiesce, and the cause was referred to the King, who, nevertheless, left it wholly undetermined; in short, neither threats nor intreaties prevailing on the prior to give up his claim, he seems to have persisted in it, and the convent elected Robert, abbat of Bec, and when he could not be prevailed on to accept of this dignity, they made a second choice, and elected Richard, prior of Dover; upon which the bishop of London stood up, and with the consent of the other bishops, as it appears, to give some colour to their having jointly made the election, said aloud, we elect Richard, prior of Dover, and proclaimed him archbishop elect accordingly (l).

But the archbishop, on his arriving at Rome, found that the new King, desirous of hindering the Pope's approbation of this election, had sent his agents there to request him not to confirm it, as having been made against his consent, notwithstanding which, the Pope himself consecrated the archbishop elect (m).

40. RICHARD, prior of Dover, being thus accordingly constituted, was consecrated archbishop of Canterbury in 1174 (n), after the see had been vacant for two years and five months. He was a Norman by birth, and was first a monk of this church, and made chaplain to archbishop Theobald, afterwards prior of Dover, and then promoted to this archbishopric. In 1175, being the legate of the apostolic see, he celebrated a provincial council at Westminster, at which were present two Kings, eleven English bishops of his province, the bishop of St. David's in Wales, and several abbats, &c. In 1176, he is recorded to have given 1000 marks towards the foundation of London-bridge (o), and was a benefactor to that of Rochester, and a considerable one to his own convent; and he is said to have founded a nunnery at Remsted in Suffex (p).

Whilst at his palace at Wrotham, this archbishop had a most fearful dream, and next morning setting out on his journey towards Rochester, the remembrance of it terrified him so much, that he could not refrain from disclosing it to

(l) R. de Diceto, col. 561, 563, 570. See the Variantes Lectiones, at the end of Decem. Script. Gervas, col. 1423, 1425. Battely, pt. 2, p. 48.

(m) Bromton, col. 1093, 1101. Gervas, col. 1429, 1674.

(n) Gervas, col. 1674.

(o) Stow's Survey, Bk. i, p. 53.

RICHARD.

his attendants, and having done so, he was immediately afterwards stricken with such a horror and chill cold, that he was forced to alight in his way, at Halling, a palace belonging to the bishop of Rochester, where he in torment ended his life the next day, being Feb. 16, 1184 (q), having sat in this see ten years and eight months. He was honourably interred in his own cathedral, in the lady chapel, not in that now in being, but a more antient one, included in the old body of the church at the upper end of the north isle of it (r), in which place his remains were found, in digging a grave, about 60 years ago. A writer has given him the character of having been a harmless, illiterate man, who did not interfere in any great matters, but prudently contented himself with those within the bounds of his own capacity (s).

He is said by some to have been a good preacher, and to have had a considerable share of learning. He was taxed with not keeping up the strictness of church discipline, and of being negligent of his archiepiscopal duty, in securing the privileges of his church, but this must have been in comparison of the steps followed by his predecessor, and his writings were far different, being against these disturbers, and as to his own church, he was a good friend and benefactor to it, laying out much in improving the revenues of it, and repairing the houses belonging to his see.

Among the Carte Antiquæ, in the dean and chapter's treasury, are several seals of this archbishop appendant to them, viz. one the archbishop standing robed, pall and mitred, having his cross in his left hand, blessing; legend, SIGILLUM RICARDI DEI G. CANTUARIENSIS ARCHIEPISCOPI. Small counterseal, archbishop standing, half length, on a shield of arms A. 83. p. 122, 124. He bore for his arms—Azure, between 2 bendlets, 3 mullets argent.

In the election of a successor in this see, the contentions between the bishops and the convent of Canterbury increased more and more; for Pope Lucius sent his letters mandatory to the suffragan bishops and the prior and convent, by which they were required to elect an archbishop. They all met at Reading, where the King then was, and afterwards at Windsor, but could not come to any agreement. At last they met at London, where the bishops elected Baldwin, bishop of Worcester, and sent their letters to the Pope to notify his

(p) Tan. Mon. p. 558.

(q) Gervas, col. 1465, 1675. Weever, p. 218. Chron. Tab. col. 2257.

(r) Battely's Souner, p. 127.

(s) See Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 229, ex Chron. Gul. Parvi Novoburgensis.

election;

ARCHBISHOPS.

election; but the monks absolutely refused to be present at it, upon which the King himself came to Canterbury, and persuaded the monks to return to London, where Baldwin declared, in the presence of the King and them, that he never would enter that church without their free consent. This so far prevailed, that the monks being left alone to themselves in their chapter, declared the election made by the bishops void, but that he the prior, to whom this office did of right belong, and his brethren there present, with the common consent of the whole church of Canterbury, did elect Baldwin, bishop of Worcester, to be archbishop of Canterbury, and then proceeded to the usual solemnities of the election; they then sent their letters supplicatory to the Pope, to confirm their election (t).

41. Baldwin, bishop of Worcester, was thus accordingly elected archbishop in 1184, with the consent of, as well the suffragan bishops of this province, as of the convent of Christ church, and this with the King's approbation. He was born at Exeter, but of mean extraction, and was made archdeacon of Totness, by Bartholomew, bishop of Exeter; after which, he took on him the Cistercian habit in Ford abbey, and after a few years was made abbat there, and then bishop of Worcester (u), from whence he was translated to Canterbury, as above-mentioned; in 1184, and in the second year afterwards, was intronized and received his pall at Canterbury, on St. Dunstan's day (v).

His attempting to erect a college at Hackington, alias St. Stephen's, near Canterbury, occasioned such continual and bitter enmity and dissensions between him and the convent of Christ church, as created a lasting hatred between them (w). Accordingly, Gervas, who was one of them, with doleful lamentations, loads him with bitter reproaches for the continual injuries he did them, charging him with pouring his malice on

(t) See R. de Diceto, col. 619. Gervas, col. 1466, has related the whole of these proceedings; the reasons on which the bishops grounded their pretensions, and the answers and obstinacy of the monks, with whom nothing less could prevail than the King's coming himself to Canterbury, to intreat their return back to London, to make a new election of an archbishop. It is said, that in this business the monks at first in the King's presence elected the bishop of St. David's, to which the King gave his consent; but the matter being delayed and adjourned to London, the bishops by themselves elected Baldwin, as above-mentioned.

(u) Bromton, col. 1255.

(v) R. de Diceto, col. 628. Gervas, col. 1475.

(w) See a full account of this controversy, in vol. iii. of the History of Kent, under Hackington; and in Bromton, col. 1143, 1255. Gervas, col. 1303, 1676.

(x) Gervas, col. 1314, 1481, to col. 1574, 1676. See an account of the proceedings of archbishop Baldwin and the monks, concerning this building at Hackington, and continued under archbishop Hubert, with the letters written them, upon every occasion, even to threaten the ruin of their church (x).

BALDWIN—REGINALD FITZ JOCELINE.

In the year 1189, he crowned K. Richard I, with extraordinary solemnity at Westminster, on Sunday 3d Sept. and afterwards attended him in his crusade to the Holy War in Palestine, where he died at Tyre, during the siege of Acon, in the year 1190, and was there buried (y). He sat in this see near six years, and by his last will left all he possessed to the purpose of the Holy War, making Hugh, bishop of Salisbury, the executor of it (z).

Giraldus Cambrensis, who knew him personally, gives him the character of a learned and pious man; but says, he was of too mild and easy a temper, and had a great simplicity of mind and spirit, which prevented his acting with that discipline, as became his high station, and that the higher he moved in his stations, he filled them with a worse grace.

This archbishop first laid Wales to the province of Canterbury (a). He wrote a treatise, De Sacramento Altaris. The archbishop bore for his arms—Gules, 2 bendlets and a bordure argent.

In the election of an archbishop, after Baldwin's death, as well as the following one, the monks grew more wise and cunning than they had been before, and being before-hand with the bishops, gained their point; for when upon the death of Baldwin, the bishops, with some of the nobles, came to Canterbury, by the King's mandate, to elect an archbishop, the prior and convent immediately declared, that they had chosen Reginald, bishop of Bath, to be their archbishop elect, and by force placed him in the archiepiscopal chair, and afterwards made their canonical profession of obedience to him.

42. Reginald Fitz Joceline, bishop of Bath (b), a native of Lombardy, was accordingly the next archbishop of this see elect, in the year 1191; but the archbishop of Roan, then Justiciary to and from several great persons on the occasion, among the Harleian Mss. No. 788—1-2.

(y) See R. de Diceto, col. 647. Bromton, col. 1157. Knyghton, col. 1402. Gervas, col. 1549, 1587; and other writers. Our historians generally refer his death to the year 1191, at which time the messenger arrived in England with the news of it, which seems to have occasioned their mistake.

(z) R. de Diceto, col. 521, 658. Battely, pt. 2, p. 69.

(a) Battely's Somner, p. 127. Higden in his Polychron, p. 205, says, that long before this time the bishops of Wales, at the King's command, received their consecration at Canterbury; in token of which investiture and subjection, archbishop Boniface, in K. Henry III.'s time, solemnly celebrated mass, the first of any of the archbishops of Canterbury, in each of the cathedral churches of Wales.

(b) He was first promoted to the archdeaconry in the church of Salisbury, and was elected bishop of Bath at 33 years of age, to which church and Wells, he was an especial benefactor, and he built the hospital of St. John at Bath.

of

ARCHBISHOPS.

of England, not considering the election as valid, seized all the archbishop's revenues into the King's hands, but the elect notwithstanding, carried himself as metropolitan, in the hearing and deciding of all ecclesiastical causes, and without delay sent his agents to the Pope for his confirmation and pall; but before his agents could reach Rome he died, fourteen days after his election, on Christmas eve, and was buried in the cathedral church of Bath (c). He bore for his arms—Argent, a fess dancette, in the upper part a cross formee gules.

On the death of archbishop Reginald, the prior and convent made the like haste, as in the former election in the choice of an archbishop (d), for the King having sent his letters to the suffragan bishops to proceed to the election of an archbishop, the day appointed for it, was Sunday April 29; but on the day before, the monks, that they might be beforehand with the bishops, elected Hubert, bishop of Sarum, and the next day when they came to the place where the bishops were then met, for the purpose of election, the prior presented Hubert to the bishops, as having been elected by the convent the day before; notwithstanding which, the bishops proceeded to election, to save appearances, and the bishop of London proclaimed the same Hubert their archbishop elect, and here ended the contest, for Pope Innocent III, anno 1206, gave a peremptory decision of the dispute, in favour of the monks by his bull, which is still extant among the ar-

(c) Bromton, col. 1188. R. de Diceto, says, he died twenty-nine days after his nomination, on his birth-day at Dogmersfeld, in the diocese of Winchester, and was buried in his church of Bath, near the great altar, on the day of St. Thomas the martyr. See Gervas, col. 1580. Battely's Somner, p. 69, pt. 2, p. 69.

(d) Gervas takes no notice of Reginald's election, but says, col. 1679, that the see, after the death of Baldwin, continued vacant for two years and seven months; and that the convent having received the King's letters in favour of Hubert, bishop of Salisbury, to be elected their archbishop, they rejected the many petitions which they had had from the great men, and elected Hubert immediately in their chapter, and the next day presented him by the hands of Geoffry their prior, to the bishops at London.

(e) See R. de Diceto, col. 666. Gervas, col. 1579, 1679. In all these contests we may observe, that when the King sent his mandates, the bishops in general sided with him, and whomever he named they were ever ready to elect; but the monks were not so complying, and frequently shewed themselves stubborn and obstinate towards him; however, this exclusion of the bishops, though it left the prior and convent in the possession of the privilege of election, yet it turned out but little to their advantage, for the King remained on the one hand pre-emptory in his recommendation of a person to be elected archbishop, and on the other, what was still more grievous, the pope at this time by his authority took every opportunity to fill up the vacant sees by his bulls of provision, by which not only they, but most of the ecclesiastical dignities and rich benefices in England were disposed of at the pope's pleasure, whose power in it seems to have been irresistible; but chives of the church, in which the whole controversy is recited, which was prosecuted with much vigour on both sides, at the court of Rome (e).

HUBERT WALTER.

43. HUBERT WALTER, bishop of Salisbury, elected archbishop in 1193 (f), was a native of West Dereham in Norfolk (g), and had been dean of York, from whence he was promoted to the see of Salisbury, and attended K. Richard I, with archbishop Baldwin, to the Holy Land, where he signalized his skill in military affairs; but when the King was in his return from thence, taken and kept prisoner, he sent Hubert into England, to manage the affairs of the kingdom, when on the King's commendatory letters, he was elected archbishop, and received the pall and was introduced at Canterbury, in November, with much pomp (b), and was next year created legate of the apostolic see (i).

He crowned King Richard soon after his return at Winchester, in 1194, with great solemnity, in the presence of William, K. of Scotland, and others (k), and K. John afterwards, at Westminster, on Ascension Sunday, 1199, notwithstanding the appeal of the bishop of Durham, on behalf of the archbishop of York, who was then absent (l); and he again crowned that King and Isabel his last wife, in 1201 (m).

He had been constituted chief Justiciary of England in 1194, being then high immediate governor under K. Richard of all his dominions, both in England and Wales, he resigned that of-surely it is a matter of astonishment, how the King could bear for so long a time such an arrogant usurpation on his royal prerogative, or the clergy on the right and liberties of the British church. Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 49, 50.

(f) R. de Diceto, col. 669, anno 1192. Chron. Tab. col. 2257.

(g) The noble family of the Botelers of Ireland, are said to be descended from Theobald, second brother of this archbishop. Baronage of England, vol. i, p. 634.

(b) R. de Diceto, col. 671. Gervas, col. 1585, vii id. November.

(i) R. de Diceto, col. 679. He had conferred on him a plenitude of power, unheard of before by the common favour of all the cardinals.

(k) Gervas, col. 1586, 1679. Bromton, col. 1238.

(l) M. Paris, p. 169, 189. Bromton, col. 1282. Knyghton, col. 2408, 2414.

(m) R. de Diceto, col. 705, 707, Gervas, col. 1680. Battely's Somner, p. 127. By Gervas's account it should seem, that the archbishop crowned K. John three times. He says, that John, brother of K. Richard then deceased, came into England and was crowned at Westminster by Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, who was made the King's chancellor, and the same as governor of the kingdom; afterwards, in the next column he says, that the archbishop crowned K. John and his Queen Isabel at London, and then, that in the church of Canterbury, in the solemnity of Easter, he crowned the same and procured the necessaries for his expences at it, and though afterwards, by means of his enemies he lost the King's favour and his place of chancellor, yet by his prudence he afterwards regained it.

fice

ARCHBISHOPS.

WALTER.

rice in 1196, and was again appointed to it, for in 1198 he sat, with others, as such, in the King's court at Westminster, and was the next year appointed chancellor (n), in each of which he approved himself a wise, able and faithful minister of state (o). He was the first who devised our assize of bread, and our weights and measures of wine, oil, corn, &c. He encompassed the Tower of London with a strong wall and a deep moat, so that the water inclosed it all round, which before that time could never be effected; and he performed other great works of inestimable charge, such as his ecclesiastical revenues could never have enabled him to do, had not his great secular offices contributed to them (p).

His predecessor, Baldwin, having left the chapel at Lambeth, built in the room of that at Hackington, unfinished, archbishop Hubert carried the building on (q); but when it was just completed in 1199, he was forced to pull it down to the ground, by the papal bulls, which had been obtained, at the strong instance of the monks of Christ church, who were jealous likewise of this new foundation for seculars so near the archiepiscopal palace. This caused great difference between the archbishop and the monks, which being put to reference, the arbitrators in 1201, awarded, that the archbishop might build an ordinary church at Lambeth any where, but on the foundation of the former chapel, and place therein a certain number of canons, and endow the same (r); but the archbishop seems to have made no use of this agreement, and the design of it was entirely laid aside by him (s). Vexed at this disappointment, however, he turned his mind to his native place of West Derebam, in the county of Norfolk, where he built and endowed an abbey for Premonstratensian canons from Welbec, in honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary (t).

After which, having become possessed of the collegiate church of secular canons of Wolverhampton, by the resignation of it into his hands by the famous Peter Blefensis, then dean of it, that he might build an abbey there for monks of the Cistercian order; the archbishop began, about the fifth year of K. John, anno 1204, to put his intention for that purpose into execution; but, from what motives is not known, it seems never to have been finished, or fully settled; for we find the secular canons in the possession of it again not long after, and they still continue so (u). The archbishop celebrated a council at Westminster (v). He recovered to his church Saltwood, Hythe, the castle of Rochester, the fee of Geoffry de Ros, viz. the service of five knight's fees, and the homage of the earl of Clare, for the castle of Tunbridge; all which had been claimed by archbishop Becket, as belonging of right to his see, which had caused such dissention between that prelate and K. Henry II, as has been already mentioned above (w).

Having sat in the chair of this see almost 12 years, he died at his manor of Tenbam, on July 13, 1205, and was buried under a window in the south wall of his own cathedral, beside the choir, where his tomb, having his effigies lying at length on it, in his pontificals, is still remaining, being one of the most antient that this church affords to view; for it is observed that the most antient tombs in churches are thus situated in or along by the walls of them (x).

The archbishop in his life time much improved the buildings of his archbishopric, and at his death gave many things of great value to this convent, of which Gervas has recorded an inventory, and he gave 300 marcs to be expended for the benefit of his soul (y); besides which, he increased the privileges of his convent, and gave the church of Halstow to the library of it. He is said to have been very tall in person, of a generous and high spirit, and consummate resolution; of singular firmness in the management of the state, and of incomparable wisdom, and a true lover of his country; but he was better skilled in secular matters than in his station as metropolitan. He kept a splendid table, was hospitable to all strangers, and bountiful to the poor (z).

Among the Carte Antiquæ, in the dean and chap-

(n) Præfaturam, the chief justiceship. See Dugd. orig.

(o) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 69.

(p) Battely's Somner, p. 127.

(q) Gervas, col. 1591, says, the archbishop had once an intention of building this college at Maidstone, but afterwards changed it for Lambeth.

(r) Among the Archives of the dean and chapter in their treasury, is a deed of composition, made between this archbishop and the prior and convent of Christ church, concerning this chapel of Lamhea, and the confirmation of it, under the seals of the suffragans and others; and these seals appendant, viz. 1. Of the chapter of St. Paul's, London.—2. Henry, bishop of Landaff.—3. Roger, dean of Lincoln.—4. Samson, abbat of St. Edmundsbury.—5. John, bishop of Norwich.—6. Eustace, bishop of Ely.—7. William, bishop of London.—8. Hubert, archbishop.—9. John, cardinal Sti Stephani de monte Celi.—10. Gosfrid, bishop of Winchester.—11. Gilbert, bishop of Rochester.—12. Henry, bishop of Exeter.—13. Robert, bishop of Bangor.—14. Maugerius, bishop of Worcester.—15. Giles, bishop of Hereford.—16. Hospital of Jesus in London.—Another exemplification of the same date, with three seals; first, not named, but is of Eustace, bishop of Ely.—2. Samson, abbat of St. Edmundsbury.—3. Roger, dean of Lincoln; and another like the last, but in a smaller size, L. 344-356-394.

(s) See Mss. Cotton library, Vitellius A. viii, 5. M. de Diceto, col. 705, 707. Gervas, col. 1680. Tan. Mon. p. 540.

(t) Tan. Mon. p. 352. Leland's Collect. vol. i, p. 34.

(u) Tan. Mon. p. 490. (v) Gervas, col. 1681.

(w) Gervas, col. 1681. (x) Battely's Somner, p. 127.

(y) Gervas, col. 1683.

(z) Givaldus Cambrensis speaks of him very unhand-somely;

ARCHBISHOPS.

ter's treasury, is a seal of this archbishop appendant to one of them, 3 by 2 diam. the archbishop standing mitred, robed, pall, blessing; his crozier in his left hand; legend, SIGILLU DOMNI HUB. CANT. ARCHIEPISCOPI. The counterseal, Becket's murder, legend defaced. He bore for his arms—Quarterly, azure and argent, a cross or; in the 1st and 4th quarters, 5 mullets of the 1st; in the 2d and 3d, an eagle displayed sable.

After the death of archbishop Hubert, the prior and convent met in their chapter-house at Canterbury, to elect one to succeed him; but there was a division among them, for some of them were for electing John Gray, bishop of Norwich, a man of wisdom and learning, whom the King had recommended; and others were for electing Reginald, the sub-prior of the convent. On this disagreement both parties made their appeal to the Pope at Rome, who quickly decided the matter by declaring their election void, and giving them licence to make a new one in the court of Rome; upon which they all agreed in the choice of the bishop of Norwich, and requested the Pope's confirmation of it, which he at first assented to; but afterwards shewing much displeasure at it, he refused to admit of their choice, and suspended them from proceeding to any further election of an archbishop, so far as concerned the present turn; and the monks, who so lately withstood both King and bishops with an invincible stubbornness, now overcome with dread and consternation, humbled themselves to the Pope, and submitted themselves entirely to his will and pleasure, who commanded them to choose Stephen Langton, a man firmly attached to him, for their archbishop, whom they accordingly immediately elected (a).

44. STEPHEN LANGTON being chosen archbishop by a few monks at the court of Rome, as above-mentioned, was consecrated by the Pope himself at Viterbo, in 1207. He was descended from an ancient family in Leicestershire, brought up at the university of Paris, where he was greatly esteemed by the King of France and all the nobility there, for his singular learning, and was made chancellor of Paris, and afterwards by the Pope created a cardinal, by the title St. Chryfogone. The King being informed of these proceedings of the Pope, and knowing that the new bishop was a great favourite, and one who was familiarly entertained by his inveterate formely; and Thorn, col. 1340, represents him in a very odious light, especially for his pride and ignorance; but the archbishop's being a bitter enemy to St. Augustine's monastery, most probably occasioned this harsh, and at the same time, perhaps, untrue character from the Chronicler of that monastery.

(a) Knyghton, col. 2414, 2417. Battely, pt. 2, p. 50. See the definitive sentence of pope Innocent III, anno 1206, in the controversy of the suffragans of the church of Can- enemy the K. of France, was highly displeased at the Pope's conduct, and forbade the archbishop elect to enter the realm, and notwithstanding the pontiff's menacing letters, continued resolute to prevent it; upon which the Pope put the King and realm under an interdict, persuaded all other potentates to make war upon him, and promised the King of France the kingdom of England itself, if he would invade it. The trouble this brought on the King, even to the resignation of his kingdom, is too long to insert here, and may be found in all the public histories. However unwilling the King might be to admit the archbishop into the kingdom, and the possession of the archbishopric, it was what he found himself unable to resist, and this the archbishop knew so well, that he took the opportunity of it to pursue his enmity to the King with incessant malice, and he accordingly sided with the Pope and the rest of the prelates and clergy against him. King John's abject submission to both, shews the humiliating alternative he was reduced to, when he was necessitated to resign his kingdom to the former, and to recompence the latter largely for the damages they had sustained; for this purpose we find that he issued his mandate for the payment of 15,000 marcs to the archbishop and other bishops (b), besides many gratifications of privileges, liberties and preferments to them, and their several churches; to the archbishop in particular he granted the patronage of the bishoprick of Rochester, with all its appurtenances, to hold to him and his successors for ever (c). In consequence of the above mandate, the archbishop held a council at Reading, for the recompence of the clergy, in the goods which had been taken from them by K. John, and he himself had 3000 marcs, and the residue of the clergy 12,000 marcs allotted to them (d).

STEPHEN LANGTON.

Though H. Knyghton says (e), that K. Henry III. was on the death of his father K. John, crowned at Gloucester in 1217, by Guallo, the Pope's legate, in the presence of the archbishop of Canterbury; yet M. Paris, who wrote in that age, and T. Walsingham, who wrote but in the latter end of K. Richard II.'s reign, seem rather to be credited before him, who take no notice of the archbishop's being present, which they certainly would have done, had it been so; but in 1220 that King was again crowned at Westminster on Whit-sunday, when archbishop Langton perterbury with the monks of Christ church, concerning the election of an archbishop, at which, the suffragans contended that they ought to be present. Spelman's Councils, tom. ii, p. 130. (b) Pat. anno 15 Joh. m. 5.

(c) Pat. 16 Joh. m. 15. Prynne, tom. ii, p. 282; tom. iii, p. 16, 24, 90. The charter is inserted in Wilkins's Councils, tom. i, anno 1214, p. 546.

(d) See Leland's Collect. vol. ii, p. 534.

(e) Col. 2427, 2429.

formed

ARCHBISHOPS.

formed that solemnity, in the presence of Pandulph, the Pope's legate, the bishops, earls, barons, and other great men of the kingdom (f).

There is but little more to mention concerning him, only that he changed the parish church of Ulcomb in this county into a collegiate church, the ordination of which is among the records of Christ church; and that in 1220, he performed the solemnity of the translation of archbishop Becket's body from the undercroft to the shrine prepared for it, in the upper part of the church; the sumptuous and costly entertainment of which made at Canterbury was so great, that it left a debt on the see, which was not discharged till some years after his death (g).

Having sat as archbishop for upwards of 22 years, he died at his park of Slindon, on July 9, 1228 (h), and was buried in his own cathedral, in the chapel of St. Michael, where his tomb, being a plain raised one, coffin fashioned, having a cross palee insculped on the top, is still remaining (i); but the chapel having been afterwards pulled down, and rebuilt on a smaller scale, this tomb, which is at the east end of it, is now left partly within and partly without the wall of the chapel, which crosses the middle of it (k).

There is a Commentary on the Scriptures, and some other tracts of this archbishop, among the Bodleian Mss. and he is said to have first divided the Bible into chapters, in the manner they are at present (l). Archbishop Parker says, he wrote many things elegantly and judiciously, and in particular the history of the reign of K. Richard I. K. Henry III. issued his close writ, dated July 22, in his 12th year, to the committees of the temporalities of the archbishopric of Canterbury, to deliver all the goods of archbishop Langton to his executors to perform his will, and to enquire and certify what stock he received, and how to dispose of the corn then growing (m).

Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the dean and chapter's treasury, are several seals of this archbishop appendant to them, viz. one oval, $3\frac{1}{2}$ by $2\frac{1}{4}$ diam. the archbishop standing, mitred, robed, pall; in his left hand his crozier, blessing; legend, SIGILLU STEPHANI DI GRATIA CANTUARIENSIS ARCHIEPISCOPI—Reverse, Becket's murder; legend, MORS EXPUPA FORIS TIBI VITA SIT JUTUS AORIS (n). F. 52, L. 122—Q. 173.

The archbishop bore fore for his arms—Quar-

(f) M. Paris, p. 298. (g) Knyghton, col. 2430.

(h) See Battely's Somner, p. 127, pt. 2, p. 70.

(i) Leland's Collect. vol. ii, p. 425.

(k) Leland, in his Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 4, says, in the cross isle that stands beneath the degrees of the quire southward in St. Anne's chapel, (since called St. Michael's chapel), lyeth buried Simon Langhtoun, for whom the schism began betwixt K. John and the bishop of Rome. This Langhtoun translated Thomas Becket, and made the exceeding hyghe and broode Halle in the Bishops Palace and made as I harde the stately Horologe in the South Crosid Isle of the chirche.

RICHARD WETHERSHED.

terly, gules and or, a bend argent; or, according to archbishop Parker—Per pale, azure and gules, a bend or.

On the death of Stephen Langton, the prior and convent elected Walter de Evesham, or as some write his name, Hempsham, a monk of this church, whom the King would not approve of; upon which, the archbishop elect hastened to Rome for his confirmation, and the King sent thither likewise the bishops of Coventry and Rochester, with his request to the Pope, that the election might be made void, which was accordingly done; and the monks, to prevent the Pope from interposing by his bull of provison, hastened to make a new election, which they did of Richard Wethershed, whom the Pope confirmed (o).

45. RICHARD WETHERSHED, surnamed the Great, chancellor of the church of Lincoln (p), and dean of St. Paul's, succeeded next to the possession of this see in 1229 (q), and was consecrated at Canterbury by Roger, bishop of London, on 4 non. April next year, with great honour, K. Henry III, thirteen bishops, forty-one earls and barons, and others innumerable being present, as is recorded in the annals of Waverley (r). He is said to have been a man very graceful in his person, of learning and eloquence, mild and good natured in other things, but very tenacious of the rights of his church. Having a great dispute with Hubert de Burgh, earl of Kent, and that being referred to the decision of the Pope, he went to Rome, and on his return was taken ill at St. Gemma, and dying was buried there (s), in the church of the friars minors. As several of his retinue died at the same time, it has been conjectured that his death was occasioned by poison. He wrote several books of divinity concerning the sacrament and other matters.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Argent, on a bend azure, 3 cinquefoils pierced or.

Upon the death of archbishop Richard, the convent elected Ralph Nevil, bishop of Chichester, whose election was declared void by the Pope, who commanded them to proceed to a new election, without intimating any other reason than his own will and pleasure; upon which they proceeded to a second election, and made choice of their sub-prior John, whom they declared their archbishop elect; but the Pope refused to accept of him likewise, as being very infirm and de-

There liyeth in this chapel also another Bishop of Canterbury.

(l) See Battely's Somner, p. 127.

(m) Claus. 12 Hen. III, m. 5, dorso. Prynne, vol. iii, p. 79. (n) Sic orig. (o) See Battely, pt. 2, p. 50.

(p) Knyghton, col. 2431, calls him dean of Lincoln.

(q) See Biog. Brit. vol. iii, p. 2252, note [A].

(r) Weever, p. 303.

(s) Chron. Tab. col. 2261. Battely's Somner, p. 128, pt. 2, p. 70. He is said to have written whilst there, several learned treatises.

crepit

ARCHBISHOPS.

crepit through age, and unfit for the pastoral office in so high a station; upon which he resigned his pretensions to it, and the election was a third time made, and the choice fell upon Richard Blundy, an Oxford divine, whom the Pope likewise rejected; but at the same time he recommended to them Edmund, treasurer of the church of Sarum, who was accordingly chosen by them and declared archbishop elect, and confirmed by the Pope.

46. EDMUND DE ABINGDON, so called from the place of his birth, chancellor of the church of Sarum and the King's treasurer, was accordingly, on the Pope's recommendation to the convent, elected and constituted archbishop in 1234 (t), and was consecrated in April the same year.

He was the son of one Edmund Rich, a merchant of that place, and was bred up at University college in Oxford, where having attained to a reasonable knowledge in divinity, to which study he was chiefly addicted, he applied himself to preaching, chiefly in the counties of Oxford, Gloucester and Worcester, until such time as he was promoted to the chancellorship of Salisbury, and made the King's treasurer. Two years after his coming to the see, he solemnized in this church the marriage between King Henry III. and his Queen Eleanor; afterwards, by accusing the Pope's legate, then in England, of bribery and extortion, he made him his enemy, and at the same time he fell under the King's displeasure. Though he had great disputes with his convent, which gave him much uneasiness (u), yet he defended their privileges with great earnestness, and when he saw the church was oppressed by the Pope, and that the King connived at it, and that there was no possibility of redressing these injuries, or of affording it any relief, he retired beyond seas to Soissy in Pontiniac, in 1240, to spend the remainder of his days in a voluntary exile, to lament the miseries and oppressions under which the church groaned. Having sat for eight years as archbishop, he fell into a consumption through too great abstinence, and afterwards into a sort of ague, of which he died at the above place, in November that year (v); his heart and bowels were buried at Soissy, and his body at Pontiniac (w). He was a man of most severe and rigid monastic life and conversation, insomuch that in the 7th year after his death he was canonized by Pope Innocent IV., at the council of Lyons; and Lewis the French King caused his body to be translated to a more honourable tomb, (t) Chron. Tables. Knyghton, col. 2439.

(u) There is a letter of the prior and convent of Christ church, concerning these disputes, in the Cotton library Mss. Vespaf. A. xviii, 18.

(v) Chron. Tab. col. 2263. Battely, pt. 70. Somner says, he died in the year 1242. Lambarde, p. 90, says, that he died through anger of a repulse.

EDMUND DE ABINGDON.—BONIFACE.

and bestowed a sumptuous shrine upon him, covered with gold and silver, and adorned with many precious stones, at which many miracles were said to be wrought (x); and he was from thence styled the glorious and blessed St. Edmund, as may be seen in the several records of this church (y).

This archbishop re-established the nunnery at Remsted in Suffex, which had been founded by archbishop Richard, and dissolved by archbishop Hubert, on account of the ill lives of the nuns (z).

There is a treatise on Living Piously, written by archbishop Edmund, among the manuscripts in the Bodleian library.

There is a seal of this archbishop appendant to one of the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the dean and chapter's treasury, oval; the archbishop standing, mitred, pall, robed—Three heads in rounds on each side. Counterseal, Becket's murder. Q. 99.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Gules, a cross flossy or, between 4 Cornish choughs proper.

47. BONIFACE, provost of Beverley (a), was next elected archbishop by the prior and monks in chapter, without any interruption either by the King, the Pope, or the suffragan bishops; according to Battely in 1241 (b), and confirmed in 1243; but he was not consecrated till the year 1245, nor intronized till four years after that.

He was a native of Savoy, the son of Peter, duke of that principality, and was uncle to Q. Eleanor, wife of K. Henry III., being at that time procurator of the church of Burgundy. He built a good hospital (afterwards converted by archbishop Courtney into a college,) at Maidstone, called the new works, which he amply endowed, and he found a sufficiency to pay out of his revenues (to do which, he obtained of the Pope in addition, a grant of one year's profit of all the vacant livings in his province,) the debt of 22,000 marcs, in which his see was indebted when he came to it. Bishop Godwin says, he perfected and finished that most stately hall of the archbishop's palace at Canterbury, with the buildings adjoining; but this must be understood certainly of his paying the above-mentioned debt, great part of which his predecessors had incurred by the building of that edifice; and indeed in that sense, the archbishop used to boast himself to be the builder of it; saying, My predecessors built this hall at great expences—they did well indeed—but they laid out no money about this building, except what they borrowed—I seem indeed to be truly the builder of it, because I paid their debts (c).

(w) Battely, pt. 70. Knyghton, col. 2431, 2435.

(x) Weever, p. 304. (y) Battely, pt. 2, p. 70.

(z) See Tan. Mon. p. 559.

(a) Leland's Collect. vol. iii, p. 401.

(b) The Chron. Tables place his election in 1244.

(c) Parker Antiq. Brit. Ecclef. Battely's Somn. p. 128. Lambarde, p. 91-231.

ARCHBISHOPS.

ROBERT KILWARDBY.

In 1250, having, by his proud behaviour, rendered himself obnoxious to the citizens of London, he retired for the security of his person to Lambeth, where finding the palace in a ruinous state, during his residence there, within the space of three years, he rebuilt the whole north side of the great apartments, the library and the cloysters, guard chamber, the chapel and what was afterwards called the Lollard's tower (d).

Having sat in this see upwards of 26 years and six months, he died at the castle of St. Helena, in his own native country of Savoy, in the year 1270 (e). Cotemporary historians say, he was of comely personage, but cruel, haughty, and insolent; of little learning, but great oppression. He was universally hated, and had he not fled, would most likely have been murdered by the citizens of London; notwithstanding all which, he is said to have been a great lover of the poor.

Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the dean and chapter's treasury, are some seals of this archbishop appendant to them; they are very fair and fine, $3\frac{1}{2}$ by 2 diam. The archbishop standing, mitred, robed, &c. blessing; on each side of him two small circles, being four antique seals, viz. three whole lengths and one head, under him, the church represented; counterseal, Becket's murder, legend, + TRINE: DEUS: PRO: ME: MOVERIT: TE: PASSIO: THOMÆ + A V 3. Z. 37. The archbishop bore for his arms—Gules, a plain cross argent.

Archbishop Boniface was one of the rare examples of a free election made by the prior and monks of Canterbury; but when upon his death, the monks elected William de Chillenden, the sub-prior of their convent, the Pope with indignation pronounced him unworthy of this high dignity, and declared, that for this reason, the right of election did devolve canonically upon him for that turn, and, out of the plenitude of his authority, he created Robert Kilwardby archbishop, whom the monks acknowledged as such, and to be rightly chosen.

48. ROBERT KILWARDBY was next nominated to this see by the Pope in 1272. He was of English birth and studied first at Oxford, and then at Paris, where he took his first degrees, as he did that of doctor afterwards at Oxford, becoming, as Godwin says, a great clerk, of which he left many monuments behind him. He was at the time of his being promoted to this archbishopric, a dominican or black friar (f), of which order he had, on his return from Paris, been appointed provincial in England. He was consecrated on February 26, in the above year, by William, bishop of Bath, and twelve other suffragan bishops, and had, though not till some time afterwards, his temporalities restored to him in a very particular form and manner (g).

K. Edward being in the Holy Land at the time of his father's death, landed at Dover on the Thursday next after the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula in 1274, and on the Sunday following was solemnly crowned at Westminster, together with his Queen Eleanor, the King of Spain's sister, by Robert, archbishop of Canterbury, in the presence of Alexander, K. of Scotland, and John, Earl of Britany, and their wives, who were K. Edward's sisters (b). In the sixth year of the above reign, having visited the whole province of Canterbury, and particularly the two universities, and gained by it, as well as by other means (i), great wealth; he was by Pope Nicholas III. enticed to Rome, for which purpose he was, in 1277, created a cardinal, by the title of cardinal of Ostia, and he promoted him likewise to the bishopric of Portsea; upon which he vacated this archbishopric, carrying with him 5000 marks sterling into Italy, where dying, as some say of poison, at Viterbo, in the year 1280, he was buried

(d) These buildings were afterwards all repaired, enlarged or rebuilt, by his successors.

(e) Battely's Somner, p. 128.

(f) Bale, Pitfeus, Wood, and others, assert his being of the above order; whilst Parker, Godwin, Isaacson, Colyer, and others, are as positive in asserting that he was of the order of friars minors.

(g) The first thing K. Edward I. did on his coming to the crown, was to make a public protestation against pope Clement IV.'s usurpation, who had a little before the late King's death, by his papal provision, conferred this archbishopric on Robert Kilwardby, without the King's licence, approbation, or the monks election, contrary to his prerogative and the laws of the realm, and the liberties of the English church, rejecting William de Chillenden (duly elected by the monks of Canterbury by the King's licence, and approved of afterwards by him), when presented to him, without any legal reason by his absolute papal power. To prevent therefore these infringements in future, the King refused to restore to the archbishop his temporalities, before he had made his public protestation against these provisions in the presence of the bishops, chancellors, and others, called together for that purpose, in St. Stephen's chapel in Westminster, declaring the restitution of the archbishop's temporalities to be of the King's mere grace and favour, and not of any right. After this protestation so solemnly made, the King assenting to the archbishop's provision, out of his special grace, issued writs for the restitution of the temporalities in a very extraordinary form, and other writs, for delivering does, due to him out of the earl of Arundel's forest, according to a composition made with archbishop Boniface, his predecessor. Clauf. 1 Ed. I. m. 11, dorso; Pat. 1 Ed. I, m. 10; clauf. 1 Ed. I, m. 10; clauf. 1 Ed. I, m. 2; Bundela Brevium, anno 1 Ed. I, m. 18, in Turri, London; Prynne, vol. iii, p. 121* et seq. 214.

(h) M. Westminster, p. 363. Pat. 2 Ed. I, ps. unica, m. 9. Mem. de Coron. Regis. Knyghton, col. 2461.

(i) The King had of his special grace and favour, granted him liberty to receive the rents of several livings, which he had reserved to himself after his translation, belonging to the King upon the vacancy, and received the stock of the archbishopric from him, at the same rate that the archbishop had received it upon his instalment, from the guardian of the temporalities. Prynne, p. 214.

ARCHBISHOPS.

JOHN PECKHAM.

there, having sat in this see for the space of six years.

Archbishop Kilwardby is remarked for having, by his gentle persuasions, appeased the citizens of Canterbury, who were eagerly bent upon revenge against the monks of Christ church, for refusing them their aid towards an imposition set upon the city by the King, on his intended expedition into Wales. He built a house in London, called the Black Friars, for the use of his own order (k), and another of the like kind at Salisbury (l).

He was esteemed a man of learning, wisdom and piety, and wrote much during the former part of his life; but after he became archbishop, he confined his studies wholly to preaching, and matters of importance belonging to his see, having no leisure to review, correct and publish what he had before written of theological matters, and therefore his writings of divinity came out more sparingly, but they are, notwithstanding, numerous (m), as may be seen in Pisfeus; there are many of them among the Harleian and Bodleian manuscripts, and in the libraries of Bennet, Peter House and Baliol colleges. There is a seal of this archbishop appendant to a deed among the Chartæ Antiquæ in the dean and chapter's treasury, 3 inches by 2 diam. archbishop standing, mitred, robed, pall, blessing; crois in left hand; legend, ROBERTUS DEI GRATIA. CANTUAR. ARCHIEPS. TOCIUS ANG. PRIMAS. No counterseal. A 181.

Upon the vacancy of the see, the monks unanimously elected Robert Burnel, bishop of Bath and Wells, the King's chancellor, for their archbishop, and that by the King's direction; but the Pope, by his bull of provision, made Peckham archbishop, and though the King approved, importuned and commanded the bishop to accept of it, yet bishop Burnel, being very wealthy, chose rather to recede from his right to the archbishopric than to contest it, either with the Pope or Peckham, and gain the Pope's displeasure; and the King then having occasion for the Pope's favour, to promote his foreign affairs, was content to connive at it for that time (n). The archbishop bore for his arms—Azure, on a bend gules, 3 escallops argent.

49. JOHN PECKHAM, (or Peckham, as he was called by some) a friar of the order of Minorites or Franciscans, was nominated, as abovementioned, by the Pope to this see in 1279. He was born in Suffex, of a very private family, in that county, and had his first education in the abbey of Lewes in the same county, under the direction and instruction of the cluniac monks there; after which, he went to Oxford, where he was supported in his studies by the charitable assistance of that abbey, and the monks of it, till he entered into the order of St. Francis; after which, observing that few, even of the most promising genius, ever became famous in their own country, tho' their merits might deserve it, and that many by going abroad, raised themselves to high degrees in learning, he went over to Paris, being sent as usual by his superiors, where he followed his studies with such diligence, under the direction of St. Bonaventure, that he gained the reputation of a great philosopher and divine; after which, returning to Oxford, he was admitted to proceed D. D. and succeeded the famous doctor friar Thomas Bungay, in the chair of chief professor regent of the Franciscan schools there; and having taught for some time, he was again sent to Paris, where he read publicly, the master of the sentences, expounded the scriptures, and took the degree of D. D. as he had done at Oxford. During his stay abroad, he applied himself with great diligence to the study of the canon law, and being again called into England, to a chapter held here by the ruling men of his order, he was unanimously chosen provincial minister of the English Franciscan province, in which character he was summoned to appear at the general chapter of the order at Padua, when he visited the universities in Italy, and came lastly to Rome, where he was noticed for his learning by the Pope, Nicholas III, who made him reader of the palace, and auditor, or chief judge of his court; in which offices he continued till his appointment to the archbishopric, when he had the gift of a prebend or canonry of the church of Lyons, which he kept till his death; it was given him as a provision or refuge, in case the King should not admit him to the see of Canterbury, or should afterwards on any dislike, force him to leave the kingdom, as he had served his predecessor Kilwardby, and have no other home to take to; for this cause, perhaps, it was annexed to the see of Canterbury, and many succeeding archbishops for a long time after enjoyed it (o).

Peckham was most graciously received by King Edward I, who was then in France, in treaty with the French King; and delivering to him the pope's letters and his own credentials, the King approved and ratified them; and he was consecrated on the first Sunday in Lent, which was March to have had some forecast of his one time or other standing in need of this precaution; and in the several disputes he had with the King, on the rights and privileges of his see, the bold freedom and resolution of his defence so much disoblged the King, that he was more than once on the verge of being banished.

(k) See Tanner's Monasticon, p. 313.

(l) Collier Eccl. Hist.

(m) See Leland's Collect. vol. iii, p. 328. See a catalogue of them in Dr. Cave's Hist. Literar in anno 1272.

(n) Prynne, p. 214, 216, 223, 1227. See the King's letter to the pope, in Rym. Fœd. vol. ii, p. 118.

(o) Harleian Mss. No. 980-200. Archbishop Peckham seems

ARCHBISHOPS.

JOHN PECKHAM.

6, 1279 (oo). At his coming to the archbishopric, he found the manors and castles belonging to it in a very ruinous condition, and the rents and profits of it pillaged and wasted by his predecessor; on this account it was that he complained that the expences were greater than he was able to bear, for the King had besides retained to himself all the profits of the first year. The Pope demanded for the dues and fees of the court of Rome, and the debts contracted there, no less than 4000 marcs, and he was forced to compound with the King for having sowed his temporalities, and for the growing crop on it, for a fine of 2000 marcs. The charges of his intbronization amounted to 2000 marcs, and before the end of the year 1284, he had expended in repairing his houses and castles 2000 marcs more. The archbishop therefore had great reason to style that letter in which the Pope threatened him with ex-communication unless he remitted to Rome the sum of 4000 marcs, a letter horrible to the eye and dreadful to the ear.

About the year 1282, he founded a college in the church of Wingham in this county, for which purpose he made it collegiate, and endowed the provost and canons of it with a sufficient maintenance (p).

The city of Canterbury had a strong contest with this archbishop, about the limits and liberties of their respective jurisdictions (q). In the year 1289, K. Edward, the Queen and their children, with many of the nobility, were entertained in the monastery of St. Augustine; whilst there, on August 14, the King commanded that the archbishop should be invited to dine with him the next day; accordingly he came to the gate of the monastery, but he was denied entrance with his cross erect before him, lest that might prejudice the liberties and privileges of the convent; but the monks offered to admit him, if he would subscribe an acknowledgment, that his coming there in that manner was upon the King's special invitation, and that it should not be afterwards interpreted in prejudice of the liberties and privileges of the convent, who claimed an exemption from all archiepiscopal jurisdiction. This the archbishop refused, nor would he submit to any such acknowledgment, and on the King's command returned back with indignation, and the next day departed from Canterbury (r). In the year 1279, the archbishop almost immediately after his arrival in England, on or about the feast of St. James, having summoned all his suffragans to Reading, celebrated a provincial council there; the constitutions made at which, are printed in the British Councils, both by Wilkins and Spelman, and in Prynne, p. 230. But the King so highly resented these proceedings of the archbishop, that in a parliament held soon after in the same year, he publicly convened him for this delinquency, and the constitutions made in this council by him were publicly therein revoked and annulled, as appears by the Clause Rolls of that year remaining in the Tower (s). This did not intimidate Peckham, who, with his suffragans, intending next year, anno 8 Edward I, to hold a council of convocation at London, it incited the King's jealousy so much, that he issued a commission to two of his officers to repair there, and appeal against whatever should be done in it contrary to his crown and dignity. Upon which the meeting was put off till next year, when they held a council at Lambeth; but the King suspecting their proceedings, sent them a memorable writ, strictly commanding them upon their oaths of fealty to be faithful to him, and defend his crown and dignity, upon pain of losing their temporalities; but how far the archbishop and his suffragans were from obeying the King's mandate, appeared by the canons and constitutions made in it, and the undaunted letter he sent to the King, in answer to his inhibition and mandate (t). In the 11th year of the same reign, the archbishop again visited his province, and having visited England, he passed by Chester into Wales, in which he was opposed by the bishop of St. David's, who stoutly defended his church's rights, denying the authority of the archbishop to visit his cathedral, and alledging that he himself was metropolitan there (u).

The archbishop claimed thirteen bucks and thirteen does annually out of the forest of Arundel, by composition made between archbishop Boniface and John, son of Alan de Arundel, formerly lord of it; and likewise the liberty of a way to go and return through the same, from his park and manor of Slindon. The King therefore, at the archbishop's request, issued his writ, dated at Westminster in his 9th year, directed to Isabel de Mortimer, then keeper of the forest, to deliver the deer to him, and to permit him to use the way above-mentioned (v).

(oo) Godwin; but Wharton dates his consecration sooner, viz. upon the preceding feast of the Conversion of St. Paul; and says further, that he arrived in England on the feast of St. John Baptist preceding; that on July 30 he called a convocation at Reading, and that on October 8 he made his public entry into Canterbury; at which the King, the bishops, and many of the nobility were present.

(p) See vol. iii. of the History of Kent, under Wingham. Tanner says, this college was intended by his predecessor archbishop Kilwardby, and was afterwards established and perfected by archbishop Peckham, in the year 1286.

(q) Battely's Somner, p. 129.

(r) Decem. Script. Thorn, col. 1921.

(s) Anno 7 Ed. I, m. 1, dorso. Prynne, p. 230 to 236.

(t) Most of the constitutions, as well as the archbishop's letter, may be seen in Prynne, p. 252 et seq.

(u) Prynne, p. 282, 292, 308.

(v) Clauf. anno 9 Ed. I, m. 5. Prynne, p. 267.

He

ARCHBISHOPS.

He is said to have been a man very stately, both in gesture, words, and all outward shew, yet of a meek soul, and liberal temper of mind (zw). He had considerable learning for the the age he lived in, particularly in the civil and canon law, and wrote many tracts in divinity, and on some books of scripture (x). He governed his province and diocese with great care and firmness, and in all his disputes with the King, concerning the rights and privileges of his see, he always defended them with great freedom and resolution; and throughout his time he governed his province with great care and firmness, as a very able and useful prelate. He is said to have been a father to the orphans, the distressed and the poor, whom he defended, protected and relieved in a munificent manner; of which Harpfield gives many instances. Having sat in this see near 14 years, he died at Mortlake, on Dec. 8, 1292 (y), and was honourably buried on Tuesday the 19th of the same month, in the presence of the bishops of London and Rochester, the abbats of St. Augustine, Faversham and Langdon; the prior of Christ church, the archdeacons of Canterbury and Bedford, &c. (z), in his own cathedral, in the north side of the martyrdom, next to the tomb of archbishop Warham, where his monument, having the effigies of an archbishop in his pontificals, cut in wood, lying at full length on it, still remains (a). He bore for his arms—Ermine, a chief quarterly, or and gules.

(zw) See Leland's Collect. vol. iii, p. 328; ex Hist. Nich. Trivet.

(x) Several of the treatises which he wrote, are among both the Bodleian and the Harleian MSS. and several have been published, as Collectanea Bibliorum, printed at Paris, 1514, and at Colegn, 1541. Constitutiones 47, printed in Lyndwood's Provinciale; and Perspectiva Communis cum figuris, published by John Gauricus. An account of what this archbishop wrote, may be found in Cave's Hist. Literar. vol. i, p. 740.

(y) Battely's Somner, p. 71, append. No. vi^a. Weever, p. 23, says, he died very rich in 1224.

(z) Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. vi^b.

(a) Leland's Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 4, says, he lies buried in the cross isle, betwixt the body of the church and the choir northward. Weever, p. 23, from a manuscript in the Cotton library, says, his heart was buried in Christ church, London, behind the great altar. He was buried, says bishop Godwin, in his own church, but in what particular place he did not find. Archbishop Parker, it seems, found it not neither, for he mentions it not. By a record in the church of the time of the death and place of burial of this archbishop, it appears, that he was laid in the north side near the place of the martyrdom of St. Thomas the martyr. This monument of archbishop Peckham's, next to that of Warham, has by some been supposed to belong to archbishop Wlfrid; but the cost bestowed on it, being built pyramical, and having been richly carved and gilt, seems to shew the contrary; for that archbishop dying of the plague, his body was brought to Canterbury, and without any pomp or solemnity, was buried secretly in the martyrdom. The plain, unadorned, oaken figure, now placed on this tomb, lies on a slab of the like wood, no ways fastened to the tomb, and there is not an

ROBERT WINCHELSEA.

Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the dean and chapter's treasury, are several seals of archbishop Peckham; one on an oval, very fine and perfect, $3\frac{1}{4}$ by 2 inches diam. the archbishop standing, mitred, robes, pall, blessing; cross in his left hand; legend, JOHES: DEI: GRA: ARCHIEPS: CANTUAR: TOCIUS: ANGLIE: PRIMAS: on each side of the archbishop, two (seemingly) lillies in form of a pastoral crook, coloured red, the rest of seal green; counterseal, Becket's murder, two the armed knights, Becket kneeling; cross bearer under him, kneeling; legend, ABDITA NE PRO ME QUA SIGNAT PASSIO THOME. C. 388—G. 195. no counterseal. Q. 9—100.

50. ROBERT WINCHELSEA, S. T. P. was elected archbishop in 1293. He was born of poor parents, and was educated in the grammar school at Canterbury, whence he went to Merton college in Oxford, of which he was fellow, and commenced S. T. P. he was afterwards archdeacon of Essex, prebendary of St. Paul's in London, and of Leighton manor in the church of Lincoln, and was preferred to be chancellor of that university. He was elected archbishop by the monks unanimously, and with much applause, to whom the King gave his licence for that purpose (b).

Having been consecrated at Rome, he returned in 1295, immediately after which, and before his intbronement at Canterbury, he decreed those ordinances for the rule of his church, which are still called by his name, and are printed at large unlikely probability that it might have been made for some other purpose, perhaps to lie on the biens of the several archbishops after their interments, or some such use in the church; the upper part of the mitre, which was fixed on to the wood, is missing.

(b) Upon the prior and convent's letter to the King, requesting his licence to elect another archbishop, the King granted his letter of licence to them accordingly, dated at Newcastle upon Tyne, on the 8th day of January, in his 21st year; both which are printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 17, No. vi^c; as is the general sentence of excommunication pronounced in the chapter, on the day of election, against all such as should be of any hindrance to it—the consent of the archbishop elect. For the letter of the chapter, dated 15 kal. March, to the King, for the obtaining of his assent; and the King's assent pronounced by the bishop of Durham. See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. vi^e et seq.

The expences of the archbishop at the court of Rome, for the obtaining of his confirmation, which, together with those of the business of his election, as well in England as abroad, amounted in the whole to the sum of 1863 marks, and twenty-three pence, or 1242 pounds, and twenty-three pence, are printed in Battely, appendix, ibid. p. 18, No. vii; where may be seen the form of the petition for the pall, of the delivery of it, and the form of the archbishop's oath on his reception of it. Battely, appendix, No. ix^a et seq.

An account of the ancient custom demanded of archbishop Winchelsea when elected, on his passage in 1293, from Dover to Whitsand by the bailiff of the earl of Bologna, as a toll and custom on his landing there; and the archbishop's complaint with the earl in 1306, for the same is inserted below, and the memorandum of it more at large, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 19, No. viii.

in

ARCHBISHOPS.

WINCHELSEA.

in Spelman (c); after which that ceremony being performed at Canterbury (d), he, on the same day consecrated the bishop of Landaff in his own church there; but the King did not seem very forward to restore the temporalities to him, for he detained them near two years after in his hands, as vacant (e).

In the year 1299, he performed in this cathedral the solemnity of marriage between King Edward I. and his Queen, Margaret, sister of the K. of France, who had landed at Dover some days before; whose nuptial feast, according to Stow, was kept in the great hall of the archbishop's palace (f). He afterwards greatly incurred the King's displeasure; for upon his extraordinary demands from the clergy, the archbishop procured a papal bull, a copy of which is remaining in the register of this church, inhibiting them from giving any further aids, without licence from the holy see. The King being highly incensed at this, seized on the goods and possessions of the archbishop, as well as of all other ecclesiastical persons, till they should redeem one half, by freely granting him the other half, and this was complied with by all of them, except the archbishop and some few others; and the King granted his letters of protection, by which he restored their goods and possessions to all, who had compounded with him (g); but he kept in his own hands all belonging to the archbishop, for upwards of 21 weeks, when he restored it to him again (h), through the earnest prayer and mediation of his suffragan bishops in his behalf, upon hopes of his future loyalty; but through the archbishop's implacable stubbornness, this reconciliation did not last long, for the King being displeased again with him, banished him the realm (i), seized his temporalities, and prevailed on the Pope to suspend him, and to cite him to appear personally at Rome, which the archbishop obeyed, and immediately hastened thither (k).

During this suspension, the Pope directed his bull to two persons to take care of the spiritualities of this church, and another to the bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, who was then the King's treasurer, to take care of the temporalities of it; but the King would by no means admit the latter, saying, that no one whatsoever deputed by the Pope, should intermeddle with the temporalities, no more than the Pope would permit him to intermeddle with the spiritualities of a church; and the King remitted the custody of the temporalities at that time to sir Humphry Walden, knt. in which state they continued for near two years, when the King died (l); and K. Edward II, on succeeding his father in the throne, obtained from the Pope a bull in favour of the archbishop, for the restitution of all rights to him; and as soon as he returned into England, all his revenues which had been received by the administrator of the temporalities, were entirely restored to him (m), so that he suffered no disadvantage from it; which verified the saying he continually made use of during his troubles, that adversity will do no hurt, where iniquity does not prevail (n).

On the death of K. Edward I, in 1308, the archbishop was abroad at Rome, where he remained next year at the time of the coronation of K. Edward II, who, on the feast of St. Matthias, anno 1309, was, with his Queen, crowned at Westminster, with the greatest solemnity and magnificence, by the bishop of Winchester and others, by a commission, as some say, from Robert, archbishop of Canterbury, or, according to others, by the authority of the Pope, on account of the archbishop's absence (o).

In the 1st year of K. Edward II, anno 1307,

(c) Tom. ii, p. 413 et seq.

(d) See the form and particulars of it in Battely's Somner, appendix, p. 57.

(e) During the whole of this time, the King received the profits, and presented to all benefices, as appears by the patent rolls annis 21 and 22 Ed. I. There being no writs of restitution of the temporalities till the 23d year of that reign, anno 1296. Prynne, p. 576. Teste Rege apud Aberconwy, 4 die Feb. Pat. 23 Ed. I, m. 16.

(f) M. Westminster, p. 433. Walsingham, anno 1300, p. 43. H. Knyghton, col. 2493, 2527, 2528.

(g) The form of these letters and the number of them granted to the bishops, abbats, priors, and others, may be seen, collected together by Reyner, in Apostolat. Benedictin, appendix, p. 62. See Prynne, p. 702.

(h) Clauf. 25 Ed. I, m. 12. Teste Rege apud Westm. 11 die Julii. Prynne, p. 721. See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xii. Knyghton, col. 2510, who says, the King on his going abroad in 1297, received the archbishop into his favour, committing to him the care and custody of his son Edward, and of all the realm before the people, the lord Reginald de Grey being joined with him; and he ordered that all should be restored to him, even to the last farthing.

(i) Thorn, col. 2005.

(k) The story of these dissentions between the King and the archbishop, is related in full by most of our historians. H. Knyghton, lib. iii, p. 2489 et seq. M. Westminster, anno 1296, 1297, p. 405 et seq. Chron. W. Thorn, col. 1965, 200. T. Walsingham, Hist. Ang. anno 1297, 1298, p. 34 et seq. Ypodigma Neustriae, p. 82. Prynne, p. 689, 1090 et seq. and others. See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xii.

(l) The King by his Pat. anno 35 regn. m. 20, granted at the request of the pope, the custody of all the profits of the archbishopric, then committed to Humphry de Walden, to masters William Testa, archidiaconus. Aranen. in the church of Coventry and Peter Amalmenus, canon of Bourdeaux, clerks, and deputed administrators of the archbishopric by the pope, to be kept by them for the pope's use, according to his holiness's injunction, dated at Carlisle March 26. Prynne, p. 1179. See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xii.

(m) Register Cant. P. fol. 33.

(n) Parker Antiq. Eccles. Brit.

(o) T. Walsingham, p. 69, 70. Thorn. Chron. col. 2007, 2009; and others.

ARCHBISHOPS.

the archbishop held a provincial council, in which were passed several decrees for the well governing of the church and clergy of this kingdom; indeed he ever courageously exerted himself for the maintenance of the church's liberties and ecclesiastical jurisdiction, by mainly opposing prohibitions, grown frequent in his time, and caused the clergy's grievances to be drawn into articles (p), and he gave and made new statutes, as well for his own church as for the hospital of Harbledown, which he had drawn up upon his Visitations of both of them (q).

He was a man of great resolution, as appears by his conduct during his dissentions with the King, to whom refusing to be reconciled, and his revenues being withheld, he discharged his family, left the city, and withdrew himself to Chertbam, from whence he rode every Sunday and holiday, and preached in the adjoining churches (r).

He was of great liberality and extensive charity to the poor, to whom the large fragments of his table were every day plentifully distributed at his gate. He gave every Sunday and Thursday, when corn was dear, 2000 loaves, and when cheap, 3000 to the poor at a time; upon solemn festivals he relieved with money, 150 needy persons; and to the aged, to women in child-bed, and to the infirm who were not able to come to his door, he sent his alms, bread, fish, or flesh, according to the season, to their own houses; of all which, a particular account is given by archbishop Parker, bishop Godwyn, Stow, and others.

After having sat in this patriarchal chair for the space of 19 years, he died greatly esteemed and regretted at Otford, on May 11 (s), in 1313,

(p) See more of this in the archbishop's life, in Antiq. Eccles. Brit. p. 211; and in the life of his successor archbishop Reynolds, p. 215; and afterwards for the courses which have been from time to time taken to restrain prohibitions, p. 216, 286, and 294.

(q) They are both still preserved in the records of the cathedral, and of the hospital.

(r) Knyghton, col. 2532.

(s) See Leland's Collect. vol. iii, p. 331; vol. iv, p. 116.

(t) Although there is no monument remaining for him at this time, certainly he once had one in this church, and it stood according, to both Parker and Godwin, beside the altar of St. Gregory by the south wall. Mr. Somner tells us, p. 129, that he understood this obscure description of the place of it, by having read in some records of the church of a gift to the light of the throne, which is over against the image of our Saviour, against the altars of St. John the Evangelist, and St. Gregory. To shew where these altars stood, he found mention of the former altar in the south cross wing or isle, which accounts added together, he found that these altars stood in the south cross isle of the choir, under the two east windows of it; and he was further assured of it by viewing the opposite wall, where are tokens of something, most likely that throne having been once fixed to it, but long since taken away. By the south wall then of this cross isle, he says, some time stood this archbishop's tomb, which on account of oblations offered at it, and the sanctity it was and was buried beside the choir, on the south side of this church, near the upper south wing, but there is no monument of him remaining at this time (t). He bore for his arms—Argent, a fess ermine voided gules, in chief 3 roses of the last.

WINCHELSEA.

The character of archbishop Winchelsea is, in general, drawn with great encomiums in his favour. He had much cheerfulness and affability, and was in general very remarkable for his prudence, equity and good temper in the exercise of his jurisdiction (u), for his residence on his benefices, almost without interruption, and he was both devout and studious, and having studied both at Oxford and Paris, became a great theologist; he was diligent in preaching and expounding the scriptures; and the only shade on the lustre of his character was, that restless and turbulent disposition, which he shewed in the continual disputes which he carried on with the King, though in this, it may be inferred, that his conscience urged him to it, in what he imagined concerned his church's rights and privileges, in which the courage of his mind hardly ever proved deficient, and he preserved at court a freedom with the King, which surprized every one; the greatness of his mind was no less uncommon, than the courage of it. Besides his relief of poor people, as above-mentioned, he supported young scholars at the university, whose genius set them above mechanic employments. He was very moderate in his desires, temperate in his enjoyments, and a great example of regularity in every part of life; grave without moroseness, and cheerful without levity; free from ambition himself, he had the greatest regard to merit and learning in others, disposing held in, was destroyed at the reformation. Leland, Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 4, says, in the cross isle on the south side of the quire (lyeth) bishop Winchelsey in a right goodly Tumbe of Marble at the very But Ende yn the waulle side.

(u) Notwithstanding this, it seems that this prelate at one time, by the perhaps too severe proceedings of his ecclesiastical officers, had highly disgusted the people at Canterbury. This plainly appears by a patent and writ, issued anno 31 Ed. I, to enquire into an assault, made that year upon his palace and servants, in which his goods were pilaged, his dean sat on horseback with his face to the horse's tail, which he was compelled to hold in his hand for a bridle, in which manner he was carried to Selling, with songs, shouts and dances, during which, his horse was abused, and the dean thrown into the dirt, to his great shame and disgrace [a]. By his means too, the archbishop of York bearing his cross before him, had as well as his attendants been grossly insulted, and his men beat and abused as they passed through the county of Kent, to the general council; and he was forced to petition the King for his protection, for which he had a writ, anno 5 Ed. II, enjoining all people not to molest him or his servants in their return from thence, nor be of any hindrance to them, &c. [b]

[a] Prynne, p. 987.

[b] Clauf. 5 Ed. II, m. 4. Rym, Fœd. vol. iii, p. 323.

ARCHBISHOPS.

WALTER REYNOLDS.

of his preferments among such as deserved them most, neither expending his revenues in pomp and luxury, nor hoarding them up to establish a name or raise a family. In short, it may be said of archbishop Winchelsea, that he had so many virtues and good qualities, both as a man and a bishop, that he appeared equal at least to the best and greatest prelate that had ever filled the patriarchal chair of this see.

Not long after the archbishop's death, Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, petitioned the Pope for his canonization, on account of his holy and strict life, his excellent merits and the glorious miracles done by him; but it seems the Pope delayed the proceeding in it, till he had received information to various questions, which he sent to England (v); in which uncertain state this matter continued till the Earl's death, which happened in the year 1326; after which, at the end of that year, archbishop Walter and the suffragan bishops of his province, joined in a petition under their several hands and seals, to the Pope, in behalf of the archbishop's canonization, yet on mature deliberation, the letters were never sent, for the originals remain at this time among the church's archives (w), and the matter seems to have been entirely dropped; and though it does not appear that he was ever canonized a saint, yet the common people esteemed him one, for his virtues, and in the accounts of the treasury of the church, there is mention made for several years of offerings made at his tomb, which caused the demolition of it at the reformation.

After the see had been vacant for upwards of nine months, after archbishop Winchelsea's death, the convent elected Thomas Cobham, dean of Salisbury, a native of the county of Kent, who, for his uncommon learning, was usually called Bonus Clericus, in due form, as may be seen by the register of this church; but at the King's desire, the Pope made this election void, and provided for the filling up of the vacant see with Walter Reynolds, whom he nominated archbishop, without any regard to the monks election, pretending, that whilst archbishop Winchelsea was yet alive, he had reserved to his own disposal the providing a successor for the see of Canterbury (x).

51. WALTER REYNOLDS, or REGINALD, as his name is sometimes written, bishop of Worcester.

(v) See the pope's letter to the earl of Lancaster on this matter, printed in Somner's appendix, No. xliv.

(w) Regist. G. p. 11, fol. 227. Regist. K. p. 11, fol. 4. Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 174, &c. Battely's Somner, p. 100. See a letter of K. Edward III. in his 1st year, to the pope, requesting of him the canonization of this archbishop, dated March 8, Rym. Fæd. vol. iv, p. 272.

(x) The copies of the bulls of provision are extant, among the registers of this church. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 51. Knyghton, col. 2533.

ter, was accordingly translated from that see to this archbishopric in 1313. He was the son of a tradesman at Windsor, and became chaplain to K. Edward I., and afterwards, though a man of mean learning, was appointed preceptor to his son, afterwards K. Edward II. His first preferments in the church were, a prebend of St. Paul's, London, and the rectory of Wimbledon; after which he was elected bishop of Worcester, at the King's request. Being bred a courtier, he was more distinguished for his politeness, than his integrity; indeed, had he lived in times in which he had been less tried, he might have died with a fairer character.

Upon K. Edward II.'s accession to the throne, he became his singular favourite, and he appointed him his treasurer and chancellor (y); but the archbishop, under cover of a mild and courteous disposition, sheltered a mean and abject spirit, which became notorious in his want of courage, constancy and fidelity, at the time when the King, his great benefactor, fell under distress, when he shewed himself not only defective in duty, but was guilty of the greatest perfidy to him.

To the convent of Christ church, the archbishop was a good benefactor, by appropriating to them at their request, the manor of Caldicot, and the wood of Thorolt, near Canterbury, which had been long in the possession of the archbishops, for the use of their table. To the nuns of Davington, who, as Harpsfield thinks, were French women, he gave and prescribed rules and ordinances in the French tongue, for their more easy understanding; and he amerced the abbat of St. Bertin's, at St. Omer's, for leasing out, without his privity, the fruits of the parsonage of Cbilham, which belonged to the priory of Throwleigh, a cell to that abbey; and he was a good benefactor to the hospital at Maidstone, of his predecessor Boniface's foundation, and likewise to Langdon abbey in this county (z).

He crowned K. Edward III. on the Sunday after the conversion of St. Paul, anno 1326, in the church of St. Peter, at Westminster, before the high altar, in the presence of the bishops, earls, and great men of the realm (a).

After having sat as archbishop for near 14 years, he died on November 16, 1327, at Mort-

(y) On August 22, in the 11th year of K. Edward II., anno 1308, Walter Reginald, the King's chaplain, was appointed treasurer, and in the same year, being then canon of St. Paul's, he was made bishop of Worcester; in the 4th year of it he was made lord keeper, and on July 6 next year, he was made chancellor. Dug. orig.

(z) Battely's Somner, p. 133.

(a) Cl. 1 Ed. III. m. 24, dorso.

lake,

ARCHBISHOPS.

SIMON MEPHAM.

lake, as Weever says, of grief and anger, at the Pope's behaviour to him, and was buried in his own cathedral, the bishops of Winchester and Rochester attending the ceremony, in the south wall of it, under a window, beside the choir, where his tomb, having his effigies, habited in his pontificals lying at full length on it, is still extant. Weever has recorded his inscription, as follows, which was very difficult to be read in his time. Hic requiescit dominus WALTERUS REYNOLDS prius episcopus Wigorniensis & Angliæ cancellarius, deinde archiepiscopus istius ecclesie qui obiit 16 die mensis Novembris, ann. gratie 1327.

There are two seals of this archbishop among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter, appendant to them, ovals, the archbishop standing mitred, robed, pall, blessing, holding a crozier in left hand; on each side two symbols of the evangelists, and a coat of arms, one England, the other the see of Canterbury, impaling the archbishop's own coat; legend, WALTERUS DEI GRA CANTUAR ARCHIEP TOTIUS ANGLIÆ PRIMAS. No counterfeal. c. 130—132. He bore for his arms—Azure, on a cross or, 5 lions rampant gules; in the first quarter a beast winged passant with a human face; in the 2d a dove crowned volant; in the 3d a saint kneeling, a glory round his head; in the 4th a bull winged passant, all four or.

52. SIMON MEPHAM, S. T. P. was next chosen archbishop in 1327, by the free election of the convent, with the King's consent, who solicited the Pope in his behalf, styling him canon of Chester, S. T. P. and archbishop elect of Canterbury, and wrote to him again for that purpose, on April 20, anno 1328, and in the 2d year of his reign, on the same account again, and having heard that the Pope had made some objections to his confirmation, and that he designed to put in one, by his bull of provision, he intreated him in that case to place Henry, bishop of Lincoln, in this see (b); but the Pope, by means of a good present, consented, and Mepham was confirmed and consecrated at Rome, by him (c). Simon Mepham was a native of the parish of the same name, in the county of Kent, and was educated at Merton college in Oxford, where he proceeded S. T. P. and became fellow of it (d); he afterwards was promoted to a prebend of Landaff, to the like of Chester, and of St. Paul's, London, and was rector of Tunstall in Kent.

He, soon after his return to England, held a provincial council in 1331, in which a rubric of the principal holidays was settled, and the manner of the observance of them. In the same year he began a metropolitanical visitation, and made a progress through the southern dioceses, without opposition; but when he drew near the west, the bishop of Exeter appealed, notwithstanding the archbishop going forward to that city, was not permitted to enter either the church or the precincts of it, but was opposed by a multitude of persons armed (e).

Between this archbishop and the monks of St. Augustine's, there was a great and long controversy, which is related at large by Tborn, in his chronicle. In this cause the monks succeeded, and the archbishop was condemned by Icberius, whom the Pope had delegated to hear it, in 1210. to be paid to that monastery for costs of suit; but he would not submit to this judgment, and was therefore pronounced contumacious, and he died under sentence of excommunication, nor could he be buried till the abbat of St. Augustine's had absolved him. His next successor, however, caused this judgment to be reversed (f).

Having sat in this see five years, four months and seventeen days, with small comfort during the whole time of it, he fell sick from the continual vexations and troubles he had been involved in, and died at his palace of Mayfield, on February 11, 1333 (g), and his body being conveyed to Canterbury, was laid in his own cathedral, the bishop of Rochester performing his obsequies, under a tomb of black marble, on the north side of St. Anselm's chapel, where it still remains (h). He made one Laurence Falstaff his executor, who gave to the convent of Christchurch, 50l. to purchase 40s. annually, to celebrate his anniversary.

Archbishop Mepham was accounted well learned, as learning went in those times; he is said to have rebuilt the church of Mepham, in which parish he was born, as above-mentioned. His coat of arms was—Argent, on a cross azure, the letter M or, crowned of the same.

53. JOHN STRATFORD, L. L. D. so called from the place of his birth, was next elected archbishop

(b) Rym. Fœd. vol. iv, p. 351.

(c) Walsingham, p. 518.

(d) See Leland's Collect. vol. iv, p. 55.

(e) Walsingham, p. 131.

(f) Among the Chartæ Antiq. in the treasury of the dean and chapter, are two seals of this archbishop; one an oval, $2\frac{1}{2}$ by $1\frac{3}{4}$ diam. archbishop standing, mitred, robed, pall, blessing; cross in his left hand; Gothic nich over his head, the ground fretted—Counterfeal Becket's murder; the legends oblit. E. 137. The other a different counterfeal, being a small seal, a bust profile bearded; legend, SECRETUM. N. 25. Thorn, col. 2066. Bauely, pt. 2, p. 72.

(g) Weever says, on October 12.

(h) This chapel was then known by the name of the chapel of St. Peter and St. Paul. The record of the place kept in the church, of the manner and time of his burial, tells us, that he was laid in St. Peter's chapel, on the south side of the high altar.

ARCHBISHOPS.

in the year 1333. He was educated at Oxford, where he commenced doctor of both laws, and was afterwards preferred to a prebend in the church of York, and to the archdeaconry and a prebend of Lincoln; after which he was nominated to the bishopric of Winchester, but the Pope intending to fill that see with one of his own appointment, consented to the King's nomination of an archbishop; upon which the King recommended Stratford to the convent for their choice, which they complied with; however, the Pope, to keep up his authority, castated the election, and then appointed him, by his bull of provision, to this see (i); but it was not till after tedious suits and great charges in his attendance at the court of Rome, long before he was archbishop. On the death of K. Edward II, in 1327, the Spencers and others being brought to punishment, an inquisition was made concerning him, as to what could be laid to his charge; but nothing appeared against him, it was only noted, that when that King was forsaken and betrayed, as it were by his other counsellors, John Stratford continued faithful and constant to him. This generous honesty, so far from turning to his disadvantage, that it gained him the favour of K. Edward III, and his Queen (k), insomuch, that at the time when the King passed with his army into Flanders, he appointed the archbishop to be his sole justiciary, and committed to him the whole care and government of this kingdom during his absence. He had long had this King's, as well as his father's, esteem and confidence; whilst bishop of Winchester, in the 12th year of the former reign of K. Edward II, he was appointed treasurer, and in this reign, whilst in the same see,

(i) Mr. Battely has transcribed a copy of this bull in his Appendix, as a notorious instance of the intolerable usurpations of the court of Rome over this church; it is dated at Avignon the 6th of the calends of December, and the 18th year of the pope's pontificate. Besides this bull, to enhance the expence as much as possible, there were five other bulls sent by the pope upon this occasion, viz. a second, being a bull of provision of the said archbishop, directed to the chapter of Canterbury, concerning his translation, where it was received on February 11, 1334. A third bull directed to the clergy of the city and diocese of Canterbury. A fourth bull to the people of the city and diocese. A fifth bull to all the vassals of the church of Canterbury. A sixth bull to all the justiciars of the church of Canterbury; all which bulls were published in the church of Canterbury on the same day in which they were received, by Nicholas de Tharent, provost of the collegiate church of Wingham. See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 16, No. v, from the register of the church of Canterbury, marked P. pt. 2, fol. 26.

(k) Antiq. Eccl. Brit. p. 237. (l) Dugd. orig.

(m) In the parliament held at Westminster in the week after Easter, anno 15 Ed. III, the King came into St. Edward's chamber, commonly called the painted chamber, before whom, all the lords and commons being present, the

JOHN STRATFORD.

he had in the 4th year of it, the great seal delivered to him; two years after which, being employed in the King's business, his brother Robert de Stratford had the custody of the seal on that account. Being archbishop elect of Canterbury, he was on April 6, 8 Edward III, anno 1335, confirmed chancellor; on June 6, next year, he had the great seal delivered to him, and on April 28, 1341, he was again made chancellor and keeper of the great seal (l). At length, by the evil suggestions of some about the King, he fell under his heavy displeasure, and received harsh treatment from him (m); but he vindicated his own innocency so clearly and fully, that he was not only admitted again to the King's favour, but likewise of his privy council, and the King afterwards ever esteemed him to be what he really was, a man of singular prudence and integrity (n).

The archbishop was a man of learning, in the civil law especially, and was no less a faithful than an able servant of the crown. His disinterestedness in his state employment was almost unparalleled; he crossed the channel two and thirty times, in the public service, besides several journeys towards Scotland, whilst he was bishop, for all which he never received more than 300l. out of the King's exchequer; and he is recorded to have been an able politician, a disinterested patriot, and an excellent metropolitan. He was exceeding liberal in deeds of alms and charity; multitudes were fed daily with the remains of his table; and he relieved, for the most part with his own hands, thirteen poor people, three times a day; besides which, he built a fine college at Stratford-upon-Avon, the place of his archbishop humbled himself, and required his favour, which he granted; after which the archbishop desired, that where he was defamed through the realm, he might be arraigned in open parliament before his peers; to which the King answered, that he would attend to the common affairs, and after, hear others. See Cotton's Records, p. 34.

(n) Steph. Birchington. Antiq. Brit. Eccles. The King directed his letters patent to his faithful and well beloved the archbishop, his chancellor, and others, to hold his parliament, as he himself could not be present at the same, dated at Newcastle upon Tyne, anno 10 Ed. III, 1336. Rymer's Fœdera, vol. iv, p. 702. The King delivered the great seal to the archbishop, whom he had before made chancellor, on April 28, 14 Ed. III, 1340. Rym. Fœd. vol. v, p. 180. Which same office and seal he resigned into the King's hands, on June 20 that year, on account of his infirmities and ill health. Rym. Fœd. vol. x, p. 194. And on January 26, in his 15th year, the King recites that he had frequently summoned the archbishop to his presence, but that he had always excused himself, on account of his fears of his danger in it; the King therefore granted him his protection, and a safe conduct in coming, staying and returning, dated as aforesaid. Rym. Fœd. vol. x, p. 223.

ARCHBISHOPS.

birth, which he amply endowed, and he had the character of being very gentle and merciful, rather too remiss than any ways rigorous against offenders, and one of great pity to the poor and needy. In the former part of his life, he met with many undeserved crosses and severe treatment, but at the latter end he enjoyed, for a few years, much quiet and tranquility.

By his will, he bequeathed to his church his most costly cope, his mitre, two books of the canon law, and a yearly pension of 100s. out of the churches of Preston and Boughton, which he appropriated to the abbey of Faversham. Having sat as archbishop for about 15 years, he fell ill at Maidstone, and being carried to Mayfield in Sussex, he died there, and was buried in this cathedral, on the south side of the high altar, beside the choir, near where the steps of St. Dunstan's altar formerly was, under a tomb of alabaster, having his effigies in his pontifical habit, lying at full length on it, but without any inscription.

Among the Harleian manuscripts are several letters, between him and the abbat of St. Augustine's; his Treatise, entitled Commentarius de Deo; and there is a provincial letter of his, among the Bodleian manuscripts.

Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter, appendant to them are three seals of this archbishop, one an oval, $3\frac{1}{2}$ by 2 diam. being the archbishop standing mitred, robed, pall, blessing; a cross in his left hand; on one side a bishop's head; on the other a sword and key crossed; legend, JOHANNIS DEI GRATIA CANTUARIENSIS ARCHIEPI TOCIUS ANGLIE PRIMATIS. Counterseal, Becket's murder; legend, CHRISTO TRANSLATUM PRECIBUS FAC THOMAE BEATUM. A 184. another very fine and fair, the same as above, no counterseal; the third 2 inches by 1 and $\frac{1}{2}$ diam. seal the same as above; counterseal, Becket's murder, a figure holding up a small cross, above three niches, 1st and 3d, angels kneeling; in the center one, God the Father, hands uplifted; legend, CHRISTO TRANSLATUM PRECIBUS FAC THOME BEATUM. Z. 72. The archbishop bore for his arms—Per fessules gules and sable, 3 plates, or, according to archbishop Parker and others—Argent, a fess gules between 3 bezants.

(o) His name is so spelt in general by those who have mentioned him as archbishop, and his family and kindred, as above-mentioned; and in particular by the learned author of the Antiq. Brit. Eccl. p. 360; but in all the records which I have seen, his name is written Offord, or De Offord. Thus, John Offord, archdeacon of Ely, was sent in 1341, by the King, to conclude a truce with the French King. See Rym. Fæd. vol. v, p. 338; and next year John de Offord was privy seal; when on October 4, the King being at Sandwich, ready to embark for foreign parts, delivered the great seal to him to keep; and he delivered one certain other seal to be used by the chancellor, whilst the King remained abroad, to Robert Parming, which seal the

STRATFORD—UFFORD.

Upon the death of John Stratford, the prior and convent elected Thomas Bradwardin, but the Pope, by title of his bull of provision, filled the chair with John Ufford.

54. JOHN UFFORD, LL. D. chancellor of England, was elected archbishop in 1348. He was brother to Robert de Ufford, earl of Suffolk (o). He was educated at Cambridge, where he took his degree of doctor of both laws, after which, he was preferred to a prebend of Wells, and dean of Lincoln, and lastly, to be lord chancellor of England; which office he held when he was promoted to this archbishopric, in which he sat only six months and four days, for being a sickly, weak man and much afflicted with the palsy, he died before he was either consecrated or confirmed, on July 18, 1349, in the time of the great plague, which, as Walsingham writes, destroyed nine parts of the men throughout England, and his body being brought to Canterbury, without any pomp or solemnity, was there secretly buried in the middle of the night, in the cathedral, by the north wall in the martyrdom, beside the wall of St. Thomas Becket. He does not seem to have had any monument erected for him, though that remaining there now, besides Warham's tomb, and allowed by most to be that of archbishop Peckham's, has been by some conjectured to have been erected for archbishop Ufford (p), whose gravestone is still to be seen on the pavement, in the martyrdom, though it has for a long time been robbed of its brasses.

Archbishop Ufford is said to have died intestate, and that his brother Andrew Ufford, archdeacon of Middlesex, was sued for dilapidations by archbishop Islip, his next successor but one, to the value of 1101l. and upwards, which he was sentenced to pay, notwithstanding Ufford was archbishop so short a time. Thus Parker, in his Antiquities of the British Church. In one of the registers of this church, there is a commission given by this prior and chapter to John Leech, canon of the church of Sarum, dated June 11, 1349, to prove the last will and testament of John Ufford, late archbishop, and to deliver a copy of it before the feast of St. John Baptist; but there is no such will registered, which probably would have been, had there been any such (q).

said chancellor opened at Dartford on the Sunday following, in his return to London, and sealed with it. Rym. Fæd. vol. v, p. 343. Master John de Offord was made chancellor, to whom the great seal was delivered October 26, 19 Ed. III, anno 1346. Dugd. orig. John de Offord confirmed archbishop elect and chancellor, died on the Eve of the Ascension, 23 Ed. III, anno 1349, at Tettenhall near London, after sunset. Rym. Fæd. vol. v, p. 343. Andrew Offord, brother to the archbishop, and professor of the civil law, was much employed by the King in his negotiations of state. Rym. Fæd. vol. v, p. 343, passim.

(p) Battely's Somner, p. 129. (q) Ibid. pt. 2, p. 72.

These

ARCHBISHOPS.

These great dilapidations most probably arose from the unfinished state in which he had left the palace at Maidstone, which he had begun to rebuild, but died before he had done hardly any thing to the finishing of it (r). The archbishop bore for his arms—Sable, a cross engrailed, or (s).

55. THOMAS BRADWARDIN, S. T. P. after this see had been vacant for two months and three days, was elected a second time in 1349, by the convent (t); but the Pope taking no notice of his election, constituted him archbishop by his papal power (u). He was born at Heathfield in Sussex, and was educated at Merton college in Oxford, of which he became fellow, and commenced there S. T. P. and had afterwards a prebend of Lincoln conferred on him. He was the most famous divine and theologist of his time, on which account he was named by the Pope, doctor profundus; he was in every respect a good and pious man, and had been recommended by archbishop Stratford to the King, as a man well qualified to be his successor. He was the King's confessor, in which office he reproved the King with a becoming freedom, whenever he saw occasion for it, and as such, he attended the King, both at home and abroad likewise, in all his wars, and yet never made a petition for reward or preferment; and when the King restored the temporalities to him, he saluted him by the name of father.

The fatigue of his journey to Rome for his confirmation and consecration was so great, that he fell ill of a fever, of which he died soon after his return to England (v), at a house of the bishop of Rochester's, at Lambeth, on Decem. 18, 1349, within five weeks and four days after his consecration, having never been intonized, and was buried in this cathedral, in St. Anselm's chapel, by the south wall (w). Weever has recorded this inscription for him:

Doct̄or doct̄orum BRADWARDIN hac jacet urna,
Norma pastorum laudabilis & diuturna.
Qui invidia caruit vitam sine crimine duxit,
Et ex ore suo quicquid sit scibile fluxit.
Nullus sub sole est cui sic fuere omnia nota.
Cantia nunc dote, tristeris & Anglia tota.
Vos qui & transitis, hic omnes atque reditis,
Dicite quod CHRISTI pietas sit promp̄tor isti.

(r) Lambard, p. 221, 559.

(s) So Parker in his Antiq. Brit. Eccl. being the coat borne by the family of Ufford, earls of Suffolk.

(t) See above.

(u) After this manner all the succeeding archbishops to the time of the reformation, excepting some few who were duly elected by the convent, received their admission to this dignity, by virtue of the authority of the pope's bull of provision. All those bulls which had formerly been granted by the several popes to confirm the convent's right of election, being superseded by these bulls of provision.

(v) Stephen Birchington. H. Knyghton, col. 2600; and Antiq. Brit. Eccl. (w) Battely's Somner, p. 133.

(x) He wrote Geometrica & Arithmetica Speculativa, both

BRADWARDIN—ISLIP.

He was besides being so exquisite a divine, a good mathematician, a great philosopher, and a general scholar in all liberal sciences, as his writings, which are extant, shew (x); but above all, he was commended for his uprightness and sincerity of life and conversation.

He bore for his arms—Barry of 6, sable and ermine, 6 guttees de larmes, or, according to archbishop Parker, barry of 6, ermines and ermine.

56. SIMON ISLIP, LL. D. was next constituted archbishop in 1349, and as it is said, by the monks election, the Pope's approbation, and the King's good liking; but he was consecrated by virtue of a bull from the Pope.

He is said to have taken his name from the place of his birth at Islip in Oxfordshire (y), and to have been educated at Merton college in Oxford, of which he became fellow, and where he took his degree of doctor of canon law. He afterwards held the two prebends of Welton, in the church of Lincoln, to the bishop of which he was vicar general and official, and was preferred to the archdeaconry of Stow. When he was constituted archbishop of this see in 1349, he was then canon of St. Paul's church in London, dean of the arches, privy counsellor, secretary and keeper of the privy seal to K. Edward III; which offices he administered so well, that he became gracious to the King, which induced the monks to choose him archbishop (z).

When he first came to the see, there was a great mortality, by the raging of the plague, as Harpsfield notes from Walsingham, with this comment on it; when, says he, the fields lay untilled, waste and deserted, by reason of this mortality of men and cattle, and the owners were disappointed of receiving their accustomed rents, being forced not only to remit somewhat of the usual pension which was wont to be paid, but even to hire out to husbandmen their fields ready furnished, with all manner of husbandry furniture. He was strict and severe, even to extremity, upon the clergy in his visitations; he obtained a bull for the Pope to levy a tax upon the clergy of his province, after the rate of fourpence in the marc, towards his support; but he went beyond his commission, and extorted from printed at Paris, anno 1512; and Tractatus Proportionum. Venet. 1505; and some other Tracts which are not printed. He wrote a Treatise against Pelagius, and another, De Virtute Causarum, ad surs Mertonenses, in three books, published by sir Henry Savile, London, 1618, folio; before which sir Henry wrote and prefixed his life. Among the Bodleian manuscripts, there is the Treatise of this archbishop's on geometry, and that against Pelagius, both above-mentioned.

(y) In the parish church of Islip, in memory of him, there was formerly in several of the windows, his device which was, a boy slipping down from a tree, and over his head, and in a label from his mouth, these words on a scroll, Islip, in allusion to his name.

(z) Parker Antiq. Ecc. Brit.

the

ARCHBISHOPS.

the clergy of his diocese, a whole tenth. He founded and endowed about the year 1363, Canterbury college in Oxford, of which a full account has already been given. He restored and annexed to his convent, for the use of the almshouse, the parsonages of Monkton and Eastry, which archbishop Baldwin had taken from it, and with his consent Buckland parsonage was appropriated to the priory of Dover, and the parsonage of Bilsington to the priory there; to recover the impoverishment of his see, he lived frugally all his life, and when he was intbronized, he dined privately, and spared the expences of that usual great feast (b).

The archiepiscopal palace at Maidstone having been left unfinished by archbishop Ufford, he took it in hand, and for this purpose pulled down the antient palace at Wrotham; and though he recovered from the administrators of archbishop Ufford to the amount of 1101l. for dilapidations, most part of which was probably on account of the unfinished state of the above house, yet his not finding that sum sufficient, was, in all likelihood, one of the causes of his levying the tenth on his clergy, as above-mentioned.

Having sat as archbishop for the space of 16 years and upwards, he died at Mayfield in Suffex, April 26, 1366 (c). By his will he bequeathed to the convent of Christ church, 1000 sheep, to be kept as a perpetual stock; six dozen of silver plates, and as many silver salt sellers; four silver basons,

(b) Steph. Birchington. Lambarde, p. 231, 539, 559. Battely, pt 2, p. 73. (c) Battely's Somner, p. 134.

(d) On the removing the old pavement of the nave in 1786, at a small distance from the tomb of this archbishop, there was found a stone coffin, the lid of which has been purloined, most probably by the saints, in the middle of the last century; it was in some measure fitted to the human body, and of the shape underneath; the dimensions were

	ft.	in.		ft.	in.
Cavity of the Head	1	11	Length from shoulder to feet	6	3
Breadth of Shoulders	2	0	From out to out	6	10
Breadth at the Feet	1	3	Depth of the Coffin	0	10½

ISLIP—LAGHAM.

with their ewers, &c. his vestments which were all of cloth of gold, and a very sumptuous cope.

Having ordered his funeral to be as private as possible, and with as little expence as might be contrived, he was buried at midnight, in the middle, near the upper end of the nave of the cathedral; on the rebuilding of which his tomb, which was a handsome one of marble, having on it his figure and inscription, inlaid with brass, was removed and placed between the two pillars, opposite to it on the north side of the new nave, where it remained till it was taken away, on the making of the new pavement, a few years ago (d).

Weever has preserved the inscription, on the verge of this tomb, the brasses on which have been torn away many years ago.

SIMON ISLIP oriens, vir bina lege probatus,
Ut nascens, moriens sic nunc jacet arte locatus,
Arcem qui tenuit hic quondam pontificatus,
Clero quique fuit regno toti quoque gratus.
Princeps pastorum fac SIMON apostolorum,
SIMON ut iste eorum per eos peringat eorum
Mil. trecenteno, sexageno modo feno
Ejus septeno pastoratus quoque dono
Hic kal. Maii feno rupto carnis nece freno
Flos cadit a feno celo peto qui sit ameno

O spes sanctorum decus & pie CHRISTE tuorum,
Cetibus ipsorum prece jungas hunc precor horum.

Archbishop Islip wrote a treatise, entitled, Speculum Regis Edwardi 3ⁱⁱⁱ, which is among the Harleian manuscripts.

Some have supposed that this curious coffin contained the remains of archbishop Islip, who was buried in the middle of the old nave, near the upper end, about the place where this was found. The bones, like almost all the rest within this church, appeared to have been disturbed, the skull much broken, and lying upon the breast, but the teeth were nearly perfect; from this coffin being of stone, and from the shape of it, there seems a greater probability of its being of a much earlier date than the time of archbishop Islip.

Among

ARCHBISHOPS:

SIMON LANGHAM.

Among the Chartæ Antiquæ of the dean and chapter, in their treasury, are two seals of this archbishop, 3 inches by 2 diam. having on them a fine representation of Becket's murder, before the altar; underneath is archbishop Islip, in a nich, praying; the legend not fair enough to be read; no counterfeitals. Q. 165. Z. 49. He bore for his arms—Gules, a cross formee, or.

57. SIMON LANGHAM, bishop of Ely, was translated from that see on November 4, 1366, to this archiepiscopal chair of Canterbury. He had been first a monk, then prior, and lastly, abbat of Westminster, from which office he was elected to the see of London, but before his consecration he was, in 1361, translated to that of Ely, with which he held several preferments in commendam, among which was the archdeaconry and treasurer'ship of Wells, on his being translated to Canterbury. It is said by an author (e) to have been a cause of as much joy to Ely, as it was of grief to Canterbury; but what gave occasion to this severe censure is not known, as he does not appear to have deserved it.

He had been lord treasurer, and in 1363 was made lord chancellor of England (f), at which time it is observed, that all the great and public offices of state were usually held by the clergy. In 1368 the archbishop was created a cardinal presbiter of the church of Rome, by the title of Sii Sixti (g), upon which he resigned his archbishopric (h), and went to Rome, of which he is said to have repented afterwards (i), and to have tried to be reinstated in it again; in which, however, he did not succeed, as will be further mentioned below.

He died at Avignon on July 22, 1376, where he had lived in great estimation about eight years, being suddenly taken with the palsy, as he sat at dinner, and was first buried there in the church of the Carthusians, which he had founded; from which his body was, three years afterwards removed, by his own appointment whilst he was alive, to Westminster, and buried in the abbey church there (k), to which he had been, whilst abbat of it, wonderfully bountiful (l), close to the north side of the choir, where he lies under a handsome tomb of alabaster, having his effigies, lying at full length on it, habited in his pontificals, and this inscription round the verge of it: Hic jacet dom. SIMON de LANGHAM quondam abbas hujus loci thesaurarius anglie, electus London, episcopus Elien. Can- cellarius anglie, archiepiscopus Cantuar. presbyter cardinalis & postea episcopus cardinalis.

SIMON de LANGHAM sub petris hijs tumulatus, Istius ecclesie monachus fuerat, prior, abbas; Sede vacante fuit electus Londoniensis Presul, et insignis Ely, sed postea primas Totius regni, magnus regisque minister: Nam thesaurarius, et cancellarius ejus, Ac cardinalis in Roma presbyter iste. Postque Prenestinus est factus episcopus, atque Nuncius ex parte pape transmittitur istuc. Orbe dolente pater, quem nunc revocare nequimus MAGDALENE festo, milleno septuageno, Et ter centeno sexto CHRISTI ruit anno. Hunc DEUS absoluat de cunctis que male gessit, Et meritis matris sibi celica gaudia donet.

As to his character, he is said to have been a very great and wise man, of a noble appearance, capable of filling with a good grace the several places he held in church and state. He was, whilst chancellor, esteemed a good speaker, and it was in a very critical juncture of affairs when he steered the helm. As to church matters, he is said to have managed them with the highest commendation, except, that being a benedictine monk, he was too much bigotted to his own order; as to his turning the seculars out of Canterbury college, contrary to the will of the founder, and placing regulars in their room, it certainly was an action by no means justifiable; but it raised a spirit in that body of learned men, with Wickliffe at their head, and indeed of the best part of the university, to speak more openly of the insufferable oppressions of the prelacy, and to inveigh vigorously against the orders of regulars. These investives, as they began largely to convulse the state at that time, so in their effect they shook the papal power so considerably, that it never rightly recovered, even to the time it ceased totally within the realm.

As to his private character, he is said to have been affable, humble, temperate and very munificent, and therefore the satirical reflection, above-mentioned, seems to have been the produce of some personal, and perhaps single discontent; and who does not know how often a very trifle, repeated by rote and handed about, will stigmatize the best of characters. That this was his case, appears from the regard those of both his cathedrals had for him; the monk of Ely calls him a discreet and provident pastor, and says,

(e) Stephen Birchington.

(f) Simon de Langham, abbat of Westminster, made treasurer November 21, 34 Edward III, anno 1361, being bishop of Ely, he received the great seal from the King, Feb. 19, 36 Edward III. Dugd. orig.

(g) He was afterwards made a cardinal bishop of Preneste.

(h) He sat in this see two years and three weeks.

(i) Battely, pt. 2, p. 73. (k) Ibid, p. 134.

(l) Leland col. vol. iv, p. 23, vol. v, p. 194. The value of what he bestowed on this church of Westminster, at different times, amounted in the whole to 10,800l. See the particulars in Willis's Mitred Abbeyes, vol. i, p. 205, and in Weever, p. 480.

ARCHBISHOPS.

that his memory should ever be remembered among the blessed bishops; and the value those of Canterbury had for him, appears by their readiness to elect him a second time; and the reason they gave the Pope for it, that having lately presided as their pastor, he had been very kind and beneficent to their church; facts which must annihilate every malicious stigma, so wantonly spread abroad to depreciate the character of this great and munificent prelate.

There is a seal of this archbishop appendant to one of the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter; it is very fair and fine, having the archbishop mitred, robed, pall, blessing, a crozier in his left hand; the legend, - - - - -
CARDINALIS ARCHIEPI TOCIUS ANGLIÆ PRIMAS; on his right hand, the arms of England; on the left, the see of Canterbury E. 56. The archbishop bore for his arms—Or, a chevron embattled gules, between 3 trefoils slipped vert.

58. WILLIAM WITTESLEY, LL. D. bishop of Worcester, was on October 11, 1368, translated from that see to this archbishopric.

He was a native of Huntingdonshire, and nephew to archbishop Islip, at whose charges he had been brought up at Oxford, where he proceeded doctor of the common law, whence he was sent by his uncle to Rome, to solicit his causes, and gain experience by seeing the practice of that court; after some time he was called home, and by his uncle preferred to be his vicar general, and dean of the arches; he was next preferred to the archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and prebend of Nassington in the church of Lincoln, and then to the rectories of Croydon, and Cliff near Hoo; after which he was promoted to the see of Rochester, from whence he was translated to that of Worcester, and thence again to this archbishopric, as above-mentioned.

Nothing remarkable happened during his presiding over this church, excepting his procuring a bull from the Pope to free the university of Oxford from the jurisdiction of the bishop of Lincoln, and to govern themselves by their own officers and statutes.

He had long been troubled with a lingering disease, of which he died at Lambeth, on June 5, an. 1374(m), having sat in this see five years and up-

(m) Chron. Tables, anno 1375.

(n) Battely, pt. 2, p. 73. His will may be seen in the register of the church of Canterbury, dated June 5, 1374; and proved June 13th following. Battely, pt. 2, app. No. xiii^a.

(o) Leland in his Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 5, says, one of the high tombes of Bishops in the body of the church was for Whiteseley born at Whiteseley in Huntedunshire, first archdeacon of Huntedune, then bishop of Rochester, and last of Cantwarbyri. (p) Weever, p. 26.

(q) On the laying the new pavement in 1786, on the south side of the nave, between two of the pillars, under this archbishop's tomb, his remains were found. He was buried in the solid chain of foundation, made from one pillar to wards. By his last will he gave all his books of the civil and canon law, and of divinity, to St. Peter's, commonly called Peter House college in Cambridge, of which he had formerly been custos or master (n). He bequeathed his substance to his poor relations, by which it should seem, that he was not very rich, and appointed John de Woodhall, Walter Dancy and John de Sufstorn, his executors.

WILLIAM WITTESLEY.—SIMON DE SUDBURY.

He was buried over against the tomb of his uncle archbishop Islip, between two pillars, on the south side of the upper part of the nave of this cathedral, under a handsome marble tomb (o), having his portraiture, in his pontificals, with an inscription round it, engraved in brass, long since torn from it; but the tomb itself has been removed only some few years since, on the new paving of the nave.

Weever says (p), only the following part of his inscription remained in his time.

..... tumulatus,
..... WITTESEY natus,
Gemmata luce (q).

He was esteemed a man of singular learning, and an excellent preacher, as appears by the two Sermons in Latin, which he preached at the two synods he convened.

There is a seal of this archbishop's appendant to one of the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter, oval, 4 inches by 2 and $\frac{1}{2}$, having the archbishop standing, mitred, robed, pall, blessing; cross in his left hand; above, Gothic niches; in the upper one, God the Father holding a crucifix; on each side the archbishop, a shield with the arms of the see. O. 112. The archbishop bore for his arms—Or, a saltire azure. After his death, the monks elected to this see their former archbishop, Simon Langham, then a cardinal of the church of Rome, who repenting that he had resigned this chair, endeavoured thus to obtain possession of it again (r); but on the monks making this election, the King was so highly exasperated against them, that he had intentions of expelling and banishing them from the convent for ever; but the Pope interposing, in order to appease the King, he translated Simon Sudbury from the see of London to this archbishopric (s).

59. SIMON DE SUDBURY, bishop of London and the other, along the whole of the nave on both sides. The place where he lay was cut out in the foundation partly in the shape of a coffin, the skeleton was entire, the body had been laid in wood ashes; a leaden seal of a papal bull of indulgence was found near the hand. See the figure of it on page 720.

(r) Antiq. Brit. Eccl. p. 283. Ang. Sacr. P. i, p. 120, 794.

(s) On archbishop Witesseley's death the King granted the custody of the archbishopric to Thomas Newoe, parson of the church of Godmersham; John de Woodhall, clerk; Simon de Burgh; Richard Sansemere, clerk; and William Tydecombe; dated at Westminster 8 Aug. 48 Ed. III, anno 1374. King's Fæd. vol. vii, p. 42.

ARCHBISHOPS.

WILLIAM COURTNEY.

doctor of the common law, was thus accordingly promoted to be the next archbishop of this see in May 1375 (t), being so called from the place of his nativity, his father's name being Tybold. Going abroad to finish his education, he commenced doctor of the canon law in France, and afterwards became chaplain to Pope Innocent VI, and auditor of the Rota at Rome. At his return to England, he was made chancellor of Salisbury, and then bishop of London. On the 20th of October following his promotion to this see, he accompanied the Duke of Lancaster to negotiate a treaty of peace between England and France; but after some months being spent in this business, without success, he returned and was intbronized on Palm Sunday, in his own church (u), with great solemnity, the Earl of Stafford performing the office of high steward at that feast. He performed the solemnity of crowning K. Richard II, and was made chancellor of England on Jan. 30, 1380 (v).

He was a man, wise, learned, eloquent, merciful, wonderfully revered, and of a liberal, free and generous spirit (w); whilst bishop of London, he built the east end of St. Gregorie's church in Sudbury, and founded and endowed a college of secular priests, on the same scite on which his father's house once stood (x). After his coming to this see he was a great benefactor to the city of Canterbury, for he built the Westgate of it, together with the greatest part of the wall between it and North gate, called the Long Wall; a great work, no less necessary and profitable to the city, than costly and chargeable to the builder; in remembrance of this goodly work the mayor and aldermen of this city, once a year used to come solemnly to his tomb to pray for his soul; to prevent which superstition, his epitaph was torn off from it at the reformation (y). Besides this, he built the two lower cross wings of the cathedral, and pulled down the whole of the nave, with an intent of rebuilding it, at his own costs (z), and had done greater things than any of his predecessors, if he had not been untimely cut off; for in the rebellion which was headed by Walter Hilliard, commonly called Wat Tyler, and his followers, on June 14, 1381, he was, together with sir Robert Hales, master of the hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, barbarously murdered on Tower Hill (a); some time after which, when the disturbance was ended, his body was brought to his own cathedral, and there honourably deposited under a handsome tomb upon the south side of the choir, and of the altar of St. Dunstan, the next above the tomb of archbishop Stratford (b).

Weever has given part of an inscription, composed to his memory, from a manuscript in the Cotton library, but does not say whether it was upon his tomb.

*Sudburie natus SIMON jacet bis tumultatus
Martyrizatus nece pro republica stratus.
Heu scelus infernum, crux, exitiale, nefandum,
Presulis eximii corpus venerabile dandum
In rabiem vulgi*

The archbishop made a nuncupative will, on Tuesday, being the feast of St. Basil Confessor, in the Tower of London, anno 1381, in the presence of William Riving, prior of the church of the Holy Trinity, in London, and John Onyngs, steward of his household, whom he appointed his executors (c).

There is a seal of this archbishop appendant to one of the Charte Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter, oval, 3 inches by 1½, perfect; under Gothic niches, over which is a crucifix, is Becket's murder; underneath which is the figure of the archbishop, on one side of him a shield, with the arms of the see; on the other, another with the archbishop's own arms—A talbot bound sejant, within a bordure engrailed; legend, s. SIMONIS DE SUDBURI, the rest obliterated, F. 80.

60. WILLIAM COURTNEY, LL. D. bishop of London, was promoted to this see in 1381. He

(t) A fragment of his life, written by William de Chartbam, is published in Ang. Sacr. vol. i, p. 40.

(u) Thorn. col. 2150, who says, he had received the pall in Flanders, before his return.

(v) Battely, pt. 2, p. 74. He appears as chancellor in the parliaments of the 4th and 5th Richard II. See Cotton's Record's, p. 188, 298. K. Richard II. delivered the great seal to the archbishop on the Mouday next before the feast of the Conversion of St. Paul, anno 1380, 3 Rich. II. Rym. Fæd. vol. vii, p. 233; and he resigned the seal on the eve of Corpus Christi, 1381, anno 4 Rich. II. Rym. Fæd. vol. vii, p. 310. Dugd. orig.

(w) See an account of his charities in Stow's Survey, B. i, p. 84, 86. It appears that he supplied the King liberally in his necessities, for in the first year of his reign he lent him 500 marcs; and next year 100l. more towards the expences of his wars; and in his 10th year he lent him 500 marcs more. See Rymer's Fæd. vol. vii, p. 178, 210, 544.

(x) Hist. de Episc. London.

(y) Battely's Somner, p. 134.

(z) In aid of this purpose, he had obtained a grant of the revenues of the archdeaconry of Canterbury in the second year of that reign, for so long time as it should continue in the King's hands. See Rym. Fæd. vol. vii, p. 216.

(a) His head having been cut off, (being shockingly mangled by eight several strokes before it was severed from his body) was stuck on a pole and set upon London-bridge. The rebels had taken particular offence at the archbishop, for having imprisoned one John Balle, a famous preacher, in Maidstone goal, for preaching heterodox notions. The rabble going thither, took him out, and obliged him to go with them, proposing to exalt him to be archbishop. See Knyghton, col. 2634.

(b) Leland Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 3, says, "Symon Suthebyri lyith in the Highe Tumbe of Coper and Gilte—among the Bishops under the South side of the Pillars on the South side of the High Altar."

(c) See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xiii.

ARCHBISHOPS.

was 4th son of Hugh, earl of Devonshire (d); he was educated at Oxford, and was first promoted to prebends in the churches of Wells, Exeter, and York, after which, by the Pope's bull of provision, he was in 1369, promoted to the bishopric of Hereford, at which time he was chancellor of that university; from the above see he was translated to that of London in 1375, and from thence again to this archbishopric, when being archbishop elect, he appeared as lord chancellor, and was confirmed as such in parliament, on Nov. 9, an. 5 Rich. II. (e).

He was a prelate of a high and noble mind, and of a liberal disposition; he was ever jealous to rescue the ecclesiastical jurisdictions from the incroachments of the secular power, and was a severe enemy to the Lollards and followers of Wickliff (f). He called to account the bailiffs of the city of Canterbury, for intermeddling with ecclesiastical matters, and forced them to desist, under the penalty of having an interdict laid upon the city; and he did the like to the sergeants of the city, for bearing their maces and using their authority within the precincts of the church. But at the petition of the city, they were dismissed, provided, that for the time to come, they should leave their maces without the outer gate, when they came to the church, or within the precincts of it. He had the bailiffs of the town of Romney, in suit, for intermeddling in church business, who obstinately resisted, and thought to secure themselves by a prohibition; but in this they were deceived; for he got it reversed, and, as the record says, made that unadvised town to submit.

Notwithstanding this strictness on the one hand, he was not remiss in exacting from his clergy their assistance, when public necessity demanded it; for when the French had an intention of invading this kingdom, the archbishop directed his letters to his commissary, to arm the clergy of this city and diocese, for the defence of it; in short, in all matters in this turbulent reign of K. Richard II, he behaved with great prudence, opposing the usurpations of the Pope over the prerogatives of the crown, and maintaining friendship with those great and wise men

(d) By his wife Margaret, daughter of Humphry Bobun, earl of Hereford, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of K. Edward I, to whom he was second husband. See Biog. Brit. vol. iii, p. 1490.

(e) The temporalities were restored on October 23, 1381, anno 5 R. II. Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 333. He resigned the great seal which he had held when bishop of London into the King's hands at Westminster, November 30th following. Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 336.

(f) See T. Walsingham, p. 285, 286. Knyghton, col. 2708, 2736.

(g) Battely, pt. 2, p. 33. See among the Harleian Mss. as well as among those in the Bodleian library, their several letters from and to archbishop Courtney.

(h) Leland in his Itin. vol. vi, f. 2, p. 2, says, "Courte-

WILLIAM COURTNEY.

Robert Braybrooke, bishop of London, and William Wickbam, bishop of Winchester (g).

At Maidstone, the archbishop pulled down the oldwork, first built by archbishop Boniface, his predecessor, for an hospital, and having built it after a more modern and stately manner, he converted it into a college of secular priests; and in the codicil to his last will, he gave all the residue of his goods, after his debts and legacies were paid, according to the disposition of his executors, towards the building of this collegiate church (b). He repaired the church of Meopham, and confirmed it to the use of the almonry, and built four houses near it, and he added five scholars to Canterbury college in Oxford.

He obtained of K. Richard II, four fairs for his church, to be kept within the precincts of it (i); to the buildings of his church and priory, he was a munificent benefactor, for he gave towards the repairing of the walls of the precincts, 266l. 13s. 4d. He new-built the lodgings and kitchen belonging to the infirmary, at his own cost of 133l. 6s. 8d. He expended in making a new glass window in the nave of the church, in honour of St. Elpbage, 20l. He built the south pane, or side of the cloister, at the expence of 200l. He gave to the high altar, an image of the Holy Trinity, with six of the apostles in silver, gilt, valued at 340l. and a rich cope, worth 300l. He obtained of K. Richard and others of his friends, towards the building of the nave of the church, the sum of 1000l. and he is recorded to have given out of his own purse 1000 marks, towards the same building.

He died at his palace of Maidstone, on July 31, in the year 1396, having sat in this chair twelve years, all but one month (k). Where he was buried, has been a great doubt, our historians differing much as to the place of it. Bishop Godwyn tells us, this archbishop lies buried on the south side of Thomas Becket's shrine, at the feet of the Black Prince, in a goodly tomb of alabaster. Here in the Trinity chapel is, at this time indeed extant, this his tomb, having his effigies at full length, habited in his pontifical dress, lying at length on it (l), but Weever in his Funey was Founder of the College of Maydestone where the Master is a Prebendarie. The Residue be Ministers to Devyne Service. Courtney buildyd muche in the Towne self of Maydestone and also at the Palace ther." Lambard thinks it not unlikely, that the bridge at Maidstone, built near the archbishop's palace there, received help from archbishop Courtney; who, he says, repaired likewise the church of Meopham, which had probably been built by his predecessor archbishop Simon Meopham, fourscore years before, and annexed thereto four new houses, for the use of the poor.

(i) Battely's Somner, p. 135, pt. 2, p. 75.

(k) Battely's Somner, p. 135, pt. 2, p. 74.

(l) There seems to have been a chantry granted to the archbishop in this church. See Regist. Eccl. Christi R.

ARCHBISHOPS.

WILLIAM COURTNEY.

neral Monuments, seems to differ from him, for he tells us (m), it was the custom of old, and so it was in his days, for men of eminent rank and quality to have tombs erected in more places than one; for example and proof of which, he found here in this church a monument of alabaster, at the feet of the Black Prince, in which, by tradition and writing, it was affirmed, that the bones of William Courtney, archbishop of Canterbury, lay intombed; but as he found another to his memory at Maidstone, he rather believed, because of the epitaph, that he laid buried there under a plain gravestone with his portraiture, in his pontifical vestments, and this epitaph round it, all inlaid with brafs.

*Nomine WILLELMUS en COURTNEIUS reverendus,
Qui se post obitum legaverat hic tumulandum,
In presenti loco quem jam fundarat ab imo;
Omnibus & sanctis titulo sacraavit honoris.
Ultima lux Julii fit vite terminus illi;
M. ter C. quinto decies nonoque sub anno,
Respice mortalis quis quondam, sed modo talis,
Quantus & iste fuit dum membra calentia gessit.
Hic primas patrum, cleri dux & genus altum,
Corpore valde decens, sensus & acumine clarens.
Filius hic comitis generosi Devonienfis.
Legum doctor erat celebris quem fama serenat.
Urbs Herefordensis, polis inclita Londoniensis.
Ac Dorobernenfis, sibi trine gloria sedis
Detur honor digno, fit cancellarius ergo.
Sanctus ubique pater, prudens fuit ipse minister
Nam largus, letus, castus, pius atque pudicus,
Magnanimus, justus, & egenis totus amicus.
Et quia rex CHRISTE pastor bonus extitit iste, Sumat solamen nunc tecum quesumus. Amen.*

The archbishop's place of burial appointed by him in his will, which is still extant in the register of the church of Canterbury, was the cathedral of Exeter, in the nave there; but having afterwards changed his mind in this point, he, whilst lying on his death-bed, made a codicil to his will, in which, holding his body, as he then declared, unworthy of burial in his metropolitcal, or any other cathedral or collegiate church, he willed to be buried in the church-yard of his collegiate church of Maidstone, in the place designed for John Boteler, his esquire; but it seems as if this part of his will was not fulfilled, for it appears by a small leiger book or obituary, kept in the library of the dean and chapter of Canterbury, that the King happening to be at Canterbury when he was to be buried, most likely at the request of the monks, over-ruled this matter, and commanded the body to be brought to Canterbury, where it was deposited in this cathedral, as above-mentioned (o); the King, many of the principal nobility, bishops, abbats and clergy, and upwards of 10,000 of the populace attending the solemnity of it (p).

There are large extracts from his will, with the codicil to it, printed in Battely, part ii, p. 74, appendix Numb. xiii^e. In the will, according to the piety of those times, he made provision for his soul in an ample manner, by ordering 15,000 masses to be celebrated for it, and 2,000 matins to be said; he mentions his parents, buried in Exeter cathedral, and the parish of St. Martin of Exminster, wherein he was born; he wills to King Richard his best cross, and 100l. and mentions the heavy and costly expences, with which, notwithstanding the instability of the time, he had repaired his manors, with his cattle of Saltwode. His legacies to his relations were many and considerable, in money, vestments, plate, jewels, &c. and they were so many besides to others, being more than 100, that he could not specify what to give, but in general devised to such and such a one, something; to Richard Courtney, his godson and pupil, whom, I suppose, he brought up, he gave 100 marks and his best mitre, provided he should attain to the episcopal dignity, which he did, by being consecrated bishop of Norwich; besides which, he devised to him three books, provided he should take his degree of master of arts, or bachelor of law, and enter into holy orders, and after his death these books to be given for ever to his church at Canterbury, in the register R. of which church there is an acquittance to the bishop, that the church had received of him the three precious books in six volumes, specified in the archbishop's will; and except these, I do not find that he gave any other books to this church. Hence bishop Godwyn's assertion may be doubted, who says, he gave very many books to this church; besides the above books, he gave to others several books, which were esteemed, at that time, of great value. His executors were, Thomas Cbillenden, prior of Christ church; Adam de Mottrum, his archdeacon, and six others.

(m) Weever, p. 225, 285.

(o) Thorn, col. 2147, says, in that year, viz. 1395, on the last day of July, Master William Courteneye, archbishop of Canterbury, the King with the nobles of the realm being present, was entombed near the shrine of St. Thomas; for the King was then on his way towards Calais, in order to be married to the daughter of the King of France.

(p) This is an obituary of the monks of Christ church, from the year 1486 to the year 1507, being an ancient quarto manuscript on parchment, marked D. 12-2; and is kept among other Mss. in the library of the dean and chapter at Canterbury. The following is the entry:—Anno Dni m^occcc^o lxxxvi ultimo mensis Julii feria ij obiit recolende memorie Dus Wilms Cortenay Archieps Cant in manio Suo de Maydyston circa hora nova diei cuj³ Corp³ fer v. Sequent delatum est Cant & in pncie Ricardi Regis incliti Secudi & multor; magnat platoru Comita & Baronu ad pedes dni Edwardi pncipis Wallie patris pfati dni Regis Ric Juxta feretru Sci Thome ex pte australi honorifice traditur Sepulturæ.

ARCHBISHOPS.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Or, 3 tor-teauxes, a label of 3 points azure, for difference, on each point a mitre, or.

61. THOMAS ARUNDEL, son of Robert, the brother of Richard Fitz Alan, earl of Arundel, by his wife Eleanor, daughter of Henry Plantagenet, earl of Lancaster, was next promoted to this see in 1396 (q).

He had been first archdeacon of Totness, and then preferred to the see of Ely, being consecrated on Aug. 13, 1373, at which time he was only 22 years of age; and notwithstanding his youth, he governed that church laudibly for upwards of 14 years, and was a liberal benefactor to it, as he was to that of York; to the archbishopric of which he was translated in 1388, and from thence again to this of Canterbury on September 25, 1396, being the 19th year of K. Richard II.'s reign, being intbronized with much magnificence, in the King's presence, on Sunday the 18th of February following; on which he resigned the office of lord chancellor, which he had held some years. But before the end of that year, having lost the King's favour, his goods were confiscated, and he was the year afterwards, anno 21 Richard II, attainted of treason in parliament, and sentenced to banishment (r); upon which he went to Rome, when the Pope would have translated him to the see of St. Andrew in Scotland, constituting Roger Walden archbishop in his room; but Arundel would not submit to it.

On K. Richard's being imprisoned in the Tower, he returned home, and was present and aiding towards his deposition (s), and was one of the chief instruments in placing K. Henry on the throne, whom, with the assistance of the archbishop of York, he afterwards crowned; immediately after which, the Duke of York, the Earl of Northumberland, and others of his kindred, prayed the (q) See Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 207.

(r) He was accused on September 20, anno 21 Richard II, by the Commons in full parliament, for having, when chancellor, executed as chief, the commission to view the state of the realm; and the King having afterwards procured a House of Commons, at his devotion, archbishop Arundel was impeached, for having executed a commission so prejudicial to the royal prerogative; and though the King had promised to indemnify him, in order to prevent his making any defence, yet he suffered him to be banished. Cotton's Rec. p. 368.

(s) The archbishop's banishment was one of the articles alleged against K. Richard, for his deposition in the parliament, anno 1 Hen. IV. See Decim. Script. col. 2743; from Rot. Parl. m. 20. Cotton's Records, p. 388.

(t) Cotton's Records, p. 392. The King of his especial grace, granted to the archbishop all the temporalities of the see, which remained in the hands of K. Richard II, under colour of the sentence passed against him in the parliament held in the 21st year of that reign; which sentence, as erroneous and invalid, by assent of parliament, he revoked and annulled; which temporalities were seized, and then remained in the King's hands, to hold and enjoy the same from the time of seizing them into the said King's hand,

THOMAS ARUNDEL.

King in full parliament, that the archbishop might have his recovery against Roger Walden, for the waste and spoil done by him in the archbishopric, which the King granted, and thanked them for the motion (t). The archbishop was present in the parliament held in the 4th year of K. Henry IV, anno 1404, at Coventry, when some among the Commons moved, in order to raise money for the defence of the realm, and for carrying on the King's wars, that the clergy should be deprived of their temporal possessions, to the relief of the King's necessities; but archbishop Arundel opposed it, shewing what great service the clergy did to the crown for their lands, and that they were always ready to assist the King, not only with their prayers and counsels, but with their purses likewise, and put him in mind of his coronation oath, which so far prevailed on the King, that the matter was then laid aside; and the archbishop told the Commons, that the King and his predecessors had formerly been advised to seize the alien priories, under the pretence of being much enriched by their goods and possessions, which were certainly of great value, but that the King was not at that time half a marc richer, because they had begged them; and that their advice to the King then was to seize on the temporalities of the clergy, to enrich themselves, and not him, and should he gratify their wicked designs, he would not be one farthing the richer the year after.

In 1407, he was made chancellor (u), but resigned that high office three weeks afterwards (v); however, he was again reinstated in it, and continued to hold it in the 13th year of that reign (w).

In the year 1411, the archbishop intending to visit the university of Oxford, was opposed in so doing (x), upon which, the right to it was litigated, and it was decreed in chancery, that the whole university, and all orders, persons and fa-dated 1 H. IV, Oct. 21. pat. 1, m. 15 (1399). Rym. Fæd. vol. viii, p. 96; and the King granted to him a general pardon for all crimes, &c. committed by him at any time before the day of the restitution of the temporalities, as above-mentioned. Dated Oct. 29, in the above year. Rym. Fæd. vol. viii, p. 97.

(u) On January 30, 1407, anno 8 Hen. IV, the King delivered the great seal to the archbishop of Canterbury, in the room of the late chancellor Thomas Longley, bishop of Durham, who then resigned the same. Rym. Fæd. vol. viii, p. 464; and the archbishop resigned the same into the King's hands at Westminster, on December 21, anno 11 Hen. IV, clauf. m. 8, dorso, 1409. Rym. Fæd. vol. viii, p. 616. Dugd. orig.

(v) Battely, pt. 2, p. 75.

(w) Cotton's Records, p. 464. He is witness to a grant made that year, as chancellor, cart. 13 Henry IV, m. 3. Madox's Barones, p. 140. The archbishop had a general pardon, dated June 15, 1412, anno 13 Hen. IV. Rym. Fæd. vol. viii, p. 753; and on 12 July following, lent the King 1000 marcs, for his voyage into foreign parts. Rym. Fæd. vol. viii, p. 760.

(x) Ypodigma Neufstrix, p. 572.

ARCHBISHOPS.

ROBERT WALDEN.

culties in it should be fully subject to the visitation of the archbishop and his successors, and to his and their officers; and that on any interruption to it, their liberties should be seized into the King's hands, until the archbishop, &c. should be restored to the same; and that for every such offence, the chancellor of the university, or other officers, should pay to the King 1000*l.* all which proceedings the archbishop exhibited in the parliament at Westminster, in the 13th year of that reign, and the whole was confirmed by the entire assent of parliament (y).

In the year 1413, he resided at Leeds Castle in this county, which he had the grant of for his life, for in that year he dates a decree or sentence, which he gave between his monks and the convent of St. Gregories, by Canterbury. From his castle of Leeds (z) he confirmed the foundation of the college of Bredgare, to which the parish church there was, in his time, converted (a).

Archbishop Arundel was very active against the Lollards; he had a commission to try sir John Oldcastle, as an heretic, and he excommunicated the famous John Wickliff, after his death, who had studied in Canterbury college in Oxford, and died in 1384 (b).

Having sat in this see 17 years, he died on February 20, in the year 1414, of a swelling in his tongue, so that he was unable to eat, drink, or speak, sometime before his death, at Hackington, alias St. Stephen's, near Canterbury, having by his will ordered his body to be buried in the new tomb, which he had caused to be built in the nave of this cathedral, within his perpetual chantry, of two chaplains constituted there, and gave to this church his volume, containing all the books of St. Gregory (c).

His particular benefactions to this church

(y) Cotton's Records, p. 480.

(z) Walsingham. Battely's Somner, p. 136.

(a) Harpsfield.

(b) Wickliff used to walk about with his feet naked, and clothed in a long ruffet garment. His bones were afterwards dug up and burnt, and his ashes by the command of pope Martin V. were cast into the river near Lutterworth, of which parish he had been pastor. See Leland's Collect. vol. iii, p. 409.

(c) See an extract from his will, dated Feb. 16, 1413, at Hakynston, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xiii^d. What is remarkable, the inventory of his goods, which amounted to 600*l.* 12*s.* 7*d.* ob. farthing and half farthing, was the exact sum, within less than one penny of the legacies which he is said to have bequeathed by his last will. Battely, pt. 2, p. 75; and appendix, No. xiii^e. His executors were sir Gilbert Humfreville the principal one, and the prior of Christ church.

(d) Anglia Sacra, P. i, p. 795.

(e) He is named among the benefactors to Rochester-bridge, in a tablet, formerly hung up in the chapel there.

(f) Leland Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, 4, says, "Among the High Tombs of Bishops in the Body of the church lyeth Arundel under a pillar on the north side. K. Henry the 4 and he helped to build up a good part of the Body of are recorded in the obituary, which is printed (d); among others, he gave 1000 marcs towards the rebuilding the nave of this church, and made the spire on the north-west steeple of it, bestowing on it a tuneable ring of five bells, which he dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the Blessed Virgin, the angel Gabriel, St. Blaze and St. John the Evangelist; besides which, he gave many rich vestments, jewels and plate to a great value.

Both the chantry and monument of archbishop Arundel have been long since entirely removed; the gravestone over him, on which were the marks of his effigies in his pontifical dress, the brasses of which had been many years since torn off, remained till it was taken away within these few years, on the new paving of the nave (f). The chantry or chapel remained till the suppression of such foundations in K. Henry VIII.'s reign, when it was taken down, and sold by the King's commissioners, and the revenues of it seized for his use (g).

Archbishop Arundel left behind him the character of having been a man of good natural capacity, well improved by study and experience of the world, and endowed with courage, learning and activity, sufficient to qualify him for the eminent stations he had borne, both in church and state.

The archbishop bore for his arms, quarterly, 1st and 4th—Gules, a lion rampant, or, 2d and 3d chequy azure and or, within a bordure engrailed argent.

62. ROGER WALDEN, the King's treasurer, was, at the desire of K. Richard II, constituted archbishop of this see in 1398 (h), at which time, archbishop Arundel was in banishment at Rome (i). It is to be observed, that during the above reign, a scandalous custom prevailed, that as often as "the church;" but he is certainly mistaken as to the place of his burial.

(g) The chaplains of it had a stipend of ten pounds a piece yearly, out of Northfleet parsonage; and the houses in which they dwelt were built for them by the archbishop himself, on the south side of the church-yard, where they still remain; being those two antient buildings made of timber and plaster, which on the new foundation of this church were allotted to two of the six preachers of this cathedral.—Not many years since, the dean and chapter took these houses into their own hands, and allowed the preachers a yearly annuity in lieu of them; since which, the easternmost house has been allotted to one of the minor canons, and the other is demised to a tenant at will.

(h) Mr. Somner omits Roger Walden entirely, in his list of the archbishops of Canterbury; but, however unjustifiably he may have been promoted to this see, he undoubtedly was as firmly so as any of his predecessors or successors in it, being consecrated and enthronized, and performing all kinds of archiepiscopal functions.

(i) Roger Walden was parson of the church of Drayton, in the county of Leicester, anno 1382; and much employed by the King in his weighty affairs of state. Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 349. He was treasurer of Calais, anno 1388, 12 Rich. II. Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 607. In 1389, he is

ARCHBISHOPS.

either party got the upperhand, the bishops of the adverse side were, against their consents, thrust down from greater to lesser bishoprics, the Pope ever supporting with his authority, the prevailing party, a practice which was productive of great gain to him (k).

Thus in 1388, Alexander Nevil, archbishop of York, had been removed to the see of St. Andrew's in Scotland, and Arundel, then bishop of Ely, was translated to York, and took possession of the chair in that church; but he was severely reprimanded for it by archbishop Courtney, before the bishops and barons, then assembled in parliament, for countenancing so evil an action as that of accepting the see of York, during the life of archbishop Nevil.

Arundel being now in the possession of the see of York, sided with those who opposed the King, and was fairly promoted by their means and power to the archbishopric of Canterbury, in which he was scarcely seated, and in the full possession of it, before the King having reduced his enemies to subjection, archbishop Arundel was, on the King's suggestion, accused in parliament of maladministration of the office of chancellor, and with the assent of the King and barons therein assembled, was divested of all his goods, and condemned to banishment: all which has been already fully related above. After which he was translated to the bishopric of St. Andrews, by the papal authority, and though he refused to consent to this removal, yet in consequence of it, Roger Walden, the King's treasurer, was constituted archbishop of Canterbury, and was consecrated and intbronized in 1398; but Henry, Duke of Lancaster, afterwards K. Henry IV, having next year obtained the crown of England, Walden was ejected and archbishop Arundel was restored to this see, though the former, as has been mentioned, had been consecrated and intbronized, and had performed all kind of archiepiscopal functions; is styled archdeacon of Winchester. Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 648, after which he continued to be employed by the King in his most weighty affairs. He was admitted dean of the church of York in 1395, and to prebends in that church and Lincoln in 1397. See Willis's Cath. vol. i, p. 67, 146. The temporalities of the archbishopric was restored to him, on January 21, 1398, anno 21 Rich. II. Rym. Fœd. vol. viii, p. 91. (k) Anglia Sacra, P. i, p. 62.

(l) From which, says Lambarde, p. 92, he was again deposed, and died in the 7th year of K. Henry IV.

(m) Battely, pt. 2, p. 76.

(n) Leland says, he was chancellor of Sarum, and was by pope Gregory XII, made bishop of St. David's, being consecrated at Sene by the pope's own hand. K. Henry IV. granted his pardon, dated February 23, 1402, anno 3 regni, to Henry Chichele, L.L.D. for excepting under a papal bull of provision, the dignity of a canon and prebend in the cathedral church of Sarum, and the like in the conventual church of Sbaftsbury, and the like in that of Wilton. Rym. Fœd. vol. viii, p. 244.

(o) His life was written in Latin, by Dr. Arthur Duck, London, 1687, quarto, which was translated into English, after this, Walden was forced to betake himself to a private life for more than five years, when the Pope, by a bull of provision, dated Dec. 10, 1404, in which he is styled a bishop of the universal church, constituted him bishop of London (l).

HENRY CHICHELEY.

But archbishop Arundel would not again take possession of his see by any new collation, or by any bull of provision, insisting, that his translation to St. Andrew should be declared null and void from the beginning, and that he should return to the see of Canterbury, as his own proper right, out of which he had never been canonically ejected. K. Henry favoured him in these pretensions, and the Pope consented to a decree, that no bishop, against his own will and consent, should be translated to another see, for which the King sent him his letter of thanks (m).

63. HENRY CHICHELEY, L.L.D. chancellor of the church of Salisbury and bishop of St. David's(n), was next advanced to the archbishopric in 1413(o). He was a native of Higham Ferrers, in the county of Northampton, and was brought up at New college in Oxford; at the former place he founded and endowed a collegiate church and an hospital (p), and obtained of the King a grant of several privileges to that town. He was a patron of good learning, which he promoted to the utmost of his power. He built a college in Oxford, dedicated to St. Bernard, in which novices of the Cistercian order might be instructed in the studies of arts and sciences, and of divinity, since called St. John's college (q). He built likewise the magnificent college of All Souls, which he munificently endowed (r), intending it as a future maintenance for those of his own kindred, in preference to all others, and by his statutes given for the government of it; he directed the successive members of it, to be sworn to the observance of this particular injunction.

He gave 200 marks to each of the two universities of Oxford and Cambridge, to be reserved in and printed by Chiswell, octavo, 1699.—Since which in 1783, the Rev. Mr. Spencer, fellow of All Soul's college, published the life of the archbishop their founder, octavo, to which he added an appendix; in which is a Latin letter from the archbishop to the pope, with the Preces regie Domino Papa—transcribed from a manuscript in Lambeth library; the archbishop's charter of foundation of All Souls college; the bull of pope Eugenius, and the grants and purchases made for the original site of the college, &c. See also Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 296; vol. ii, p. 871. On archbishop Arundel's death, the temporalities were committed to John Wotton, master of the college of Maidstone, and Richard Clideborne, esq; by writ dated February 27, 1414, anno 1 Hen. V. Rym. Fœd. vol. ix, p. 117. They were restored to the archbishop by writ, May 30, 1414, anno 1 Hen. V. Rym. Fœd. vol. ix, p. 131. He received his pall from the bishop of Lincoln, on July 19 the same year; and bought the revenues of the see during its vacancy, for 600 marks.

(r) See Tan. Mon. p. 388. Dugd. Mon. vol. iii, pt. 2, p. 175 et seq. (q) Tan. Mon. p. 440.

(s) Tan. Mon. p. 441.

the

ARCHBISHOPS.

HENRY CHICHELEY.

the chests of those universities for ever, to be freely lent for the use and benefit of the colleges and students there. He promoted the finishing of the divinity schools in Oxford, and the library over them; not only by his own liberal contribution, but by his recommendations of the work, with much zeal, to the bishops and lords, then assembled in parliament, from whom he procured large sums for that purpose. In the 2d year of K. Henry V, which was soon after his coming to the see, there was another attempt made against the possessions of the church; but archbishop Chicheley found the means of preventing it, by setting forth to that martial young prince, his title to the crown of France, and pressing him to assert his right to it; promising, in the name of the clergy, such a benevolence for the vigorous carrying on of the war, as scarce ever had been given by the subject(s). The King readily embraced the proposal, and the revenues of the church were thus, by the archbishop's wisdom, once more preserved. Indeed he shewed, upon every necessary occasion, an undaunted courage and resolution (t). Two years after which, I find him signing an instrument, by the title of legate of the apostolic see (u). In a synod held at London (v), he caused that constitution to be ordained, by which it was provided that no ecclesiastical benefices should be conferred upon any who were not graduates in one of the universities; an act which greatly promoted and encouraged learning. He enriched his church here with ornaments of great value, repaired and furnished the library of it with books of all sorts, and built great part of the steeple at the south-west corner of the nave of the cathedral, since called from him at times, both the Chicheley and the Oxford steeple (w).

The author of the Antiquities of the British Church tells us, that Pope Martin V. created archbishop Chicheley, in 1428, a cardinal presbiter of the church of Rome, under the title of St. Eusebius, and he quotes the archives of this church for his authority (x); but bishop Godwyn doubts the truth of it (y), and with reason, for it is certainly a mistake, as neither in his monumental inscription, where all his titles are inserted, nor in Onuphrius's Catalogue of Cardinals, is there any mention of his being graced with this dignity; and there is a remarkable incident, which happened at that time, which, in great measure corroborates the fact; which was, that in the parliament then called, John Kemp, archbishop of York, having been newly created a cardinal, contended on that account with archbishop Chicheley for precedence, in right of the pre-eminency due to his cardinalship; which contention increased to such a height, that it was argued on both sides, at the court of Rome. Probably the mistake of his being supposed to have been created a cardinal arose from another Englishman, of the name of Henry, having been so created by the same Pope at that time, which was Henry Beaufort, bishop of Winchester, and with the same title of St. Eusebius.

In his latter days, labouring under the infirmities of old age, he earnestly requested, by letters to Pope Eugenius, dated in 1442, his leave to resign his archbishopric, and recommended John Stafford, bishop of Bath and Wells, for his successor; notwithstanding which, he kept possession of it till his death, which happened on April 12, 1443, after he had sat in the patriarchal chair of this see 29 years (z).

Weever says, he was a man, happy in the constant enjoyment of his prince's favour, and of wealth, honour, and all kind of prosperity, many years. He was wise in governing his see, worthily bountiful in bestowing his goods to the behoof of the commonwealth, and lastly, stout and severe in the due administration of justice; he does not seem to have held any of those secular employments, so usual with his predecessors, though I find him once sent on an embassy to the court of Rome, with sir John Cbeyne (a).

His public benefactions above-mentioned, employed the greatest part of his riches, which he preferred to the amassing a great wealth, to the raising of a great name in the world, or the aggrandizing his relations; instead of which, he spent his revenues in encouraging learning, in the interest of religion, and freeing deserving men from the difficulties of a slender income; in short, the archbishop was one of the greatest and best men of the age he lived in.

He was buried on the north side of the choir, under a costly tomb, on which are his effigies, in his pontifical habit, lying at full length with his inscription round it, inlaid with brass, yet remaining; the pillars at each end of the monument are adorned with the figures of the

(t) In 1415, the whole clergy, as well as laity, were ordered by the King's writ, directed to the several bishops, to be arrayed and armed without distinction, with all possible speed, and to return their names under their several seals into chancery; and the same again in 1418, by order of the duke of Bedford, regent, the King being then in France. Rym. Fœd. vol. ix, p. 254, 601.

(u) See his gallant answer to K. Henry VI, Harleian Mss. No. 991—27.

(v) Viz. on October 20, 1416, anno 4 Hen. V. Rym. Fœd. vol. ix, p. 404.

(w) He held this council in 1414. Walsingham says, the new metropolitan did this to shew his spite, and terms it a great council. (w) See Battely, pt. 2, p. 76.

(x) Viz. anno 1428.

(y) Godwyn de Præfulibus, P. i, p. 181; and P. ii, p. 176. (z) Anglia Sacra, P. i, p. 573.

(a) See Harleian Mss. No. 431—25—47.

ARCHBISHOPS.

twelve apostles, and other emblematical ones, in imagery; and underneath the tomb, which is hollowed for the purpose, is the figure of an emaciated corpse, lying at length; the two figures above-mentioned being intended to shew the abject state to which the gaudy pomp and vanities of the world are reduced after this worldly pilgrimage is finished (b).

The inscription round the tomb, is as follows: Hic jacet HENRICUS CHICHELEY L. doctor, quondam cancellarius Sarum, qui anno 7. HEN. IV. regis ad GREGORIUM papam 22. in ambassata transmiffus, in Civitate Senensi per manus ejusdem papæ in episcopum Menevensem consecratus est. Hic etiam HENRICUS, anno 2. HEN. V. regis, in hac sancta ecclesia in archiepiscopum postulatus & à JOANNE papa 23. ad eandem translatus, qui obiit anno Dom. 1443. Mens. Apr. die 12.

*Cetus sanctorum concorditer iste precetur,
Ut DEUS ipsorum meritis sibi propitiatur.*

He is recorded as a benefactor to the bridge at Rochester, as appeared by a tablet formerly hung up in the chapel there. He bore for his arms—Or, a chevron between 3 cinquefoil gules.

Dr. Harris, in his History of Kent, p. 556, says, he had seen a seal of this archbishop to a deed then in the hands of Mr. Hore, Richmond Herald; where his arms are borne with supporters; the only instance of an archbishop bearing them, who was not noble.

64. JOHN STAFFORD, LL. D. bishop of Bath and Wells, was, in 1443, translated from that see to this archbishopric.

He was born at Hook, in the parish of Abbotsbury, in county Dorset, and was descended of the ancient family of Stafford, of that place (c), and was educated at Oxford, where he took his degree of doctor of laws, and became an advocate, and was vicar-general to archbishop Chicheley. Weever says, he was no less learned, than noble of birth, and being much favoured by K. Henry V, he was preferred by him, first to the deanry of Wells, and to a prebend in the church of Salisbury; he was then preferred to a seat in the

(b) Notwithstanding frequent applications have been made to the college of All Souls, for their assistance in the repair and beautifying of this monument; it has remained for some years unnoticed and neglected. The college till of late years, allowed a small stipend to the vesturer for the care of it, but this has been for some years withdrawn.

(c) He was son of sir Humphry Stafford, called Humphry Stafford with the silver hand, by his wife Elizabeth Dynham. Battely, pt. 2, p. 76.

(d) He was privy seal anno 1421, 9 Henry V. Rym. Fœd. vol. x, p. 117; and he was made treasurer of England, on December 18, 1 Henry VI, anno 1423. Dugd. orig.

(e) The bishop of Bath and Wells was thence elected to Canterbury by the monks of Christ church, which the King confirmed, and signified the same to the pope by his writ, dated May 24, anno 21 Henry VI, 1443. Rym. Fœd. vol.

STAFFORD—KEMPE,

council, was made privy seal, and afterward treasurer of England (d); and then, although the King was taken away by untimely death, he still went forward in the way of promotion, and obtained the bishopric of Bath and Wells, which he governed with great wisdom for 18 years, whence he was translated, in 1443, to this archbishopric (e), being, in the mean time made Lord Chancellor (ee); which office he held for 18 years, which hardly any other had done for so long a time, until growing weary of so painful a place, he resigned it into the King's hands (f).

Having sat in the see for almost nine years, he died at his palace of Maidstone, on July 5, 1452, and was buried in his own cathedral, in the martyrdom there, where his gravestone yet remains, with the marks of his effigies in his mitre and pontifical habit, which was, as well as his inscription round it, once inlaid with brass; but they have both been long since torn away. Weever has given the inscription as follows:

*Quis fuit enucleus quem celas faxea moles?
STAFFORD antistes fuerat dictusque JOHANNES.
Qua sedit sede marmor quæso simul ede?
Pridem Bathonie, regni totius & inde
Primas egregius. Pro presule funde precatus Aureolam gratas huic det de virgine natus.*

Among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter, are two seals of this archbishop, $3\frac{1}{2}$ by 2, being fair and fine, being a Gothic canopy of 3 niches, 1st and 3d, 2 bishops; 2d a figure sitting, holding before him Christ on the cross; over head in a niche, the Virgin and child and a saint on each side of her; under all, the archbishop mitred, robed, pall, kneeling; on one side, arms of the see, on the other side his own—On a chevron, a mitre within a bordure engraved; legend, in OLD ENGLISH letters, S. AURIOLAS: JOHIS: PMISIONE: DOMINI: CANTUARIEN: ARCHIEPI T. 27. He bore for his arms—Or, on a chevron gules, a mitre or, within a bordure engraved sable.

65. JOHN KEMPE, LL. D. archbishop of York, ii, p. 28; on which the pope granted his bull, making him archbishop; and the King restored the temporalities, June 25 following, by writs to the escheators of Kent, Middlesex, Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Hertford, Oxon, Berks, Yorkshire, and London city. Rym. Fœd. vol. ii, p. 29.

(ee) He was made chancellor when bishop of Bath and Wells on February 28, 10 Henry VI, anno 1424. Dugd. orig.

(f) He was present as chancellor in the parliament held at Westminster, on February 5, anno 23 Hen. VI. the record styles him archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England, deputy of the see of Rome, and chancellor of all England. See Cotton's Records, p. 629. The like again, on November 6 and December 17, anno 28 Henry VI, after which he was discharged from his office of chancellor; and on January 23 following, John Cardinal, archbishop of York, was appointed in his room. Cotton's Records, p. 641.

suc

ARCHBISHOPS.

succeeded archbishop Stafford, as archbishop, in 1452,

He was a native of Wye, in the county of Kent, being born in 1380, at Ollantigh, in that parish, the seat of the Knighly family of the Kempes, from whom he was descended (g). He had been brought up at Merton college, Oxford, where he took his degree of LL. D. he had been dean of Durham (b) and of the arches, and vicar-general of the archbishop, and not long afterwards made by K. Henry V. on his conquering Normandy, chief justiciary of that province; all which preferments he seems to have kept at one and the same time, being then LL. D. The King had such high opinion of his abilities, that he was, with others, in the 3d year of that reign, appointed ambassador to treat with Ferdinand, King of Arragon, to establish a perpetual league of peace and amity with that prince, and for the marriage of his daughter Maria with the King, and he was afterwards, during that reign, frequently employed by the King in his embassies and state affairs (i). In the 7th year, anno 1419 of which reign, he was promoted to the bishopric of Rochester, on April 22, in which year, there is a writ directed to him by the style of bishop elect of Rochester, privy seal, and privy counsellor (k), thence he was in 1421, translated to Chichester, and afterwards in the same year to London, from thence in 1425, to the archbishopric of York, and thence in 1452, to this patriarchal chair of Canterbury, on the 24th Sept. of which year he received his pall at Fulham, by the hands of Tho. Kempe, bishop of London, his brother's son, and was inbrowed on Dec. 11 following, being at that time chancellor of England (l), which office he held twice. He was twice created a cardinal, first in 1439, by the title of St. Balbina, and then by that of St. Ruffina, all which ecclesiastical

(g) See an account of this family under Ollantigh in Wye, vol. iii. of the History of Kent. Leland, in his Itinerary, vol. vi, f. 2, says, "Kempe a Doctor of both Lawes and also Divinite then Byshope of Rochester, afterwards of Chichester and London thens translated to Yorke where he was Byshope a xxv yerres; thens translated to Cantewerbyri and made Cardinall first Diacon and then Byshope He was a Pore Husbandmans Sonne of Wye. Whereupon for to pray for the Sowles of them that set hym to Schole and them that otherwise preferrid him, he made the Paroche church of Wye a College in the xxiv yere of his Archbyshopricke of Yorke whereof the Governour is a Prebendarie, and the residue be Minysters for Divine Service."—But Leland, as to his birth, is certainly mistaken; for he was son of Thomas, younger brother of fir Roger Kempe, of Ollantigh, knt., by Beatrice his wife, daughter of fir Thomas Lewknor, knt. See vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 170, 172.

(h) Weever, p. 228, says, archdeacon of Durham.

(i) Rym. Fæd. vol. ix, p. 293, 294, 295 et seq. passim.

(k) Rym. Fæd. vol. ix, p. 734.

JOHN KEMPE.

preferments were comprehended in this one verse, composed by his nephew, Thomas Kempe, bishop of London (m).

Bis primas, ter præsul erat, bis cardine functus.

He founded a college in the church of Wye, above-mentioned, which he made collegiate, and placed in it secular priests, to attend divine service, and a grammar school close to it, for the instruction of youth, and endowed the whole with ample revenues (n).

He sat in this see not more than a year and an half, and dying at Lambeth in April 1454 (o), was buried in his own cathedral, on the south side of the choir, where his monument, with the inscription in brass round the rim of it, remains entire at this time (p), as follows: Hic jacet reverendissimus in Christo pater & dominus dominus Joannes Kempe, titulo sanctæ Ruffine sacrosanctæ Romane ecclesie episcopus cardinalis, archiepiscopus Cantuariensis, qui obiit vicesimo secundo die Martii A. D. MCCCCLIII cujus anima propitiatur Deus. Amen.

The inventory of the archbishop's goods, at the time of his decease, amounted to 4069l. 18s. 8d. (q) He seems to have been a man of great abilities, otherwise it is improbable he could have arrived at the high preferments he did, both in church and state; for, as the author of the Antiquities of the British Church observes, his executing so admirably those offices to which he was at first preferred, was the cause of his still higher promotion. He was munificent in his works of charity, in particular to the divinity schools, and to Merton college in Oxford, and the university had so grateful a remembrance of it, that a particular day was appointed there to solemnize the memory of him and his nephew John Kempe, bishop of London, on which they were styled the two Mecenas's of the university;

(l) He was chancellor in the 31st year of K. Henry VI. on March 17; in which year, at the parliament holden at Reading, the bishop of Lincoln sat in it in his absence. Cotton's Records, p. 649; but the archbishop appeared in it by the style of John the cardinal, archbishop of Canterbury, and chancellor of England; and the same again at Reading, likewise on November 22, anno 32 Henry VI. when he prorogued the parliament to Westminster. Cotton's Records, p. 650. The archbishop continued chancellor at his death. Ibid. p. 651.

(m) When bishop of London he was made chancellor, on March 16, 1426, anno 4 Henry VI. Rymer's Fædera, vol. x, p. 353.

(n) See an account of this foundation and several particulars relating to the archbishop, vol. iii. of the History of Kent, under Wye.

(o) Weever says, he died on March 22, 1453, very rich.

(p) Leland Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 3, says, "Kempe lyith yn a high Tumble of Marble but no image engrossid on it."

(q) See an inventory of them printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xiii^f.

besides

ARCHBISHOPS.

besides which, he beautified the collegiate church of Southwell, and last of all endowed the college of Wye in this county (r).

Among the Harleian manuscripts is a letter of archbishop Kempe, to the council of Basil. The archbishop bore for his arms—Gules, 3 garbs or, a bordure engrailed of the last.

66. THOMAS BOURGHCHIER, or, as he was usually spelt, Bourchier, S. T. P. bishop of Ely, was, 15 days after the death of archbishop Kempe in 1454, promoted to this archbishopric (s). He was the 2d son of William Lord Bourghchier, earl of Ewe, brother of Henry, earl of Essex (t). He was brought up at Oxford, and was afterwards dean of St. Martin's in London, during which he was elected bishop of Worcester in 1435, being then A. M. and chancellor of that university (u). He was afterwards promoted to the see of Ely, which being displeasing to the King, another was appointed in his room; however, he was a second time chosen, and was not without much difficulty translated to that see on Dec. 20, 1443. Being elected to this archbishopric in 1454 (v), he was confirmed in it on Aug. 22, and was magnificently entroned at Canterbury on Jan. 26th following.

In 1455 he was constituted chancellor of England (w), which office he resigned into the King's hands in 1459 (x), and in 1465 was created a cardinal of the church of Rome, by the title of St. Cyriacus, having the hat delivered to him by the cardinal archbishop of Roan (y). Soon after his coming to the see of Canterbury, he purchased the manor of Knole, at Sevenoke in this county, and appropriated it to the archbishopric, for the benefit of his successors, and afterwards laid out much on it, to render the house a fit palace for himself and them.

(r) See vol. iii. of the History of Kent, p. 172.

(s) See Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 296; vol. ii, p. 1315, 1320.

(t) Humphry, earl of Stafford and duke of Buckingham, appointed this archbishop one of his executors, by the name of his brother of Canterbury. His will is dated in 1460, at which time Thomas Bourghchier was archbishop. The affinity between them was thus: William, father of the archbishop, married Anne, the widow of Edmund, earl of Stafford, which Edmund and Anne, were the parents of Humphry above-mentioned. Dugd. Bar. vol. ii, p. 129; vol. i, p. 166.

(u) The King wrote to the pope, May 10, 1436, in favour of his kinsman Thomas Bourchier, M. A. and chancellor of the university of Oxford, to be made bishop of Worcester, and complained that his former entreaties for some unknown reasons had had no effect, which occasioned that church's being destitute of a pastor for so long a time; and that he had learned, that some had made interest with him for the promotion of Thomas Brown to that church, whom although he was in the King's service at the council of Basil, and had behaved well, to whom the King bore great affection, yet he by no means thought him so proper a person as the former. Rym. Fœd. vol. x, p. 640.

(v) The pope, as usual, took no notice of the convent's election, but nominated him by his bull of provision.

THOMAS BOURGHCHIER.

In 1461, he crowned K. Edward IV, and four years afterwards married him to Elizabeth, daughter of sir Richard Woodvile, and the next year he entertained the King and Queen at Canterbury, for several days together, very splendidly and nobly, on their coming there to pay their devotions to Becket's shrine; and two years afterwards, the whole court made another pilgrimage to it, and offered costly gifts there, when in 1483 the executors exhibited the King's will before the archbishop, and desired time to consider whether they should act or not; he sequestered all the King's goods and chattels, and took into his own custody the great and privy seals, and the royal signet. Next year he crowned K. Richard III, and afterwards, when K. Henry VII. had obtained the crown, he married that prince to the lady Elizabeth, eldest daughter of K. Edward IV. Having continued in the episcopal dignity for 52 years, 32 of which he had presided over this see, he died at his palace above-mentioned, on March 30, 1486 (z), having by his last will given to the poor 100l.—to this church an image of the Trinity, of pure gold, enriched with pearls and precious stones, several rich vestments of cloth of gold, &c.—to the church of Worcester, an image of the Blessed Virgin, valued at 69l. 5s.—to the church of St. Ethelred, of Ely, 200 marks; to the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, each of them a chest with 100l. in it, to be lent gratis for the use of poor scholars (a); to Henry, earl of Essex, his nephew, a great cup of pure gold with a cover, commonly called the great bolle of gold, and to the heir male of the name of Bourghchier, for ever; besides which, he gave different legacies of rich vestments, books, money, &c. to several conventual and collegiate churches; to sir Thomas Bourghchier his uncle, to his nephew of (w) He was made chancellor on March 7, 33 Hen. VI, anno 1455. Dugd. orig.

(x) He was present as chancellor in the parliament held at Westminster on July 9, anno 33 Hen. VI. See Cotton's Records, p. 656; and again on July 31, when he presided the parliament, p. 657; again on December 14, anno 34 Hen. VI. by letters patent, under the appointment of the duke of York, the King's commissary, p. 659; and he resigned the seals into the King's hands at Coventry on July 25, 1460, anno 38 Hen. VI. Rym. Fœd. vol. ii, p. 361-458.

(y) Battely, pt. 2, p. 77.

(z) Among the Harleian Mss. is a grant from K. Richard III. in his first year, of a general pardon to the archbishop. No. 433—242.

(a) Weever, p. 31, seems to speak of him but very indifferently, saying, that notwithstanding all his great and eminent promotions, he left nothing behind him to continue his memory, but an old rotten chest in the Congregation-house at Cambridge, called Billingsworth and Bower, (for by this name the archbishop was vulgarly called) into which, for the use of the university, Billingsworth had before him put in one hundred pounds, and he forthwith imitating that munificent example, put in one hundred and twenty pounds too.

ARCHBISHOPS.

the same name, to whom he devised his manors of Eynsford and Halfed, and to others of his friends; and he gave to his successor the sum of 2000*l.* as a recompence for dilapidations (b). By his will, he ordered his body to be buried in the place which he had chosen out for that purpose in his own cathedral church of Canterbury, in the choir, on the north side of the great altar, where his monument, of beautiful Peckworth marble, (though now shut out from the choir) with an inscription round it inlaid in brass, remains at this present time (c); the inscription is as follows: Hic jacet reverendissimus in Christo Pater & dominus D. THOMAS BOURGHIER, quondam sacrosanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ S. Ciriaci in Thermes presbyt cardinalis, & archiepiscopus hujus ecclesiæ, qui obiit 30 die mens. Martii, 1486. cujus anima propitiatur altissimus.

There was a chantry belonging to this archbishop in this church, which was suppressed at the dissolution of the priory, in King Henry VIII.'s time (d). His name was among the benefactors to Rocheſter bridge, in a tablet, formerly hung up in the chapel there. He was an encourager of learning; for Stow says, the year after he came to the see of Canterbury, being anno 34 Hen. VI. five schools were set up in London by his care (e), and he is said to have been the means of bringing the art of printing into England, from Harlem, in 1464; to the expence of which he contributed 300 marcs. He bore for his arms—Argent, a cross engrailed gules, between 4 water bougets sable, quartered with gules billettee, a fess or.

67. JOHN MORTON, LL. D. was promoted to this archbishopric in the year 1486. He is recorded by our historians for his singular fidelity to K. Henry VI., to whom he constantly adhered in all his troubles, not forsaking him, even when he was deposed and deserted by all others. When that King was in prison, he fled with the Queen and Prince abroad; but when the King was released, and took the field again, he returned and continued with him to the last. This constancy and integrity recommended him so highly to the favour of K. Edward IV., that he ceased not, after K. Henry was dead, to woe and win him to his side, which having done, he not only received him into his favour, but even

(b) See an extract from this will, which is dated March 27, anno 1486, in Battely, pt. 2, No. xiii8.

(c) Leland Itin. vol. vi, f. 3, p. 3, says, "On the N side of the high Altar (lyeth) Thos Bourcher Cardinal that Coronid K Edward the 4th K Richard the 3 and Henry the vii." See the grant of the place of sepulture to archbishop Bourghchier, dated April 16, 1480, printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 4.

(d) Batt. Somn. p. 137. (e) Survey, B. i, p. 163.

(f) Weever says, he was born at Beere in that county, in the church of which he founded a chantry.

(g) John Morton, cl. was one of the servants of Henry, bishop of Winton and cardinal; and was much trusted by to be his intimate and private counsellor; so much did he repose confidence in his fidelity.

He was born, as Camden says, at St. Andrew's Milborne, in the county of Dorset (f), and that for the good of all England, and was first educated at Corn Abbey, and afterwards at Baliol college in Oxford, where he commenced his doctor's degree (g); and in 1447 was vico-chancellor of that university, and moderator of the school of civil law; and in 1453 became head of Peckwater inn; afterwards he practised as an advocate in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, was made prebendary of Fordington and Watbrington, in the church of Salum; and in 1473 master of the rolls (h); in the same year he was instituted to the rectory of St. Dunstan in the West, London, and the next year was made archdeacon of Winchester, and in the year 1478 he was promoted to the bishopric of Ely.

When K. Edward died, he appointed him one of the executors of his last will; and he was so watchful over the life and safety of young K. Edward V., and the prince his brother, that when their uncle Richard, Duke of Gloucester, intended their deaths, the bishop was sent out of the way; for his integrity was known to be such, that neither threatnings could terrify, bribes corrupt, or promises allure to become false to his trust. After which, upon pretence of his having been guilty of great and heinous offences, he was confined to close imprisonment; till the Duke had accomplished the death of the two princes his nephews, and had seated himself on the throne, and then bishop Morton was committed to the custody of the Duke of Buckingham, at Brecknock, where he is said to have contrived the happy union of the two houses of York and Lancaster, by the marriage of Henry Earl of Richmond, with Elizabeth, eldest daughter of K. Edward IV.; having made his escape from his keeper, he fled into Flanders, where he continued till the Earl, (after K. Henry VII.) was seated on the throne, whose especial favourite he became afterwards.

From the bishopric of Ely (hb), he was translated in 1486 to the archbishopric of Canterbury (i), and was confirmed by the Pope on Oct. 6. that year (k), and was afterwards made legatee of him in 13 Hen. VI, anno 1435. Rym. Fœd. vol. x, p. 609.

(h) He was master of the rolls anno 13 Edward IV, 1473. Rym. Fœd. vol. ii, p. 782; he was made so March 16, 12 Edward 4, anno 1473. Dugd. orig.

(hb) He had been a good benefactor to that see, and would have been more so, had not his translation to Canterbury taken him from thence. See Weever, p. 32.

(i) On his first coming to the see, he got a great sum of his provincials to bear the charge of his translation, and obtained 35*l.* of the clergy of his own diocese.

(k) The temporalities were restored to him, on December 6, 2 Hen. VII, 1486. Rym. Fœd. vol. xii, p. 317.

ARCHEISHOPS.

JOHN MORTON.

the apostolic see; the year after which he was made lord chancellor of England (l), and on Sept. 20, 1493, was created a cardinal, with the title of Saint Anastasia (m).

He was a prelate of great natural parts, which he had improved by the study of the law and other branches of learning, in which, considering the age he lived in, he was very eminent; this procured him among other preferments in K. Hen. VI.'s reign, a place in the privy council; and he had genius, learning, secrecy and experience, to make him an able statesman. That he was a great and good man, all our histories bear testimony, and they are full of his praises; and if learning and religion did not make so great a progress during his administration, it was the fault of the times and not owing to him. His fortune was disposed of suitably to his rank and the largeness of his revenue, in munificence and liberality to those who were in need, and at his death he bequeathed much of it to pious uses.

He died of a quartan ague, at his palace of Knoll, on Oct. 12, 1500, aged 80, having by his will ordered his body to be buried in his own cathedral, before the image of the Blessed Virgin, vulgarly called our Lady of Undercroft, and that it should be covered with a plain marble stone, without any other gaudy expences; and he gave at his funeral, on the day of his burial, in alms to poor people, and in other matters convenient and decent on such an occasion, 1000 marcs. To the cathedral church of Ely he gave his best gilt cross and mitre, which he had of the executors of William Gray, late bishop of Ely, and then after divers legacies to the King, Queen and the rest of the royal family, to his relations and others (n); he ordered his executors to expend yearly, for the space of twenty years, in the maintenance of 20 poor scholars in the university of Oxford, and of 10 in that of Cambridge; 128l. 6s. 8d. (o)

Although he had been a liberal benefactor to this see, in repairing and augmenting his houses

(l) He was made chancellor on August 8, 2 Henry VII, anno 1487.

(m) In the former reign when an English prelate was dignified with a hat, he was styled cardinal of England, which in this reign seems to be lost, and he was now styled cardinal archbishop of Canterbury, or cardinal bishop of —, &c.

(n) Viz. to K. Henry, his best portiforium or portuis; to Q. Elizabeth, his best psalter; to the lady Margaret, the King's mother, the round image of the blessed virgin, of gold; to the lady Margaret, his godchild, and the King's eldest daughter, a cup of gold with 40l.

(o) His executors were, John Fineux, chief justice; John Peynsweyn, archdeacon of Canterbury; Henry Edyall, archdeacon of Rochester, and provost of Wingham; and three others. See the extract from his will, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xiii^h, from the register of Canterbury, marked D.

(p) See the extract from this codicil, which is dated June 16, anno 1500, in Battely's appendix, No. xiii^h.

at Knoll, Maidstone, Aldington Park, Cbaring, Ford, Lambeth and Canterbury, and likewise to this cathedral; yet he appears to have died possessed of large landed estates in the different counties of Kent, Surry, Suffex, Dorset, Somerset, Wilts, Essex and Warwick, and in the city of London; all which are severally mentioned in the codicil to his will, and which he gives to his several relations of the name of Morton, but with an exception to those lands inclosed within the park of the Mote, near Maidstone, and the mill, which he willed to remain to the church of Christ in Canterbury, and his successors, archbishops for ever; on this condition, that they should pay yearly and for ever, to the prioress and nuns of the priory of St. Sepulchre, near Canterbury, eight marcs for one chaplain to celebrate within that priory, according to the foundation of a chantry, founded in it by master John de Bourn, rector of the church of Frakenbam, in the time of William Wittlesey, formerly archbishop of Canterbury (p).

According to his directions above-mentioned, he was buried in the lady chapel in the Undercroft, under a marble stone, on which are the marks of his effigies in his pontifical dress, once inlaid with brass, but long since torn from it (pp). Notwithstanding the archbishop's avowal against it, there was a sumptuous monument erected to his memory in this Undercroft, at a small distance south-westward from the above chapel, having much imagery round it, and his figure, clothed in his pontifical habit, lying at full length on it; close to it was a chantry erected for a priest to celebrate for his soul, which was demolished at the time of the reformation, and the tomb itself has suffered much injury since that time.

The Obituary honourably recites his benefactions to this church (q), and among them, that he contributed to the new work of the Angel steeple of it, now called the Bell Harry tower, as appears by his device in the stonework without,

(pp) Wood, in his Ath. vol. i, p. 641, gives a long account of this archbishop; and says, that over his stone coffin, which was but just deposited in the ground, there was a marble stone laid even with the surface of the pavement, which stone being afterwards cracked and broken, several parts of his body wrapt up in fear-cloths were taken away by different people. At length the head being only in a manner remaining in the coffin, it was begged, purposely to save it, of Dr. Sheldon, archbishop of Canterbury, in 1670, by Ralph Sheldon, of Beoly in Worcestershire, esq; who esteeming it as a choice relique, provided a leaden box to preserve it in, with its fear-cloths about it, and with great devotion kept it till his death in 1684; when by virtue of his will, it came into the hands of his uncle's daughter, Frances Sheldon, sometime maid of honor to Catherine, queen consort to K. Charles II.

(q) Ang. Sacr. P. i, p. 63.

which

ARCHBISHOPS.

which Camden, in his Remains observes, usually was the word Mor, over the figure of a tun, and that he presented 80 copes richly embroidered with gold, and his proper arms, and in letters of gold this motto, Deo sit Gratiarum aëtio; he is likewise recorded as a benefactor to Rochebester bridge, in a tablet formerly hung up in the chapel there.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Quarterly, gules and ermine; a goat's head erased, in the first and 4th quarter, or.

His life was particularly written by Dr. Budden, principal of New Inn in Oxford, 8vo. London, 1607.

68. HENRY DENE, or Deny, as some call him, S. T. P. was promoted to this see on his predecessor's death, in the year 1500, the year after which he proceeded S. T. P. in the university of Cambridge. He had been prior of Lanthon in Wales (r), and bishop of Bangor, to which see he was a good benefactor. He was much entrusted and employed by K. Henry VII, in negotiations, and especially with Scotland. In 1494 he was constituted chancellor of Ireland, and when sir Edward Poynings, lord deputy, was recalled, he was substituted justiciary of that kingdom (s), and on his return to England, was translated to the see of Sarum (t), and from thence to the patriarchal chair of Canterbury, and became the Pope's legate (u), and on Oct. 13, 1500, was made chancellor of England (v); having sat in this see for two years, during which time he was never introned. He died at Lambeth, Feb. 15, 1502 (w). By his will, which is in the register D. of this church, he appointed the place and manner of his funeral, and gave a silver cup to John Bell, his suffragan bishop of Mayo; and to his church of Canterbury, a silver image of St. John the Evangelist, weighing 151 ounces, and directed 500l. to be bestowed on his funeral. He was buried according to his will in his own cathedral, in the martyrdom there, where his gravestone yet remains; but the brass with which it was inlaid, on which were his ef-

(r) Lanthon, in the county of Monmouth.

(s) Ware's Annals of Ireland.

(t) On the death of archbishop Morton, the King on October 13, in his 16th year, anno 1501, delivered the great seal to Henry Deane, bishop of Sarum. Dugd. orig. p. 8.

(u) Rym. Fæd. vol. xii, p. 791. In that year he had been commissioned with the earl of Surry, and Richard Fox, bishop of Winchester, privy seal, to treat with James IV, K. of Scots, about a marriage between him and Margaret, eldest daughter of K. Hen. VII. Rym. Fæd. vol. xii, p. 791.

(v) Anglia Sacra, P. i. Rym. Fæd. vol. xii, p. 791.

(w) The King's licence to the prior and convent of Christ church, to choose an archbishop in the room of John Morton, cardinal, late archbishop of Canterbury, is dated 16 Hen. VII. 1501. Rym. Fæd. vol. xii, p. 771. The temporalities were restored August 2, following. Rym. Fæd. vol. xii, p. 772.

(x) See Biog. Brit. vol. vi, p. 4314, 4337.

(y) Dugd. orig. p. 8. (z) Rym. Fæd. vol. xii.

HENRY DENE—WILLIAM WARHAM.

figies, in his pontifical habit, and his inscription, has been long since torn from it.

The inscription was as follows: Hic sub marmore jacet corpus reverendissimi in CHRISTO patris & domini D. HENRICI DENE, quondam prioris prioratus de Lanibona, deinde Bangorensis ac successive Sarum episcopi. Postremo vero hujus metropolitice ecclesie archiepiscopi; diem suum clausit extremum apud Lambeth, 15 die mens. Feb. Ann. Domini 1502, in secundo translationis anno. cujus anime propitiatur altissimus.

He bore for his arms—Argent, on a chevron gules, 3 pastoral staffs or, between 3 choughs proper.

69. WILLIAM WARHAM succeeded to this patriarchal chair in 1503 (x), to which he was translated from London, of which see he was then bishop. He was descended of an antient family seated at Walsanger, in the parish of Okecliffe, commonly called Okely in Hampshire, in which parish he was born; he was first educated at Wickham's college, at Winchester, from whence he was sent to New College in Oxford, where he became fellow, and proceeded doctor of laws, and afterwards practised as an advocate in the arches, and in 1448 became moderator of the civil law school, and taking orders, had the rectory of Barley in county of Hertford, conferred on him, as appears by the church windows there; after which he was dignified with several promotions, both ecclesiastical and civil; for in 1493 he was made chancellor of Wells, and next year constituted master of the rolls (y), when being sent ambassador to Philip, Duke of Burgundy, concerning the two counterfeiters Lambert and Perkin Warbeck, in which business he behaved himself so wisely, that the King highly commended him (z), and in 1502, on his return, he preferred him, being then a privy councillor, to the bishopric of London (a), and made him keeper of the great seal, and lord chancellor of England (b), in which office he succeeded archbishop Dene, as well as in this archbishopric (c), and as legate of the apostolic see (d). His entertainment, which was

(a) Rym. Fæd. vol. xiii, p. 27. (b) Dugd. orig. p. 80.

(c) The temporalities were restored on January 24, 1504 Henry VII. anno 1504. Rym. Fæd. vol. xiii, p. 90. It appears by his register, cited by Dr. Gibson in his Codex, p. 122, that before and after his consecration, he had eleven several bulls and instruments from Rome for that purpose, and archbishop Cranmer had the same number.

(d) Archbishop Warham was chancellor, and the pope's legate, anno 1508, 24 Hen. VII. Rymer's Fæd. vol. xi, p. 238. He resigned both these offices on December 22, anno 1515, 7 Henry VIII. at Westminster, to cardinal Wolsey. Rym. Fæd. vol. xi, p. 529; but the resignation of the latter seems to have been only that of legate a latere, for Warham is styled legate two years afterwards, in anno 1517. Rymer's Fæd. vol. xi, p. 589; and he continued so at his death, and Wolsey was legate a latere during life at the same time. Rym. Fæd. vol. xi, p. 589, passim.

kept

ARCHBISHOPS.

kept in his palace at Canterbury, on his inthronization, on March 9, being Passion Sunday, anno 1504, was truly magnificent, the Duke of Buckingham performing the office of high steward, during the solemnity, many of the nobility, superior clergy and others of rank, being present as guests at it.

At this palace K. Henry VII, in his 24th year, took up his abode as the archbishop's guest, during which time he made his last will, which is dated at Canterbury, on April 10 that year, 1509, by which he founded one anniversary mass in Christ church, and another in St. Augustine's monastery (e).

On the site of this antient palace, archbishop Warham is said to have intended to have raised a most sumptuous one for himself and his successors; but on account of a difference which arose between him and the citizens, concerning the limits of his ground here, he changed his former intention, and in his displeasure bestowed on his palace at Osford, which before this was but a mean house, 33,000*l.* leaving nothing of the former building standing, but the walls of the hall and chapel; notwithstanding which, he had already liberally builded at Knole, a palace of the archbishopric, little more than two miles from it (f).

In the beginning of the year 1506, he was unanimously elected chancellor of the university of Oxford, and after K. Henry VIII.'s accession to the throne, he held the great seal for the first seven years of that reign, and the King appears to have esteemed him highly, insomuch that he appointed him, together with the Earl of Surry, sponsors at the christening of his eldest son (g); notwithstanding which, Wolsey by his ill treatment, at length obliged him to resign the seal; for that prelate's power and interest with the King and court of Rome, were so much greater than the archbishop's, that during the whole of the cardinal's administration, he was little more than the shadow of a metropolitan; but as he was a man of parts and principle, so he could not see the insolence and depravity of the cardinal, without complaining of it to the King, which put the two prelates upon ill terms as long as Wolsey lived (b).

Archbishop Warham is said to have understood the interest of the nation, and the canon law, as well as most men of his time. He was a friend to merit and learning, and encouraged a more rational and useful knowledge, than was to be acquired by the learning of the schools.

Erasmus gives a true character of archbishop

(e) Harleian Mss. No. 297-2, and No. 1498-148-153.

(f) See Lambarde, p. 566.

(g) Hall's Chron. f. 9.

(b) Archbishop Warham's styling himself Wolsey's brother,

WILLIAM WARHAM—THOMAS CRANMER.

Warham, when he commends him for his humanity, learning, integrity and piety, and concludes by saying, that he was a most perfect and accomplished prelate.

He was an especial benefactor to the university of Oxford, particularly by contributing to the finishing of St. Mary's church, and the divinity school there; he gave several books and manuscripts to All Souls and New College in Oxford, and to Wickham's college near Winchester, and he is said to have given the iron railing to Rocheſter bridge. He was a benefactor to the fabric of this cathedral, especially to the great tower of it, on which his arms are still to be seen in memory of it; so that excepting the above, and the great sums he laid out on his palaces, we read of no other public benefactions during his long continuance in this see.

Having sat as archbishop for 28 years, he died on August 3, 1532, at St. Stephen's near Canterbury, in the house of William Warham, archdeacon of Canterbury, his kinsman, having by his last will assigned the place of his sepulture in his own cathedral, and expressed his hopes that his successor would not charge his executors with dilapidations, as he had expended above 30,000*l.* in building and repairing the edifices belonging to this see; he was accordingly buried in a small chapel built by himself, for the purpose, upon the north side of the martyrdom in his own cathedral, where there is an elegant tomb with his effigies at full length in his pontifical habit, lying on it; in this chapel he founded a chantry of one priest, daily to celebrate for his soul, which was suppressed with the priory in K. Henry VIII.'s time (i).

Archbishop Warham bore for his arms—Gules, a fess or; in chief, a goat's head and neck of the 2d, attired argent; in base, 3 escallops of the 2d.

Among the Harleian manuscripts are the archbishop's proceedings against Agnes Grevill, in 1511, and several letters addressed to him.

70. THOMAS CRANMER, S. T. P. was elected archbishop, the next in succession, in the year 1532 (k). He was born at Arlington in Northamptonshire, on July 2, 1489, and educated at Jesus College in Cambridge, where he became fellow and A. M. and afterwards divinity reader, moderator and S. T. P. in that university; on the death of archbishop Warham, the King foreseeing the importance it would be of, to the designs which he had in hand, that the see of Canterbury should be filled with a person of that moderate disposition, which would not be likely to thwart his measures, and one, who being inclined gave great offence to the cardinal. See Fiddes's life of Wolsey, p. 176, 206. (i) Leland Itin. vol. vii.

(k) Biog. Brit. vol. iii, p. 1510; and Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 663, where there is a full account of him.

ARCHBISHOPS.

REGINALD POLE.

to the changes he was bringing forward in religion, he could the better influence in carrying them forward, sent to Cranmer, then in Germany, to inform him of his intention to advance him to this see, and desiring him to return home for that purpose. This, after some little hesitation he did, and it is said, rather in obedience to the King's commands than his own inclination; for he foresaw the storms which were arising, and the difficulties and troubles it would bring on him. On his return, however, he accepted of the promotion, and was consecrated in St. Stephen's chapel, in the royal palace at Westminster (1); but before his consecration, he made a solemn protestation in the presence of a public notary, that the oath he was then about to take to the Pope, should not bind him from doing whatsoever he was bound to do, to God, the church, or the King.

He was instrumental in beginning the reformation in the reign of K. Henry VIII, and zealous in carrying it forward in that of K. Edward VI; when Queen Mary came to the crown, he was advised to make his escape by flight, but he retired only into Kent, where he spent a few days at his palace of Brakborno, from whence he removed to that of Ford in the same neighbourhood, where he received a summons to appear at Westminster before the privy council; soon after which he was committed prisoner to the Tower, and from thence conveyed to a prison in Oxford, where, after he had been brought to a public disputation with the papists concerning the real presence in the sacrament, he was led to his trial, and through the Queen's implacable hatred to him, on account of her mother's divorce, and her bigotry and the inveterate malice of his enemies, he was, in the 1st year of Queen Mary's reign, attainted of high treason in parliament, and his archbishopric was immediately sequestered; and though the Queen afterwards pardoned the treason, yet he was degraded, excommunicated, and condemned to suffer death as an heretic, so that being delivered over to the secular power, he was accordingly burnt at Oxford, on March 21, 1555 (m), aged 67, and in the 23d year of his primacy.

Archbishop Cranmer had acquired learning, both in the canon and civil law, equal to most of his cotemporaries; but he had a defect in his style which was diffused and unconnected, even for that age. He had a natural simplicity and openness of heart, which made him unfit for the courts of princes, where truth and candour are but of little use; he was affable, gentle and easy to be intreated, full of benevolence and condescension, and very inoffensive; at the same time he was exceedingly timorous, which caused him frequently to comply with the King's measures, and that where the most valuable rights of his church were to be given up for the purpose; in this he has been blamed by most historians, nor can his servility in it ever meet with a defence.

The archbishop left issue only one son, of his own name (n).

Besides his life, to be found in Parker's Antiquitates Brit. Eccles. Godwin and others; it was written at large by Mr. Strype, in folio, in which a list of his writings may be seen.

Among the Harleian manuscripts are the archbishop's five books on the Eucharist; his Reform of the ecclesiastical laws; his renunciation of the papal authority and submission to K. Henry VIII; his discourse concerning cardinal Pole's finding so much favour at Rome, many letters to and from him, many pieces concerning him, his life, his letters to the King and others, and many other papers relating to him.

There is a seal of archbishop Cranmer's appendant to a deed, anno 1536, among the Chartæ Antiquæ, in the treasury of the dean and chapter, 4 inches by 2½ diam. the upper part blurred; but it is the murder of Becket; underneath the archbishop, kneeling; on one side a shield, with the arms of the see impaled with his own; on the other, another with his own arms; legend, THOME CRANMER; the rest obliterated, p. 128.

He bore for his arms—Argent, on a chevron azure, 3 cinquefoils or, between 3 cranes sable; but K. Henry VIII. changed the cranes to pelicans, vulnerating their breasts.

71. REGINALD POLE, cardinal of the church of Rome, and related to the blood royal, was elected archbishop of this see in the year 1555, and was consecrated on March 22 that year, the day after Cranmer's execution (o).

He was the fourth son of sr Richard Pole, knight of the garter, cousin-german to K. Hen. VII, his mother being the lady Margaret, Countess of Salisbury, daughter of George Duke of Clarence, the youngest brother of K. Edward IV. (p)

(1) He was elected by the prior and convent, having first obtained the King's licence, and was afterwards accepted and confirmed by the pope, as in former times; and the temporalities were restored on April 29, 24 Henry VIII, anno 1533. Rym. Fœd. vol. xiv, p. 456. He was consecrated by the bishops of Exeter, St. Asaph, and Lincoln.

(m) The writ bears date, February 24, 2 and 3 Philip and Mary, anno 1556. Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 431.

(n) Anno 5 Elizabeth, an act passed for the restitution of the children of Thomas Cranmer.

(o) See Biographia Britannica, vol. i, p. 216; vol. v, p. 3385.

(p) This lady shared the same fate with her brother Edward, earl of Warwick, who was beheaded, unmarried, in 1499, on account of Perkin Warbeck's conspiracy, being likewise beheaded in 1541, upon an act of attainder passed against her without being heard, for corresponding with her son Reginald the cardinal. Her eldest son was Henry Pole, lord Montague.

ARCHBISHOPS.

He was born at Stoverton castle in Staffordshire, and brought up at the monastery of Cartbusians at Sbene in Surry, whence he went to Magdalen college in Oxford, and became fellow of Corpus Christi, in the same university. He was first promoted to a prebend in the church of Salisbury, and was afterwards, in 1517, admitted to that of Knareborough, in the church of York, and likewise to the deanry of the collegiate church of Wimborne in Dorsetshire.

Being sent abroad by K. Henry VIII, he resided seven years at Padua, where he became acquainted with and entertained in his family several of the most learned men of the time (q); in the meanwhile the King made him dean of Exeter, and having abolished the papal power, sent for him home; but Pole refusing to return, was, about the year 1536, deprived of his preferments (r). To make him amends, however, for the King's displeasure, Pope Paul III, on May 22, that year, created him a cardinal (s), and deputed him ambassador to the Emperor, and the King of France; he was afterwards made legate, and sat in the council of Trent; he was twice elected Pope, but not approving of the proceedings of the election, he at last lost it. Upon this disappointment, he retired to Verona, where he remained till Queen Mary's accession to the throne, who sent to him to return and take upon him the direction of the affairs of the church in this kingdom; shortly after which he arrived in the character of legate from Pope Julius III, landing at Dover on Nov. 22, 1555, his attainder having been reversed in parliament, the first act that passed in that Queen's reign; he came to London two days afterwards, but privately, for the papal power not being yet re-established, he could not be received in quality as legate; but the parliament having addressed the Queen to reconcile the kingdom to the see of Rome, and offered to repeal all laws repugnant to it, the cardinal went with much solemnity to the house, and in a long speech gave them and the whole nation a plenary absolution, and to proceed by degrees, he took out a licence under the great seal, for his legantine power. Being but in deacon's orders on his coming into the kingdom, he was ordained priest, and was afterwards, on March 22, the same year, anno 1555, being the 2d of Q. Mary's reign, consecrated archbishop of Canterbury, by Heatb, archbishop of York, and six other bishops, in the church of the Franciscan

(q) See the several names of them, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 113, where is a long account of the cardinal's life.

(r) See the letter he wrote to the King, excusing his return, among the Harleian Mss. No. 283—49.

(s) He had at times three several titles of this dignity; first, of S. S. Nerei & Achillei; secondly, of S. Mariæ-in-Cosmedin; and lastly, of Priscæ.

(t) The writ for restoring his temporalities is dated March can friars, which had been newly restored by the Queen, who was present herself at the solemnity; on the 25th he received the pall in Bowchurch in London, and on the 31st was enthroned by proxy (t); in Oct. following he was elected chancellor of the university of Oxford, and soon after, as is affirmed by some, of Cambridge likewise; and he afterwards governed this church with a conduct that has gained him the love, the praise and the admiration of posterity. But at the latter end of the Queen's reign, Pope Paul IV, having taken a dislike to him, for his mild and gentle proceedings, revoked his legantine commission, and cited him to appear personally at the court of Rome, to answer such matters as should be objected to him; and in order to divest him of all power in England, he bestowed a cardinal's hat on William Peto, the noted Franciscan friar of Greenwich, and made him his legate a latere, in the archbishop's room, on June 13, 1557, and gave him besides the bishopric of Salisbury.

REGINALD POLE.

When the Queen was informed of the Pope's intentions, she made use of every endeavour to defend and support the archbishop, who on his part was not inactive in this affair, but dispatched his friend Ormarct to Rome, to render an account of his conduct, and the state of religion in England, and in the mean time, the Queen stood so stoutly in defence of her kinsman, that she would not suffer the new legate either to enter the realm as legate, or to enjoy the bishopric, which the Pope had assigned him, and she accordingly sent to forbid his entrance into it (u), and the legantine power was left entire, as before, to the archbishop.

At last, by the Queen's firmness, her remonstrances, and an alteration of circumstances, the Pope, who foresaw that he should again lose England if he obstinately persisted in his resentment, condescended to stifle it, and was outwardly reconciled to the archbishop, telling Ormarct, that he was now satisfied that Pole had been misrepresented, and that he plainly saw no one living could escape calumny. But it is said, that the Pope's change of behaviour arose from a secret article which he made that year, in a treaty of peace with the Duke of Alva, in the name of the King of Spain, whose general he was, in which cardinal Pole was expressly restored to his legantine authority; which seems not improbable, considering the Queen's reso-

21, 1556, anno 2 and 3 Philip and Mary. Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 432.

(u) Whilst cardinal Peto was upon his journey hither with his bulls and faculties, he received the Queen's injunctions, forbidding him to enter her dominions at his peril; so he stopped in France, not daring to venture further.

lution

ARCHBISHOPS.

lution not to admit of any other in that character (v).

The cardinal was in person of a middling stature, handsome and comely, his countenance was fresh coloured, his eyes sparkling, and had a look of nobility, mixed with a placid gentleness; and he had a courtesy of behaviour, which insured both respect and affection from all who approached him; he was besides, of excellent piety, a man of learning and of great integrity.

The divisions at this time among the Protestants, their want of discipline, their disregard of the sacred orders, and their seizing the church revenues, together with the prejudices of education, inclined him to think that religion could not be supported without a power equal to the Pope's; but in this he was governed purely by motives of conscience. Had interest or ambition swayed him, he would have complied with Henry's measures, and would then probably have stood foremost in that Prince's favour, neither would he have declined his election to the Papedom, if wealth and greatness had been his object. His whole conduct was noble and exemplary in all respects, and had he lived under a Pope of less haughtiness, or a Queen of less bigotry, his measures might have been fatal to the reformed religion; the great pattern of disinterestedness, regularity, and application which he shewed himself, his care to reform the manners of the clergy, and the abuses which their sloth and negligence had introduced, and the candid and gentle treatment with which he desired the protestants might be used, joined to his constant opposition to the fire and the sword, gave the papists room to suspect him of leaning towards the heretics; wherefore he was never taken into their councils, or at least never heard or attended to in them. But in this they were mistaken, for it was the sweetness of his temper and the solidity of his judgment, that both concurred to engage him to oppose cruelty and violence, although he had at the same time an invincible attachment to the see of Rome, to a degree of superstition, and thought it impossible to maintain the order and unity of the church without it; in short, to sum up his character, he was a man of as great probity and virtue, and of as excellent endowments of mind, as any of his predecessors who had sat in this see before, had ever been, and have since, to the present time.

(v) See Collin's Ecclesiastical History, pt. 2, p. 399, 403. Godwin. Wood's Ath. and Collect. Anglo-minorit.

(w) He built the front gate-way at Lambeth palace, which for the time in which it was erected is a handsome structure; and there are against a part of the palace, two fig-trees, said to have been planted there by him, which are still beautiful and flourishing, and spread to a very unusual extent, both in breadth and height.

(x) On the wall is painted a coat of arms under a cardinal's hat, supported by two angels, viz. of eight coats;

MATTHEW PARKER.

He died on Nov. 17, 1558, a few hours after the Queen's decease, having sat in the patriarchal chair of this see two years and almost eight months (w); forty days after which, his body having laid in state, was with much pomp, brought to his own cathedral, where it was entombed on the north side of Becket's crown; his monument, which is only a plain tomb, yet remains, and on it this short epitaph, Depositum Cardinalis Poli (x).

He bore for his arms—Per pale, sable and or, a saltire engrailed, countercharged.

He is said to have given to his church of Canterbury, two silver candlesticks of great weight; a golden cross, a crozier and mitre, two rings and a silver bafon for holy water.

He was the last archbishop who was intombed in this church, their burials having ever since been discontinued here; a circumstance, seemingly strange, that not one of the archbishops since the reformation, should choose to be buried in their own cathedral, in which they had so many bright and illustrious examples; but all, as it were with one accord, have shrunk from a burial in it, though it was the antient and accustomed place of archiepiscopal sepulture, affecting rather an obscure burial in some one private parish church or other.

He constituted Aleyso Priuli, a noble Venetian, his heir, who had been his intimate friend and companion abroad, and who coming back with him into England, continued so at the time of his death; but this noble person refused every benefit arising from it, and accepted only of two prayer books, which were constantly used by the cardinal, contenting himself with distributing the legacies and gifts, according to the directions in his will.

The several Books and Treatises, written by the cardinal (y), may be seen enumerated in Wood's Ath. (z) and likewise the several lives of him written by different persons, to which may be added, a more modern one, being the Life of the Cardinal, published by Mr. Phillips, in 1764, which has since, however, met with a refutation.

72. MATHEW PARKER, S. T. P. succeeded cardinal Pole in this archbishopric, to which he was elected and consecrated in 1559. He was born at Norwich (a), and educated at Corpus Christi, alias Bennet college in Cambridge; in the time of K. Henry VIII. he was promoted to be

1, Clarence; 2, Pole; 3, Nevil earl of Warwick; 4, Beauchamp; 5, Warwick; 6, Montague; 7, Monthermer; 8, Clare and Le Despencer, quarterly.

(y) Among the Harleian Mss. are two letters from cardinal Pole to archbishop Cranmer, concerning the belief of the latter, of the sacrament; and several letters to and from him.

(z) Vol. i, p. 122.

(a) He was born on August 6, 1504, being the son of William Parker, by Alice Monins his wife. The archbishop married in 1549, Margaret, daughter of Robert Harleston,

of

ARCHBISHOPS.

one of the King's chaplains, and was made tutor to the Princess Elizabeth; after which he was made a prebendary of Ely, and in 1544 master of Bennet college, above-mentioned, of which he had been fellow; afterwards being chaplain to K. Edward VI, he was by the King made dean of Lincoln, and had likewise the prebend of Coringbam, in that church, conferred on him, and the rectory of Landbeasb; besides which, he had the deanry of the college of Stoke Clare, in the county of Suffolk, which was suppressed by K. Edward VI, notwithstanding Dr. Parker used all his endeavours for the preservation of it; but in Q. Mary's reign, in 1554, he was deprived of all his preferments, for having entered into the state of matrimony, and afterwards lived a private and retired life, by which he escaped all the storms of those days; from this obscure state he was called forth by Q. Elizabeth, who advanced him to this archbishopric, the highest station in the English church, though not till after several persons had refused it, on which, and not before, he proceeded in his degree of S. T. P. his consecration was performed with great solemnity, before a number of spectators in the chapel of Lambeth palace, on Dec. 17, 1559, by the bishops of Chichester, Exeter, Hereford, and the bishop suffragan of Bedford, free from the ceremonies of the church of Rome, for there were used no mitre nor pall, no pastoral staff nor ring, no gloves nor sandals; nor was there the authority of any bulls from Rome, to establish or confirm it. Being thus seated in this see, he became an excellent governor of the church committed to his charge, and strictly adhered to its doctrine and discipline, by which he incurred the ill will of the great men in power, and of most of the Puritans; but he was so firm and resolute in what he undertook to defend and maintain, that he would neither be frightened nor dissuaded from his purpose and intention. On his coming to the archbishopric, he partly rebuilt and partly repaired his palace at Canterbury, which he found burnt and almost wholly destroyed, at the expense of 1400l.(b) and he afterwards entertained Q. Elizabeth sumptuously in it, in her progress of Norfolk; by whom he had John Parker, who married Joan, daughter of Dr. Richard Coxe, bishop of Ely; Matthew, who died young; and another Matthew, who married Frances, daughter of William Barlow, bishop of Bath and Wells, afterwards of Chichester. She afterwards remarried Dr. Tobias Matthews, dean of Durham, and afterwards archbishop of York. See an account of archbishop Parker, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 687. See Biog. Brit. vol. iv, p. 2459; vol. v, p. 3295.

(b) See Peck's Desid. Curios. B. vi, p. 50. Though on this and other accounts, he hoped as he expressed himself in his will, to be spared from dilapidations, yet his executors paid on that head 450l. Battely, pt. 2, p. 36.

(c) It was printed in London, 1572-3. Most of the copies of this impression that were commonly sold, con-through this county in the year 1573. During his continuance in the see, he performed many pious and charitable acts; he was a great benefactor to the public library at Cambridge, and to Bennet, Caius and Trinity colleges in that university; in the former of which he founded thirteen scholarships; in the latter, one; and he repaired the regent walk, in that university; he founded a grammar school at Stoke Clare in Suffolk, and another at Rochdale in Lancashire, and gave 10l. per ann. for the preaching of six sermons at five churches in Norfolk, in Rogation week, and he repaired, pewed and beautified the chancel of Beakshorne church.

MATTHEW PARKER

He was a great patron and encourager of learned men, and was himself a great lover and promoter of that learning especially, which served to illustrate the history of this country, in which he was indefatigable, and spared no cost whatever. For this purpose, the regulation of his family was laudably adapted, for as he assigned all his domestics some business, and kept none idle about him, so those who were not employed in the management of his revenues, or the affairs of his household, were entertained for binding books, engraving, painting, in transcribing manuscripts, or in drawing and illuminating; and having built the library of Bennet college, he deposited in it printed books to a very considerable value, and all his manuscripts relating to the reformation and church history; which have been of no small service to later historians.

He published new editions of the histories of Matthew Paris, Matthew Westminster and Walsingham, and of the Four Gospels in the Saxon languages; and a little before his death, he finished the Lives of his predecessors, archbishops of Canterbury, under the title of De Antiquitate Britannicæ Ecclesiæ, etc. (c) in which he is said to have been principally assisted by Josceline, one of his chaplains, and it seems at first not to have been generally known who was the author of it (d).

Willis says, that the archbishop was raised by Providence, to retrieve the learned monuments of our forefathers, which had been so miserably dispersed at the dissolution of monasteries, that clude with the life of archbishop cardinal Pole, who died in 1558. The other copies that remained, and were to be bestowed on public libraries, and to be given to special friends, had in the year 1574, added to them, the life of the author, Matthew Parker, containing twenty nine pages. In 1729, Dr. Drake published a handsome edition of this book, with the author's last corrections and emendations.

(d) Mr. Somner, p. 138, says, Curacius having occasion to make mention of this book, gave it this commendation, that there were many excellent things in this author, whose name was not known, and that his book was to be had only in England, where it was sold at a dear rate. See the account of the archbishop's presenting his book to a nobleman, among the Harleian Mss. No. 6990-49.

nothing

ARCHBISHOPS.

MATTHEW PARKER.

nothing less than the protection of so great a man could have saved them from being irrevocably lost. The above very excellent history, drawn up and published by his direction, shewed his regard to the church; and the vast expence he was at in collecting, not only Saxon manuscripts, but all other books, by which the history of this nation might be illustrated, demonstrated his affections for every thing by which the piety and learning of our forefathers might be transmitted to posterity.

He was the author, among many other treatises (e), of one in defence of priest's marriages, to which he was probably induced by the sufferings he had undergone, and the inconveniences he then felt with the rest of the married clergy from the Queen's severity to them on that account; for Q. Elizabeth ever discountenanced those of them, who entered into this state, and she made it a continual obstacle to their preferment; nor did those of the bishops and dignified clergy, in general, have their wives and families to reside with them in their palaces, and cathedral precincts, but hired houses, or lodgings for them elsewhere (f).

The character of this worthy prelate, given by the author of the Athena, is certainly both just and true; who tells us (g), he was a very religious and learned man, of modest manners and behaviour; he was well read in the English history, and a diligent and curious collector of antient manuscripts, which had been scattered at the dissolution of monasteries, which he gave to the college in which he had been educated. He was reported to have been a person of great charity, a noted benefactor to the public, and

(e) See a list of them, in Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 688.

(f) On this account, archbishop Parker purchased a house over against his palace in Beakborne, for his wife and family to reside in, during his and their abode there; and a house likewise for the same purpose, called the duke's place, during his and their stay at Lambeth. Battely, pt. 2, p. 80. (g) Wood's Athenæ Oxon. vol. i, col. 683.

(h) The inventory of his goods, as appraised, amounted to only 2703l. 5s. 1d. of which the cost of his funeral amounted to near one half. See Battely, appendix, No. xiv^a, xiv^b.

(i) In the time of the usurpation, in the middle of the last century, when the Hierarchy of the church was put down, Lambeth palace was inhabited by several lay persons, of whom Thomas Scot, one of the regicides, and one Hardyng, were two; which last, having the chapel allotted to him as his share, he divided it into two rooms, making the upper part towards the east a dining room. At length, hearing that the corpse of archbishop Parker had been there interred, he took up a floor he had made there, and the pavement under it, and dug up the corpse, which had been put into fear-cloth of many doubles, in a coffin of lead; the coffin he sold to a plumber, and after he had caused the fear-cloth to be cut open to the flesh, (which was found fresh as if newly dead) he conveyed the corpse to an out-house, where it was tumbled into a hole. About the time of the restoration, this fellow was forced to discover an eminent ornament to the places which gave him birth and education; to which may be added, that he had neither ambition nor avarice in his disposition, and notwithstanding his public benefactions, the appearance of his family and the hospitality of his table, at which entertainments to the nobility were not unfrequent, were always suitable to his dignity; for though he left two sons, who were both married, yet he did not exert himself to amass a heap of wealth for them out of the revenues of the church, in order to raise a name and to give his family the rank of quality (b).

The archbishop's life has been written at large by Mr. Strype, in folio, London, 1711, with a copious appendix of instruments relating to it.

Having sat in the chair of this see for fifteen years and five months, he died on May 17, 1575, at his palace of Lambeth, having directed his funeral to be solemnized without pomp, noise or expence, his bowels to be buried in the Duke's chapel in Lambeth church, and his body in the chapel of Lambeth palace(i), at the upper end against the communion table, on the south side against his accustomed place of prayer (k).

The legacies in his will, both public and private, were very numerous; among the latter were, those to the Queen; the several bishops who were his friends; sir Nicholas Bacon, keeper of the great seal; sir William Cecil, lord high treasurer; sir William Cordel, and Mr. Justice Manwood, and the doctors of the college of the arches in London; among the former, besides his benefactions already noticed to Bennet, and the other colleges above-mentioned, he ordered his executors to prepare chambers in the former of them, where he had laid it; upon which, it was again brought into the chapel, and buried just above the litany desk, near the steps ascending to the altar. See Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 683. But Strype says, the body lay buried in obscurity till sir William Dugdale acquainted archbishop Sancroft with it, who ordered it to be taken up and deposited again in its proper place, and a new memorial to be put over him.

(k) The particulars and place of his burial, were appointed by a paper in his own hand-writing, which is printed in Battely, pt. 2, app. No. xiv^b. The expences of his funeral, as certified by his son John Parker, were, including the alms distributed to the poor, 1148l. At the archbishop's funeral on June 6, 1575, there was used about the hearse, pall, &c. seventy-four yards of velvet, eighty-three yards of broad cloth, twelve yards of taffeta, thirty-four yards of buckram, fifteen yards of caffoy, forty-five ounces of gold fringe, and three pound weight of black silk fringe; all which, together with the timbers of the rails and hearse, cost 136l. 18s. 8d. and were taken by the heralds, as droits belonging to them, exclusive of their other fees, liveries, and allowances. At the funeral of archbishop Grindal, afterwards in the year 1583, his executors found it expedient for them to compound with Garter King at arms, for no less a sum than one hundred pounds in lieu of the hearse, with its furniture and all liveries and fees to which the officers of arms were entitled on the day of interment. See Edmondson's Heraldry, vol. i.

ARCHBISHOPS.

for three other of his scholars, to each of whom he gave 3l. 6s. 8d. yearly, to be given in such manner as his executors by their writing should prescribe; of which scholars he ordered, that the first should be elected by them from the school of Canterbury, being a native of it; the second from the school of Aylsham, and the third from the school of Wyndham, being both natives of those towns.

He devised a charitable donation to the mayor and citizens of Norwich, in which city he was born, and to the mayor and citizens of Canterbury and their successors 100l. to be lent out to one or more manufactures of wool, in that city, by whom the poor of it might from thence be employed, according to the judgment and consent of the dean and chapter; to be lent every third year, if they should see proper. For which he directed, that the commonalty, or some able citizens of Canterbury should be bound, in order that his legacy should not at any time be lost; and he besides bequeathed a benefaction to the university library (l).

The archbishop bore for his arms—Gules, on a chevron argent, 3 stars of the 1st, between 3 keys of the 2d.

73. EDMUND GRINDAL, S. T. P. succeeded to this see in the same year 1575 (m). He was the son of William Grindal, of St. Bees in Cumberland, gent. he was first scholar, then fellow in 1538, of Pembroke hall in Cambridge; in 1540 he proceeded A. M. and in 1544 had the college titles for orders; four years after which he was chosen master of the college, and assistant to the chancellor in his court; then B. D. in 1549 he was Margaret professor; he was next chaplain to bishop Ridley, chaunter of St. Paul's, and by the bishop's means, was promoted to be one of the King's chaplains; and in 1552 to a prebend of West-

(l) His executors were, Master Peter Osborne, of the exchequer, esquire to the Queen; his son, John Parker, of Lambeth, esq; Richard Wendesly, esq; his steward; Andrew Peerson, cl. commissary of the faculties; and John Baker his brother, of Cambridge, gent. His will, which is dated April 5, 1575, is printed at length in Battely, pt. 2, app. No. xiv^a.

(m) See Biog. Brit. vol. iv, p. 2428, 2440 [F].

(n) See some account of the archbishop from Parker's Skeletos Cantab. and bishop Wren's account of the masters of Pembroke hall, inserted in Leland's Collect. vol. v, p. 205 and 392.

(o) Stow speaks very slightly of him; for he says, that whilst bishop of London, he collected money for the building of St. Paul's church, which he afterwards appropriated to his own use. Survey, B. iii, p. 150; but he should have quoted good authority before he told this tale.

(p) He at first refused the mastership with a great many excuses, but at last he accepted it; and on August 3, 1559, the 14th day after he was chosen, being then B. D. and bishop of London elect, he was admitted master by proxy, and his leave of absence was renewed from time to time by the college; so that he was never there afterwards, but resigned his office about May, 1562, two years after he had been chosen.

EDMUND GRINDAL.

minster, when he quitted his fellowship; the year after which, on Q. Mary's accession, he fled with many others, for their religion's sake, into Germany, and there is a letter of his to Ridley, printed and dated at Frankfort in 1555 (n).

He was, says Camden in his Annals, anno 1583, a religious and grave man, who returning from banishment on Q. Elizabeth's accession, was first promoted to the see of London, being consecrated on Dec. 1, 1559 (o); before which he had been chosen master a second time of Pembroke college (p). In 1570 he was translated to York, and thence again to Canterbury in 1575, as above-mentioned (q); at first he enjoyed much of the Queen's favour, but being accused of countenancing the conventicles of the turbulent ministers, and their prophecies (r), of which his enemies took advantage, he quite lost her favour, and was ordered by her to keep his house (s); during which time and his remaining under the Queen's displeasure, the bishops of his province wrote to her in his behalf. About this time he became blind, and continued so for two years before his death, when having sat as archbishop for the space of almost seven years and an half, he died on July 6, 1583, aged 64, at his palace of Croydon, and was buried in the middle chancel of that church.

The small wealth which he had gathered, he in great measure bestowed upon the founding of a school at St. Bees, the place of his nativity, and for the advancement of learning in both the universities. The charitable benefactions which he gave by his will were; to the above-mentioned school 30l. per annum; to Queen's college (t), in Oxford, 20l. per annum, the greatest part of his books, 87 ounces of silver plate, and the discharge of a debt of 40l. owing to him from the college; to Pembroke hall in Cambridge, 24l. per (q) The Queen's licence to elect, was dated December 29, 1575; her confirmation February 14th following; and the temporalities were restored April 23. Rymer's Fœdera, vol. xv, p. 751, 752, 755. He did not commence S. T. P. till 1564.

(r) Hence the other party brought up the expression of Grindalizing, that is, to act like archbishop Grindal, as an opprobrious term of his complying with the factions and schismatical party. See the speech of the lord keeper concerning him, among the Harleian MS. No. 398-5.

(s) Camden says, he lost the Queen's favour, on account of his having condemned the unlawful marriage of Jules, an Italian physician, with another man's wife, in the proceedings of which the archbishop was opposed, though in vain, by the earl of Leicester. Sir John Harrington relates the story of the Italian physician, with other circumstances; and says, that the archbishop's blindness was only pretended, upon the Queen's commanding him to keep his house; but others, more charitably inclined, impute this misfortune, which seems to have been real, to his intense studying.

(t) In this college he founded the Greek lectureship, and gave a stipend for it, out of the manor of Wiffenbury in Aswell, in 1568.

ARCHBISHOPS.

JOHN WHITGIFT.

annum (u); the remainder of his books, and a gilt cup of 40 ounces, called the Canterbury cup; to St. Mary Magdalen's college, in the same university, 5l. per annum, in lands; to Christ's college there, 40 ounces of silver plate; to the parish of Croydon, the sum of 50l. to buy lands for the benefit of the poor, and to the city of Canterbury 100l. to be kept in stock for ever, for the use of the poor traders and dealers in wool in that city (v).

Archbishop Grindal is said, when he returned from banishment on the accession of Queen Elizabeth, to have first translated into this country the Tamarisk, so useful in medicine, against the diseases of the spleen (w).

There are several letters from and to the archbishop among the Harleian manuscripts, viz. of Nicholas Ridley to him; of the archbishop to Zancbius, and to Bullinger; of John Fox to the archbishop, and of the archbishop to him; his remarkable letter on the defence of prophesyings; his directions concerning preachers; his speech whilst under the Queen's displeasure; the archbishop's letter to Lord Suffex, and another letter concerning him. The archbishop left behind him the character of being a good natured, friendly, inoffensive man, a learned, useful prelate, and a sincere pious Christian, and an amiable example of all Christian virtue.

He bore for his arms, granted to him by De- tlic, Garter King at Arms—Quarterly, or and azure, a cross or and ermine, in each quarter a dove or and azure, counterchanged of the field.

The archbishop's life is written by Mr. Strye, at large, in folio, London.

74. JOHN WHITGIFT, S. T. P. bishop of Worcester, was next preferred to this see, being promoted to it on September 24, 1583 (x).

He was born at Great Grimshy in the county of Lincoln, and was first educated at St. Anthony's school, and afterwards at Pembroke hall in Cambridge, under the famous martyr John Bradford, and became fellow of Peter house, then in 1567 master of Pembroke hall, and the same year admitted S. T. P. about three months after which he became head of Trinity college. Being chaplain to Dr. Cox, bishop of Ely, he was promoted by him to a prebend in that church, and to the rectory of Taversham near Cambridge.

He bore the office of vice-chancellor of that university twice, viz. In 1571 and 1574, and adorned both chairs of the divinity professor in it, having been first reader of the lady Margaret's divinity lecture, and afterwards the Queen's public professor of divinity. At this time he was made one of the Queen's chaplains, and promoted by her to the deanry of Lincoln, when archbishop Parker granted him a dispensation, dated Oct. 31, 1571, that with that deanry, a prebend of Ely, the mastership of Trinity college in Cambridge, and the rectory of Taversham, he might hold any third benefice, with licence to exchange and to be non-resident upon any of them (y), and this seems to have been granted by the free favour of the archbishop, without his seeking after it, nor do I find he made any use of it. In that year, 1577, he was consecrated bishop of Worcester, and the next year was constituted vice-president of the marches of Wales. Whilst archbishop Grindal lay under the Queen's displeasure, she designed bishop Whitgift should be directly translated to the see of Canterbury, on his intended resignation; and to this he was strongly importuned not only by several honourable persons about the Queen's person, but by the archbishop himself, who, out of a due sense of his own uneasy situation from the Queen's displeasure, and of his own years and infirmities, was willing to retire from his high station, and spend his days in a private retirement, being content to receive a yearly pension from the Queen for his support. But bishop Whitgift could not be prevailed on to accept of this offer upon any condition whatever, during the life of another, who was in the just posses-

(u) The letters of Mortmain obtained of the Queen, were for 40l. per annum; but his estate is only 24l. for the maintenance of one fellow and two scholars, from his school of St. Bees.

(v) Godwin. Battely, pt. 2, p. 80. Parker's Skeleton Cantab. and bishop Wren's account of the masters of Pembroke hall, in Leland's Collect. as above. The latter says, the poet Spencer, who was of that college too, laments him in one of his pastorals, under the name of Algrind.

(w) It has been observed, that the English have not been so grateful as the Romans, to celebrate those who have first imported lasting ornaments, as well as useful things, to their country; yet we have some authors not altogether silent in these vegetable acquisitions, from whom we learn, that Dr. Linacre first brought into this land, that prince of flowers, the damask rose. That the perdrigon plum, with two kinds more, were first made natives of this soil by Thomas, lord Cromwell, when he returned from his travels; and the apricot, by a priest named Wolf, who was gardener to K. Henry VIII. In this reign also, were first propagated among us, bops and artichokes; and then were cherry-orchards first planted here, about Sittingborne, with a more improved kind of that fruit, brought from Flanders by one Hayns, another of that King's gardeners. What effect Camden's recommendation of olive trees had with K. Edward VI. I don't know; but in Q. Elizabeth's reign, besides the tamarisk, as above-mentioned, after our opening a trade with Zant, the shrub which bears that excellent fruit the currant, was first transported hither, as was the tulip flower in 1578.

(x) See Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 369; vol. vi. p. 4134, 4247, 4251; vol. vii, p. 4231.

(y) It was the custom of those times, to grant dispensations of plurality, of ecclesiastical benefices and licences of non-residence, as honorary rewards and encouragements to such persons, as appeared signally eminent in the church, for the soundness of their learning, and their holiness of life; such dispensations were granted by archbishop Parker, to several persons, as may be seen in a manuscript book or register, now among the archives of the church of Canterbury. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 81.

tion

ARCHBISHOPS.

sion of it; however, he did not wait long before the death of the archbishop removed this difficulty and he was promoted to the archiepiscopal dignity in 1583, as above-mentioned; two years after which he was sworn of the privy council. Soon after his promotion to this see, he put in practice his design for the benefit of those poor vicars, who were but slenderly provided for, by the endowments of their vicarages, or the stipends of their curacies; for which purpose when he renewed the leases of his appropriated churches, he abated much of the fines for the increase of their pensions and salaries.

On the Queen's declaring her inclinations to appoint him Lord Chancellor of England, and the university of Oxford having at the same time nominated him their chancellor, he declined both those honourable offices, recommending for Christopher Hatton to both of them, upon whom they were conferred. He presided over this church for the space of 20 years and about five months, and died at Lambeth on February 28, 1603 (z), being then above 70 years old, and was buried at Croydon, in the parish church there, where his tomb still remains in the south aisle.

At his first coming to the see, he found it overcharged in the Queen's books, and procured an abatement of 100*l.* of the first fruits for himself and his successors, and recovered soon after of the Queen a former part of their possessions, viz. Long Beech Wood in this county, being 1000 acres, detained from his predecessors, and farmed out by the comptroller of the Queen's household.

He founded and endowed in his life time an hospital for a warden and 28 poor persons, brothers and sisters, and a grammar school near it, at Croydon, with a convenient house for the schoolmaster, and a stipend of 20*l.* per ann. which are at this time lasting monuments of his piety and charity. He gave some of his books to Pembroke hall and Trinity college in Cambridge, and some estate to that of Peter house, in the same university. Sir Henry Wotton, as we learn from his remains, says, and he was both able to know and judge of this archbishop, that he was of a primitive temper, when the church in lowliness of temper did flourish in high examples (a).

Archbishop Whitgift had learning, courage and greatness of mind, sufficient for the high rank he held in the church. He was a man of quick abilities, of great good nature, of a peaceable

(z) On July 21, preceding his death, the archbishop crowned K. James I. and his Queen, at Westminster.

(a) Reliq. Wotton, p. 19. Archbishop Whitgift's life was written and published both by Mr. Strype, and by for George Paul. In it there is a narrative of those troubles, which he met with from Mr. Cartwright, and others of that turbulent party, and of the archbishop's mild and prudent conduct towards them, and of the correspondence he maintained by letters with Beza and others, at Geneva. By temper, and a general scholar; and if he had not lived in those times of contention about conformity, when the factious attempts of the Puritans made rigour in a great degree necessary, he would scarcely have had a single objection made to his character, even by his adversaries. His house was a sort of academy, where young gentlemen were instructed in languages, mathematics and other scientific learning; and besides the indigent scholars, which he entertained in his family for this purpose, he supported several in the universities with exhibitions, and encouraged them in proportion to their merit and necessities. He lived in a time of public disturbance, when invasions were often threatened and insurrections at home attempted; his domestics were, on these accounts therefore trained to military exercise, his palace was well furnished with arms, and he kept a stable of managed horses. His hospitality was considerable, in which every thing shewed his generosity and the largeness of his mind, and as he was a great lover of pomp, besides the constant establishment in his family, which was princely, he usually travelled with a great retinue; he once came to Canterbury with a train of 500 horse, 100 of which were his own domestics, so that he lived in too much splendour to be able to do any great works of charity; though besides his usual benevolence to the poor at his house, he founded the hospital and school at Croydon, as above-mentioned. He was always an encourager of learned men; Stow found him a gracious patron, and dedicated his annals of Q. Elizabeth to him.

RICHARD BANCROFT.

Archbishop Whitgift wrote a treatise in defence of church government; his letter to Theodore Beza, dated in 1593, is printed in Batley's Appendix, as has been mentioned above; among the Harleian manuscripts, is one written by him, being his heads for a history of the Pope's incroachments, and several other letters written by him, and two from Mr. Abraham Hartwell, to him, and the archbishop's answer to a book called an admonition to parliament; and among the Bodleian manuscripts, there are several treatises written by him (b).

Archbishop Whitgift bore for his arms—Argent, on a cross fleury at the ends sable, 4 bezants.

75. RICHARD BANCROFT, S. T. P. bishop of London, was next in 1604, promoted to this archbishopric of Canterbury (c). He was born at one of his letters to Beza may be discerned, what manner of treatment the church of England found in those days, from the brethren of Geneva. It is printed in Batley's Appendix, pt. 2, No. xv. R. Parker's Skeletos Cantab. in Leland's Collect. vol. v, p. 206. Bishop Wren's account of the masters of Pembroke-hall, in Leland's Coll. vol. v, p. 394.

(b) See Peck's Desid. vol. i, B. v, p. 7, 10, 12.

(c) See Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 465. Wood's Ath. salt. vol. , col. 178.

Farnworth

ARCHBISHOPS.

RICHARD BANCROFT.

Farnworth in the county of Lancaster (d), and educated at Christ's and afterwards at Jesus college in Cambridge, where he commenced S. T. P. He had been made at times first prebendary of the cathedral church of Dublin, then rector of Taverham in Cambridgeshire, prebendary of Durham and Westminster, treasurer of St. Paul's, London, and canon of Christ church in Canterbury. On May 8, 1597, being S. T. P. he was consecrated bishop of London, and thence translated to this see in 1604, and in 1608 was constituted chancellor of the university of Oxford; thus he ascended by degrees, until he was exalted to the highest dignity in the church of England, being esteemed an ornament to each preferment to which he had been at different times promoted.

By what means he was thus advanced, sir John Harrington, whose partiality cannot be suspected, thus informs us; he says, that the archbishop came to all his preferments very clearly, without prejudice or spoil of his churches; that by means of the Lord Chancellor Hatton, whose chaplain he was, Q. Elizabeth came to take knowledge of his wisdom and sufficiency, especially from his writings against the Genevising and Scotizing ministers, of which K. James also had heard, so that he became a favourite to both of those princes, and to the state; the seditionaries (to use Judge Popbam's words, who would not have them called Puritans) maligned him in libels and rhimes, laying on him the imputation of papistry (as they then did and still continue so to do on all men who cross their designs), for which, some were punished in the Star Chamber; but he was so far from being popishly affected, that it may be truly affirmed, that the greatest blow which the Papists received in all Q. Elizabeth's time, came from his hand, or at least from his head; for he having observed the emulation between the secular priests and Jesuits, found means to set them one against another, (Watson against Parsons), and he divided their languages so, that they can scarcely understand one another yet. In the disputations at Hampton Court, K. James found him both learned and stout, and took such liking of him, that passing by the bishops of Winchester and Durham, both men of eminent learning and merit, he made choice of bishop Bancroft for the filling up of the then vacant see of Canterbury, as a man more exercised in affairs of state; to conclude with that, which the truth, rather than kindness forceth me to say, no bishop has been more vigilant in looking to his charge. Thus far sir John Har- rington, and coming from his pen, it stamps a forcible truth on the character he gives of this prelate, who died of the stone, on November 2, 1610, and was buried under a flat stone in Lambeth church. Lord Clarendon, speaking of his death, in his history of the Rebellion, says (e), at this time happened the never enough lamented death of Dr. Bancroft, that metropolitan, who understood the church excellently and had almost rescued it out of the hands of the Calvinian party, and very much subdued the unruly spirit of the non-conformists by and after the conference at Hampton Court, countenancing men of the greatest parts in learning and disposing the clergy to a more solid course of study, than they had been accustomed to, and if he had lived, would have quickly extinguished that fire in England which had been kindled in Geneva, or had he been succeeded by any man who understood and loved the church, that infection would easily have been kept out, which could not afterwards be so easily expelled. On the contrary, the Puritans mention him in a very different light, they say, he was naturally of a rough uncourtly temper, which was heightened by his great authority in the high commission. He had extream high notions of government in church and state, and was strongly suspected of having cherished the King's disposition to assume a power above the laws and constitution of this country; he was most certainly, a great friend to the prerogative, and what with the want of that hospitality which becomes a bishop, what with the roughness of his temper and his high and arbitrary notions (f), he was but little regarded in his station as head of the church. The above is a lamentable instance, let it be on which side it will, how far the rancour of party will make men deviate from the truth, in giving the characters of those in high stations, in such divided times. Archbishop Bancroft persuaded the King to found a college at Chelsea, for a certain number of learned divines, with an ample allowance of lands and privileges; but this foundation, though strongly countenanced at first, miscarried afterwards and fell to the ground.

The archbishop died at Lambeth on Nov. 2, 1610, æt. 67, and was buried in the parish church there, within the rails of the altar. He published a book, intitled, Dangerous Positions and Proceedings, published and practised within the Island of Great Britain, under pretence of Reformation, and for the Presbyterian Discipline; and in 1593 another, called a Survey of the Pretended (d) He was born in 1544, son of John Bancroft, gent. by Mary his wife, daughter of John, brother to Dr. Hugh Curwyn, archbishop of Dublin.

(e) Vol. i, p. 68.

(f) Wilson, the writer of K. James I.'s life, says, that Whitgift left Bancroft, a sturdy piece, to succeed him, but not with the same spirit; for what the former strove to do with gentleness, the latter carried on by rigour and severity.

ARCHBISHOPS.

Holy Discipline. Among the Harleian manuscripts are some letters of this archbishop, and his will, No. 7043-8, by which it appears, that he began the foundation of the Lambeth library, which has been since so greatly increased by his successors, especially by the archbishops Abbot, Sheldon, Tenison and Secker, so that at present it consists of upwards of 700 manuscripts and 15,000 printed books.

Archbishop Bancroft bore for his arms—Or, on a bend between 6 cross-crosets azure, 3 garbs of the field; assigned to him in Nov. 1604, by William Camden, clark.

76. GEORGE ABBOT, S. T. P. bishop of London, was next promoted to this see, on April 9, 1611; he was born in 1562, at Guildford in Surry (g), and had his education at Oxford, where he was first fellow of Baliol, and then in 1597, elected master of University college, and commenced S. T. P. two years after which he was promoted to the deanry of Winchester, and then to that of Gloucester, and in 1609 was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry; soon after which, he was translated from thence to the see of London, and from thence to this of Canterbury, as has been already mentioned.

During the time of his being archbishop, he had the misfortune to kill a gamekeeper accidentally, in shooting at a deer, in Bianhill park, in Hampshire, belonging to the lord Zouch (h). This gave him a real and heartfelt concern, and brought him into great uneasiness and trouble, which lasted during his life, and he kept the anniversary of it with the strictest fasting and humility.

In 1627, being the 1st year of K. Charles's reign, being accused of remissness in his government of the church, and of favouring the Puritans; among other matters, the King inhibited him from proceeding on his metropolitcal visitations, confined him to his house at Ford, in this county, and granted his commission to the bishop of London, Durham and others, to execute that jurisdiction; but the next year he was sent for by the King and reconciled to him, and was ordered to attend in his place at the council board.

He sat in this see 22 years, during which time he bestowed great sums of money in building and endowing an hospital at Guildford in Surry,

(g) See Biog. Brit. vol. i, p. 3 and 12. Wood's Ath. vol. i, col. 430, says, he was younger brother of Robert Abbot, bishop of Salisbury, the sons of Maurice Abbot Sherman, by Alice March, his wife.

(h) It happened on July 24, 1621; the man's name was Peter Hawkins, who rode swiftly between the archbishop and the deer, though cautioned and advised by all against it, at the moment the archbishop had drawn his cross-bow to shoot, by which he was wounded in the fleshy part of the left arm, and died of it the same day. The archbishop's the place of his nativity (i). He built likewise a conduit of stone, in the city of Canterbury, for the common good and service of it; a work of great cost, and no less benefit, to the inhabitants there. He died at Croydon on August 4, 1633, aged 71, and was buried in the Lady chapel, in the church of Guildford, under a handsome monument of marble, on which is his effigies, clothed in his pontifical ornaments, lying at full length.

GEORGE ABBOT.

Very different are the characters which have been given of archbishop Abbot, by the opposite parties of the time in which he lived.

Lord Clarendon has given the following account and character of this archbishop, which I shall give at large, especially as it contains an impartial account of the state of the church, at a time when the seeds of rebellion seem to have taken deep root in the constitution of both church and state. He says, archbishop Abbot had sat too many years in this see, and had too great a jurisdiction over this church, though he was without any credit in the court, at the death of K. James, nor had he much for many years before. He had been master of one of the poorest colleges in Oxford, and had learning sufficient for that province; he was a man of very morose manners, and a very sour aspect, which in that time was called gravity, and under the opinion of that virtue and by the recommendation of the Earl of Dunbar, the King's first Scotch favourite, he was preferred by him to the bishopric of Coventry and Lichfield, and presently afterwards to that of London, before he had been parson, vicar or curate of any parish church in England (k), or prebendary of any cathedral church, and was in truth totally ignorant of the true constitution of the church of England, and the state and interest of the clergy, as sufficiently appeared throughout the whole course of his life afterwards; that archbishop Abbot having himself made very little progress in the antient and solid study of divinity, adhered only to the doctrine of Calvin, and for his sake did not think so ill of the discipline as he ought to have done; and though many other bishops plainly discerned the mischief, which daily broke in to the prejudice of religion, by his defects and remissness, and prevented it in their own dioceses, as far as they could, yet that temper in the archbishop, whose house was a pardon was dated November 22, that year, 19 James I. Rym. Fœd. vol. xvii, p. 337.

(i) He endowed it with lands worth 300l. per ann. 100l. of which he ordered to be employed in setting the poor to work; and the remaining 200l. he ordered for the maintenance of a master, twelve brethren, and eight sisters. The archbishop's birth day is annually commemorated. The archbishops of Canterbury are visitors.

(k) Lord Clarendon adds here, the word dear, but this appears to be a mistake.

sanctuary

ARCHBISHOPS.

sanctuary to the most eminent of that factious party, and who licensed their most pernicious writings, left his successor a very difficult work to do, to reform and reduce a church into order, that had been so long neglected, and that was so ill filled by many weak and more wilful churchmen. Had archbishop Bancroft, says the noble historian, been succeeded by any man, who understood and loved the church, that infection which had been kindled in Geneva, would easily have been kept out, which could not afterwards be so easily expelled; but Abbot brought none of this antidote with him, and considered the Christian religion no otherwise than as it abhorred and reviled Popery, and valued those men most, who did that most furiously; for the strict observation of the discipline of the church, or the conformity to the articles or canons established, he made little enquiry and took less care (l).

But Lord Clarendon's character of archbishop Abbot, ought to be credited with much wariness, for as party zeal at this time carried men to an extraordinary length, in the characters they drew up of their friends or opposites, far beyond the lines of truth, it is no wonder that the archbishop, the head of the English church, should be as much vilified by one party, as he was highly extolled by the other. Contrary to Lord Clarendon's character of him, several historians, particularly bishop Godwin, A. Wood (m), Mr. Coke, and Dr. Welwood, speak of him in very honourable terms; and Dr. Warner, who has taken some pains to investigate the archbishop's character, concludes his account of him as follows: it is not to be wondered at, that a prelate of Abbot's principle should have little credit in the court of two such Kings, who were carrying the prerogative above the law, to the destruction of civil and religious liberty, neither will that stain upon his memory remain in the least to his discredit with those who are lovers of their country, and of our present happy establishment in church and state (n).

(l) Lord Clarendon further observes, a little after, that the remissness of archbishop Abbot, and some other bishops, by his example, had introduced, or at least connived at a negligence, which gave great scandal to the church, and no doubt offended very many pious persons; namely, the taking too little care of churches and chancels, to beautify, or so much as to repair or to keep them clean. History of the Rebellion, vol. i, p. 68, 73. Battely, pt. 2, p. 83.

(m) Wood, in his Athenæ, vol. i, col. 584, says, he was a person pious and grave, and exemplary in his life and conversation. He was likewise a learned man, and had his erudition all of the old stamp. He was stiffly principled in the doctrine of St. Augustine, which they who understand it not, call Calvinism, and therefore disrelished by them who incline to the Mossian and Arminian tenets. He was a plausible preacher and an able statesman, and the things which he wrote, shewed him to be a man of parts, learning, vigilancy, and unwearied study, though overwhelmed with business.

WILLIAM LAUD.

The archbishop died at Croydon on Aug. 4, 1633, æt. 71, and was buried according to his will, at Guildford, in the lady chapel there.

He bore for his arms—Gules, a chevron between 3 pears stalked or.

The treatises which were written by him, may be seen enumerated in Wood's Athenæ (o).

Among the Harleian manuscripts are several of his letters; his opinion and narrative of the nullity of the marriage of Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex; his letter to K. James I, and his speech on the toleration of Papists; notes concerning him; his funeral sermon, and other matters relating to him.

77. WILLIAM LAUD, S. T. P. bishop of London, succeeded next to this see in 1633 (p). He was born at Reading in Berkshire (q), and first educated at a school in that town, whence he was sent to St. John's college in Oxford, where he successively became fellow, divinity reader, and president. He was first preferred to the vicarage of Stamford in Northamptonshire, and was inducted to North Kilworth in Leicestershire, which he exchanged for West Tilbury in Essex. In 1608 he became chaplain to Dr. Neal, bishop of Rochester, who became his patron and steady friend, to whose good offices he owed all his future advancement in life, and gave him the rectory of Cookstone in Kent, which he exchanged for that of Norton near Sittingborne; after which he was promoted to a prebend of the church of Lincoln, and to the archdeaconry of Huntingdon. In 1609 he was made one of the King's chaplains. In 1615 he was made dean of Gloucester, and about two years afterwards exchanged his livings in Kent and Essex for the rectory of Ibstock in the county of Leicester; for all which he was indebted to the friendship of the same patron, then advanced to the see of Lincoln.

In 1620 he was installed a prebendary of Westminster, and in 1621 was consecrated bishop of St. David's, with leave to hold the presidentship of St. John's college, and the rectory of Ibstock in com-

(n) A more modern writer, speaking in praise of sr George Hume, earl of Dunbar, K. James I.'s minister, says, to his honor, he recommended the temperate, firm, and honest Abbot, to the see of Canterbury, and by his assistance, gave peace to the church of Scotland, too soon interrupted by their deaths.

(o) Vol. i, col. 584.

(p) The licence for the dean and chapter to elect was dated August 12, 1633. Royal assent for William, late bishop of London, on September 4; and the temporalities were restored on September 23. Rym. Fœd. vol. xix, p. 525.

(q) See Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 2886. He was son of William Laud, by Lucia his wife, the widow of John Robinson, of Reading, and daughter of John Webbe, of the same place; who was father of sr William Webbe, lord mayor of London, in 1591. The archbishop was born on October 7, 1573. See a long and particular account of him, in Wood's Athenæ, vol. ii, col. 55, who speaks of him with unbounded praise and partiality.

mendans,

ARCHBISHOPS.

mendam (r); but he resigned the former the day before he was consecrated bishop, in recompence of which, the King gave him leave to keep the parsonage of Creek in Norhamptonshire (s). In 1625 he became deputy clerk of the closet, and on the Candlemas day following, he officiated at the coronation of K. Charles I, as dean of Westminster, by the King's appointment, in the place of the bishop of Lincoln, then out of favour at court, being then a canon of that church, in commendam. In 1626 he was translated to Bath and Wells, and was made dean likewise of the chapel royal, and next year was made a privy councillor, and in 1628 was translated to London. Two years after which, he was elected chancellor of the university of Oxford, when he drew up those statutes for regulating the university, which were recommended by the King, and received by that body. In 1633 he was sworn chancellor and a privy councillor of Scotland, the King being then about to be crowned at Edinburgh, and was elected chancellor of the university of Dublin; in which year, on Sept. 19, he was translated to this metropolitane see of Canterbury; some little while before which, a person came to him seriously and of avowed ability to perform it, and offered him a cardinal's hat, and about a fortnight afterwards he had another like offer, of both which he immediately at the time acquainted the King and of his refusal of it (t). Next year he was appointed one of the commissioners of the Exchequer, about which time he took order that all the records of the Tower, which concern the clergy, should be collected together and written on vellum, at his own charge, and it was brought to him finished, curiously written and richly bound on June 10, 1637 (u); two years after which, he sent the remainder of his manuscripts to the public library at Oxford, being in numbers 576, to be added to 700, which he had formerly sent to it, and in 1640 he sent more, all consisting of several languages and faculties, but especially in the Hebrew, Greek, Perick and Arabian tongues (v).

In the beginning of the grand rebellion, he

(r) So early as the reign of K. Edward I, commendams were in use, and then it is observable that an ecclesiastical person being promoted to a bishopric, his wardenship of an hospital, as well as his benefices, prebends, and other ecclesiastical dignities, became void in law. But that the King, by his special dispensation and grace might prevent their avoidance, and grant his licence to retain them; and that this licence or commenda retinere must precede his consecration as a bishop, else it comes over late. Dyer, fol. 159^a Hobart's Reports, p. 141. Prynne, p. 788.

(s) Whilst bishop of St. David's, he repaired the palace, and built a new chapel at Aberguilly, the residence of the bishop, and gave much plate and rich furniture to it.

(t) His answer, as appears by his own diary was, that somewhat dwelt within him, which would not suffer that, till Rome was otherwise than it was.

WILLIAM LAUD.

fell under the displeasure of the factious Commons, and was imprisoned almost four years, on an impeachment of high treason. His trial was five months depending upon the general charge, that he had endeavoured to subvert the laws, the Protestant religion, and the rights of Parliament. The archbishop made a full and undaunted defence of himself for above 20 days, with great art, vivacity, oratory and firmness, and considering the malice and animosity of the managers for the Commons against him, with more patience and discretion than could be expected from a man of his warm and hasty temper; it was not without difficulty that the Commons could be prevailed with, that the sentence of hanging should be changed into beheading, which, as the prisoner was a bishop, a privy councillor and the first peer of the realm, shews the rancour and inveteracy, with which they persecuted him to death (w). His behaviour on the scaffold was truly great and magnanimous, and did him more honour than all the other circumstances of his life; he was beheaded on Tower hill, on Jan. 10, 1645, aged 71, being attended on the scaffold by Dr. Richard Sterne, one of his chaplains, where he read his speech to the multitude which surrounded it, and suffered the fatal blow with much courage, meekness and cheerfulness; his remains were afterwards accompanied to the earth by great multitudes of people, whom affection or curiosity had drawn together for the purpose, and were decently interred according to the rights and ceremonies of the church of England, in the chancel of Albion Barking; but in July 1663, they were removed to Oxford, and deposited in St. John's college chapel, in a small vault built purposely for them near the high altar. Thus ended the life of archbishop Laud, of whom our historians speak with such strange extremes, as they stood affected to one party or the other; but he neither deserved the fulsome praises of the one, nor the vile aspersions of the other. As to his temper, it must be allowed, that with great openness and sincerity, there was joined an ungovernable heat and im-

(u) This book commences, anno 20 Edward I, and reaches to the 14th Edward IV, and is at this time reserved as a choice rarity, in the library at Lambeth.

(v) Of these, two hundred and sixty were Great MSS. two hundred and forty of which were given by the earl of Pembroke; and forty by sir Thomas Rowe.

(w) The life and troubles of archbishop Laud are so closely interwoven with the public affairs of that time, that they are to be found in every Historian; and the separate accounts of them, which have been from time to time printed, are so frequent in every ones perusal, that they render a more copious account of them wholly unnecessary here. Among the Harleian MSS. there are a great number of papers concerning him, his life, and troubles, most of which, however, have been already printed.

petuosity,

ARCHBISHOPS.

petuosity, which put him off his guard, and betrayed him into indiscretions, which gave a handle against him. His spirit being active and uncontrollable, it was a misfortune to him to be placed in the high rank of metropolitan, and of having the King's ear so much, in which he had so many opportunities to exert it; because, with his high principles in church and state, it made him no friend to the free laws and constitution of this country, and it of course raised many powerful enemies against him, who were implacable. He was a man of good parts, which had been improved by learning, but he was more a man of business than of letters; and Lord Clarendon himself has confessed, that the archbishop retained too keen a memory of those who had used him ill, and there was something boisterous and turbulent in his disposition (x).

There is no doubt, let his enemies say what they will, but that he was a firm and thorough Protestant, without any inclination whatever to become a Papist; but as his zeal for the church of England made him a mortal enemy to all the sectaries, which divided from it; so to remove himself as far as he could from these, he countenanced and introduced ceremonies into the service, which too much resembled those in the church of Rome, and which he pressed with as much vigour, as though they had been the essentials of religion; and this was the great foible of archbishop Laud. It must be owned too, that he had a great deal of superstition in his composition, which appears in many instances of his diary (xx). His resolution was surpassed in nothing, but his zeal for the King and the Hierarchy of the church, and in obeying the impulse of that zeal, he trusted too much to his good intentions, without any regard to prudence, or even common decency of manners; that is, he took no care to make these intentions appear in their best colours, or to pay any deference to other people's opinion about them, but rested satisfied in his own integrity. He was to the last degree impatient of contradiction, even in council, nor could he debate any arguments, which were not of moment, with that patience and temper which became his character. But the archbishop, with all the virtues and accomplishments which his most partial friends have attributed to him, it must be owned, was very unfit for either of the stations which he filled in church or state, especially in such times, and under such a prince as Charles I. Upon the

(x) See lord Clarendon's character of him, in his History of the Rebellion, vol. i, p. 51, 72.

(xx) The breviate or diary of his life, which he had written for his private use, was taken out of his pocket by force, whilst he was a prisoner in the Tower, and was published by Prynne, his avowed enemy, with a design of whole, it may be said of archbishop Laud, that he had virtues and qualifications sufficient to have made him as much beloved and respected in private life, and in more quiet times, as he was the contrary in those turbulent ones in which he lived.

WILLIAM LAUD.

The archbishop was a munificent benefactor and patron, upon all occasions, though his activity in it procured him many enemies. He was peculiarly so in regard to the university of Oxford; for besides the statutes which he provided for the better regulation of it, he obtained of the King the grant of annexing a canonry of Christ church in that university, to the Hebrew professorship, by which means the knowledge of the Hebrew and Chaldee languages began to be known in it; and he afterwards procured another canonry of the same church to be annexed to the university orator's place, and established likewise a professorship for the Arabic language. He obtained in 1637 of the King, out of certain confiscated lands, as much as was sufficient to endow three fellowships in the colleges of Exeter, Jesus and Pembroke, in that university, for educating as many natives of the islands of Jersey and Guernsey; and so much did he upon every occasion study to promote the interest of learning, that having built the Convocation house, at the end of the Divinity school, in the same university, he furnished the room over it, being that now called the Bodleian or University library, with that great number of choice and rare manuscripts mentioned above, which he had with great care and expence collected from all parts, not only of this kingdom, but the most distant foreign ones. He enriched his own college of St. John, with a variety of valuable manuscripts, and with 500l. in money, besides having erected at it several buildings; among which were three sides of the new quadrangle of it, at his own costs and charges; and by this example and by his endeavours, other colleges followed the like improvements, beyond all expectation, so as to gain the admiration of every one (y).

He settled the impropriation of Cuddesdon on the bishopric of Oxford, which has since become the bishop's residence of that see, and annexed commendams to several other bishoprics; whilst bishop of London, the church of St. Paul's was, by his singular care and management, entirely repaired and finished; a work which was then almost despaired of (z). He settled 200l. a year on an hospital at Reading, where he was born, and pro-rendering him odious; but on the contrary it proved, and was received by many, as the fairest testimony of his piety and integrity, that could be given.

(y) Battely's Somner, p. 139.

(z) He allowed 100l. per ann. out of his bishopric, towards the work of it.

ARCHBISHOPS.

WILLIAM JUXON—GILBERT SHELDON.

cured a new charter of incorporation for that town, and he left several legacies of the like nature.

Soon after his death, a narrative of his commitment, trial and execution, together with a large introductory discourse, was published by his inveterate enemy Prynne, in which there appears as little regard to truth and Christian charity, as there had been to justice and mercy in pronouncing and executing the bloody sentence on him; but the keen pen of this incensed writer has not answered his intent to wound the archbishop's reputation in the mind of any unprejudiced person.

Besides the large account of archbishop Laud, collected by Wood in his Athenæ Oxonienses, and Dr. Peter Heylin, who calls him our English Cyprian, published soon after the restoration, in a full and elaborate work, the History of his Life and Death; there was published some years after the History of his Troubles and Trial, written by himself during his imprisonment in the Tower, together with a preface by the editor, Mr. Henry Warton, and there was afterwards a supplement added to it.

The titles of the several books and treatises may be seen in Wood's Athenæ (a).

Archbishop Laud bore for his arms—Sable, on a chevron or, between 3 stars of 6 points, as many crosses patee fitchee gules (b).

78. WILLIAM JUXON, S. T. P. bishop of London, was next promoted to the see of Canterbury (c), on Sept. 20, 1660, after it had remained vacant upwards of 15 years by the abolition of episcopacy, and the tyranny of fanaticism, which overturned the government of both church and state.

He was born at Chichester, of a good family (d), and educated at Merchant Taylor's school, whence he was sent to Oxford, to St. John's college, of which he became a fellow, and about 1603 was a student of Gray's Inn, but afterwards taking orders, he was in 1609 instituted to the vicarage of St. Giles's near Oxford. Whilst fellow of St. John's college, he contracted an intimate friendship with Dr. Laud, then president, whom he afterwards succeeded in the year 1621, in the government of it. After which, he was promoted to the deanry of Worcester, being then one of the King's chaplains, and at the instance of Dr. Laud in 1632, was appointed clerk of the closet; in 1633 he was elected bishop of Hereford, and at the same time was made dean of the chapel royal, but before he was consecrated he was translated to the see of London, made a privy councillor, and in 1635 constituted Lord High Treasurer; all which honours and preferments he owed to the special recommendation of Dr. Laud, who well knew his worth and goodness, but the office of Treasurer, though he filled it with probity, yet it produced a great deal of envy from the courtiers, on account of his being a churchman, a circumstance then become unusual (no churchman having held it since K. Henry VII.'s time), and from its being a post the most beneficial of any in the kingdom, except the great seal. He resigned it in 1641, a little before the King's breach with the Parliament, and attended wholly to the duties of his see; after which he continued high in the King's esteem and confidence, attending him in his sufferings, and being present with him on the scaffold at his martyrdom; he retired afterwards and lived privately at Little Compton in Gloucestershire, until the restoration of K. Charles II, when he was translated as above-mentioned to this archbishopric, but he was then so infirm and aged that he could with difficulty acquit himself of the duties of his high station.

Having sat in this see not quite three years, he died at Lambeth palace on June 20, 1663, æt. 81, and his body was conveyed with great state and solemnity to Oxford, where it was interred in the chapel of St. John's college (e), at the upper end near the altar, in a grave walled with brick on the south side of that, then made to receive the remains of archbishop Laud, which in a few days after were laid in it. He built the great hall of Lambeth palace, at the expence of 16,000*l.* and before his death augmented the livings of 14 parishes in his diocese, by his will he gave 100*l.* to the parish of St. Giles in Oxford.

He left behind him the character of being a good man, and a person of primitive sanctity (f), of great moderation and patience of temper, and much beloved, in short of a character unexceptionable; but if his abilities and learning were considerable, we have no remains of them, and he may be numbered rather among the good, than the great archbishops of this see. There is nothing, except one sermon extant of his writings.

He bore for his arms—Or, a cross gules between 4 blackamoor's beads couped at the shoulders proper; which coat, impaled with the see of Canterbury, is in a window in Gray's Inn Hall.

79. GILBERT SHELDON, S. T. P. Bishop of London, succeeded next to this see (g), being elected to it on August 11, 1663. He was a

(a) Vol. i, col. 64.

(b) Archbishop Laud's nephew had an addition granted to his coat of arms, by the special command of K. Charles II. See Harleian Mss. No. 1172—114.

(c) See Biog. Brit. vol. iv, p. 2792. (d) He was son of Richard Juxon of that city. There is some account of this archbishop, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, col. 1145.

(e) His will is among the Harleian Mss. No. 3790—2. He left for William Juxon, knt. and bart. his executor, for whom as such, an act passed, anno 20 Charles II.

(f) Wood's Athenæ, vol. ii, p. 663.

(g) See Biographia Britannica, vol. v, p. 3666; vol. vi, p. 4742.

ARCHBISHOPS.

native of the parish of Stanton in the county of Stafford (b), and educated at Trinity college in Oxford, and thence removed to All Souls college, of which he was first elected fellow, and (about which time he took orders) afterwards warden, at which time he was canon of the church of Gloucester, and soon afterwards he was made one of the King's chaplains and appointed clerk of his closet; other preferments were designed for him, as the mastership of the Savoy, and the deanry of Westminster; but the unsettled times prevented him from coming into the possession of these dignities; his steady attachment to the royal cause was so well known, that he was not only sequestered from his preferments, but imprisoned at Oxford in 1648.

On his release from prison, he retired and lived privately till the approach of the restoration, when his wardenship being void by the death of the intruder, was reserved for him, but he never retook possession of it, but was appointed master of the Savoy, and clerk of the King's closet, and then dean of the chapel royal, and almost immediately upon the translation of bishop Juxon to the archbishopric of Canterbury, he was appointed his successor in the see of London, being consecrated on October 28, 1660; and again upon his death he was advanced to this metropolitain chair, as above-mentioned. In 1667 he was elected chancellor of the university of Oxford, but was never installed, nor ever was there after that time, not even so much as to see the noble theatre which he had caused to be erected there, nor even at Canterbury to be there personally introwned archbishop, or upon any other occasion whilst he was so.

By some, he is said to have presided over this church with much prudence, discretion and integrity, but by others he is severely blamed for being the promoter, in conjunction with the earl of Clarendon, of all the severities against the nonconformists. He certainly was a man of very high principles in church and state, which his usage in the civil wars and under the Common Wealth did not at all abate; he opposed all the measures proposed for a comprehension, and wrote frequent letters to the several bishops of his province to put the laws in execution against the nonconformists; the remembrance of the severities he had undergone, and the destruction they had brought upon the episcopal church, and the desire he had for its future preservation, might well however plead his excuse for this behaviour to them, to annihilate every means they might again have, and which he well knew if they had, they would certainly make use of to (b) He was the youngest son of Roger Sheldon of that parish, where he was born on July 19, 1598. See an account of him, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, col. 1162.

(i) His will is among the Harleian Mss. No. 6835, overthrow the church again. But although he was a man of these high principles, yet when he saw the advances made in favour of popery, he retired from all public affairs, and if these severities are allowed to have been the effects of prudence and self preservation, his character was unblemished. He was a great example for his charities and public benefactions for the encouragement of learning, from the time of his being elected bishop of London, to the time of his death; among these were the building of the Theatre in Oxford, which cost him more than 16,000*l.* besides the gift of 2000*l.* to buy lands worth 100*l.* per ann. to keep it in repair; the Library at Lambeth house, built at his own charge; 2000*l.* towards the structure of St. Paul's Cathedral; considerable sums of money to Trinity college in Oxford and Trinity college in Cambridge, besides great and large sums of money annually bestowed, some to public and some to private charities; his legacies at his death to charitable uses amounted to 1500*l.* which afterwards were paid, part to All Souls college, part to the church of Canterbury, part to Harbledown hospital, and part to indigent persons. The whole which he had expended in those purposes being not less than 66,000*l.* as appeared by his book of accounts. For some years before his death, he retired to Croydon, and there lived privately, concerning himself no more with state affairs, till his death, which happened there on Nov. 9, 1677, and he was buried by his own special direction (i), in the church of Croydon, near the tomb of archbishop Whitgift, where there is a sumptuous monument with his effigies, in his pontifical habit lying on it, the whole unequalled for the curious workmanship of it.

WILLIAM SANCROFT.

There is extant only one single sermon of his writing printed. Among the Harleian manuscripts, are two volumes of familiar Letters to and from him.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Argent, on a chevron gules, 3 mullets of the first; on a canton gules a rose or; as they are painted in one of the windows of Gray's Inn hall.

80. WILLIAM SANCROFT, S. T. P. dean of St. Paul's, was next advanced to the archiepiscopal throne on archbishop Sheldon's death, being consecrated on January 27, 1677, in the abbey church of St. Peter at Westminster (k).

He was born at Fressingfield in Suffolk, on Jan. 30, 1616, and educated in grammar learning at St. Edmondsbury, from whence he was sent to Emanuel college in Cambridge, where having taken his degrees in arts, he was in 1642 chosen fellow of it, from which he was ejected in 1649, among which is a grant of arms to him, No. 1172—153; and the trophies carried at his funeral, No. 1478—6.

(k) See Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 3582; vol. vi, p. 4369.

for

ARCHBISHOPS.

for refusing the engagement; upon which he went abroad, and was at Rome when K. Charles II.'s restoration took place; upon which he returned to England, and became chaplain to Dr. Cosins, bishop of Durham, and two years afterwards was, by mandamus, created at Cambridge S. T. P. In 1664 he was promoted to the deanry of York, but upon the death of Dr. Barwick, was removed to that of St. Paul's; soon after which he resigned the mastership of Emanuel college, and the rectory of Houghton, which, with a prebend in the church of Durham, had been conferred on him by bishop Cosins soon after his arriving in England; on his becoming dean of St. Paul's, he employed himself diligently in the repair of that cathedral, which had suffered greatly from the Puritans till the dreadful fire in 1666, when on the rebuilding of it he contributed 1400*l.* besides what he procured by his interest and solicitations towards it; besides which, he rebuilt the deanry and greatly improved the revenues of it.

In October, 1668, he was admitted archdeacon of Canterbury, which dignity he resigned in 1670; he was also prolocutor of the lower house of convocation, and in that station he was, when the King advanced him, not expecting any such thing, to this see of Canterbury, in 1677. He attended on King Charles II, on his death bed, and made a very weighty exhortation to him, in which he is said to have used a great deal of freedom. In 1686 he was named the first in K. James II.'s commission for ecclesiastical affairs, and two years afterwards joined with six of his brethren the bishops in the petition to the King, in which they set forth their reasons for not causing his declaration for liberty of conscience to be published in churches; for this petition, which was construed into a libel, they were committed to the Tower, and being tried for a misdemeanor on June 29, were acquitted, to the great joy of the nation; after which, accompanied by eight of his brethren the bishops, he waited on the King, who had desired the assistance of their counsels, and advised him, among many other things, to annul the ecclesiastical commission; to desist from the exercising of a dispensing power, and to call a free and regular parliament; and a few days afterwards, though very earnestly pressed by the King, yet he refused to sign a declaration of abhorrence of the Prince of Orange's invasion, and on K. James's withdrawing himself, he signed and concurred with the Lords spiritual and temporal in a declaration to the Prince for a free parliament, for the security of our laws; liberties, properties, and of the church of England in particular; but notwithstanding this, when the Prince came to St. James's, the archbishop neither went to wait on him, though he had once agreed to it, nor did he even send any message to him, and absented himself from the convention; and after K. William and Q. Mary were settled on the throne, he and seven other bishops refused to own the established government, from a conscientious regard to the allegiance they had sworn to K. James, nor would the incorrupt sincerity of the archbishop's heart suffer him to take the oath of that allegiance to another, as appointed by the act of parliament.

In consequence of this, he was suspended on August 1, 1689, and deprived the 1st of Feb. following. The archbishop continued at Lambeth till June 23, being resolved not to stir till he was ejected by law, and a few weeks afterwards retired to Fresingfield, his native place, where he spent the remainder of his life in privacy and retirement, and dying on Nov. 24, 1693, of an intermittent fever, æt. 77, was buried very privately, as he had ordered it, in the church-yard there; soon after which a tomb was erected over his grave, with an inscription, composed by himself; on the right side of it there is an account of his age and dying day, in Latin; on the left side the following inscription in English.

WILLIAM SANCROFT, born in this parish, afterwards, by the Providence of God, ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY; at last deprived of all, which he could not keep with a good conscience, he returned hither to end his life, and professeth here at the foot of his tomb, that naked as he came forth, so naked he must return; the Lord gave and the Lord has taken away (and as the Lord pleases so things come to pass) blessed be the name of the Lord.

He was a prelate of singular prudence and integrity, and he certainly gave the strongest instance possible of his sincerity, in sacrificing the biggest dignity, to what he thought truth and honesty. He presided over this church at a time which required a proof of those qualities, in which he excelled, and happy it was that the church had so good and wise a prelate at the head of it, in those most difficult times.

He was exceeding liberal in his charities, and was particularly bountiful to Emanuel college in Cambridge; he augmented the incomes of several small vicarages in the diocese of Canterbury, and discharged a debt of 67*l.* due from the hospital of St. Nicholas Harbledown; and the amount of what he gave in his life time to charitable uses, was near 18,000*l.* for he did not waste his large revenues profusely in luxury and extravagance, but decently bestowed them in hospitality and deeds of charity, and he was remarkable for conferring his preferments with great propriety and discretion.

Stow says, the archbishop was a good benefactor to Sion college, after the fire of London.

Though of considerable abilities and uncommon learning, he published but little; the titles of the few things he wrote are enumerated in

Wood's

ARCHBISHOPS.

JOHN TILLOTSON.

Wood's Athenæ (l); besides which, the sermon which he preached before the university of Cambridge, for his bachelor's degree, is still extant; and among the Harleian manuscripts there are several letters to and from him, and other letters and miscellaneous matters relating to him (m).

The archbishop bore for his arms—Argent, on a chevron gules, 3 doves of the field, between 3 crosses formee of the 2d.

SI. JOHN TILLOTSON, S. T. P. dean of St. Paul's, was, on the archbishopric being deemed void by the ejection of archbishop Sancroft, next put into the possession of it. He had been dean of the church of Canterbury, which he quitted on being promoted to the deanry of St. Paul's, till which, an account of him has already been given, among the deans of Canterbury.

When Dr. Tillotson was made dean of St. Paul's, the King communicated to him his intention of advancing him to the metropolitanical see, in case archbishop Sancroft should incur the sentence of deprivation, which it was strongly suspected he would; that sentence being at length passed, the dean, after some consideration, accepted the offer, and was nominated archbishop and consecrated on May 31, 1691; at which time many of the nobility attended to countenance his promotion, and shew their esteem for his character. But this station he did not enjoy long, for on Nov. 18, 1694, he was seized, whilst in the chapel at Whitehall, with a sudden illness, which turned to a dead palsy, and on the 23d he died; his speech was much affected by the violence of this attack, but he was heard to say, he had no burthen on his conscience.

His death was universally regretted, for whilst his talents commanded respect, his humility, benevolence, charity and moderation secured esteem. The King is said to have deplored his loss in this expressive tribute to his memory; I never knew an honest man, and I never had a better friend. The works of archbishop Tillotson are too well known to require a detail; his sermons interest the heart and convince the understanding; ease and perspicuity, good sense and sincere piety, are observed by that elegant writer Dr. Blair, to be their distinguishing character; some instances indeed occur of incorrect expressions and uninteresting style; but when his many excellencies are considered, he must always maintain the reputation of being one of the best writers and ablest divines, that this nation can boast of; and of such influence was his example, that he is said to have taught more ministers to preach well, and more people to live well, than almost any other since the primitive times; and that he converted more dissenters to the established church, than any other divine of his time.

The ardour of his opposition to Popery, it must be allowed, betrayed him into some very exceptionable assertions, which were exposed by his enemies with unsparing rancour. His discourse too on the Eternity of Hell Torments, occasioned no small clamour against him, and has been attacked by cavillers, both at home and abroad. His opinions on this subject coincide with those of Epistopius, and some part of the discourse appears almost a literal translation from that celebrated Arminian. He was also charged with Socinianism, on which he published his sermons on the Divinity of Christ, to vindicate himself from that charge; but his spirits are said to have been greatly depressed by the petulance and the slander of his adversaries, though the wrongs which he experienced never prompted him to a revenge.

He had married in February 1664, Elizabeth, the only daughter of Dr. Peter French, by Rolinda, the youngest sister of Oliver Cromwell; by her he had two daughters, Mary and Elizabeth, both of whom died before him; the former of them was married to James Chadwick, esq. Commissioner of the Customs, the latter died young (n). The archbishop's widow experienced the bounty of K. William, according to his promise, on his promotion to the primacy, in case he should die before her; I promise to take care of her. The archbishop foresaw the great expence of taking possession of this see, which added to his generosity, so reduced his finances, that his debts could not have been paid, if the King had not forgiven his first fruits. He left nothing to his widow, but the copy of his posthumous sermons, which was afterwards sold for 2500 guineas. The annuity granted at first by the King to her, was 400l. which on account of some unforeseen losses she had sustained, was augmented with 200l. more, both which were continued till her death in January 1702; and so solicitous was the King for the regular payment of this pension, without any deduction, that he always called for the money quarterly, and sent it to her himself (o).

The archbishop was buried in the church of St. Laurence Jury, London; on the left side of the altar, there is a neat marble monument erected to his memory with this inscription.

(l) Vol. ii, col. 1164.

(m) He left behind him a vast multitude of papers and collections in manuscript, which, upon his decease, came into his nephew's hands; after whose death they were purchased by bishop Tanner, who gave them, with the rest of his manuscripts, to the Bodleian library.

(n) See Noble's Memoirs, vol. ii, p. 277.

(o) See Birch's and Le Neve's Life of the Archbishop; and Todd's Lives of the Deans of Canterbury.

ARCHBISHOPS.

P. M.

Reverendissimi et sanctissimi præfulis

JOHANNIS TILLOTSON

Archiepiscopi Cantuariensis

Concionatoris olim hæc in Ecclesiâ per annos xxx celeberrimi

Qui obiit x^o Kal. Dec. MDCLXXXIV.

Ætatis suæ LXIII

Hoc posuit ELIZABETHA

Conjux illius mæstissima.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Azure, a bend cotized, between 2 garbs or.

82. THOMAS TENISON, S. T. P. bishop of Lincoln, was next promoted to this archbishopric (p), and was intbronized in person, at Canterbury, on May 16, 1695.

He was the son of the Rev. John Tenison, B. D. rector of Mundesly in Norwich, and was born at Cottenham in Cambridgeshire, on Sept. 29, 1636. He was first educated at the free-school of that city, whence he was sent to Cambridge, and admitted a scholar at Corpus Christi, alias Bennet college. In 1657 he took the degree of A. B. in 1661 of A. M. and the next year was admitted fellow; in 1665 he at first studied physic, but afterwards took orders, and was one of the university preachers, and curate of St. Andrew the Great in Cambridge. In 1667 he proceeded B. D. became rector of Holywell and Nedingworth in Huntingdonsire, and was made chaplain to the Earl of Manchester. In 1674 he was promoted to be upper minister of St. Peter's of Mancroft in Norwich, and in 1680 took his degree of S. T. P. and was presented to the vicarage of St. Martin's in the Fields, by King Charles II, being then one of the King's chaplains. Soon after the revolution, he was made archdeacon of London, and in 1692 was consecrated bishop of Lincoln, and two years afterwards was promoted to this metropolitcal see of Canterbury, in which he sat more than 20 years, and died at Lambeth palace, on Dec. 14, 1715, and was buried in the chancel of Lambeth church.

Archbishop Tenison's charities were very extensive, exclusive of his public foundations, and the uncommon number of legacies and benefactions at his death, for he yearly expended large sums in alms, for the relief of the poor; he founded, whilst vicar of St. Martin's in 1685, a free school in that parish, now called Castle-street school, and a spacious library over it, with conve-

(p) See Biog. Brit. vol. vi, p. 3923.

(q) Out of the profits of these benefactions, the librarian has an allowance of 10l. per annum; the school-master, besides a dwelling-house, has a salary of 30l. per annum; and the usher the same salary without an apartment; for which they teach thirty boys, the sons of the inhabitants of St. Martin's parish. The library consists of upwards of 4000 volumes.

(r) On archbishop Tenison's death, his successor made nient lodgings contiguous for the librarian; and in 1697, being then archbishop, he gave 1000l. towards a fund for the support of it; and some time after, by the consent of Dr. Patrick, bishop of Ely, another sum of 500l. which had been left them jointly in trust, to dispose of in charitable uses; which two sums, together with two leasehold messuages, he vested in trustees for the support of his school and library (q). Besides this, the archbishop founded in 1704, a charity school for the education of 12 poor girls, in Back-street in Lambeth, who are cloathed and taught; these are since increased to 20, and will be still more so, according to the improvement of the estate; and another at Croydon; he built the apartments of brick, at Lambeth palace, between the entrance and the great hall there, and erected the archiepiscopal throne in the cathedral at Canterbury, at the expence of 244l. and upwards; he gave upwards of 256l. in books, to the library of St. Paul's cathedral; 70 guineas to the poor Palatines in 1709; 30l. towards beautifying the church of Cranbrooke; 46l. to Lambeth church for a velvet pall; 3000l. to Bennet college, Cambridge; 50l. to advance printing in the university; 1000l. to the society for the propagation of the Gospel; 1000l. to the governors of Q. Anne's bounty, for augmenting small livings in Kent; 500l. for the relief of clergymen's widows and children; 50 guineas for the repairs of Bromley college, and the like sum to the widows of it; 100l. to the French protestant refugees; he gave a piece of ground for a burying place to the parish of Lambeth; 100l. to archbishop Whitgift's hospital at Croydon, with 400l. to the school founded there in his life time; 10l. each to 10 poor rectors or vicars in the diocese of Canterbury; 40l. each to the poor of Canterbury, Lambeth and Croydon; 30l. each to the parishes of St. Martin's in the Fields and St. James's, Westminster; 10l. each to five parishes in Norfolk, Cambridgeshire and Huntingdonsire, and 50l. to Dr. Lilly Butler, minister of Aldermanbury, who had several children (r).

THOMAS TENISON.

As archbishop Tenison lived in times of the severest trial, so his character has been variously represented; but he is by most allowed to have been a prelate, who in general, through the whole of his life, practised that integrity and resolution he at first set out with; nor was he influenced by the changes of the times he lived great demands for dilapidations, both at Lambeth and Croydon; and on a survey they were valued at 3500l. on which great disputes ensued, which were carried to a great length by archdeacon Tenison, on the part of the deceased archbishop's executors, and he printed several very scurrilous letters to archbishop Wake and others, on this business; at last, it was decided in November, 1716, by the chief justice and the dean of the arches, that the late archbishop's executors should pay 2800l. for dilapidations.

in,

ARCHBISHOPS.

WILLIAM WAKE—JOHN POTTER.

in, to act contrary to the pure and peaceable spirit of the Gospel. He adorned his high station with an exemplary piety and a munificent charity; and he was endowed with such a happiness of temper, as enabled him to steer the church with steadiness through those violent storms of party, the rage of which too much affected the too mild and tender spirit of his predecessor. His character as a writer, is seen in his performances of that kind, which set his abilities far enough above contempt; yet his style is undoubtedly both heavy and inelegant (s).

In 1670, the archbishop gave a public specimen of his learning and abilities, by publishing, in octavo, the creed of Mr. Hobbs, examined in a feigned conference between him and a student in divinity; in 1678 he published a discourse on idolatry, and in K. James II.'s reign, when the controversy with the Papists was professedly agitated, he published eight or nine pamphlets; in 1679 he put out in octavo, Baconiana, or certain genuine remains of Sir Francis Bacon, &c. in 1681, being the year after he became vicar of St. Martin's, he published a sermon upon the discretion of giving alms, which was attacked by Poulton the Jesuit; and in 1688 being one of the ecclesiastical commissioners appointed to prepare matters to be laid before the convocation, he published a discourse concerning the ecclesiastical commission (t). He bore for his arms—Gules, a bend azure, engrailed and voided argent, between 3 lions heads pierced by fleurs-de-lis.

The archbishop married the daughter of Dr. Love, master of Bennet college in Cambridge, who died about a year before him.

83. WILLIAM WAKE, S. T. P. bishop of Lincoln, was the next archbishop, being promoted to it in 1715, on the death of archbishop Tenison (u). He was descended of a genteel family, being the son of William Wake, esq. a gentleman of considerable fortune at Blandford, in the county of Dorset; at the age of fifteen he was admitted a student of Christ church in Oxford, and in 1682, went chaplain to the Lord Viscount Preston to the court of France, and after his return home, was chosen preacher to the Society of Gray's Inn. After the revolution, he was appointed deputy clerk of the closet, and one of the King's chaplains. In 1689 he was created S. T. P. made canon and afterwards dean of Christ church in Oxford, and in 1693 was inducted to the rectory of St. James's, Westminster; his preferments were afterwards as rapid, for he was in 1701 promoted to the deanry of Exeter, in 1705 consecrated bishop of Lincoln, from whence, on the decease of archbishop Tenison, he was translated by that prelate's recommendation, to this archbishopric, in which he continued upwards of 10 years. He died at his palace at Lambeth, on January 24, 1737, and was interred in a private manner in a vault in Croydon church.

As a writer, archbishop Wake's publications best speak his character; his letters written by him to several divines of the Sorbonne, on effecting an union between the two churches of England and France, were so full of energy and argument as to excite the admiration even of Pope Clement XI, who declared, that it was a pity that the writer of such profound letters, was not a member of their church (v). As a man, he was of extensive liberality and charity, which was reached out to the unfortunate and distressed object, as well as the industrious and necessitous poor. He expended near 11,000l. in repairing the two palaces of Lambeth and Croydon, and 700l. in repairing the vicarage house of the latter. By his last will he gave his library of printed books and manuscripts, together with a curious collection of coins, to Christ church college in Oxford, valued at 10,000l. besides which he died very rich, leaving his youngest surviving daughter, married to Dr. Lynch, dean of Canterbury, his residuary legatee.

He bore for his arms—Or, a trefoil slipt sable, between 2 bars gules, in chief 3 torteauxes.

The archbishop married Etheldred, daughter and coheir of Sir William Howell, knight, who died in 1731; by her he had issue eight daughters, viz. 1, Amye, married to Henry Seymer, esq; 2, Etheldred, to Thomas Bennet, esq; 3, Hester, married first to Richard Broadrep, esq; secondly to Thomas Strode, esq; 4, Dorothy, to James Pennyman, esq; 5, Magdalen, to William Churchbill, esq; 6, Elizabeth died unmarried; 7, Mary, married to John Lynch, dean of Canterbury; and 8, Catherine, who died an infant.

84. JOHN POTTER, S. T. P. bishop of Oxford, was successor to archbishop Wake in this archiepiscopal see, being nominated to it directly after his death (w). He was the son of Mr. Thomas

(s) Among the Harleian Mss. are some notes of archbishop Tenison's, touching the lord Verulam, No. 6867—25.

(t) See Biog. Brit. vol. xiv.

(u) See Biog. Brit. vol. vii, p. 4083.

(v) See a short account of archbishop Wake, and a list of some of his early writings, in Wood's Ath. vol. ii, col. 1059. In the 13th of Geo. I, anno 1727, an act passed, for vesting several sums of money in the archbishop of Canterbury and the bishop of Ely, given for the augmentation of the maintenance of poor vicars, within the dioceses of Canterbury and Ely; and to empower them to lay out the same in the purchase of lands, to be vested in other trustees for the same purposes.

(w) See Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 3417. Wood's Ath. vol. ii, col. 941. The archbishop had issue two sons; John, dean of Canterbury; and Thomas Potter, esq; whom he made his heir; and four daughters, who married, the eldest to the Rev. Dr. Sayer, archdeacon of Durham, &c. the second to Dr. Tanner, prebendary of Canterbury, rector of Hadleigh in Suffolk, &c. the third to Dr. Miller, dean of Exeter; and the fourth to Dr. Tenison, prebendary of Canterbury.

Potter,

ARCHBISHOPS.

Potter, of Wakefield in Yorkshire, where he was born about the year 1674, and being put to school at the same place, he made an uncommon progress in a short time in the Greek and Latin languages; at the early age of 14 he was sent to University college, Oxford, where he took the degree of A. B. in 1694 he was chosen a fellow of Lincoln college, and commenced A. M. in 1704 B. D. and was appointed chaplain to archbishop Tenison, and went and resided at Lambeth. In 1706 he proceeded S. T. P. and soon after was appointed one of the Queen's chaplains; the year after which he was promoted to the chair of the regius professor of divinity, and to a canonry of Christ church in Oxford. In 1715 he was consecrated bishop of Oxford, and in Jan. 1737, on the death of archbishop Wake, was translated to this archbishopric, which he continued to fill during the space of ten years with great reputation, wholly attentive to the duties of his ecclesiastical function, without engaging too busily in the secular affairs incident to his high office. Thus employed, he fell into a lingering disorder which put an end to his life in the year 1747. He left behind him the character of a prelate of distinguished piety and learning, strictly orthodox in respect to the established doctrines of the church of England, and a zealous and steady guardian of it against all the attempts that were made to subvert and undermine it, during his presiding over this see. He was remarkably studious of regularity, order, and oeconomy; at the same time he was not unmindful of supporting the metropolitanical dignity by a suitable carriage and deportment, which gave room to some to censure it as proceeding from a spirit of pride and haughtiness, tinged with too great severity of manners (*).

Archbishop Potter was a learned and voluminous writer; in 1693, at the age of 19, he published Variantes Lectiones & novæ ad Plutarchi Librum de audiendis Poetis & ad Basilii magni orationem ad Juvenes, quomodo cum fructu legere possunt Græcorum Libros, 8vo. In 1697 he printed his edition of Lycophron, folio, reprinted in 1702; in the same year 1697, he published likewise the first volume of his Antiquities of Greece, which was followed by the second volume; the year after several additions being made by him in the subsequent editions of this useful and learned book, of which the seventh edition was published in 1751. These works established his fame in the republic of letters, both at home and abroad, and engaged him in a correspondence with Greivius and other learned foreigners. In 1707 he published a Discourse on Church Government; in 1715, being the same year in which he became bishop of Ox- ford, he published an edition of the works of Clemens Alexandrinus, in two folio volumes. His Theological Works, containing his Sermons, Charges, Discourse on Church Government, and Divinity Lectures, were published at Oxford in 1753, in 3 vol. 8vo.

(*) See more of him and the family above, among the deans of the church of Canterbury, in the account of his

THOMAS HERRING.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Sable, a fess between 3 cinquefoils argent.

85. THOMAS HERRING, S. T. P. bishop of Bangor, was next promoted to this see in 1747(j). He was the son of the Rev. John Herring, rector of Walsoken, in the county of Norfolk, where he was born in 1693; he was first educated at the school of Wisbech, in the Isle of Ely, and in 1710 was admitted at Jesus College in Cambridge, where he took the degree of A. B. in 1716; the year after which he was chosen fellow of Bennet college, and commenced A. M. and was successively minister of Great Shelford, Stow cum Qui, and Trinity, in Cambridge. In 1722 he was made chaplain to Dr. Fleetwood, bishop of Ely, rector of Rettington in Essex, and of Barley in Hertfordshire. In 1724 he took the degree of B. D. in 1726 was made preacher of Lincoln's inn, and one of the King's chaplains. In 1728 he commenced S. T. P. at Cambridge, and in 1731 was inducted to the rectory of Blechinkly in Surry, and was promoted to the deanry of Rochester. In 1737 he was consecrated bishop of Bangor, with which preferment he kept his deanry in commendam. In 1743 he was made archbishop of York, and in 1747 was translated to the archbishopric of Canterbury; in these high stations he treated his friends with the same ease and courtesy as before; for he knew how to condescend without detracting from the reverence due to his character; to which may be added, that his love for his country in the time of real danger, was equal to his reverence for religion, it was great and undisssembled, and that he had great candour and moderation to those who differed from him either in political or religious sentiments. He died at Croydon, where he generally resided, and was buried in the vault of Croydon church, the poor of that parish only attending his funeral, having absolutely forbid any monument to be erected for him.

Dr. Fortin, in his Life of Erasmus, having quoted the excellent character which that author gives of archbishop Warham, takes occasion from thence to give the following just one of archbishop Herring, saying, that besides the good qualities in which he resembled Warham; he had piety without superstition, and moderation without meaness; an open and liberal way of thinking, a constant attachment to the cause of sober and rational liberty, both civil and re-son, Dr. John Potter, dean of it; and his life, in Biog. Brit. vol. x. (j) See Biog. Brit. vol. vii, app. p. 39.

Higous.

ARCHBISHOPS.

ligious. Thus he lived and died, and few great men passed through this malevolent world better beloved and less censured than he.

By his will he gave 1000*l.* to the society for the relief of the widows and sons of poor clergymen, and 1000*l.* to the master and fellows, for the rebuilding of Corpus Christi college in Cambridge. He improved the palace of Bishopsthorpe, and being exceedingly partial to Croydon palace, which he found in a ruinous state, he laid out much cost in the repairs of it, and rendering it commodious, making it afterwards his constant summer's residence; and being exceedingly fond of botany, formed a garden there, which became the chief and constant object of his vacant amusement; here and at the palace and gardens at Lambeth, he expended upwards of 6000*l.*

His sermons, which are printed, contain that true religion which he felt and practised himself.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Azure, semee of cross crosslets, 6 barrings, 3, 2 and 1.

86. MATTHEW HUTTON, S. T. P. archbishop of York, was next advanced to this archbishopric in 1757. He was a direct descendant lineally from Dr. Matthew Hutton, archbishop of York in Queen Elizabeth's reign. He was born at Marke, in the county of York, on Jan. 5, 1693, and was educated at Rippon free school, in that county, and in 1710 was admitted of Jesus college in Cambridge; he took the degree of A. B. in Jan. 1713, and of A. M. in 1716, and was elected fellow of Christ's college, in that university, in 1717; being chaplain to the Duke of Somerset, he was presented by him, in 1726, to the rectory of Trowbridge in Wiltshire, which vacated his fellowship; in 1728 he was created S. T. P. at the royal commencement, and in 1729 was presented by the Duke to the valuable rectory of Spofforth in Yorkshire; in 1730 he was appointed one of the King's chaplains, and in 1735 prebendary of Langtoft in the church of York; he attended K. George II. to Hanover in 1736, the year after which he was appointed canon of Windsor, which he resigned about two years afterwards for a prebend of Westminster; upon the promotion of Dr. Herring to the archbishopric of York, he was nominated to the see of Bangor, and was consecrated on Nov. 13, 1743; and on that prelate's promotion to the archbishopric of Canterbury, he succeeded him in that of York, being confirmed on Dec. 10, 1747, and the next year was appointed Lord High Almoner; on the death of archbishop Herring in 1757, he succeeded him in the archbishopric, and was confirmed on April 29, that year. He died at his house in Duke-street, Westminster, not having ever resided at his palace of Lambeth, on March 19, 1758, from

(z) In 1720 he took his degree of M. D. at Leyden, where an inflammation in his bowels, caused by too long an abstinence from food during a tedious attendance in the House of Lords. He was buried in a vault in the chancel of Lambeth church, on March 27.

MATTHEW HUTTON—THOMAS SECKER.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Gules, on a fess or, a fleur de lis, between 3 cushions ermine, tasselled of the 2d.

87. THOMAS SECKER, L. L. D. succeeded on the death of archbishop Hutton to this see in the same year. He was a native of Sibthorp, a small village in the county of Nottingham, in which he was born in the year 1693; his father, who was a protestant dissenter, residing there on a small paternal fortune; he received his education at several private schools, at which, before the age of 19, he had made a considerable progress in different learned languages, and being destined by his father for the ministerial office among the dissenters, his studies during the last years of his education, were chiefly turned towards divinity, in which, by the time he was twenty-three, he had made quick advances, but yet doubts arose in his mind, as he pursued his studies, inasmuch that he could not bring himself to a determination what communion he should embrace; he resolved to pursue some profession, in which he should not be obliged to declare publicly, opinions which he had not yet thoroughly settled in his own mind.

About the end of the year 1716, therefore, he applied himself to the study of physic in London, during that and the following winter (z); after which he went to Paris, where he attended different lectures, especially a course of them in midwifery, and during his continuance in that city, became acquainted with Albinus, afterwards professor at Leyden, father Montfaucon, and several other persons of note; here likewise was his first acquaintance with Mr. Martin Benson, afterwards bishop of Gloucester.

From the time of his leaving England, he had kept up a constant correspondence with Mr. Butler, afterwards bishop of Durham, who recommended him to Mr. Talbot, who promised to engage his father the bishop of Durham, to provide for him in case he chose to take orders in the church of England; which proposal Mr. Butler communicated to him on or about the beginning of May 1720.

Mr. Secker had not at this time any thoughts of quitting the profession of physic, but having seriously deliberated in his own mind on Mr. Butler's unexpected proposal, and his former doubts having lessened, he resolved to embrace the offer, and for this purpose he quitted France about the beginning of August 1720. Upon his arrival in England, he was introduced to he published his Thesis De Medicina Statica, the only medical book he ever printed.

Mr.

ARCHBISHOPS.

THOMAS SECKER.

Mr. Talbot, with whom his acquaintance was, however, but of short duration, for he died in the Dec. following, at the early age of 29. This event seemed to put an end at once to all his hopes, but as he had taken his resolution, he was determined to persevere, especially as he found, that Mr. Talbot had, on his death-bed, recommended him to his father's notice.

It was now judged necessary by him, that he should have a degree at Oxford, and he found that if he previously took the degree of doctor of physic at Leyden, it would facilitate his taking the other; upon which he went to that university, and there took his degrees in March 1721, and on the 1st of April following, having returned to England, he entered himself a gentleman commoner of Exeter college in Oxford; about a year after which he obtained the degree of A. B. in that university, in consequence of the chancellor's commendatory letter to the convocation, and in Dec. 1722, he was ordained deacon, and soon afterwards priest, by bishop Talbot in St. James's church, where he preached his first sermon on March 28, 1723; the bishop then appointed him one of his domestic chaplains, and before the end of the year, promoted him to the valuable rectory of Houghton le Spring.

In the course of those frequent visits of gratitude which Mr. Secker paid to Mrs. Talbot, the widow of his deceased friend, by whom she had a daughter, born five months after his death; he became acquainted with the sister of his friend Mr. Benson, who had been for some time Mrs. Talbot's inseparable companion, and his preferment now putting it in his power to settle in the world, he made her proposals of marriage, which being accepted, they were married by bishop Talbot, on October 28, 1725; and at the earnest desire of both, Mrs. Talbot consented to live with them, and the two families from that time became one.

The residence at Houghton being exceedingly damp, he exchanged it for the more healthy one of Ryton, to the rectory of which, and a prebend of the church of Durham, he was instituted in 1727; in consequence of which exchange, he divided his residence between those two preferments. In 1732 he was appointed one of the King's chaplains, and not long afterwards, upon a proposal made by bishop Gibson, that his son-in-law, Dr. Tyrwhit, should resign the rectory of St. James's, and should be made residentiary of St. Paul's, and that Mr. Secker should succeed him in that rectory; the arrangement was so acceptable to those in power, that he was instituted rector in 1733, and in the beginning of July he went to Oxford, and took his degree of LL. D. not being of sufficient standing for that of divinity; on this occasion it was, that he preached his celebrated act sermon, on the advantages and duties of an academical education; it was printed at the desire of the heads of houses, and quickly passed through several editions.

In December 1734, he received notice by letter, from bishop Gibson, that the King had fixed on him to be bishop of Bristol, and in the following month he was consecrated in Lambeth chapel, and held with the bishopric, the prebend of Durham and the rectory of St. James's, in commendam, for the use of the parishioners of which, he drew up those lectures on the Church Catechism, which have been since published, and not only read there once every week on the usual days, but every Sunday evening, either at the church, or one of the chapels belonging to it, where they were received with universal approbation, and the sermons which he at that time composed, rendered him one of the most popular preachers of his time.

In 1737, the bishopric of Oxford being vacant, was offered to Dr. Secker, who at first declined it, but he was at length prevailed on to accept of it, and was confirmed bishop of that see in May that year. In 1750 the deanry of St. Paul's becoming vacant, the Lord Chancellor Hardwick immediately wrote to Hanover, where the King then was, recommending the bishop of Oxford for that preferment, which he was to take in exchange for the rectory of St. James's and the prebend of Durham; to which the King consenting, he was installed in December 1750. About two years before this exchange took place, the bishop's wife died, and he had not been long in possession of his dignity, before he experienced the loss of three friends, the bishops Butler, Benson and Berkeley, with each of whom he had been most intimate, and who were all cut off within the space of one year.

During the whole time of his being dean of St. Paul's, he attended his duty and resided there at the deanry constantly in winter, and in the summer months at his episcopal house at Culsteden in Oxfordshire, where he regularly preached in his parish church every Sunday morning, and read a lecture on the catechism in the evening. In this see of Oxford he continued upwards of 20 years; at length, however, he was removed from this station, being promoted in 1758, on the death of archbishop Hutton, to the metropolitan see of Canterbury.

Whilst in this patriarchal chair, he patronized with zeal and generosity, every design and institution that tended to advance morality and religion; he contributed largely to the maintenance of schools for the poor, and to the repairing of parsonage houses and places of worship. To the society for promoting Christian Knowledge, he was a liberal benefactor, and to the society for propagating the Gospel in foreign parts, of which he was president, he paid much attention; and when a pamphlet was published by Dr. Maybew, of Boston in New England, which charged the society with a misapplication of the money they had collected, the archbishop thought himself called upon to refute it, and accordingly published an answer to it.

ARCHBISHOPS.

THOMAS SECKER.

The conduct which the archbishop observed towards the several designs and denominations of sects in this kingdom, was such as plainly discovered his way of thinking towards all protestant persuasions, to whom he demeaned himself with great mildness and moderation, and he appeared to be at all times sincerely desirous of cultivating a good understanding with the dissenters, whom he looked upon as a conscientious and valuable set of men, with the most eminent of whom, he maintained an intercourse of friendship, and was highly revered and esteemed by them, and to such as needed help, he shewed equal kindness and liberality, as to those of the established church.

He resided usually at Lambeth, where he was seized on July 30, 1768, with his last illness, and next evening in the raising of him from his couch, his thigh bone broke, (which appeared to have been carious and the internal part destroyed for some time before); this put him in great agonies of pain, insomuch, that a fever soon ensued, and he became lethargic, and continued so till the next evening, when he expired with much calmness, in the 75th year of his age, and except in some very slight defects of memory, he retained his faculties in their full vigour till within a few days of his death.

Archbishop Secker was buried, according to his own directions, in a covered passage leading from a private door of the palace, to the north door of Lambeth church, and he forbade any monument or epitaph to be placed over him. By his will he appointed the Rev. Dr. Burton, canon of Christ church, and Mrs. Catherine Talbot, above-mentioned, his executors, and left 13,000*l.* in the three per cent. annuities, to Dr. Porteus and Dr. Stinton, his chaplains, in trust, to pay the interest of it to Mrs. Talbot and her daughter, during their joint lives, or the life of the survivor, and after both their deaths, 11,000*l.* and upwards, of the above sum, to be transferred to the following charitable uses, viz. To the society for the Propagation of the Gospel, 1000*l.* for the general uses of it; to the same society for the establishment of bishops in America, 1000*l.*—to the society for promoting Christian Knowledge, 500*l.*—to the Irish Protestant working schools, 500*l.*—to the corporation of the sons of the clergy, 500*l.*—to Bromley college, 500*l.*—to the archbishop's hospitals at Croydon, St. John's in Canterbury, and St. Nicholas, Harbledown, 500*l.* to each; to the society of the stewards of the corporation of the sons of the clergy, 200*l.*; to St. George's and the London hospital, and the Lying-in-hospital in Brownlow street, 500*l.* each; to the Asylum, in the parish of Lambeth, 400*l.*; to the Magdalen hospital, the Lock hospital, the Small Pox hospital, and the Innoculation hospital, 300*l.* each; to the incurables of Luke's hospital, 500*l.* and towards repairing or rebuilding the houses belonging to poor livings in the diocese of Canterbury, 2000*l.* (a)

Besides these benefactions, he left 1000*l.* to be distributed among his servants; 200*l.* to such indigent persons, as he had assisted in his life time; 5000*l.* to the two daughters of his nephew Mr. Frost; 500*l.* to the widow of his nephew the Rev. Dr. George Secker; after the payment of these and some other smaller legacies, he left his real and the residue of his personal estate to his nephew Mr. Thomas Frost, of Nottingham,

He had expended in his life time upwards of 300*l.* in arranging and improving the archbishop's library at Lambeth, then under the care of Dr. Ducarel, the archbishop's librarian; and having observed with concern, that the library of printed books had received no addition since the time of archbishop Tenison, he made it his care to collect books in all languages, from most parts of Europe, at a very great expence, with a view of supplying that chasm, which he accordingly did, by leaving at his death, out of his private library, all such books as were not in the archiepiscopal one before, which comprehended much the largest and most valuable part of his own collection. He bequeathed likewise to the manuscript library, a variety of learned and curious pieces, written by himself, to be preserved there under the sole care of the archbishop for the time being, and to be inspected by no one without the archbishop's express permission.

Archbishop Secker was in his person, tall and comely, in the early part of his life slender and rather consumptive, but as he advanced in years, his constitution gained strength, and his size increased, yet never to that over degree of corpulency that was disproportionate or troublesome; his countenance was florid and manly, nor was it easily varied, so as to betray the sentiments of his mind; although he might be said to receive his company with politeness, yet there was a shyness in his behaviour, which he had caught from the dissenters in his early part of life, nor

(a) Miss Talbot, the daughter, died in 1779; and Mrs. Talbot, her mother, in 1784; upon which, the several benefactions above-mentioned, were paid to the respective charities.

ARCHBISHOPS.

was he in general affable and courteous; there was such a reserve and coldness in his manner, and such an affected quaintness in the tone of his voice that threw a damp on conversation, and prevented strangers from being at ease before him, and made them doubt his sincerity towards them. It was remarkable, that he always chose rather to talk of things, than persons, that he was very sparing of giving characters, and very candid when he did.

The archbishop bore for his arms—Gules, a bend engrailed between 2 bulls heads erased or.

Not long after the archbishop's decease, his executors, in pursuance of an order left under his own hand, published a letter to the Hon. Horace Walpole, written in 1750, concerning Bishops in America, in which his own sentiments on that subject are fully explained, and an answer given to the principal objections against such a proposal.

The archbishop left his lectures on the catechism, and his manuscript sermons, to be revised and published by his two chaplains Dr. Stinton and Dr. Porteus, which they accordingly were, the former in two volumes, the latter in seven, with some account of his life before them; they published likewise in one volume, the archbishop's eight charges delivered to the clergy of the dioceses of Oxford and Canterbury, to which are added instructions to candidates for orders, and a Latin speech intended to have been spoken at the opening of the convocation in 1761.

The nine sermons on the War and Rebellion, published in 1758, by the author himself, when bishop of Oxford, which were out of print and much sought after, have been also reprinted with the addition of the answer to Dr. Mayhew, and the letter to Mr. Walpole; which volume, together with the fourteen occasional sermons printed by the archbishop in 1766, and the publications enumerated above, complete his works in twelve volumes octavo.

88. FREDERICK CORNWALLIS, S. T. P. was next promoted to this see, in 1768. He was the seventh son of Charles the fourth Lord Cornwallis, and was born on Feb. 22, 1713, being a twin brother with the late Lieut. General Edward Cornwallis. He was educated at Christ college in Cambridge, where he took the degrees of A. M. and S. T. P. tanquam nobilis, and was chosen a fellow of that society; in 1740 he was presented by his brother to the rectory of Chelmondeston in Suffolk, with which he held that of Tittesball St. Mary in Norfolk; after which he was made one of the King's chaplains in ordinary, and pro-

(b) It is the custom for the archbishop, when resident at moted to a canonry of Windsor; on Feb. 8, 1750, he was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Coventry; and on Nov. 28, 1766, made dean of St. Paul's.

FREDERICK CORNWALLIS—JOHN MOORE.

On the death of archbishop Secker on August 13, 1758, he was promoted to the archbishopric of Canterbury, in the chair of which he sat not quite five years, when dying on March 19, 1783, at his palace at Lambeth, after a few days illness; he was buried in St. Mary's church, adjoining to it, his funeral being attended by Dr. Beilby Porteus, bishop of Chester, as chief mourner, and Dr. Vyse, rector of Lambeth, and Dr. Lort, his chaplains.

Although archbishop Cornwallis was not deeply learned, yet he had a competent share of learning, and what is better, a purity and benevolence of heart, which, joined to his affability and courtesy of manners, gained him the respect and love of every one.

At his first residence at Lambeth, he abolished that disagreeable distinction of his chaplains dining at a separate table, for however the parade and state of the archbishop's household, and as well as the manners of former times might have made it consistent for them to sit at table with his upper domestics, yet the change of manners and the attention of the times, had long made it odious and complained of by every one; and it remained for an archbishop of Dr. Cornwallis's noble birth to declare, that they should be seated at the same table with himself, where his hospitality, as well on his public days (b), as at other times, was as noble, as his own moderation in the enjoyment of it was exemplary.

The Archbishop married, in 1759, Caroline, daughter of the Hon. William Townshend, a son of the Lord Viscount Townshend, whom he left surviving, but left no issue by her.

He bore for his arms—Sable, guttee d'eau; on a fess argent, 3 Cornish boughs proper, a rose for difference; as for the seventh son.

89. JOHN MOORE, S. T. P. bishop of Bangor, was next promoted to this archbishopric, being confirmed on April 26, 1783. He was born in the city of Gloucester, and was educated at Pembroke college in Oxford, and in May 1759, was admitted fellow of Worcester college, on Dr. Clarke's foundation; after being recommended to the late Duke of Malborough, he was intrusted by him with the education of his two younger sons, Lords Charles and Robert Spencer, with whom as tutor, he travelled to Rome; in 1761 he had a prebend of Durham conferred on him, and in May 1763, a canonry of Christ church in Oxford; in Nov. 1769, he was inducted to the Lambeth palace, to keep a public table, one day in every week, during the sittings of parliament.

rectory

ARCHBISHOPRIC.

rectory of Ryton, and on Sept. 20, 1771, was installed dean of Canterbury (c), from which he was removed on the death of bishop Ewer in 1775, to the bishopric of Bangor, and from thence translated, as above-mentioned, to this metropolitan see of Canterbury, over which he still presides with that strict and uninterrupted propriety of conduct, which adds a lustre to his character, and renders it as respectable in public, as it is amiable in private life.

He bears for his arms—Argent, on a chevron sable, 2 swords, their hilts or, the blades argent, their points crossing each other upwards; between 3 Moors heads couped at the neck, proper.

The coat of arms borne by the archbishop of Canterbury, as belonging to the archiepiscopal see, is—Azure, an episcopal staff in pale or; ensigned with a cross-patee argent, surmounted by a pall of the last, edged and fringed of the 2d; charged with 4 crosses formee fitchee, sable.

OF THE
PROVINCIAL JURISDICTIONS AND PREROGATIVES
OF THE ARCHBISHOPS OF CANTERBURY.

THE PROVINCE of Canterbury at this time comprehends the sees of twenty-one suffragan bishops, which as they are universally known, need not be enumerated here; and there are several churches, about eighty-three in number, in the dioceses of Rochester, Winchester, London, Norwich, Lincoln, Chichester, Oxford, and one in the diocese of

(c) See a further account of him, in the list of deans of Canterbury, above.

(d) Wherever the archbishop has had any manors or advowsons in right of his see, that place, though in another diocese, is exempt from any jurisdiction of the ordinary, and is called a peculiar, from its being of the peculiar and immediate jurisdiction of the archbishop.

(e) See the archbishop's right to this custom, in Battely,

PRIVILEGES, &c. OF.

chester, within the province of York, exempt from the jurisdiction of their respective bishops, and immediately subject to the archbishop of Canterbury, and are called bis peculiars; to which he collates as the patron of them (d).

The archbishop is patron besides, of a great number of benefices in his own diocese, of three prebends in the church of Canterbury, and of the archdeaconry, and has the nomination of the several officers belonging to the ecclesiastical courts within his jurisdiction.

He has the right of conferring all vacant ecclesiastical benefices in the province of Canterbury, which devolve to his collation by a lapse of time, either by the negligence or fault of the patrons of such clerks, or inability of the person presented, or by any other means.

He has likewise a privilege, confirmed by long custom, of collating to certain dignities and benefices in different dioceses within his province, called bis options, which arise from this custom, that whenever a bishop is confirmed in any see within his province, the archbishop claims a right to make his choice or option of the next avoidance of any one dignity or benefice, in that bishop's patronage, to be at his disposal, if vacant, during the bishop's continuance in that see; and the patronage or gift of this option does not cease with the archbishop's demise, but is devised by him, by will or otherwise, as chattels, to whomsoever he pleases, and as such seems alienable afterwards by the possessor of it (e).

Besides the sees above-mentioned, in former times the archbishop of York, the bishops of Ireland (f), the clergy of the provinces of Normandy, Gascony, and Aquitaine, so long as they continued in subjection to the Kings of England, were subject likewise to the archbishop of Canterbury, as their metropolitan (g).

The archbishops of Canterbury have all those rights, powers and jurisdictions, which, by the canons of the church, belong in common to all metropolitans; and there are besides those, some peculiar and proper rights and jurisdictions, privileges, liberties and immunities annexed to their see. The archbishop has two concurrent jurisdictions, the one as ordinary of the see of Canterbury, the other as superintendant throughout all his whole province, of all ecclesiastical matters; both to correct and supply the defects pt. 2, appendix, p. 12, No. iv; and in Burn's Ecclesiastical Law, vol. i, p. 219.

(f) The bishops of Ireland were consecrated by, and made their submission to him, of which there are several forms given by Mr. Wharton, in his Ang. Sacra. vol. i.

(g) The city of Calais was made subject to his jurisdiction, for which purpose pope Urban VI. granted him licence, anno 1379, to exercise it there. See Wilkin's Councils, tom. iii, p. 144.

ARCHBISHOPRIC.

of the several ordinaries; and therefore Panormitan calls him, ordinarius totius provinciae, for he has jurisdiction volente ordinario, as in cases of visitation, which is a right vested in him by custom immemorial. Belonging to this his provincial jurisdiction are several courts, as those of the arches, the prerogative, audience (b), and consistory, at Canterbury, all belonging to their provincial jurisdiction; a particular account of which, in this place, would only be prolix and tedious to the reader, and may the rather be excused, as they are particularly treated of by the learned compiler of the Antiquities of the British Church, towards the beginning of his work, where he treats of the privileges and prerogatives of the see of Canterbury (i).

There is a manuscript treatise, among the archives of this church, concerning the prerogative of the archbishop of Canterbury, chiefly collected from the several registers of the archbishops; of these Mr. Battely has printed, in his appendix (k), that of the wardship of the heirs of the Earls of Gloucester, and some others (l), of the immunities and privileges granted to them, their servants, tenants or vassals, by several different Kings, the right of receiving appeals, called tutory or defensive, the visitations of the dioceses of their comprovincial bishops, the probates of wills, the several courts belonging to them as archbishops, and the like; to these may be added, the rights due to the archbishops and the church of Canterbury, upon the death of every suffragan bishop of the province, which is likewise in the same book, but which the reader may find printed in the Anglia Sacra, vol. i, p. 88 (m).

The archbishops of Canterbury had in very ancient time, the privilege of coining money; and there are still extant among the cabinets of the curious, several of their coins minted at Canter-

(b) The archbishop had formerly his court of audience, which was held in his palace, and the jurisdiction of it exercised by the master official of the audience, who held his court in the consistory at St. Paul's; but now the three great offices of official, principal of the archbishop, dean or judge of the peculiars, and official of the audience, have been for a long time past united in one person, under the general name of dean of the arches, who keeps his court in Doctors Commons Hall.

(i) Many of these privileges are, generally speaking, grown out of use; and in relation to the privileges of this see, archbishop Parker says, Autoritas ejus non certis & definitis. Arch. vel Matr. Jurisdictiones cancellis concluditur sed ordinaria, libera, penes; arbitraria per suam provinciam excurrit & diffunditur.

(k) Pt. 2, appendix, No. iv, et seq. where they are enumerated at large.

(l) The archbishop had this privilege, among others, that such as held lands of him were liable for wardship to him, and compounded with him for it, though they held other lands in capite of the King.

PRIVILEGES, &c. OF.

bury, so early as the time of the Saxons. There are some silver pennies coined by the archbishops Atbelard, Wlfred, Ceolnoth and Plegmund; the former of whom came to the see in 793, and the latter in 889; but after this there are none extant, till the time of archbishop Bourcier, so late as K. Henry VII.'s reign (n).

In the reign of K. Atbelstane, the coinage of the Saxon kingdom underwent a material regulation made by him in 928, by which he took the prerogative of coining money entirely into his own hands, and put an end to every innovation hurtful to the state, and injurious to the dignity of his crown (o). By the above regulation, the several places where mints were allowed are specified; in Canterbury there were to be seven, of which two were to be the archbishop's (p).

That part of the royal edict which respected the archbishop and other-like subjects, seems to have continued in force but a short time, not quite a century, and to have been repealed in K. Ethelred II.'s reign, when the inferior mints were in general resumed into the hands of the crown. At what time the archbishop resumed this privilege, is not certainly known, however it is plain, he was not in the possession of it at the time of K. Richard I.'s accession to the crown, as appears by a grant of K. John in his first year, by which he grants and confirms to Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, and his successors for ever, three mints in the city of Canterbury, which K. Richard, his brother, had restored to archbishop Baldwin and his successors, and had confirmed by his charter (q). If bishop Wilkins's copy of K. Atbelstane's edict is accurate, there must, as appears by the charter of K. John, have been an additional one added afterwards. Bromton, col. 843, however, gives us a copy of the above-mentioned edict, in which the archbishop

(m) See Wilkins's Councils, tom. iii, p. 8.

(n) The learned and Rev. Samuel Pegge, in 1772, published a dissertation on these coins, fabricated by authority of the archbishops of Canterbury, in which there is a plate engraved, of the above pennies, and likewise of the others mentioned below. Selden, in his notes upon Eadmer and Speed, in his history, makes mention of two silver pennies of the archbishops Plegmund and Ceolnoth, then extant, the latter being engraved by Speed, the former by Selden; one of Ceolnoth is likewise given by Camden, præf. cxxxv, tab. N. 4; and sir Andrew Fountain two, in his tables of Saxon coins, at the end of Hickes's Thesaurus; and of Plegmund, one, in Camden, præf. cxxxv, tab. v, N. 3; and two in Hickes's Thesaurus, tab. ix.

(o) In confirmation of this, it is observable, that no metropolitan coin has ever been seen with an archbishop's name or effigies, posterior to the reign of this King, in the Saxon times Pegge, p. 51.

(p) In Wilkins's Councils, tom. i, p. 206, it is said in Bromton, col. 843, three; of which see more below.

(q) See Dugd. orig. p. 9.

ARCHBISHOPRIC.

is allowed the privilege of three mints, making the total in Canterbury, eight; and this seems more probable to be the true number, as appears by the above and the succeeding grants, for King Edward I. in his 7th year, granted to the archbishop, of his special grace, his writ, that he should have the profits of it, saving his own right—Qd ad presens liberat denarios suos proprios custodibus Cambii Cantuarie & percipiat emolumentum denariorum suorum propriorum per visum unius de suis quem ad hoc deputaverit quantum ad emolumentum trium cunctorum quos clamat ad se pertinere ratione archiepiscopatus sui sicut temporibus predecessorum suorum et temporibus aliorum Cambiorum fieri consuevit salvo jure regis (r).

K. Edward II, in his 1st year, granted his letters testimonial to Everie de Friscombald, keeper of his exchange in Canterbury, that the archbishop had a right, by certain grants which he had produced to him, to three mints and three coinages (cuncos et monetarios) in the city of Canterbury(s); and whereas the said keeper of his exchange had obstructed the archbishop in them, to his great detriment and the disinheriting of his church, the King therefore commanded him by no means to interrupt the archbishop in his just right in the exercising of it, and that he should restore to the archbishop all the profits accruing from it from the time of such obstruction (t); these mints were still further confirmed to the archbishop by K. Henry VI. in his 25th year, and by K. Edward IV. in his 2d and 3d year, the title of the roll being de tribus monetariis cum tribus cuncis ad monetam fabricandam in civitate Cantuar concess. archieps Cantuar. (u)

Archbishop Bourgechier, who filled the see at this

(r) See Prynne, p. 237.

(s) Wilkins's Councils, tom. iii, p. 552. See Madox's Formulare, p. 177.

(t) Witness, &c. at Westminster, 22 Maij anno 1^{mo} regni. Rymer's Fœdera, vol. iii, p. 81.

(u) Rot. Cartarum de annis, 2 and 3 Edward IV.

(w) On one side is the King full faced, a B on his breast, the legend RICARDI DEI GRA. and in the inner circle of the reverse, CIVITAS CANTOB.—The blunders of the letters from the confusion of the reign, may well be accounted for. See an engraving of it, in Pegge, p. 113, addenda.

(w) On one side of these half groats, is the King, side faced, and his legend—a clove or pomgranate for the mint mark; the reverse, the royal arms with W on one side, and A on the other, for Willielmus Archiepiscopus; another has a cross-croset for the mint mark; another has a fleur de lis; and in another, the letters W. A. are placed over the shield of arms, and the mint mark is a martlet. There are others of this archbishop's coins, with no difference but the mint mark; but it should be observed, the halfpenny has the King's full face; the half groats all side faces, and are of the best money of that reign.

(x) This curious half groat has, like those of archbishop Warham, K. Henry VIII.'s side face, and legend on the reverse; on each side the royal arms T. C. for Thomas Cranmer; the halfpenny has the King full faced, on each side T. C.

(y) When the archbishop visits provincially, he has the time, appears to have exercised this privilege, for there is a half groat of his coining, during the next reign of K. Richard III. (v) his successors afterwards did the same, and there are extant several half groats of archbishop Warham's mintage, and a halfpenny likewise (w), and two half groats and an halfpenny of archbishop Cranmer's (x), all during the reign of K. Hen. VIII; soon after which this privilege of coining in these, as well as all other private mints throughout the kingdom, ceased, the coinage of money being prohibited in any other mint, but such as should be appointed by royal authority for that purpose.

The archbishops of Canterbury have not for a long time past exercised their privilege of visiting their province(y), but they usually hold a visitation of their diocese every fourth year, oftener than which they are, by the patents granted to their officers, inhibited (z). These visitations are holden by the archbishops with a pomp and splendor, equal to their high station and dignity, and may be said to be the only ceremony, which bears an appearance of the state and grandeur which accompanied their high rank as metropolitans in former times.

The right of the archbishop to visit the two universities as metropolitan, occasioned many disputes between them; the one attempting, and the other denying the archbishop's right to exercise this power. At length it was, by the King's command, solemnly argued in council in 1636(a), and determined in the archbishop's favour, exclusive of all others; and the sentence was drawn up by the King's council, and the broad seal was put to it to take away all differences that might hereafter arise; upon which the King directed power of censuring any bishop in his province. If he visits an inferior diocese, and inhibits the bishop during such his visitation, and he should happen at that time to have a title to present to a living by lapse, the bishop cannot do it, but must present his clerk to the archbishop, because during the inhibition, the bishop's power is suspended.

(z) Archbishop Secker proposed to visit this diocese every third year, or as much oftener as he thought proper, which being opposed by his commissary, &c. as infringing upon their rights, he acquiesced at last, after much altercation; for he was some time before he could be brought to believe, that he was inhibited from visiting as often as he thought proper.

(a) In relation to the university of Oxford, it was alleged on behalf of the archbishop, that upon the full hearing of both parties, it had been adjusted by K. Richard II. for the archbishop; and afterwards, upon a like hearing and re-examination by K. Henry IV, and both of their judgments established by act of parliament, anno 13 Henry IV. and the archbishop produced an original deed from the university of Cambridge, to the archbishop, under the hands of the heads of houses, containing renunciation of all privileges from any pope, and wherein they bind themselves under the penalty of 1000l. not to oppose the archbishop's jurisdiction; and this was, anno 27 Henry VIII. the year before those bulls were abolished by act of parliament. See Burn's Ecclesiastical Law, vol. i, p. 41.

his

ARCHBISHOPRIC.

his letters that year, to archbishop Laud, to visit the universities of Oxford and Cambridge (b).

OF THE PALACES AND CASTLES BELONGING TO THE SEE OF CANTERBURY.

BESIDES the most antient palace of the archbishopric at Canterbury, given to it at the first erection of it by Estelbert, King of Kent, of which a full account has already been given above, there were many other stately mansions and castles belonging to the see, situated on the principal manors and estates of it; these were, those of Wrotham, Maidstone, Oxford, Knoll in Sevenoke, Charing, Aldington, Saltwood, Tenham, Gillingham, Wingham, Ford and Beakborne, all in this county; Lambeth and Croydon in Surry, and Mayfield and Slindon in Suffex; most of which were large and stately palaces, fit for the reception of so eminent a personage and his numerous establishment; and though the several archbishops made choice of some one of these houses as a favourite place, in which they resided as their homestall, for a longer time than they did at the others, and consequently they laid out much cost in the improving and adorning the buildings of it more than of the others, yet they generally visited and sojourned for some time at most or all of them in their progress, indiscriminately, and this they were induced to do from the greatest part of the rents of these manors being paid in kind, such as corn, straw, poultry, eggs and other provisions, and which from the former scarcity of money, could not easily be turned into specie, so that the whole was consumed by the archbishops with their suite, which at times consisted of knights, esquires and other attendants, to the number of 2 or 300 on horseback, whilst they remained there, and by their families resident in them during the rest of the year. Of these palaces, with their adjoining royalties and manors, the archbishops continued possessed till the reign of K. Henry VIII, who, looking with a jealous eye on these stately possessions, at different times stripped this see of many of them, as did K. Edward VI, and Q. Elizabeth of all the rest, excepting the antient palace at Canterbury; those of Ford and Bekeborne, which were not so well worth his attention, and Croydon and Lambeth, of which only the last remains standing at this time, and is now the only archiepiscopal palace belonging to this see. Here the archbishop resides in general, keeping a stately household of officers and domestics attendant on

(b) Harleian MS. No. 787—32—91. Wilkins's Councils, vol. iv, p. 525, 528, in which, p. 529, may be seen, a letter of Gerard Vossius to the archbishop, concerning his right to visit the universities.

(c) Viz. of the popes Innocent III. and Gregory IX., the following bulls, corroborating this privilege and right of him, suitable to his high rank and dignity; here his constant housekeeping, as well as his hospitality, is great and noble; as a part of which, during the time of the sitting of parliament, he keeps weekly a public day, on which he entertains at dinner such of the nobility, bishops, clergy and gentry, as come to pay their respects to him, who are in general very numerous, and are entertained by him with a costly plenty, and with a welcome, decorum and courtesy, which so universally characterize his grace's behaviour.

ELECTION, &c.

OF THE ELECTION OF AN ARCHBISHOP, AND TO WHOM THE RIGHT OF IT BELONGED.

THE right of electing an archbishop was, according to ecclesiastical canons, antiently in the prior and chapter, confirmed by the royal concessions of our Kings, by bulls of the several Popes, and by constant practice, though in it they were continually opposed, and their elections as frequently declared null and void.

K. John, in the 16th year of his reign, granted and declared by his royal charter, a free election of prelates in all cathedral and conventual churches for ever, throughout all England; which was confirmed by the bulls of several Popes (c), and these, together with the King's charter, are still preserved among the archives of this church. This freedom of election was, in particular, most strictly observed by K. Henry VI, who, when this see was vacant by the death of archbishop Kemp, granted to the monks on their usual petition in this case, a licence to elect a new archbishop, without recommending any one in any shape to their choice, lest he should seem to infringe on the liberty of their free election, at which time Thomas Bourghchier was chosen, but this was a rare instance of it.

Upon the petition of the prior and convent for leave to fill up the vacant see, from time to time, a licence of electing an archbishop was generally granted to them easily, and without any solicitation; but this was not so entirely free, as in the above-mentioned instance, for it was usually accompanied, as it is at present, with a recommendation of some particular person, under the King's sign manual; and although the prior and convent, aware of this intrusion on their free liberty of election, hastened as much as possible, by making a prior election, to frustrate this recommendation, as well as the frequent one of the Pope by his bull of provision; yet they were generally forced to make a second election, electing an archbishop, are still extant, in the registers of this church, viz. of Adrian IV. anno 1158; of Alexander III. anno 1170; of Urban II. anno 1187; of Celstine III. anno 1191; of Innocent III. anno 1206; and of Honorius III. anno 1219. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 46.

ARCHBISHOP.

in conformity to one or the other of them, of the person named in them; indeed the convent rarely had a quiet, undisturbed and free election, and for the most part the archbishop elect was forced upon them, either by the King or the Pope.

Another strong opposition which the convent had to encounter, was from the suffragan bishops of the province, who contested, that they had the true right to elect their metropolitan, either by themselves alone, or at least by themselves in conjunction with the prior and convent of the church of Canterbury; but upon the latter making their appeals to the court of Rome, they procured the several bulls from the Pope, as above-mentioned; and though they at length overthrew the pretences of the bishops, which had continued just 100 years (d), during which time there had been nine archbishops elected, at the same time, as perhaps was intended by the court of Rome, they made way for those papal bulls of provision, which proved a much greater grievance to them, and in great measure took the free election entirely from them; for afterwards, till the time of the reformation, though some few were duly elected by the convent, yet the archbishops in general received their admission to the metropolitan dignity by power of the papal authority, under the title of the Pope's bulls of provision, as may be seen at large above in the account of the several archbishops, where the means by which each of them became promoted to this see, are fully related.

But since the reformation and the abolition of the papal power in this kingdom, the method of election has been thus: the vacancy of the see having been notified, a conge de lire, or licence to elect, is issued in the usual garb of pageantry, under the great seal, and directed for that purpose to the dean and chapter of Canterbury, inclosed in which, is an unadorned small sheet of paper, containing a recommendation of the person to be elected, under the King's sign manual. Accordingly, the chapter being met, and the licence and letter of recommendation being read, another person, either one of the prebendaries or a minor canon of this church, is nominated as a candidate likewise with him who is recommended, but the remembrance of a premunire, with other cogent reasons, always renders the royal candidate successful, and that by a unanimous suffrage of the chapter; nor has his opponent ever been known since the reign of K. Henry VIII, to have gained a single voice in his favour. After the return of this election, the royal confirmation succeeds of course, without any difficulty, and the new archbishop is afterwards consecrated by two bishops, usually at his own chapel at Lambeth palace.

(d) Pope Innocent the III^d. anno 1206, pronounced a

ELECTION, &c.

Let us now take a view of the difficulties which the archbishop elect met with in obtaining his confirmation from the court of Rome, before the reformation. After the election of an archbishop by the prior and convent of Canterbury, the royal assent and approbation was obtained with far more ease than the papal confirmation at Rome; for by the canon law it was provided, that the archbishop elect should personally appear at Rome, and obtain there a confirmation of his election. This was an undertaking of both great trouble and expence; the journey was long, tiresome and perilous, and the attendance on the dilatory process of a tedious suit, and the submission to all the humiliating vexations named by the pride and avarice of those who had dealings in it, could not but be severely felt by a good and generous mind; for notwithstanding the archbishop elect carried with him authentic instruments of his being duly and canonically elected, he in general met with many pretended difficulties during the process; fresh objections were made, and new doubts and scruples raised from time to time, merely to prolong the suit, and enhance the expence; till at last a large sum of money given, either for expedition, or wasted in the fees of the court, reconciled every scruple, and thus the end being answered, the business was finished. A notorious instance upon record, of the intolerable exactions of the court of Rome, which this nation once laboured under.

Two instances among several others in the registers of the church of Canterbury, may be produced, of the trouble and charges attending this confirmation of the archbishop elect at Rome. One is of archbishop Winchelsea, who, by reason of the vacancy of the papal chair, was necessitated to spend a year and nine months in his journey, to obtain his confirmation; during which time, as appears by the register of the church, the archbishop spent in England 142l. 19s. and in the court of Rome, two thousand five hundred marks sterling; and the expences of the proctors of the chapter amounted to one thousand seven hundred and forty-four marks sterling more; all which enormous expences were laid out upon no other account than the procuring of the confirmation of the archbishop's election.

Other archbishops in suing for their confirmations, met with full as long and tedious a business; for whatever difficulty there was in passing the Alps, and that frequently in the most inclement season of the year, there was still more in bringing it to a speedy conclusion in that venal court, where it found so many wilful stops and hinderances.

The long attendance of archbishop Winchelsea definitive sentence, in relation to this controversy. See Spelman's Councils, tom. ii, p. 130.

ARCHBISHOP.

might indeed, in some measure have been occasioned by the vacancy of the papal chair; but most of the other archbishops met with their delays from the Pope himself and the cardinals, who were excellently versed in all the arts of stripping those of their money, who had any dealings with them, and never ceased, whilst they had any thing left for them; and there are some instances, when, after taking this long journey, and much money expended, the Pope chose to declare the archbishop's election null and void, under the power of providing for this see with one of his own choice.

I shall here produce only one instance more, and that for the sake of shewing what strong and powerful efforts were made by the King, as well as the whole nation, against the papal provisions and other usurpations of the see of Rome, at that time; this was in the case of Simon Mepham, who was elected archbishop on December 11, 1327, and within a month afterwards began his journey to Rome, carrying with him the usual testimonials, as well from the prior and chapter, as from the King. Upon the dilatory proceedings in his cause, the King sent a second letter to the Pope and to the several cardinals, and soon after a third, in both which, he recommends the archbishop's cause in a special manner, pressing the Pope with much vehemency for a speedy dispatch of it; and this was accompanied with one from Isabella, the Queen mother, and another from the nobles then assembled in parliament at Northampton. In these letters, they all repeat how much the speedy return of the archbishop would promote the peace and tranquility of the nation, and that through his absence several weighty affairs were interrupted, which could not be transacted without the immediate presence of the archbishop; and they all concluded with a plea against cassating the election, and putting another into the chair by papal provision. The King's former letter urgeth this from the great danger of sedition and schism from the people which might follow thereupon; but in his third letter, he beseeched the Pope, that if he should find just cause to make null the present election, he would acquiesce in his former request of providing for the see of Canterbury, by

(e) Battely, pt. 2, p. 56. There was an antient custom which the earl of Boleyn claimed, which was, that the first time any archbishop of Canterbury crossed the sea from Dover to Whitland, in his journey to Rome, there was due to the earl as his fee, as lord of that place, the best sumptuary horse which the archbishop had with him, together with all his lading and harness; and that the archbishop should lay before the bailiff of Whitland, a heap of sterling money, of which the bailiff should have as much as he could take up at twice, in both hands together; upon which, the archbishop, with his family, his servants and messengers were to pass, free from all toll and custom, throughout the earl's territories during the archbishop's life. Archbishop Win- the promotion of Henry, bishop of Lincoln, to it. The Queen mother gave the Pope more roundly to understand, that this was a concern, not only of the people of the province of Canterbury, but of the whole nation, which she and all the nobility had espoused as their common interest, and had agreed to acquaint him therewith in that same style, being well assured that the promotion of any other to this dignity would give great offence to the people, and raise a lasting schism in this church. The nobles wrote in the same manner, and in the same strain, concluding, that they trembled at the event, which a contrary decision would produce among the people. By these vehement importunities, the Pope condescended to celebrate the confirmation of the archbishop, at a public consistory on May 27, and returning, he arrived at Dover on the 5th of September following (e).

CONSECRATION, &c

OF THE ARCHBISHOP'S CONSECRATION AND INTHRONIZATION.

The archbishop was usually consecrated, unless he was a bishop already, on the next Sunday immediately after the declaration of his confirmation. The solemnity was performed by a cardinal, whom the Pope appointed for that purpose, in some church where the court of Rome was at that time.

After this, there still remained in former times, another ceremony, without which he could not exercise the power and office, or so much as take upon him the name and title of archbishop; which was, that according to canonical sanctions, he was to receive the pall, the badge and ensign of the fulness of his authority, this was usually, though not without earnest petition, given soon after the consecration (f). The use of it was allowed only upon solemn times and occasions, called apostolical privileges, and in this they were inferior to the Pope, who reserved to himself the honour of wearing the pall at all times and in every place. There was this provision too, wisely made, that no archbishop should lend his pall to another, or transmit it to his successor, but he carried it with him to the grave, and was buried in it (g).

chelsea in 1306, compounded with the earl for 40 marks sterling, and afterwards passed with his family, as well as his servants and messengers, free of all toll and customs; for which purpose, he had the earl's acquittance, under the seal of his principal seneschal, and of the community of Wyb-sand, dated the 14th kal. June, that year. See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 19, No. viii.

(f) At what price this honorable badge of authority was rated in the bills of fees to an archbishop, I don't find; but it was certainly at no very easy rate; for the archbishop of Mentz, as Fox tells us, in his Acts and Monuments, was forced to pay 27,000 florins for it.

(g) The form of petitioning for the pall, and of delivering

ARCHBISHOP.

CONSECRATION, &c.

The bulls declaring the confirmation of the archbishop being arrived in England, and that to the King being presented to him, the archbishop appeared personally before him, for such was the custom of the realm, and laying his hand upon his breast, took the oath of fidelity; upon which the King ordered the writ to restore the temporalities of the see to him.

The archbishop, after this, being received at his first coming to his church with the usual ceremonies, the greatest of all solemnities followed next, which was his intronization, which was celebrated with a pomp and state, almost equal to royalty itself. The entertainment was great and magnificent; the variety of costly and dainty provisions in most profuse quantities, prepared with the rarest skill of cookery, seems almost incredible. In the archives of this church, there is an old printed roll, containing the intronization feast of George Nevill, archbishop of York, made in the 6th year of K. Edward IV. and of William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury, in the 20th year of K. Henry VII, which are strong instances of it. Battely has given in his appendix, the bill of fare of the former, with the names of the great officers who waited at that feast. The description of archbishop Warham's feast he has given, whole and entire, in the same appendix (b); in it there is an account of the manner in which the services were performed, of the number of dishes, the distinct messes or companies of the guests, the bills of the provisions and prices of the same. The compiler of the Antiquities of the British Church refers us to this very printed roll, and says, that he was afraid to relate the number of guests and dishes, lest he should report what could not be believed. He mentions too, the devices of the subtilties and the verses that were made on them; whence it is plain, that in those days the skill in cookery and confectionary flourished far beyond the art of poetry. These devices, as they were then ing it, and the oath which the archbishop took when he received it, are added, in Battely's Appendix, pt. 2, No. ix, a, b, c; and some of them are printed in Fox's Acts and Monuments, vol. i.—The pall was a pontifical ornament, much of the figure as it is now borne in the coat of arms of the archbishopric of Canterbury, and of Dublin in Ireland; it was made of lamb's wool only, and was purfled with crosses of black; in breadth about three fingers, and having two labels, which parting like a Y on the upper part of the breast, were pinned on the shoulders; the other, or perpendicular part of it, hung down on the body before, and it was worn over all other vestments. These palls were made with great ceremony, and at Rome only, on the particular feast day of St. Agnes the virgin, at the time of chaunting the Agnes Dei in the mass, when two white lambs were laid on the altar, after remaining there during that part of it, were afterwards delivered to the sub-deacon of St. Peter's church, who put them out to graze till sheering time, and then of their wool mingled with other, was made fine thread, of which the palls were woven. At each end of termed, consisted of the most gross and fulsome flattery, such as archbishop Warham himself, who was a good and learned man, could not have submitted to, had not his feelings of a man been lost in the greatness and hurry of that day's solemnity.

The royal and honourable guests who were invited to these solemnities, shew the honour and esteem they were held in. At the great feast of archbishop Winchelsea in 1294, there were present, K. Edward, prince Edward the King's son, Edmund the King's brother, the bishops of London, Lincoln, Ely, Hereford, Norwich, Rochester, and Durham; the Earls of Gloucester, Pembroke, Marshal, Hereford and Warwick, and a great number of other prelates, nobles and inferior persons (i). At the feast of archbishop Walter Reynolds, there were present, K. Edward, the bishops of Winchester, Bath and Wells, Chichester, Coventry and Lichfield, Ely, and Worcester; the Earls of Hereford, Pembroke, &c. At the feast of archbishop Warham, there were entertained, the Duke of Buckingham (k), Earl of Essex, Lords Cobham, Bergavenny, Brook, and Clynton; the bishop of Mayo, suffragan, the prior of Christ church, the abbat of St. Augustine's, sir Edward Poynings, sir John Fineux, chief justice; sir William and sir Thomas Scot, Master Boteler, sergeant at law, the Master of the Rolls, the several archdeacons and doctors, the mayor and citizens of Canterbury, the barons of the five ports, besides a number of others of quality, private gentlemen and a multitude of inferior persons.

In imitation of the intronizing and coronation of royal personages, the archbishop was attended at these feasts by his great officers, who performed their services by a kind of grand serjeantry, and were persons of distinguished rank and title; for which purpose, the day before this solemnity, the high court of stewardship was held in the archbishop's palace, to judge and admit the several claims to these tenures. These the pall were thin pieces of lead of the same breadth with them; when they were thus finished, they were carried to the bodies of St. Peter and St. Paul, and after certain prayers were said over them they were left there all night, and the next day the sub-deacon received them again, and kept them till some archbishop wanted one, and either went himself to fetch it, or sent his proxy to sue for it, when it was delivered with many ceremonies, and at a most extravagant price; as one instance, when Walter Grey was translated from Worcester to York in 1215, his pall cost him 10,000*l.* equal perhaps to 30,000*l.* of our money as at present.

(b) Appendix, No. x^b—x^c.

(i) See Somner's Appendix, No. xlvii. See the provisions and expences of this feast, which amounted to 513*l.* 3*s.* in the whole, in Drake's edition of Parker's Antiq. Brit. Eccles. p. lxiii.

(k) The order and form of the coming of Edward Stafford, duke of Buckingham, to Canterbury, on the day before the intronization of the archbishop, is in the Harleian MS. No. 532—8.

are

ARCHBISHOP.

are particularly described in a printed roll in the archives of this church, so early as the 42d of K. Henry III.'s reign, anno 1264, by which it appears, that the offices of high steward and butler were then executed by the Earl of Gloucester, as holding the manor and castle of Tunbridge and other manors of the archbishop, by the performance of such service at his intbronization (l).

The office of chief panterer on that day was executed by the Lord Conyars and Mr. Strangwish, as holding the manors of Whyvelton and others (m). The office of chamberlain for that day was claimed, and allowed, to Bartholomew Lord Badlesmere, as holding the manor of Hatfield, near Charing (n). The office of carver, by the son and heir of Roger de Mereworth, as holding the manor of Ceriston (o), and the office of cupbearer, by Roger de Kirkbye, as holding the manor of Horton (p), each by the performance of those respective services.

There is an account of the intbronization of archbishop Morton, in a manuscript in the Cotton Library, in which we learn, that after Christmas in the year 1487, anno 2 Hen. VII. the archbishop was, on a Sunday, in the month of January, intbronized at Canterbury, greatly accompanied with lords, both spiritual and temporal. In his journey towards this place from Lambeth, after the King's licence, he rode greatly accompanied, first to Croydon, and from thence to Knowle; from thence to Maidstone, to Charing, to Chartbam, where he lay on the Saturday at night,

(l) By a composition made in the 42d year of K. Hen. III. anno 1264, between archbishop Doniface and Richard de Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, it appears, that the archbishop claimed homage, and the service of four knights fees, and suit to the court of the archbishop, for the manors of Tunbridge, Viefton, Horsmonden, Melton and Pettis, and that he should be high steward and high butler of the archbishop and his successors, whenever the archbishop should be intbronized, with divers other services for those manors; and the Earl claimed and was allowed for him and his heirs for the office of stewardship, seven robes of scarlet, thirty gallons of wine, fifty pounds of wax for his lights during the whole feast; the livery of hay and oats for eighty horses, for two nights only, the dishes and salts which should stand before the archbishop at his high table, and after the feast the sojourning for three days with fifty horses, at the sole expence of the archbishop, at the nearest manors of the archbishop, at the choice of the Earl, ad sanguinem minuendum, says the record; and for his office of butler, seven robes of scarlet, fifty pounds of wax, twenty gallons of wine, the livery of hay and oats for sixty horses, for two nights only; the cup which he served before the archbishop on the day of the feast, and all the empty casks.

Memorandum, that on the intbronization of Robert Kilewardbye, archbishop, the Earl had in the first place, the above-mentioned fees, and then he had one mantle with a cloak; and afterwards, on the intbronization of J. de Peckham, archbishop, he had two mantles; the Earl held these manors for performing his office of steward, viz. Tenebregg with the castle, and Handlo with its appurtenances, and the whole lowy. The Earl held these manors for the office of butler, viz. Bradstede, Viefton, Horsmandenne, Melton and Pettes. See Somner, appendix, No. xlv. Bat-and on the Sunday, when he entered Canterbury, all the bells in the city were rang, and he alighted and went on foot. At the great gate (south within) met him, the procession of Christ church, and censured him, and when he was entered a little within the west door, there was placed a stool with a rich cloth of silk and cushions, where he kneeled some time and wept much, and after proceeded to the high altar. The Te Deum was sung, and he and all the prelates had on them rich copes and with procession went and met the pall, sent from the Pope which was borne by the bishop of Rochester; then they returned before the high altar, where the bishop of Worcester read and declared the Pope's bulls, and made a great proposition of them, shewing the virtue and meaning of the pall, which being so delivered to the archbishop, who sat in a chair, all the prelates who were there kissed the relic or pall, and after the cheek of the archbishop, and in the same manner after them all the religious people of that house; this done, the archbishop and all other prelates, went into the vestry, the bishop of Ely was deacon, and read the gospel, the bishop of Rochester bore the cross and read the epistle; the bishop of Salisbury was chaunter, and began the office of the mass. As for all the solemnity of that masse and the feast, it was written, says the author, in a large book made for that purpose, but it was the best ordered and served, that he ever saw, or that could tely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xa. Harleian Mss. No. 357, 12. After that, Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, received in 1295, his whole fee of Robert Winchelsea, archbishop, as by composition, for his stewardship and butlership; and he likewise received of archbishop Walter, for his fee, 200 marks; and Hugh de Awdley, Earl of Gloucester, received of archbishop Stratford, 100 marks, and the Earl of Stafford, lord of Tunbridge castle, received at the intbronization of archbishop Sudbury, for his fee, 40 marks, and a cup of silver, gilt. See Battely, pt. 2, appendix, p. 20.

CONSECRATION, &c.

(m) These manors seem to have been in the county of York; the fee due for the performance of this service is not mentioned.

(n) His fee for the performance of this service was the bed and whole of the furniture of the archbishop's chamber; but it seems his right to this was rather in doubt, for tho' he received this fee, he engaged to return it immediately after the solemnity to the archbishop again, till he had made his claim to it appear more plainly and authentic. It appears by the escheat rolls of the 2d year of K. Edward III, anno 1330, that the relict of Bartholomew de Badlesmere held the manor of Hatfield, of the archbishop of Canterbury by sergeantry, viz. by the service of serving the said archbishop with water, for the washing of his hands, on the day of his intbronization.

(o) His fee was the knives after dinner, with which he had performed his office, not being a knight, another was appointed to execute the service.

(p) His fee, was the cup in which the archbishop should drink; not being a knight, he was not qualified to perform the office, and the lord high steward appointed another for that purpose in his room.

ARCHBISHOPRIC.

PRE-EMINENCES, &c. OF.

be compared to, and the King's servants and officers of arms, that were there on the morn, when they took their leave, were well and worshipfully rewarded; there was likewise the Marquis of Dorset with eight or nine other barons, besides knights and esquires which were in marvellous great number, and all in his livery of Mustre-develes (q).

At the feast of the intronization of archbishop Warham, above-mentioned, the solemnity was equally grand and splendid, to any which had been before, when the archbishop sat in the middle of the high table or board, as it was then termed, alone; for the archbishop's state on that day was too great to admit of any to be of his messes, or at the table at which he sat. The Duke of Buckingham, lord high steward, came in on horseback, bareheaded, habited in his scarlet robe, having the white staff, the badge of his office, in his hand, being followed by two heralds at arms; then came the chief sewer, and after him the dishes of the first course were brought up; whilst these were placing on the table, the high steward lighting from off his horse, stood on foot before the archbishop, till the first course being served, he retired to his own dining-room, where the Duke's and the messes or services at the ends of the archbishop's board were served up (r). At the first mess of the Duke's table sat the Duke himself, Lord Clinton, sir Edward Poynings, and the Lord Chief Justice Fineux; at his second board sat sir William Scot, sir Thomas Kemp and Mr. Butler, serjeant at law; at the archbishop's board's end sat, on the right hand, the Earl of Essex, the bishop of Mayo, suffragan, and the prior of Christ church; on the left hand, the Lords Bergavenny and Brook, and the abbot of St. Augustine's; the rest of the messes and services for the several degrees of the numerous guests being served and conducted in the several rooms, with equal solemnity and decorum, according to their several degrees (s).

After the solemnity of the day was over, and these great officers attendant on it were dismissed, the number of the archbishop's household, his officers and servants that attended upon him, were sometimes more, sometimes fewer, according as he was disposed to appear in a greater or lesser state; but for the most part, his retinue was like his rank, and his revenue great and princelike; and the officers of his palace were so constituted, as in some measure to bear the resemblance to those of a prince's palace. Of late, the archbishops have usually been intronized by proxy, and that with a very scanty ceremony; for now, on the day appointed for the intronization, the archbishop, or his proxy, the members of the church attending in procession, is placed in his patriarchal chair, at the east end of the church, when the proper instruments are read and obezance made by the members of it; and by this ceremony the archbishop is put into the formal possession of his metropolitica dignity, with the authority and profits belonging to it; and this finishes the ceremonies of the day.

OF THE PRE-EMINENCES AND PRIVILEGES BELONGING TO THE ARCHBISHOPRIC.

AMONG other pre-eminences and privileges belonging to this archbishopric, there was formerly a perpetual legantine power annexed to it, whence the archbishop had the title of apostolica sedis legatus natus, being, the Pope's perpetual legate. He was sensible of the great power which the archbishop had in the administration of all ecclesiastical concerns in this nation, and lest he should seem to exercise that authority in his own right, on foot, with his feet bare as far as the church, where he was honorably received by the prior and convent, and after prayers offered up to St. Thomas, he entered the vestry with his clerks to prepare himself for masse.

Among the names of the officers who gave attendance at this ceremony, all of whom are inserted in the above roll, are the following:—High steward, Edward, duke of Buckingham; chamberlain, sir Edward Poynings, knt. chief butler, Edward, duke of Buckingham, by his deputy, sir Thomas Burgher, knt. who was steward of the archbishop's liberties by patent; cup-bearer, master Robert Fitzwater; carver, master Thomas Cobham, hares; sewer, master Richard Carew, miles; almner, M. Mumpesson, D. Jur. Can. under almner, M. Myles Bacchal, in utroq; jure; panter, Sydnham, gent. marshalls, Richard Minors and William Bulstrode, gent. ewer, John Borne Serjeant, gent. ushers of the chamber, Brookes, William Parise, gent. sewers for the upper end of the board, Edward Gulsorde, gent. sewers for the lower, George Gulsorde. —Then follow the names of above one hundred others, with their offices of under butlers, sewers, panterers, ewerers, clerks of the kitchens, marshalls, surveyors, conveyers, almners, door keepers, officers of the halls, &c. &c. belonging to the different places and parts of the feast.

(q) See Leland's Collections, vol. iv, p. 207.
 (r) The duke's board was served in each course, with one dish less than the archbishop's; and the messes at the end of the archbishop's board, were served each with two dishes in each course less than the duke's had.
 (s) See the roll describing the several particulars of this feast, the bill of fare, and the several expences of it, printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. x^b; and a much larger and more particular one, printed from the archives in the Bodleian library, and inserted in Leland's Collections, vol. vi, p. 16. In which latter it appears, that the duke of Buckingham sent his secretary and harbingers before him to give notice of his coming, and to have provision for his servants, and seven score horses, according to the composition; after which the duke came into Canterbury, attended by an honorable company with two hundred horses, and were honorably received by the archbishop's officers in the court within the prior's gate, against the south door of the church. The archbishop came into Canterbury on the Sunday morning, March 9, 1504, and was met by the duke with great reverence, and all due apparatus at St. Andrew's church, and there received him honorably; and then he preceded the archbishop with a great multitude of his servants to the great church of the priory of St. Thomas, the archbishop proceeding

ARCHBISHOPRIC.

PRE-EMINENCES, &c. OF

he was constituted by the Pope perpetual or hereditary legate, which was meant to denote that he implicitly derived all his authority from the papal see, and acted in every part of it by virtue of his legatine power only; and although this was then esteemed as a mark of special honour and dignity, yet it was really a diminution of that authority, and a lessening of that prerogative, which of right belonged to the see of Canterbury. But though at the reformation and the abolition of all papal authority within this realm, the title of legate was suppressed, yet by the statute, the archbishop was continued in possession of every power and prerogative which he before enjoyed by virtue of it, not being contrary to the laws of the kingdom.

In consequence of which, the archbishop has continued to this time to confer degrees in the several faculties of law, physic and divinity, the same as conferred by the two universities; which have, without contradiction, been esteemed of equal force and validity, as those conferred there, excepting that they have not been allowed by those learned bodies to take effect within their respective universities (t). Of such high rank and dignity was the archbishop of Canterbury held to be, that all England was in a manner reputed his diocese; the bishop of London was esteemed as his dean in the college of bishops, his office being to summon councils; the bishop of Winton his chancellor; the bishop of Lincoln his vice-chancellor; the bishop of Sarum was his precentor, to begin the service when he was present; the bishop of Worcester was his chaplain, and Rocheſter was his cross-bearer; and he contended strenuously for the same obedience from the archbishop of York, as he himself paid to the see of Rome (u).

His title is, Primate and Metropolitan of all England, and he styles himself Providentia Divina Cantuar. Archiepiscopus; whereas other bishops write permissione divina. As in general councils, the archbishop was placed before all other archbishops, a favour conferred on him by Pope Leo X (v), so in the parliament and all other assemblies and conferences of council, he has

(t) In the 25th year of K. Henry VIII. stat. cap. 21, it was enacted, that all licences and dispensations not repugnant to the law of God, which before were sued for in the court of Rome, should be hereafter granted to the archbishop of Canterbury and his successors; and in the 1st year of Q. Elizabeth stat. cap. 2, it was likewise enacted, that by the advice of the metropolitan, the Queen, or the ecclesiastical commissioners, might publish such rights and ceremonies as would be most for the advantage of God's glory.

(u) See Selden's Titles of Honor, p. 224. Parker's Antiq. of British Church, p. 20.

(v) Lambarde, p. 80, says, that before archbishop Anselm's time, the archbishop's place in general councils, was next to the bishop of St. Rufine. See Chronol. Ang. Cant. col. 2245, anno 1056; but that archbishop Anselm in 1099, in recompence for his services to the holy see, was by pope Urban preferred to the honor of sitting, he and his successors, in those councils at the pope's right foot, who at the same time added, Includemus hunc in orbe nostro tanquam alterius orbis Papam.

now the precedence next the royal family, as first peer of the realm (w), and he has the privilege of qualifying eight chaplains, whereas a Duke can qualify but six. He is always of the King's privy council, and it being necessary to consult him on most great and important occasions, especially in which the church is concerned; he is frequently summoned to be present among the King's confidential ministers who compose the cabinet of state, and as archbishop, he is constantly chosen a president of the corporation of the sons of the clergy, a governor of the Charter-house, a trustee of the British museum, &c. &c.

Among the rights and privileges formerly belonging to this see, was that of the right of patronage of the bishopric of Rocheſter, and whenever that see was vacant, the administration and custody of the temporalities, as well as spiritualities devolved on the archbishop, and the nomination of another bishop belonged to him. The temporalities likewise were restored to the bishop elect, and confirmed to him, he doing the same homage to the archbishop as other bishops did to the King on the like occasions, and this right they derived by custom from the time of archbishop Lanfranc, and which was allowed to them by the charters of several Kings, and confirmed by the bulls of Popes Alexander III, and Honorius III, still extant among the archives of this church (x).

Another right claimed by the metropolitan of the see of Canterbury, was that of performing the sacred and honourable office of anointing the Kings and Queens of this realm; of putting the royal crowns on their heads, and of administering to them the coronation oath. Eadmer reports (y) a singular instance of the archbishops claim to this right; he says, when K. Henry I. came with his royal bride to be married, wearing the crown upon his head, archbishop Ralph, or Rodolph, refused to celebrate the nuptial solemnities, until he had expostulated with the King (who was then in the 21st year of his reign) for having had the crown placed upon his head by any other than the archbishop of Canterbury, to whom alone

cessors, in those councils at the pope's right foot, who at the same time added, Includemus hunc in orbe nostro tanquam alterius orbis Papam.

(w) This was decreed and confirmed, by a statute made anno 31 Henry VIII. cap. 10, intitled, How lords in parliament shall be placed. By this statute, the King's vice-gerent in ecclesiastical matters, is seated in the first place, and then follows. It is also enacted, that next to the said vice-gerent shall sit, the archbishop of Canterbury; and then next to him on that form and side shall sit, the archbishop of York; and next to him on the same form and side, the bishop of London, &c.

(x) Antiq. Brit. Eccl. Gervas, in Decem. Script. col. 1362. Ang. Sacra. vol. i, p. 358, 343, 386.

(y) Hist. Nov. p. 137; and Gervas, in Decem. Script. col. 1661, repeats the same from Eadmer, word for word.

that

ARCHEBISHOPRIC.

REVENUES OF.

that office belonged; for the King, archbishop Anselm, being then banished, had been crowned by the bishop of London, upon his accession to the throne. Having thus expostulated, he took the crown from off the King's head, and after some pause, as if he kept it awhile in his own possession, at the earnest request and petition of the people present, he with uplifted hands placed it on again; and so this act passed for the new crowning of the King, by the hands of the archbishop, to continue the antient right and custom to the see of Canterbury.

The right to this office was confirmed to the archbishop by a bull of Pope Alexander III. (z). When K. Edward II. began his reign, archbishop Winchelsea was then suspended by the papal authority at the request of K. Edward I, and the Pope directed a commission to the archbishop of York, to anoint and crown the new King; but the King wrote to the Pope that he was then reconciled to the archbishop, and desired that the suspension might be taken off, and that he might be restored to the execution of his archiepiscopal offices, one of which was to crown the Kings of England, and therein he purposed to make use of him in a short time; upon which it was taken off, the commission to the archbishop of York was revoked, and the archbishop of Canterbury sent one in his own right to the bishop of Winchester, to celebrate that office, in case he himself could not return soon enough into England to perform it.

In the annals of our English histories, it appears, that at the marriage of the Kings of England, the archbishops of Canterbury, for the most part solemnized the marriage rights and ceremonies, and exercised the sacerdotal function of blessing the nuptials, and this office they laid claim to, as of right belonging to their see; for when K. Henry I. was to be married at Windsor, the bishop of Sarum, within whose diocese that castle stands, asserted that right, of his own and proper jurisdiction within that place, and offered to interpose at that solemnity; but all the nobility cried out, that that office belonged to the archbishop of Canterbury, whose peculiar and special parishioners the King and Queen were, and whose primacy was extended over the whole island, and accordingly archbishop Ralph or Rodulph, solemnized the marriage himself (a).

(z) Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant.

(a) Eadmer writes as if the archbishop did it by proxy, because he framed a commission, that in case he should be unable, through bodily infirmity to execute that office of himself, the bishop of Winchester should be deputed to it in his stead, designedly to cut off all the pretensions of the bishop of Sarum.

(b) Eadmer Hist. Nov. p. 136, 137. Gervas, in Dec. Script. col. 1661.

(c) Regist. Eccl. Christi.

(d) Eadmer and Gervas, Antiq. Brit.

(e) As one instance out of the many that might be mentioned, it appears, that at the christening of the new born prince, in the 5th year of K. Henry VII. on the morn of St. Andrew's day, the rich font of Canterbury and the Westminster church gear were prepared, as of old time had been accustomed for King's children in the church of Westminster, where she was christened by John Alcock, bishop of Ely; John Manton, archbishop of Canterbury and chancellor of England, being god-father; the prince's being named Margaret, after the King's mother. See Varia Opuscula, inserted in Leland's Collection, vol. iv, p. 253.

Mr. Somner has mentioned the record of King Edward I.'s marriage, solemnized by archbishop Winchelsea in this church, after which there were several pretences of claim made for the cloth of estate, which was used at that solemnity; the archbishop demanded it as his fee, in right of his executing that office; the prior of the church laid claim to it in right of the mother church, in which no one received any such fee but the church itself, which was the mother of all the churches and chapels that were within the province of Canterbury (b); the archbishop's cross-bearer and the King's chaplains likewise put in their claim; upon which the King ordered the cloth to be delivered to the Earl of Lincoln, as an indifferent person, to be kept by him, till the matter should be ascertained to whom it of right belonged (c). This privilege of crowning, marrying, and christening the Kings and royal family of England, is still exercised by the archbishops of Canterbury (d).

The monks of Christ church have recorded, that the King and Queen are the speciales domestici parochiani, the peculiar parishioners of the archbishop (e), who was ordinary of the court of the King's household, wherever it was kept, and it may be added, he had antiently the holy offerings made at the altar by the King and Queen, wherever the court should happen to be, if the archbishop was there present.

The confirmation of all the comprovincial bishops of the province of Canterbury, abbats likewise, and priors and the consecration of those bishops; the absolution of the obedientiaries of the monastery of Christ church, and the nomination of new obedientiaries, and many other such like privileges belonging likewise to the archbishop; and lastly

The archbishop had the right of summoning the bishops and clergy of his province to appear before him in convocation; in which assembly he presides personally, or by his commissary.

OF THE REVENUES OF THE ARCHBISHOPRIC.

THE revenues of the archbishopric ought not to be passed by in silence. They were antiently very large, sufficient to maintain the honourable state in which the archbishop always appeared suitable to his high dignity and station in the church; the several manors which formerly belonged

ARCHDEACONRY,

longed to the see, are recorded in Domesday, and are mentioned in the description of the several parishes in which they lay, throughout the course of the history of Kent (f). There is an antient taxation of the temporalities and spiritualities of it, in the Black Book of the archdeacon of Canterbury, in which it appears, the sum total of the taxation of these manors within this county, was 1499l. 15s. 8d. (g) and in the dioceses of Chichester, Winchester and in London and Middlesex, 549l. 15s. 11d. of his spirituals 200l. making in all the sum of 2249l. 11s. 8d. (b) a great income in those days, and increasing in value yearly. The present taxation of the revenues of the archbishopric is, 2682l. 12s. 2d. according to Ecton, notwithstanding the many possessions taken from it (i). The rich and noble manors, together with many stately castles and palaces appurtenant to them belonging to the archbishopric, which composed the above revenue could not but raise the envy of the hungry courtiers in those reigns of ecclesiastical plunder under Hen. VIII, Edward VI, and Elizabeth; when, under the colour of reformation, this archbishopric was stripped of its most valuable possessions, which were seized on, exchanged and alienated as were thought proper, especially such as appeared to continue to the metropolitan that state of power and grandeur, which it was determined he should be deprived of.

These grants and exchanges are mentioned throughout the course of the above History, and therefore need not be repeated here; it is sufficient to say, they were very many and made at different times. In this critical juncture, archbishop Cranmer, in the two former reigns, is said to have done all in his power, and that appears to have been very little indeed to preserve the revenues of his see, and that he procured the best exchanges and bargains that he could at that time; but all his efforts were in vain, all the exchanges made were greatly to his disadvantage, as much as if he had given gold and received brags for it in return. Strype, in his life of archbishop (f) In K. Henry II.'s reign, the archbishop of Canterbury was charged with threescore knights fees, which he owned, and nineteen more which he disowned. Madox's History of the Exchequer, p. 439.

(g) These manors were those of Westgate with its members, Westhalimot, Bishopborn, Dale, Saltwood, Tenham, Aldington, Maidstone, Bexley, Wrotham, Reculver, Wingham, Petham and Waltham, Liming, Boften, Northfleet, Cherring, Orford and Gillingham.

(h) Battely's appendix, No. xi^a. Thorn, col. 2163, says, the archbishop's temporalities were—in Kent, 1355l. 8s. 1d.—In the diocese of Chichester, 354l. 0s. 12 ob.—In the diocese of Winchester, 65l.—In the diocese of London, and in Middlesex, 130l. 15s. The total of the whole taxation of his spirituals and temporals, 2005l. 4s. 1d. ob. The taxation of the archbishopric to the see of Rome, was 10,000 florins of gold. See Harlean Mss. No. 1850-13.

ORIGIN OF.

Cranmer, has given a full account of these proceedings, and in the Augmentation Office, the deeds of them are numerous; I shall only observe in general, that those revenues which were settled upon the archbishopric, in lieu of what it was deprived chiefly consisted of lands or of tythes and appropriations, taken from the late dissolved religious houses, and even these lands when they were suspected to turn out more valuable than was intended, were often taken away again, and others of inferior value were settled in lieu of them, at the King's pleasure; and this arbitrary traffic was continued in the beginning of the reign of Q. Eliz. whilst archbishop Parker remained in this see (k), and had not an act passed on K. James's accession to the crown, which disabled the archbishops and bishops of this realm from alienating any of the revenues and possessions of their bishoprics in future, long before this time, in all probability, they would have been stripped of every valuable possession belonging to them; but although the see of Canterbury was by the above-mentioned means, bereaved of almost all its most desirable estates, yet it has now, by the increase in the value of lands, and other things from which the income of it arises, become a large and handsome revenue, being estimated at the yearly value, coits annis, of 10,000l. besides other casual advantages and emoluments arising from the several patent and other offices in the archbishop's gift and nomination.

OF THE ARCHDEACONRY OF CANTERBURY.

THAT there were archdeacons of this church long before the Norman conquest, contrary to the opinion of Sommer and others (l), Mr. Battely has plainly shewed in opposition to the manuscript, commonly called the Black Book of the Archdeacon, which had been before in general received as an incontrovertible evidence of the original of this archdeaconry (m), but this record loses great part of its infallibility, when it is con-

(i) Tanner, p. 195, says, the old value of the archbishopric, is said to have been, 3233l. 18s. 8d.

(k) Q. Elizabeth, in her 3d year in particular took away many manors and lands from archbishop Parker; in recompence for which, she, directing the whole of the exchange at her pleasure, granted to him several rectories, or impropriate parsonages, tythes, tenths, and annual rents of money, most of which had belonged to the late dissolved monasteries, amounting in the whole, to the sum of 1284l. 17s. 13d. nor was this the last bad bargain she forced on the archbishop. See several of the exchanges, among Harleian Mss. No. 6839-62-63. It appears that in archbishop Parker's time, the revenue of this see was, in rents 3128l. fines, &c. 300l. Total, 3420l. yearly income.

(l) Battely's Sommer, p. 150. Parkeri Antiq. Britan. in vita Lanfranci. (m) See Battely, pt. 2, p. 129; Appendix, No. xxv. Ang. Sacra. p. i, p. 150.

sidered

ARCHDEACONRY,

ORIGIN OF.

sidered that it seems to have been framed by the monks designedly for their own purposes, and that it was evidently compiled after the year 1313, that is, after the death of archbishop Winchelsea (n).

Concerning the first institution of archdeacons in the church of Canterbury, I find no mention in any history or record. This seems to be a proof of its greater antiquity, and its having been the general practice and custom of the Christian church, before even the archiepiscopal see was erected in Canterbury, and it had been the universal practice in both the eastern and western churches, where Christianity was embraced, to appoint archdeacons in great or cathedral churches; but how or when they were instituted, does not appear. In the church of Canterbury, the first archdeacon that we read of, is Wifrid, whom we find subscribing to the acts of a council, and after him others are named in the records of this church and by historians, where they found occasion to mention them in the matters they treated of.

Upon the replanting of the Christian faith in Kent, the clergy seem not long afterwards to have become numerous, in consequence of which, the archbishop of Canterbury, after the example of other bishops in the Christian church, seems to have appointed his archdeacon also (o).

The manuscript above-mentioned, called the Black Book, in the possession of the archdeacon, records the several privileges and rights relating particularly to the jurisdiction of the archdeaconry, all of which, excepting the last, are such as belong to archdeacons in general; some of those however have not escaped without exceptions and controversy, one of them is taken away and another is lost (p).

These privileges were, a right to hear and determine causes belonging to their courts, &c. the correction of delinquents, the creating and appointing officials, deans of Christianity, as they are called, apparitors, &c. a right concerning the proving of wills within the archdeaconry, granting letters of administration, &c. and concerning the disposing of the goods and chattels of persons dying intestate (q). A right of visiting parochial churches, clergy, &c. of receiving procurations and proceeding canonically against the disobedient (r); a right to visit and take a view of all churches, vestments, ornaments and utensils belonging to any churches within his archdeaconry, and to see they are kept clean and in repair, &c. a right to provide for all ecclesiastical benefices during their vacancy, and to collect, receive and dispose at pleasure of all the profits belonging to such, within his archdeaconry, for so long time as they remained vacant (s). This was a profitable privilege to archdeacons, and the bishops in many places laid hold of it, insomuch as to give occasion for strife and afforded opportunities of several abuses, for the redress of which some ecclesiastical canons were framed both at home and abroad, and several decrees concerning it were made, in subsequent synods held at different places (t). At last, by an act of parliament, anno 28 Henry VIII, c. 12. in the preamble of which, the abuses which were occasioned by this privilege are recited, the profits of all ecclesiastical benefices during such time as they had no incumbent, were settled for ever on the next incumbent, any usage or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

The right of the induction of rectors and vicars into their benefices; a right of proceeding against excommunicated persons, &c. the examination of such as were to be presented to the archbishop, to be admitted into holy orders; and lastly a right to receive every year, two great trees from the archbishop's wood, called Eriet, near Dodington, and to convert and dispose of them to his own use (u).

There must be added to these privileges of immediate subjection to the pope himself. The archbishop and archdeacon concluded this controversy with that convent, by a composition, dated anno 1237, which is printed at large, in Thorn, col. 1882.

(i) The abbat and convent of St. Augustine compounded likewise with the archdeacon, for an exemption from this privilege.

(t) The archdeacons of Canterbury appear to have a most undoubted right to this privilege from antient custom, and this right continued to them, after the constitution of Othobon, made anno 1240; for upon founding the college of Wye, to which the parochial church of it, within this archdeaconry was annexed, the first provost of that college compounded with the archdeacon, among other things, for the profits which should arise in the time of the vacancy of that church. The composition for which makes mention of several rights belonging to the archdeacon, and is inserted in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxvii.

(u) Battely, pt. 2, p. 142.

(n) Battely, pt. 2, p. 130. (o) Ib. p. 133. (p) Ib. p. 141.

(q) A sharp controversy continued a long time, between the archbishops and archdeacons of Canterbury, concerning some matters contained in the last-mentioned privileges; but a final agreement was concluded between archbishop Thomas Arundel and Thomas Clifford, archdeacon; and a tripartite composition was drawn up in form, sealed by the archbishop in his palace, by the prior and convent, and by the archdeacon in the chapter-house, on March 26, 1397; which was afterwards confirmed by pope Eugenius, at the instance and suit of Thomas Chicheley. See this composition, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxvi.

(r) The abbat and convent of St. Augustine contended with the archdeacons for an exemption of certain churches belonging to that monastery from their jurisdiction; and this is not strange, since the former had procured of the popes bulls of privileges, by which they became exempt from the jurisdiction of the archbishop, and from all subjection and obedience to him, and had put themselves under the archdeacon of Canterbury, the super-eminent one, peculiar to him alone, namely of installing all the suffragan bishops of the province; a right which has never but once been called in question, which was by the dean and chapter of Lincoln, and that was soon yielded up. This solemnity was antiently celebrated personally by the archdeacon, and not by his letters of deputation, and in his Black Book there is described, after what manner and with what ceremonies it was performed, and the fees which appertained to it (v).

ARCHDEACONRY,

The convent of this church would not allow him, being a secular, a stall in their chapter-house, owing to the rules of their order, which forbid all seculars to intermeddle in the chapters of the religious; as such, he could not be admitted there, except upon extraordinary occasions, such as being called on by the convent for his advice, or when he attended upon the archbishop, or upon some special duty, and least these occasions should create a pretence of right of having a stall among the religious, archbishop Theobald, most probably, at the instance of the convent, framed a constitution, by which the archdeacon and all other seculars were prohibited from intermeddling with the concerns of the chapter, that is, as of his own right, and he was to have his place at the foot of the archbishop's chair, and this was afterwards confirmed by Pope Innocent's bull, dated anno 1200 (w).

Mention has been made above of the archdeacon's coming to church upon special duties, one of those times was upon Thursday in the Great or Holy Week, as it was antiently called, for upon that day it was the old custom to reconcile penitents, which was done with great solemnities, and the archdeacon bore a considerable part therein. Mr. Battely has given an account of the process of this branch of ecclesiastical discipline (x); this is not taken notice of as an office peculiar to the archdeacon of Canterbury, for the same solemnities were observed in other

(v) See Battely, pt. 2, No. xxviii^a. These fees were antiently, the bishop's palfry and saddle, with the appurtenances; his riding coat, hat, and boots; hay and provender for fifteen horses, so long as he tarried upon account of performing the intronization; meat, drink and wine; two large tapers of wax, for the whole time of his stay; two small tapers every night, and twenty-four wax candles; the bishop's silver cup with which he was served at the table on the day of his intronization; the bed likewise of the bishop was demanded, and ten marks sterling. On that day a table on the right side of the hall was furnished, for the archdeacon, at which, none were to sit, but such as were invited by himself, to dine with him; to which may be added, that at the installation of the abbat of Faversham, the archdeacon's fees were, the abbat's palfry, meat and drink for two nights and one day for himself, and ten others, who should come along with him, at the expence of the abbat. At the instalments of the priors of Leeds, Cumbwell, Bilfington,

ORIGIN OF.

cathedrals when this ecclesiastical discipline was observed. At this time, to keep up some kind of remembrance of the archdeacon's duty to attend on that day, usually called Holy Thursday, or Ascension Day, in this church; he sits during the morning service in his own seat in it, adjoining the archbishop's throne eastward, and afterwards preaches a sermon, the only time he appears at service in this church as archdeacon, during the whole year.

There are some causes however, which are reserved to be heard and determined in the archbishop's court, in which the archdeacon or his official are not to intermeddle, and there are within this archdeaconry, twenty-six churches, immediately subject to the archbishop, and visited by him or his commissary, which being exempted from the jurisdiction of the archdeacon, are commonly called the exempts (y).

The whole diocese of Canterbury has but one archdeacon, whose jurisdiction, except as to the above-mentioned exempt churches, extends over the whole of it (z). It is valued in the King's books at 163l. and 21d. (a).

The ceremony of his induction into the archdeaconry, was celebrated antiently by a mandate directed to the vicars of Tenham, Lymne, &c. that is, to any vicars of the churches belonging to his archdeaconry, and his induction was into one of those churches, for he had no stall then in the cathedral, nor till after the dissolution of the priory. Bernard de Eci, was inducted into the archdeaconry by authority of a papal bull directed to the bishop of Litchfield and Coventry and the abbats of St. Augustine and Walbam. At this time the solemnity is performed by one of the prebendaries or canons of this church, by placing him in his stall above-mentioned, being the proper place assigned to him.

The archdeacon is impropriator and patron of the vicarages or curacies of the several churches and chapels of St. Stephen's, alias Hackington, Tenham, Linsted, Dodington, Iwade, Stone, Limne, and Folkestone, the archdeacon received nothing, but an entertainment in meat and drink for two nights and one day. See Battely, appendix, No. xxviii^b. See Biog. Brit. vol. vii; Supplement, p. 207 [D].

(v) Batt. Somn. pt. 1, append. No. lviii, pt. 2, p. 144.

(x) Battely's Somner, pt. 2, p. 144, append. No. xxx.

(y) These excepted causes, and a list of the exempt churches, (which latter may be found likewise, in the history of Kent, under their proper heads), is inserted from the archdeacon's black book, in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxix.

(z) There was once a design of dividing this one into three archdeaconries, by archbishop Richard, who in the year 1176, constituted three archdeacons, which was censured as a novelty contrary to the practice of former archbishops; but this project soon vanished, and we hear no more after this, of more than one archdeacon at a time, in this diocese. See Matthew Paris. Rad. de Diceto. Ang. Sacra. p. ii, p. 692. (a) Weever, p. 186.

Westbythe,

ARCHDEACONS,

Wesbyrthe, St. Mary's and St. Clement's in Sandwiche, Stodmarsh and St. Margaret's in Canterbury. The antient taxation of the archdeaconry was, of the churches belonging to it 180l. uncertain profits of it 20l. the total sum 200l. (b) It is computed to be of nearly the value of 400l. per ann. income.

ARCHDEACONS OF CANTERBURY.

1. WLFRIID, is the first archdeacon of Canterbury, whose name is found in any chronicle or record, the names of all his predecessors, as well as some of his successors, are lost. He seems to have been once a monk of this church; in the record of a council convened by archbishop Athelard, at Baccancelde, now perhaps Bapebild, among the subscriptions, as they are printed in the Decem Scriptores, among the Evidences of Christchurch (c). Wlfrid, archdeacon, subscribed among the bishops, anno 798, and afterwards in a synod at Cloveshoe, anno 803; Wlfrid, archdeacon, subscribed with the rest, the record of which council in Saxon characters, remains among the archives of this church, and to shew that Wlfrid was archdeacon of Canterbury, which is not specified in either of these subscriptions; among the old writings of this church, there is in the like characters, a charter of archbishop Athelard, concerning the manor of Burne, dated anno 805, indit 13, to which Wlfrid, archdeacon of Canterbury, is a subscribing witness. The archbishop died the same year, and Wlfrid seems to have succeeded him in the archiepiscopal chair (d).

2. BEORNOTH, anno 844, whose name in the subscriptions to a charter of K. Ethelred, is set before divers dukes (e).

3. ATHELWEALD, anno 853.

4. EALSTAN, anno 864.

5. SIGEFRETH, anno 866.

6. LIÆVING, anno 866; all these five archdeacons were, during the time in which Ceolnoth filled the archiepiscopal chair, which was a space of much trouble and confusion, on account of the Danish pirates, who then infested these coasts, assaulting the suburbs, and knocking at the very gates of the city of Canterbury, until they had a large sum of money given them to be gone, and at the same time there was a pestilence within the walls of the monastery (f).

7. WERBEALD, anno 890.

8. BRINSTAN, about 1006; here is a long

(b) Thorn, col. 2165.

(c) Col. 2212.

(d) Batt. Somn. pt. 2, p. 146. (e) Ibid. pt. 1, p. 152.

(f) Gervas, col. 1643. Batt. Som. p. 152, pt. 2, p. 146.

(g) Leland calls him, the archdeacon of Elphage, whose burial place is said to have been in the north porch of the church of the monastery of St. Augustine, in Canterbury. It should seem more probable from the place of his burial, that though perhaps Elphage might have constituted him space of time unnoticed between this archdeacon and the former one, named before him, most probably upwards of 100 years, and there has been nothing met with to fill it up.

LIST OF.

9. ALMERIC or ALMER, who is supposed to have been the man, who infamously betrayed this city when it was besieged by the Danes in the year 1011(g), as the story is told at large in the Saxon Chronicle, and afterwards by H. Huntingdon, R. Hoveden, W. Thorn, and others, whilst others have been inclined to impute this treachery to Elmar, at that time abbat of St. Augustine's, who was suffered to escape safe out of the hands of the Danes, and his monastery to remain untouched as the reward of it (b).

10. HAIMO is the next archdeacon, mentioned as such; he lived in 1054, as we are informed from Boston, monk of St. Edmundsbury, and he may reasonably be supposed to have been cotemporary with Godwin, the last bishop of St. Martin's, who died seven years after this time, and had been probably constituted bishop, anno 1052. It is certain, that at the death of archbishop Elphage, there was no archdeacon of Canterbury; there were continual confusions in these parts, through the continual ravages made by the insulting Danes, the metropolitcal church lay desolate, and in ruins. Archbishop Livinge, who succeeded Elphage, after seven years imprisonment, went beyond sea into a voluntary exile, there to bewail in secret the desolations of the church, which he could not repair; during which calamities, we cannot expect to hear of an archdeacon.

Haimo, abovementioned, stands upon record as eminent for his learning and goodness, as Almar was infamous for his treachery and ingratitude; we are beholden to Bale and Pits for what we know of him; they tell us, that he was born in England of good parentage, brought up to study from his childhood, but this nation being at this time filled with tumults and disturbances, he retired into France, and became a monk at St. Denis, and reader of divinity at Paris; as soon as the affairs of England were settled in quietness, he returned and was constituted archdeacon of Canterbury, and grew into high esteem for his excellent preaching. He wrote several books, of which his Commentary on Genesis, was in the library of Lincoln college in Oxford; he died at Canterbury on October 9, but in what year, is no where recorded. With this archdeacon ended the anti-Norman ones (i).

archdeacon, whilst bishop of Winchester, yet that he retained him in that office, whilst he was archbishop.

(b) Battely, pt. 2, p. 146. See above, in the life of archbishop Elphage.

(i) Edsin stands next, in Mr. Somner's list of archdeacons, but it is upon a supposition, that every bishop of St. Martin's was likewise archdeacon, a notion which Mr. Battely, has controverted with strong probability. Battely, pt. 2, p. 148.

VALERIUS,

ARCHDEACONS,

11. VALERIUS, of whom there is mention in a record concerning the right of provincial and diocesan jurisdiction in the vacancy of the see; it tells us, that archbishop Lanfranc constituted him archdeacon, and gave him and his successors a small tenement near the priory of St. Gregory, without the north gate of the city (ii).

12. ANSCHITILLUS probably succeeded him. He is mentioned in the survey of Domesday, taken anno 1070, by the name of Anschitil Archidiacon, as holding lands in Deal, which had before been held by archbishop Stigand, and other land there, and at St. Margaret's, given to him by the bishop of Baieux. He subscribed, as such, to the decrees of a provincial council in 1075, immediately after the bishops and before the abbats.

13. WILLIAM was archdeacon in 1101, in which year he was sent by archbishop Anselm, to make enquiries whether Maud, daughter of Malcolm, K. of Scots, who was intended to be given in marriage to K. Henry I. was a professed nun; and afterwards, in 1108, he was sent by that archbishop, on his behalf, to invest Ralph, the next successor to Gundulph, and put him in possession of the bishopric of Rochester (k). Anselm having bestowed it on him; there are three letters of the archbishop's to him, as archdeacon, one of which is concerning priest's marriages, mentioned in the acts and monuments. This William was one of the witnesses to Anselm's charter, when he gave the manor of Stisted to this church (l).

14. JOHN, nephew (sister's son) to archbishop Ralph, was constituted archdeacon in June 1115, on his return from Rome, whither he had been sent with others to bring back the pall to the archbishop, which he delivered to him at Canterbury, on June 27, 1115, many bishops, abbats, noblemen and others being present at the solemnity of receiving and putting it on, at which time the bishops made it their request, and the monks declared their approbation, that this John should be constituted archdeacon; upon which he was nominated and admitted by the archbishop in the chapter-house, and took the oath of obedience there, to the metropolitan church of Canterbury (m). In 1119, he was sent by the archbishop to the council at Rhemes, to with-

(ii) It is said that Lanfranc repented his constituting an archdeacon, instead of a bishop of St. Martin's, which is not a thing to be credited, for the archbishop was a man of great spirit, and not apt to be troubled upon slight occasions. He was prudent, and therefore, not likely to do any thing he should afterwards repent of. If he was displeas'd with the archdeacon or archdeaconry, he could as easily alter the constitution, or remove the person at his pleasure, as he is said to have appointed either of them; and instead of repenting, we soon find an archdeacon of Canterbury, in his days, acting in the same station as his successor. Battely, pt. 2, p. 148.

(k) Eadmer Hist. Nov. lib. iii, p. 57, 98. Somner, p. 153.

LIST OF.

stand the consecration of Thurstan, archbishop of York, at the Pope's hands, archbishop Ralph having rejected him, on account of his having refused to make profession of obedience to the church of Canterbury (n).

On the archbishop's death, William Corboil being elected archbishop, went to Rome for his pall, attended by this archdeacon and others; upon the death of Ernulph, bishop of Rochester, the archdeacon was promoted to that see, and consecrated by the archbishop on May 24, anno 1125 (o).

Eadmer says, he was a man of a good conversation, and courteous towards all.

15. ASKETIN, whose name, as archdeacon, is in an antient charter of this church (p).

16. WILLIAM, the second archdeacon of that name; he is mentioned as such in a charter of archbishop Theobald, relating to the archdeaconry of this church, in which the succession of archdeacons before his time is thus given, viz. Asketin, William, Helwise (q).

17. HELWISE was a regular canon, and promoted to this archdeaconry by archbishop William Corboil, who had a particular regard to those canons, of which he himself had been one in 1134. He was sent by the archbishop, together with the bishops of St. David's and Rochester, to put the monks of Dover in possession of their new monastery, built for them by that archbishop; but those of Christ church appealing to the see of Rome, they returned without effecting their purpose. In the year 1138, this archdeacon was summoned to a legantine synod, convened at Westminster by Alberic the Pope's legate (r).

18. WALTER, the next archdeacon, was brother to archbishop Theobald, and was witness to his charter for the induction of canons into St. Mary's church in Dover, which was confirmed by Pope Innocent in 1138. Upon the death of Afcelin, bishop of Rochester, Walter was elected by the monks of Rochester, in the chapter-house at Canterbury, in the presence and at the nomination of the archbishop, to succeed in that see; which election was made in January, in the beginning of the year 1148 (s).

19. ROGER DE BISHOPSBIDGE, or de Ponte Episcopi, succeeded him as archdeacon, and within

(l) Among the archives of Christ church.

(m) Eadmer Hist. Nov. lib. v, p. 114. Ang. Sacra. p. i, p. 109, 800. Gervas, col. 1662.

(n) Eadmer Hist. Nov. lib. v, p. 114. Battely's Somner, p. 153. See M. Paris. Malmibury. Ang. Sacra. p. i, p. 70; and Saxon Chron. anno MCCCXIII.

(o) Hoveden; Rad. de Diceto, &c. Bromton, col. 1015. Ang. Sacra. p. i, p. 343. Battely, pt. 2, p. 149.

(p) Battely, pt. 2, p. 149.

(q) See Battely, pt. 1, appendix, No. lviii.

(r) Textus Roffensis. Gervas, col. 1341, 1346.

(s) Gervas, col. 1362. Antiq. Brit. vita Theobald. Godwin. Catei in Walter.

ARCHDEACONS,

a few years after, being advanced to the archbishopric of York, he was consecrated at Westminster by archbishop Theobald, in October 1154 (t). Whilst he was archdeacon, as he was one who did not favour the monks of his time, he proved himself very offensive and troublesome to those of Christ church, by intruding himself among them into their chapter and assemblies, as one of their society; being a secular, the monks could by no means submit to this, but addressed themselves to the archbishop for remedy, from whom they procured letters of inhibition to this purpose in future (u).

20. THOMAS BECKET, so noted in the histories of this time, was next preferred to this archdeaconry, by archbishop Theobald, who had sent him into Italy, to study the civil law, and at his return, having conceived a good opinion of his excellent parts, heaped many rich preferments on him, and among them this archdeaconry. At the archbishop's instance, the King made him chancellor of England, and on the archbishop's death, he was advanced to the metropolitan chair of Canterbury (v), and not long afterwards resigned this archdeaconry.

21. GEOFFRY RIDDELL succeeded next to it, on the resignation of Bec et, who would not, however, lay it down for some time after he was made archbishop, though the King importunately desired him to give it up, which he at last did, and at the King's most earnest request conferred it on Geoffry Ridell (w), who afterwards became a chief favourite with the King, (being constituted by him one of the Barons of the Exchequer (x), whose part he constantly took against the archbishop, and in 1169 was sent by him into France, to solicit, that the archbishop should not be permitted to remain in that kingdom, to which he had then withdrawn himself from hence.

He was soon afterwards excommunicated by the archbishop, who in a letter to the bishop of Hereford, advertized him of it, and calls this archdeacon in it, both arch-devil and a limb of Anti-Christ. In 1173, K. Henry, at the instance of the cardinals Albert and Theodin, having granted that there should be free elections in the church

(t) Stephen Birchington. Rad. de Diceto, 510, 529. Imeg. Hist. col. 529. Gervas, col. 1376. Battely, pt. 2, p. 150.

(u) Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 154, appendix, No. lviii.

(v) Battely, pt. 2, p. 150.

(w) R. de Diceto, col. 511, 534.

(x) See Madox's Exchequer, p. 741, 743.

(y) M. Paris. Hoveden. Epist. Thomæ de Vitandis Excommunicatis. Battely, pt. 2, p. 150.

(yy) R. de Diceto, col. 588.

(z) See this grant to the archdeacon of Canterbury, in Battely's Somner, appendix, No. lix. This charter is tran-

LIST OF.

of England, there were five archdeacons promoted to five bishoprics then vacant, one of which was this Geoffry, archdeacon of Canterbury, who was elected by the convent of Ely to that see; but being accused as accessary to the death of Thomas Becket, he made his protestation in the chapel of St. Catherine, in Westminster, that he was innocent of that murder, and was no ways accessary thereto, by word, deed, or writing, wittingly or knowingly (y).

22. HERBERT, or Herebert, was archdeacon at the time when archbishop Richard constituted three archdeacons to his diocese, which usually had but one before; their names were Savaricus, Nicolaus and Herebertus; but this innovation held but a short time, the three being in the same archbishop's time reduced to one again (yy), namely, this Herbert, to whom the archbishop made a personal grant of jurisdiction, much like that concerning which the archbishop of York and the archdeacon of Richmond differed about the same time (z).

Herbert continued in this archdeaconry till he was elected bishop of Salisbury in 1193 (a), and was succeed by

23. ROBERT, whom Mr. Somner mentions next in his catalogue of archdeacons; but I know no more of him than his bare name (b).

24. HENRY DE CASTILION was archdeacon in 1199, in which year he installed Savaricus, bishop of Bath, abbat of Glastonbury; his name as archdeacon is subscribed to several charters and other evidences belonging to St. Radigund's Abbey, near Dover, made by archbishop Hubert and others. During his time, in 1202, there happened a great controversy between K. John and the monks of St. Augustine's, concerning the right to the patronage of the church of Faversham; during which, great violence was used by both parties, to oust the other from the possession of the church, by which the profanation of it ensued; upon which this archdeacon challenging right to the custody of the church during the vacancy of it, and interposing, excommunicated the monks for holding the church by force, overthrew the altars as profaned by them, and then interdicted the church; after which, scribed from the archdeacon's black book, where this, and another charter were inserted, by archbishop Parker; and these words in the margin, viz. Concessio Personalis circa annum Domini 1230—were written by that archbishop's own hand, plainly relating to the latter. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 151; and some annotations relating to it, made in the archdeacon's book, by a later hand, in Battely, append. No. xxxii.

(a) R. de Diceto, col. 522, 673. Gervas, col. 1588.

(b) See Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 155. Battely, pt. 2, p. 151; during his time, I find a charter of inspeximus of archbishop Hubert, of land given to St. Radigund's abbey, to which is a witness, Magro Radulf. vice archidiacono.

ARCHDEACONS,

as he was commanded, to a convocation at Ely; his mandate for which is dated at Hackington, on Aug. 4, that year, whilst he profecuted with much warmth at Rome, the suit concerning jurisdiction during the vacancy of the see of Canterbury, which had lain dormant on account of his predecessor's death; he was by papal provision constituted archbishop of Dublin in 1298; upon which

34. JOHN LANGTON succeeded to this archdeaconry in 1299, it being given to him by the Pope, in recompence of his trouble and expence at the court of Rome, in his appeal against the archbishop, who had annulled the election, which the convent of Ely had made of him to be their bishop, at which time he was treasurer to King Edward, chancellor of England (y), and rector of Burwell in that diocese; but Pope Boniface VIII. rejected his appeal, and appointed another to that bishopric (z); he was afterwards, viz. in 1305, made bishop of Chichester, being consecrated by bishop Winchelsea, on the 10th cal. October that year (a).

35. SIMON DE FAVERSHAM has the character of a learned man. He became eminent in philosophy and divinity, which he studied at Oxford, as Bale informs us, from Leland. He was rightfully constituted archdeacon by archbishop Winchelsea on the same day on which his predecessor was consecrated bishop of Chichester, but was soon forced to quit this dignity, and to give place to another, on whom the Pope conferred it by his bull of provision, on,

36. BERNARD DE EYCI, who is written likewise Ecy de Labredo, or de la Breto (b), but perhaps more probably De la Barton, being the son of Aumery de la Barton, of noble rank (c). The Pope's bull of provision for this purpose is dated Nov. 20, 1305; in which bull it is mentioned, that this Bernard had been advanced by papal provision to a prebend in the church of

(y) He was first so constituted in 1293, and a second time in 1307. Annal. Wigorn. Histor. Elien.

(z) Godwin, in the catalogue of the bishops of Ely, Ang. Sacra. p. i, p. 639. Matthew Paris.

(a) Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 158. In 1332, he sent a precious cup to the throne of St. Thomas of Canterbury, by Thomas Searles, his clerk. Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 158.

(b) Prynne, p. 1097, calls him Lebrecto.

(c) See the archdeacon's black book.

(d) It will, says Mr. Battely, p. 154, give some light into the following account of some of the archdeacons, if we here observe, that Raymond Goth, born at Mihandrall, within the diocese of Bordeaux, was first, bishop of Cominges, then archbishop of Bordeaux, and then elected pope. Anno 1305 he sent for the cardinals to come to him at Lyons, where he was inaugurated by the name of pope Clement V. and from this beginning the Roman court was translated from Rome to France, where it continued about seventy years, by this he was guided in his search, after several of the following archdeacons of Canterbury, to look for them in their native soil in some province of France, in parti-

LIST OF.

Bordeaux, and to the tithery of Anderanes, in the diocese of Agen; he was not of age to be canonically admitted into deacons orders, but the same power which heaped these rich benefices on him, dispensed with his infancy, and gave him licence to hold this archdeaconry likewise, without the necessity of being made a deacon, till he came to such years as the canons of the church required. The above-mentioned bull was accompanied with another mandatory one for his induction, which was directed to the bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and to the abbots of St. Augustine's and Waltham (d); he seems to have been deprived of this dignity for being married about 1318 (e).

37. GUTTERDUS LABREDUS, most probably, Le Brito, and therefore of the same province with his predecessor.

38. SIMON CONVENIUS, or DE COMINGES, was archdeacon of Canterbury; he is styled in the papal bull, chaplain of the apostolic see; he died in 1323.

39. JOHN DE BRICTON, treasurer of the church of Wells, rector of Saltwood in this co. the King's chaplain, and the archbishop's chancellor, was, upon the above archdeacon's death, presented to this archdeaconry on April 19, 1323, and admitted to it on Aug. 2, following; but he was soon turned out by a power, which at that time was superior to that of the archbishop, or of the King himself, who both of them submitted to the Pope's bull of provision, though yet not without some struggling; for when the Pope, (John XXII), sent his bull of revocation, namely, to recall the collation of John de Bricton to this archdeaconry, and to confer it upon Raymond, a cardinal of the church of Rome (f); the messengers who brought it were roughly handled, for the archbishop, (Walter Reynolds) caused one of them to be seized, and his letters and writings to be taken from him by force;

cular Britany, Aquitaine, Lemoisin, and Gascony, the country of pope Clement V.

(e) In Rymer's Fœdera, vol. iii, p. 767, there is a letter from the King to the pope, in which he says, that understanding the archdeaconry of Canterbury, which the son of his faithful and well beloved Amanenus, lord of Labret, lately held; and which, on his being married as was reported, had been declared vacant in the court of Rome; he recommended to the pope master Henry de Burghes, whom he had appointed archdeacon in his room, dated at Nich May 10, anno 12 Edward II, 1319; and by another letter to the pope, dated November 2, in his 13th year, the King recommended Henry de Burghes to the bishopric of Winchester; which Henry was nephew to Bartholomew de Badlesmere, steward of his household. Rym. Fœd. ibid.

(f) In Rym. Fœd. vol. iv, p. 48, is the pope's bull, dated anno 1324, in favor of Raymond, cardinal deacon of St. Mary in Cosmedin, whom the pope had made archdeacon of Canterbury, requesting the King, as he had often done by his letters before, to admit the said cardinal into the full and peaceable possession of this dignity.

the

ARCHDEACONS,

the other fearing the like usage, hid himself; notwithstanding which, the Pope at last prevailed, and his provision filled the archdeaconry at this time, which he had made vacant by ousting his predecessor from it violently, by the plenitude of his power (g).

40. RAYMUND de Sta Maria in Cosmedin, deacon cardinal, was the person named in the above-mentioned bull of revocation to succeed to this archdeaconry. He was nephew to Pope Clement V. When he quitted, I have not seen, but the next possessor of this dignity that appears, was

41. HUGH DE ENGOLISME, so called from Angouleme, in the province of Aquitaine, sacrist of the metropolitica church of Narbonne in Languedoc. He was sent into England in 1324, as envoy from the Pope and the apostolic see; he was archdeacon in 1327, at which time he received the Peter pence, collected in the diocese of Wells (b). There is a letter extant to him as archdeacon, dated August 16, 1328, from John, bishop of Exeter, who in it denied to pay the fees of his intronization, to which the archdeacon replied, that he would assert and defend his rights; on December 20, that year, he requested leave to return to the court of Rome, which was at that time in his own country, France, pretending bodily infirmities and sickness (i). His successor was

42. ROBERT STRATFORD, born at Stratford upon Avon, to which place he became a benefactor, by obtaining of K. Edward III. in his 5th year, anno 1332, a charter of liberties for that town. He was canon of the church of Lincoln, and had procuratorial letters from the prior of Christ church, to appear in his stead in parliament at York; in these letters, he is called the archbishop's brother, John Stratford being then archbishop of Canterbury elect, and confirmed; and on October 9, 1334, being then archdeacon, he was present at his intronization (k).

Among the archives of the Consistory Court of Canterbury, there is a plea of his, consisting of many articles, and containing in the first place a particular of all the rights and pleas of his archdeaconry; after which follows a suggestion of certain grievances offered to him and it, by the commissary of Canterbury, put up against him to his brother the archbishop, but with what success I know not (l). He was elected bishop of Chichester in 1337, and was consecrated on St. Andrew's day that year, succeeding in it John Langton, one of his predecessors in the archdeaconry; after which he executed the great offices of chancellor of the exchequer, chancellor of England, to which he had two appointments, viz. in the 11th and 14th years of K. Edward III, keeper of the great seal (m), and chancellor of Oxford; in 1338 (n) he was constituted commissary to the archbishop, who was then beyond sea; not long after which he seems to have resigned this archdeaconry, having kept it near two years after he had been made bishop, and was succeeded in it by

LIST OF.

43. BERNARD SISTRE, who appears to have been archdeacon in 1339, at which time he lent the prior and chapter of this church 120l. and in Feb. 1340, he collected the procurations for the cardinals (o).

44. PETRUS ROGERIUS seems to have succeeded him as archdeacon. He was of the province of Toulouse, of the county of Limousin, of the noble family of Monstria, born in the town of Malmont, Earl of Beaufort; and nephew to Pope Clement VI, who created him cardinal deacon, when he was but seventeen years old, by the title of S. Maria Nova; he never came into England, supplying his absence, by constituting Hugo Pelegrinus, treasurer of Lichfield, and Raymundas Pelegrinus, canon of St. Paul's, to be his proctors in his absence (p); as such, they presented clerks to the void churches of St. Clement's and St. Mary's in Sandwich, and those of Linsled and Tenbam, in the years 1346 and 1349; in the former of which years, being Notary to the Pope, he requested, that being resident in the court of Rome, he might have licence to receive his archidiaconal procurations.

As he never came into England, and continued so many years in this archdeaconry, neither the King nor the archbishop knew who was archdeacon, so that the former wrote to the latter to certify who was archdeacon of Canterbury, in the 20th year of his reign, and who was archdeacon at that time, namely in the 39th year of it; to which the archbishop returned this answer, that he had searched the registers of John, late archbishop, and other registers and records, by which it appeared, that Petrus Rogerius, cardinal deacon, had been archdeacon in the 20th year of his reign, and that he did believe that the said car-elect of Chichester, was made chancellor and keeper of the seal, October 23, 11 Edward III, anno 1338. Dugd. orig.

(n) Dugd. orig. Wood Antiq. Oxon. Battely, pt. 2, p. 155. (o) Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant.

(p) The former thus wrote himself:—Hugh Pelegrin, Treasurer of Lichfield, Nuncio of the Apostolical See to England, Vicar General in Spirituals to the Rev. Father in Christ, Peter Rogerius, Archdeacon of Canterbury, Cardinal Deacon of the Holy Church of Rome. Battely's Somner, p. 159.

(g) Regist. Eccl. Cantuar. G. Regist. Reynolds.

(h) Regist. Episc. Wellens Eccl.

(i) Regist. Grandison; Episc. Exon. Regist. Ecclef. Christi Cantuar. Battely, pt. 2, p. 155. To him Nicholas Trivet dedicated his history.

(k) Dugd. Warw. p. 515. Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant. 6.

(l) Battely's Somner, p. 159.

(m) Robert de Stratford, archdeacon of Canterbury, and

ARCHDEACONS,

as he was commanded, to a convocation at Ely; his mandate for which is dated at Hackington, on Aug. 4, that year, whilst he prosecuted with much warmth at Rome, the suit concerning jurisdiction during the vacancy of the see of Canterbury, which had lain dormant on account of his predecessor's death; he was by papal provision constituted archbishop of Dublin in 1298; upon which

34. JOHN LANGTON succeeded to this archdeaconry in 1299, it being given to him by the Pope, in recompence of his trouble and expence at the court of Rome, in his appeal against the archbishop, who had annulled the election, which the convent of Ely had made of him to be their bishop, at which time he was treasurer to King Edward, chancellor of England (y), and rector of Burwell in that diocese; but Pope Boniface VIII. rejected his appeal, and appointed another to that bishopric (z); he was afterwards, viz. in 1305, made bishop of Chichester, being consecrated by bishop Winchelsea, on the 10th cal. October that year (a).

35. SIMON DE FAVERSHAM has the character of a learned man. He became eminent in philosophy and divinity, which he studied at Oxford, as Bale informs us, from Leland. He was rightfully constituted archdeacon by archbishop Winchelsea on the same day on which his predecessor was consecrated bishop of Chichester, but was soon forced to quit this dignity, and to give place to another, on whom the Pope conferred it by his bull of provision, on,

36. BERNARD DE EYCI, who is written likewise Ecy de Labredo, or de la Breto (b), but perhaps more probably De la Barton, being the son of Aumery de la Barton, of noble rank (c). The Pope's bull of provision for this purpose is dated Nov. 20, 1305; in which bull it is mentioned, that this Bernard had been advanced by papal provision to a prebend in the church of

(y) He was first so constituted in 1293, and a second time in 1307. Annal. Wigorn. Histor. Elien.

(z) Godwin, in the catalogue of the bishops of Ely, Ang. Sacra. p. i, p. 639. Matthew Paris.

(a) Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 158. In 1332, he sent a precious cup to the shrine of St. Thomas of Canterbury, by Thomas Searles, his clerk. Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 158.

(b) Prynne, p. 1097, calls him Lebreto.

(c) See the archdeacon's black book.

(d) It will, says Mr. Battely, p. 154, give some light into the following account of some of the archdeacons, if we here observe, that Raymond Goth, born at Mihandrall, within the diocese of Bordeaux, was first, bishop of Cominges, then archbishop of Bordeaux, and then elected pope. Anno 1305 he sent for the cardinals to come to him at Lyons, where he was inaugurated by the name of pope Clement V. and from this beginning the Roman court was translated from Rome to France, where it continued about seventy years; by this he was guided in his search, after several of the following archdeacons of Canterbury, to look for them in their native soil in some province of France, in parti-

LIST OF.

Bordeaux, and to the tithery of Anderanes, in the diocese of Agen; he was not of age to be canonically admitted into deacons orders, but the same power which heaped these rich benefices on him, dispensed with his infancy, and gave him licence to hold this archdeaconry likewise, without the necessity of being made a deacon, till he came to such years as the canons of the church required. The above-mentioned bull was accompanied with another mandatory one for his induction, which was directed to the bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and to the abbots of St. Augustine's and Waltham (d); he seems to have been deprived of this dignity for being married about 1318 (e).

37. GUTTERDUS LABREDUS, most probably, Le Brito, and therefore of the same province with his predecessor.

38. SIMON CONVENIUS, OR DE COMINGES, was archdeacon of Canterbury; he is styled in the papal bull, chaplain of the apostolic see; he died in 1323.

39. JOHN DE BRICTON, treasurer of the church of Wells, rector of Saltwood in this co. the King's chaplain, and the archbishop's chancellor, was, upon the above archdeacon's death, presented to this archdeaconry on April 19, 1323, and admitted to it on Aug. 2, following; but he was soon turned out by a power, which at that time was superior to that of the archbishop, or of the King himself, who both of them submitted to the Pope's bull of provision, though yet not without some struggling; for when the Pope, (John XXII.), sent his bull of revocation, namely, to recall the collation of John de Bricton to this archdeaconry, and to confer it upon Raymond, a cardinal of the church of Rome (f); the messengers who brought it were roughly handled, for the archbishop, (Walter Reynolds) caused one of them to be seized, and his letters and writings to be taken from him by force;

cular Britany, Aquitaine, Lemoisin, and Gascony, the country of pope Clement V.

(e) In Rymer's Fœdera, vol. iii, p. 767, there is a letter from the King to the pope, in which he says, that understanding the archdeaconry of Canterbury, which the son of his faithful and well beloved Amanenus, lord of Labras, lately held; and which, on his being married as was reported, had been declared vacant in the court of Rome; he recommended to the pope master Henry de Burghersh, whom he had appointed archdeacon in his room, dated at York, May 10, anno 12 Edward II, 1319; and by another letter to the pope, dated November 2, in his 13th year, the King recommended Henry de Burghersh to the bishopric of Winchester; which Henry was nephew to Bartholomew de Badlesmere, steward of his household. Rym. Fœd. ibid.

(f) In Rym. Fœd. vol. iv, p. 48, is the pope's bull, dated anno 1324, in favor of Raimund, cardinal deacon of St. Mary in Cosmedin, whom the pope had made archdeacon of Canterbury, requesting the King, as he had often done by his letters before, to admit the said cardinal into the full and peaceable possession of this dignity.

the

ARCHDEACONS,

the other fearing the like usage, hid himself; notwithstanding which, the Pope at last prevailed, and his provision filled the archdeaconry at this time, which he had made vacant by ousting his predecessor from it violently, by the plenitude of his power (g).

40. RAYMUND de Sta Maria in Cosmedin, deacon cardinal, was the person named in the above-mentioned bull of revocation to succeed to this archdeaconry. He was nephew to Pope Clement V. When he quitted, I have not seen, but the next possessor of this dignity that appears, was

41. HUGH DE ENGOLISME, so called from Angouleme, in the province of Aquitaine, sacrist of the metropolitica church of Narbonne in Languedoc. He was sent into England in 1324, as envoy from the Pope and the apostolic see; he was archdeacon in 1327, at which time he received the Peter pence, collected in the diocese of Wells(b). There is a letter extant to him as archdeacon, dated August 16, 1328, from John, bishop of Exeter, who in it denied to pay the fees of his intronization, to which the archdeacon replied, that he would assert and defend his rights; on December 20, that year, he requested leave to return to the court of Rome, which was at that time in his own country, France, pretending bodily infirmities and sickness (i). His successor was

42. ROBERT STRATFORD, born at Stratford upon Avon, to which place he became a benefactor, by obtaining of K. Edward III. in his 5th year, anno 1332, a charter of liberties for that town. He was canon of the church of Lincoln, and had procuratorial letters from the prior of Christ church, to appear in his stead in parliament at York; in these letters, he is called the archbishop's brother, John Stratford being then archbishop of Canterbury elect, and confirmed; and on October 9, 1334, being then archdeacon, he was present at his intronization (k).

Among the archives of the Consistory Court of Canterbury, there is a plea of his, consisting of many articles, and containing in the first place a particular of all the rights and pleas of his archdeaconry; after which follows a suggestion of certain grievances offered to him and it, by the commissary of Canterbury, put up against him to his brother the archbishop, but with what success I know not (l). He was elected bishop

(g) Regist. Eccl. Cantuar. G. Regist. Reynolds.

(h) Regist. Episc. Wellens Eccl.

(i) Regist. Grandison; Episc. Exon. Regist. Eccles. Christi Cantuar. Battely, pt. 2, p. 155. To him Nicholas Trivet dedicated his history.

(k) Dugd. Warw. p. 515. Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant. 6.

(l) Battely's Somner, p. 159.

(m) Robert de Stratford, archdeacon of Canterbury, and

LIST OF.

of Chichester in 1337, and was consecrated on St. Andrew's day that year, succeeding in it John Langton, one of his predecessors in the archdeaconry; after which he executed the great offices of chancellor of the exchequer, chancellor of England, to which he had two appointments, viz. in the 11th and 14th years of K. Edward III, keeper of the great seal (m), and chancellor of Oxford; in 1338 (n) he was constituted commissary to the archbishop, who was then beyond sea; not long after which he seems to have resigned this archdeaconry, having kept it near two years after he had been made bishop, and was succeeded in it by

43. BERNARD SISTRE, who appears to have been archdeacon in 1339, at which time he lent the prior and chapter of this church 120l. and in Feb. 1340, he collected the procurations for the cardinals (o).

44. PETRUS ROGERIUS seems to have succeeded him as archdeacon. He was of the province of Toulouse, of the county of Limosin, of the noble family of Monstria, born in the town of Malmont, Earl of Beaufort, and nephew to Pope Clement VI, who created him cardinal deacon, when he was but seventeen years old, by the title of S. Maria Nova; he never came into England, supplying his absence, by constituting Hugo Pelegrinus, treasurer of Lichfield, and Raymundas Pelegrinus, canon of St. Paul's, to be his proctors in his absence (p); as such, they presented clerks to the void churches of St. Clement's and St. Mary's in Sandwich, and those of Linsted and Tenbam, in the years 1346 and 1349; in the former of which years, being Notary to the Pope, he requested, that being resident in the court of Rome, he might have licence to receive his archidiaconal procurations.

As he never came into England, and continued so many years in this archdeaconry, neither the King nor the archbishop knew who was archdeacon, so that the former wrote to the latter to certify who was archdeacon of Canterbury, in the 20th year of his reign, and who was archdeacon at that time, namely in the 39th year of it; to which the archbishop returned this answer, that he had searched the registers of John, late archbishop, and other registers and records, by which it appeared, that Petrus Rogerius, cardinal deacon, had been archdeacon in the 20th year of his reign, and that he did believe that the said car-elect of Chichester, was made chancellor and keeper of the seal, October 23, 11 Edward III, anno 1338. Dugd. orig.

(n) Dugd. orig. Wood Antiq. Oxon. Battely, pt. 2, p. 155. (o) Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant.

(p) The former thus wrote himself:—Hugh Pelegrin, Treasurer of Lichfield, Nuncio of the Apostolical See to England, Vicar General in Spirituals to the Rev. Father in Christ, Petrus Rogerius, Archdeacon of Canterbury, Cardinal Deacon of the Holy Church of Rome. Battely's Somner, p. 159.

ARCHDEACONS,

dinal was yet alive and archdeacon of Canterbury, because he had never heard any thing to the contrary, but on what day he had been installed, he could not tell (q); this cardinal archdeacon was in the 44th year of K. Edward III. anno 1371, elected Pope, and took on him the name of Gregory XI, upon which he returned with the cardinals to Rome, after the court of Rome had continued about 70 years in France.

45. WILLIAM JUDICIS, of Limosin, seems on his vacating this archdeaconry, to have succeeded to it by the Pope's nomination. He was nephew to Pope Clement VI, and was created cardinal deacon with the title of St. Mary in Cosmedin, by his uncle; he was constituted archdeacon of the Holy church of Rome by Pope Innocent V, and was made cardinal presbiter, with the title of St. Clement, by Pope Gregory XI, and died at Avignon on April 27, 1374. His executors were sued by his successors, archdeacons, for dilapidations in 1375 (r); the year before which there was enquiry made concerning all foreigners, who had ecclesiastical benefices in England, and were non-resident; on which this archdeacon was returned as one of them, and that the true value of all the yearly fruits, rents and profits of the archdeaconry was worth 700 florins (s).

46. HENRY WAKEFIELD was next admitted to this archdeaconry in June 1375, being presented by the King during the vacancy of the see of Canterbury, and the mandate for his induction was directed to the vicars of Hackington, Tenbam and Lymne; at his admission, the see continuing vacant, he took the oath of canonical obedience to the prior and chapter, being then treasurer of the King's household, before which he had been bishop of Ely, in the room of John Barnet, deceased, but the election was disannulled by the Pope, anno 1373; however, in less than two months after his becoming archdeacon, the Pope having disannulled the election of Walter Leigh to the bishopric of Worcester, by his bull of papal provision, dated Sept. 12, 1375, conferred it on him (t).

47. ANDOMAR DE RUPY was in his room made archdeacon, by bull of papal provision (u), to which archdeacon, as appears by the bundle of (q) Memorand. ex parte rem. Thesau. anno 39 Edw. III, rot. 19. Battely, pt. 2, p. 155.

(r) Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant.

(s) Fox's Acts and Monuments. Battely's Somn. p. 160.

(t) Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant. Battely, pt. 2, p. 156.

(u) He is called in the patent of 2 Richard II, p. 2, m. 8, Adomar de la Roche, archdeacon of Canterbury; in which patent the King reciting that the archdeacon had taken part with the French, the King's enemies, by the advice of his council, he had caused the revenues and profits of the archdeaconry to be seized and taken into his own hands; but on account of the special grace and affection which he bore to this church, and especially on account of his father's lying buried there, he grants all the possessions, emoluments,

LIST OF.

writs of anno 2 Richard II, pt 1. there belonged to the church of Lymin, within the same diocese, worth by year, after taxation of the tenth, xxi l. the church of Tenbam worth by year, after the said taxation cxxx l. vi s. viii d. the church of Hackington near Canterbury, worth by year xx marks; the church of St. Clement in Sandwich, worth by year, after the taxation aforesaid, eight marks; the church of St. Mary in Sandwich, worth by year, eight pounds, of the which the archdeacon received only six marks; the profits of all which premises for William Latimer, kn. had received, together with the profits arising out of the jurisdiction of the archdeaconry, worth by year xx l. (v)

48. WILLIAM DE PAKINTON, prebendary of York and Lincoln, was admitted to this archdeaconry on Nov. 7, 1381; this dignity having been conferred on him by the prior and convent, in the vacancy of the see, by archbishop Sudbury's death, his proctor making the accustomed oath of obedience to the prior and convent, that he would not attempt any thing to the prejudice of the church of Canterbury, but would faithfully execute such mandates as he should receive from the prior and chapter (w). He died in the year 1390, and his will was proved on Oct. 7. (x)

Pits says much of this man, of his extraordinary worth and good parts (y).

49. ADAM MOTTRUM, the archbishop's commissary (z), was constituted archdeacon on July 28, 1390 (a); on March 6, 1395, he gave his assent, as such, to the appropriation of the churches of Sutton, Lillington and Farleigh, to the college of Maidstone; in 1396 he presented a clerk to the church of Westbithe (b), at which time he was the archbishop's chancellor, and one of his legatees, as appears by his will; about which year he resigned this archdeaconry, probably by exchange for some better preferment, as he had formerly done the archdeaconry of Ely and a prebend of York, for the precentorship of Sarum (c); he died in 1414. (d)

50. RICHARD CLIFFORD was constituted archdeacon about the middle of the month of March 1397, and being archdeacon, was made keeper of the privy seal. There happened a controversy

&c. as far as he can, to Simon, archbishop of Canterbury, in aid of the great work which the archbishop at his great charges was carrying on, on the body of it, to hold them for so long time as they should continue in the King's hands. See Rym. Fœd. vol. vii, p. 216.

(v) Fox's Acts and Monuments, pt. 1, p. 562.

(w) Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant.

(x) Regist. Cur. Archid. Cant. (y) Batt. Somn. p. 160.

(z) He was the archbishop's commissary, in his proceedings against the Wickliviens, anno 1382. Council. Brit. vol. ii, p. 631.

(a) Regist. Courtney. (t) Regist. Cant.

(c) Regist. Medford, Episc. Sarum.

(d) Regist. Bulwith, Episc. Sarum.

between

ARCHDEACONS,

LIST OF.

between him and archbishop Arundel, concerning matters of jurisdiction, which was compounded between them (e); he was in 1399, promoted by papal provision to the bishopric of Worcester, and had a licence to be consecrated out of the church of Canterbury, dated Oct. 1, 1401, at which time he vacated this dignity (f); he was afterwards translated thence to London in 1407, in the account of the bishops of which, Godwin speaks very honourably of him; his name and figure were drawn and set up in the west window in the chapter-house of Christ church in Canterbury, as a benefactor in all likelihood to the work, it being new built in his time, as the reader will find in the account of it.

In this manner religious men used to express their thankfulness to their benefactors, by representing their effigies, and setting up their names and coats of arms, if they had any, in some part of the building, which by their bounty they had helped to advance; sometimes adding what their gift was to it; an instance of this, out of many may be observed close by the door of the above chapter house, about the shield of a coat of arms, representing the effigies of a monk in his habit, one, who about the same time with this archdeacon, was a benefactor to that work; the legend about it tells us, that John Sbepye, with the help of his friends, gave 100l. to the building of the cloyster, &c. (g)

51. ROBERT DE HALLUM was collated to this archdeaconry by archbishop Arundel, in 1401 (b). He was prebendary of York (i), rector of Northfleet in Kent (k), and one of the executors of archbishop Courtney's will in 1396; the dean and chapter of Lincoln contended with him and his predecessor Clifford, about the right of installing Henry Beaufort, bishop of Lincoln, but at last they yielded and acknowledged the archdeacon's right, and confirmed this acknowledgment by an instrument under their seal, dated April 20, 1404, which is recorded in the registers of this church (l). In 1403 he was chancellor of Oxford, which office he voluntarily resigned in the beginning of the year 1406 (m); he then went to Rome, and was there declared by the Pope, archbishop of York (n); but the Pope being sensible that he should provoke the King's heavy displeasure by it, revoked his papal provision, and soon after promoted him to the bishopric of Salisbury, and he made his profession of obedience to the archbishop of Canterbury, at Gloucester, on March 28, 1408, and this archdeaconry was vacated by him (o).

52. JOHN WAKERING, chaplain to the King and keeper of the rolls in 1404 (p), was instituted archdeacon of Canterbury, on July 13, 1408 (q), probably by his proctor; for afterwards he is said to be admitted, perhaps inducted, to this archdeaconry on March 31, 1409 (r), in all likelihood in his own person, otherwise there is no reconciling the two different days of his institution or admission into this archdeaconry, as they are entered in the register of archbishop Arundel. He was made canon of Wells in 1409, and the same year he is said to have been keeper of the great seal (s); in 1415 he was elected bishop of Norwich, and was consecrated on May 29, next year (t). He has the character of having been a person of extraordinary merit, and bishop Godwin makes honourable mention of him.

53. HENRY RUMWORTH, alias Cirencester, was next collated to this dignity on June 5, 1416, and continued in possession of it on December 10, 1418 (u); whilst he was archdeacon, he cited before him, John, bishop of St. Asaph, as not legally holding his bishopric, not being ever inducted or put into possession of it by his predecessor archdeacon Robert, as the manner was, and of right he should have been, it being one of the rights of the archdeacon to induct all bishops of the province into the possession of their sees. He was succeeded as archdeacon, by

54. WILLIAM CHICHELEY, of kindred to the archbishop of that name, prebendary of the church of Salisbury (v), who was collated to this archdeaconry on Oct. 3, 1420 (w), at the time he was with the King in the French expedition; he was notary to the apostolic see and died at Rome in 1424 (x). He was succeeded by

(e) It is extant, among the church records, and in the Leiger of the Consistory. See a transcript of it, printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxxiii.

(f) Battely, pt. 2, p. 156. (g) Ibid. pt. 1, p. 160.

(b) Regist. Cant. (i) Regist. Ebor.

(k) Regist. Cant. (l) Ibid. A. (m) Antiq. Oxon.

(n) Thomas Walsingham, anno 1406.

(o) There is one remarkable thing to be noticed of him. In the same year that he was made bishop of Sarum, he, together with Henry Chicheley, bishop of St. David's, and Thomas Chillenden, prior of Christ church, were by the prelates who were convened in a synod at London, nominated and appointed to go as legates or deputies from the English bishops, to an occumenical council to be held at Pisa, a city in Tuscany. In their journey they passed through Paris, where John Gerson, the famous theologist, entertained them with a notable sermon. They made a solemn entrance into Pisa, before the end of April. The bishop of Sarum made an elegant speech to the archbishops and bishops, who were assembled, to the number of one hundred and forty, besides a multitude of abbats and other ecclesiastical persons. In 1411, this Robert was created a cardinal presbyter. See Battely, pt. 2, p. 156; who by the above, corrects the mistake of bishop Godwin, in his account of this legation, in his work, p. 495. (p) Pat. 6 Henry IV, p. i, m. 12.

(q) Regist. Arundel I. (r) Regist. Arundel II.

(s) Sir H. Spelman says, he was keeper of the privy seal to K. Henry IV.

(t) Ang. Sacra, p. i, p. 417. Rym. Fœd. vol. ix, p. 321, 337, 338. (u) Regist. Chicheley, Black Book.

(v) Reg. Sarum. (w) Reg. Chicheley.

(x) Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 161; pt. 2, p. 123.

55. PROSPER

ARCHDEACONS,

55. PROSPER DE COLUMNA, a youth, then under fourteen years of age who was by birth an Italian, of the noble family of that name, and nephew to Pope Martin V. Being apostolic prothonotary, he was created a cardinal by the title of S. Georgii ad Vellus aureum, which title was agreeable to the rich provision that his uncle the Pope had designed for him; for he not only advanced him by his bull of provision, dated June 10, 1424, to this archdeaconry; to which, however, the archbishop did not admit him till July 26, 1426 (y), but he also obtained a grant from the King, for his nephew to enjoy as many ecclesiastical benefices in England, as did not exceed the sum of 60 marcs a year (z), and as he could not be capable of this dignity, by the laws of the realm, being an alien, the Pope so far prevailed on the King, that he was, by royal indulgence, made denizen, and capable of the same, but so, that the Pope should by his bull in express words, give way to the patron, freely to confer it afterwards, as it should fall void, and that this indulgence should not be drawn into example (a).

But he seems to have fallen short of the great expectations he had from his uncle, and of the benefit of this grant, which was occasioned partly by the sudden death of the Pope, who died of an apoplexy in 1431, and partly from the misfortunes of the Columna family, in that faction which they had raised against Pope Eugenius IV., at which time this Prosper, as he was advised, quitted the city of Rome, and though he saved his life by it, yet he suffered much by having his goods plundered, and his palace pulled down in the tumult; not long after which, he seems to have resigned this archdeaconry, upon condition of an annual pension of 500 florins, to be paid to him out of it during his life; for upon his death, Pope Pius II. bestowed the last year's pension upon Jacobus Ananatus, a Florentine, of Luca, bishop of Pavia, and cardinal presbiter of St. Chrysogonus, and commanded his successor to pay it (b).

56. THOMAS CHICHELEY, a near relation of the archbishop's, was collated by him to this archdeaconry on December 14, 1433 (c); he appointed John Pentworth, to be register of his court, and his apparitor general, which was confirmed by the archbishop on October 17, 1463. He was doctor of the canon law, and had several ecclesiastical preferments, as prebendary of (y) Regist. Chicheley. (z) Duck's life of Chicheley.

(a) Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 161; pt. 2, p. 123.

(b) He appears to have been present at the council of Basil, in 1435; and at Ferrara, in 1438; and at Florence, to which the same council was transferred in 1439, and subscribed to the acts. He was constituted archdeacon of the holy church of Rome in 1449. Battely, pt. 2, p. 157.

(c) Regist. Chicheley. (d) Regist. Grey Episc. Linc.

LIST OF.

the church of Lincoln (d), provost of Wingham college, and master of the hospital of St. Thomas, in Canterbury, and was besides prothonotary of the apostolic see (e). He obtained a bull from Pope Eugenius, to confirm his archidiaconal right in proving wills; in the year 1449, he made a composition with Thomas Gage, the first provost of the collegiate church of Wye (f), the year before which, he presented a clerk to the vicarage of Tenham (g); he was one of those to whom archbishop Chicheley committed the care and oversight of his splendid building of All Souls College in Oxford (b); he died in 1466, and was buried in the collegiate church of Wingham (i).

57. THOMAS WYNTERBURN appears to have been archdeacon on September 1, 1448. He was present in the chapter-house, when John Oxney was elected prior of Christ church, but he was obliged to declare, that he was present there, not as archdeacon, but as chancellor to the archbishop (k); in 1478 he constituted John Sheffield, a public notary, to be his apparitor general; he was dean of St. Paul's (l), and had some other preferments, as may be seen in the History of the Deans of that church. He died in 1478 and was succeeded as archdeacon by

58. JOHN BOURGCHIER, LL. B. a near relation to archbishop Bourgchier, who was by him collated to this dignity in February 1479 (m); two years after which he appears to have been styled doctor in the laws, and was a prebendary of the church of Wells. He died on November 6, in the year 1495 (n), and was buried in the chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary, usually called the Lady Chapel, where his memorial still remains.

59. HUGH PENTWIN was collated to this archdeaconry on November 26, 1495 (o). He and Henry Edyal, archdeacon of Rochester, were two of archbishop Morton's executors, and were the only administrators who acted in the performance of his will, and he was afterwards one of the executors of archbishop Dean's will; he died on August 6, in 1504 (p), and was succeeded by

60. WILLIAM WARHAM, a kinsman of archbishop Warham, who had a papal dispensation when he was made archdeacon, of not proceeding to higher orders for seven years, which being almost expired, was in 1520, renewed for six years longer. He had several rich benefices conferred upon him, for he was admitted to the (e) Battely's Somner, pt. 1, p. 161.

(f) See this instrument printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxvii.

(g) Regist. Cant. (h) Antiq. Oxon. lib. ii, p. 173.

(i) Battely, pt. 2, p. 158. (k) Regist. Cant.

(l) Wharton, p. 229. (m) Regist. Bourgchier.

(n) Battely, pt. 2, p. 158. (o) Regist. Morton.

(p) Stow's Survey of London.

prebend

ARCHDEACONS,

LET OF.

prebend of Brounwood, in the church of St. Paul (q) in 1515; he was collated to the rectory of Wrotbam in 1517; to the provostship of Wingham in 1520 (r); and lastly, to the rectory of Haies (s). At his instance, archbishop Warbam founded a perpetual vicarage in the church of Wrotbam, and thereby converted the rectory into a rich finacure (t). He attended cardinal Wolsey in his embassy to the French King in 1527; after the death of archbishop Warbam, who died at his, the archdeacon's, house at Hackington, he resigned his ecclesiastical preferments, and had, with the privity and consent of the then archbishop Cranmer, a stipend or pension of 60*l. per ann.* allowed him during his life, out of the archdeaconry, and 20*l. per ann.* out of the provostship of Wingham; which continued to be paid by his two successors in the archdeaconry (u).

61. EDMUND CRANMER, brother to archbishop Cranmer, was by him, on March 9, 1534, collated to this archdeaconry, and the provostship of Wingham, and had several rich benefices besides conferred on him by his brother soon after his being made archdeacon; he was promoted in 1549, to a prebend in Christ church, and to the rectories of Chyve and Ickbam in this county (v); about which time he is said to have alienated the parsonage house, commonly called the archdeacon's palace, at Hackington, to the Lord Cromwell and others. All the above preferments he continued to possess till Q. Mary's reign, when in 1554 he was deprived of them for being married, and compelled to fly into Germany, to save his life. He plainly confessed his marriage, alledging, that he thought his marriage lawful, and could never forsake his wife with a good conscience; upon which, sentence was pronounced against him, namely, to be suspended from executing the priestly functions, sequestered from all profits due to him, deprived of all ecclesiastical dignities and benefices, and enjoined to abstain from the marriage bed; to which sentence he submitted, without making any appeal or reply (w).

62. NICHOLAS HARPSFIELD, LL. D. an eminent theologist, was, on his deprivation, presented to this dignity (x), and was admitted to it on April 21, 1554. He was born in the city of London, and educated in Wykebam's school at Winchester, and afterwards at New College in Ox- ford, of which he became fellow, where he became very eminent both in the civil and canon law. In 1544 he was admitted principal of an ancient hall, mostly for civilians, called Whiteball, on the scite of which Jesus college was afterwards partly built, and in 1546 he was appointed King's professor of the Greek tongue in the university. In 1553 he left his fellowship and took the degree of doctor of his faculty, and had then considerable practice in the court of arches (y). Upon his institution into this archdeaconry, he made a solemn protestation, as was enjoined him, that he would pay to William Warbam, formerly archdeacon, during his life, the pension which had been settled on him out of the profits of the archdeaconry, as mentioned above, and decreed by Dr. John Cocks, vicar-general and principal official to the late archbishop Cranmer; in the same year, on April 27, he was admitted to the prebend of Harleston in St. Paul's church, and two days afterwards to the church of Langdon, both void by the deprivation of Dr. John Hodgekin (z). In 1557 he visited all churches, as well exempt, as not exempt, within the diocese of Canterbury, and all chapels and hospitals (a); at which time it appears, that he was rector of Saltwood, in this county; but in the year 1559, he was deprived of all his dignities and benefices in the church, and was committed prisoner to the Fleet in the beginning of Q. Elizabeth's reign, for not acknowledging the Queen's supremacy, after which he continued about twenty-four years a prisoner, which was to the time of his death, which happened in 1583. His confinement was easy, without any hardship or want; here he found leisure to compile several books, of which some remain in manuscript, and others have been printed; the chief of which is, his ecclesiastical history, printed at Donay in 1622 (b); towards the writing of which, archbishop Parker gave him much encouragement in the free use of his registers.

The character of him and his writings, are given with such different censures by those who have mentioned him, so clearly contrary, and to every appearance so full of partiality, as the one or the other of them have been protestants or papists, or at least inclined to the cause of either persuasion, that it is perhaps difficult to

(q) Regist. Fitz James, Episc. London.

(r) Regist. Cant.

(s) Regist. Eccles. Christi Cant.

(t) Stow's Annals.

(u) Regist. Cranmer. Battely, pt. 2, p. 158.

(v) Regist. Eccl. Christi Cant.

(w) The whole process is entered in the registers of this church, and contains a specimen of the manner of proceeding against the married clergy in those times; it is printed in Battely, pt. 2, appendix, No. xxxiii.

(x) He was presented by Q. Mary, in the vacancy of the see, on April 2, 1554. Rym. Feed. vol. xv, p. 381.

(y) See Wood's Ath. vol. i, col. 214.

(z) Regist. Bonner.

(a) The records of this visitation are still extant, in the office of the archdeacon's register.

(b) The original, in his own hand writing, is in the Cotton library, marked Vitellius, C. ix, No. 12; and there is a treatise of his, concerning marriage, occasioned by K. Henry VIII's divorce, in New college library, in Oxford.

ARCHDEACONS,

LIST OF.

judge the real truth of it. On the one side Pits, the compiler of the Athene Oxonienses (c), and some others, give him and his history great commendations; whilst Fox the Martyrologist, the author of the Anglia Sacra, and of the English Historical Library, and others of the same sort, give their severe censures, as much to the contrary; however, the general unprejudiced opinion is become much in favour of him, and the commendations the former have bestowed on him.

63. EDMUND GEAST, of Gueft, as his name is sometimes spelt, fellow of King's college in Cambridge, was promoted by the Queen to this archdeaconry in October 1559 (d). He was son of Thomas Gbeast, of the family of that name, of Rough Heatb, in the county of Worcester, being born at Afferton in Yorkshire (e), and on Jan. 21, in that year, was consecrated bishop of Rochester, and about the same time made almoner to the Queen; in 1571 he was translated to Salisbury, till when he held this archdeaconry in commendam; upon his vacating it (f),

64. EDMUND FREAK, S. T. P. was next constituted archdeacon; he was born in Essex, and educated at Cambridge; in 1564 he was promoted to a canonry of Westminster; in 1565 to a canonry of Windsor, and on April 10, 1570, was installed dean of Rochester; in 1571 he was made dean of Salisbury, but before he was well settled in that stall, he was elected bishop of Rochester, and was consecrated on March 9, 1571. He had a dispensation, by which he held this archdeaconry, and the rectory of Purleigh, together with his bishopric in commendam; but this dispensation became void in 1576, on his being translated to the see of Norwich; after this he was again translated to the see of Worcester, where he died in 1590, having left behind him the character of being a pious, learned and grave person (g).

65. WILLIAM REDMAN, S. T. P. was instituted archdeacon on May 14, 1576 (h). He was son of John Redman, of Sbelford in Cambridgeshire, and was educated in Trinity college in Cambridge (i), of which he became fellow, and taking orders, was in 1589, further promoted to a canonry in this church, made rector of Bishopf- borne in this county, and in 1594, bishop of Norwich (k), when he vacated this dignity of the archdeaconry (l), which was bestowed on

66. CHARLES FOTHERBY, who was collated to it on January 28, 1596 (m), at which time he was a prebendary of this church; in 1615 he was made dean of it, but he still kept this archdeaconry till his death, which happened on March 29, 1619. He was buried in the dean's chapel, near the martyrdom in this church (n).

67. WILLIAM KINGSLEY, S. T. P. fellow of All Souls college in Oxford, was collated by archbishop Abbot to the archdeaconry, in his room, being then a prebendary of this church (o). He died on Jan. 29, 1647, and was buried in the lower south wing or isle of this church, where his gravestone still remains with this inscription: Here lyeth interred the body of WILLIAM KINGSLEY, once archdeacon of Canterbury, and prebendary of Christ church; a person as exemplary in his life, as he was sound in his doctrine. He took to wife, Damaris, daughter of Mr. John Abbot, of Guildford, and brother to George, lord archbishop of Canterbury; by whom he had sixteen children: as he lived, so he died piously, on the 29th of January, 1647; in memory of whom his dear wife hath caused this memorial. Here lyeth also the body of DAMARIS, the wife of the above-named William Kingsley, obiit Oct. 30, 1678, ætat. 85.

68. GEORGE HALL, S. T. P. was, upon the restoration of K. Charles II. in 1660, collated to this archdeaconry (p). He was son of Dr. Joseph Hall, bishop of Exeter, and afterwards of Norwich, being born at Waltham abbey in Essex, and educated at Exeter college in Oxford, of which he became fellow; after which, taking orders, he became archdeacon of Cornwall, and vicar of Maybenet in that county. Some time before the restoration he had been first preacher of St. Bartholomew, near the Old Exchange, and afterwards vicar of St. Botolph's church, without Aldersgate; after the restoration he became one of the King's chaplains, canon of Windsor, and then archdeacon of this diocese; at length he was on May 11, 1662, consecrated bishop of Chester, and continued in this archdeaconry by a commendam, as he did in the rich rectory of Wigan

(c) Vol. i, col. 214, where there is an account of his several writings. (d) Wood's Ath. vol. i, col. 700.

(e) Rymer's Fœdera, vol. xv, p. 1543.

(f) Battely's Somner, pt. i, p. 162; pt. 2, p. 159. He died in 1576, and was buried at Salisbury.

(g) Battely, pt. 2, p. 160.

(h) Regist. Grindal. Rym. Fœd. vol. xv, p. 752.

(i) He gave 100 marks to the improvement of the building of the college library.

(k) He died in 1602, and was buried in that cathedral, leaving his widow Iabel surviving, and several children. Wood's Ath. vol. i, p. 701.

(l) Battely, pt. 2, p. 160. He died in 1602, and was buried in Norwich cathedral.

(m) Regist. Whitgift, p. 11.

(n) See a further account of him, in the list of deans of this church.

(o) In a register of these precincts is an entry, March 1, 1632; and the same for the years 1634, 1635, 1638, and 1639; received of Dr. Kingsley, archdeacon, 6s. 8d. to be distributed to the poor within the precincts, which he was to pay for a licence to eat flesh, granted to him and others by the archbishop, his diocesan, and confirmed under the broad seal by his Majesty. Witness, Matthew Wariner, sacrificer; which note is inserted here, particularly to shew the custom of that time, so different from that at present.

(p) Regist. Juxon.

ARCHDEACONS.

LIST OF.

in Lancashire, conferred on him about that time (q).

69. WILLIAM SANCROFT, S. T. P. succeeded to this dignity in 1668, and was afterwards promoted to the deanry of St. Paul's, upon which he resigned this archdeaconry in 1670; he was afterwards promoted to the archbishopric of Canterbury, where a further account may be seen of him.

70. SAMUEL PARKER, S. T. P. was installed archdeacon in his room, in June 1670. He was the son of John Parker, a lawyer, and at length serjeant at law, being sent to Wadham college in Oxford, he was there educated in rigid presbyterian principles, but upon the restoration he changed over to Trinity college, and became a convert to episcopacy and the church of England; after which he entered into orders, and in 1667 was made chaplain to archbishop Sheldon, being sent for, for that purpose, to Lambeth; three years after which he was promoted to this archdeaconry, as above-mentioned; on Nov. 18, 1672, he was installed prebendary of Canterbury, having been collated in 1667 to the rectory of Chartbam, and in 1671 to that of Ickbam, both in this county. In the beginning of 1685, he resigned his prebend, and on Oct. 17, next year, was consecrated bishop of Oxford, having licence to hold in commendam the rectory of Ickbam, the mastership of Eastbridge hospital, and this archdeaconry. He was in 1687, by the King's mandate, put by force in possession of the presidentship of Magdalen college in Oxford, being then inclined much to temporize and change his communion. Wood calls him an eminent and celebrated writer, and gives a long account of his several writings (r). He died at the president's lodgings in Magdalen college, on March 20, 1687, and was buried on the south side of the chapel there (s).

71. JOHN BATTELY, S. T. P. was collated to this archdeaconry on March 23, and was installed on March 24, 1687; he was born at St. Edmundsbury, in the county of Suffolk, was fellow of Trinity college in Cambridge, and domestic chaplain to archbishop Sancroft, who collated him to the rectory of Adisham, and in 1688 to a prebend in this cathedral church. He died on Oct. 10, 1708, æt. 61, and was buried in the lower south wing or cross isle of this church, where there is a mural monument put up to his memory, with the following inscription:

H. S. E.

JOHANNES BATTELY, S. T. P.

Buriæ Sti Edmundi in Suffolciâ natus collegii Scæ Trinitatis Cantabrigi socius, a sacris Domesticis Reverendissimo Willielmo Sancroft, (q) He died at Wigan in 1668, and was there buried. See Wood's Ath. vol. ii, col. 416. (r) Pt. 2, col. 297. (s) Battely, pt. 2, p. 160. Wood's Ath. vol. 2, col. 814. See his life, in Biog. Brit. vol. v, p. 3300.

archiepiscopo Cantuariensi, a quo meritissima accepit præmia, rectoriam de Adisham prope hanc urbem hujus ecclesiæ metropolitanae canonicatum, hujusq; diceceseos archidiaconatum, quæ omnia summâ cum fide, & prudentia administravit munia, vir integerrima in Deum pietate, honestissimis, et suavissimis. Moribus.

Excellenti divinarum et humanarum

Literarum scientia, singulari in egenos

Beneficentia, in suos charitate,

Candore et benignitate in omnes.

His tot præclaris dotibus hanc

Basilicam, totamq; ecclesiam

Anglicanam insigniter ornavit

Obiit Octob. x. anno domini

MDCCVIII. Ætatis suæ LXI.

72. THOMAS GREEN, S. T. P. was in his room collated to this archdeaconry in 1708, being then a prebendary of this church; he was in 1721 consecrated bishop of Norwich, and in 1723 was translated to Ely; but on his becoming bishop of Norwich (t), he vacated this preferment and was succeeded by

73. THOMAS BOWERS, S. T. P. who was collated to it by archbishop Wake in 1721; he was next year promoted to the bishopric of Cichester, and seems to have held this archdeaconry in commendam, till it was given to

74. SAMUEL LISLE, S. T. P. who was installed archdeacon in 1724, and was afterwards a prebendary of this church; he was in 1744 consecrated bishop of St. Asaph, but he held this dignity of the archdeaconry in commendam with his bishopric, till he was, in 1748, consecrated bishop of Norwich; when

75. JOHN HEAD, S. T. P. was collated to this preferment by archbishop Herring in 1748, and installed on April 15. He was the youngest son of sir Francis Head, bart. and was educated a student of Christ church in Oxford. When he was promoted to this dignity, he was prebendary of this church of Canterbury; he was first rector of Pluckley, and of St. George's, and St. Mary's Burgate, in this city, both which he resigned on being inducted to the rectory of Ickbam, which he held at his death, as well as the prebend of Barton Colwall, in the church of Hereford. Besides which, he was master of the hospitals of St. John in Canterbury, and of St. Nicholas in Harbledown. By the death of his elder brother sir Francis Head, he succeeded to the title of baronet in 1768, which he enjoyed but a small time, for he died at his prebendal house in Canterbury, on Dec. 4, 1769, without surviving issue, universally regretted for his urbanity of manners, (t) See Biog. Brit. vol. vii, appendix, p. 112 [G]; and among the prebendaries of this church. He died in 1738, æt. 80.

his

ARCHDEACONS,

his unaffected piety, and universal benevolence, and was buried in a vault in the chancel of Ickbam church.

76. WILLIAM BACKHOUSE, S. T. P. was next promoted to this archdeaconry, and was installed on Dec. 18, 1769, and in 1771 was collated to the rectory of Ickbam, as he was to that of Deal in 1776, in which year he had a dispensation to hold them together; in Oct. 1777, he was inducted to the mastership of Eastbridge hospital in Canterbury, which preferments he held till his death, which happened at his parsonage house at Deal, to which he had been a good benefactor, by rebuilding it in a very handsome manner, on Sept. 28, 1788. He was buried in the chancel of Deal church.

77. JOHN LYNCH, LL. D. was next promoted to this dignity on Nov. 7, 1788. He was the second son of Dr. John Lynch, dean of this church, and was educated at Christ church in Oxford, of which he was a student; he was first rector of St. Matthew, Friday-street, London; in 1771 he was collated to the rectory of Adisham, which he in 1781 exchanged, by consent of the patrons of both, with Dr. John Palmer, for the fifth stall in the church of Canterbury; and in 1782 was presented to the rectory of St. Dionis Backchurch in London, both which preferments he holds at this time, and is the present archdeacon of this diocese; being a gentleman whose affability and courtesy of behaviour, benevolence of heart, and diffusive charity, have deservedly gained him universal esteem and commendation.

LIST OF

THIS LONG AND LABORIOUS HISTORY being now brought to a conclusion, the EDITOR has only to repeat his most respectful thanks to the public, for the favourable reception they have hitherto given to it; to request the continuance of their liberal candour; and to assure them, that their approbation will be esteemed by him, as an ample reward for all the pains he has taken in the compiling of it.

London, October 1798.

A N

A L P H A B E T I C A L L I S T

O F T H E S E V E R A L

P A R I S H E S,

D E S C R I B E D i n t h i s V O L U M E.

B.

B ARFRISTON, alias BARSON, p.	198
BETSHANGER, —	184
BEWSFIELD, alias WHITFIELD	14
BIRCHINGTON, in Thanet —	332
BUCKLAND, near Dover , —	49

C.

CANTERBURY, City and County of ,	388
----- ALL SAINTS in	463
----- ST. ALPHAGE in	464
----- ST. ANDREW'S in	467
----- ST. GEORGE'S in	469
----- ST. MARY BREDIN in	475
----- ST. MARY BREDMAN'S	473
----- ST. MARY MAGDALEN	476
----- ST. MARGARET'S in	471
----- ST. MARTIN'S in	494
----- ST. MILDRED'S in	479
----- ST. MARY NORTHGATE	478
----- ST. PAUL'S in	491
----- ST. PETER'S in	487
----- HOLY CROSS WESTGATE	482
CHARLTON, near Dover , —	53
CHILLENDEEN, —	214
CHRIST CHURCH, Ville and Precinct of, Canterbury —	502
COLDRED, — —	8

D.

DEAL, Town and Parish of	160
DENTON, — —	180
DOVER, Town and Port of —	65

----- ST. JAMES'S in —	118
----- ST. MARY'S the Virgin in	115

E.

EASTRY, — —	215
EWELL, — —	32
EYTHORNE, — —	194

G.

GUSTON, — —	21
-------------	----

H.

HAM, — —	180
HOUGHAM, — —	43

K.

KNOLTON, — —	page 208
--------------	----------

L.

LANGDON, West — —	16
LANGDON, East — —	121

M.

MONGEHAM, Great — —	137
-----, Little — —	141

N.

NORBORNE, — —	143
---------------	-----

O.

OXNEY near Deal , — —	23
------------------------------	----

L I S T of P A R I S H E S.

	P.		----- BIRCHINGTON	page 332
POLTON,	-----	page 43	----- MARGATE alias St. JOHN's	341
	R.		----- MINSTER	314
RINGWOLD,	-----	175	----- MONKTON	308
RIPPLE	-----	131	----- ST. LAURENCE'S	368
RIVER,	-----	38	----- ST. NICHOLAS'S	299
	S.		----- ST. PETER'S	359
SANDWICH, Town and Port of		246	----- SARRE, Ville of,	305
----- ST. CLEMENT'S in		284	----- STONAR,	381
----- ST. MARY'S in	---	278	TILMANSTONE,	202
----- ST. PETER'S in	---	281
SHEBBERTSWELL,	-----	2	W.
SHOLDON,	-----	156	WALMER,	172
SUTTON near Dover,	-----	127	WALDERSHARE,	187
	T.		WEST CLIFFE,	28
THANET, ISLAND of	---	288	WHITFIELD, alias BEWSFIELD,	14
			WOOD alias WOODCHURCH in Thanet	340
			WOODNESBOROUGH,	230
			WORD,	242

INDEX of PLACES.

↪ M. stands for manor, S. for seat, H. for hamlet, and F. for farm. The figures comprehend likewise the notes in each page.

A.

ABBATS WALL in Minster, p. 325
 ----- MILL in Canterbury, p. 438
 ABBEY F. in West Langdon, p. 20
 Abeigually, p. 748
 Achol in Thanet, p. 354. Acholt, p. 309, 340
 ACOL F. p. 321. Acolt, p. 5
 Addeham—now Deal, p. 102, 160, 161
 Adisham, manor of, p. 137-180-194-216-223-242
 Adurni Portus, or Arundel, p. 77
 Adrians Gate, in Dover, p. 91
 Aimolde—see Hamwold
 ALDELOND—now ALLAND GRANDE, in Thanet, p. 322
 All Saints, in Thanet, p. 299, 305—in Canterbury, p. 463
 AMBRY, or ALMONRY M. in Euftry, p. 229
 ----- F. alias the PARSONAGE in Menkton, p. 310, 311
 -----, in Canterbury, p. 403
 Almonry of St. Augustine's monastery, p. 153
 Anderida, or Newenden, p. 77
 APULTON, district of, p. 187. M. in Waldersbare, p. 191
 Archcliff, alias Archcliff Fort in Dover, p. 92. Chapel, p. 110
 ARCHER'S COURT M. in River, p. 38, 39. LITTLE M. p. 40
 Arsic, barony of, p. 61
 Arundel Forest in Sussex, p. 709, 711
 Chantry in Christ Church in Canterbury, p. 727 ASHLEY BOROUGH, HAMLET, PARSONAGE or GRANGE of,
 in Norborne, p. 140-142-152-153
 Asseteghe, land of, in Thanet, p. 310
 Atbanaton—now Thanet, p. 288
 Attefeld, land in River, p. 39
 ATTERTON, in River, p. ibid.
 Avyranches, alias Folkestone, barony of, p. 18
 Avona—now Canterbury, p. 419, 435
 River—now the Stour, p. 389, 435
 Augustine Friars, convent of, see White Friars
 Auftone, tenement of, in Thanet, p. 344
 Aylsham, school at, p. 742

B.

Babb's Hill near Canterbury, p. 667
 Baccancel, p. 775
 Badlesmere, priory of, p. 54
 Barbican, in Sandwich, p. 256
 Barfield F. p. 202. See also Barville
 Barham M. and S. p. 592
 BARFRISTON M. alias GERARD'S, p. 198
 Barnsole H. and borough, p. 180, 230, 239
 Barfon, see Barfriston
 Bartholomew's Gate, in Thanet, p. 362
 BARTLET'S, alias THORNTON, in Thanet, p. 300
 BARTON M. in Buckland, p. 50
 ----- alias LONGPORT M. and S. in Canterbury, p. 493
 -664-666
 ----- LITTLE M. and MILL, near Canterbury, p. 492
 -439-445
 ----- Field, p. 277
 -----'s CHANTRY, in Sandwich, p. 287
 Barville Great and Little M. in Tilmanstone, p. 204
 Beagrim, in Sandwich, p. 278
 Beakshorne church, p. 740
 Bedlehangre, tythes of, p. 149
 Bekeborne, p. 79
 Belifolt Hundred, p. 102

Belsfield F. in Shebberdswell, p. 5
 Beornsole, in Woodnesborough, p. 230
 BERE, alias BYER COURT, in West Cliff, p. 29
 Bereham, p. 194
 Berkefore M. p. 693
 Berton Court of, in Longport, p. 664. See Barton
 BETSHANGER, GREAT, M. of, p. 184
 ----- LITTLE, M. and TYTHERY, in Norborne,
 p. 143-147-149-151
 ----- EAST, M. in the same, p. 151
 Bevesfel, p. 144
 Beuherge, hundred of, p. 102
 BEWSFIELD M. in Whitfield, p. 14
 BEWSBOROUGH, HUNDRED OF, p. 1, 23. Cross, p. 2
 Bilefold Hundred, p. 103
 Billington, parsonage of, p. 720
 Binnewith Island, near Canterbuay, p. 446
 Binton's F. in St. Margaret's at Cliff, p. 26
 Birchington, in Thanet, p. 293-298-299-354
 ----- Chapel of, p. 312, 313
 Bishopshorne M. p. 216
 Bishop's Enbrook M. in Cheriton, p. 192
 Bishopthorpe, palace at, p. 757
 Blackeborn Hundred, p. 102, 103
 Black Friars, convent of, in Canterbury, p. 448
 Blean, wood in, p. 450
 ----- Church of, p. 237, 238
 ----- M. of, p. ibid.
 Bobdale Wood, in Thanet, p. 292
 Bochelande, p. 102. See Buckland
 Bocland, ville of, p. 149
 Bodkins, in Swalecliffe, p. 274
 Bologne, port of, p. 81. Roman Watch Tower at, p. 80
 Borowart, lath of, p. 309
 BOSWELL BANKS, alias TEMPLE M. in Ewell, p. 36
 Bostall, in Ewell, p. ibid.
 Bourne M. p. 216
 Boxley M. p. 230. Priory, p. 288
Boxley Lees, alias the Harpe, in Woodnesborough, p. 239
 -----, in Thanet, p. 255. Hill, in Minster, p. 326
 BOYS'S, alias JESUS HOSPITAL, in Canterbury, p. 205, 456
 Brand, land at, p. 103. Brandat, land of, p. 41
 Brandred M. p. 108, 162
 Bradsole Abbey, see St. Radigund's
 Bradstow, see Broadstairs
 Branodunum, or Brancester, p. 77
 Bredenstone Hill, p. 79-80-98
 Bredgar College, p. 727
 Bredin, St. Mary's church, in Canterbury, p. 475
 Bredon, lordship of, in Dover, p. 98
 Brenfete, p. 103
 Breze, marshland of, p. 250
 BRIDGER'S ALMS HOUSES, in Canterbury, p. 457
 Brightlingsea, in Sussex, p. 247
 BRIMDALE F. in Eythorne, p. 197
 Brittain, island of, near Canterbury, p. 401-402-403
 BROADGATE, alias BROCKMAN'S M. in Birchington, p. 336
 BROADSTAIRS, alias BRADSTOW, ville of, in St. Peters, Thanet, p. 363
 Brochestelle, p. 36
 Brockman's, in Birchington. See Broadgate
 Bromley College, p. 754
 Brompton H. in St. Peter's, Thanet, p. 361
 BROOKSTREET, and F. in Eaftry, p. 222

Brook

Brook Place, in Eastry, p. 225
 BROOKSEND M. in Birchington, p. 309, 336
 -----, Great and Little, p. 337
 Brostall, p. 36
Brown's Mill, in Canterbury, p. 438
 BUCKLAND, near Dover M. p. 49. Parsonage of, p. 720
 -----, VILLE and F. in Woodnesborough, p. 221-230
 -----233-234-237
 Bulwark, great and little, in Deal, p. 165
 BURGATE, the GATE, p. 392
 ----- HUNDRED and WARD of, in Canterbury,
 p. 413-416
 Burne M. p. 775
 Burnt House M. See West Court
 Burville, great and little F. p. 133
 Butsole, in Eastry, p. 222
 BUTTERSTREET F. in Shebbertswell, p. 4
 Byer Court—see Bere Court

C.

Caer Kent—now Canterbury, p. 389
 Calais, port and town of, p. 81-85, 761
 CALDICOT, alias CALCOT M. near Canterbury, p. 403-404
 -----442-715. Barn, p. 492
 CALLIS COURT, or GRANGE, in St. Peter's in Thanet,
 p. 360-365-366-367-453
 Camber, near Rye, p. 83
 Cambridge, University of, p. 754. Public Library of, p.
 740. Scholarships and exhibitions at, p.
 274-297-583-584-600-627. Benet college in, p. 583-627-740-741-754. Christ college in, p. 743. Corpus Christi college in,
 p. 596, 757. Emanuel college in, p. 752.
 Gonville and Caius college in, p. 274. Pembroke hall in, p. 742. Peter House college in, p. 722, 744. St. John's college in, p.
 297, 584. St. Mary Magdalen's college in,
 p. 743. Trinity college in, p. 509-596-740-751
 CANTERBURY, CITY and COUNTY, history of, p. 389.
 Names, p. ibid. Civil jurisdiction, p.
 391. Bounds, p. 399. Citizens in parliament, p. 404. Castle, p. 408-619-623.
 Antient and present state, p. 411. Antiquities found, p. ibid. Walls and gates,
 p. 412. Wards and aldermanries, p. 415.
 Antient history, p. 416. Manufactories,
 p. 420. Hop plantations, p. 423. Present state and description of the city and suburbs, p. 425. Dungeon, p. 430. Exchange and mints, p. ibid. Miscellaneous matters, p. 431. Remarkable occurrences,
 p. 432. Natural history, p. 434. Heraldry, p. 435. The river Stour and mills,
 p. ibid. Manors in, p. 439. Religious foundations within its liberties, p. 445.
 Hospitals and alms houses, p. 452. Charities, p. 457. Ecclesiastical jurisdiction,
 p. 461. Churches and parochial charities, p. 463. Bishops of St. Martin's, p.
 497. Extraparochial jurisdictions, p. 498.
 Archbishop's palace, ville and priory of Christ church, p. 498-502-572. Cathedral and priory, p. 502. King's school,
 p. 583. Dean and chapter, p. 587. Deans,
 p. 588. Canons or prebendaries, p. 605.
 Precincts exempt from the city liberties,
 p. 622. Monastery of St. Augustine and borough of Longport, p. 663. Archbishopric and archbishops, p. 671, 675.
 Archdeaconry and archdeacons, p. 772,
 775
 Canterbury, see of, p. 162-202-216-221-299-302-311-
 442-496. Archbishop's palace in, p. 394-396-403-499-740. Priory of Christ church in, p. 32-104-194-208-216-218-228-229-241-242-246-248-249-250-308-310-311-
 336-340-345-382-396-438-439-442-445-
 450-468-470-473-488-490-498-501-566-
 567-701. King's school in, 297-679-742.
 -----, Castle of, p. 394
 -----, St. Dunstan's gaol in, p. 485
 -----, King's new park in, p. 661
 Cant-guar-land—now Kent, p. 389
 Cantiopolis, Cantuaria and Cantwarabyrg, ancient names of Canterbury, p. 389
 Capel Hook wood, in Coldred, p. 12
Cerdices Oran, p. 381
 Carlentone—see Charlton
 Carmelites, priory of, in Sandwich, p. 267
 Castle Ray cliff, at Dover, p. 82
 Castle Mead, alias Chittenden, in Sandwich, p. 260.
 ----- LANDS, portion of tythes in Canterbury, p. 442
 CASTNEY COURT M. in River, p. 40, 41
 Carifton M. p. 763
 Cecil Square, in Margate, p. 350
 Carlentone—now Charlton
 CHAMBERLAIN'S FER, alias DEAL M. p. 160, 171
 Charing, palace at, p. 768
 CHARLTON, near Dover, M. p. 53
 Charner, chapel in Ripple, p. 130
 Chart Sutton, p. 479
 Chart, village of, p. 683
 Chatham, p. 768
 Chelsea, college in, p. 745
 Chenoltone—see Knolton
 Chester, diocese of, p. 673
 Chestmund's, in Thanet, p. 292
 Chilham, barony of, p. 43-45-47-54-175
 ----- Parsonage of, p. 715
 CHILLENDEY, p. 182 M. of, p. 214
Chilfon H. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 371
 Chiltern Langley, priory of, p. 133
 Chistlet, p. 640, 655
 CHILVERTON, alias GREAT HOUGHAM M. p. 43
 Christian's Court M. in Eastry, p. 230
 F. in Woodnesborough, p. 239
 Church street F. in East Langdon, p. 125
 Church Hops F. in Eythorne, p. 197
 Church Gate F. in Woodnesborough, p. 231
Cimenes Oran, p. 381
 Cinque Ports, origin and decay of, p. 77, 78
 ----- Jurisdiction of, p. 175-298-306-332-341
 -----359-368-372-373-381-397
 ----- Barony of, p. 79
 Claris's Island, near Canterbury, p. 402
 Clerk's F. in Sarre, p. 307
 CLEVE COURT S. in Thanet, p. 309
 CLIFFSEND M. in St. Laurence in Thanet, p. 371
 Clapton Tower, in Dover Castle, p. 67
 Clovelsho—see Cliff
 Clyvesend M. in Thanet, p. 325. See Cliffsend
 Cnolden—see Knolton
 Cnolton, tythes of, p. 149. Ville of, p. 237
 Cocklice, a house in Dover Castle, p. 64
Cogan's Hospital, in Canterbury, p. 452-306-625
 Cokyn's Hospital, in the same, p. 498, 624
Caliblow F. in Ripple, p. 133
 Colchester, St. John's Abbey in, p. 658
 COLDRED BOROUGH and M. p. 82. Parish, p. 35
 Cold Friday Borough, p. 230. Street, ibid. p. 238
 Cold Harbour F. in Norborne, p. 1, 3
 Colyswood, in Thanet, p. 292
 COMBE F. in Buckland, p. 50
 Constabularie, barony of, in Dover Castle, p. 28
 Cookborough, in Eastry, p. 221
 Coomb H. in Woodnesborough, p. 230, 239
 COPERLAND, in River, p. 39, 40
 Copfall, see Popethall
 CORNILO, Cornilai, Cornelys, HUNDRED OF, p. 26-102
 -----120
 Cotmanton, chapel of, p. 153, 154
 COURT, in Sholdon, p. 157
 Cottington, see Cotmanton
 Cotton's Hospital, in Canterbury, p. 455
 COVENTRY HOUSE, alias the DUNGEON, in Canterbury,
 p. 440
 COURT ASH M. in Deal, p. 161, 108
 Court Stairs H. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 37
 M. alias PEGWELL BAY, p. 322
 Coxhill H. in Shebbertswell, p. 5
 Cranbrook, Church of, p. 754
 CRAYFORD HOUSE, in Great Mongeham, p. 137
 Craythorne borough, p. 180, 202
 Crevequer, barony of, p. 62, 230
 Croydon Parish, p. 743
 ----- Hospitals and schools in, p. 744-754-759
 ----- Palace, p. 755-757-708
 Cuddefden parsonage, in co. Oxford, p. 749
 Cupland, in River, p. 39
 Curfew, land in St. Margaret's at Cliff, p. 27
 Culver House, in Mongeham, p. 138

D.

Dale, see Deal
 Dale, Marsh in, p. 132
 DANE COURT, in Tilmanstone M. and S. p. 204-202-222.
 -----, in St. Peter's, in Thanet, p. 359
 DANDELION, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 343
 Dane John, in Canterbury, p. 397—see Dungeon

Dane Pits, at Ripple, account of, p. 134, 173
Dauernum, Roman station, p. 417
 Davington Priory, p. 201, 715
 Deadmancombe, see Dulfmancombe
 DEAL TOWN and PARISH, p. 160, 247
 -----, UPPER, VILLAGE, p. 167
 ----- M. alias CHAMBERLAIN'S FEE, p. 160
 ----- PREBEND M. p. 102-161-162-170-171
 ----- CASTLE, p. 165
 Delf, stream of, p. 120
Deane M. in Thanet, p. 319
 DEAN'S MILL, Canterbury, p. 401-402-439
 Dean John F. see Dungeon
Deanries, new, instituted and abolished, p. 126-154-159
 ----- -330-355-367-380-386-653
 Den Court, near Eastry, p. 230
 DENE M. in Thanet, p. 344.—Chapel, p. 347
 DENN COURT, in Woodnesborough, p. 230-234-269-270
 Dereham Abbey, in county of Norfolk, p. 705
 Devil's drop of mortar, p. 80
 Diggs Place F. p. 31
Doge's Chantry, in Canterbury, p. 498, 668
 DODINGDALE M. and TYTHERY of, in Canterbury, p. 441,
 669; alias Morton M. see Morton
Dofra, or Dofris—now Dover, p. 86
Dola—now Deal, p. 160
 Dominicans, convent of, in Canterbury, p. 448
Dorovernia—now Canterbury, p. 389, 390
 DOVER CASTLE, p. 3-28-30-43-47-57-58-118-123-198
 ----- -200-230-231.—Lands held by tenure of, p. 10
 ----- -18-39-40-61-181-187-191-202.—Constabularie
 ----- in.—Barony of, p. 61
 ----- town and port of, p. 175-298-332-340-341-359.
 ----- —Harbour of, p. 81.—Suffragan bishops of, p. 100.
 ----- —PRIORY of ST. MARTIN in, p. 5-13-23-27-41
 ----- -46-47-48-49-50-52-53-87-96-98-101-102
 ----- -103-112-115-160-161-171-228-245-695-720.
 ----- —PRIORY M. of, p. 21-22-24-53-108.—ST. MA-
 ----- RIES Hospital, or MAISON DIEU in, p. 9-15-31
 ----- -38-39-42-53-85-92-96-108-115-116-118-124
 ----- -158-337.—Gild of, p. 180
 Dour River, account of, p. 36-37-41-54
 DOWN BARTON M. in Thanet, p. 230, 299
 Down Court, near Eastry, p. 230
 Downs, the CHANNEL of, account of, p. 163-167-168-169
 ----- -258
Downes House, in Word, p. 243
 Downhamford Hundred, p. 218, 223
Drapers Hospital in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 347, account
 ----- of, p. 354
 Drelingore H. in Alkham, p. 36
 Drenleys, near Eastry, p. 230
 Drove, near Eastry, ibid.
Dubris—now Dover, p. 77, 80
 ----- Roman station, p. 86-417
 DUDSMANCOMBE M. in Buckland, p. 50-53-108-162
 DUNGEON HILL, p. 430.—M. in Canterbury, p. 430, 439
 ----- Little Lady church of, p. 475
 Dumpton ville, in St. Peter's, Thanet, p. 361
 Duntstreet, in Thanet, p. 294
Durovernum—now Canterbury, p. 389, 435
 ----- Roman station, p. 437

E.

Each End, in Ash, p. 239
 Eadburgate, p. 249
 EASTBRIDGE HOSPITAL, in Canterbury, p. 337-439-463
 ----- -624-701, see also Kingbridge
 Eastbridge Mill, in Canterbury, p. 438
 EAST COURT M. alias ST. MARGARET'S at CLIFF M. p. 24
 Eaflerige, see Eastry
 EASTRY, hundred of, p. 121-179-215.—M. p. 5, 216.
 ----- —Court of, p. 180-202-242.—Parsonage of, p.
 ----- 208, 281.—Church of, p. 224-225-720
 Ebbsfleet, in Thanet, p. 288-289-294-325-385
 Eche, near Eastry, p. 230
 Edburg Well, p. 426
 Eleham Parish, p. 279
 ELLINGTON F. in St. Lawrence, in Thanet, p. 373
 ELLIS'S, alias ELYS'S HOSPITAL, in Sandwich, p. 269
 ----- Chantry, p. 287
 ELMES, alias HOUGHAM M. p. 43, 44
 ELMINGTON—now ELMSTON M. in Eythorne, p. 195
 Ely, church of, p. 732, 734
Ercheftro, near Sandwich, p. 120
 Eriet Wood, near Doddington, p. 772
 Etonbridge Parsonage, p. 552

Etfole H. p. 193
 Etwelle, see Ewell
 Esch, near Sandwich, p. 255, 270
 Efole in Nonington, p. 225
 Estele, Estewelle H. p. 154, 193. See also Ashley Estanore, see Stonar
 Estre, Estrede, lath of, p. 144-215-244.—Hundred, p. 249
 Estri Parish, p. 241
 Estenburge, see Statenborough
 Estfole H. p. 154
 Esture Hundred and M. p. 435
 Esturfete, in Canterbury, p. 442
 EWELL Borough, p. 2.—M. p. 33, 37.—Parish, p. 38.
 ----- —River, p. 89
 Eylwarton M. p. 778
 Eynesford M. p. 733
 EYTHORNE M. alias EYTHORNE COURT, Lower, p. 194
 ----- Borough of, p. 180

F.

Farleigh, West M. p. 250
 FARTHINGLOE, alias VENSON DANE M. in Hougham, p. 46
 Faversham Port, p. 425.—Church, p. 645, 777
 Favernefle Gate, in Margate, p. 341
 Feeles Court, in Thanet, p. 310
 Felderland Borough, p. 180-216-242
 Ferlingelai, see Farthingloe
 Ferry, at Sandwich, p. 273.—At Sarre, p. 305, 306
 Finculfam, see Fingletham, p. 150
 Fingletham Borough, p. 143-145-221
 ----- H. and tythery, in Norborne, p. 148-150-151
 Fishpool, near Canterbury, p. 399-400-402-664-665
 Flete, in Ash, p. 225
 Fleet, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 347
 FLEMINGS, GREAT and LITTLE F. in Woodnesborough,
 ----- p. 230, 249
 Flenguassam, see Fingletham
 Flower, marsh, in Deal, p. 170
 Fobert, barony of, p. 43-45-47-61
 FOGGERS COURT, in Great Mongeham, p. 137
 Folkestone M. p. 23, 172
 ----- Barony, alias Averanches, p. 61, 266
 Foidwich, p. 247
Foreland, South, and light house, in West Cliff, p. 31
 -----, North, p. 361
Foulmead, Foulmet H. in Sholdon, p. 158, 170
 Franciscan's Convent, in Canterbury, p. 445
 Friars Eremites, convents of, see White Friars
 Fright M. see Frith
 Frithket Wood, in Thanet, p. 292
 FRITH M. in Guston, p. 21-22-108
 Frogenhall, in Woodnesborough, p. 231
 Froghill, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 354
 Frosts, in St. Nicholas, in Thanet, p. 301, 302
 Fulbert Barony, p. 43, 45, see also Fobert
 Fyspole Borough, near Canterbury, p. 392

G.

GARLING F. in Ripple, p. 133; alias WESTGATE F. in
 ----- Birchington, p. 335
 -----, in St. John's, Thanet, p. 346, 347
Garriannonum—now Yarmouth, p. 77
 Gedding Borough, p. 180
 Genlade, in Thanet, p. 288-289-290
 Gerard's, alias Barfriston M. p. 198.—Tenement, p. 200
Geffling, or North Stream, near Sandwich, p. 120-151-245
 ----- -255 256
 Gocistone, p. 102, see Guston
 Goddard's, in Eastry, p. 225
 Godmelne Mill, in Dover, p. 98
 Godmersham, parsonage of, p. 516
 Golleberge, M. p. 249
 GOODWIN SANDS, account of, p. 167, 168
 Gore F. in Eastry, p. 222.—Street H. in Monkton, p. 310
 Gorend, in Birchington, p. 298-332-337
 Goshill M. p. 239
 Graves, burial ground, near Dover, p. 48
 Gray, Richard, Lord of Codnor, p. 251
Green's Chantry, in Sandwich, p. 284, 287
 Greenwich, Est, M. p. 145
 Greneway, land of, p. 132, 135
Grey Friars, convent of, in Canterbury, p. 445
 GROVE M. in Woodnesborough, p. 232-230-239
 -----, alias MARLAY F. in Norborne, p. 151
 Grymbald's Crypt, in St. Peter's, in Oxford, p. 511
 Guernsey, natives of, p. 749

Guildford Hospital, at p. 746
 GUSTON M. or Prebend, p. 21-22-108
 ----- Small tithes of, p. ibid.—Pastures of, p. 122

H.

Hackenden Down and Banks, in St. Peter's in Thanet,
 p. 361-362-364
 Hackington, archdeacon's house in, p. 778, 785.—Parsonage 778.—Chapel at, p. ibid.
Hackling Borough and F. in Worth, p. 204-242-244
 Hains F. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 371
 HALE, UPPER and NETHER, in St. Nicholas, in Thanet, p. 300
 Hallicandane H. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 371
 Halsted M. p. 733
 Halfow, church of, p. 579, 707
 HAM M. of, p. 180
 Ham Hopes, in Sholdon, p. 158
 Hamstalles, lands in Ewell, p. 38
 HAMMONDS, alias TEUKERS, in Woodnesborough, p. 235
 HAMWOLD, alias HAMMILL borough, in Woodnesborough,
 p. 230, 234.—Tythery of, p. 236
 -----, SOUTH, alias UPPER, in Woodnesborough,
 p. 230, 235
 -----, alias HAMMILL COURT, in Woodnesborough,
 p. 230, 235
 Hamolde, see Hamwold
 Harbledown Hospital, p. 366-394-625-636-690-694
 -----751-752-759
 HARDENDEN borough and M. in Eastry, p. 118-180-216
 Hardiles, land in Woodnesborough, p. 225, 326
 Harley Tower, at Kinggate, in Thanet, p. 362
 Harris's Alms Houses, in Canterbury, p. 457
 HARTANGER M. in Barfriston, p. 199
 Havockestan, land of, p. 103
 Hawley Square, at Margate, p. 350
 Hay, great and little F. in Eastry, p. 223
 Hazling Wood, in Whitfield, p. 162
 Headling, alias Healden wood, in Norborne, p. 152.
 ----- Down, in Waldershare, p. 192
 Heathen Land, near Canterbury, p. 400, 402
 Hedling Wood, in Waldershare, p. 19
 Hegythe Thorne, see Eythorne
 Hemmings Bay, in Birchington, p. 337
 Hengrave, alias Dene Court, in Thanet, p. 344
 Hennebergh, cross of, p. 255; alias Hennebridge, in Thanet,
 p. 294-382-383-384
 Heplesflete, in Thanet, 382, 385, see also Ebbsfleet
 Hermitage, in Canterbury, p. 478
 HERNDEN DISTRICT and BOROUGH, in Eastry, p. 218-223
 -----236; alias UPPER FARM, p. 220
 Heronden, see Hardenden
 Heron H. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 371
 Hey, in Eastry, p. 223, see also Hay
 Heghidale, in Thanet, p. 315
 Hicham—now Hougham, p. 46, 102
 Higham Ferrers, college and hospital in, p. 728
 Hipwines Fleet, see Ebbsfleet
 Hlyden, see Lydde Court, p. 242
 Hoath F. near Canterbury, p. 444, 492
 Hoiberg Marsh, near Sandwich, p. 255
 HOLY CROSS WESTGATE CHURCH, in Canterbury, p. 482
 Hoo H. in Minster, p. 319-321-322
 Hooper's Hill, at Margate, p. 351
 Horton Kirkby M. p. 768
 Hothfield M. p. ibid.
 Hoveling, near Sandwich, p. 255
 HOUGHAM M. alias THE ELMES, p. 43
 -----, alias NORTH COURT M. p. 45
 -----, LITTLE COURT, alias the PARSONAGE, p. 49
 Howe F. near Fingletham, p. 151, 310
 Huettelmin, tithes of, p. 130
 Huffam, see Hougham
 HULL M. in Sholdon, p. 156
 ----- COURT, alias LONG F. in the same, p. 157
 Hythe, p. 698, 705

I.

Jenkin H. in Eythorne, p. 197
 Jerfey, natives of, p. 749
 JESUS, alias BOYS'S HOSPITAL, in Canterbury, p. 366, 456
 Inis Ruochim—now Thanet, p. 288
 Ipped's Fleet, see Ebbsfleet
 Islip, church of, p. 719
 Islington school and hospital, p. 366
 Ithoncester, city of, p. 77

K.

Kennington Rectory, p. 660
 Kerfoney Court, see Castney Court
 Kesserland, in River, p. 39
 Ketterton, p. 5
 King's Ham, see Ham
 King William's Mount, in Thanet, p. 294
 King's Mill, in Canterbury, p. 438
 KINGSBRIDGE, alias EASTBRIDGE HOSPITAL, in Canterbury,
 p. 366-498-621-624-629
 Kingsbridge, in Canterbury, p. 628, 629
 KINGSDOWN VILLE and HUNDRED, in Ringwold, p. 26, 177.
 ----- Chapel, p. 652
 KINGSGATE VILLE and SEAT of, in St. Peter's, Thanet, p. 362
 Kingston M. p. 43, 175
 Kittington F. in Nonirngton, p. 149
 Knight's Bottom, near Dover, p. 54
 Knight's Templars, house of, at Dover, p. 110
 Knole M. p. 732.—Palace of, p. 768
 Knolton M. p. 204-208-214-236-239
 Kyrfeney H. in Ewell, p. 41

L.

Lambeth Palace, p. 709-719-739-741-746-750-751-754
 -----755-759.—Chapel, p. 705.—School at, p. 754
 -----Church of, ibid.
 Langdon Borough, in Eythorne, p. 180, 194.—F. p. 196
 LANGDON WEST, abbey and M. of, 18-20-174-193
 -----Chapel of, p. 153.
 -----EAST M. p. 21, 121
 Lapis Tituli, where, p. 384, 385
 Langley, Chiltern, priory, p. 181
 Leeds Priory, p. 200-214-237-240-241-307.—Castle, p. 727
 Lemanis or Limne, p. 77.—Portus, Roman station, p. 417
 Lepers House, in Sandwich, p. 288
 Lewisham, school at, p. 584
 Liddon, parish and borough, p. 2
 Lilefdenne, near Canterbury, p. 399
 Liminge, church of, p. 316.—M. p. 694
 Limine, Roman station, p. 417
 LINACRE M. in Whitfield, p. 14, 15
 Litchfield, archiepiscopal see of, p. 673, 682
 Littleborne M. p. 452.—Parsonage, p. 654, 655
 LITTLE ARCHES COURT, in River, p. 40
 Littlejoy, in Thanet, p. 384
 Livingborne, alias Bekeborne, p. 625
 Liuuarlet, lath of, p. 102, 103
 Lollard's tower, in Lambeth palace, p. 709
 Lomea, island of, p. 168
 Londinium, Roman station, p. 417
 London—Bridge, p. 701, 702.—Convent of Black Friars in, p. 710.—Of Minorites, p. 134.—St. Paul's church in, p. 749-751-752-754.—Port of, p. 247.
 Schools in, p. 733, 754.—Sion college in, p. 754.
 -----Tower of, p. 705.—City of, p. 671, 701
 LONG F. alias HULL COURT, in Sholdon, p. 157
 Long Lane F. in Shebbertswell, p. 2, 5
 LONGPORT, alias BARTON, borough and M. in Canterbury,
 p. 392-493-498-663-666.—Boundaries of,
 p. 665
 Lovekys Street H. in Woodnesborough, p. 239
 LOWER F. in Hernden, in Eastry, p. 220
 Lucas Dane, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 347
 Lakedale Chantry, p. 637
 Lundenwic, p. 247, 305
 LYDDE COURT M. in Word, p. 242.—Out grounds, p. 243
 Lydden Spouts, in Hougham, p. 48
 Lydden Valley, in Word, p. 245
 Lyden, in St. John's, Margate, p. 347
 -----, tithes of, p. 246
 Lymborough Bottom, in Ewell, p. 38
 Lymington H. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 371

M.

Magminot, barony of, p. 187
 Maidensole, in Little Mongeham, p. 142
 Maidstone, college, p. 129, 724.—Hospital in, 708, 715.
 -----Palace at, p. 719-720-768
 Maimage Down and F. p. 192; see also Malmaines
 Maison Dieu, see Dover
 Maldry, or House of Lepers, in Sandwich, p. 283
 MALMAINES, alias WALTERSHARE M. p. 137
 Maminoth, barony of, p. 62
 Man, diocese of, p. 673

MANSTON M. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 368
 ----- Wood, p. 292.—Green, in St. Laurence, p. 371
 MARGARE BOROUGH, VILLE and TOWN of, p. 293-298
 ----- 346-347
 Mardall M. in Hothfield and Ashford, p. 479
 MARLEY H. in Norborne, p. 143.—F. p. 151.—F. in Kingston, p. 457
 Marshborough, alias Stipens H. and Borough, in Wood-nesborough, p. 230, 239
 MARTON H. and borough, in East Langdon, p. 121-122-124.
 ----- Tythery of, p. 123
 MAYNARD'S HOSPITAL, in Canterbury, p. 454-455-494
 MAXTON COURT M. in Hougham, p. 47
 Mearkes Fleote, p. 248, 249
 Medredive, pasture of, p. 103
 Menditre H. p. 154, 193
 Menesse, land in River, p. 42
 -----, alias WORTH MENESSE, p. 228, 245
 Meopham Church, p. 516-716-724
 Merton Priory, p. 104
 MEWSOLE F. in Coldred, p. 12
 MIDDLE F. in Hernden, in Eastry, p. 220
 Middleton, church of, p. 645
 Millburgh, ville of, in Thanet, p. 340
 Milton, town of, p. 259
 Minacre H. in Norborne, p. 152.—Tythes of, p. ibid.
 Minchen Wood, in Blean, p. 450
 Minnis, in Word, p. 245
 MINSTER, in Thanet, p. 293, 342.—M. and ABBEY, p.
 314-341-359-368-381.—Abbey or nunnery,
 p. 295, 395.—Church of, p. 357-379-38c-645.—Vicariate of, p. 367
 ----- Nunnery, in Sheppy, p. 695
 Mint, in Canterbury, p. 429
 MOAT, alias WYKE M. and park, near Canterbury, p. 444
 ----- 492.—Place in Mongeham, p. 138
 MONGEHAM, GREAT, M. of, p. 137
 MONGEHAM, LITTLE, M. of, p. 140.—Little, p. 154
 Moningham, see Mongeham
 Monken Langdon, see West Langdon
 MONKTON, in Thanet, p. 293.—M. 299-308-332
 -----, Parsonage of, p. 720.—Vicariate of, p. 301
 Monocstone, see Monkton
 MORTON, alias DODINGDALE M. in Canterbury, p. 400
 ----- 403-441.—Tythery of, p. 441. See also Morton
 Mote Park, near Canterbury, p. 402
 -----, near Maidstone, p. 450, 734
 Motsole, in Sandwich, p. 288
 Mounon Little, in Great Mongeham, p. 138
 Mungeham, Little, p. 654, 655.—Tythes of, p. 152
 ----- Chapel of, p. 153
 Munlingham, see Mongeham
 Mungeham, Little, p. 266, 267
 Mutterer, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 347

N.

NAPCHESTER H. in Norborne, p. 152.—Tythery, p. ibid.
 Napurshurst, p. 16
 Nareton borough, p. 5
 NASH COURT, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 345
 Natyndon, p. 400
 Naxaton borough, p. 2
 NETHER COURT, in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 370
 Nethergong water, in Thanet, p. 289-290-302
 ----- borough, see Naxaton
 NETHER HALE, in St. Nicholas, in Thanet, p. 300
 Nether Knowle, in Eatry, p. 225
 ----- Marsh, in Sholdon, p. 158
 ----- Place, in Eatry, p. 225
 Nether riche, in Woodnesborough, p. 232, 239
 NEW FARM, in Ripple, p. 133; alias GOKE, in Eatry, p. 224
 Newingate, in Canterbury, p. 414
 NEWLAND GRANGE, in St. Laurence, Thanet, p. 369, 380
 New Purchase F. in Tilmanstone, p. 206
 NEWSOLE F. in Coldred, p. 6, 12
 New Work, in Dover, p. 113
 NORBORNE, p. 184-654-655.—M. p. 14-18-121-127-128-143-156.—COURT, p. 145, 146.—De-mesnes, p. 135.—Church of, p. 126, 159
 ----- Almonry, or parsonage of, p. 149
 Nordeude, land of, p. 103
 Nordewode, land of, p. 41
 NORTH COURT, alias Hougham COURT M. p. 45
 ----- M. in Tilmanstone, p. 202-203-222
 North Down H. in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 347, 353
 Northfret M. p. 633

North Foreland and Light-house, in Thanet, p. 361
 North Holmes, in Canterbury, p. 662, 665
 NORTHGATE, in Canterbury, p. 415.—Vicariate of, p. 637
 Northmouth near Sandwich, p. 255; in Thanet, p. 289
 ----- 290-292-305
 North Place, in Shebbertswell, p. 5
 North Stream, in Word, p. 245
 Northwood, Norwood in St. Peter's, in Thanet, p. 292
 ----- 361.—M. alias Little Barton, p. 445
 Nosthill Priory, in Yorkshire, p. 632

O.

Obervant Friars, convent of, in Canterbury, p. 447
 Old Haven, or cut near Sandwich, p. 163-245-258
 Old Park Hill, in Ewell, p. 37
 -----, near Canterbury, p. 400-402-492-662-667
 Oidwood, in Ringleton, p. 239
 OSSUNDEN GRANGE, in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 369
 Otford, Palace at, p. 736
 Otbona, city of, p. 77
 Otterton, alias Ankerion Dane, in Buckland, p. 52
 Oxford University, p. 726-729-748-749-751.—Scholarships and exhibitions to, p. 274-275-584-749.
 All Souls college in, p. 728, 751.—Canterbury college in, p. 565-587-720-721-724.—Christ church in, p. 566, 755.—Exeter college in, p.
 749.—Jesus college in, p. ibid.—Magdalen college in, p. 618.—Pembroke college in, p. 749.
 Queen's college in, p. 742.—St. John's college in, p. 728, 749.—Trinity college in, p. 751
 -----, St. Giles's parish in, p. 750.—St. Mary's church in, p. 736.—See of, p. 749
 OXNEY borough, p. 2.—M. p. 23.—Parish, p. 26
 Ozengell Grange, in Thanet, p. 380, 496. See also Osf- sunden

P.

Panctate chapel, in St. Augustine's monastery, p. 656, 661.
See also St. Panctate
 PALMER'S M. alias St. MARGARET'S at CLIFFE, p. 24
 -----, lands of, p. 131, 132
 Park, the old, see Old Park
 Park Gate F. in Norborne, p. 150
 Parkers, in Birchington, p. 332
 Patixborne M. p. 33, 238
 Pawlyns, in Thanet, p. 361
 PEGWELL, alias COURT STAIRS M. in St. Laurence,
 p. 322, 371
 Peperneffe, near Sandwich, p. 245-248-255-257
 Perch, honor of, p. 28
 Peverel, alias de Dover, barony and honor of, p. 30-34
 ----- 61-100
 Pigfol H. in Mongeham, p. 139
 Pilholt, Pilot, wood in Eatry, p. 209, 218
 PINHAM, lands of, in Whitfield, p. 15-16-123-124
 PISING M. in Whitfield, p. 15, 16.—In Gufon and East Langdon, p. 123, 124.—Tythes of, p. 126
 PLACE HOUSE, in Shebbertswell, p. 4
 POLDERS, GREAT and LITTLE, in Woodnesborough,
 p. 234.—Farms, p. 230
 Poltmans, in Eatry, p. 230, see also Polton
 Polton Borough, p. 2
 POLTON M. in Woodnesborough, p. 238
 POOR PRIESTS HOSPITAL, in Canterbury, p. 453-473
 ----- 701
 POPESHALL M. and borough, in Coldred, p. 8-10-12-13
 ----- 19.—Tythery, p. 11.—Church of, p. ibid.
 Popesham borough, p. 2
 Port, barony of, p. 10-61-123-181-184-199
 Portpool chantry, in St. Paul's in Canterbury, p. 490
 Portugal, crown of, p. 169
 Portus Dubris, p. 54
 Poulton M. p. 219
 POWCIES, in Minster, p. 323
 Preston, church of, p. 153
 Puttockdowne, in Eatry, p. 228-255-281
 Pyleholte, land at, in Eatry, p. 209

Q.

Queen Court, in Ospringe, p. 234
 QUEKES M. in Birchington, p. 332
 ----- Great and Little F. in the same, p. 337
 Queningate, in Canterbury, p. 415, 572

R.

R.

RAMSGATE, VILLE and TOWN, p. 247-298-299-372
 -----, PIER and HARBOUR, p. 258, 374
 Ramsey Abbey, p. 216
 Rangre, in Sholdon, p. 158
 Ratesburg—now Richborough, p. 293
 REACH M. in St. Margaret's at Cliff, p. 24
 Reading Street, in St. Peter's in Thanet, p. 361
 Reading Hospital, &c. p. 749
 Reapers Row, in Eastry, p. 222
 Reculver, p. 247-293-390-675
 -----, Church of, p. 303.—Parsonage of, p. 636
Regulbium—now Reculver, p. 77
 Rempsted Nunnery, in Suffex, p. 633-702-708
 Richborough, port of, p. 81-163-247.—Island of, p. 288
 Ridge M. see Reach
 Ridgway M. in Chittlet, p. 496
 RIDING GATE, in Canterbury, p. 414
 Ridlingweald, see Ringwold
 Ridlingwold M. p. 55
 Ringjole, see Ringwold
 RINGLEMERE H. and M. in Woodnesborough, p. 230
 RINGLETON, alias RINGSTON M. and wille, in Woodnesborough, p. 230-236-237
 -----, Tythes of, p. 149-234-237
 RINGSLOW, hundred of, p. 298
 RINGWOLD M. of, p. 175
 Ripa, see River
 Ripple, p. 128, 134.—M. p. 21-127-131-163
 -----, Tythes of, p. 161
 -----, Remains of camp at, p. 163
 RIVER, borough of, p. 2.—M. of, p. 38
 Roaring Gutter, near Sandwich, p. 256
 Rochdale, in Lancashire, school at, p. 740
 Rochester Bridge, p. 702-730-733-735-736
 -----, Cattle, p. 43-236-695-698
 -----, Priory of, p. 236-441.—See of, p. 691-706-770
 Roman Cuddy, in Ringwold, p. 177
 Rome's Work, near Deal, p. 163
 Romney, New, town of, p. 80
 Rook's Nest—now St. Laurence S. near Canterbury, p. 671
 Rudelinges, alias Ruddingewold, p. 175
Rutupis, Rutupiæ, Rutupinus Portus, Roman station and port, p. 77-89-247-255-289-384-417

S.

Sabulovicum—now Sandwich, p. 247
 Sackets Hill, in St. Peter's, Thanet, p. 361
 Salisbury, convent of black friars in, p. 710
 SALMESTONE M. and GRANGE, in Thanet, p. 319-326
 -----, p. 329-341-354-357-365-367-377-380
 Saltwood Castle, p. 698-705-725
 SANDOWNE M. and CASTLE, in Word, p. 165-166-244
 -----, p. 245
 Sandred Bay, near Sandwich, p. 251
Sandvicensis Portus, p. 290
 SANDWICH, TOWN and PORT of, p. 32-69-172-216-230-246-295-298-306-372-373-381-382-383.
 Borough of, p. 120.—HAVEN or BAY, p. 163-257-290-374-375.—PRIORY, p. 267.
 —HOSPITALS, p. 268.—SCHOOL, p. 273.
 —CHURCHES, p. 279.—St. Bartholomew's hospital in, p. 229.—GOVERNORS of, possess the ferry at Sandwich, p. 250.—St. Clement's church in, p. 386
 SARRE, VILLE and M. of, p. 247-289-292-293-298-305
 Saye, barony of, p. 9-40-41-192
 Scepehotelmilne, in Canterbury, p. 439
 Scholden, chapel of, p. 155, 156
 Scorafton—now Stonar
 Scortefbroc, land at, p. 103
 Scotland Common, in Ewell, p. 37
 -----, Hills, near Canterbury, p. 402
 SCOTTS COURT, in Great Mongeham, p. 137
 SELINGE M. in Woodnesborough, p. 230
 SELSON H. and DISTRICT of, in Eastry, p. 216-221-223
 Seltone, p. 180
 Silverton, see Selson
 Serles Crofs, p. 255
 Serre, see Sarre
 Serlo, crofs of, p. 241
 SEVENSCORE F. in Minster, p. 321
 Severus's Gate, p. 91
 Shaffords Mill, in Canterbury, p. 399-400-439
 Shalloak, near Canterbury, p. 401
 SHEBBERTSWELL, borough and M. of, p. 2

SHELVING, alias WOODNESBOROUGH M. p. 230, 231
 Shepway, court and crofs, p. 66, 79
 SHERIFFS COURT or HOPE, in Minster, p. 321
 SHINGLETON, alias SKRINKLING DISTRICT and M. in Eastry, p. 218
 SHOART, in St. Nicholas, in Thanet, p. 299
 Sholdon, chapel of, p. 153
 Sibertiswalt, Sibertswold—now Shebbertswell, p. 102, 161
 SIBERTON M. in Hougham, p. 45
 Silfton, see Selson
 SINGLEGE H. and F. in Coldred, p. 8-12-31
 Skrinkling, district and chapel, p. 216, 228. See also Shingleton
 Smallbed, town of, p. 2
 SMITH'S HOSPITAL or ALMS HOUSES, in Canterbury, p. 498, 668
 Snowlyn's Wood, p. 14
 Socage Langdon, borough of, p. 194
 Soldene, Soldone, see Sholdon
 Soles, alias Subballs, lands in Shebbertswell, p. 5
 SOLTON, in Westcliff, p. 30
 SOMERFIELD H. in Woodnesborough, p. 230, 239
 Sortes Strete, p. 135
 SOUTH COURT, alias GREAT HOUGHAM M. p. 43
 -----, M. in Tilmanstone, p. 202-203-222
 South Langdon, borough of, p. 194
 South Place, in Shebbertswell, p. 5
 South Street, in Word, p. 245
 South Upton, in St. Peter's, in Thanet, p. 361
 SOUTHWOLD, Southwood M. in Waldersbare, p. 188-191-192
 Southwood, in Thanet, p. 292
 Sowell Hill and Street, in St. Peter's, in Thanet, p. 361
 Sprating Street H. in St. Laurence, in Thanet, p. 371
St. Alban's, church of, p. 690
 ST. ALPHAGE CHURCH, in Canterbury, p. 464
 ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH, in the same, p. 467
 ST. AUGUSTINE'S Monastery, p. 14-15-120-125-126-127-128-129-130-131-132-135-140-141-143-145-149-150-151-152-153-156-157-159-160-193-237-283-294-298-310-316-317-322-335-341-342-344-357-360-367-369-371-379-381-391-416-441-477-492-493-495-498-512-608-639-645-657-676. High court of, p. 662. See also St. Angulmine's abbat and convent of, in second Index
 ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S HOSPITAL, in Buckland, near Dover, p. 51, 110
 St. Bees, in Cornwall, school at, p. 742
 St. David's, palace at, p. 748
 ST. EDMUND'S CHURCH, in Canterbury, p. 476, 489
 ST. GEORGE'S GATE, in Canterbury, p. 414.
 -----, CHURCH, p. 469
 St. Giles's, Sarre, in Thanet, p. 299-304-305. See also Sarre
 ST. GREGORIES Priory, in Canterbury, p. 98-316-439-484-484-690
 ST. GREGORIES, VILLE and PRECINCT of, in Canterbury, p. 631, 498
 ST. JACOB'S, alias ST. JAMES'S HOSPITAL, near Canterbury, p. 400-401-403-456-457
 ST. JAMES of Radby, or Warraen Down church, in Dover, p. 118
 St. John's, in Thanet, p. 293-298-342-354
 -----, Chapel of, p. 329, 357
 -----, CHURCH, in Canterbury, p. 482, 490
 -----, HOSPITAL in, p. 366-455-490-636-690-759
 St. John, barony of, p. 546
 St. Ivo's Well, in Eastry, p. 225
 St. Laurence Parish, in Thanet, p. 293, 342
 -----, Chapel, p. 329-341-357
 -----, Hospital, near Canterbury, 439-441-490-493-649.—H. and precinct of, p. 495-603-664.—HOSPITAL and House of, p. 663.
 -----, Tytbery of, p. 492-493-663-670
 St. Loys's Chapel, p. 116
 St. Martin's Priory, in Dover, see Dover
 -----, church, in Dover, p. 21-25-26-58-88-492
 -----, church and wille, near Canterbury, p. 392-444
 -----, church, in Canterbury, p. 494
 -----, BISHOPS of, p. 497
 ST. MARGARET'S AT CLIFF, p. 161.—M. of, p. 24
 -----, Prebend of, p. 102
 -----, CHURCH of, in Canterbury, p. 471
 ST. MARY BREDMAN'S CHURCH, in Canterbury, p. 473
 -----, BREDIN, church of, p. 475
 -----, MACDALEN, church of, p. 477
 -----, NORTHGATE, church of, p. 478
 -----, DE CASTRO, church of, p. 489
 St. Mary's Hospital, in Dover, see Dover parish and church

St. Mary's, in Dover Castle, p. 58, 66.—Church in Dover, p. 115
 --- de Castro church, in Canterbury, p. 480-489-490
 --- MAGDALEN, BURGATE CHURCH, in Canterbury, p. 476
 St. Mary Queningate church, in the same, p. 490
 St. Michael Burgate church, in the same, p. 490
 ---'s Gate, in Canterbury, p. 403-404-413
 St. Mildred's Church, in the same, p. 479
 St. Mildred's Lynch, in Thanet, p. 289-315-325
 St. Mildred's Abbey, see Minster
 St. Nicholas parish, in Thanet, p. 293, 307
 St. NICHOLAS COURT F. in Thanet, p. 300.—Tybery of, p. 301
 St. Omer, abbey of St. Bertin in, p. 715
 St. Pancrase chapel, in St. Augustine's, p. 495
 St. Peter's parish in Thanet, p. 293-298-299-342-344.—Chapel of, p. 329, 357
 St PETER'S CHURCH, in Canterbury, p. 487
 St. PAUL'S CHURCH, without Canterbury, p. 491
 --- Tybery of, p. 493-667-670
 St. Radigund's abbey or priory, near Dover, p. 38-39
 ---'s Bath, in Canterbury, p. 429
 St. Richard's close, in Hougham, p. 47
 St. SEPULCHRE'S PRIORY, in Canterbury, p. 31-449-475
 --- 489-693-734
 St. Stephen's hospital, near Canterbury, p. 366; alias Hackington, college at, p. 702
 St. Thomas Becket's Hospital, in Sandwich, p. 269-273
 --- 310.—CHANTRY, p. 287.—Chapel, in St. Gregory's priory, p. 636.
 ---'s Hospital, in Canterbury, see Kingbridge
 Stablegate M. in Nackington, p. 199
 Stanestede, p. 103
 STAPLEGATE H. and BOROUGH of, in Canterbury, p. 393
 --- 395-498.—M. of, p. 402
 Stepenburga, see Statenborough
 STAINBOROUGH H. and M. in Eastry, p. 180-204-221
 Stiffed M. p. 776
 Stodmasi parish, p. 655
 Stodwald, see Studdal
 Stoke Clare, in Suffolk, school at, p. 740
 STONAR M. of, p. 381
 Stonar, p. 247-286-293-325
 STONEHALL, in Great Mongeham, p. 137
 Stoneheap F. in Norborne, p. 143, 151
 Stone H. in St. Peter's, in Thanet, p. 361
 STONE HOUSE, near Canterbury, 429
 Stone-street way, p. 417
 Stonsted, p. 132
 Stormelton, district of, p. 205
 STOUR, RIVER, p. 251 258-289 290-399-435
 Stratford upon Avon, college at, p. 717
 Street, hundred of, p. 103
 --- End H. in Eythorne, p. 197
 --- Borough, in Minster, p. 314
 Studdal, Stodwold, East, in Little Mongeham, p. 140, 142.
 --- West, in Norborne, p. 151, 193.—Tythery of, p. 152
 STUPPINGTON M. in Canterbury, p. 442
 Sturiag, ville of, p. 640
 Sturry, new deanry of, p. 126-154-159.—M. of, p. 658.
 Sturry Barton M. p. 667, see also Longport
 Sudbury, college at, p. 723
 Sumersfield, in Woodnesborough, p. 240
 SUTTON EAST, alias SUTTON COURT M. near Dover, p. 127, 132
 Sutton, near Dover, curacy of, p. 142
 Swerdling M. p. 669
 Swynfield, commandry of, p. 98
 Syberiton M. in Hougham, p. 48

T.

Tanet M. see Minster
 Templar's House, at Canterbury, p. 429
 TEMPLE EWELL M. p. 13, 33.—F. in Ewell, p. 34.—Court lodge, p. 37, see also Ewell
 TEMPLE M. alias BOSWELL BANKS, in Ewell, p. 36
 Tenham, parsonage of, p. 778
 Tertane M. p. 250
 THANET, ISLAND of, p. 288, 675.—Hundred of, p. 298
 --- Manor, see Minster
 Thief Downs, near Sandwich, p. 255
 Thorolt Wood, p. 399-401-442-715
 THORNE M. in Minster, p. 323

Thornton, in Tilmanstone, p. 206, alias BARTLETS, in Thanet, p. 300
 Three Barrow Downs, p. 5
 Throwley, priory of, p. 715
 Thunnor's Leap, in Thanet, p. 315
 TICKENHURST, alias TICKNESS M. in Norborne, p. 149.—District, ville and borough of, p. 143
 --- 220-237
 Ticheteste, see Tickenhurst
 TILMANSTONE M. of, p. 202
 Toul Wood, see Thorholt
 Tour d'ordre, at Bologne, p. 80
 Trendley Park, near Canterbury, p. 402
 Trinity House, corporation of, p. 93-168-302
 Tunbridge Castle, p. 705, 768
 Twenties H. in St. John's, Margate, p. 347
 Tybers F. in Monkton, p. 310
 Tygenhurst, see Tickenhurst

V. U.

Vantsumes, see Wantsume
 VENSON DANE, alias FARTHINGLOE M. in Hougham, p. 46
 Vigo, near Sandwich, p. 257
 Villawood, in Thanet, p. 292, see also Wood, alias Woodchurch
 Vincent's, in St. John's, Margate, p. 347
 Vine F. in Norborne, p. 150
 Vispole H. near Canterbury, p. 444, see also Fishpoole
 Ulcombe, church and college, p. 707
 UPDOWNE PLACE S. in Ham, p. 182.—H. in Eastry, p. 223.—In St. John's, in Thanet, p. 347
 UPPER COURT, in St. Lawrence, in Thanet, p. 370
 Upper Each, in Woodnesborough, p. 239
 --- FARM, in Sutton, near Dover, 129.—In Hernden, in Eastry, p. 220
 UPPER HALE, alias Uphull, in St. Nicholas, in Thanet, p. 300
 Upriche, in Woodnesborough, p. 232, see also Upper Each Upton Court, in Shebbertwell, p. 4.—F. in Word, p. 244.—Wood M. see Shebbertwell

W.

WADLING, alias WATLING M. in Ripple, p. 132
 Wadnal Wood, in Coldred, p. 12
 Waldershare Parish, p. 2.—Park 11, 12
 WALTERSHARE M. alias MALMAINES, p. 187
 WALLETS COURT, alias WEST CLIFF M. p. 28
 WALMER M. p. 172.—CASTLE, p. 173, 165.—Parish, p. 247
 Waltham, in Eastry, p. 228
 Walton, Great and Little F. in Eastry, p. 223, 224
 Walwarefcere, see Waldershare
 Wanetberge, see Woodnesborough
 WANSON F. in St. Margaret's at Cliff, p. 26
 Wantume River, p. 251-289-290-305-325-384-385
 Warren of Dover Castle, p. 66
 WASCHESTER F. in Minster, p. 321
 WATEREND, GREAT and LITTLE F. in Ewell, p. 33-37
 --- 38-204
 Watling street, road, p. 417
 Watynholte Wood, p. 12
 Way Borough, in Minster, p. 314, 322
 Well, chantry, in p. 637
 Well, see Venion Dane
 Well Court, p. 495, 495
 WELL STREET F. in East Langdon, p. 125; alias PARK GATE, in Norborne, p. 150
 Wells F. in Eastry, p. 223
 Wendeston, lordship of, p. 225, see also Wenstone
 Wendover M. in co. Bucks, p. 60, 61
 Wenstone H. in Eastry, p. 223
 Westbroke, alias the Brooks, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 346
 WEST CLIFF M. p. 28.—Church of, p. 250
 WEST COURT M. in Shebbertwell, p. 2, 6
 ---, alias BURNT HOUSE M. in Norborne, p. 151, alias BURNT BARN, in Bethanger, p. 143, 185
 WESTGATE, alias GARING M. in Birchington, p. 335
 --- Ville of, in Canterbury, p. 393, 394.—GATE of, p. 415.—Mill, p. 439.—Gaol of, p. 393, 394.—CHURCH of, p. 482.—Hundred and ville of, 498.—Aldermanry of, p. 643
 West Hougham, borough of, p. 2
 West Langdon, borough of, ibid
 Westminster, church of, p. 721

- WEST STREET, alias PARK GATE, in Norborne, p. 150
 Westwell, parsonage of, p. 516
 Westerham, church or parsonage of, p. 250, 552
 Westwood, in Thanet, p. 292
Wetherleeze Hill, in Minster, p. 326
White Friars, precinct of, in Canterbury, p. 498, 622
 WHITFIELD M. p. 15.—House in Canterbury, p. 426
 Whitland, port of, p. 81, 766
 Whyvelton M. of, p. 768
 Wicombe, in co. Bucks, school at, p. 366
 Widderley Hill, in Minster, p. 319
Wigmore H. in Eythorne, p. 197
 Willow-wood, in Thanet, see Wood; alias Woodchurch
Wincheap Gate, in Canterbury, p. 415
 Winecheap H. in Canterbury, p. 394
 Wingham, court of, p. 180.—College of, p. 711
 Winkeland, in Sutton near Dover, p. 128-130-132
 Tythes of, p. 129
 WINKLETON OAKS F. in Sutton near Dover, p. 128
 Wippeds Fleet, p. 294, see also Ebbfleet
 Wode chapel, in Thanet, p. 312, 313
 Wodnesbeorgh, p. 12
 Woghope at Hernden, in Eastry, p. 225
 Wolverhampton, church of, p. 705
 Wood; alias Woodchurch, in Thanet, p. 293-298-299.
 —Parsonage of, p. 340
 Woodling M. see Wadling
 WOODNESBOROUGH M. alias SHELVING, p. 214, 230
 ----- RECTORY and M. of, p. 237-239-241
 Wootton, parish of, p. 2
 Wootton's, Lady, park, near Canterbury, p. 400.—Palace and Green, p. 62, see also Wotton
 Worcester, church of, p. 732
 Word Court, p. 245.—Chapel, p. 281
 Worhope, at Hernden in Eastry, p. 225
 Worth Street borough, p. 180.—Menefic, p. 222.—Chapel of, p. 228.—Great tythes of, p. 229, see also
 Word
 Worth Gate, antient, in Canterbury, p. 408-410-415
 Wrotham, palace at, p. 720.—Rectory and vicarage of,
 p. 785
 Wye, college and school, p. 731
 Wyke, chapel of, near Canterbury, p. 444.—M. see Moat
 Wymondham, school at, p. 742
 Wynklond M. in East Langdon, p. 126

Y.

- Yenlade, in Thanet, p. 305, see also Genlade
 York, see of, p. 673

INDEX of PERSONS.

☞ The present possessors of manors and estates, and their places of residence, are marked in ROMAN SMALL CAPITALS;—and the references to the descents, and accounts of persons and families, and the present incumbents of livings, in italics.

M. stands for manor, S. for seat, F. for farm, and cl. for clericus, or clergyman. The figures comprehend likewise the notes in each page.

A.

- ABBOT, MAURICE, p. 22. JOHN possesses Upper Each F. in Woodnesborough, p. 259. Thomas,
 p. 371. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 613. George, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 426. Account of,
 p. 746
 -----'s, of Ramsgate, p. 378
Abel, Jobi et Censurs s. a., p. 265
 Abergavenny, George Nevill, Lord, p. 73
 Abingdon, Edmund de, archbishop of Canterbury,
account of, p. 708
 Adam, Thomas, p. 336
 Adams, John, prebendary of Canterbury,
account of, p. 621
 Adelm, archbishop of Canterbury,
account of, p. 507
 Adelold, the chamberlain, p. 237
 Adrian, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 646, 679. Archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 648
 Adye, Edmund, p. 360
 Ægelnoth, archbishop of Canterbury, see Agelnoth
 Ægelred, king, p. 216
 Ælfleda, the mighty Lady of Mercia, p. 418
 Æthelgan, archbishop of Canterbury,
 p. 508.—Account of, p. 687
 Æthelstane, king, p. 431
 Agar, Gertrude, p. 356. Harry, p. 447
 Agelnoth, archbishop of Canterbury,
 p. 505. Account of, p. 688
 Aglionby, George, dean of Canterbury,
account of, p. 594
 Airson, John, cl. p. 467, 497
 Airy, Henry, prebendary of Canterbury,
account of, p. 606
 AISLABYE, RAWSON, possesses DANE COURT, in Tilmanstone, p. 204
 Alan, prior of Christ church, p. 548
 Albermarle, William de, p. 75
 Albin, abbat of St. Augustine's,
account of, p. 646, 648
 Albini, or Albineto, William de, p. 149-208-236-237
 Albrincis, or Auberville, family of,
 p. 18-43-61-174, see also Auberville
 Alcher, Earl, p. 295, 364
 Alchmund, abbat of St. Augustine's,
account of, p. 647
 Alcock, Stephen, p. 145. John, p. 394. Robert,
 p. 497. Thomas, cl. p. 473, 474
 A'Lee, John, p. 262
 Alexander, abbat of St. Augustine's,
account of, p. 651
 -----, Alexander, LL. D. p. 357. Peter, prebendary of Canterbury,
account of, p. 615
 Alday, Edward, prebendary of Canterbury,
 p. 468. Account of, p. 620. Master of Kingibridge hospital, p. 630
 Aldelyn, alias Aldon, Thomas de, p. 43
 Alderiton, John, cl. p. 49, 466
 Aldhunc, abbat of St. Augustine's,
account of, p. 645
 Aldric, king, p. 140
 Aldrich, Francis, cl. p. 472
 Aldworth's, p. 156, 157
 Aldy's, p. 262
 Alfred, king, p. 684
 Alfric, abbat of St. Augustine's,
account of, p. 647
 Alfrid, abbat of the same,
account of, ibid
 Alfward, the King's bailiff, p. 418
 Alianor, queen, p. 31
 Alkham, John, p. 40-50 93. Virgil de,
 cl. p. 47
 -----'s of Alkham, p. 47
 ALKIN, THOMAS VERRIER, possesses the priory in Sandwich, p. 268
 -----'s, of Canterbury,
 p. 129 233-268
 Allen, Jeremiah, cl. p. 28. Thomas,
 p. 173. THOMAS possesses New Purchase in Tilmanstone,
 p. 206. Joan, cl. p. 354, 386. Richard,
 cl. p. 482, 490
 Almeric,

Almeric, or Almer, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Alnod, Cilt, p. 103, 391
 Alphage, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 418-504-505-508 510-546-547, See also Elphege
 Alureds, p. 309
 Aluric, archbishop, p. 508
 Ampellor, Clement, p. 405
 Amye, Henry, cl. p. 49
 Amyand, Claudius, p. 264
 Andrews, William, p. 41. Thomas, p. 94. John, cl. p. 130-214-482
 Angell's, of Stockwell, account of, p. 35
 Anjou, duke of, p. 260, 514
 Anlaff, the Danish chief, p. 295, 337
 Annot, Charles, p. 470
 Anschitill, the archdeacon, p. 102, 161, account of, p. 776
 Antelm, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 31-450-506-509 539-541-547-672, account of, p. 692
 Anthony, John, p. 449
 Anyan, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Appleton, Roger, p. 47. Thomas, p. 225-234-239-326. -----'s, p. 241
 Appulderfield, Henry de, p. 120. -----'s, p. 463, 478
 Aptley, John, cl. p. 136, 275
 Arceles, Saker de, p. 33
 ARCHBISHOPS of Canterbury, LIST OF, p. 675
 ARCHDEACONS of Canterbury, LIST OF, p. 775
 Archdekyne, Edmund, p. 262
 Archer, John, p. 262. -----'s, of River, p. 39-40-41-47
 Arden's, p. 208
 Arderne, Thomas, p. 267. James, cl. p. 482. John, cl. p. 487
 Argent, William, p. 222, 229
 Arivog, king of Britain, See Arviragus
 Arkwright, sir Richard, p. 422
 Armagh, archbishop of, p. 654
 Armanter, William, p. 279
 Armarar, John, cl. p. 588
 Arnald, John, cl. p. 127
 Arnold, John, cl. p. 193
 Arragon, queen of, p. 500
 Arundel, Thomas Fitzalan, earl of, p. 73, 76. William, p. 73. Richard, p. 543
 -----, Albini, earl of, p. 250
 -----, sir William, p. 532. Raymond Thomas, p. 473
 -----, Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 127-128 -137-186-189. Account of, p. 726-728-773
 Arviragus, king of Britain, p. 57, 81
 Asceies, John de, p. 175
 Ase, Henry, cl. p. 368
 Ashe, Thomas, cl. p. 229
 Ashburnham, Stephen de, p. 60. Bertram, p. 67. Sir Bartholomew, p. 447. Alice, p. 638
 Ashdowne, Mr. p. 113
 Ashetone, sir William, p. 22. Sir Roger, p. 58. Sir Robert, p. 59, 71
 Asketin, archdeacon, p. 776
 Atlong, William, p. 480
 Asten, James, cl. p. 156
 Astrobuita, St. p. 505
 Athelard, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 120, 285. Account of, p. 682-683-762-775
 Athelm, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 684
 Athelwald, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Athelweald, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Athelstane, king, p. 684
 Athol, Strabolgies, earls of, p. 54-61-175. Isabel, counts of, p. 542
 Atkins, John, cl. p. 466
 Atefeld, Solomon de, p. 39
 Atte Halle's, p. 39, 93
 Atehesche, John, p. 261
 Atte Welle's, p. 261
 At-Wood, See Wood
 Auberville, family of, p. 18-23-24-172-174
 Aucher, James, cl. p. 8, 13. Edwyn, p. 192. Dr. John, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 245-452-533. Account of, p. 613. Sir Anthony, p. 407, 533
 Averanches, family of, p. 43-68-75
 Augustine, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 325-390-498 -499-503-508-545-639-648-653-661-671. Account of, p. 675
 Aula, Adam de, p. 209
 Austen, Richard, of Eastry, p. 149, 220. John, p. 227
 -----'s, of Thanet, p. 339. Of Canterbury, p. 420, 495
 Austrobuita, St. p. 530
 Ayerff, William, cl. p. 471. Prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 609. Robert Gunley, cl. p. 374 -487. Mr. p. 358

Ayling, John, cl. p. 311, 314
 Aymer's, account of, p. 29-95-123
 Aylworth, Humphry, cl. p. 281

B.

Baa, Nicholas de, p. 599
 Bachelor, Christopher, p. 475
 Backhouse, J. H. cl. p. 172. William, archdeacon of Canterbury, p. 629, and master of Kingbridge hospital, p. 631. Account of, p. 788
 Bacon, sir Francis, p. 754
 Badcock, Thomas, p. 110
 Badletmere, Bartholomew de, p. 70, 132. Account of, p. 432, 768. Giles de, p. 75
 -----'s, p. 14-54-175-176-194-447
 Bagnell, Thomas, cl. p. 215
 Baireux, Odo, bishop of, p. 8-10-28-30-33-36-49-60-67 -87-98-123-140-149-152-161-180-187-191 -195-198-200-208-214-230-233-234-236-237 -249-391-691
 Baker, Hercules, p. 14. Edward, p. 52. JOHN, possessor ancestral at Marten, in East Langdon, p. 125. John, p. 360, 408. Sir John, of Siffinghurst, p. 142. John, cl. p. 198. Richard, p. 170. Samuel, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 ----- alias Barbor, John, cl. p. 170
 -----'s, of Deal, p. 125, 182. Of Caldharn, p. 214, 357
 Balbourne, John, cl. p. 482
 Balderston, Samuel, p. 411. William, cl. p. 156
 Baldock, Thomas, p. 4, 128. William, p. 4
 Baldwin, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 228 311-582. Account of, p. 702, 762
 Bale, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620
 Balam, Isaac, cl. p. 143
 Baliol, Alexander, p. 54, 175. Sir William, p. 447. John, p. 514
 Ball, Michael, cl. p. 49. David, cl. p. 308
 Balle, John, a famous preacher, p. 723
 Balliol, Tho. de & Consorts sua, p. 265
 Bancroft, Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606. Archbishop, account of, p. 744
 Banded's, p. 40
 Banks, sir Joseph, K. H. p. 173. John, cl. p. 358
 Banniter, Robert, cl. p. 8
 Barbor, Thomas, p. 279
 Barford, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 Bargar, Robert, p. 5
 Bargrave, Robert, p. 26. ISAAC, p. 206, lessee of part of Apley parsonage, p. 152; of EASTRY COURT and demesnes, p. 217. Isaac, cl. p. 198. Isaac, dean of Canterbury, p. 538, 579, account of, p. 593; prebendary of the same, p. 537, account of, p. 611. Charles, p. 226. Frances, p. 544. John, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 579, account of, p. 611
 -----'s, of Eastry, p. 5, 208; account of, p. 217-226 -227-532
 Barham, John, cl. p. 56. Thomas, cl. p. 331. William, p. 405. Richard, p. 477
 Barker, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Barling, Mr. p. 452
 Barlow, John, cl. p. 142. William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614
 Barnard, Sarah, p. 227
 Barne, William, p. 238
 Barnes, William, p. 45. -----'s p. 234
 Barney, William, cl. p. 27-32-53
 Barsham, Geoffry de, p. 405
 BARRETT, THOMAS, possesses Whitfield M. p. 14; Linacre M. p. 15; lessee of Whitfield parsonage, p. 17; possesses Bere court, p. 30; lessee of Westcliff parsonage, p. 32; possesses F. in East Studdal, p. 142. Thomas, p. 96-223-321-428-449. Hugh, p. 453. George, of Canterbury, p. 472.
 -----'s p. 473
 Barrie's, of Sevingon, p. 50
 Barrow, Rowland, p. 115. Etheldred, p. 353, 356
 Barry, Richard, p. 75-76-94. Agnes, p. 39. William, p. 76
 Barsham, Geoffry de, p. 405
 Bartill, Robert, p. 406
 Bartlet, Simon, p. 405, 406
 Barton, John, p. 93, 94. Thomas, p. 158, 447. William, p. 441. Elizabeth, p. 451
 -----'s, p. 234
 Barwick, Alured, p. 127
 Basing's, account of, p. 45
 Bassendin, William, cl. p. 471

Bassett,

- Baffett, Thomas, p. 68, 75. Ralph, p. 70. Ralph, Lord, p. 71
Bajynge, Willielmus de & Confors sua, p. 265
 Batehurst, Thomas, p. 449
 Bathel, Robert de, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 652
 Battely, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606. Archdeacon, p. 534, 628. Master of Kingsbridge hospital, p. 630, account of, p. 787
 Bawdwyn's, p. 487
 Baxe, Harry, p. 224, 225
 Bayley, Thomas, p. 170, 314
 Beacon, Theodosius, M. D. p. 533.—Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 609
 Beadmead, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Beake, Nicholas, p. 263. Aphra, p. 480
 -----'s p. 480, 481
 Beale, Hamon, p. 447
 Been, Thomas, p. 118
 Bearblock, John, cl. p. 32
 Beauchamp, Sir John, p. 71
 Beaufort, Henry, bishop of Winchester, p. 729
 Beaumont, John, Lord, p. 72. Sir John, p. 76. Admiral Basil, p. 168
 Beauveys, Thomas de, p. 392
 Beauvoir, Dr. Osmund, of Canterbury, p. 521; his high character, p. 583, 602.
 Bec, William del, p. 209
 Beccam, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Beche, Robert, cl. p. 481
 Beck, John, cl. p. 276
 Becker, Michael, p. 45. Becker, cl. p. 242
 Becket, Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 217-259 -523-548-567-568-624-672; account of, p. 697. Archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 777
 Beckford's, p. 26
 Beccher, Sir William, p. 95
 BEDFORD, Mrs. lessee of Newland Grange, in Thanet, p. 370
 Beling, Roger, p. 69
 Belk, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 535, account of, p. 609. William, prebendary of the same, p. 535, account of ibid. Belk's, p. 170
 Belknap, Philip, p. 444. Belknap's, account of, p. 176
 Bell, John, p. 261
 Beilamont, Charles, Earl of, p. 544
 BELSEY, HENRY, THE HEIRS OF, possessors Boswell Banks M. in Exwell, p. 36
 Benatt, Nicholas, cl. p. 474
 Benchkin, John, p. 240
 Benedict, prior of Christ Church, account of, p. 548
 Benet, William, p. 454
 Benge, Richard, p. 201
 Benger's, of Hougham, p. 48
 Bennet, John, cl. p. 38. Ellen, p. 135. William, p. 456-460-468. Thomas, p. 755. Bennet's, of Canterbury, p. 465
 Benkin's, of Polton, p. 238
Benjon, John, cl. p. 8, prebendary of Canterbury; account of, p. 607. REV. EDW. BECKINGHAM, possesses Vine F. in Northborne, p. 150, 172. Susan, p. 285.
 -----'s, of Canterbury, account of, p. 150
 Bensted, Andrew, cl. p. 367
 Bentley, Admiral, Sir John, p. 51. Bentley's of Buckland, p. 52. Of Sandwich, p. 282
 Beornel, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Beornoth, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Bere, William, p. 29. Valentine de, p. 90. Roger, p. 306. Bere's, p. 370
 Berbam, Robert de, p. 11
 Berkley, William, prior of Sandwich, account of, p. 267
 Berkeley, Honorable George, p. 95. George, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614
 Bermesham, Nicholas, cl. p. 242
 Berne, John, p. 261
 Berney, fit Robert, p. 75
 Bernham, John, p. 261
 Berry, Thomas, p. 234. John, p. 466. Berry's, p. 624
 Bersted, Walter de, p. 69
 Bertha, queen, p. 445-496-641-661-677
 Bertie, Peregrine, p. 189, 323. Henry, p. 189. Susan, p. 192
 Bertram, Ralph, cl. p. 52
 Best, Thomas, p. 76, 408. George, p. 492. Best's, of St. Laurence, p. 491, 670
 BETHLEM HOSPITAL, GOVERNORS OF, possesses Barfen M. p. 201
 Bethune, John, cl. p. 283
 Bethanger, owners of, p. 456
 -----, Ralph de, p. 148
 Bettenham, John, p. 441
 Betts, Richard, p. 444
 Beverley, Josiah, p. 44
 Beveridge, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 610
 Bewberg, Ambrose de, p. 250
 Bigg, William, p. 414, 428. Bigg's, of Canterbury, p. 487, 488
 BIGGS, THOMAS, possesses Little Archer's Court, in River, p. 41. MAXTON M. in Hougham, p. 47
 Bigod, Hugh, p. 69, 251
 Bikenor's, p. 124
 Billingsley, Nicholas, cl. p. 186. Samuel, p. 192. J., cl. p. 242. Billingsley's, p. 208
 Bing, George, p. 94, 112. Bing's, p. 357
 Bingham, Henry, p. 107. John, p. 114
 Bingiley, John, p. 54
 Binniwith, family of, p. 446
 Birch, William, cl. p. 140
 Bird, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
 Birkett, Edward, cl. p. 156
 Bishop, John, cl. p. 215
 Bishopbridge, Roger de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 776
 Bishopsgate, John de, p. 405
 Bisset, James, cl. p. 474
 Bix, Thomas, p. 465. Bix's, p. 480
 Bizle, Jordan de, cl. p. 331
 Blake, Robert, p. 74
 Blackwood's, p. 150
 Blaichinden, William, p. 173
 Blair, Dr. p. 753
 Blaxland, John, p. 323, 327. Blaxland's, p. 303
 Blay, John de, cl. p. 284
 Blaze, St. p. 684
 Blechenden, Thomas, p. 240. Blechenden's, of Monkton, p. 311
 Blechynden, Thomas, cl. p. 230. Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 607
 -----'s, of Woodneiborough, p. 241
 Blome, Elizabeth, p. 328
 Blomer, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620. Ralph, prebendary of the same, account of, ibid.
 Blossom, William, cl. p. 464
 Blowfield, Rachel, p. 355
 Bludworth, John, cl. p. 368
 Blychenden, Thomas, p. 237
 Bockland's, p. 234
 Bocton, de, family of, p. 41
 Bodyn, Thomas, p. 262
 Bokingham, John, bishop of Lincoln, account of, p. 531, 578
 Bolain, Noah, p. 477
 Bold, William, p. 406
 Boles, Stephen, cl. p. 331
 Bolingbroke, St. John's, viscounts, p. 6 128-148-182-323 324-335-369
 Bollen, Daniel, cl. p. 479
 Bolney, Edward, p. 467
 Bologne, Eustace, earl of, p. 59-67-86
 Bolonia, Pharamus de, p. 60, 61
 Bonner, Anne, p. 227
 Boniface, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 129, 500. Account of, p. 708
 Booky, Matthew, cl. account of, p. 241-378-380
 Booth, Anne, p. 111
 Bonny, —, cl. p. 18
 Borlace, Dr. p. 352
 Borough, fit Edward, p. 28. John, p. 263
 Bostock, Robert, cl. p. 49, 119
 Boteler, Andrew, p. 75. Henry, p. 122. William, of Eastry, p. 124-151-237. WILLIAM, possesses a house and farm at Brook street, in Eastry, p. 222-223. Thomas, p. 220, 234. Richard, p. 221. Katherine, p. 225. Stephen, p. 404. John, p. 440. Boteler, esquire to archbishop Courtney, p. 725. Mrs. resides at Shebbertswell, p. 4
 -----'s, of Eastry, p. 197. Account of, p. 219-222-226-227. Of Heronden, p. 236-238-244. Of Brookstreet, account of, p. 223
 Botelure, William, p. 405
 Botiller, John, p. 262
 Botitourt, Maud de, p. 431
 Botting's, of Faverham, p. 472
 Bouchery, Weyman, cl. p. 469, 470
 Boudny's, of Canterbury, p. 483
 Bouchier, fit John, p. 76. John, p. 128, 172. John, archdeacon of Canterbury, master of Kingsbridge hospital, p. 538, 630. Account of, p. 784. Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 539. Account of, p. 752-762-763 764
 -----'s, p. 530, 752

Bourn, Mr. p. 206. John, cl. p. 406. Ralph, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 654. John de, p. 734
 Bourne, Obadiah, cl. p. 133. Simon atte, p. 405. John, p. 450. Bartholomew de, p. 625, 626
 Bowers, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 609. Thomas, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 787
 Bowle, John, p. 51
 Bowler, Robert, p. 133, 135
 Bowles, Valentine, p. 151, 167
 Bowden, fir John, p. 194
 Bowman's, p. 285
 Boxley, abbat and convent of, p. 98, 255
 Botton, Robert, p. 407
 Boys, fir John, p. 3-4-5-158-396-407-456-533-634-635. John, p. 52-76-151-262-263-267-481. John, cl. p. 140-186-208. John, dean of Canterbury, p. 538; account of, p. 592; master of Eastbridge hospital, p. 639. Captain John, p. 235. William, of Bonnington, p. 3, 4. William, p. 5-35-267. William, of Nonington, p. 12. William, of Tilmanstone, p. 206. William, of Sandwich, account of, p. 222-235-283; WILLIAM possesses Statenborough and Gore F. in Easfry, p. 222, 224. Sir William, p. 544. Edward, p. 14-15-181. Sir Edward, p. 70-95-263. Roger, p. 14, 15. Anne, p. 32. Anne, p. 174. Thomas, cl. p. 130, 187. Thom's, of Fredville, p. 170. Thomas, p. 166. Of Eyrthorne, p. 199. Of St. Gregories, p. 544. Christopher, p. 173. Jane, p. 221, 222. Margaret, p. 245. Jeffrey, ibid.
 Boys's, p. 6, 182. Of Fredville, p. 3-4-14-15-45-145. Of Nonington, p. 5. Of Betshanger, p. 145, 148; account of, p. 184. Of Bonnington, p. 196. Of Hoad, p. 199. Of Barristone, p. 201. Of Denton, p. 202. Of Tilmanstone, p. 208. Of Sandwich, account of, p. 222. Of St. Gregories, p. 634
 BOYS'S HOSPITAL, GOVERNORS OF, possesses an estate in Sholsten, p. 158
 Braban, John, p. 93, 94
 Braborne, John, cl. p. 387. William, prior of St. Gregories, p. 634
 Bracket, Hugh, p. 115
 Bradegare, Robert de, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Bradev, Henry, cl. p. 276
 Bradford, Henry Kelley, p. 223. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608
 Bradhall, William, p. 299
 Bradley's, of Sandwich, p. 285
 Bradock, John, p. 628. William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 631
 Bradwardin, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 539, 718; account of, p. 719
 Braems, Arnold, p. 95. Charles, p. 115
 Brakenbury, Sarah, p. 162, 170
 Bralesford, Humphry, cl. p. 464, 482
 Brancefire, Adam de, cl. p. 308
 Brandon, Phillip Broadnax, cl. p. 166, 464. Anne, p. 472. Edmund, p. 477
 Bray, John, junior, Lieutenant of Sandron castle, p. 166. ADMIRAL, possesses a house in Great Mongeham, p. 158. William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606
 Braybrooke, Henry, p. 69
 Brayhan, Henry, cl. p. 49
 Bregwin, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 508; account of, p. 681
 Brenchesley's, p. 517
 Brenchley, William, p. 531
 Brent, Edward, p. 263. Roger, p. 406-440-460-463
 Breland, John, p. 157
 Breto, Eyci de la, see Eyci
 BRETON, WILLIAM, possesses Downe Barton M. p. 299. A house in St. Peter's, p. 361. Shoart in Thanet, p. 300. WILLIAM and ELIAB, possesses Bartlett's in St. Nicholas, ibid. Alexander, cl. p. 13. Richard, p. 334, 384
 -----'s, of Hougham, account of, p. 44, 48. Of Enfield, p. 299
 Brett, fir Robert, p. 76. Nicholas, cl. p. 130. Thomas, cl. p. ibid. 182-185-187. Thomas, p. 145, 148. Percival, p. 145. John, p. 195. Charles, p. 264.
 -----'s, of Spring Grove, p. 16, 151
 Brevis, William, p. 110
 Breus, fir William de, p. 444
 Brewer, William, cl. p. 49, 119. William de, p. 75
 Brewis, William, p. 94
 Brice, Thomas, p. 111
 BRICKENDEN, SARAH, possesses Great Hay F. in Easfry, p. 223. Samuel, p. 137

Bripton, John de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 780
 BRIDGES, SIR BROOK, bart. possesses a farm in Chillenden, p. 215; South, alias Upper Hamwold, in Woodnesborough, p. 235; lessee of Monkton Court, p. 309. THOMAS, possesses a house in St. Nicholas in Thanet, p. 302. Mrs. MARY, possesses a house in the same, ibid. JOHN, possesses Frosts F. in the same, p. 301, 302
 -----'s, of St. Nicholas, p. 300. Account of, p. 301, 303
 Bridger, Peter, p. 166, 360. Bridger's, p. 480, 481
 Briggs, John, p. 460
 Brigitow, William, cl. p. 242
 Brigham, William, cl. p. 183
 Brintan, St. p. 641
 Brintan, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Bristo, Osburn de, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 549
 Bristol, mayor of, p. 457
 Britwald, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 680
 Broadley, John, p. 226. HEIRS OF, possesses Upper Hale in St. Nicholas, p. 300. Broadley's, p. 117
 Broadrep, Richard, p. 755
 Broc, Elias de, p. 138. Ralph, p. 698. Robert de, ibid.
 Brockhull, fir Thomas, p. 75, 236. Brockhull's, p. 447
 Brockman, John, of county of Essex, p. 336, 337
 -----'s, p. 29
 Broke, John, p. 119. William, cl. p. 284. Thomas, p. 340, 341
 Broker, John, p. 419-460-471
 Bromdych, John, abbat of Langdon, p. 19
 Brome, Robert, cl. p. 178. William, p. 405. Simon, p. 407. Bartholomew, ibid. William, p. 480
 Bromley, Robert, p. 35
 Bromitone, Anthony, cl. p. 175
 Bromton, John, p. 433
 Bromwell, James, cl. p. 331
 Brooke, fir John, p. 76. Samuel, p. 339. Mary, p. 366. Edward, p. 371. Matthew, cl. p. 378
 -----'s, of Margate, p. 356, 357. Of St. Laurence, p. 370
 Broom, Thomas, p. 40
 Broomstone, Anthony, cl. p. 136
 Broucke's, p. 279
 Brogton, Edward, cl. p. 471. Broughton's, p. 285
 Broune, William, p. 405
 Brown, Benedict, p. 35. Thomas, p. 94. John, p. 113, 282. John, cl. p. 496. Robert, p. 223. James, p. 346. Matthew, p. 629, 638
 -----'s, of London, p. 158. Of Sandwich, p. 279
 Browne, Stephen, p. 244. Arnold, p. 261, Basil, p. 347. Simon, p. 407. Matthew, p. 455. Ralph, p. 478
 -----'s, of Beechworth, p. 40-195-199-200. Of Canterbury, p. 416-448-624
 Bruchelle, alias Brenchley, William, p. 531
 Bruin's, p. 441
 Bruman, p. 3
 Bruys, David de, p. 514
 Bryce, Henry, p. 262
 Bydges, John, cl. p. 313. SAMUEL EGERTON, possesses Walshester F. in Minster, p. 321, 449
 Bryngeborne, Roger, p. 47
 Byto, Richard, p. 698
 Buchard, William, p. 270, 272
 Buck, Brute, p. 166. Susan, p. 374
 -----'s, of county York, possesses a moiety of Ellington, in Thanet, p. 374
 Buckingham, Staffords, Dukes of, p. 73-500-736-768-769. George Villars, Duke of, p. 74
 Buckland, Alexander de, p. 75
 Buckworth, Everard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 622
 Budden, Dr. p. 735
 Bufkin, Ralph, p. 7-108-113-114
 Bugg, Jane, p. 441
 Buikeley, Thomas, p. 262
 Bull, Michael, cl. p. 119
 Buller, John, p. 334. William, p. 339. Francis, p. 354. William, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 605
 Bullock, George, cl. p. 140
 Bulteel, John, p. 253
 Bunce, William, cl. p. 284-285-286. Wheler, cl. p. 286
 -----'s, p. 183
 Bungay, John, p. 477. John, cl. p. 487. Thomas, p. 710
 Bungey, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 609
 Burchett, Josiah, p. 264, 285
 Burdett, Edward, p. 167
 Burgh, Thomas lord, p. 28, 29. Hubert de, p. 62-63-64-68-78-108-124-409-410. John de, p. 115
 Burghurth, Bartholomew de, p. 70-71-259. Robert de, p. 70-71-75
 Burgos, William, master of Kingsbridge hospital, p. 629
 Burkett, John, cl. p. 311, 314

Burley,

Burley, fir Simon de. p. 72-132-181-386-412
 Burne, John de, p. 85. Eustace de, p. 209
 Burnel, Robert, Bishop of Bath and Wells, p. 710
 Burney, Richard, cl. p. 464-482-489
 Burroughs, fir James, p. 525-526
 Burt, John, p. 237
 Burton, Francis, p. 41. Nicholas, p. 91, 262, 285.
 George, cl. p. 130. Christopher, cl. p. 136, 175.
 Thomas, cl. p. 140; Master of Kingsbridge hospital, p. 630.
 -----'s, of Ireland, p. 320
 Burrell, Peter, p. 96
 Burvill, James, cl. p. 18-125-130-156-183-208
 -----'s, p. 208
 Burwell, William, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Busby, Thomas, p. 303
 BUSHELL, GEORGE, lessee of Birchington and Wood, alias Woodchurch parsonages, p. 340
 Butcher, Francis, p. 407
 Butter, John, cl. 331. William, p. 467. John, preben-dary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614. Lilly, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 622
 -----'s, of Ireland, p. 704; see also Boteler
 Buttenshaw, Thomas, p. 487
 Buzy, George, p. 10
 Byde, William, cl. p. 76
 Byer, John, p. 307. Byer's, alias Bere's, p. 336, 370
 Bykenore, Thomas, et Consors sua, p. 265
 Byrch, William, cl. p. 118. William Dejovas, cl. p. 321
 -449-457
 -----, ELIZABETH, possesses the BLACK FRIARS in Canterbury, p. 449

C.

Cabot, Francis, p. 45
 Cæsar, Julius, the Roman Emperor, p. 56-57-80-134
 -160-162-173
 Cæsar, fir Thomas, p. 195
 CAGE, LEWIS, *jun. possesses W. Langdon M. and abbey,
 p. 20; Southwood in Waldershare*, p. 192. Cage, Christopher, cl. p. 476
 Caine, Harie, cl. p. 117
 Caldwell, John, cl. 380
 Caley, Richard, abbat of Langdon, p. 19
 Calt hill, James, cl. p. 53
 Calard's, see Collard's
 Calvel, William, p. 450
 Calward's, see Collard's
 Camarthen, Francis, Marquis of, p. 166
 CAMBRIDGE, MASTER AND FELLOWS OF EMANUEL
 COLLEGE in, possesses lands in Ewell, p. 37.
 Emanuel College in, p. 584, 585
 -----, PROVOST AND FELLOWS OF QUEEN'S
 COLLEGE in, possesses St. Nicholas court M. in Thanet, p. 300
 ----- University, library in, p. 354
 -----, Edmund Langley, earl of, p. 71
 Camden, lord, p. 492
 Camoys, Robert de, p. 70
 Campania, Jobnes de, et Consors sua, p. 265
 Campredon, David, cl. p. 8, 56
 Caen, Hugh de, prior of Dover, p. 106
 CANNON, JAMES, *possesses Lyd court in-grounds, in Worde,
 p. 243*
 CANNEY, MRS. possesses Street-End F. in Eytborne, p. 197
 CANTERBURY, MAYOR AND COMMONALTY, lessees of Callis court in Thanet, p. 360; *possesses
 Abbat's mill in Canterbury*, p. 366-438
 -742-743
 ----- castle, governor of, p. 68
 CANTERBURY, LIST OF ARCHBISHOPS OF, p. 675
 -----, ARCHBISHOP OF, *possesses West court M.
 p. 5; the parsonage and advowson of Sbebbertswell*, p. 7; Coldred M. p. 9; the parsonage and advowson of Coldred, p. 13; the parsonage and advowson of Whitfield, p.
 17; *the parsonage and advowson of West
 Langdon*, p. 20; *Fritb, alias the Fright
 M. in Gufston*, p. 22; the parsonage and advowson of the same, p. 22, 23; Reach, alias Ridge M. in St. Margaret's at Cliffe,
 p. 26; the parsonage and advowson of the same, p. 27; the parsonage and advowson of River, p. 42; Siberston tybery, p. 46;
Fartbingloe, alias Venfon Dane M. p. 47;
the parsonage and advowson of Hougham,
 p. 49; Dudmanscombe and Barton M. and Combe farm and a mill in Buckland, p. 51;

the parsonage and advowson of the same, p.
 52; part of the great tythes of Charlton, p.
 53; Dover priory, p. 107; *the advowson of
 St. James's R. in Dover*, p. 118; Pyling M. with the lands of Pinham, p. 124; the parsonage and advowson of Sutton, p. 130; the advowson of Great Mongebam R. p. 139;
Little Mongebam M. and advowson of R. p.
 142; the almonry or grange of Norborne, p.
 142; Little Beibanger and Finglefham ty-theries in Norborne, p. 149, 151; Alton parsonage, p. 152; the parsonage or almonry farm, and the advowson of Norborne vicarage, p. 154; the parsonage and advowson of Sholden chapel, p. 159; Deal preben-d M. p. 162; Court Ajb M. p. 162; the advovson of Deal chapel, p. 166; the advowson of Deal rectory, p. 171; a third part of the great tythes of Deal, p. 171; the parsonage and advowson of Walmer, p. 174;
Southwold M. p. 192; Heafleden Wood,
 p. 192; the parsonage and advowson of Waldershare, p. 193; the parsonage and advovson of Tilmunstone, p. 207; the advovson of Eastry vicarage, p. 228; With Minnis, p. 245; parsonage of Word, p.
 246; the advowson of Monkton vicarage,
 p. 312; the advowson of Mijfiter vicarage,
 p. 330; and the chapels of Birchington and Wood appendant, p. 340; Salmeftone Grange in Thanet, p. 343; the advowson of St. John's in the same, p. 358; *the advowson of St.
 Peter's in Thanet*, p. 367; the advowson of St. Lawrence in the same, p. 380; Hijf-gate mill, p. 439; the advowson of St. Alphage and Northgate churches, p. 465, 479;
*advowson alternate of St. Andrew and St.
 Mary Bredman churches*, p. 468, 474; the parsonage of Holy Crofs, Westgate, p. 484;
the advowson alternate of the same and of St. Peter's church, p. 485, 488; the same of St. Martin's and St. Paul's churches, p.
 492, 496; *the scite and possessions of St.
 Gregory's priory in Canterbury*, p. 634
 -----, Archbishop of, p. 7-24-120-245-274-350
 -408-431-439-451-475-641-706
 -----, Archbishops of, see their several respective names passim
 -----, DEAN AND CHAPTER OF, ACCOUNT
 OF, p. 572, 587
 -----, DEAN AND CHAPTER OF, possesses West-cliffe parsonage and advowson, p. 32; Little Mounon in Great Mongebam, p. 138; East-fry M. p. 216; the parsonage of the same,
 p. 228; the parsonage of Sarre in Thanet,
 p. 308; Monkton M. p. 309; the parsonage of the same, p. 312; Ailana Grange, p.
 322, 324; Brookjend M. p. 336; the parsonage of Birchington, p. 340; Callis court,
 p. 360; Ossunden Grange in Thanet, p. 363;
Caldicot M. p. 444; *the advowsons of St.
 George's and St. Mary Magdalen churches in Canterbury*, p. 470, 477; the advowson alternate of St. Andrew and St. Mary Bred-man, p. 468, 474; *the same of Holy Crofs
 Westgate, and St. Peter's churches*, p. 485, 488; the same of St. Martin's and St. Paul's churches in Canterbury, p. 492, 496
 -----, Dean and Chapter of, p. 225-243-273
 -456-493-566
 -----, DEANS, LIST OF, p. 545, 588
 -----, Dean of, p. 456
 -----, ARCHDEACONS, LIST OF, p. 775
 -----, ARCHDEACON OF, possesses the parsonage and advowson of St. Clement's church in Sanawich, p. 285; *the advowson of St.
 Margaret's church in Canterbury*, p. 472
 -----, Archdeacon of, p. 107, 287
 -----, CANONS OR PREBENDS LIST OF, p. 605
 -----, PRIORS OF CHRIST CHURCH IN, LIST
 OF, p. 546. Prior of, p. 107-120-153
 -326-403
 Canteys, Nicholas, p. 355
 Cantio, Edmund de, p. 429
 Canute, king, p. 248-642-672
 Capel, Moses, cl. p. 186, 208. Walter, p. 371
 -----'s, p. 208, 220
 Carder, John, p. 279.
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 280
 Cardiffe, Thomas, cl. p. 355, 358
 Carey, Thomas, p. 110. John, p. 327

Carey,

- Carey, Henry, lord Hunsdon, and earl of Dover, p. 99
 -----s, p. 319-320-321
 Carryer, Benjamin, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614
 Carryngton, Samuel, cl. p. 215
 Carryck, Alianor, countess of, p. 514
 CARTER, JOHN, lessee of St. Margaret's at Cliffe parsonage, p. 27. John, of Deal, p. 163. Nicholas, cl. p. 130-166-183-207-208. Mrs. ELIZABETH, p. 166, 576. Lady Catherine, p. 482
 Caryl, Lynford, p. 528; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
 Casaubon, Meric, cl. p. 314-330-331-534-579; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 617. Isaac, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 616
 Casia, John Baptista de, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Casier, James, p. 124
 Cason, Henry, cl. p. 198. John, p. 244
 -----s, of Woodnesborough, p. 240, 241
 Castel, Edmund, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 616
 Castillon, John, cl. p. 332-334-335, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606. Henry de, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 777
 CASTLE, WILLIAM, THE HEIRS OF, possesses Great Walton F. in Eastry, p. 223
 Catherine, queen to king Charles II. p. 261
 Caudlin, lady, p. 447
 Cavelur, Ralph, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614
 Cavendish, sir William, p. 35
 Cauton, John, p. 106. Walter, Master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Caxton, John, p. 464
 Cay ey, William, p. 96
 Cecil, sir Edward, p. 94
 Ceolbert, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Ceolnoth, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 417, 507; account of, p. 683, 762
 Ceoldred, king of Mercia, p. 8-12-238
 Ceonulph, king, p. 194, 673
 Chadwick, James, p. 45, 753. Robert, p. 138
 Chalfont, Christopher, cl. p. 275
 Chalmers, John, cl. p. 202
 CHAMBERS, Mrs. lessee of Waimier parsonage, p. 174
 Champania, family of, p. 123, 124
 Champayne, John, p. 15
 Champion, Richard, cl. p. 229; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608
 Champneis, William, p. 211. Mrs. FRANCES, possesses part of Ringleton M. in Woodnesborough, p. 237
 -----s, p. 157; account of, p. 237
 Champs, Solomon de, p. 39
 Chancelar, Margaret, p. 115
 Chandler, Mr. p. 141. Chandler's, p. 477
 Channing, John de, p. 405
 Chapell, Roger, cl. p. 156
 Chapman, William, p. 95. Alexander, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 537; account of, p. 620
 Charles, Robert, cl. p. 284. James, cl. p. 308
 Charles, prince, afterwards king Charles II. p. 168
 ----- I. king, p. 433, 660
 ----- V. emperor, p. 433, 500
 ----- II. king, p. 433, 660
 Charlton, Thomas, cl. p. 493
 Chastillon, cardinal, p. 541
 Chatham, Thomas, suffragan bishop of Dover, p. 101
 -----, John de, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 549
 Chauncy, Nicholas, cl. p. 355
 Chauns, Solomon de, p. 39
 Chaworth, Thomas, cl. p. 283
 Chelesfield, Peter de, p. 33. Richard, cl. p. 405
 Chelesford's, alias Chelsford's, p. 14, 15
 Chellicoe, Thomas, p. 111
 Chenell, John, cl. p. 368
 Cheney, sir Thomas, p. 15, 74. Sir John, p. 729. Henry, cl. p. 178. Cheney's, p. 667
 Cherche, Margaret, p. 447
 Chesterfield, Philip Dormer Stanhope, Earl of, p. 634, 635
 Chewney, Nicholas, cl. p. 308, 359
 Cheyne, John, gent. p. 94
 Chichester, Roger de, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 652, 668 Chiche, Robert, p. 261, 262. Thomas, p. 405. John, p. 441-476-623
 -----s, of the Dungeon, p. 300, 416; account of, p. 439-442-669
 Chicheley, Henry, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 17-517
 -----539-579-608; account of, p. 728. William, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 783. Thomas, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 784
 Chilham, Richard de, p. 175. Elizabeth, Lady of, p. 447
 Chillenden, Thomas, prior of Christ church, p. 516-522 553; account of, p. 577, 578. Adam de, p. 550
 -----s, p. 214
 Chilton, Robert, p. 405. Nicholas, cl. p. 95, 98. William, p. 406
 Chitty, John, p. 24
 Cho'don, John de, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Christmas, William, cl. p. 368. William, p. 405
 Church, Anthony, p. 3. Richard, p. 225. William, p. 297
 Churchill, Awntham, p. 130. William, p. 755. Charles the Poet, p. 112, 117. Churchill's, p. 4, 128
 Chute, Arthur, p. 300. Thomas, p. 406
 Chychele, William, archdeacon of Canterbury, p. 345
 Chyn, Thomas, p. 279
 Cilleham, Siret de, p. 391
 Cinque Ports, Lord Warden of, p. 76-165-363-633
 -----, Lord Wardens of, LIST OF, p. 67
 Clapham, John Henry, cl. p. 8. Henry, p. 156. Christopher, p. 334, 338
 Clarence, Thomas, Duke of, p. 147
 Clarendon, Ernald, p. 251
 Claringbold, Thomas, p. 4. John, p. 7-116-118. Abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 650
 Clark, Richard, D. D. p. 327. Roger, p. 488. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 CLARK, JOHN, possesses Little Betshanger, in Norborne, p. 148
 Clarke, Richard, cl. p. 109-276-314-330-331. John, cl. p. 242, 494
 Clement, John, p. 112
 Clere, Guy de, p. 71. Matthew de, p. 67, 75. John, master of the Maison Dieu in Dover, p. 109
 Clerk, John, p. 81. John, cl. p. 109, 537. Richard, cl. p. 140
 Cleve, Lady Anne of, p. 865. Thomas, p. 355
 Cleveland, John, p. 264
 Cleybrooke's, of Mantion, p. 297. Of Nash, account of, p. 346, 355
 Claymund, John de, p. 299
 Cliderow, Roger de, p. 148
 Cliff, Master Henry de, p. 632
 Clifford, Robert, p. 516. Richard, p. 532. Thomas, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 773. Richard de, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 782. Lady Agnes de, p. 778
 Clifton, Gervas, p. 76
 Clinton and Say, Edmund Lord, p. 9-35-135
 -----, William de, p. 71-75-132-181-344. William, Lord, p. 280. Raynold, Lord, p. 267
 Clitherow's, of Ash, account of, p. 148, 234
 Clotingham, sir Robert de, p. 36
 Cnute, king, p. 316, 381
 Cobb's, of Margate, p. 357
 Cobham, Reginald de, p. 28-68-71. Reginald et Consirs sua, p. 265. Sir Thomas, p. 28. Henry de, p. 69-70-72-74-75-128-274. Edward, p. 76. Thomas, p. 405, 715
 -----, William Brooke, Lord, p. 74. Henry, p. 79-374-662
 Cock, Robert, p. 282
 Cocks, William, cl. p. 186. Cocks's, p. 184, 208
 COGAN'S HOSPITAL, FEOFFERS OF, possesses Word Court F. p. 245
 Cogan, John, p. 459
 Cok's, p. 262
 Coke, Edward, account of, p. 20. Coke's, p. 262
 Cokyn, Edmund, p. 405. William, p. 624
 -----s, of Canterbury, p. 416
 Colard, Simon, p. 93
 Coiby, p. 188
 Cole John, cl. p. 49, 380. John, p. 262. Robert, p. 108
 Colebrook's, of Chilham Castle, p. 307, 310
 Coleman, William, cl. p. 286. Coleman's, p. 357
 Colepeper, sir Thomas, p. 76, 343
 Colfe, Richard, cl. p. 313; prebendary of Canterbury, p. 533; account of, p. 611. Josiah, p. 442-454-473. Abraham, p. 485, 584. Isaac, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 COLLARD, HENRY, possesses Sarve M. p. 307. AMBROSE, possesses Vincent's, in St. John's, in Thanet, p. 347. Ambrose, junior, p. 346.
 -----s, account of, p. 50
 Collens, Robert, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612
 Collett,

- Collett, Matthew, p. 182, 183
 Colley, George, p. 52. John, cl. p. 86-474-487-488
 Collins, William, p. 299
 Calkyn, William, p. 483
 Colnett, William, cl. p. 171
 Coloigne, Philip, archbishop of, p. 514
 Colph, Almund, p. 483
 Colrede, vicar of, p. 193
 Colt, Stephen, p. 170
 Columbels, Ranulph de, p. 390, see also Colubels
 Columna, Prosper de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 784
 Colubels, Ranulph, p. 87-103-144-198
 Colwell, Robert, p. 113. Thomas, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 655
 Combe, Thomas, p. 94. Combe's, p. 43
 Combes, Bartholomew, p. 285
 Combewell, abbat and convent of, p. 16, 17
 Cominges, Simon de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 780
 Comyns, Elizabeth, p. 470
 Conant, Thomas, cl. p. 140. John, p. 276, 284
 Condie, William, p. 280. Condie's, p. 195-196-279-287
 Conevor, Thomas, cl. p. 286
 Coningsby, John de, p. 14
 Conrad, prior of Christ church, p. 506-507-508-509-516; account of, p. 546, 693
 Convenius, Simon, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 780
 Conway, Captain, p. 374
 Conyers, Lord, p. 768
 Conyngnam, Henry Vicount, p. 264. Lord, p. 317
 Henry, Earl of, p. 320. ELLEN, COUNTESS DOWAGER OF, possesses Minster M. p. 321
 -----'s, account of, p. 320
 Cook, John, cl. p. 151, 471. William, p. 221
 Coombe at, family of, p. 239
 Cooper, Robert, p. 45. THOMAS, possesses Canterbury Castle, p. 411
 Coorie, Thomas, p. 116
 Copedike, John, p. 59-76-262. Thomas, p. 261
 Coppin, John, p. 29-355-428-487. Josias, cl. p. 308.
 Frances, p. 377
 -----'s, of Deal, account of, p. 162-170-465
 Copyn, William, p. 406, 407
 Corbie's, of Boughton Malherb, p. 322
 Corboil, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 104-112
 -507-509-632; account of, p. 694, 776
 Corder, Gawin, p. 28
 Cornwall, Folliot Herbert Walker, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 605
 Cornhill, Reginald de, p. 208-321-537, Cornhill's, p. 209
 Cornwallis, James, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 604.
 Frederick, archbishop, account of, p. 760
 Cornwaille, William, bailiff of Canterbury, p. 399
 Cofant, Thomas, cl. p. 171
 Colnan, John, p. 211
 Cofinton, Stephen de, p. 433
 Cosmedin, Reynard de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 781
 Cousemaker, George, p. 231
 -----'s, account of, p. 238
 Cotes, John, p. 469
 Cottenham, Henry, p. 406
 Cotton, Leonard, p. 455-471-472-638
 Covell, Thomas, p. 5
 Coventry, Lord Keeper, p. 283. Lady, account of, p. 440-476
 Courthope's, of Stodmarsh, p. 122
 Courtney, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 129
 -130-124-515-541-572-576-580-582; account of, p. 723. Richard, p. 725
 Cowell, Beaton, p. 357
 Cowfield, Henry, p. 267
 Cowley, John, p. 6
 COWPER, GEORGE, EARL, possesses a farm at Marley, in Norborne, p. 151; the great tythes of Chamberlain's fee, in Deal, p. 171; part of the great tythes of Deal parish, ibid. Hackling F. and Upton F. in Word, p. 244, 245; Cliff's End F. in Thanet, p. 371; Mote, alias Wjke F. p. 445.
 Earl, p. 402
 Cowper, Spencer, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 611. Thomas, p. 406
 Cox, John, cl. p. 469. Cox's, of Sandwich, p. 203, 204
 Craford, John, p. 109
 Craford, Anne, p. 22. John, p. 262
 -----'s, p. 300. see also Crayford
 Craller, William, p. 228
 Cramaville's, p. 30
 Cranmer, Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 107-108
 -122-124-132-135-141-145-156-192-270
 -330-370-736; account of, p. 736-763-772.
 Edmund, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612. Archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 785
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 481
 Crawle, William, cl. p. 229
 Crawthorne's, p. 270
 Crayford, fir Robert, p. 156. Sir William, p. 157.
 George, p. 215
 -----'s, of Mongeham, p. 133, 135; account of, p. 137
 -139-138-205. Of Canterbury, p. 465, see also Crayford
 Craythorne, Thomas, p. 267, see also Crawthorne
 Creed, fir James, p. 408
 Crekynges, p. 405, 406
 Creone, Peter de, p. 59
 Cressemer, D. A. cl. p. 226
 Cressener, Dru Ashley, cl. p. 230
 Cressenhall, Reginald de, cl. p. 139
 Crevequer, Hamo de, p. 23-28-50-68-172-625. Hugh de, p. 61, 62
 -----'s, p. 230-231-240-306-307
 Crey, Simon de, p. 69
 Criche, Peter de, p. 356
 CRICKETT, RICHARD, possesses Appleton M. in Waldersbare, p. 192. Crickett's, of Sandwich, p. 280
 Criol, Nicholas de, p. 18-69-128-173-174. Bertram de, p. 68-124-138-139. Bartholomew de, p. 75
 -----'s, p. 11-15-23-24-28-75-157-181-306-370. Of Walmer, account of, p. 172
 Crispe, William, Lieutenant of Dover Castle, p. 59. William, p. 76. Henry, p. 300-334-355-407-663.
 Nicholas, p. 263, 303. Richard, p. 323. John, p. 332, 346. Anna Gertuy, p. 338
 -----'s, p. 267. Of Quekes, p. 297-309; account of, p. 333-336-338-339-383-384. Of West Ham, in Essex, account of, p. 336
 Croft, John, cl. p. 171, 281
 Cromwell, Thomas Lord, p. 743, 785. Oliver, p. 260
 Cronk, William, p. 223
 Crook, Richard, p. 27. Lady, p. 532
 Crosby, James, cl. p. 159
 Crouch, Nicholas, p. 405
 Crowche's, p. 93, 94
 Croydon, Robert, p. 26
 Cryppys's, of Birchington, p. 338, see Crispe
 Cullen, Maurice, cl. p. 32. Nicholas, p. 3
 -----'s, p. 503
 Culley, Thomas, p. 94
 Cullimore, fir John, p. 544
 Culling, John, cl. p. 215
 Culmer, Richard, cl. p. 276-328-330-521
 -----'s, of Thanet, p. 363, 365
 Culpeper, Thomas, p. 9-17-624. John, p. 139. Anne, p. 447. Culpeper's, p. 439
 Cumbe, John, p. 106
 Cumberland, William Duke of, p. 64
 -----, Mrs. p. 452. Robert, cl. p. 474
 Cumbwell, abbat and convent of, p. 13-22-41-236
 Cundy, William, p. 394. Cundy's, p. 261
 Cunrad, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Cuntry, Thomas, p. 470
 Curbespine, Ralph de, p. 8-10-33-36-152-187-191-198-391
 Curle, Walter, cl. p. 43
 CURLING, JOHN, possesses a farm in Betsbanzer, p. 185; lessee of Tilmanstone parsonage, p. 208. William, p. 353
 -----'s, of Thanet, p. 297
 Curteis, Reginald, p. 28. John, p. 328. John, cl. p. 331.
 Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Cuthire, Mr. p. 129
 Cushington, William de, cl. p. 229
 Cutham, John, cl. p. 466
 Cuthbert, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 315-316-508-580;
account of, p. 681
 Cuthred, king of Kent, p. 194
 Cymene, the Saxon chief, p. 381

D.

- D'AETH, SIR NARBOROUGH, bart. lessee of Little Mongeham M. p. 142; of Norborne parsonage, or Alton, ibid. 154; possesses Tickenhurst M. in Norborne, p. 149; North and South Court in Tilmanstone, p. 203; Thornton F. p. 206; Knolton M. and COURT,

COURT, and the advowson of the church, p. 211, 213.
Shingleton, in Eastry, p. 218. Sandovne M. in Worl, p. 244. D'Aeth, Francis, cl. p. 18-197
 -198-211-214. Thomas, p. 264, 407.
 -----'s, of Knolton, account of, p. 211, 213
 Dalamar, alias Danbye, John, cl. p. 136
 Dalton, Francis, cl. p. 208
 Dampier, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 608
 Dandelyon, Marcellus, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of,
 p. 656
 Dane, Robert, p. 194. Thomas, p. 336
 Dangerwill, Sir Richard, p. 75
 Daniel, John, p. 35. Henry, p. 404
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 419. John, alias Chillenden, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
 Danfon, Thomas, cl. p. 280
 Darby, Peter, p. 225
 Darcy, John, p. 259. Harry, p. 279
 DARE, MRS. possesses a house at Felderland, p. 224; Hack- ling F. in Worde, p. 244. William, p. 226, 227
 Darell, William, cl. p. 313
 Darent, Thomas, p. 405
 Darken, John, M. D. p. 472
 Darrell, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 608
 Darundell, John, p. 255
 Dathwood, Algerina, p. 465, 470
 Davis, John, cl. p. 119. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
 Dauling, John, cl. p. 38, 127. Richard, cl. p. 177
 -----'s, p. 178
 Daundelyon, Marcellus, abbat of St. Augustine's, p. 297.
 John, p. 355
 -----'s, p. 343
 Davyes, Thomas, cl. p. 466
 Dawbridgecourt, Sir Nicholas, p. 234
 Dawes, Bethel, p. 137, 170. Thomas, p. ibid.
 Dawkes, Thomas, p. 119
 Dawney, Henry, p. 211. Prebendary of Canterbury, ac- count of, p. 621
 Dawson, Thomas, cl. p. 284
 Day, John, p. 14
 Dean, Henry, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 537; see like- wise Dene
 Deane, John, cl. p. 366, 368. Deane's, p. 182
 Dechair, Richard Blackett, cl. p. 8, 13
 Dedyne, Benedict, cl. p. 171
 Dee, David, cl. p. 17
 DEEDS, WILLIAM, possesses Ripple M. p. 132. Julius, cl.
 p. 140. Prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 618
 Degmund, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 DEKEWER, JOHN, possesses Middle Farm, in Hernden, p.
 220. John, p. 111; account of, p. 269-278-365
 -----'s, of Hackney, p. 220-280-366
 Delafaye, Theodore, cl. p. 482
 Delangle, John Alexander, cl. p. 8-175-471. Prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
 Delanoy, Thomas, cl. p. 18-23-127
 Delaway, Thomas, p. 310
 Dele, William de, cl. p. 171
 Den's, of Sutton, p. 128; of Sandwich, p. 279
 Dene, Peter de, LL. D. p. 654. Henry, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 735, see likewise Dean
 Denew, John, p. 132
 -----'s, p. 16, account of, p. 427, 475
 Denham, lord, p. 433. Sir John, p. 260
 Denmark, Prince George of, p. 75
 Denn's, p. 407
 Denne, William, p. 24, 441. MARY possesses a moiety of New Farm, in Ripple, p. 133; of Ashley F. in Norborne, p. 152; lessee of a moiety of Ashley parsonage, p. ibid. James, p. 145. Richard,
 p. 246.
 -----'s, p. 229; of Denne Hill, p. 336
 Denwood, William, p. 328
 Dering, Mr. p. 46. Sir Edward, p. 47-76-125-151-152
 -182-190-243-335. Sir Richard, p. 75, 96.
 Richard, p. 76. Richard, monk of Christ church, p. 451, 524. Edward, of Doddington,
 p. 477. Heuage, prebendary of Canterbury, ac- count of, p. 617
 -----, CHARLES, lessee of Offunden Grange, p. 369
 Derine, son of Sired, p. 162
 Desborough, John, p. 74
 Despencer, Hugh, p. 70, 176
 Devenille, John, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 655 Devenish, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 617
 Devereux, Sir John, p. 72-75-76

Devefon's, p. 285
 Deudedit, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 678
 Dicus, -----, cl. p. 281
 Didier, Abraham, p. 422
 Diernod, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647 Digg, Roger, p. 405. John, alderman of Canterbury,
 p. 446. John, of Barham, p. 11
 Diggs, Sir Dudley, p. 11. Thomas, p. 35, 343. George,
 p. 90. Leonard, p. 366. John, p. 400
 -----'s, p. 36-158-356-357; of Canterbury, p. 416
 Dilnot, John, p. 151-161-221
 Distinton, William, p. 405
 Dixwell, Sir Basil, p. 76-95-202-210. John, p. 95
 Dobbs, alderman of Canterbury, p. 532
 Dobbynfon, William, cl. p. 476
 Docksey, William, p. 240, 241
 Dod, John, cl. p. 186
 Dodingdale, Guido de, p. 441
 Dodmore, Ralph, p. 221
 Dodsworth, Francis, cl. p. 332
 Doge, Hamo, p. 491-492-493-668. Nicholas, p. 416
 Doilie, Thomas, p. 40
 Domneva, queen and saint, p. 216-278-314
 Doncafter, James, viscount, p. 272
 Donne, Edward, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 610
 Dorset, John Beaufort, Marquis of, p. 72. Lionel Sackville, duke of, p. 75. Marquis of, p. 769
 Dover, Hugh de, p. 33. Solomon de, p. 38, 39. Ful-bert de, p. 43-61-175. Alexander de, p. 138.
 Family of, p. 54-175-438
 -----, Bailiff of, p. 29. Richard, suffragan bishop of,
 p. 133-181-335. Prior of, p. 11-13-106-246
 356. Archpriest of, p. 48. Suffragan bishops of, LIST of, p. 100
 -----, HARBOUR, TRUSTEES OF, possesses Singledge F. in Coldred, p. 12. Soltone in Westcliff, p. 31
 -----, Harbour, warden and assistants, incorporated, p. 83
 -----, Castle, LIST OF constables and lieutenants of, p. 67
 -75-54
 -----, Barons of, p. 79, 514. LIST OF, returned to Par- liament, p. 93
 Douglas, James, earl of Queensbury, created Duke of Dover, p. 99
 -----, James de, chancellor, p. 514. Rev. Mr. p. 238
 Dowden, John, p. 234
 Dowling, Christopher, cl. p. 175
 Downing, Bladen, cl. p. 194
 Downoyle, Roger, cl. p. 493
 Dowling, Christopher, p. 136
 Doyly, Thomas, p. 94
 Drake, Sir Francis, p. 263. Dr. p. 746
 Draper, Walter Le, p. 279
 Drayner, Sir Thomas, p. 447
 Dreye, William, cl. p. 331
 Drulege, William, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of,
 p. 655
 Drury, John, p. 262
 Dryland's, of Cooks-ditch, account of, p. 335
 Ducarel, Dr. p. 759
 Duck, Dr. Arthur, p. 728
 Duke, Jane, p. 197
 DUDLEY and WARD, VISCOUNT, p. 384, 452; possesses the tythery of St. Paul's, in Canterbury,
 p. 493; of St. Lawrence, p. 671
 Dumblaine, James Wedderburne, bishop of, p. 558
 Dunbar, earl of, p. 756
 Duncombe, John, cl. p. 474
 Dunnington, John, p. 406
 Dunkin, William, cl. p. 380
 Duns, Adam, cl. p. 331
 Dunstan, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 505-508-510-512
 -546; account of, p. 685
 Dunstan, John, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
 Durand, Francis William, cl. p. 483
 Durant's, of Canterbury, p. 469
 Durborne, George, p. 133
 Durdent, Walter, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 547
 Dureham, Thomas, p. 17
 Durel, David, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 622
 Dustynton, William de, p. 405
 Dygge, John, of Barham, p. 194
 Dygon, John, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
 Dykman, John, p. 406
 Dynceley's, alias Dingley's, of the co. of Worcester, p. 230
 -323-324-370-396

E.

Eadbald, king, p. 143-156-641-642-648-677-678
 Eadbert, king, p. 140, 681
 Eadburga,

- Eadburga, St. p. 321
 Eadred, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 -----, king, p. 684
 Eadfin, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 508, 660; account of, p. 689
 Ealstan, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Eames, Richard, p. 125
 Eastbridge, alias Kingsbridge hospital, LIST OF THE MASTERS OF, p. 629
 Fasday, John, mayor of Canterbury, p. 415
 Eastfield, John, p. 444
 Eastry, Rector of, p. 246
 Eathria, Henry de, prior of Christ church, p. 225-511
 -----515-516-524; account of, p. 550, 582
 Eaton, Peter, p. 24. Richard Monins, cl. p. 178, 179
 -----'s, p. 46, 117
 Eadwin, king, p. 684
 Edborough, Richard, cl. p. 193
 Edburga, abbess of Minster, p. 315, 316
 Edburga, St. p. 632
 Edgar, king, p. 673
 Ediva, queen, p. 308-391-512-543-580
 Edmondes, lady, p. 544
 Edmund, king, p. 2, 684
 Edmund, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 104, see also St. Edmund Edolph's, of St. Radigund's, p. 176
 Edred, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Edward, king, Confessor, p. 689
 -----, king, I. p. 432; IVth, p. 433
 -----, the Black Prince, p. 522, 540
 Edward, John, p. 261
 Edwards, Thomas, cl. p. 118. Benjamin, p. 139, 202
 Egbert, king, p. 216-314-315
 Egelnoth, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 507, see also Agelnoth and Ægelnoth
 Egelfin, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 648
 Egerton, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
 Eglesfield, Leonard, cl. p. 284
 Eleanor, queen, p. 249
 Elfnoth, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Elfric, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 687
 Elger, Thomas, cl. p. 171. George, p. 234. -----'s, p. 285
 Egelnoth, dean of Christ church, p. 545
 Elham, John, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 555, 578
 Elizabeth, queen, p. 433-500-660-662-740
 Ellington's, of Thanet, p. 373
 Elliot, George, p. 336
 Ellis, Thomas, of Sandwich, account of, p. 269, 287.
 William, p. 406
 -----'s, p. 93, 283
 Ellwood, Thomas, p. 94-110-111. -----'s, p. 275
 Ellys, John, p. 405
 Elmer, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 547
 -----, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647, 775 Elphege, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 688, see also Alphege
 Elfin, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 685
 Elstan, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Elstob, Charles, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 537
 Elstone, Nicholas, p. 366
 Elfy, John, p. 113
 Elware, Thomas, p. 224, 225
 Elwine, Cheuey, p. 429
 Ely, William Longchamp, bishop of, p. 68
 Elys, Thomas, p. 234-279-287
 -----'s, p. 235, 466, see also Ellis
 Emma, queen, p. 278
 Emptage's, p. 303
 Engham, Vincent, p. 239, 262. Robert, p. 464
 England, Thomas, cl. p. 166
 Engoltime, Hugh de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 781
 Erasmus, of Rotterdam, p. 523
 Ercombert, king, p. 641
 Ermenburga, p. 216
 Ernest, bishop of Rochester, p. 690
 Ernulph, prior of Christ church, p. 506-507-509-516;
account of, p. 546, 693
 Erpingham, sir Thomas, p. 58, 72
 Eschetestord, William de, governor of Canterbury castle,
 p. 411
 Esler, Biga, p. 391
 Espine, Dna Del, p. 324, 327
 Espilon, Nicholas, p. 261
 Estex, Henry de, p. 33-38-75. John, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
 -----, Robert Devereux, earl of, p. 747
 Estria, Anselm de, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Etaus, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Etheibert, king, p. 390-417-495-496-498-499-505-524
 -----545-639-640-641-661-671-675-677
 Ethelnod, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Ethelred, king, p. 2-216-248
 Evans, Owen, cl. p. 387-494-497
 Eve, William, p. 267
 Evebrook, John, p. 93
 Everard, Mr. p. 236. Valentine, p. 303
 -----'s, p. 405; of Thanet, p. 299
 Evering, Allen de, p. 60. Joice, p. 116. Thomas, p. 405
 -----'s, of Dover, p. 340
 Evers, Thomas, p. 377
 Everton, Richard, p. 406
 Eustace, Richard, p. 115
 Ewe, Richard, earl of, p. 67; countess of, p. 208, 236
 Ewell, Robert, cl. p. 201-202-214. -----'s, p. 202
 Exeter, Margery, p. 300. John, p. 359
 -----, John Grandison, bishop of, p. 513
 Evyas, Mr. p. 46
 Eyci, Bernarde, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 780
 Evynor, John, cl. p. 127
 Eyre's, of the co. of Derby, p. 29
 Eyres, -----, cl. p. 53

F.

- Fage, George, cl. p. 49
 Fagg, Captain, p. 36, 182. Thomas, p. 41-47-183
 Charles, p. 196. William, p. 297. Sir John,
bart. cl. p. 301-308-624
 Falconbridge, the Bastard, p. 260, 433
 Falkland, Careys, viscounts, p. 319, 321
 Fane, sir Vere, p. 76. Sir George, p. 26
 -----'s, p. 94
 Fanting, John, cl. p. 467, 474
 FARBRACE, GEORGE, TRUSTEES OF, lessees of Dudman- combe M. p. 51, 162; of Dover Priory M. and other premises, p. 108; of Court Ash M. p. 105
 -----, George, p. 51, 108. Sampson, p. 108-117-162
 Faucett, George, p. 245
 Farley, Edward, cl. p. 140, 171
 Farmer, Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 618
 Farnaby, John, p. 197
 Farnham, John, p. 627
 Farrham, William de, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 FARRER, JOSIAH FULLER, possesses Cleve Court, p. 310;
Updown, in Thanet, p. 331, 347
 Farthing, Robert, p. 406
 Fasham's, of Deal, p. 137-139-170
 Faucet, Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Faverham, mayor and jurats of, p. 94. Abbat of, p. 70
 Abbat and convent of, p. 650
 -----, Simon de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 780
 Faunte, Nicholas, mayor of Canterbury, p. 433
 Faussett, Rev. Mr. p. 5
 Fawlkner's, p. 227
 FECTOR, PETER, possesses Long Lane F. in Shebbeswell,
 p. 5; farm at Lower Whitfield, p. 16; A SEAT in Eythorne, p. 196; account of, ibid. Grove M. in Woodnesborough, p. 233; lessee of Alland Grange, in Thanet, p. 322. JOHN NINETY possesses UPDOWN PLACE S. in Ham, p. 182
 Felde, Anthony, cl. p. 214. John, p. 338
 Fellows, Edmund, cl. p. 387, 469
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 279
 Fenn, Edward, p. 299
 Fennel's, p. 204
 FENNER AND FLINT, MESSRS. possess part of the site of Canterbury castle, p. 411
 Feny's, or Finnis, of St. Margaret's at Cliff, p. 26
 Ferrers, Henry, p. 232
 Ferrier, Solomon, p. 282
 Ferringes, Simon de, Archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Fetherston, William, p. 262
 Feuall, William, ibid.
 Field, Lady Louisa, p. 52. Anthony, cl. p. 215
 Fielding, Allen, cl. p. 8
 Fienes, John de, p. 10-23-30-60-67. James de, ibid.
 Alan de, ibid. -----'s, p. 61
 FINCH, GEORGE, possesses Waterend F. in Exwell, p. 37.
 Samuel, cl. p. 142. Erasmus, p. 166, 448.
 Nathaniel, serjeant at law, p. 263. Mrs. possesses
St. Nicholas Court F. in Thanet, p. 300.
 FINCH,

FINCH, Mr. lessee of Monkton parsonage, p. 312. John, of Limne, p. 302. John, Lord, of Fordwich, p. 494. Sir Henry, p. 407, 624. Lady Mabella, p. 495, 496. Edward, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608. Leopold, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 621
 Finch's, of Coldred, account of, p. 11; of Sandwich, account of, p. 266; p. 407; of the Mote near Canterbury, account of, p. 444
 Finch, John, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 537
 Fineux, Richard, p. 115. Thomas, p. 491. Sir John, p. 538, 623
 -----'s, p. 26; of Hougham, account of, p. 44, 48; of Swinfield, p. 157, 371
 Finnis, Robert, p. 9. Mrs. p. 197, see also Fenys
 Finit's, account of, p. 31
 Fisher, Mary, p. 147. John, p. 407. Henry, cl. p. 464. Bishop of Rochester, p. 451
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Fitz Adam, Simon, p. 62, 200
 Fitzbernard's, p. 181
 Fitzgerald, Captain, p. 211
 Fitz Hamon, William, p. 475
 Fitz Joceline, Reginald, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 703
 Fitzlewis, Philip, p. 76
 Fitzmaurice, Gerald, p. 543
 Fitzpier, Geoffry, p. 68
 Fitzroy, Richard le, p. 175
 Fitzvinon's, p. 441
 Fitzurse, Ralph, p. 698, 699
 Fitzwarren, John, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Fitzwilliam, Philip, p. 76
 Fitzwilliams, Adam, p. 61, 62
 Flanders, Philip, earl of, p. 512, 514
 Flatman's, p. 480
 Fleet, William, p. 232. -----'s, p. 233
 Fleetwood, Charles, p. 74
 Fleologild, archbp of Canterbury, p. 507; account of, p. 683
 Flete de, family of, p. 347
 Fletcher, Bartholomew, p. 227
 Flood, Thomas, p. 7
 Floriac, Hugh de, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 649
 Floter, Robert, cl. p. 313
 Foach, Thomas, p. 129
 Foche, Henry, p. 161. John, alias Essex, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
 -----'s, of Sutton, p. 128, 129; of Ripple, account of, p. 131
 Fogge, sir Francis, p. 43. Sir Thomas, p. 181, 531. John, p. 406. Sir John, p. 433. William, p. 143
 -----'s, p. 50, 208; of Repton, p. 128-172-181; of Mongeham, p. 137; of Dane Court, p. 203; account of, p. 204; of Tilmantstone, p. 206
 Foks, Nicholas, cl. p. 380
 Folete, William, p. 150-202-221
 Fontibus, Ingelran de, p. 200
 Fooche, James, p. 118
 Foot, Samuel, the comedian, p. 117
 Forbes, Mr. p. 9. Dr. John, p. 356
 Ford, James, cl. p. 471
 Forde, John, p. 447
 Fordrede, John, p. 58
 Fordwich, John Finch, baron of, p. 444
 FOREMAN, JOHN, possesses Stonar M. and advowson, p. 384-386
 Forests, p. 182
 Forster, William, cl. p. 197, 198. Thomas, cl. p. 469-471
 Fotherbye, Martin, cl. p. 140. Prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620. Francis, cl. p. 286. Charles, dean of Canterbury, p. 171, 538; account of, p. 592. Prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 610. Archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 786. Sir John and Lady, p. 544
 Fotherbye's, p. 41-369-538
 Fowel, John, cl. p. 233
 Fowler, James, cl. p. 276. John, p. 406. -----'s, p. 488
 Fox, Charles James, p. 173-335-344-363
 Frakner's, p. 31
 France, Lewis, Dauphin of, p. 62, 385. John, king of, p. 259. Lewis, king of, p. 513
 Francis, John, cl. p. 136, 576. Michael, p. 236, 475
 -----'s, p. 24, 452
 Frankland, Thomas, p. 94
 Franklyn's, p. 233
 Franingham, John, p. 414
 Fravell, Harry, of Dover, p. 107

Frauncis, Michael, p. 495
 Fraunke, Nicholas, p. 406
 Freak, Edmund, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 786
 Fremingham, John, p. 477
 Fremoult's, p. 411
 Freeman, Thomas, cl. p. 42, 497. -----'s, p. 36
 French, Paul, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Frencham, John, cl. p. 215, 496
 Frenchbourne, Christopher, p. 354
 Frendebury, John de, cl. p. 331
 Frewen, Accepted, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
 -----'s, p. 399
 FRIEND, LYDIA, possesses the WHITFIELD HOUSE in Canterbury, p. 427. Anna, p. 225. JOHN, lessee of Brooksend M. in Birchington, p. 336. Captain George, p. 339. William, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 602
 Frithone, see Deusededit
 Frogenell, Richard, p. 405
 Fropchunt, John, p. 138
 Frye, William, p. 494
 Frynne's, alias Frenn's, p. 224-225-228
 Fulbeake, William, cl. p. 193
 Fuller, Rofe, p. 23. JOHN TRAYTON possesses Oxney M. and parsonage, p. 23, 24. Thomas, p. 116, 223. Mary, p. 197-221-222. Edward, p. 297. William, p. 327, 347. John, p. 463
 -----'s, of Eaftry, p. 226-227-229; of Sandwich, p. 245
 Fulneby, Thomas, p. 278
 Furnese, sir Henry, bart. p. 6-11-16-256 263-264-280-283. Henry, p. 19-95-116. Sir Robert, bart. p. 12, 334
 -----'s, of Waldershare, barts. p. 6-9-22-36-123-124-125-128-148-152-158-182; account of, p. 189-192-193-205-223-243-277-282-323-324-343-369-505-530
 Fynch, Robert, p. 15. John, p. 128, 299
 -----, John de Winchelsea, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 553. -----'s, of Coldred, p. 13, see also Finch
 Fynes, William, p. 61. -----'s, Lords Dacre, p. 60
 Fyndon, Thomas, abbat of St. Augustine's, p. 329; account of, p. 623
 Fynnet, Thomas, p. 115
 Fyshe, John, cl. p. 114
 Fysher, Thomas, cl. p. 478

G.

Gage, sir John, p. 9, 17
 Gambier, Mary, p. 135
 Gardewynton, Thomas de, p. 399
 Gardiner, Thomas, cl. p. 281. William, alias Sandwich, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 532, 533; account of, p. 617
 Gardyng, William de, p. 61
 Garland's, p. 300
 Garlin, John, p. 480
 Garnate, Henry, p. 416
 Garrade, Walter, cl. p. 478, 479
 Garratt, Sarah, p. 474
 GARRETT, THOMAS AND JOHN, possess Upper and Nether Court, in Thanet, p. 371. Mark Sellers, ibid. JOHN, possesses a moiety of Ellington, in Thanet, p. 374
 -----'s, of St. Laurence, p. 378, 379
 GARSIDE, THOMAS, possesses Sutton M. p. 128; Maidensole F. in Little Mongeham, p. 142
 Garth, Humphry, cl. p. 481
 Garwynton, John, p. 633. Thomas de, p. 637
 -----'s, of Bekeborne, p. 345
 Gascoigne's, p. 69
 Gafon, John, p. 256, 437. -----'s, of Apulton, p. 214
 Gate, sir John, p. 319
 Gatefwyk, Peter de, cl. p. 331
 Gay, Thomas, p. 466
 Gayle, William atte, p. 405
 Gaunt, Richard, p. 454
 Geaft, Edmund, archdeacon of Canterbury, p. 285; account of, p. 786
 Geddyng, William, cl. p. 17
 Geekee, William, cl. p. 171; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 607
 Geering's, p. 224
 Genvage, Richard, p. 406
 GEORGE, EDMUND, lessee of Eaftry parsonage, p. 229
 Gerard, Henry, cl. p. 171. Patricius, cl. p. 483, 486
 German,

- German, Gilbert, p. 94
 Gheast, see Geast
 Gibbon, Richard, p. 26. John, p. 267. Robert, p. 497, 663. Katherine, p. 467. Matthew, p. 474
 -----'s, p. 153
 Gibbons, John, p. 6. Orlando, p. 533
 Gibon, John, the king's fiatuary, p. 250
 Gibbons, the celebrated carver, p. 525
 GIBBS, WILLIAM, possesses Wells F. in Eastry, p. 224; Great Flemings F. in Woodnesborough, p. 239. William, p. 240. Henry, p. 598
 -----'s, p. 148
 Gibbs's, p. 138
 Gifford, Walter, p. 232
 Gilbert, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Gilbert, Robert, p. 480. -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Giles, William, cl. p. 193
 Gillingham, Richard, prior of Christ church, p. 345; account of, p. 553
 GILLOW, THOMAS, possesses Marshborough F. in Woodnesborough, p. 239; A HOUSE in St. Nicholas, in Thanet, p. 302; lessee of Sarre parsonage, p. 308
 -----'s, of St. Nicholas, p. 239, 303; of Woodnesborough, p. 240; of Walmer, p. 378
 Gillyng, Richard, p. 261
 Gilpin, Samuel, p. 17
 GIPPS, George, cl. p. 179. George, M. P. for Canterbury, p. 408, 427; account of, p. 635
 GIPPS, GEORGE, lessee of Northgate parsonage, p. 479; of Holy Cross Westgate parsonage, p. 484; of the site and possessions of St. Gregories priory in Canterbury, p. 634, 635
 Glazier, Hugh, cl. p. 171; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614
 Gleane, sir Peter, bart. p. 470
 Gloucester, Richard, Duke of, p. 73. Humphry, Duke of, ibid. Earl of, p. 768
 Glover, John, p. 356. William, p. 480
 Goare, Thomas, p. 94
 Gobion, Lady Mabella, p. 517. Amabilia, p. 623
 Godard, John, p. 261
 Goddard, Christian, p. 225
 Godfrey, Brigadier Francis, p. 537
 Godington, Theobald, p. 405
 Godfede, William de, p. 416
 Godin, Earl, p. 59, 289. -----, bishop of Rochester, p. 418
 Goff, Peter, cl. p. 276
 Gokin's, of Ripple, account of, p. 132
 Goldesburgh, Simon de, p. 39
 Goldsborough, Peter de, p. 3, 235. John de, p. 194. Richard, cl. p. 214
 -----'s, p. 232
 Golding, Captain, p. 334
 Goldsmith, William de, p. 405
 Goldson, Robert, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608
 Goldstone, Thomas, prior of Christ church, p. 309-517-521-523-524-537-538; account of, p. 555-566-578-579
 Goldwell, Thomas, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 557-569-570-573
 -----'s, of Great Chart, p. 188
 Gols, Gerard de, cl. p. 284
 Gooch, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 618
 Goodall, Edward, cl. p. 175
 Gookin, Thomas, p. 134. Henry, p. 148
 -----'s, of Ripple, p. 161
 Goodrick, Henry, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Goodwin, Earl, p. 168, 259, see also Godwin
 Goodwin, Thomas, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 590
 Goore, Thomas, p. 114
 Gordon, Mrs. p. 352
 Gore's, of Thanet, p. 339
 Gotborne's, p. 464
 Gosfrid, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 547
 Goshall's, of Ash, p. 323, 370
 Gosling, John, cl. p. 38, 487
 Goviere, Robert, p. 385
 Graceborough, Marc, cl. p. 8
 Gracifus, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 646
 Gradcal, William, master of Kingbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 GRAHAM, MRS. possesses St. LAURENCE HOUSE near Canterbury, p. 671
 Grandorge, Dr. John, p. 526; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 618
 Grandison, Otho de, p. 71
 Grant, Henry, p. 197. Thomas, p. 356
 Gray, John, cl. p. 14-118-119-171. Robert de, p. 61. Sir James, bart. p. 76
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 477
 Graystock, Ralph, baron of, p. 55
 Gravele, Stephen, cl. p. 283
 GREBELL, ALLEN, p. 439; possesses STUFFINGTON M. p. 442; Barton M. in Canterbury, p. 445
 Gregory, Thomas, cl. p. 214. Francis, cl. p. 471. William, cl. p. 475; master of Kingbridge hospital, p. 631
 Green, Walter, cl. p. 27. Jenkin, p. 287. Mr. p. 288. Thomas, prebendary and archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 613, 787
 Greene, John, p. 261, 262. Thomas, cl. p. 332. Jasper, cl. p. 242
 Greenford, John, p. 76
 Greenfield, Henry, p. 232-234-262-269
 -----'s, of Whitstaple, p. 235
 Greenstreet, George, cl. p. 214, 215
 Greenwood's, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Grenall, Robert, cl. p. 193
 Grene, William, cl. p. 114, 480
 Grevill, Agnes, p. 736
 GREY, JOHN, possesses a moiety of Bromson, in St. Peter's, p. 361. John, bishop of Norwich, p. 706
 -----, Richard de, of Codnor, p. 69, 433
 Griffith, Griffith, cl. p. 143. John, p. 263. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608
 Grindal, Edmund, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 741, 742 Grove, sir John, p. 232-282-283. Robert, p. 457
 -----'s, of Tunstall, p. 231
 Grubbe, Robert, p. 196
 Grygge, Richard, p. 94. John, p. 153
 Guibons, of Westcliff, account of, p. 29, 32
 Guildborough, Peter, p. 3
 GUILDFORD, GEORGE AUGUSTUS, EARL OF, possesses the Manor House of Shebbertswell, p. 4; Colindale M. p. 10; Popshall M. and portion of tythes, p. 11; Newfole, alias Mexfole and woods in Coldred, p. 12; lessee of Coldred parsonage, p. 13; of Frith M. and Guffon parsonage, p. 22, 23; possesses Little Pysing M. and lands at Pinham, p. 16; lands at Bosfall, in Ewell, p. 36; East Langdon M. p. 123; lessee of Pysing M. with Pinham, p. 124; possesses Church and Well-street farms and advowson of East Langdon, p. 125, 128; a part of Mimore F. p. 152; Napchester and Heading, alias Heastedenwood, in Norborne, ibid. Majon drea Marsh, in Sholdon, p. 158; Maimage F. p. 183; WALDERSHARE M. AND HOUSE, p. 192; Heasteden Downe, p. 192; lessee of Waldershare parsonage, p. 193; possesses a farm in Eythorne and Park End in the same, p. 196; the alternate presentation to Eythorne rectory, p. 198; Barville in Tilmanstone, p. 203; Upper Selton F. and Little Hay F. in Eastry, p. 223, 224; lessee of Salmanstone Grange, in Thanet, p. 343; possesses Lydd Court in-graves in Word, p. 244
 -----, George Augustus, Earl of, Governor of Deal Castle, p. 166
 -----, Earls of, p. 10-11-16-22-75-123; account of, p. 190
 -----, CATHERINE, COUNTESS DOWAGER OF, p. 22, 229; lessee of Word parsonage, p. 246; of Eastry parsonage, p. 334
 Guildford, sir John, p. 143
 Guildforth, Henry, p. 117
 Gulford, Andrew, p. 75
 Guldeford, sir Edward, p. 73. Thomas, p. 76, John, p. 261
 -----'s, p. 3, 284
 Gundulph, bishop of Rochester, p. 690
 Gunning, Peter, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 607
 GUNMAN, JAMES, possesses Shebbertswell M. p. 4; lessee of Word in the same, p. 7; possesses Buckland M. p. 50; lessee of Barton M. and Guffon, p. 51; of Buckland parsonage, p. 52; of Aterton, alias Ankerton tythes, ibid. of great tythes in Charlton, p. 155
 -----'s, of Dover, account of, p. 50, 117
 Gurney, Thomas, cl. p. 56. John, p. 197
 -----'s of Shottenden, p. 357
 Guttard, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Guttulf, abbat of the same, account of, ibid.
 Gyce, Richard, cl. p. 242
 Gyldford, Edmund, prior of St. Gregories, p. 634
 Gyles,

Gyles's, p. 93
Gyllyng, John, p. 279

H.

Hache, Edward, p. 107
Hacket, Dr. p. 594. -----'s, p. 2, 235
Hadd, Matthew, p. 407. -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 465
Haddon, Robert, p. 261. Thomas, p. 262
Hadley, Richard de, p. 405
Haen, Robert, the antiquary, p. 314
Haffam, Stephen, cl. p. 281
Hafford's, of Smarden, p. 282
Haggett, Stephen, cl. p. 140
Haimo, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
Hakenthorp, John, p. 75
Hales, James, p. 15, 300. Sir James, p. 40. Sir Christopher, p. 31-196-670. Christopher, p. 221, 439
HALES, SIR EDWARD, bart. p. 76-275-402-407-425-426; possesses the site of St. Augustine's Monastery, the Old Park and North Holmes, in Canterbury, p. 662. Edward, p. 301, 492. Sir Thomas Pym, bart. p. 96-231-238. Sir Thomas, p. 20, 38. John, p. 132. Sir John, bart. p. 38. Sir Robert, p. 723. LADY MARY, possesses Churchgate F. and Polton M. in Woodchester, p. 238
-----'s, of Bekeborne, p. 76, 635; of Tenterden, p. 161; of the Dungeon, account of, p. 440-442-451-452-475-476-481-536; of St. Stephen's, p. 466, 661
Halke, Agnes, p. 464. Thomas, p. 488
Hall, John Atte, p. 47. Adam, p. 209. William, cl. p. 49. George, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 786
-----'s, alias Atte Hall's, p. 226
Halle, Simon, p. 261
Halles, Thomas, p. 236
Halliwell, Thomas, master of Eastbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
Hallum, Robert de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 783
Halfnod's, p. 285
Halys, Thomas de, p. 106
Hamo, son of Vitalis, p. 489
HAMMOND, WILLIAM, lessee of Westcourt M. p. 5; possesses Chillenden M. and a farm in the same, p. 214; the WHITE FRIARS in Canterbury, p. 624; Lieutenant of Walmer Castle, p. 173, 452. WILLIAM, possesses Stone House near Canterbury, p. 429; Morton M. in Canterbury, p. 441. John, p. 93, 197. William, p. 94. Sufanna, p. 111. Hester, p. 461
-----'s, p. 5-360-456
Hamon, sir Thomas, p. 76
Hampton, Thomas, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
Hancock, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 611
Handloo's, p. 416
Hanakin, Peter de, p. 75. Alexander de, p. 582
Hanningham, of Dover, p. 108
Hannington, Henry, cl. p. 7-23-49. William, p. 48
-----'s, of Dover, p. 46, 100
Hannis's, of Thanet, p. 302, 303
Hanlon, Thomas, p. 455-629-638. James, p. 495
Hardicanute, king, p. 689
Harding, Clement, cl. p. 483, 486; prior of St. Gregories, p. 634
Hardres, sir William, p. 95. William, p. 405, 406. John, p. 166, 407. Robert de, p. 200. MARTHA, HEIRS OF, possesses a farm at Lower Selton, in Eastry, p. 224. Sir Thomas, p. 407. Jane, p. 534. Lady, p. 544. Peter, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
-----'s, p. 400-408-441
Hardwick, Philip, earl of, p. 29, 99; possesses Dumpton, in Thanet, p. 361
Hardy, Josiah, p. 198, 211. Joseph, cl. p. 314
Harfleet's, p. 223
Hartford, Thomafine, alias Amery, p. 452
Hargrave, Christopher, cl. p. 487
Harleberg, John, p. 405
Harley, Thomas, p. 362
Harman, Roger, cl. p. 171. -----'s, of Crayford, p. 47
Harold, Earl, p. 67-259-289
HARNETT, HENRY, possesses Porcie's, in Minster, p. 323
-----'s, of Minster, p. 328
Harper, George, p. 624

Harpfield, Nicholas, archdeacon of Canterbury, p. 453; account of, p. 785, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 221
Harpur, fir Harry, bart. p. 361
Harrington, John, p. 449
Harrison, John, p. 127. Walter, cl. p. 242. Benjamin, cl. p. 286. Philip, cl. p. 358. William, cl. p. 359
Hart, William, p. 100
Hartangre, William de, p. 200
HARTCUP, THOMAS, possesses the Grey Friars in Canterbury, p. 448
Harte, Robert, cl. p. 387
Harty's, of Birchington, p. 297; account of, p. 337
Harvey, Richard, cl. p. 38-230-381. Richard, cl. p. 230. Richard, junior, cl. p. 381. Richard, of Eastry, p. 153; of Eythorne, p. 243. Captain John, p. 182; account of, p. 220. THOMAS, possesses Brimdale F. in Eythorne, p. 197. HENRY WISE, possesses HERNDEN, alias UPPER FARM, in Eastry, p. 220. Daniel, p. 305
-----'s, p. 36; of Alkham, p. 47; of West Studdal, account of, p. 151, 223; of Eythorne, account of, p. 197; of Barfon, account of, p. 199; of Dane Court, p. 197, account of, p. 199, 204; of Barfidd, p. 204; of Eastry, p. 226, 227; of Sandwich, p. 282; account of the different branches of, p. 205; of Combe, p. 244-245-299-300
Harwood, Richard, p. 199
Hasted, Joseph, p. 470. Anne, p. 576
Haltings, Laurence de, p. 345
-----, Barons of the Port of, p. 79
Hatchett's, p. 234
Hathbrand, Robert, prior of Christ church, p. 516, 537; account of, p. 552-574-578-580
HATTON, THOMAS, lessee of Reach M. p. 26. Michael, p. 204. Sir Robert, p. 263
-----'s, of Dane Court, p. 206
Haut, James, p. 75. Richard, p. 406. Sir Edward, p. 448, 531. -----'s, p. 345, 623
Hawes, John, cl. p. 56
Hawker, Jane, p. 151, 221
-----'s, p. 161; of Sandwich, p. 285
Hawkherit, John, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
Hawkin, Alexander, p. 517
Hawkins, William, cl. p. 85. John, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
HAWLEY, SIR HENRY, bart. possesses Dene M. with Hengrove, in Thanet, p. 345
Hay, de la, family of, p. 223
----, George, LL. D. p. 264
Hayes, Richard, cl. p. 464. George, p. 627
Haynes, John, cl. p. 313, 338. -----, gardiner to king Henry VIII. p. 743
Hayward, Gervas, p. 204. John, of Sandwich, account of, p. 221. Mary, p. 238
-----'s, of Sandwich, p. 226-279-285
Head, John, cl. p. 242, 471; prebendary and archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 612, 787. Sir Francis, p. 481. Lady Anne, p. 544
Hearn, George, cl. p. 466, 467
Heaton, Henry, matter of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 631
Hells, Bertram de, p. 75
Heming, the Danish chief, p. 295, 337
Hemmett, Henry, cl. p. 56
Heneage, fir Thomas, p. 15
Hengnam, Odomar, p. 531
Hengist, Saxon chief, p. 294, 325
Henley, Anthony, p. 189
Henniker, John, p. 96. William, p. 303
Henry I. king, p. 432. III. king, p. ibid. VIII. king, p. 433, 500
Hensbridge, James, cl. 482
Herault, Anne, p. 502. Lewis, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 618
Herbert, James, p. 7. Arthur, p. 95. Walter, cl. p. 230. Sir Edmund, p. 667
-----, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 777
Hereford, Robert de, p. 75
-----, Humphry Bohun, earl of, p. 68, 188
Heringod, fir Stephen, p. 344
Herlinton, William de, p. 632
Herle, fir Robert, p. 71. Robert, p. 75
Herlewin, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 548
Herney, John de, p. 496
Heron, Thomas, of Chilham castle, p. 307. Heron's, p. 43
Heronden's, of Eastry, p. 218-219-227
Herring, Anne, p. 139. John, cl. 140, 172. Samuel, cl. p. 230

- HERRING, JOHN, cl. possesses a moiety of New Farm in Ripple, p. 133. ELIZABETH possesses a moiety of Ajbley F. and a part of Ajbley parsonage, in Northborne, p. 152
 -----, Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 526; account of, p. 755, 757
 Herryfield, Henry de, master of the Maison Dieu, in Dover, p. 109
 Herst, de, family of, p. 45
 Hertford, Bartholomew, p. 405
 Heth, Thomas, cl. p. 38
 Hewett, Thomas, cl. p. 358
 Hewson, John, p. 111
 Hextal, William, p. 45. Thomas, p. 47-76-94-113. Edward, p. 107. Hextal's, p. 113
 Hey, William, p. 204
 Heylin, Dr. Peter, p. 750
 Heyman, for Henry Pixe, bart. p. 18. Sir Henry, p. 76. Sir Peter, p. 95, 663. William, p. 584
 -----'s, p. 544
 Heye, Michael, cl. p. 240, 242
 Heyton, A'an de, p. 75
 Heywood, Richard, p. 274
 Hicks, John, cl. p. 56, 178. Dr. dean of Worcester, p. 441
 Hickham, William, p. 406
 Higden, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 609
 Higgs, Griffin, cl. p. 32
 Highmore, Nathaniel, p. 480
 Hulde, Valentine, p. 151
 Hillborough, countess of, p. 362
 Hilliard, Walter, see Tyler
 Hill, John, p. 240. Cl. 331, 482. Prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612. Hill's, p. 371
 HILLS, MRS. possesses a house in Buckland, p. 51
 Hinchingsbooke, Edward, lord, p. 95
 Hinde, Samuel, cl. p. 118
 Hinton, Dorothy, p. 488
 Hippeley, for John, p. 95
 Hitchcot, John, cl. p. 406
 Hithe, barons of the port of, p. 514
 Hobbes, Edward, cl. 49, 119
 Hobby, for Thomas, posthumous, p. 241
 Hobday, Stephen, cl. p. 193. Hobday's, p. 47, 469, 470
 Hockley, John, 170
 Hodgson's, of Dover, p. 51-108-119-162
 Hoële, Simon, p. 68
 Hoggis, Simon, cl. p. 140
 Hoghe, Hugh, cl. p. 331
 HOILE, THOMAS, possesses Finglesham F. in Northborne, p. 151
 Hoke, John de, p. 405
 Holben, Thomas, p. 194
 Holcombe, Samuel, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 534; account of, p. 617
 Holand, Henry, cl. p. 308. Margaret, p. 330. Countess of Somerset and duchess of Clarence, p. 535
 -----'s, p. 31
 Holderness, Robert Darcy, earl of, p. 75
 Holiugbery, John, cl. p. 8
 Holland, Henry, p. 188
 -----, Henry Fox, lord, account of, p. 335-344-347-355
 Holman, Geoffry, p. 478. Holman's, of St. Laurence, p. 378
 Holnis, Edward, p. 177
 Holte, Richard, p. 52. Thomas, p. 406. John de, p. 416
 Honorius, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 548. Archbishop of Canterbury, p. 672; account of, p. 678
 HONYWOOD, FILMER, possesses Little Archer court in River, p. 40. Colonel Henry, account of, p. ibid. Sir William, bart. p. 407. Sir John, bart. M. P. for Canterbury, p. 408. John of same, p. 544. Sir Robert, of Charing, p. 635. Thomasine, p. 480
 -----'s, of Marks Hill, p. 40, 670
 Hoo, Richard de, p. 405, 444. Stephen de, p. 405. Thomas, p. 532
 HOOPER, GEORGE, lessee of Cotmanton in Sholdon, p. 158. Captain Stephen, p. 351, 378. George, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 598
 Hopkins, Jasper, cl. p. 308
 Hopton, Richard Cope, p. 534
 Horne, James, p. 11. GEORGE, lessee of Coombe F. and mills in Buckland and Charlton, p. 51. William, p. 59. Edward, p. 405, 406. George, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 604
 -----'s, of Apledore, p. 11
 Horla, the Saxon chief, p. 325
 Horsley, Thomas, p. 207
 Horsemonden, Warham, p. 133. Ursula, p. 535
 Horton, John, p. 261. Horton's, p. 235
 Hovenden, George, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619. Robert, prebendary, account of, p. 608
 -----'s, p. 449
 Hovynden, Rev. Edmund, p. 491
 HOUGHAM, WILLIAM, possesses a house in Upper Deal, p. 167. LONGPORT alias BARTON M and S. in Canterbury, p. 668. Solomon, p. 277. Edward, p. 441
 -----'s, of Hougham, account of, p. 43-48-230; of Sandwich, p. 279, 280; of Canterbury, p. 495; account of, p. 657
 Howard, Thomas Lord, of Evingham, p. 307, 310
 Howdell's, p. 236
 Howe, Gervais, cl. p. 284
 Hubard, John, p. 262
 Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 439-500-575-624-633. Account of, p. 704, 762
 Huda, earl, p. 275, 364
 HUDLESTON, THOMAS, possesses jointly the advowson of Ripple R. p. 135
 Huffam, Stephen de, cl. 303, 308. Huffam's of Sandwich, account of, p. 266, see also Hougham
 Hugesen, John, p. 177. Hugesen's of Stodmarsh, p. 108, 111; of Provender, p. 173, 340
 Hugget's, of Thanet, p. 361, 366
 Hugh, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 651, 668
 Hughes's, account of, p. 237
 Hugham, Richard de, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Hucote, Ralph de, cl. p. 208
 Hull, William, cl. p. 286
 Hulle's, of St. Martin's, Canterbury, p. 468, 495
 Humand, Thomas, p. 463
 Hunden, Thomas, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 656
 Hungerford, for Walter, account of, p. 194. Thomas, p. 560
 Hunt, Stephen, p. 579. Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 607. William alias Hadley, prebendary, account of, p. 615
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Huntingdon, William Clinton, earl of, p. 132-181-344. Juliana, countess of, p. ibid. p. 641
 Huntingfield, William de, p. 68, 75
 Hurell, Reginald, p. 404
 Hufato, Hubert de, p. 68
 Huffey's, of Sutton by Dover, 128
 Hutchefon, Thomas, cl. p. 156
 Hutchinson, colonel John, p. 166
 Hulte, John, cl. p. 331
 Hutton, Joshua, cl. p. 49, 466. Matthew, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 757
 Hydmarsh, Alexander, cl. p. 464
 Hygon, Matthew, p. 262
 Hynde, Richard, cl. p. 286
 Hyppesley, for John, p. 76

I.

- Jackson, John, of Canterbury, account of, p. 427. Joseph, cl. p. 242. Thomas, cl. p. 471. William, p. 481. Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608. Ralph, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 611
 Jacob, William, M. D. p. 407. Sir Abraham, account of, p. 132. John, cl. p. 208-356-359. Caleb, cl. p. 281. William, cl. p. 308
 -----'s, p. 206
 Jacobson, Henrique, p. 252
 James, Alexander, cl. p. 28, 53. Christopher, cl. p. 117. John, cl. p. 170-172-186-187. Peter, cl. p. 378. Henry, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 -----'s, p. 145, of Woodnesborough, p. 232-236-239
 Janibert, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 242; account of, p. 647
 Jarvis, Peter, p. 277-280-283-285
 Ibbut, Edmund, cl. p. 171
 Ickham, Thomas de, of Canterbury, p. 276, 412; facial of St. Augustine's monastery, p. 342-356-658
 Iddleigh, John de, p. 200
 Jeffries, James, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 537, 579; account of, p. 618
 Jeffreys's, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Jeffry, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 549
 Jeffrys, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 613
 Jeken, James, cl. p. 24
 JERKINS, JOHN, possesses a portion of tythes in Marston, p. 125. JAMES, possesses Grove, alias Marley F. in Northborne, p. 151

JEKENS's, of Sandwich, p. 282; of Canterbury, p. 482
 Jell, Anne, p. 111
 JEMMETT, WILLIAM, possesses a moiety of Shelving in Woodnesborough, p. 231
 Jenkin, Henry, p. 197. Jenkin's, p. 12-297-328
 Jenkinson, Robert, cl. p. 358. Jenkinson's, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Jermyn, Henry, earl of Dover, p. 99
 Jerusalem, Godfrey de Boloigne, earl of, p. 61
 Jessard, Henry, p. 233, lessee of a moiety of Allan Grange, in Thanet, p. 323; possesses a moiety of Brompston in Thanet, p. 361
 -----'s, p. 303
 Ikham, Thomas, of Canterbury, p. 406-487-488. William, p. 406; see also Icknam
 Ilchester, earl of, p. 145
 Imarus, St. p. 355
 Ina, king, p. 238
 Ince, Edmund, p. 76
 Innes, Alex. p. 8
 Innys, Gilbert, cl. p. 259
 Infula, Thomas de, p. 75
 JOADE, CAPTAIN, possesses a farm at Foulmead, in Sboldon, p. 159
 John, king, p. 432
 John, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 646, 648. Archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 776
 Johnson, Thomas, cl. p. 56, 473. Henry, p. 279. Richard, cl. p. 308. Mr. p. 354. John, cl. p. 359. Peter, cl. p. 378, 380. Edward, p. 458. Silas, p. 476
 -----'s, p. 220, of Thanet, p. 297, 370; account of, p. 371
 -----, alias Anthony John, p. 308, 384
 Joiner, John, cl. p. 113
 Jones, William, cl. p. 38. Hugh Valence, p. 96. Lucy, p. 135. Nicholas, p. 170. Inigo, the architect, p. 189. John, p. 336
 Jordan, Humphry, cl. p. 466. William, cl. p. 494
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 280
 Jordayne, William, p. 261
 Jortin, Dr. p. 756
 Joseph, alias Jolleph John, prebendary of Canterbury account of, p. 621
 Joye, Robert, cl. p. 118. George, cl. p. 118-294-286
 Ipre, men of, p. 431
 Ireland, Robert Vere, duke of, p. 176
 Isaac, John, p. 157. 400. Edward, p. 670. Isaac's, p. 196-345-441
 Isabella, queen, p. 632
 Itham, Zaccheus, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615. Itham's, p. 172
 Isles, Thomas, cl. p. 143
 Illip, Simon, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 228-311-532-565-625. Account of, p. 719. Robert, cl. p. 466
 Judicis, William, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 782
 Ive, John, p. 283. William, p. 261
 Ivingo, Richard de, master of Kingbridge hospital, account of, p. 629
 JULL, MR. possesses a house in Woodnesborough, p. 239, 240
 Ivory, Margery, p. 358
 Justice, Robert, p. 110
 Juttus, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 672, 676; account of, p. 678
 Juxon, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 13-17-23-27-49-52-174-193-305-380-629; account of, p. 750

K.

King John, p. 117. Edward I. p. 500. Edward III. p. 385. Henry IV. p. 539. Charles II. p. 362. William III. p. 335. George I. and II. p. 349
 Key, Arthur, cl. p. 468, 469
 Keate, Miss, p. 350. George, p. 354
 Kelk's, of Sandwich, p. 279
 Kelly, Daniel, p. 197. RICHARD AND WILLIAM, possess Lower Farm in Hernden, p. 220
 -----'s, p. 378; of Hernden, p. 220-223-226-227; of Sandwich, p. 279, 282
 Kelsey, Colonel Thomas, p. 76-95-263
 Kelway, Robert, cl. p. 156
 Kemp, Edward, p. 100. Sir Thomas, p. 133-135-452. Thomas, master of Kingbridge hospital, account of, p. 630. William, cl. p. 479. John, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 539; account of, p. 730, 764
 -----'s, of Thanet, p. 299
 Kendale, Robert de, p. 70
 Kene, Thomas, bishop of Bath and Wells, p. 440

Kenet, William, p. 262
 Kennington, William, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 655
 Kennard, Sampson, cl. p. 479
 Kennett's, of Canterbury, p. 221
 Kenrick, John, cl. p. 136, 187
 Kent, Hubert de Burgh, earl of, p. 9-15-39-63-68-108. Edmund, of Woodstock, earl of, p. 70. Godwin, earl of, p. 67-86-87. Infanta of, p. 335, 344
 KENT, SIR CHARLES, bart. possesses a moiety of Sevenscore F. in Thanet, p. 321
 Kentwell, John, abbat of Langdon, p. 19
 Ker, John, Laird of Frogden, in Scotland, p. 117
 Kerby's, of Southend, p. 339
 Keriel, William, p. 23, 76. Sir Thomas, p. 76-128-172-181; account of, p. 306, 370. -----'s, p. 306
 Ketcherel's, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Kidder, -----, p. 133
 Kien, Christopher, p. 231, 238
 Kilburne, Charles, cl. p. 487, 489
 Kilwardby, Robert, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 636, 637; account of, p. 709
 KING, THE, possesses the advowson of Chillenden R. p. 205, alternate patron of St. Peter's R. in Sandwich, p. 283; of St. Mildred R. in Canterbury, p. 480; of St. Mary de Castro church, p. 490
 King, Edward, F. R. S. p. 65. THOMAS, *possesses Coxhill F. in Shebbertswell, p. 5; lessee of lands at the Jame, p. 7. Mr. possesses a farm in East Langdon, p. 125; a house at Sacket's Hill, in Thanet, p. 361. Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 610. William, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 619. Ezechias, cl. p. 171. John, cl. p. 380
 Kingsford, John, p. 397. SAMPSON AND WILLIAM possess Barton mill, p. 439
 -----'s, account of, p. 177, 244
 Kinglande, John de, cl. p. 331
 Kingbridge Hospital, see Eastbridge
 Kingsley, William, archdeacon of Canterbury, p. 529-534-535; account of, p. 786; prebendary of the same, account of, p. 616. Priscilla, p. 537
 Kingsmill, Anthony, cl. p. 313
 Kirkbye, John, cl. p. 194. Anthony, cl. p. 479. Roger de, p. 768
 Kite's, of Sandwich, p. 285
 Knappe, Richard, cl. p. 464
 Knatchbull, sir Edward, bart. p. 173. John, p. 189
 Knights Templars, p. 33; account of, p. 34-36-37; Master of, p. 409. Hospitallers, p. 34; account of, p. 35-36-37-206. Richard, p. 223, 426
 -----'s, p. 231; of Canterbury, p. 469
 Knowler, John, p. 303. Charles, p. 401. George, p. 474. Thomas, p. 576
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 464
 Knowles, Richard, cl. p. 275
 Knolt, John, p. 47. Thomas, p. 111
 -----'s, p. 465
 Knyvet, John, p. 632
 Kynebert, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647*

L.

Labredo, Eyci de, see Eyci
 Labredus, Gutterdus, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 780
 Lacy, Robert, p. 44
 Ladd, Richard, p. 197, 213
 Lade, William, cl. p. 214
 Lake, Robert, cl. p. 38, 193
 LAMB, THOMAS, lessee of Kiver parsonage, p. 42
 Lambart, Colonel John, p. 74. John, alias Folkestone, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Lambart, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 673; account of, p. 682
 Lambe, James, cl. p. 487
 Lambert, Colonel John, p. 118
 Laming, Roger, p. 14
 Lamprey, Thomas, cl. p. 387, 497
 Lancaster, John, duke of, p. 169
 Lance's, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Lane, -----, cl. p. 156. -----'s, p. 406
 Lanfranc, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 316-391-412-499-501-505-508-512-572-624-632-636-672-674; account of, p. 690, 776
 Langborne, William, p. 27
 Langdon, abbat of, p. 11-12-191-192; abbat and convent of, p. 13, 24

Langdon,

- Langdon, East, rector of, p. 155
 -----, Thomas, p. 406. Nicholas, cl. p. 473. Richard,
 cl. p. 474, 488
 Langham, Simon, archbishop of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 721
 Langky, John, p. 212. William de, p. 237. Thomas,
 cl. p. 156
 -----'s, of Knolton, p. 203, 204; account of, p. 209
 -218-238-244
 Langley, priory of canons, alias Chiltern, p. 335, 336
 Langton, Stephen, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 13-446
 -448-500-522-523-536; account of, p. 706.
 Simon, archdeacon of the same, p. 446, 453; account of, p. 778. John, archdeacon, account
of, p. 780
 Langworth, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 607
 Lappyng, Robert, p. 405
 L'archer's, of River, p. 39
 Larkin's, p. 133
 Lasynghye, Robert, cl. p. 365, 368
 Lathebury, William, p. 263
 Latimer, William, of Corbie, p. 71, 431
 Laud, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 253-421
 -588-764; account of, p. 747
 Lavaure, James, cl. p. 187
 Laurence, Thomas, p. 26. Archbishop of Canterbury,
 p. 672; account of, p. 677
 -----'s, p. 31
 Laurry, John, cl. p. 353
 Law, John, cl. p. 283
 Lawie, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 606; master of Kingbridge hospital, account
of, p. 630
 Lawfon, John, cl. p. 368
 Lea, William de, p. 75
 Leapige, John, p. 356
 Leache, Alexander, cl. p. 49
 Le Conteur, Clement, cl. p. 143
 Ledys, Thomas, cl. p. 52
 Lee, Roger de, cl. p. 214. John, cl. p. 281. Henry, p. 309-397-440. Roger de, p. 550. Sir John,
 p. 625
 ----'s, p. 40, 407
 Leeds, prior and convent of, p. 183
 Legge, Edward, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Leicester, John Sidney, earl of, p. 75. Earl of, p. 309
 Leigh, Egerton, cl. p. 208, 281. Lady Frances, p. 226.
 Thomas, cl. p. 472-473-476
 Leith, George, p. 26-29-139; possesses Walmer M. p. 173.
 George, jun. lieutenant of Deal Castle, p. 166. Lockhart, cl. ibid.
 Le Kempe, Philip, p. 321
 LEMAN, PHILIP, possesses a moiety of Hougham, alias North
Court M. p. 45
 Leniker, Peter, cl. p. 230
 Lennard, William, p. 94
 Leofranc, abbeys of Minster, p. 316
 Le Suer, Rev. Mr. p. 465
 Letley, William, cl. p. 358
 Letter's, p. 356
 Letard, bishop of Soissons, p. 677
 Letsome, John Copely, M. D. p. 350
 Leverich's, p. 261
 Levesham, Thomas, cl. p. 283
 Levifon, fir John, p. 300
 Lewes, fir Philip, p. 75. Richard, p. 309
 Lewes, Philip, p. 76. John, cl. p. 332, 359. Master of Kingbridge hospital, account of, p. 631
 ----'s, p. 328
 Lewis, the French Dauphin, p. 408
 Ley, James, p. 475
 Leyborne, Roger de, p. 69-75-251. Stephen de, p. 182.
 Henry de et Consorts sua, p. 265
 -----'s, p. 132-181-335-344
 Liaving, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Lichfield, John de, cl. p. 331. -----'s, p. 184
 Lightfoot, Robert, cl. p. 171
 Lilley, Hannah, p. 204
 Lilye, George, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 606
 Liminge, abbeys of, p. 461
 Linacre, Dr. p. 15, 743
 Lincall's, p. 487
 Lincoln, Henry, p. 406. -----'s, p. 346
 -----, Bishop of, p. 632
 Lions, John, bishop of, p. 514
 Little, Arthur Plantagenet, viscount, p. 74. Edward, p. 173
 ----'s, of Walmer, p. 174. Samuel, prebendary and archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 615, 787
 Lister, Martin, M. D. p. 495
 Litchfield, Roger, p. 150, 151
 Living, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 504-508-512; ac- count of, p. 688, 775
 Lloyd, Edward, cl. p. 135-136-175-187. Henry, cl.
 p. 136. John, cl. p. 143
 Loddington, -----, cl. p. 242
 Lodelow, fir Henry, p. 148
 Lodge, Morgan, p. 223
 Lodowick, John, cl. p. 118-281-284
 LONDON, GOVERNORS OF BETHLEM HOSPITAL in, posses
COTMANTON, in Sholdon, p. 156; Cliffena F.
in Thanet, p. 371. OF BRIDEWELL AND BETH-LEM HOSPITALS posses Garling F. in Thanet,
 p. 347. OF CHRIST'S HOSPITAL, posses an annuity out of Barfen M. p. 201
 -----, Merchant Taylors Company in, p. 457; Leatherfellers Company in, p. 485, 584
 -----, Henry, bishop of, p. 69, 266. Mellitus, bishop of, p. 671-672-676. Gilbert Foliot,
 bishop of, p. 672, 675
 Long, William, p. 267. Mary, p. 280
 ----'s, of St. Laurence, p. 376-377-378
 Longespee, William, p. 34
 Longeville, William de, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Longueville's, p. 210
 Loring, Joseph-Royal, p. 378
 Lorn, Marquis of, p. 96
 Lothair, king, p. 641, 648
 Lothian, William Ker, marquis of, p. 166
 Love, Giles, p. 58
 Lovejoy, Elizabeth, account of her charities, p. 360-365
 -366-367-452-456-628-638. George, cl.
 p. 365
 Lovelace, Francis, p. 405. Iaucelot, p. 472. William, cl. p. 473-476-478-494. William, sergeant at law, p. 532. Lady, p. 544
 -----'s, of Betherfden, p. 243; of Canterbury, account
of, p. 407-448-670
 Lovel, fir Thomas, p. 166
 Lovell, Isaac, cl. p. 23, 242. Robert, cl. p. 284. John, cl. p. 470, 471. William, cl. p. 479
 Lovelych, John, cl. p. 464, 466
 Loverick, Thomas, p. 279. Henry, p. 633
 -----'s, of Ash, p. 280
 Lovetot, John de, p. 120
 Louth, Simon, cl. p. 482, 487
 Louth, Jeffrey, p. 76
 Lowndes's, p. 4, 7
 Lucas, Robert, p. 106, 107. John, p. 294. Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 ----'s, p. 370
 Lucius, king, p. 58, 85
 Ludd, Thomas, p. 460
 Ludhan, John, master of Kingbridge hospital, account of,
 p. 639
 Lud-hudibras, king of Britain, p. 389
 Lukin, Paul, p. 472. Anthony, cl. p. 482
 Luidhard, bishop of Soissons, p. 495
 Lulling, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Luntley, John, cl. p. 202
 Lushington, Henry, p. 51
 Luttrell, honourable Henry, p. 96
 Luxmoore, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 Lybeas, Thomas, p. 116
 Lychfield's, p. 5, 184
 Lygham, Peter, cl. p. 331; master of Kingbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Lygo, Oliver, p. 110
 Lylford, Thomas, cl. p. 208
 Lylforth, John, cl. p. 27
 Lymeter, Thomas, cl. p. 230
 Lynch, George, cl. p. 133. Robert, M. D. p. 152. John, of Staple, p. 235, 285. Simon, p. 262, 263.
 John, archdeacon of Canterbury, p. 270; pre- bendary and archdeacon, account of, p. 610-612
 -788. John, dean of the same, account of, p. 601
 -755-788. William, p. 408
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 133, 491; of Ripple, account
of, p. 133, 135
 Lynd, Thomas, p. 483
 Lynde, Henry, p. 406
 Lyndy, Henry, ibid.
 Lynsted, William de, p. 416
 Lynkfelde, Robert, cl. p. 331
 Lyon, Rev. Mr. of Dover, p. 65
 Lyon, John, cl. p. 118
 Lyzy, Mary, p. 422

M.

Maundy's, of Sandwich, p. 280
 Maurois, Elias, p. 463
 MAY, RICHARD, possesses a farm at Foulmead in Sholdon, p. 159. JOHN, possesses Chamberlains Fee, alias Deal, p. 161. Thomas, p. 408
 Maycott, Richard, p. 128. Maycott's, p. 370
 Maydestone, William de, p. 405
 Mayhew, Robert, p. 262
 Maynard, captain Robert, p. 139. John, p. 405
 Mayne, sir William, p. 408
 Mead, Humphry, p. 46, 195. Elias, cl. p. 479
 Meard, George, p. 356
 Meath, Chaworth Brabason, earl of, p. 544
 Megg, William, p. 473
 Meilus, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 461, 672; account of, p. 677
 Mellrose, William, cl. p. 467, 474
 Melros, abbat of, p. 514
 Mendham, John, p. 406
 Meneste, Thomas, p. 262
 Mennes, John, p. 173. Sir Matthew, p. 174
 -----'s, of Sandwich, account of, p. 266-267-282
 Menys, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612
 Mepham, Simon, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 539; account of, p. 716, 766
 Mercer, Elias, p. 405
 Marley, Henry, p. 93
 Meredith, Morgan, p. 94
 Mereman, William, cl. p. 281
 Meremoth, Thomas, p. 246
 Mereworth, Roger de, p. 768
 Merriweather, William, p. 6. Merriweather's, of Shebbertswell, p. 4-6-128-200
 MERSHAM, THOMAS, possesses jointly the advowson of Ripple R. p. 135
 Michell, John, p. 263-264-270
 Middleton, Thomas, cl. p. 27. William, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Mildred, St. p. 315, 648
 Miles, William, cl. p. 487
 Miller, Thomas, cl. p. 281
 Milles, Richard, p. 402, 408. Samuel, p. 408. Anne, p. 536. Rev. Dr. p. 755
 Mills, Samuel, cl. p. 281. Alexander, cl. p. 286. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 610
 Millys, John, cl. p. 178
 Milner, John, cl. p. 476. Gregory, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Milton, Thomas, p. 94
 Minet, John, cl. p. 197, 198. Edward, p. 414
 -----'s, of Dover, p. 117
 Minshull, Richard, baron of, account of, p. 173
 Miffendale, Richard, p. 261
 Mitchell, John, p. 263
 Mocket's, of Dandelion, p. 339
 Modye, Edward, p. 116
 Moels, Nicholas de, p. 68, 410
 Mohun, Joane lady, p. 542
 Moine, Eustace le, p. 63
 Molash, William, prior of Christ church, p. 516-517-522; account of, p. 554
 Molineux, sir William, p. 532
 Molin, Peter de, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 519, 579; account of, p. 610
 Molins, Dr. Scipio des, p. 426
 Monday, Edward, cl. p. 186, 208
 Mongeham, Stephen, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 553
 Monk, John, p. 17
 Monkton, vicar of, p. 340, 341
 Monins, Richard, of Saltwood, p. 9. Richard, p. 38. Cl. p. 56-177-178. Sir Edward, bart. p. 16, 323. JOHN, possesses the advowson of Charlton R. p. 55; the advowson of Ringwold R. p. 178; lessee of the ARCHBISHOP'S PALACE, in Canterbury, p. 501. John, p. 67-76-124-157-198. Of Swanton, p. 532. Thomas, p. 518, 519
 -----'s, p. 9-10-11-192. Of Dover and Waldershare, p. 16, 46; account of, p. 55-188-192-193; see also Monyn and Monyns
 Montague, Richard, cl. p. 38. Henry, p. 263. Dame Tufton, p. 538
 Montague, John, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 242
 -----'s, p. 95. Earls of Sandwich, account of, p. 264
 Monte, Lucili Stephen de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Montfort, Henry, p. 69, 75. Hugh de, p. 28-30-33-38-75-98-251. Robert, p. 38
 Monyn, John, p. 15-40-93. Cl. p. 171. Simon, p. 26-93-157. Stephen, p. 51

Maundy's, of Sandwich, p. 280
 Maurois, Elias, p. 463
 MAY, RICHARD, possesses a farm at Foulmead in Sholdon, p. 159. JOHN, possesses Chamberlains Fee, alias Deal, p. 161. Thomas, p. 408
 Maycott, Richard, p. 128. Maycott's, p. 370
 Maydestone, William de, p. 405
 Mayhew, Robert, p. 262
 Maynard, captain Robert, p. 139. John, p. 405
 Mayne, sir William, p. 408
 Mead, Humphry, p. 46, 195. Elias, cl. p. 479
 Meard, George, p. 356
 Meath, Chaworth Brabason, earl of, p. 544
 Megg, William, p. 473
 Meilus, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 461, 672; account of, p. 677
 Mellrose, William, cl. p. 467, 474
 Melros, abbat of, p. 514
 Mendham, John, p. 406
 Meneste, Thomas, p. 262
 Mennes, John, p. 173. Sir Matthew, p. 174
 -----'s, of Sandwich, account of, p. 266-267-282
 Menys, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612
 Mepham, Simon, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 539; account of, p. 716, 766
 Mercer, Elias, p. 405
 Marley, Henry, p. 93
 Meredith, Morgan, p. 94
 Mereman, William, cl. p. 281
 Meremoth, Thomas, p. 246
 Mereworth, Roger de, p. 768
 Merriweather, William, p. 6. Merriweather's, of Shebbertswell, p. 4-6-128-200
 MERSHAM, THOMAS, possesses jointly the advowson of Ripple R. p. 135
 Michell, John, p. 263-264-270
 Middleton, Thomas, cl. p. 27. William, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Mildred, St. p. 315, 648
 Miles, William, cl. p. 487
 Miller, Thomas, cl. p. 281
 Milles, Richard, p. 402, 408. Samuel, p. 408. Anne, p. 536. Rev. Dr. p. 755
 Mills, Samuel, cl. p. 281. Alexander, cl. p. 286. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 610
 Millys, John, cl. p. 178
 Milner, John, cl. p. 476. Gregory, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 Milton, Thomas, p. 94
 Minet, John, cl. p. 197, 198. Edward, p. 414
 -----'s, of Dover, p. 117
 Minshull, Richard, baron of, account of, p. 173
 Miffendale, Richard, p. 261
 Mitchell, John, p. 263
 Mocket's, of Dandelion, p. 339
 Modye, Edward, p. 116
 Moels, Nicholas de, p. 68, 410
 Mohun, Joane lady, p. 542
 Moine, Eustace le, p. 63
 Molash, William, prior of Christ church, p. 516-517-522; account of, p. 554
 Molineux, sir William, p. 532
 Molin, Peter de, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 519, 579; account of, p. 610
 Molins, Dr. Scipio des, p. 426
 Monday, Edward, cl. p. 186, 208
 Mongeham, Stephen, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 553
 Monk, John, p. 17
 Monkton, vicar of, p. 340, 341
 Monins, Richard, of Saltwood, p. 9. Richard, p. 38. Cl. p. 56-177-178. Sir Edward, bart. p. 16, 323. JOHN, possesses the advowson of Charlton R. p. 55; the advowson of Ringwold R. p. 178; lessee of the ARCHBISHOP'S PALACE, in Canterbury, p. 501. John, p. 67-76-124-157-198. Of Swanton, p. 532. Thomas, p. 518, 519
 -----'s, p. 9-10-11-192. Of Dover and Waldershare, p. 16, 46; account of, p. 55-188-192-193; see also Monyn and Monyns
 Montague, Richard, cl. p. 38. Henry, p. 263. Dame Tufton, p. 538
 Montague, John, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 242
 -----'s, p. 95. Earls of Sandwich, account of, p. 264
 Monte, Lucili Stephen de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Montfort, Henry, p. 69, 75. Hugh de, p. 28-30-33-38-75-98-251. Robert, p. 38
 Monyn, John, p. 15-40-93. Cl. p. 171. Simon, p. 26-93-157. Stephen, p. 51

Monyns, Richard, p. 114. Edward, p. 197
 Monynham, John de, p. 199. Richard de, cl. p. 281
 Moone, Thomas, cl. p. 331
 Moore, William, cl. p. 38. JOHN, ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY, p. 283, 373; account of, p. 760.
 Dean of the same, account of, p. 603. George, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 614
 More, John, p. 94. George, p. 435. —, p. 475
 More, William de la, p. 409
 Morligné, Richard, cl. p. 42
 Morne, Thomas, cl. p. 171
 Morphet, William, cl. p. 469. Master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Morfe, Humphry, p. 108
 Mortimer, Roger de, earl of March, p. 71
 -----, John, p. 75. Hugh, archdeacon of Canterbury, p. 453, 472; account of, p. 779. Sir Roger de, p. 548
 Morray, Henry, cl. p. 468
 MORRICE, MARY, possesses the site of the Crayford House, alias Stone Hall in Great Mongeham, p. 138
 ----- JAMES, cl. possesses Norborne M. p. 145. West- court M. in the same, p. 151. A house in Sbol- don, p. 158. Great Bethanger M. and advow- son of the rectory, p. 185, 186. Admiral Salmon, p. 145. James, cl. p. 187
 -----'s, of Bethanger, account of, p. 185
 Morris, Roger, p. 356
 Morton, John, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 251-292-450
 -517-523-525-542; account of, p. 733, 768
 Morton's, p. 267-405-441-734
 Morville, Hugh de, p. 698, 699
 Moies's, of St. Laurence, p. 371
 Motte, Stephen, p. 243
 Mottenden, sir John, p. 447
 Mottrum, Adam, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 782
 Moulton, of Redriff, p. 46
 Mount-Charles, Henry Conyngham lord, p. 320
 Mounte, John, cl. p. 56
 Mowton, Thomas, cl. p. 281
 Moyes, Nicholas, p. 236
 Moyle, sir Thomas, p. 133-135-181-335
 Moyne, Eustace de la, p. 68, 295; see also Moine
 Mug, John, cl. p. 496
 Muggleworth, George, cl. p. 313
 Mulling, John, p. 406
 Mulus, king, p. 641, 648
 Munday, Nicholas, cl. p. 202
 Musgrave, Mary, p. 537
 Mylls, John, alias Warham, prebendary of Canterbury,
 p. 532; account of, p. 619
 Mynge, Edward, cl. p. 380

N.

Narborough, sir John, p. 142, 203; account of, p. 211
 -213-218-244
 -----'s, p. 149
 Nairn, William, cl. p. 118
 Napleton's, p. 185, 303
 Naseby, John, p. 262
 Nathaniel, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 646
 Natyndon, John de, cl. p. 471
 Neame's, p. 236, 339
 Nedham, Richard, p. 76, 94
 Nelson, John, cl. p. 285
 Nepueu's, of Hougham, account of, p. 44, 48
 Neresford, sir Robert de, p. 68, 75
 Nesham, Walter, p. 90, 94
 Netfield, Richard, p. 356
 Netherfole, Christopher, p. 110, 112. Robert, p. 113,
 114. Edward, p. 148. WILLIAM, possesses
West-street, alias Park-gate in Norborne, p. 150.
 John, p. 414
 Neue, Thomas de Wolton, alias de Recolure, p. 625.
 Master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Newenham, John, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Newton, Henry de, p. 371
 Newfole, Thomas de, p. 16
 Newton, William, cl. p. 23. Theodore, cl. p. 178. Prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606
 Newington, Robert, p. 407
 Newman, William, cl. p. 8. Sir George, p. 56-94-472.
 Daniel, p. 301. Richard, p. 324
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 472
 Neve, Gabriel, p. 360. Neve's, p. 206
 Nevil, Thomas, dean of Canterbury, p. 518, 529; account of, p. 591. Family, account of, p. 534

Nevil, Robert; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p.
 621. Alexander, archbishop of York, p. 722.
 Richard, bishop of Chichester, p. 700
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 634
 Nevinson, sir Roger, p. 222. Christopher, p. 466. Stephen, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p.
 616
 -----'s, of Eaftry, account of, p. 217, 226
 Nibbs, James Langford, p. 186
 Nicholl, Henry, p. 197
 Nicholls, Samuel, cl. p. 142, 230
 Nicholas, Edward, p. 95. —, alias Marckham, p. 170
 Nicholson, Francis, p. 177
 Nickalls, Mr. surveyor of Dover harbour, p. 85
 Nicolls, Edward, p. 156. Nicholls's, of Norborne, p. 153
 Niger, Robert, p. 102
 Nibbett, Nehemiah, cl. p. 208
 Nixon, Dorothy, p. 300-461-526. Thomas, prebendary
 of Canterbury, account of, p. 618
 Noble's, of Thanet, p. 366
 Noole, William, cl. p. 119
 Norcott, William, cl. p. 130
 Norfolk, sir William de, p. 183
 -----, Thomas-Howard, duke of, p. 526
 Norman, Alexander, p. 279. Thomas, p. 406
 Normanton, William, cl. p. 119
 Norris, John, p. 166. Roger, prior of Christ church, ac- count of, p. 549
 North, Hon. Francis, lieutenant of Dover castle, p. 76. Frederick lord, p. 75, 92. George Augustus lord, p.
 166
 -----, Nicholas, cl. p. 56. Brownlow, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 603. Family, account of, p. 190
 Northampton, Henry Howard, earl of, p. 59-74-84-374
 Northwic, William de, p. 215
 Northwood, Roger, p. 68, 70. Johannes de, & Consort
sua, p. 265
 -----'s, of Northwood, p. 14; of Dane court, p. 297;
see also Norwood
 Norton, John, p. 261
 Norwood, Alexander, p. 346, 354. Valentine, p. 285
 -----'s, p. 41. Of Dane court, p. 345; account of, p.
 359, 366. Captain, p. 368
 -----'s, of Thanet, p. 300, 355
 Nothbald, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 646
 Nothelm, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 680
 Nowell, Herbert, p. 14, 15. Nowell's, of Sandwich, p. 280
 -----, Alexander, prebendary of Canterbury. account of,
 p. 612
 Nutt, John, p. 407
 Nytham, John, p. 262

O.

Ochinus, Bernard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 620
 Ockman's, of Deal, p. 13
 Odo, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 504-505-508-512-546;
account of, p. 684
 ----- Colignie, cardinal Chastillon, p. 541
 -----, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 547
 Offa, king, p. 14-242-673-682
 Offord's, see Ufford's
 Okell, William, cl. p. 479
 Okenfold, Edward, p. 302
 Oldcastle, sir John, p. 727
 Oliver, George, cl. p. 284. John, cl. p. 331. Nicholas,
 p. 663
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Omer, Jacob, cl. p. 359. Elizabeth, p. 266
 -----'s, p. 148. Of Thanet, p. 347
 Orange, prince of, p. 261
 Orchard, Lybbie, p. 309-311-477
 Ordiarnes, of the co. of Sussex, p. 285
 Orgreve, John, cl. p. 229
 Oranstone's, p. 10, 11
 Ormond, James, duke of, p. 75
 Osborn, William, p. 138
 Osbern, Monk. of Christ church, p. 546-681-685
 OSBORNE, WILLIAM, M. D. possesses Ewell M. and S.
impropriation and advowson of the vicarage, p.
 35, 37. William, cl. p. 127-140-175-496
 Osbolaston, Robert, p. 362
 Osburn, William, p. 406
 Oslow, William, p. 405
 Othobon, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Otway, John, p. 107
 Overing, John, cl. p. 359
 Overton's, p. 262

Oughton, Anthony, p. 472
 Oving, John, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Ovynde, Edward, cl. p. 493
 Owen, Jones, cl. p. 8
 Ower's, p. 208
 Owre's, p. 224
 Oxenbridge, sir Edward, p. 172. Sir Robert, account of, p. 181, 182
 OXENDEN, SIR HENRY, bart. possides an estate in W'ord, p. 244. Sir Henry, bart. p. 270. Sir George, p. 264, 285. James, cl. p. 276
 -----'s, p. 182-263-264
 Oxinden, Richard, prior of Christ church, p. 444, 537; account of, p. 552, 582
 Oxford, Veres, earls of, p. 54, 176
 -----, PRESIDENT AND FELLOWS OF ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE IN, possides the advowson of Barfen church, p. 202, 457; OF CORPUS CHRISTI COLLEGE, possides Netherhall, in Thanet, p. 300. Rector and Fellows of Lincoln college in, p. 274, 275
 Oxney, John, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 555

P.

Pache, Edward, cl. p. 42
 Packe, Dr. p. 6-163-173. Sir Gilbert de, p. 28. Tho- of Deal, p. 152
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 477
 -----, alias Paske, Valentine atte, cl. p. 331
 Packenham's, p. 59
 Page, Edmund, p. 27. Henry, p. 78. Thomas, p. 90. William, cl. p. 479
 -----'s, of Maidstone, p. 114
 Pagnel's, or Painell's, p. 40
 Paisforer, Olbert, p. 123, 149
 Pakinton, William de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 782
 PAINE, Mr. possides a Paper Mill in Buckland, p. 51
 Palmer, sir Henry, p. 51-429-493-495-496. Richard, p. 114. CHARLES FYSHE, possides jointly the advowson of Ripple R. p. 155. Herbert, p. 211. William, cl. p. 331. James, p. 407. John, pre- bendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612
 Pamlet, Daniel, p. 366
 Pannell, Henry, p. 220
 Pantou, Thomas, cl. p. 476, 478
 PAPILLON, DAVID, lessee of Dover Priory, p. 107; the al- ternate patron of Eythorne R. p. 198; possides Elmington, in Eythorne, p. 196. Philip, cl. p. 198. David, p. 624
 -----'s, of Acrife, p. 95-110-111-112
 Paramore, Thomas, p. 126-299-302-312-395-398-458. Thomas, cl. p. 127, 175. John, p. 135, 243. Henry, p. 148, 151. Saphir, p. 158
 -----'s, of Statenborough, account of, p. 221-222-224 -226-227; of St. Nicholas, p. 297-300-301 302-303; of Minister, account of, p. 322-327 -328. Paramore's, p. 161, 477
 Parboe, Edmund, account of, p. 235, 275
 -----'s, of Sandwich, account of, p. 267, 268
 Parcar, John, cl. p. 242
 Pargate, Richard, p. 470, 623. -----'s, p. 441
 Parkell, Thomas, p. 405
 Parker, Matthew, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 130-145 -188-207-271-273-285-343-433-500-501-583 -584-597-626-662; account of, p. 739-740-772. JOHN, possides Coldharbour F. in Norborne, p. 147. John, cl. p. 240. JOHN DEANE, possides Deane's Mill, in Canterbury, p. 439. Thomas, p. 146 -150-151. Mark, cl. p. 286. Captain Robert, p. 276. Lady Rebecca, p. 544. Samuel, pre- bendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 607; mas- ter of Kingsbridge hospital, p. 630; archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 787
 -----'s, of Shebbertwell, p. 5; of Birchington, p. 532, 356
 Parkhurst, Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 609
 Paris, John, cl. p. 49-468-474; master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 631. Peter, p. 477
 Parmenter, John, cl. p. 76, 78
 Parubye, William, cl. p. 8
 Parrot, sir John, p. 670
 Parry, Henry, cl. p. 140. William Fox, p. 356
 Partherich, William, cl. p. 229. Edward, p. 263
 Partrich, Ralph, cl. p. 130
 Partridge, John, p. 323
 Pashley, Christopher, cl. p. 27

Paik, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 611
 Passett, Thomas, p. 488
 Pastor, John, cl. p. 127
 Patche, Thomas, p. 262, 267
 Pattinson's, p. 208
 Patyferre, Nicholas, cl. p. 488
 Paullet's, p. 181
 Pawley, Thomas, cl. p. 280
 Pawlins's, of Thanet, p. 366
 Pawson, Thomas, cl. p. 183, 281
 Payable, John, p. 404
 Payne, Edward, cl. p. 313. William, p. 356
 Paynton, William, p. 115
 Peake, Humphry, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 -----'s, p. 262, 263
 Pearce, Thomas, cl. p. 56
 Pears, John, p. 285
 Pearson, Henry, p. 308
 Peche, sir John, p. 71. Sir William, p. 411
 Peck, Thomas, p. 29, 177
 Peckham, John, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 162-199 -436-447-537-637; account of, p. 710. Mi- chael, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 655
 Pedecoq, Thomas, cl. p. 486
 Peerfon, Andrew, cl. p. 492; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620
 Pegge, Rev. Samuel, p. 762
 Peirce, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 Peke, Captain, p. 151. -----'s, of Ash, p. 245
 Pelican, Thomas, master of Kingbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Pelter, John, p. 14, 15
 Pembroke, William, earl of, p. 243. Earl of, p. 748
 Pembrygg, sir Richard de, p. 91
 Penchester, sir Stephen, p. 3-69-70-255
 Penkell, Thomas, p. 405
 Penherst, George, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
 Peniell, sir John, p. 267
 Pennington, Thomas, cl. p. 130. Montague, cl. p. 130. John, p. 166. Sir Allan, p. 447
 Pennyman, James, p. 755
 Pentwin, Hugh, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 784
 Pepper, Thomas, p. 108-111-115
 -----'s, of Dover, p. 46-47-48
 Pepys, Samuel, p. 263
 Percival, sir Anthony, p. 116. Anthony, p. 199. John, p. 189
 -----'s, of Dover, p. 47
 Perkins, John, p. 145. Sir George, p. 173
 Perot, Richard, p. 263. Sir John, ibid. Stephen, p. 280
 -----'s, p. 200; of Knolton, p. 208-209-244; of Ringle- ton, p. 237
 Perral, Thomas, p. 405
 Perronet, James, p. 357
 Perry, Captain, p. 85. Thomas, p. 305
 Peter, first abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 645
 Peters's, alias Pierre's, of Canterbury, account of, p. 233 -321-449-464-465
 Petham, William, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 555
 Petit, Sarah, p. 354. Thomas, of Canterbury, p. 72, 82
 -----'s, of Dandelyon, p. 297. see also Pettit and Petyt
 Pettit, Edward, cl. p. 8
 Petle, Dunstan, cl. p. 486
 Petley's, of Sandwich, p. 279
 PETMAN, THOMAS, possides HAM M. p. 182
 -----'s, of Eastry, p. 227
 Peto, sir John de, p. 75. William, p. 730
 Petronius, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 646
 Petry, John, p. 94
 Pett, Thomas, cl. p. 284
 Pettit, Edward, cl. p. 13. Colonel James, p. 328. Cap- tain John, p. 378
 -----'s, of Dandelyon, account of, p. 343-355-356, see also Pettit and Petyt
 Petteward, Roger, cl. p. 8
 Petyt, John, p. 467
 Petyt, William, cl. p. 331
 Peverel, Jeffry de, p. 50, 61. William, p. 33-60-67-121
 Peyforer, sir Fulk, p. 447
 Peyntour, Stephen, p. 261
 Peyton, sir Thomas, p. 20-211-263. Sir Samuel, ibid.
 -----'s, of Knolton, p. 142-149-203-206; account of, p. 209-210-212-213-218-234-244
 Philipott,

- Philipott, John, p. 263. -----'s, p. 3, 195
 PHILPOT, WILLIAM, possesses a farm at Lower Selson, in Eastry, p. 224
 -----'s, of Sandwich, possesses F. at Ringmere in Woodnesborough, p. 239. Charles, cl. p. 136. Edward, p. 303; of Word, p. 245, 246
 Philipp, Robert, p. 279
 Philips, alderman, p. 26. Robert, cl. p. 175, 179. John, p. 177
 Phillips, Mr. p. 739
 Piato, Edward de, p. 235
 Picks, p. 208
 Pickering, Richard, cl. p. 17-52-118. John de, p. 404
 Pickis, Richard, cl. p. 467
 Picot, Eustace, p. 33
 Pierce, Henry, p. 197
 Pierre, Peter de la, p. 422. see also Peters
 Piets, John, cl. p. 464, 466
 Piggot, Grenado, p. 44. John, cl. p. 281, 284
 Piggott, John, cl. p. 368
 Pike, Richard, cl. p. 38
 Pinchnay, John, p. 94
 Pincerna, William, p. 208-219-236
 Pinnocke, Thomas, p. 262
 Pix's, alias Picks's, p. 205
 Pirot's, p. 200, 237, see also Perot's
 Piffonger, Ralph, p. 406
 Pitman, Robert, cl. p. 32, 215
 PITT, Right Hon. WILLIAM, Governor of Dover Castle, and Lord Warden, p. 75. Sir William, p. 319, 321
 Plane, John, p. 114
 Planker, Bartholomew, p. 24
 Platt, David, cl. p. 466
 Plegmund, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 508; account of, p. 682, 762
 Plomer, John, cl. p. 178
 Plot, Dr. p. 80, 238
 Plummer's, of Canterbury, p. 470
 PLUMPTRE, JOHN, possesses Barson, alias Gerards M. p. 199
 Plymley, John, cl. p. 183
 Poictiers, William of, p. 5, 161
 Poistou, William of, p. 102
 Poin, Fernando, p. 82
 POINTER, JAMES MEDHURST, possesses a moiety of Westcliffe M. p. 29; West Studdal, in Norborne, p. 152; Ringwold M. p. 177. AMBROSE LYON, possesses a moiety of Westcliffe M. p. 29
 Pckell, Thomas, p. 405
 Poldre, the Lord of, p. 255
 Pole, Reginald, cardinal, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 541-582-662; account of, p. 737
 Pollard, George, p. 172
 Polley, alias Polhill, Anne, p. 469
 Polteman, Stephen, cl. p. 242
 Poltman's, p. 238
 Polre, Robert de, p. 441. -----'s, p. 416
 Pomfret, Josiah, cl. p. 215
 Ponet, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 Poney, Thomas, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 654
 Pope, Josias, cl. p. 314
 Pontiac, abbat of, p. 115
 Port, Hugh de, p. 10-123-181-184-199. Robert de, p. 61
 Porter, John, of Wandsworth, p. 533
 Porteus, Dr. p. 760
 Portweye, Thomas, p. 119
 Pory, John, prebendary, account of, p. 612
 Pot's, of London, p. 200
 POTTER, ROBERT, possesses the mansion of Shebbertswell and Butter-street F. p. 4, 5. THOMAS, lessee of tythes and glebe land in Shebbertswell, p. 7. Mary, p. 267. John, dean of Canterbury, p. 538; account of, p. 603; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 622, 755. John, cl. p. 140. John, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 755. Thomas, ibid.
 Powel, Nathaniel, p. 7. Mrs. p. 170. John, p. 335, 344. ARTHUR ROBERTS, possesses QUEEKES, in Birchington, p. 335; Dandelyon, p. 344; Fleet, in St. John's, p. 347; Kinggate S. in Thanet, p. 363. Dame Anne, p. 339. John, p. 363
 Powis, William, cl. p. 284, 286
 Powis, Thomas, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 605
 Powle, John, p. 336
 Powles, Mr. p. 358
 Powlet, John, earl of, p. 189
 Pownal, Philemon, cl. p. 6-464-473. Barnaby, cl. p. 56. Philip, p. 137
 Poynings, sir Edward, p. 73, 76. -----'s, p. 181
 Poynter, William, p. 150
 Prat, John, cl. p. 314
 Pratt, sir Roger, p. 189. John, p. 264. Richard, p. 406
 Precott, Edward, p. 22
 Preston, Robert, p. 96
 Prettiman, John, p. 267
 Preude's, of Canterbury, p. 239
 Prez, Jacob de, D. D. p. 532
 Price, Howell, p. 336
 Pringle, John, p. 95
 Priobus, Aloisius, p. 582
 Pritchard, Samuel, cl. p. 281
 Probert, John, p. 282
 Procter, Luke, cl. p. 368
 Provost, Robert, cl. p. 464, 466
 Proudé, John, p. 406. Thomas, p. 544
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 466
 Prude, Thomas, p. 464. Lieutenant Colonel, p. 534
 Pudner, Humphry, p. 356; account of, p. 527-428-529
 Puilli, Thomas, p. 405
 Pulley, William, cl. p. 17
 Pury, Peter, cl. p. 214
 Pycot, Ralph, p. 307
 Pycard, Thomas, cl. p. 490
 Pybus, Charles Small, M. P. for Dover, p. 96
 -----'s, account of, ibid.
 PYOTT, ROBERT THOMAS, possesses Stonecap F. in Norborne, p. 147; A HOUSE on St. Martin's Hill, in Canterbury, p. 429. Charles, p. 426
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 147; account of, p. 429, 495
 Pyrot's, p. 237, see also Perot's
 Pyryton, John, p. 406
 Pyfing, Bartholomew, p. 124

Q.

- Quekes's, of Birchington, p. 309; account of, p. 532-33
 Queteville, William, cl. p. 20, 23. John, cl. p. 127

R.

- Radeliffe, Houstone, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 610
 Raiton, Robert, p. 396. -----'s, p. 472
 Rainhall, Robert, cl. p. 483, 486
 Raleigh, Henry de Essex, baron of, p. 39, 67
 Ralph, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 507; account of, p. 693-770-771; bishop of Rochester, p. 770
 RAMMELL, MRS. ELIZABETH, lessee of Little Mounton, in Mongeham, p. 138; possesses two houses at Weststone, p. 223. THOMAS, possesses a farm at Beckstreet, in Eastry, ibid.; lessee of Word Minnis, p. 245. GIBBON and OTHERS, possesses Mansten, in St. Lawrence, p. 369
 -----'s, of Eastry, p. 227, 229
 Ramsey, John, cl. p. 127, 175. John de, p. 45; Sir Harry, p. 477
 Rampston, Frances, p. 285
 Rand, Nordast, p. 133-135-138-205. Andrew, p. 135
 Randall's, p. 309
 Randolph, John, p. 59. Herbert, cl. p. 171, 245. HERBERT, CL. lessee of Nether Hale, in Thanet, p. 300-526-534-535. Robert, p. 113. Edward, M. D. p. 469
 -----'s, of Deal, p. 162; of Canterbury, p. 534
 Rainier's, of Sandwich, p. 276, 277
 Rastall, William, p. 407
 Rattray, John, cl. p. 42-126-127
 Rawe, George, p. 285
 Rawlinson, Dr. p. 216, 248
 Rawstorne, Jeremiah, p. 196
 Ray, Matthew, p. 135
 Raymond, sir Charles, bart. p. 361
 Raynhull, Robert, cl. p. 485
 Read, Peter, p. 75, 93. Andrew, p. 215. John, p. 279. Mr. p. 365. Duall, cl. p. 489
 -----'s, of St. Laurence, p. 378
 Reading, John, cl. p. 118; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 616
 Reculver, abbat of, p. 680
 Rede, sir Edward, p. 285
 Redman, Francis, cl. p. 193. William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606; archdeacon of the same, p. 285; account of, p. 780
 Redwood, Captain Thomas, p. 378
 Regis, Balthazar, cl. p. 143
 Retling, Richard de, p. 200
 -----'s, of Retling Court, p. 157
 Revell, Thomas, p. 95, 96

Revett, John, p. 222
 Reynell, Richard, cl. p. 281
 Reyner, Thomas, p. 261
 Reynes, Thomas, p. 75
 Reynold, William, p. 150. David, cl. p. 186
 Reynolds, Walter, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 129-442-538; account of, p. 715, 707. Mr. p. 150. John, of Eastry, p. 224. Alexander, p. 262. Thomas, cl. p. 366
 -----'s, p. 220
 Rheimes, William, archbishop of, p. 513
 Rhodes, John, cl. p. 193
 Rhudde, Durand, cl. p. 8
 Rich, Thomas, cl. p. 52, 106. Mr. p. 234. Charles, p. 263. Dame Elizabeth, p. 356. Hugh, p. 447
 Richard, natural son of king John, p. 3
 -----, II. king, p. 656
 Richard, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 228-520-582-636; account of, p. 702
 Richards, Robert, cl. p. 17. Walter, cl. p. 37-118-119. William, p. 41, 111. Hugh, p. 47
 -----'s, of Dover, ibid.
 Richardson, Nicholas, p. 222. Captain John, p. 378
 -----'s, p. 158, 267
 Richmond, Henry Fitzroy, duke of, p. 74. James Stuart, duke of, ibid.
 -----, Robert, cl. p. 474
 Rickman, Mr. p. 159
 Riddel, Geoffry, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 777
 Ridley, Nicholas, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 610. Roger, p. 406, 414
 Rigden, Robert, p. 441. William, p. 455. John, cl. p. 480
 Riggs, Mr. p. 359
 Ringeley, sir Edward, p. 203-209-212-218-244-280
 Ringemere, Thomas de, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 550
 Riou, captain, p. 481
 Ripple, Solomon de, p. 141, 145
 Rither, sir William, p. 195
 Rivallis, Peter de, p. 68, 85
 Rivers, lord, p. 260
 Roalf, Elizabeth, p. 111
 Robert, Gemeticensis, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 689
 Robert, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 777
 Roberts, William, p. 147-335-344-363. Ann, p. 377
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 465-544
 Robins, John, p. 94
 Robinson, J. captain of Sandown castle, p. 166
 -----, William, p. 241. Henry, p. 291-458-584. Matthew, p. 408. Charles, p. ibid. Elitha, cl. p. 471
 -----'s, p. 16. Of Sandwich, p. 282; of Monkton, p. 310, 311
 ----- John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608
 ROBY, SAMUEL-FASHAM, possesses Great Morgeham M. p. 137. Edward, p. ibid.
 ROCHESTER, DEAN AND CHAPTER OF, possesses River M. p. 39; the advowson of Chilleuden rectory, p. 215; a portion of tithes in Woodnesborough, p. 236; the parsonage and advowson of the same, p. 241; Doulingdale and Castle lands portion of tithes in Canterbury, p. 442
 ----- castle, governor of, p. 68
 Rochford, George-Boleyne, viscount, p. 73
 Rockingham, Lewis, earl of, p. 10-11-16-123-190-205-243. Catherine, countess of, p. 9-10-16-152-190
 Roger, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 650
 Rogers, Richard, suffragan bishop of Dover, p. 101
 -----, dean of Canterbury, p. 538; account of, p. 590. Master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630. William, cl. p. 136, 444. Mr. p. 236. John, 252, 407. Lapius, p. 405. Thomas, p. 437. Francis, cl. p. 473-590. Rufus, cl. p. 489
 Rogerius, Petrus, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 781
 Rogerfon, William, p. 378
 Rokelle, Ricardus de confor sua, p. 265
 Rolfe, Thomas, p. 243, 262. Cl. p. 279. Elizabeth, p. 282
 Rollyng, Thomas, cl. p. 281, 287
 Romans, Richard, king of, p. 63
 Romenel, Robert de, p. 103
 Romney, barons of the port of, p. 79, 514
 Romswinkel, John-Harman, cl. p. 53
 Rondes, Roger de, master of Kingsbridge hospital, p. 629; account of, p. ibid.

Rooke, sir George, p. 58; account of, p. 536, 671. Margaret, p. 477. Elizabeth, p. 544
 -----'s, of St. Laurence, p. 30; account of, p. 384-491-670
 Roos, Thomas, lord of Hamlake, p. 625
 Roper, John, of Linsted, p. 323-324-369-638. William, p. 407
 -----'s, of St. Dunstan's, p. 41, 638
 Ros, Geoffry de, p. 705
 Rose, John, cl. p. 8. John, p. 407-454-470. Mr. p. 437. Edward, p. 441. Robert, p. 461, 584. William, 4, 406
 Rotheram, John, p. 406
 Rotley, John, cl. p. 485
 Rouse, Richard, p. 40. Sir Edward, p. 94
 -----'s, of Dover, p. 117
 Rowe, William, p. 300. John, p. 407. Sir Thomas, p. 748
 Rowntree, Laurence, cl. p. 368
 Rov, general, p. 66
 Royle, Joseph, p. 463
 Rucke, James, p. 307, 310
 Rudd, Sayer, cl. p. 175
 Ruffin, John, p. 197
 Ruffinian, abbat of St. Augustines, account of, p. 646
 Rufford, Titus, p. 476
 Ruffin's, p. 307, 310
 Rumsfy, John de, p. 405
 Rumworth, Henry, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 783
 Rupy, Andomar de, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 782
 Russell, William, cl. p. 38, 42. MICHAEL, possesses a farm at East Studdal, p. 142. Richard, p. 170. -----, the unfortunate lord, p. 597
 Rusli, Anthony, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 607
 Rutland, Edward, earl of, p. 72
 Rutland, William, p. 394
 Rutter, -----, p. 184
 Rutton, John, cl. p. 276, 281
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 279
 Ryall, William, cl. p. 119
 Rymer, Thomas, cl. p. 7, 8

S.

Sabine, Avery, p. 459-628-629
 Sbern Biga, p. 391
 Sacket, John, cl. p. 140, 186. John, p. 303-361-365-366. Stephen, p. 357. Richard, p. 360
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 279
 Sackette, John, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630, 631
 Sackville, sir Richard, p. 35. Lord, p. 96
 Saffery, Elias, p. 170
 Salisbury, William Longspee, bishop of, p. 68
 -----, William Montacute, earl of, p. 176. Robert Cecil, earl of, p. 662
 -----, John, cl. p. 387
 Salmon, William, p. 262
 Salter, William, p. 345
 Sampson, John, p. 139
 Sancroft, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 7-13-629-741; account of, p. 751. William, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 787
 Sanders, William, p. 98. Edward, account of, p. 146
 -----'s, of Thanet, p. 297, 327, see also Saunders
 Sandford, Robert, p. 41. Henry, p. 354. John, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 532; account of, p. 613. Henry de, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 778
 Sandhurst, John de, p. 203-204-209-237-244
 Sandwell, Geoffry, p. 321
 Sandwich, Simon de, p. 67-282-283. Ralph de, p. 70. John de, p. 209, 271. Nicholas de, p. 241, 370; prior of Christ church, account of, p. 550. Henry de, prior of Billington, p. 266. Henry de, p. 347, 446. Elias de, prior of St. Gregory's, p. 633
 ----- de, family of, p. 132, 181; account of, p. 265-270-271-272-344
 -----, Bacons of, p. 79, 514. LIST OF, returned to parliament, p. 216. Mayor, &c. of, p. 229, 245. Vicar of St. Maries in, p. 228
 -----, GOVERNORS OF ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL in, possesses Denn Court M. in Woodnesborough, p. 234
 -----, MAYOR AND JURATS OF, p. 164-381-312-386, alternate patrons of St. Peter's rectory in Sandwich, p. 283

- Sandwico, Nicholas de, p. 228. Radulphus & Consorts sua, p. 265
- Sandys, Richard, of Canterbury, p. 137. Sir Richard, p. 152. Thomas, p. 210, 261. Sir Edwin, p. 263. Colonel, the rebel, p. 518-594-689
- 's, of Norborne, account of, p. 146-153-192; of Canterbury, account of, p. 147-480-481
- Sanfone, Ralph de, 53, 102
- Santon, Francis, p. 195. Santon's, p. 200
- Saravia, Adrian, prebendary of Canterbury, 532, 533; account of, p. 612
- Sare, Ade, p. 45
- Sargenson, John, p. 478. John, cl. p. 471, 482
- Sarisbury, John, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 555
- Sarum, William de, p. 68
- Savage, Arnold, p. 75. Culpeper, cl. 230
- Saunders, Francis, cl. p. 38. Charles, cl. p. 194. William, p. 379. Mark, cl. p. 471. Henry, p. 477
- Savoy, Peter de, p. 68
- Sauvage, Radulphus & Consorts sua*, p. 265. Rogerus de & Consorts sua, p. ibid.
- SAWBIDGE, JOHN-ELIAS, possesses Hammill court in Woodnesborough, p. 230. Samuel-Elias, p. 408
- 's, of Canterbury, p. 236
- SAWKINS, JAMES, possesses a moiety of Naf in Thanet, p. 346. Jolepn, p. 488
- 's, p. 441
- Sawyer, Thomas, cl. p. 230. Joice, p. 236
- Saxey, Jocola, p. 670
- Saye, William de, p. 62. Geoffry de, p. 78, 235. Galfridus & Consorts sua, p. 265. Save's, p. 8
- , Robert, cl. p. 140. Master of Kingbridge hospital, account of, p. 630. William, p. 441
- Say and Seal, James-Fienes lord, p. 73
- Sayer, William, abbat of Langdon, p. 18, 19. Thomas, p. 156; possesses Jenkin F. in Eysborne, p. 197. Edward, p. 233. George, p. 407. Rev. Dr. p. 755
- 's, of Sandwich, p. 285
- Scabines, men of, p. 431
- Scorier's, p. 234
- Scot, Thomas, alias Rotheram, p. 136
- , William, p. 137. Thomas, p. 407. The regicide, p. 741
- Scott, William, captain of Walmer castle, p. 173; possesses a capital messuage in Canterbury, p. 428. Sir John, p. 228. Cecilia, p. 428
- , fir William, the archbishop's commissary, p. 520
- 's, of Scots Hall, p. 76; of the Moat in Suffex, p. 172, 182
- Scotland, abbat of St. Augustine's, p. 2-131-141; account of, p. 648
- Scotland, William, king of, p. 432
- Scotton, William de, p. 75. -----, cl. 229
- Scrinking's, p. 218
- Scudamore, Thomas, p. 222
- Scudder, Robert, cl. p. 186
- Sea's, p. 300
- Seaman, John, p. 483
- Secker, George, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 617. Thomas, archbishop of the same, p. 638, 746; account of, p. 757
- Seddon, Richard, p. 7
- Sedley's, of Southfleet, p. 23, 24
- Seer, John, p. 262
- Segrave, Stephen de, p. 68, 410
- Setowle, John, p. 355
- Seldwich, Thomas, p. 405, 406
- Seliage, Nicholas de, p. 230
- Seller, John, cl. p. 142-198-230-231-544
- Selling, William, prior of Christ church, p. 220-309-517-537; account of, p. 555-573-576-579. Richard de, p. 331
- Selling, William, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
- Selowe, William, p. 406
- Senhouse, -----, p. 670
- Septvans, William, p. 487-531-638
- Sergeant, Walter, p. 406
- Sernaye, Richard, p. ibid.
- Sevenock, James, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 657
- Sevington, fir John de, p. 75
- Sextayne, John, p. 406
- Seye, William, p. ibid.
- Seymor, Henry, p. 755
- Sharp, John, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 597. John, p. 663
- 's, of Canterbury, p. 470
- Shelburne, counteis of, p. 320
- Sheldon, Thomas, p. 463. George, p. 475. Gilbert, archbishop, p. 629-734-746; account of, p. 750. Ralph, p. 739
- Shelle, John, p. 261, 262
- Shelving, John de, p. 43. Bennet, p. 448
- 's, of Woodnesborough, p. 230, 231
- Shelvy's, of Sandwich, p. 285
- Shepherd, Samuel, p. 138, 139
- 's, of Faversham, account of, p. 138. John, cl. p. 476
- Sheppard, John, cl. 466
- Sherbrook, Richard, p. 195
- Sherlefelde, Stephen, cl. p. 331
- Sherlock, Thomas, cl. p. 230
- Sherman, William, of Croyuon, p. 50
- Shereve, Gervas le, p. 322. William le, p. 208
- Shafton, Mary, p. 378
- Shillingheld, Guido de, p. 195
- Shindler, Thomas, p. 151
- Shipton, Thomas, cl. p. 151. James, cl. p. 365, 368
- Shirburne, Elmer, bishop of, p. 641
- Shirley, Thomas, p. 15. Shirley's, p. 133
- Shocklidge, George, cl. p. 156
- 's, of Norborne, p. 153
- Sholvedon, Lambert de, p. 157
- Short, Matthew, p. 378
- Shove, Henry, cl. 130-143-473-476
- Shovel, fir Cloudefley, p. 150-203-211-213-244
- Shreffle, Hugh, cl. p. 313
- Shrubsole, Richard, p. 435. Shrubsole's, p. 240
- Shuckford, Samuel, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619
- Shurland, fir Geoffry de, p. 68. Sir Robert de, p. 70
- Skeene, Thomas, p. 479
- Skiffington, William, p. 110
- Skinner, Edward, cl. p. 38
- Skippe, Richard, p. 444. John, cl. p. 490
- Skrinkling's, p. 218
- Skyring, Robert, cl. p. 213-214-215
- Siburgis, holy virgin, p. 507
- Sidney, Henry, viscount, p. 74-79-348. Colonel Algernoon, p. 76
- Sidley, William, p. 134
- 's, baronets, p. 178, 360, see also Sedley
- Sigeburga, abbess of Minster, p. 316
- Sigefreth, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
- Sigerie, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
- Siledrithe, abbess of Minster, p. 316
- Silkwood's, p. 152
- Silliard, -----, cl. p. 171
- Silvester, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 649
- SIMMONS, SAMUEL-FOART, M. D. possesses land called Erchestro in Sandwich, p. 120. Mary, p. 285. James, of Canterbury, p. 415-423-437-454. JAMES, and JOSEPH ROYLE, lessees of ABBAT'S MILL in Canterbury, p. 438
- Simons, Peter, cl. p. 308. Nicholas, cl. p. ibid.
- Simpton, Edward, L.L.D. p. 96. John, p. 377. Roger, p. 465
- Siricius, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 418, 508; account of, p. 687. Abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
- Sistre, Bernard, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 781
- Sittingbourne, John, prior of Christ church, account of, p. 549
- Six, James, p. 152. Six's, of Canterbury, p. 483
- Sladden, John, p. 138. William, p. 139. ISAAC, possesses New Farm, alias Gore in Eastry, p. 224
- 's, of Dover, p. 41, 47. Sladden's, p. 236, 240
- Slegge, Stephen, p. 94
- Slodden, William, p. 4, 475. Mrs. possesses St. Sepulchre's priory in Canterbury, p. 452
- Smale, John, cl. p. 283
- Smeaton, Mr. the surveyor, p. 85-375-376-439
- Smelter, Thomas, cl. p. 308
- Smelton, Thomas, cl. p. 303
- Smith, George, cl. p. 8, 202. John, cl. p. 242, 485. Alexander James, cl. p. 38. James, p. 115. -----, cl. p. 38, 276. William, p. 116. Sir Thomas, p. 159-243-263. John, p. 261. Sir Richard, p. 309
- , Mrs. possesses a moiety of Naf in Thanet, p. 346. Philip, p. 366. Jeremiah, p. 435. Richard, p. 444. George, p. 480
- 's, of Westenhanger, p. 158-228-243-667; of Thornton, p. 206; of Sandwich, p. 279
- 's, p. 234-285-360; of Longport, p. 667
- Smitcot, Bartholomew, p. 52
- Smythe, Hugoner, cl. p. 284. Thomas, cl. p. 284-355-358
- Snowe, Ralph, p. 638
- Soan, Jonathan, cl. p. 242
- Soiffons, Letard, bishop of, p. 641
- Soldanks, Hugh, p. 127. Stephen, ibid.
- Sole, John de la, p. 184, 224. Thomas, cl. p. 286
- Solly, John, p. 15. Christian, p. 112. RICHARD HEATON,

708, possesses St. Margaret's at Cliffe M. p. 24;
Great Pottery, in Woodnesborough, p. 234
 Solly's, of Sandwich, p. 152-279-280-282-357
 Solme's, William, cl. p. 286
 Somer, John, p. 262
 Somers, John, lord chancellor, p. 133
 Somerset, Edward, duke of, p. 73, 251. Henry Beaufort, duke of, p. 336. Earl of, p. 535
 Sommer, George, p. 355. John, p. 428, 472. William,
 p. 520, 579
 Sondes's, of Lees Court, p. 228
 Sorges, John, cl. p. 484, 486
 Southerden, Stephen, p. 233
 Southoufon, Henry, cl. p. 156
 Southwell, Richard, p. 243
 Sparrow, John, p. 4
 Spencer, Nicholas, customer of Sandwich p. 240, 285.
 Simon, p. 444. Arnold, p. 437. Rev. Mr.
 p. 728. Mr. the Poet, p. 743
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 237, 282; of St. Laurence,
 p. 378
 Sperfall, Robert, cl. p. 493
 Spicer, John, p. 157. Richard, cl. p. 275, 286. Richard, p. 405. Stephen le, p. 404. Edmund de, ibid.
 -----'s, p. 93
 Spier, John, cl. p. 202
 Spigurnel, Thomas, p. 75. -----'s, p. 71
 Spilman, John, cl. p. 27. Thomas, p. 369, 447
 Spina, Nicholas de, abbat of St. Augustine's, p. 145; ac- count of, p. 652
 Spinkes, Nathaniel, p. 440
 Spracklyn, Luke, p. 356. Robert, p. 370. Dorothy,
 p. 457. Leonard, p. 488
 -----'s, of St. Laurence, p. 297; account of, p. 373
 -377-379; of Canterbury, p. 533
 Sprat, John, p. 276, 277
 Springett's, p. 226, 227
 Squire, William, cl. p. 166. Roger, cl. p. 464
 Spicer, John, cl. p. 313
 St. Augustine's, Canterbury, abbat and convent of, p. 2
 -12-16-21-24-98-102-107-121-124
 -287-355-390-391-408-431-438-453
 -463-468-472-480-489-490-664-668
 773; account of, p. 639
 St. Clere, John de, p. 194
 St. Edmund, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 708
 St. Elphege, Roger de, prior of Christ church, account of,
 p. 550
 St. John, John de, p. 15-51-181-199. Henry, viscount,
 p. 190. John, viscount, p. 369. Viscounts,
 p. 128-148-182-323-324
 -----'s, p. 123, 124, 184; of Basing, p. 10
 -----'s, of Jerusalem, master of, p. 723
 St. Laurence, John de, p. 157. Ralph de, p. 250
 -----'s, p. 370
 St. Leger, Edward, of Deal, p. 139. Sir Anthony, p. 319, 667. Arthur, prebendary of Canterbury, ac- count of, p. 607. Lady Mary, p. 343
 -----'s, p. 124-208-209-250; of Deal, p. 215
 St. Martyn, Roger de, p. 405. Elias de, ibid. Godwin, bishop of, p. 775. LIST OF bishops of, p. 497
 St. Mildred, p. 316-321-325-632
 -----, Leofryne, abbess of, p. 418
 St. Nicholas, Thomas, p. 407
 -----'s, p. 323-324-369-370-377
 St. Radigund's, abbat and convent of, p. 7-15-17-79-124
 St. Swithin, p. 505, 530
 St. Thomas Becket, p. 79-399-418
 Stablegate, family of, p. 110, 111, see also Staplegate
 Stace, usually called the monk, p. 259
 Stafford, John, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 537; ac- count of, p. 750
 Stancombe, George, cl. p. 314. John, cl. p. 387
 Standford, John, p. 444
 Standly, William, cl. p. 135, 136
 Staneweys, John de, cl. p. 136
 Stanhope, Henry Lord, p. 321. Catherine, Lady, ibid.
 -----, George, dean of Canterbury, p. 585; account of,
 p. 599
 Stanley, William, cl. p. 175. John, p. 480. George,
 p. 482
 Staplegate, Edmund de, p. 400, 464, see also Stablegate
 Starchy, Heary de, p. 405
 Statenburg, Simon de, p. 221
 Stedman, George, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 614
 Stennar, Adam de, p. 282
 Stephen, king, p. 432, 650
 Stephens, Edward, p. 94. OLIVER, possesses the ryshes of Buckland and Ringleton, in Woodnesborough,

p. 234, 237; the PARSONAGE HOUSE in Woodnesborough, p. 239. Oliver, p. 241. Mrs. lessee of Woodnesborough parsonage, p. 242. Philip, p. 264
 Stephenson, William, p. 145
 Sterlyng, Thomas, cl. p. 488
 Sterne, Dr Richard, p. 748
 Stevens, Thomas, p. 356. Cl. p. 359, 368. George, cl.
 p. 359
 Steward, John, cl. p. 280, 281. David, cl. p. 331
 Stewart, -----, cl. p. 202. Joseph, p. 268. Robert, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 279, 280
 Stigand, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 499; account of,
 p. 689
 Stillington, Edward, prebendary of Canterbury, account
of, p. 621
 Stinte, Samuel, cl. p. 140
 Stinton, Dr. p. 372
 Stirrop, William, p. 406
 Stockar, John, cl. p. 465-467-479
 Stockwood, William, cl. p. 127
 Stoddard's, p. 149
 Stodmarsh, William de, p. 331
 Stokes, John, p. 128, 279. William, p. 95. -----'s, p. 36
 -----'s, alias Stokys's, p. 236
 Stonar, John de, p. 75
 Stonlinch, Henry de, p. 138
 Stone, James, prior of Dover, p. 106. Peter, p. 355
 Stonore, John de, p. 385
 Store, Benet, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608
 Stoughton, Thomas, of Canterbury, p. 491, 495
 -----'s, p. 148; of Canterbury, p. 435
 STRAFFORD, EARL OF, the heirs of, possesses a moiety of Each
End F. in Woodnesborough, p. 239
 Strangford, Philip, viscount, p. 243
 Strangush, Mr. p. 768
 Stratford, John, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 299-525
 -538-624-637; account of, p. 716. Robert,
 archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 781
 Stratton, Walter, p. 93, 94
 STRINGER, PHINEAS, possesses Arches Court, in River,
 p. 40; the Elms and Hougham M. alias Southcourt, p. 44; Siberston M. in Hougham,
 p. 46. Phineas, p. 48
 -----'s, of Dover, account of, p. 44
 Strode, Colonel, p. 89-95-263. Thomas, p. 755
 Stroude, Colonel John, p. 76. John de, p. 128
 Struggle, William, cl. p. 476
 Stubbs, John, cl. p. 108
 Stukeley, Dr. p. 65-66-113-352
 Stuppeney, Richard, cl. p. 76
 Sturman, Thomas, p. 533
 Stybbyng, John, cl. p. 284, 479
 Stynte, Richard, cl. p. 193, 198
 Suane, king of Denmark, p. 295, 316
 Suckling, sir John, p. 263
 Suffolk, Theophilus Howard, earl of, p. 74, 348
 Sudbury, Simon, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 412-415
 -418-484-515-522-539-625; account of, p. 722
 Sudeley, Ralph Boteler, baron of, p. 55
 Sundridge, John Campbell lord, p. 96
 Sutton, sir Richard, bart. p. 264. Sir Robert, p. 263.
 Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 609
 Swadling, Thomas, cl. p. 49, 119
 Swan, John, p. 262, 467
 Sweeting, John, cl. p. 487
 Swerder, Henry, p. 488, 489
 Sweyn, king of Denmark, p. 248
 Swift's, rectors of St. Andrew's, Canterbury, p. 467, 469
 Swimme, John, p. 406
 Swinford, Nicholas, p. 267
 Swinerton, Thomas, cl. p. 281, 286
 Swords, William, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account
of, p. 630
 Sydal, Elias, cl. p. 140; dean of Canterbury, account of,
 p. 212; prebendary of the same, account of, p. 222
 Symkins, John, prior of St. Gregories, p. 634
 Symon, Peter, cl. p. 286
 Sympton, John, cl. p. 158; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614. Nicholas, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 616
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 532-534-614
 Syre, John, cl. p. 487, 488

T.

TADDY, JAMES and EDWARD, possess Westgate, alias Gar- ling M. in Birchington, p. 336. Hannab, p. 365

Talbot,

Talbot, John, p. 133. Giles, cl. p. 496
 Talebot, Ralph, cl. p. 52
 Talboys, Ralph, cl. p. 313; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620
 Tame, Robert, p. 23
 Tancre, alias Tenacre, John de, p. 184
 -----, John, p. 228-241-444
 Tanner, Edward, cl. p. 27, 32. John, p. 213. Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 610, 755
 Tapeline, William, p. 43
 Taple, Richard, cl. p. 387
 Tattershale, Anne, p. 517
 Tatnall, Thomas, cl. p. 479
 Tatton, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 618
 Tatwyn, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 680
 Taylor, Richard, cl. p. 42, 52. John, cl. p. 49. John, p. 263-444-476. James, p. 137. Catherine, p. 215. Herbert, cl. p. 466, 467. Philip, cl. p. 473
 Teale, Isaac, cl. p. 56, 178
 Tebbe, John, p. 405, 406
 Tedcroft, John, p. 50
 Teddeman, Thomas, p. 116
 Temple, Captain, p. 36
 Templeman, John, p. 116
 Tenacre's, or Tancre, p. 11
 Tenche's, of Birchington, p. 297
 Tenete's, account of, p. 337
 Tenham, William, p. 470
 Tenison, Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 118-525-746; account of, p. 754. Edward, archdeacon of Carmarthen, p. 526; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606. Thomas, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 611, 755
 Terry, John, cl. p. 281. Richard, p. 297. Mrs. p. 322. Ralph, p. 235. Abraham, p. 371. Isaac, cl. p. 474
 -----'s, p. 152; of Trapham, p. 224; of Ospringe, p. 234; of Monkton, p. 311
 Teutonicus, Walerand, p. 68
 Teyes, Walerand de, ibid.
 Teynham, Roper's Lords, p. 323-324-369
 Thanet, Thomas, earl of, recorder of Canterbury, p. 397.
 Tulton's, earls of, p. 298
 Thatcher's, p. 322; of Thanet, p. 373
 Thawys, Edward, p. 76-342-343-345; Elizabeth, p. 356
 Theobald, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 104-508-512-520-533-541-574-672; account of, p. 695
 Theodore, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 574; account of, p. 679
 Thomas, Timothy, cl. p. 276. John, cl. p. 281, 284. William, cl. p. 281
 Thompson, John, cl. p. 82-109-119-197-198-202. Rich. p. 182, 225. Robert, cl. p. 488
 Thomson, John, p. 361
 -----'s, of Sandwich, account of, p. 266
 Thoresby, Mr. p. 352
 Thorn, Nicholas de, abbat of St. Augustine's, p. 297; account of, p. 652
 Thornden, alias Stede, Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 605
 Thorne, Edila de, p. 324, 327. Henry de, p. 324. William atte, prior of St. Gregories, p. 633
 Thornhill, Samuel, p. 19. Sir Timothy, p. 20
 -----'s, ibid.
 Thornhurl's, p. 535, 536
 Thornton, John, prior and bishop suffragan of Dover, p. 100-101-106. Monge, cl. p. 117
 Thorowgood, Thomas, p. 207. Nicholas, cl. p. 314
 Thorpe, George, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 584; account of, p. 611
 Throgmorton, George, p. 127
 Thuigden, John de, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 241
 Thunnor, p. 314
 Thurbarne, John, serjeant at law, p. 164, 270
 -----'s, p. 263; of Sandwich, p. 282
 Tiddenden, William de, p. 203
 Tierne's, p. 416
 Tierney, Thomas Michael, p. 206
 TILLARD, JAMES, possessor of Norborne Court F. p. 147
 Tillotson, John, dean of Canterbury, account of, p. 595; prebendary, account of, p. 219; archbishop of, account of, p. 753
 Tilman, Agnes, p. 366
 Tilmanstone, Roger de, p. 209
 Tilthe, William de, p. 224
 Timewell's, p. 465
 Tindale, William, cl. p. 24

Tinmouth, John of, p. 681
 Titus, John, p. 76
 Today, Thomas, p. 353, 362
 Toke, John, of Bere, p. 29. Captain Nicholas, p. 41. Thomas, of Westbere, p. 114; of Dover, p. 116. John, p. 452
 -----'s, of Bere and Goddington, account of, p. 29-30-94
 TOKER, JOHN, possessor of Doddingdale and Castle Lands, 1516 in Canterbury, p. 442. John, p. 452. Lieutenant John, p. 491
 -----'s, of Stuppington, p. 442
 Tolkys, James, p. 65
 Toms, Richard, p. 111
 TOMLIN, ROBERT, possessor of Dane Court, in Thanet, p. 360
 -----'s, of Updowne, p. 347; of St. John's, in Thanet, p. 356
 Tomfon's, p. 378
 Tong, William, p. 206
 Tooks, see Toke
 Tondrelley, Reginald de, p. 200
 Tournay, William, cl. p. 18
 Tournay, Thomas, cl. p. 38-49-119
 Townsend, sir John, p. 272
 Tracy, William, p. 310, 311
 Trafford, Sigismund, p. 189
 Trapham, John, p. 267
 Trapps, Joane, p. 274, 275. Robert, ibid. Francis, p. 670
 Travis, Seth, cl. p. 331
 Trewannion, John, M. P. for Dover, p. 96
 Trippe's, of Sandwich, p. 266
 Trottesclive, Hugh de, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 649
 Troward, Edward, p. 145
 -----'s, p. 357; of St. Laurence, p. 374
 Truffell, sir William de, p. 447
 Truue, Ralph, p. 33
 Tuck, see Toke
 Tucker, John, cl. p. 56-178-179
 Tufton's, earls of Thanet, account of, p. 298
 Tuntall, William de, cl. p. 183. James, cl. p. 332. William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 611
 Turke, William, p. 250
 Turkill, the Dane, p. 385
 Turnbull, Henry, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 617
 Turneham, Robert de, p. 236
 Turner, Edward, p. 4. Paul, cl. p. 32. ELIZABETH, possessor of a paper mill, in River, p. 41. Thomas, cl. p. 49-308-380-387; dean of Canterbury, p. 538; account of, p. 595; president of C. C. college, p. 596. William, cl. p. 208; archdeacon of Durham, p. 596. Elizabeth, p. 377. Christopher, p. 466. John, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 533; account of, p. 622. Francis, bishop of Ely, p. 595
 -----'s, of Canterbury, p. 196, 624; of Nash, p. 346; of St. John's, in Thanet, p. 356
 Turpyn, Thomas, cl. p. 118
 Twyman's, p. 347
 Twyne, John, the antiquary, p. 80-289-333-406-407-491. Mr. of Canterbury, schoolmaster, p. 574
 Twifden, Thomas, p. 663
 Twitham, Nicholas de, p. 441
 Twye, William, cl. p. 17
 Tyler, Robert, cl. p. 378, 380. Shadrach, cl. p. 463. Walter, the rebel, p. 723
 Tymewell, Anne, p. 162, 170
 Tyngewick, Master Nicholas de, p. 308
 Tynoden, John de, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 629
 Tyser, John, p. 203

U. V.

Valence, lady Audrey de, p. 447
 Valerius, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 776
 Valoignes, Waretus de, p. 43, 669. Ralph de, p. 75. Robert de, cl. p. 130
 Vallavine, Peter, cl. p. 314
 Vane, sir Thomas, p. 76. Sir Henry, p. 663
 Van Lent, Barnabie, p. 282
 Vanner, Henry, p. 461
 Vassall, Samuel, p. 464
 Vaughan, John, cl. p. 119
 Vaux, Adam de, p. 392
 Udney, Robert, cl. p. 193
 Uffington, John de, p. 405

Ufford,

Uford, John, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 537; account of, p. 718
 -----'s, account of, p. 210
 Verall, John, p. 240
 Vere, Robert de, p. 33, 38
 Ventry, Thomas, cl. p. 473
VERELST, ANNE, possesses a moiety of Sevenscore F. in Thanet, p. 321. Henry, p. 321, 328
 Vernon, James, cl. p. 193
 Verrier's, of Sandwich, p. 129-151-161; account of, p. 268-279-282
 Vertiler, Simon, p. 404
 Vicenna, Stephen de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Villiers, Hon. George-Buffey, p. 96
 Vincent, sir Francis, bart. p. 76, 95. Samuel, p. 321
 Viol, Strangford, cl. 206
 Viscount, Reginald le, p. 75
 Ullock, Henry, cl. p. 140
 Underdowne, John, p. 27. Nicholas, p. 359. Thomas, p. 359
 Uppetone's, p. 3
 Upton, Feice, p. 115. John, cl. p. 242
 -----'s, of St Margaret's at Cliffe, p. 26
 Vortimer, king, p. 238 294-384-385
 Vofius, John Gerard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620
 Vyncente, Robert, p. 115
 Wyner, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 619

W.

Wachtter, James, p. 124
 Waddell, Henry, p. 480
 Waddingham, Henry, cl. p. 8. John, cl. p. 314
 Walden, sir Humphry, p. 713. Roger, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 726
 Waldershare, rector of, p. 154
 Waldewareshare, John de, p. 75
 Waleran, Robert, p. 69, 411
 Wales, Edward, prince of, p. 69. Henry, prince of, p. 72
 Walker, John, p. 45. Mrs. lessee of Farthingloe M. p. 47; of Little Hougham Court, alias the parsonage, p. 49. William, p. 243, 376
Wall, Gilman, cl. p. 473, 476
 Waller, Nathaniel, p. 4. Sir Hardress, p. 40. Sir Thomas, p. 76, 94
 Walleran, Robert, p. 75
 Wallis, Jane, p. 357
Walshy, Edward, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 622
 Walfall, William, cl. p. 494
 Walsham, Richard, p. 47
 Walter, Richard, p. 406. Thomas, ibid. Hubert, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 538; account of, p. 704; prior of Christ church, account of, p. 547, 549; archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 776
 Walters, Richard, p. 108
 Waltham, vicar of, p. 343
 Walton, Mr. p. 9. Thomas, cl. p. 193-197-198
 Walworth, sir William, p. 75
 Walwyn, Francis, cl. p. 140-143-474; prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 615
 Wake, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 115-166-207; account of, p. 755. Edward, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 613, 614. Sir James, p. 59
 Wakefield, Henry, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 782
 -----'s, p. 465
 Waking, John, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 703
 Warbeck, Perkin, p. 165
 Ward, Edward, cl. p. 56. John, p. 94. Honourable John, p. 384. Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 620
 Warde, William, p. 76, 119. -----'s, of Dover, p. 100
 Warden, Henry, p. 203. -----'s, ibid.
WARDENS, LORDS, list of, p. 67, 374
 Wardroper, Thomas, cl. p. 314
 Warham, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 345-433-500-517-521-537; account of, p. 735-736-767-769. William, archdeacon of the same, account of, p. 784
 Wariner, Matthew, cl. p. 474
 Warley, John, cl. p. 56
 Warmer's, p. 133
 Warner, John, bishop of Rochester, p. 309, 520. Thomas Lee, account of, p. 440. HENRY LEE, possesses the Dungeon M. p. 441; the advowson of St. Mary Bredin church, in Canterbury, p. 476.

 John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606
 Warner's, p. 233
 Warre, John, p. 279
 Warren, Thomas, p. 94. Thomas, cl. p. 284, 478. William, p. 109, 114. Jane, p. 115. John, p. 131. John, cl. p. 359
 -----'s, of Dover, account of, p. 135
 Warriner, Thomas, cl. p. 478
 Warton, Mr. Henry, p. 750
 Warum, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 616
 Warwick, earl of, p. 64, 260. Richard Nevill, earl of, p. 73, 251. Robert, earl of, p. 74
 Watmer, William, p. 435
 Watson, Honorable Edward, p. 407. Lewis, ibid. Honorable Thomas, p. 408. John, p. 458, 472
 -----'s, p. 411
 Watts, William, cl. p. 17-27-56-119-464. James, cl. p. 242
 Waure, William de, p. 405
 Wayneffete, William, abbat of Langdon, p. 19. Robert, cl. p. 283, 331
 Webb, Michael, p. 366. John, p. 460
 Webbe, John, p. 94. George, p. 152. Robert, p. 194. Richard, cl. p. 387. Anthony, p. 407. William, cl. p. 479
 -----'s, of Salmeston, p. 342, 345
 Webber, Robert, cl. p. 276-281-287
 Webberley, John, cl. p. 276
 Webbis, Benedict, p. 262
 Webster, Joshua, p. 476. William, T. M. cl. p. 482
 Weedon, Sufanua, p. 125
 Welde, William, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 656
Welft, William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 609
 Welle's, p. 232
 Welles, William, p. 405
 Wellesham, Robert de, p. 75
 Wellys, Thomas, bishop suffragan of Dover, p. 100. Thomas, cl. p. 487. Thomas, prior of St. Gregories, p. 634
 Wenchepe, Richard de, prior of Dover, p. 106
 Wendali, sir William, p. 448
 Wendon, Nicholas, cl. p. 331
 Wentworth, Colonel Henry, p. 76. -----'s, p. 307, 310
 Werebald, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Werewall, Baldwin de, p. 416
 Wernod, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 West, Captain George, p. 116
 Westgate, Robert de, p. 335
 Westly, Thomas, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614
WESTON, JOHN and THOMAS, possess Sprating-street F. in Thanet, p. 371. Benjamin, p. 95. Philip Bostock, p. 526. Samuel Rider, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 618
 Wethersted, Richard, archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 707
 Wharton, Henry, cl. p. 332
 Wheatley, Humphry, cl. p. 356
 Whetenall, alias Whetnall, William, p. 45
 Whitacre, Robert de, prior of Dover, p. 106
Whitaker, Edward William, cl. p. 482. William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612
WHITBREAD, SAMUEL, possesses Buckland F. in Woodnesborough, p. 234
 White, Thomas, p. 111. John, cl. p. 130-143-283. William, p. 145. Henry, p. 154. -----, cl. p. 276. TAYLOR, possesses Little Walden F. in Eastry, p. 223. Hannah, p. 328. Grace, p. 366. Nicholas, cl. p. 368. Blaze, cl. p. 387, 471. John, p. 441. Sir Thomas, p. 457. Stephen, p. 467
 -----'s, p. 203-230-236-306; of Sandwich, p. 279; of Canterbury, p. 370
 Whitfield, Robert, p. 362, 363. Mr. p. 426. John, p. 457. William, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 621
 -----'s, p. 224, 225; of Canterbury, account of, p. 427
 Whitehead, Roger, p. 223
 Whitgift, John, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 7-13-285-584-627; account of, p. 743
 Whitlock's, p. 128
 Whiston, John, cl. p. 230
 Whitwick, Curteis, cl. p. 476
 Whitworth, Robert, the surveyor, p. 437
 Whyte, Thomas, cl. p. 49. Robert, p. 261
 -----'s, p. 232-238-239-243, see also White

- Wiat, Edwin, fergeant at law, p. 334. Francis, ibid.
 Wibert, prior of Christ church, p. 507, 516; account of, p. 547
 Wickenden's, of Dover, p. 192
 Wicliff, John, p. 727
 Wido, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 648
 Widred, king, p. 58-112-151
 Wigbert, Simon, p. 382
 Wigmore, Peter, p. 75. John, p. 299
 Wigold, James, p. 261
 Wighred, king, p. 5
 Wilbore, John, cl. p. 331
 Wild, Thomas, p. 148. Sir John, p. 544. Alan, cl. p. 331
 -----'s, p. 267, 435
 Wilford, sir Thomas, p. 47
 Wilfred, archbishop, p. 216, 512; archbishop of York, p. 505-508-684
 -----'s, p. 530
 WILKES, MARY, possesses Eythorne Court M. p. 195
 Wilkins, Robert, p. 322. Captain Thomas, p. 356. David, prebendary of Canterbury, p. 143; account of, p. 622
 Wilkinson, Robert, p. 32. Mr. p. 358
 Wiles, Cornelius, cl. p. 366, 368
 Willeford, Richard, cl. p. 143
 Willford's, p. 208
 William, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 776
 Williams, William, cl. p. 38. Cooper, cl. p. 133. John, cl. p. 136. Sir John, bart. p. 319-320-321. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608. Philip, prebendary of the same, account of, p. 621
 Williamson, James, cl. p. 242. John, cl. p. 331, 471. Captain Edward, p. 378
 Willis, sir William, p. 402
 Willoughby, William, lord, p. 15. Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 611
 -----'s, p. 50
 Willowes, Thomas, p. 300
 Wills, John, p. 94
 Willyams, John, p. 115
 Wilmot, sir Robert, bart. p. 147
 Wilsford, sir Thomas, p. 407
 Wilson, Timothy, cl. p. 139, 140. JOHN and STACY, possess a farm at Marley, in Norborne, p. 151. Anne Eliza, p. 378. Thomas, cl. p. 471
 -----'s, p. 235
 Wilton, Thomas de, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Winchelsea, earl of, p. 492. Finch's, earls of, p. 444. Robert, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 539-574-674; account of, p. 712-765-766-767
 Winchester, Winifred, marchioness of, p. 35
 Windebank's, p. 299
 Windlesore, Hugh de, p. 68
 Windsor, Jacob, p. 112
 Wingate, John, p. 477
 Wingfield, Thomas, p. 113-114-166-262. William, cl. p. 368
 Wingham, Henry de, dean of St. Martin's, in London, p. 7
 Wingate, John, p. 89
 Winter, Blaze, cl. p. 387-453-473. John, p. 406. John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 614
 Winterborne, Thomas, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 784
 WISE, MR. possesses a farm at Marley, in Norborne, p. 151. Henry, p. 182, 282. Thomas, cl. p. 464, 467
 Wiseman, William, p. 35. Elizabeth, p. 127. Thomas, p. 449
 With's, family of, p. 446
 Witherton, Richard, p. 76
 Withred, king, p. 641, 648
 Wittcleff, John, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 Wittlesley, William, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 532; account of, p. 722
 Wivell, Edward, p. 50
 Wlfric, the elder, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 -----, the younger, abbat of the same, account of, ibid.
 Wlfrid, the first archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 775
 Wlhelm, archbishop, p. 507; archbishop of Canterbury, account of, p. 684
 Wlsted, archbishop of Canterbury, p. 194; account of, p. 682, 762
 Wodde's, of Dover, p. 118
 Wodensberg, Asceline de, p. 240
 Woghope, Richard de, p. 225
 Wolett, Bertryne, p. 184
 Wolf, gardiner to king Henry VIII. p. 743
 Wollet's, p. 147, 234
 Wolton, Thomas de, master of Kingsbridge hospital, account of, p. 630
 WOOD, RICHARD, possesses a farm at Pinbam, p. 16. William, cl. p. 23, 474. Edward, p. 263-279-280. John, cl. p. 368. Richard, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 606
 -----'s, p. 199; of Canterbury, p. 480, 481
 Woodland, William, p. 447
 Woodnesborough, John, prior of Christ church, p. 522; account of, p. 554 WOODROOFE, REV. MR. possesses a moiety of Hougham, alias Northcourt M. p. 45. William, ibid.
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Woodstock, Edmund de, p. 85
 WOOTON, HENRY, possesses Tborne M. in Minster, p. 324
 WOODWARD, LEONARD, possesses a moiety of Minacre, in Norborne, p. 152
 Wordsworth, Josiah, p. 321
 Worfeley, Otwell, p. 76
 Wortley, Robert, p. 262
 Wotton, John, p. 106, 336. Edward lord, p. 211, 396. Sir Henry, p. 203. Nicholas, dean of Canterbury, p. 541; account of, p. 588. Dowager lady, p. 660, 662. Lords, p. 662
 -----'s, of Boughton Malherb, p. 176-322-635
 WRAKE, JOHN, possesses a moiety of Little Fleming, in Woodnesborough, p. 239
 Wrentmore, Robert, cl. p. 276
 Wright, Laurence, cl. p. 193. Nicholas, cl. p. 308
 Wrotham, William de, p. 68, 75
 Wrotham, John, cl. p. 331
 WYBORNE, WILLIAM, possesses the site of Norborne court and Long Dane F. p. 147. JAMES, lessee of Hull and Sholdon M. p. 156; possesses Hull COURT, alias Long Farm, and lessee of Hull M. with Sholdon R. appendant, p. 157; of Deal, alias Deal prebend M. p. 162. BETHEL, possesses a farm at Foulmead, in Sholdon, p. 159. John, p. 127, 199
 -----'s, of Sholdon, account of, p. 156, 157; of Sandwich, p. 282, 285
 Wycombe, Stephen de, cl. p. 13
 Wye, John de, p. 405
 Wyke, Thomas, cl. p. 473. -----'s, p. 444
 Wylde, John, p. 243. Robert, p. 262
 Wym, John, p. 405
 Wynchelse, John, p. 280
 Wyngham, sir Walter de, p. 3. Walter de, p. 71. Master John de, p. 3. Henry de, bishop of London, ibid. John de, precentor of St. Paul's, ibid.
 Winhere, abbat of St. Augustine's, account of, p. 647
 Wynne, sir Thomas, bart. p. 362
 Wynter, John, p. 472

Y.

- Yarmouth, Robert de, archdeacon of Canterbury, account of, p. 779
 Yoakley, Michael, p. 354
 Yagworth, Richard, suffragan bishop of Dover, p. 101
 Yonge, Robert, alias Long, cl. p. 117
 York, John, abbat of Langdon, p. 19
 -----, archbishops of, p. 07-247-545-547-767-776-777
 -----, Edward, duke of, p. 72. Henry, duke of, p. 73. James, duke of, p. 74-348-362. Sir Joseph, p. 96; created baron of Dover, p. 100. Philip, earl of Hardwick, p. 99. Henry, cl. p. 135
 -----'s, of Dover, p. 29, 118; possesses Wansan F. in St. Margaret's at Cliff, p. 26
 Young, sir Richard, p. 94. William, cl. p. 308. John, cl. p. 380. Arthur, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 612
 -----'s, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Younger, John, prebendary of Canterbury, account of, p. 608

Z.

- Zouch, Edward Lord, p. 74-348-363-374

Miscellaneous INDEX and GLOSSARY.

ABBATS mitred, who they were, p. 643
 Abbeys changed into priories, p. 17, 18
 Aftuary, one near Thanet, p. 288
 Albone, Edward, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 552
Alga, sea weed, p. 292
 Aigrind, in Spencer's Pastoral, whom it meant, p. 743
 Aiterages, what, p. 329
 Alva, duke of, his persecution of the protestants, p. 420
 Amber, found in Thanet, p. 290
 Ambresbury, council held at, p. 686
 Amulets, found in Thanet, p. 294
 Anchors, found near Canterbury, p. 435
 Anglo-Saxon architecture, specimen of, p. 201
 Anne, queen's, bounty, governors of, p. 754
 ANTIQUITIES, p. 12-81-86-177-292-352-353-361-364;
see also Roman
 Antoninus's Itinerary, p. 80-88-389-417
 Appropriations, origin of, p. 645
 Aqueducts, antient, discovered, p. 586
 Arms, coats of, when first assumed by convents, p. 448
 Armada, Spanish, p. 169; picture of, p. 470
Ara Cesaris, p. 80
 Archbishop, title of, when first assumed, p. 676
Archpresbiter, of Dover, p. 114
 Apricot, first introduced into England, p. 743
 Artichokes, first propagated in England, p. 743
 Assembly room, magnificent one at Margate, p. 350
 Avercoin, set vice and custom of, p. 312, 318

B.

Bacanceld, council at, p. 680-682-775
 Bargander, frequents Thanet, p. 297
 Barley in Thanet, its superior price, p. 291
 Barons, freemen formerly so named, p. 253
 Barrington, Mr. his observations on the Statutes, p. 92
 Barrows or tumuli, p. 37-42-364
 Barton, Elizabeth, the Holy Maid of Kent, account of,
 p. 451
 Bath, Roman, discovered, p. 81, 86
 ----- Salt water and infirmary, p. 349, 350
 Bathing machines invented by Benjamin Beale, a quaker,
 p. 350
 Beacon, in St. Peter's, Thanet, p. 361
 Becket's fair, at Canterbury, p. 424
 Bede, his ecclesiastical history, p. 646
 Benefactors, portraits of, in windows of churches, p. 783
Biga, meaning of, p. 391
 Billingworth and Bowler, chest so called in Oxford university, p. 732
 Birchington, Stephen de, a learned monk of Christ church,
 p. 297, 553
 Bishops, consecrated in Canterbury cathedral only, p. 562
 Bithoprics, removed from villages to cities, p. 690
 Blundy, a learned Oxford divine, p. 708
 Bodar, of Dover castle, p. 65
 Bologne, earl of, his demand for the archbishop's passage,
 p. 712, 766
 BOTANY, p. 26-98-149-169-183-192-212-267-295
 Boulders, sea flints, so called, p. 247
 Boys, William, his collections for Sandwich, p. 91-164-232, & passim. infra. Mr. his view of agriculture, in Kent, p. 291
 Bradstow Scrubs, what, p. 293
 Brawn made at Canterbury, p. 423
 Bread, affize of, when first instituted, p. 705
Britannia prima, district of, p. 77
 Bulla or Leaden Seal, put to charters of monasteries, p. 640
 Burgage, tenure of, p. 96, 391

Burgeffes, who they were, p. 390
 Burials, antiently not permitted in cities, p. 681
 Burial ground, antient one at Eastry, p. 225
 Burnet, Dr. his false prejudices and misrepresentations, p.
 569, 677
 Butts erected for archery, p. 224, 299

C.

Cæsar, Julius, his expeditions into Britain, p. 56-57-65-
 80-134-160-162-173
 Callaway, John, an ingenious manufacturer, at Canterbury, p. 422
 Caln, council, at, p. 686
Cambium Regis, p. 430
 Cantium of Ptolemy, p. 361
 Capgrave, John, a learned friar, p. 623
Cassatum, meaning of, p. 2
 Cattleguard rents, alteration of, p. 64
Castelli Feodarium, treatise of, p. 70
 Causton, Thomas, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 556
 Ceale-hythe, council at, p. 683
 Celts, instruments found, account of, p. 352
 Cenotaphs, custom of, p. 725
 Chalybeat waters, at Canterbury, p. 426
 Charles II. king, at Kingsgate in Thanet, p. 362 Charters written, when first used, p. 680. Frequently forged by the monks, p. 640, 673
 Chenalopex or bargander, frequents Thanet, p. 297
 Cherry orchards first planted in England, p. 743
 Christenings, royal ones, solemnized by the archbishops,
 p. 771
 Church, first christian one in Britain, p. 65. Livings, difference of taxation in East and West Kent,
 p. 183
 Churches, reason of the decrease of, in cities and towns,
 p. 462
 Church-yards in cities, when first obtained, p. 681
 Cemetery, antient one in Canterbury, p. 641
 Cinque Ports, account of, the office of warden of, p. 76
 Cities and towns antiently in Britain, p. 416
 Cliff, master Henry de, keeper of the great seal, p. 632
 Cliff, council at, p. 680-681-682-683
 Cloveshoe, council at, p. 775
 Clyve, Martin, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 557
 Coinage of money, antient regulations for, p. 431, 702
 Coins, antient ones found, p. 239, 294
Commendams, their early use, p. 748
Comis Littoris Saxonici, p. 58
 Concubine of Harold mentioned, p. 391
 Constables of castles, their tyranny over the country, p. 63
 Conventuals order, account of, p. 447
 Corngavel, custom of, p. 318-319-320
 Coronation, insolence of an archbishop at, p. 694 Coronations of the kings of England, performed by the archbishop, p. 770
 Corporate bodies, observations on, by Mr. Madox, p. 255; instances of their absurdity, p. 444
 Councils, different ones held, p. 679-680-681-683-684-686-691-692-695-696-702-705-706-711-
 714-729-775-776
 Crispe, Henry, taken prisoner at Quekes, account of, p. 334
 Cross carried before the archbishop, contest of, p. 674.
 Reason of, p. 674
 Cultivation, perfect state of, in Thanet, p. 291
Cuncum Monetæ, p. 643
 Curacies, perpetual, their origin, p. 53
 Currant trees, first propagated in England, p. 743
Cursus Cervi, in Thanet, p. 289

Customs,

Customs, establishments of, p. 165-256-351
 Cut of the Stour, new one made at Stonar, account of, p. 386
 Cyprian the English, archbishop Laud so called, p. 750

D.

DANES, transactions of, in Kent, p. 247-248-259-278
 -289-292-295-316-327-362-364-412-417-430
 -444-462-504-545-643-647-687-688-775
 Darell, his history of Dover castle, p. 67, 70
 Degrees conferred by the archbishop, p. 770
 Demefne, city held in, meaning of, p. 391
 Dissenters, numerous at Dover, p. 92; at Sandwich, p. 256; meeting houses for, in Canterbury, p. 424
 Dispensations granted by the archbishops, p. 770
 ----- of plurality and non-residence, origin of, p. 743
 Dog kennel belonging to the abbat of St. Augustine's, p. 654
 Domneva's deer, its course, in Thanet, p. 337
 Dover, passage over sea at, antient regulation of, p. 92
 Dorobernensis, Sampson, a learned writer, p. 548. —, Gervas, p. 549
 Dour, the British name of rivers, p. 435
 Dream, fearful one, of an archbishop, p. 702
 Drowning, the punishment formerly for felons, p. 120
 Druids, their instruments, p. 353. Remains of, p. 411
 Dutch settlers at Sandwich, p. 253-257-285-286

E.

Eadwin, monk of Christ church, his writings, p. 509
 Eagle, large yellow one, shot near Canterbury, p. 445
 Earthquakes felt in Kent, p. 167; at Sandwich, p. 260; at Canterbury, p. 432, 433
 Ecclesiastical courts, where kept, p. 472
 ----- History, printed at Douay, p. 785
 Eddius, Stephanus, a learned writer, p. 247
 Edmer, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 546
 Edward III. king, at Stonar, p. 385
 Election of abbats, by way of compromise, what, p. 652
 Elector Palatine, embarks at Margate, p. 347
 Elfric, the learned grammarian, p. 688
 Elizabeth, queen, her pocket pistol, p. 65; her progress through the county, p. 93; her protection of the refuge protestants, p. 420
 Epitaphs on archbishops, when first used in Canterbury cathedral, p. 694
 Ethelbert's tower in St. Augustine's monastery, p. 660
 Exchange, royal one at Canterbury, p. 430
 Exempt parishes, what, p. 774
 Ex communication, sentence of, severe in the present ecclesiastical courts, p. 562

F.

Fairs, origin of, p. 425. On anniversaries of churches, custom of, p. 353
 Fauffett, Rev. Mr. his valuable collection of coins and antiquities, p. 411
 Faverham, Stephen de, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 552
 Faux, Guy, picture of, p. 470
 Feast, royal, at Canterbury, p. 500; great one made by an abbat of St. Augustine's, p. 653, 654
 Fector, Mr. entertains the king of Denmark at Dover, p. 97
 Felons, their punishment by drowning, p. 120, 245
 Ferne, Daniel, the short man, p. 491
 Ferry, antient one, at Sarre, p. 289
 Feudal Seignories, how vested in abbies, p. 3
 Fire ball, seen at Canterbury, p. 435
 Fish, monstrous one, caught at Broadstairs, p. 364
 Fitz Stephens, William, a learned writer, p. 549
 Fleets, royal, rendezvous at Sandwich, p. 250
 Flemmings, at Sandwich, p. 283
 Flint work, curious, p. 658
 Florentius, St. p. 338
 Folgard, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 546
 Forage, custom of, abolished, p. 63
 Foundations of cathedrals, old and new, distinction of, p. 587
 Foying, custom of, in Thanet, p. 293
 Fratres, Thomasii, who they were, p. 276
 French, landed at Dover, p. 104; at Sandwich, p. 250-259-260-278-295; at Stonar, p. 386
 ----- Meeting house in Canterbury, p. 502; church in the undercroft of the cathedral, p. 542

Friga, Friday, whence derived, p. 239
Furragium, custom of, p. 63

G.

Gardeners, body of, settle at Sandwich, p. 253, 257
 Gentlemen farmers in Thanet, p. 291
 Gerson, John, a famous theologist, p. 783
 Gervas, monk of Canterbury, his writings, p. 507
 Gillingham, William de, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 553
 Gloucester, council at, p. 692
 Godseline, a learned monk of St. Augustine's, p. 640-677
 Goodwin Sands, great danger of, p. 361
 Gospel, society for the propagation of, p. 754, 759
 Gosling, Rev. Mr. his observations on Canterbury cathedral, p. 511
 Grand serjeantry, service of, p. 767
 Graves discovered at Margate, p. 353
 Gravestones of priors and archbishops, difference of, p. 532
 Greatley, council at, p. 684
 Green, Mr. the ingenious organ builder, p. 524
 Grimbald, a monk of Winchester, p. 683; see also Grimbald
 Grindalizing, term of, p. 742
 Gromet, a boy on shipboard so called, p. 78, 247
 Grymbald's crypt, in St. Peter's in Oxford; and account of him, p. 511
 Guestling or Brotherhood, court of, p. 78, 80
 Guildhall, etymology of, p. 426
 Guile Shares, p. 293

H.

Harbidge, rooms so called, in St. John's hospital in Sandwich, p. 268
 Hearne, M. the antiquarian, p. 352
 Helena, coin of, found, p. 353
 Henry II. king, whipped by the monks, at Canterbury, p. 699
 Herring fare or fishery, p. 293; at Margate, account of, p. 351
 Heralds, their fees at an archbishop's funeral, p. 741
 Holy Maid of Kent, account of, p. 451
 Homer, antient manuscripts of, p. 680
 Hoopoe, bird found at Dover, account of, p. 98
 Hops, plantations of at Canterbury, p. 423; when first propagated in England, p. 743
 Horsley, Dr. his Britannica Romana, p. 417
 Hospital, general one established at Canterbury, p. 425

I.

Jack and Joan fair, p. 424
 Iceland cod fishery, p. 364
 Jenkes's book of charters of the five ports, p. 78
 Jews established in Canterbury, p. 424, 431
 Impropropriations in lay hands, ill effects of, p. 645
 Intrenchments, antient, p. 12, 292
 Inundation, great one in Thanet, p. 385; at Canterbury, p. 434
 John, king, resigns his crown, p. 37, 706
 Joy, the English Sampson, account of, p. 372
 Isthmus, one between Dover and France, p. 80
 Jubilees celebrated at Canterbury, account of, p. 564, 701
 Jurats, origin of the word, p. 88

K.

Kelp made in Thanet, p. 292
 Kent, Roman form of government in, p. 77
 King, Mr. his treatises, p. 169, 409
 Kings, their lodgings in St. Clement's, Sandwich, p. 209; of England, at Sandwich, p. 259-260-261
 ----- Several at Canterbury, p. 432-433-500-514-521-732; embark at Margate, p. 349
 Knights fees, book of, p. 2
 Knighthood, business of, p. 297

L.

Lambeth, council at, p. 711
 Langdon, John, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 554
 Layman, one, prebendary of Canterbury, a singular instance of, p. 616

Learning, formerly only in monasteries, p. 570
 Legantine power, formerly vested in archbishops, p. 769
Legatus Natus, when first conferred on the archbishops, and abrogated, p. 696
 Leland, his Itinerary, p. 419
 Lent, licence granted to eat flesh in, p. 786
 Lewis, Rev. Mr. his history of Thanet, p. 352
Liber Regis, of Mr. Bacon, not to be relied on as to the present value of livings, p. 142
 Livings, small ones, augmented, p. 750-754-755
 Lobsters, the finest, where caught, p. 26
 Lode Manage, court of, p. 93
 London, councils at, p. 684-691-693-696-729
 Longevity, instances of, p. 12, 201
 Lort, Rev. Mr. his observations on celts, p. 353
 Lynchets or Banks, as boundaries usually ploughed and destroyed, p. 341
 Lyon, Rev. Mr. his account of Dover castle, p. 59-65-86; his ingenious writings and discoveries, p. 118
 Lyons, prebend of the church of, annexed to the see of Canterbury, p. 710

M.

Maces of silver, prohibited to be carried, p. 398
 Marlborough, John, duke of, embarks at Margate, p. 349
Manfure, what, p. 87
 Manufacturers, refugee, from Brabant and Flanders, p. 252
 Margate kings, who, p. 293
 Marriages, royal, solemnized by the archbishops, p. 771
 Married clergy, discountenanced by queen Elizabeth, p. 741
 Martyrs, suffer at Canterbury, p. 459
 Maximilianus, coin of, found, p. 353
 Merlin, his prophecy concerning London and Canterbury, p. 671
 Methodist meeting houses, p. 351-361-502
 Mints and mintage of money, in Canterbury, p. 431-582-623-762
Modies Vini, measure of, p. 513
 Monasteries, their aims and hospitality, p. 569, 580. Surrenderies, form of, p. 105; scandalously obtained, p. 569. Precincts of the dissolved ones, searched for hidden treasures by the king's authority, p. 659
 Montague, Mrs. queen Elizabeth's milk woman, p. 420
 Montaucon, the learned father, p. 352
 Mortmain, account of, a deadly blow to monasteries, p. 645
 Muid of wine, measure of, p. 513
 Mullets taken at Birchington, p. 337
 Murage, custom of, p. 412
 Mustre-develes, livery of, p. 769

N.

Nailbourne, at Ewell, account of, p. 36
 Nantes, edict of, revoked, p. 420
 NATURAL HISTORY, p. 98, 295
 Nigell, the physician, mentioned in Domesday, p. 102
 Notaries, one always belonged to the priory of Christ church, p. 551

O.

Obelisk, in Thanet, a noted sea mark, p. 302
 Old Man of Bologne, tower there so called, p. 80
 Onion beds, near Eastry, p. 230
 Options of the archbishop, origin of, p. 761
 Ora, a nominal money among the Saxons, p. 87
 Ordnance, old piece of, found near the Goodwin Sands, p. 169
 Oibern, the monk of Christ church, a learned writer, p. 546-681-685

P.

Packe, Dr. his account of Caesar's expedition, p. 163; his chorographical chart, p. 290
 Page, sir Thomas-Hyde; his considerations on Dover harbour, p. 85. Henry, a famous sea commander, p. 78
 Pall of the archbishops, account of, p. 766, 767
 Papal bulls refused, by king Edward I. p. 313; in general authentic, p. 673
 Paolo Padre, author of the history of Trent, p. 594
 Parhelions seen at Canterbury, p. 434
 Parliament, abbats and priors summoned to, p. 560
 Parliamentary abbats, who they were, p. 643

Parliament committee besiege Canterbury, p. 433
 Parishes separated, one part from another, p. 149-150-191; when first instituted, p. 678, 679
 Party rancour, lamentable instance of, p. 745-746-748-786
 Passage, supposed subterraneous one, under Dover castle, p. 66
 ----- Antient by sea, from France to London, p. 289
 Passenger, packet boat, at Dover so called formerly, p. 88
 Paultrung, custom of, in Thanet, p. 293
 Peculiars of the archbishop, what, p. 701
 Penny gavel, custom of, 318-319-320
 Peters Lings, what, p. 293
 Peutingers tables, p. 417
 Pharos, Roman, in Dover castle, p. 58-65-89-98
 Pilots licenced at Dover, p. 93; company of, at Deal, p. 165
 Pity, chapel of our lady of, at Dover, p. 110
 Plague, at Dover, p. 48-93-97; at Sandwich, p. 261; at Canterbury, p. 433. Great one in England, p. 719
 Plumb perdrigon, first introduced into England, p. 743
 Pluto, Richard, a learned writer, p. 548
 Pot ash made in Thanet, p. 292
 Preferments, first instance of the crown disposing of them, on making bishops, p. 588
 Presbyterians, meeting house for, p. 373
 Printing first used in St. Augustine's monastery, p. 642; when first brought into England, p. 733
 Priests first forbidden to marry, p. 693
 Prill, a fish so called, p. 371
Primas totius Britanniae, when first used, p. 680
 Probus, coin of, found, p. 353
 Prospect, fine one, in Minster, p. 326
 Protestants, persecution of, abroad, p. 420
 ----- Refugees, their manner of religious worship, at Canterbury, p. 421
 Prynne, the inveterate enemy of archbishop Laud, p. 749, 750
 Ptolemy, his geography, p. 417

Q.

Quakers meeting house, in St. John's in Thanet, p. 354
Quercus Maritima, p. 292

R.

Races, annual, on Barham Downs, p. 424
 Ramsgate capons, what, p. 293
 Reading, councils at, p. 706, 711
 Red book, in the exchequer, p. 2
 Refugee manufacturers from Brabant and Flanders, p. 252
 Rents to the archbishop, formerly paid in kind, p. 764
 Revenues of the bishops and monks separated, p. 690
 Ring, antique one, found at Minster, p. 326
 Rider, William, the inventor of worsted stockings, p. 420
 ROMAN ANTIQUITIES discovered, p. 6-57-134-411-412-413-415-420-450-452-480-494, see also antiquities
 Roman urns found, p. 12, 353; stations, p. 86, 216; burying ground, p. 225; tumuli or barrows, p. 201; ways and roads, p. 414-417-419; bricks in buildings, p. 661
 Romans in Britain, p. 57, 294; their government, p. 77
 Roman catholics, their usual motto on their gravestones, p. 533
 Rome, court of, intolerable usurpations and exactions of, p. 717-765-766
 Romefcot, custom of, p. 318
 Rose, damask, its first introduction into England, p. 743
 Round tilt land, in Thanet, p. 292
 Royal navy, increase of, in Britain, p. 78

S.

Salisbury, John of, his poem, p. 507
 Salt works at Stonar, p. 386
 Samphire gathered at Dover, p. 99
 Sandys, the rebel colonel, his sacrilege in the cathedrals, p. 689
 Saxon shore, count of, p. 77
 Saxons, transactions of, in Kent, p. 247-259-289-294; villæ regiae of, p. 417
 Scotland, William, king of, at Canterbury, p. 432
 Sea woofe, restraint of, in Thanet, p. 351
 Selynge, custom of, p. 326
 Serjeantry, lands held by, p. 39
Serlonis Crux, p. 228

Shepey ravaged by the Danes, p. 259
 Shipping, quota of, by the five ports, p. 78
 Shot fare, mackarel fishing so called, p. 293
 Shrine of St. Thomas Becker, description of, p. 527, 567
 Silk manufacture in Canterbury, p. 252, 421
 Silk stockings, first invention of, p. 420
 Singing, first introduced in churches, p. 679
 Skeletons found at Margate, p. 353
 Slaves and natives, manumission of, anno 1448, p. 531
 Somner, William, the antiquarian, p. 472; his history of Canterbury, account of, p. 503; his manuscripts,
 p. 579
 Spaniard, promised the government of Dover castle, story of,
 p. 74
 Spaniards, inventors of silk stockings, p. 420
 Spain, great galleys of, destroyed, p. 79
 Spanish armada, p. 79; pirates taken, p. 259
Specula, Roman, or watch towers, p. 80
 Spital Fields, silk manufactory in, p. 421, 422
 Spracklyn, Adam, executed for murder, story of, p. 373
 Spreet, what, p. 248, 249
 Spring of fresh water in the sea, below high water mark,
account of, p. 26
 St. Erasmus, image of, p. 116
 St. George, procession of, p. 284
 St. John, of Bridlington, p. 113
 St. Martin, legend of, p. 107
 St. Nicholas, brotherhood of, p. 448
 St. Ninian's light, p. 468
 St. Rook's light, p. 115
 St. Tronyn's light, p. 115
 St. Frosymon's light, p. 115
 Stalls in chancels, for what purpose, p. 227
 Staple for wool, at Sandwich, p. 250; at Canterbury, p.
 418
 Stephanides, William, a learned writer, p. 549
 Stink weed, in Thanet, p. 295
 Stone, John, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 555
 Storms, dreadful, p. 167-261-352-374-375-432-433
 Stow, the annalist, p. 744
 Strype, Mr. the historian, p. 737-741-743
 Subterraneous antiquities at Canterbury, p. 436-439
 Supporters to arms, granted to archbishop Chicheley, p.
 730
 Surfize, what, p. 64
 Swilingland, p. 64, 317

T.

Table of the Exchequer of money, held at Dover, p. 88
 Tamerik first introduced into England, p. 743
Taper-eak, a small hatchet so called, p. 248
 Telwork, service of, p. 132
 Tenement, what, p. 2
 Tenet Teneth, John de, a learned monk of Christ church,
 p. 297, 552
 Testa de Nevill, book of, p. 2
 Thread workers settle at Maidstone, p. 252
 Thorne, William de, monk of St. Augustine's, p. 297
 Todd, Rev. Mr. his lives of the deans of Canterbury, p. 588
 Tombs antient, placed along the walls of churches, p. 705
 Tournament at Canterbury, p. 433
 Tulip flower, first introduced into England, p. 743
 Tully's Formian villa, imitation of, p. 362

Tumuli or barrows, p. 5, 163
 Tyler, Wat, his rebellion, p. 723

U. V.

Vade, Laurence, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 557
 Vere or ferry boat, p. 250
 Vicarages, poor ones, augmented, p. 744
 Victualling, branch of, at Dover, p. 109
Ville Regales, or Regie of the Saxons, p. 216
 Vines planted in the Northholmes, in Canterbury, p. 654
 Vineyards at Quekes, p. 335; in different parts of Kent,
 p. 551
 Universities, the archbishop visitor of, p. 763
Urbs and oppidum, promiscuous use of, p. 417
 Uton, John, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 557

W.

Wales, prince of, his rich silk furniture wove at Canterbury, p. 423
 ----- Made a province to Canterbury, p. 703
 Walloons settle at Sandwich, p. 252, 253; their first settlement in England, p. 420; their place of worship in Canterbury cathedral, p. 522 Walls and ditches of cities, scandalous incroachments on,
 p. 413
Wardam ad, tenure of, p. 63
 Warden, lord, his claim to nominate a baron to parliament for Sandwich, p. 264
Warentia, madder, p. 478
 Waterspout observed in the Downs, p. 167
 Weavers, refugee, settle at Canterbury, p. 421
 Weights and measures first instituted, p. 705
 Well, famous one in Dover castle, p. 60, 65
 Westminster, councils at, p. 692-695-702-705-776
 Whales, cast on shore in Thanet, p. 337, 352
 Wharton, Mr. his Anglia Sacra criticised, p. 677
 Wheat, land the most productive of it in Kent, p. 245;
 in Thanet, its superior price, p. 291
 Whitaker, Rev. Mr. the historian, p. 352
 Will, remarkable one, p. 22
 William III. king, resides at Quekes, p. 335
 ----- Rufus, king, his sacrilegious character, p. 509
 Wickliffe, tenets of, their consequence, p. 721
 Winchester, councils at, p. 686, 691
 Windmill, curious horizontal one at Margate, p. 551
 Wineker, Nigell, a learned monk of Christ church, p. 549
 Woden, the Saxon idol, p. 238
 Wool, staple for, at Sandwich, p. 250; at Canterbury,
 p. 418
 Worsted stockings, first invention of, p. 420

Y.

York, archbishops of, their contests for the primacy, p.
 673. Nevill, archbishop, his pompous introduction, p. 767

Z.

Zant, trade to, first opened with England, p. 743

An I N D E X

Of the FAMILIES, whose COATS of ARMS are described in this VOLUME.

A.

ABBOT, of Ramsgate, p. 378
 -----, Archbishop, p. 757
 Abington, of Sandwich, p. 266
 Albrincis, p. 43
 Alday, of Sandwich, p. 266
 Alderley, p. 50
 Aldey, of Canterbury, p. 468, 469

Aldrich, p. 472
 Angell, p. 35
 Annot, of Sandwich, p. 266
 Annolt, p. 470
 Anselm, Archbishop, p. 693
 Archer, of River, p. 47
 Arundel, Archbishop, p. 727
 Averanches, p. 43, 487
 Austyn, alias Altyn, p. 205

Averft, of Canterbury, p. 609
 Ayling, p. 311
 Aylmer, Lord, p. 29

B.

Bachelor, of Canterbury, p. 475
 Baker, Admiral Richard, p. 52
 -----, of Thanet, p. 357; of Sandwich, p. 266
 Baldwin, Archbishop, p. 703
 Bancroft, Archbishop, p. 746
 Bargrave, of Eastry, p. 218
 Barnam, of Canterbury, p. 477
 Barrett, of Canterbury, p. 472
 Bawde, p. 437
 Becket, St. Thomas, Archbishop, p. 701
 Benger, of Hougham, p. 48
 Benton, p. 150
 Bentley, of Buckland, p. 52
 Beit, of St. Laurence near Canterbury, p. 670
 Biggs, of Dover, p. 41
 Black Friars, Convent of, in Canterbury, p. 448
 Blechenden, p. 240
 Boniface, Archbishop, p. 709
 Boteler, p. 245; of Eastry, p. 219-223-226-227; of Heronden, ibid; of Graveney, p. 227
 Bouchier, Archbishop, p. 733
 Bowier, p. 135
 Boys, of Betinanger, p. 185; of Denton, p. 186; of Barton, p. 201; of Sandwich, p. 222; Dean of Canterbury, p. 185
 Bradwardin, Archbishop, p. 719
 Brandon, p. 464
 Breton, of Hougham, p. 48
 Bridges, of St. Nicholas, p. 301; of Canterbury, p. 481
 Brooke, of Margate, p. 356, 357
 Buller, of Cornwall, p. 339
 Bunce, of Sandwica, p. 285. —, p. 472
 Bungay, of Chartham, p. 609

C.

Calthorp, p. 213
 CANTERBURY, City and County of, p. 399
 -----, Deanry of, p. 605
 -----, St. Gregories Priory in, p. 633
 Cafon, p. 240
 Champneis, p. 237
 Chewney, p. 355
 Chiche, of the Dungeon, p. 379-440-476
 Chicheley, Archbishop, p. 730
 Chiffinch, of Northfleet, p. 470
 Christ Church Priory in Canterbury, p. 558
 Churchill, of Henbury, p. 4
 Clare, Earl of Gloucester, p. 172
 Cleve, p. 226
 Cleybrooke, of Thanet, p. 297-346-355
 Cliderow, p. 148
 Clifford, p. 185
 Clitherow, p. 148
 Cocks, of Sandwich, p. 185
 Colfe, of Canterbury, p. 473-483-611
 Collard, p. 50
 Comyns, of Essex, p. 470
 Conyers, p. 495
 Conyngnam, Viscount, p. 321
 Coppin, p. 355-377-465
 Corboil, Archbishop, p. 695
 Cornhill, Reginald de, p. 322
 Cornwallis, Archbishop, p. 760
 Cotes, p. 469
 Courtney, Archbishop, p. 726
 Cousemaker, p. 238
 Cox, of Sandwich, p. 203
 Cranmer, of Canterbury, p. 481
 -----, Archbishop, p. 737
 Crayford, of Mongeham, p. 137
 Cressemar, p. 226
 Criol, p. 172, 379
 Crispe, of Thanet, p. 297-310-311-333-355
 Culmer, p. 139
 Cunry, p. 470
 Curling, of Thanet p. 297
 Cuthbert, Archbishop, p. 681

D.

Dandelyon, p. 356
 Dane, of Thanet, p. 359

Dare, of Felderland, p. 226
 Dalhwood, p. 465
 Dauling, p. 177
 Daundelyon, of Thanet, p. 343
 Dekewer, of Hackney, p. 280, 366
 Dene, Archbishop, p. 735
 Denne, of Denne Hill, p. 333
 Denew, of Canterbury and St. Stephen's, p. 132, 475
 Dering, of Doddington, p. 477
 Dockley, p. 240
 Douglas, Duke of Dover, p. 99
 Dover, Priory of, p. 107

E.

Eaton, of Dover, p. 117
 Ediva, Queen, p. 311
 Edmund, Archbishop, p. 708
 Edwards, p. 139
 Ellis, of Sandwich, p. 269
 Erpingham, Sir Thomas, p. 58
 Ethelred, King, p. 311
 Everard, p. 236

F.

Farbrace, of Dover, p. 108
 Farnabye, p. 197
 FeRor, of Dover, p. 197
 Finch, of Coldred, p. 11
 Fincaux, of Hougham, p. 44-48-491
 Finet, of West Cliff, p. 31
 Fitzjoceline, Reginald, Archbishop, p. 704
 Fitzpaine, p. 487
 Fleta, de, p. 347
 Fletcher, p. 227
 Foche, of Ripple, p. 131
 Forster, p. 282
 Francis, of Canterbury, p. 495
 Fuller, of Statenborough, p. 226

G.

Garrett, of St. Laurence, p. 379
 Gafon, of Aulton, p. 214
 Gibbon, of Rolvenden, p. 29
 Gibbs, of Woodchurch, p. 240
 Gilbert, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Gillow, of Woodnesborough, p. 240; of Thanet, p. 303
 Gippe, of Canterbury, p. 635
 Goatley, p. 378
 Gokin, of Ripple, p. 132
 Gosborne, p. 464
 Grant, p. 356
 Green, p. 472, 481
 Grindal, Archbishop, p. 743
 Grove, of Staple, p. 232; of Woodnesborough, ibid.
 240, 282
 Guibon, of West Cliff, p. 29
 Guildford, Earl of, p. 191
 Gunman, of Dover, p. 50, 117
 Gurney, of Shottenden, p. 357

H.

Hadde, of Canterbury, p. 465
 Hamerton, p. 229
 Hannington, of Dover, p. 100
 Hannis, of Thanet, p. 303
 Hanson, p. 50, 117
 -----, of Canterbury, p. 495
 Harris, p. 475
 Hart, of Birchington, p. 297, 337
 Harvey, p. 205; of Eastry, p. 226; of Comb, p. 299, 300
 Hasleherst, p. 334
 Hatton, of Dane Court, p. 204
 Hayward, of Sandwich, p. 204, 279; of Eastry, p. 222
 Herbert, of Shebbertswell, p. 6
 Heronden, of Eastry, p. 218, 219
 Heyre, Michael, p. 240
 Heirst, p. 272
 Hill, of co. Stafford, p. 240
 Hilles, p. 469
 Hilpestone, alias Hilpurton, p. 240
 Hobday, p. 469
 Hodgson, of Dover, p. 51
 Holand, p. 31

Hougham,

Hougham, of Hougham, p. 43; of Sandwich, p. 231; of Canterbury, p. 481, 667
Hubert, Archbishop, p. 706
Huggett, of Thanet, p. 366
Hugnes, of Ringleton, p. 237
Hull, p. 240
Humard, p. 463
Hungertord, p. 195
Hutton, Archbishop, p. 757

I.

Jackon, of Canterbury, p. 427, 484
Jacob, of Dover, p. 132
Jeffrey, of Sussex, p. 186
Johnston, of Thanet, p. 297-371-378
Jillip, Archbishop, p. 721
Juxon, Archbishop, p. 750

K.

Kay, p. 468
Kelley, p. 197, 378; of Eaftry, p. 220, 226
Kempe, Archbishop, p. 732
Kempe, of Dover, p. 100
Kilwardby, Archbishop, p. 710
Knight, of Canterbury, p. 469
Knights Templars, p. 34

L.

Lanfranc, Archbishop, p. 692
Langdon, Abbey of, p. 19
Langnam, Archbishop, p. 722
Langley, of Knolton, p. 209, 212
Langton, Archbishop, p. 707
Laud, Archbishop, p. 750
Leipige, p. 356
Lee, of the Dungeon, p. 441
Leigh, of Hawley, p. 227
Ley, p. 495
Lilly, p. 206
Lincolne, p. 346
Line, p. 229
Lille, p. 174, 206
Long, of Sandwich, p. 280
Lovejoy, of Thanet, p. 360, 365
Lowdes, p. 6
Lucius, King, p. 311
Lukyn, of Canterbury, p. 472

M.

Malmains, of Waldershare, p. 188
Man, of Canterbury, p. 427
Manston, of St. Laurence, p. 368, 379
Marth, of Marten, p. 125, 126
Martin, p. 197
Mason, of Monkton, p. 297, 310
Master, of East Langdon, p. 123; of Canterbury, p. 468
Matson, p. 6
Mead, p. 339
Mennes, of Sandwich, p. 266, 282
Merriweather, of Shebbertswell, p. 4
Milles, of Canterbury, p. 469
Minet, p. 197
Monins, p. 177, 475; of Dover and Canterbury, p. 55;
of Waldershare, p. 188
Moore, ARCHBISHOP, p. 761
More, of Canterbury, p. 435
Morrice, of Berthanger, p. 185, 226
Mortoft, p. 491
Morton, Archbishop, p. 735

N.

Napleton, of St. Nicholas, p. 303
Narborough, p. 211, 213
Newman, p. 96; of Canterbury, p. 472
Nepeau, of Hougham, p. 48
Nevinson, of Eaftry, p. 217
Noble, of Thanet, p. 366
Norwood, p. 481, 487; of Dane Court, p. 297-360-366
Nowell, of Sandwich, p. 280

O.

Ockman, of Deal, p. 13
Odiarne, of co. Sussex, p. 285
Osborne, p. 213
Oughton, of Canterbury, p. 472

P.

Palmer, of Howlets, p. 495
Pamflet, of Thanet, p. 303
Paramor, p. 126; of Statenborough, p. 221; of St. Nicholas, p. 297, 299; of Minister, p. 322
Parboe, p. 235
Parker, of Shebbertswell, p. 5
-----, Archbishop, p. 742
Partriche, p. 228
Payne, p. 356
Peckham, Archbishop, p. 712
Perot, p. 209
Peters, alias Pierre, p. 449
-----, p. 465
Pettit, of Dandelyon, p. 297-343-356
Peyton, different branches of, p. 210
-----, of Knolton, p. 210, 211
Plummer, of Canterbury, p. 470
Pole, Archbishop and Cardinal, p. 739
Potter, Archbishop, p. 756
Powel, p. 339
Pudner, of Canterbury, p. 428
Pybus, p. 96
Pyott, of Canterbury, p. 147-429-495
Pyfing, p. 124

Q.

Quilter, p. 495

R.

Ralph, Archbishop, p. 694
Rand, of Ripple, p. 135
Rawe, p. 285
Read, p. 226
Redwood, p. 378
Reynolds, Archbishop, p. 716
Ridley, of co. Sussex, p. 186
Ringley, p. 7
Roberts, of Canterbury, p. 465
Rogerfon, of London, p. 378
Rokesle, p. 487
Rolt, p. 213
Rooke, of St. Laurence, p. 384, 491
Roufe, of Dover, p. 40
Routh, p. 186
Rutton, of Sandwich, p. 279

S.

Sancroft, Archbishop, p. 753
Sanders, of Norborne, p. 146; of Minister, p. 327
Sandford, of Canterbury, p. 619
Sandwich, Town of, p. 254
-----, de, family of, p. 240, 266
-----, Montague, Earls of, p. 265
Sandys, of Norborne, p. 146
Savage, p. 27
Saunders, of Thanet, p. 297, 477
Sawkins, of Canterbury, p. 488
Searles, of Wye, p. 201
Secker, Archbishop, p. 760
Septvans, p. 379
Sheldon, of co. Warwick, p. 475
-----, Archbishop, p. 751
Shepherd, of Faverham, p. 138, 139
Shirley, p. 475
Sholdon, of Sholden, p. 157
Shocklidge, p. 153
Shrubsole, of Canterbury, p. 435
Small, p. 96
Smithsbye, p. 481
Solly, of St. Margaret's, p. 24
Somner, p. 355; of Canterbury, p. 472
Southland, p. 468
Spencer, of Sandwich, p. 257; of St. Laurence, p. 378
Spracklyn, of St. Laurence, p. 297, 373
St. Augustine's Monastery, in Canterbury, p. 658

ADDITIONS and CORRECTIONS

St. Leger, p. 240
 St. Nicholas, of Thanet, p. 377, 379
 Stafford, Archbishop, p. 730
 Stephens, of Woodneiborough, p. 242
 Stewart, of Sandwich, p. 279
 Stocks, p. 378
 Stoning, p. 465
 Stoughton, of Ash, p. 495
 Stratford, Archbishop, p. 718
 Stringer, of Dover, p. 40
 Studley, p. 266
 Sudbury, Archbishop, p. 723
 Swift, of Canterbury, p. 468
 Sydall, p. 601
 Sympson, of Canterbury, p. 616

T.

Talbot, p. 467
 Tenison, Archbishop, p. 755
 Terrey, of Monkton, p. 311
 Terry, p. 303
 Thanet, Earls of, p. 298
 Theobald, p. 228
 -----, Archbishop, p. 697
 Thompson, of Chichester, p. 185
 Thurbarne, of Sandwich, p. 282
 Tillotson, Archbishop, p. 754
 Timewell, p. 465
 Toker, p. 491
 Tomlin, p. 311; of Thanet, p. 356
 Tong, p. 206
 Tooke, of Bere, p. 30

V.

Valence, p. 240, 487
 Vassall, p. 464
 Ufford, Archbishop, p. 719

W.

Wake, Archbishop, p. 755
 Wakefield, p. 465
 Warde, of Dover, p. 100
 Warham, Archbishop, p. 735
 Warner, p. 441
 Warren, of Dover, p. 48-135-:38
 Watmer, of Canterbury, p. 435
 Wentworth, of Yorkshire, p. 307
 Wethershed, Archbishop, p. 707
 White, p. 469
 Whitfield, of Canterbury, p. 477
 Whitgift, Archbishop, p. 744
 Wild, of Canterbury, p. 435
 Willys, p. 475
 Winchelsea, Archbishop, p. 714
 Wife, of Sandwich, p. 282, 464
 Wittesley, Archbishop, p. 722
 Wood, p. 266; of Canterbury, p. 480
 Woodland, p. 638
 Wright, p. 186, 193
 Wyborne, of Sholdon, p. 157
 Wyvell, of Dover, p. 50, 117

Y.

York, of Dover, p. 100

ADDITIONS and CORRECTIONS.

PAGE

2, COL 1, for-Naxton read Naveton
 3, col. 2, note (p) for-Weaver read Weever, and so on afterwards
 4, note (w), l. 9, for-present read late
 5, note (y), last l. Mr. Hammond has sold the lease of Westcourt, to John Plumpe, esq; the present lessee of it
 6, note (e), l. 2, after having, add-by his 11, col. 2, l. 28, dele the words-proprietor of Langdon abbey-which estate does not belong to the earl of Guildford
 18, col. 1, l. 1, add, at top-PERPETUAL CURATES
 19, note (e), for-supradicit read supradict
 22, col. 2, l. 18, after (k), add-a semicolon stop; and next after II, add a comma stop only 27, note (i). Mr. Carter has sold the lease of St. Margaret at Cliff parsonage to Mr. Kingsford Wood, the present owner of it
 28, col. 2, l. 4, for-fir Gilbert Packe, read fir Gilbert Peche note (i), for-his history read this history
 31, note (c), l. 10, for-Hemy read Richard
 35, note (g), l. 18, for-Pater read porter
 37, note (p), for-commanders read commandery
 36, col. 2, l. 15. Mr. Hemy Belsey left this estate by will to his son William Belsey, the present owner of it
 40, col. 2, l. 30, after-and read late
 41, note (k), last line. On the death of Mrs. Turner, who was of Harriesham, this mill, a corn and seed mill, came to fir Charles Booth, kn. and again on his death, to William Baldwin, now of Harriesham, esq; the present owner of it
 45, col. 1, l. 20, after-countrymen, add a full stop, and next l. after II a comma only 46, note (w), last line, Mrs. Markbam's devisee, John Monins, of Canterbury, esq; is the present lessee of it 49, col. 1, l. 9. The parsonage is now held by Mr. Tho- mas Walker. Col. 2, for-next Faversham read near Faversham 50, col. 2. On the death of the Rev. Thomas Tournay in 1795, his son the Rev. William Tournay, A. M. succeeded, and is the present vicar

PAGE

 51, col. 1, l. 18, for-George Horn read Thomas Horn
 Ibid. l. 35. The mill, late Mr. Paine's, is now occupied by Mr. Kingsford
 57, note (g), l. 15, for-convomiut read convomuit
 64, col. 2, after last line, add-Since writing the above, DOVER CASTLE has, in some measure, been restored to consequence, at the expence of near 40,000l. so that it is now capable of holding out a siege for some length of time. The antient towers along the walls have been dismantled, by which its former face of antiquity has been mostly done away, to give room to improvements after the modern system of fortification. A new road, an exceeding fine one, has been made up to it, at a little further distance, in a direction for the different batteries to play upon it, in lieu of the old one, which was so hollow as to protect the approach of the enemy. A shaft, or perpendicular staircase, with loop-holes towards the sea for musketry, has been sunk through the cliff, down to the battery on the shore below it, to secure a retreat for the garrison, in case of necessity, inasmuch, that with the other additions of defence made to it, few fortifications of the like sort, can be in a more perfect state than this castle is at present
 72, note (w), l. 11, for-Weaver read Weever, and the same in notes (x) and (b)-l. 21, for-hac read hæc
 76, col. 2, l. 22, for-Hon. Frederick North read Francis
 96, col. 1, at the end of THE LIST OF BARONS returned to parliament, add-36th at Westminster, 1796-The same (f)

- PAGE
96, note (f), Mr. Pybus having accepted the place of one of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, his seat became vacated, and he was re-elected on July 27, 1797
- 99, note (g), for—Marriotts read Merretts
- 105, note (l), last l. for—Archbishoprick read Archbishopric, note (g), last l. but 5, for—clar. read cler.
- 110, col. 1, note (y), l. 5 from the last. Thomas Curling and Mary Abbot have parted with their interest to James Gunman, esq; the present possessor of it
- 113, note (b). Mr. Ashdown has sold off the church-yard of St. Nicholas, and there are several houses erected on parts of it
- 119, col. 2, at the end of the LIST OF RECTORS, add Thomas Tournay, died 1795
William Tournay, A. M. 1795—Present rector
- 123, col. 1, l. 26, for—those of Guston and East Langdon, read that of Guston
- 125, col. 1, l. 17. Mr. Baker has sold this house and estate to Mr. James Jeken of Oxney, who has pulled down the old house, and has built a large one on the site of it, for his own residence
- Ibid. l. 8, from the bottom. Mr. James Jeken now possesses this tythery
- Ibid. note (r), l. 5. Mr. Baker's son now occupies and resides in it. Mr. King's farm has been purchased by Richard Jeken of Dover, who by will gave it to his son James, nephew of James Jeken, above-mentioned
- 128, col. 1, l. 5, dele and. Note (y), add—The house of the estate called Winkleton Oaks, is in Ripple parish, a different estate from this of Sutton farm, alias Winkleton. The former belonged lately to John Baker, of Deal, esq; who sold it to Mr. Stephen Carter, of Walmer
- 132, col. 2, last line but 3, for—St. Stephen's read Hytbe
- 133, col. 1, note (t), line at bottom, for—has read had
- Ibid. col. 2, l. 22. Mrs. Denne is since deceased, and Mrs. Herring is become the sole proprietor; the Hon. Lady Frances Benson resides at it
- 137, col. 1, for—Scot read Scott
- 138, col. 1, l. 5, from the bottom. The estate now called Stoneball farm in this parish, now belongs to Mr. Richard Wood, and Anne his sister
- Ibid. note (g). Mrs. Rammell is deceased, and her two brothers John and Edward Sole, possess her interest in the lease
- Ibid. col. 2, last line. Admiral Bray is since deceased, and his son John Raven Bray, esq; now resides in it
- 142, note (n). Mr. Michael Russell, of Dover, is since deceased, and his heirs now possess it
- 143, col. 1, in the list of rectors, after Griffith Griffith, add Thomas Pearce, D. D. 1796—Present rector
- 146, note (b), l. 5, for—now read late
- 148, col. 2, last l. but one, for—John read Thomas
- 150, col. 1, l. 23, add—and his widow the hon. Lady Frances Benson now possesses it
- 151, col. 1, l. 10. Mr. Thomas Hoile is now of age
- 152, col. 1, l. 15. Mr. Pointer has since sold this estate to Mr. Laurence Dilnot, the present owner of it
- Ibid. l. 22. Mrs. Denne is deceased, and the whole now belongs to Mrs. Herring
- Ibid. l. 41. The same, and her share now belongs to Mrs. Herring
- 155, col. 1, l. 30, dele—from word excepting, to the like word in the third line from it, being then repeated again
- 156, col. 2, l. last but one, for—Wyborns read Wyborn. Note (p), for—Fenderland read Fenderland
- 157, col. 1, note (p). Mr. Wyborn's eldest daughter Frances is married to Mr. John May of Deal, gent. and Elizabeth, the second, to Captain Dean, of the Berks Militia
- 162, col. 1, l. 24. Mr. Wyborn has since sold it to Mr. William White of Deal, the present owner of it
- 166, col. 1, l. 21. George Stringer is now lieutenant of Deal Castle
- Ibid. col. 2, l. 7. Since the commencement of the present war, among other precautions for the defence of this part of the coast, two additional forts have been built between Sandown Castle and the mouth of Sandwich Haven; a Telegraph has been erected here, which corresponds with one at Bethanger. Three signal houses have been built, one at St. Peter's in Thanet; another near the South Foreland, and another nearer to Dover Castle; and near this town, though in Walmer parish, there have been erected barracks, both for the infantry and cavalry, and royal military and naval hospitals

- PAGE
167, col. 1, l. 16, for—request read requests
- Ibid. col. 1, l. 27. Mr. Hougham possessed it only for his wife's life, who is since deceased. Captain Peyster resides in it
- 169, col. 1, l. 10, add—but for the safety of the navigation, a floating light has been placed at the back of the North sand head
- 173, col. 2, l. 9. George Leith, jun. is now captain of Walmer Castle, and Edward Pyott lieutenant
- 174, note (r). Mr. John Cannon, jun. of Deal, is the present lessee of the parsonage
- 175, col. 1, in the list of curates—Robert Phillips died in 1798, and was succeeded by Thomas Timms, A. M. the present curate of Walmer
- 178, col. 1, note (y), l. 4, for—Edolpb read for Thomas Edolpb
- 180, col. 1, l. 6, read WORTH alias WORD
- 183, col. 1, l. 21, for—is read are
- 185, col. 1, last line. Mr. John Curling sold this estate to his son William, who has since sold it to John Minet Fector, esq; the present owner of it
- 187, col. 2, note (n), last line but 3, after—Waldershare, add a space thus, —, and in the next line, after Stoke, place only a comma stop
- 191, col. 2, note (l), last line. The earl of Guildford's daughter by his first wife, is named Maria; by his second wife he has two daughters
- 192, col. 2, note (s), for—Twysden read Twysden
- 195, col. 2, note (o), for—Parverel read Peverel
- 196, col. 2, l. 20. Mr. Mann left his estate, called the Green Farm, to his brother-in-law John Monins of Canterbury, esq; who presently afterwards sold it to Peter Fector of Dover, esq; the present owner of it
- Ibid. note (d), l. 9, from the bottom, after—1794, add—Ann Worthley Montague, the only daughter of for Robert Lawrie
- 197, col. 1, l. 11. Mr. Thomas Harvey is since deceased, and Brimsdale now belongs to his son Mr. Underdown Harvey
- Ibid. note (e), last line, add—Mr. Sayer is since deceased, and his widow now possesses these two farms
- Ibid. note (f), last line. Mrs. Canney sold it to Mr. Thomas Sayer above mentioned, whose son, the Rev. James Minet Sayer, now owns it
- 199, col. 1, note (b), l. 6, for—Paremor read Paramor
- Ibid. l. 12. Alter the remainder of THE PEDIGREE OF HARVEY, thus:—Richard, the eldest son, died in 1798, having married in 1734, Elizabeth Nicolls of Barham, who died in 1799, by whom he had seven sons and six daughters; of the former, Richard the eldest, now of Ramsgate, cl. was vicar of St. Laurence, and is now vicar of Eastry, and married Judith Mason, by whom he has Richard, now vicar of St. Laurence, married to Anne Wade, by whom he has a son Richard; Henry, the second son is an admiral of the royal navy, and of Walmer; who married Elizabeth, daughter of William Boys, late lieutenant-governor of Greenwich Hospital, by whom he has had issue four sons and one daughter, viz. Henry and Richard, both drowned at sea, without issue; William, now in the East Indies; Thomas, a captain in the royal navy; and Elizabeth, who married William-Henry Boys, captain of marines; John, the third son was likewise a captain in the royal navy, of Heronden, who died at Portsmouth in July 1794, of the wounds he had received in the glorious naval fight against the French, on June the 1st preceding his death, which prevented the King's intention of making him an admiral, as a reward for his gallant behaviour in it. (See below, p. 220, note (b). He married Judith, daughter of Henry Wise, of Sandwich, esq; by whom he had four sons and four daughters; of the former, Henry Wise Harvey, esq; is now of Heronden, and married Margaret Dilnot, by whom he has two sons and two daughters; John, is a captain in the royal navy, and married Elizabeth Bradley, his cousin, by whom he has a daughter Elizabeth; Edward, and Richard, who died an infant. Of the daughters, Mary married William Boteler, now of Eastry, esq; (see below p. 223.) Fanny married Mr. Robert Curling; Elizabeth died young; and Sarah. The remaining children of Richard Harvey, by Elizabeth Nicolls, were; Thomas, the fourth son, living, but without issue; Edward the fifth, died in 1759, without issue; Samuel, the sixth son, is of Sandwich, brewer, who married Elizabeth Maundy, by whom he has one son and three daughters; and Robert, the seventh son, died an infant. Of the daughters, Mary died an infant; Margaret married Thomas Freeman, cl. rector of St. Martin's and St. Paul's, in Canterbury; Elizabeth married William Wyborn Bradley, of Sandwich, brewer; Maria-Roberta married Mr. Matson; Frances died an infant; and Sarah married John Tucker, cl. rector of Gravefend and Lud-denham 201, col. 2, note (m), last l. for—houffe, read houffid

PAGE
 205, col. 1, note (i), l. 13, for—father, read grandfather
 206, col. 1, note (p), last l. for—argent, read of the 2d
 208, col. 1, l. 3. Mr. John Curling is since deceased, and his two sons are now possessed of it 211, col. 1, last l. but 3, for—is now, read was late
 214, col. 2, l. 17, for—others, read ether Thanes, and l. 18, after put add—three of; l. 9 from bottom, dele— but now of the White Friars in Canterbury
 222, col. 2, note (i), l. 2. Mr. Boys removed from Sandwich, on being appointed surgeon of the royal hospital at Deal; he now resides at Walmer
 223, col. 1, l. 5. Taylor White about two years ago sold Little Walton F. to Mr. Edward George, now of Statenborough, the present owner of it; col. 2, l. 1, only one of the houses at Wenstone, being the farm house belongs to Mrs. Rammell
 Ibid. col. 2, note (l), l. 18. Mr. Boteler by his present wife has five sons and three daughters 224, col. 1, l. 1, for—Mary, read Martha. Mr. Salmon of Canterbury, now possesses Mrs. Harvres's estate at Lower Seljon
 226, col. 2, note (v), l. 22, read the Rev. Drue Askeley Cressmer
 228, col. 1, note (v), l. 4, for—Partricke, read Partriche
 229, col. 1, l. 26, since the Counress Dowager of Guildford's death, her interest in the lease is vested in her younger children
 232, col. 1, l. 2, on the division made of their estates, Mr. Marshall is now become the sole possessor of this manor
 234, col. 1, l. 37. Mr. Whitebread sold it to Mr. John Bushel of Ash, who is since deceased, and his heirs now own his interest in it; l. 4 from the bottom, his widow Mrs. Stephens now possesses it
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 17. Mr. Solly has sold it this year to Thomas Golfrey, (before Jull) esq; of Brook-street in Ash, who now owns it; l. 26. Mrs. Marsh's christian names are Roberta-Catherina, her son on his coming of age became possessed of it, and sold it to Mr. Baldock of Canterbury, as he did again to Mr. David Taylor of Sandwich, the present possessor of it 236, col. 1, l. last but 6, for—John, read Samuel, and next line dele—M. P. for Canterbury, and add—who sold it to Mr. Baldock, the present owner of it
 237, in the description of Ringleton, begin the second col. thus—One sixth part is now vested in Miss Frances Champnies, and in the two sons of John Burt, esq; deceased, by Harriet her sister, and the remaining part of the estate in the Rev. William-Henry Champnies, the eldest of the two sons of John Burt, esq; above-mentioned. Col. 2, last l. but 6, for—Beckland, read Buckland, and last line, add—and his widow Mrs. Stephens is now possessed of it
 Ibid. note (t), last l. for—fable and argent, read of the field
 239, col. 1, note (k), last l. Little Flemings belongs now wholly to John Wrake. Note (n), l. 9. Mr. Abbot sold his estate at Upriche to Miles, and he again sold it to Mr. John Boys of Beishanger, the present owner of it
 244, col. 2, l. 32. The reversion of Hackling farm has been sold to Mr. Solomon Ferrier of Sandwich. L. 4 from the bottom, George Earl Cowper died this year without issue, and was succeeded by his brother Peter, now Earl Cowper, the present possessor of it
 246, col. 2, l. 8. Since the Counress Dowager of Guildford's decease, her interest in the lease is vested in her younger children
 248, col. 1, last l. but 10, for—appulsi, read appulfit
 267, col. 2, note (v), l. 7, for Johannes, read Johannis
 272, col. 2, l. 17, for—commorate, read commemorate. Note (b), for—Bertrina, read Bertram 275, col. 1, l. 10 from the bottom, after gent. add—and 280, col. 1, note (a), l. 25, for—on board, read on a board
 282, col. 1, note (v), last l. but 4, for—chevronels sable, read chevronels ermine
 291, col. 1, note (c), for—Thalimus, read Thalamus
 295, col. 2, l. 4, for—milii, read malii
 296, col. 2, l. 34, for—Corallina, read Coralline. Col. 2, l. 17, for—compressis, read compressis. L. 26, for—facia, read facie 299 and 300. The manor of Down Barton with Shoart, belongs to the two sons, William and Eliab Breton, as coheirs, in Gavelkind 300, col. 2, l. 21. Mr. Broadley's widow is now intitled to the estate of Upper Hales

PAGE
 302, col. 1, l. 13. Mr. Gillow is deceased, and his widow Anne now resides in it
 305, col. 2, note (r), last l. but one, for—offe, read offa
 310, col. 1, l. 38. Mr. Edward Pett resides at Cleve Court
 312, col. 1, l. last but one. WASCHESTER spelt likewise WATCHESTER
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 33. Mr. Bridges has sold this estate to Mr. Ambrose Collard, who now owns it 323, col. 1, l. 7. Mr. Fector has sold the lease of it to Mr. Edward Pett of Cleve Court, who now possesses it Ibid. col. 2, l. 30. Mess. Henry and John Harnett are the present owners of Powcies
 333, col. 1, note (k), for—chuaritas, read charitas
 335, col. 1, l. 8. William Roberts, esq; is now in the possession of Quekes, for his life, the inheritance belonging to his son Arthur, it is at present unoccupied. Col. 1, note (x), l. 10, for—left issue, read was father of 336, col. 2, l. 2. Edward Taddy is now the sole possessor of this manor
 340, col. 1, note (x), l. 13. Mr. George Bushell is deceased, and his son Mr. Benjamin Bushell is the present lessee
 341, col. 1, l. 17. The same as p. 340 above
 344, col. 1, l. 16. William Roberts, esq; now possesses it for life, the reversion belongs to his son Arthur. L. 36, for—or, read of 347, col. 1, note (q). Mr. Ambrose Collard sold Vincent's to Mr. Francis Smith, the present owner of it; Chapel Hill house belongs to Jacob Sawkins, esq; Notes (r) and (s), last l. Fleet now belongs to William Roberts, esq; for life, remainder to his son Arthur
 348, col. 2, last l. but one. Margate Pier has been extended and is now compleatly cased with stone, and the town has been paved, lighted and otherwise improved, in consequence of the late act
 350, col. 2, l. 3, for John Copeley, read John Coakley Letson
 351, col. 1, note (f), l. 9, for—weofe, read woofe
 352, col. 2, note (p), for—vegetus, read vegetus
 354, col. 2, l. 9. Mr. Keate has been deceased some years
 360, col. 2, l. last but 4. Mr. John Gibbon is the present lessee of Callis Grange
 361, col. 1, l. 31. Mr. King's children are now jointly possessed of his house at Sacket's-hill. L. 45. The house at Stone, I am informed, was purchased of Mr. Breton by Mr. Henry Harpur, the present owner of it
 362, col. 1, l. 7. The North Foreland light-house is vested in the governors of Greenwich hospital, and is under the direction of the governor. There is a signal-house between the North Foreland and Stone-house, erected in 1795; the establishment of it is a lieutenant and midshipman of the navy, and two men
 363, col. 1, l. 9. Kingsgate house is now occupied as a public lodging house. L. 22, among the genteel houses at Broadstairs is that of Mr. John Henniker, bart. who resides at it in the summer season 369, col. 1, l. last but 6, add—but it is now by sale become the property of Mr. Richard Brice. Note (p), l. 6, for—he, read she 370, col. 1, l. 9. Mr. Bedford is deceased, and his widow now occupies it
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 25. Thomas Garret, esq; is become the sole owner, and resides at Nether Court 371, col. 1, l. 19. The same as above, p. 370. Col. 2. Sprating-street estate is now owned by John and Thomas Wootton, not Weston. Col. 2, l. 5 from the bottom. At Pegwell there is a neat villa, lately erected by William Garrow, esq; for his occasional residence, and between that place and Ramsgate is another, called Belmont, an elegant building in the gorhic taste, the residence of Joseph Ruse, esq;
 376, col. 1, l. 16. Since the year 1792 and the writing of this History, the following alterations and improvements have been made to Ramsgate pier.—A new light house built with stone has been erected on the west head, with Argand lamps and reflectors. A handsome house for the harbour master, with a new and elegant building for a warehouse. The old break water at the east pier has been continued with a pier wall to the gateway by the cliff, by which a large piece of ground is inclosed, and forms a secure barrier to the pier; on the top of which is an elegant colonade, and a parade for walking. The balon wall is widening, so as to form

PAGE

- form a wharf to admit of goods being landed and shipped again, as before it was too narrow, and not deemed of sufficient strength; a stone house is erected on the east head, which serves both as a watch house, and at the same time to deposit hawfers in, to assist ships in distress, when coming in. There are two alarm bells erected, one at the dock, the other at the east head, which are struck every hour, and in case of necessity, are rung to alarm the town. Col. 1, l. 21. Additions to the number of ships taking shelter in Ramsgate pier:
- | | | | |
|------------|------------|------------|------------|
| 1791 - 438 | 1793 - 196 | 1795 - 432 | 1797 - 495 |
| 1792 - 552 | 1794 - 445 | 1796 - 557 | 1798 - 677 |
- 381, col. 2, note (u), for—mediatatem read medietatem
 384, col. 2, l. 3. Mr. John Foreman is since deceased, and this manor and advowson is become the property of his heir, Mr. Luke Foreman
 387, col. 1, l. 8, for—John, read Luke
 391, col. 1, l. 8, after—Radulph, add bolds
 395, col. 2, l. 38, for—alderman, read aldermen
 399, col. 1, l. 11, for—civittitis, read civitalis
 411, col. 1, l. 28. Mr. Cooper has built a good house within the precincts of the castle, on the scite of one before inhabited by the Delestangs
 415, col. 2, l. last but 9 from the bottom. This last mentioned postern in Pound lane, has been lately opened for carriages
 422, col. 2, l. last but one. The Cotton Mill at Skoolak is now rented by Mr. Hugh Stirrup, who has applied the machinery to the purpose of an improved manufactory of woollen yarn for Canterbury worsted, into which article it converts about 1000 pounds of wool weekly; but the buildings for this new manufacture is not yet completed
 423, col. 2, l. 9 from the bottom. To this may be added, that in 1798, a new bridge for carriages was built, at the expence of Mr. alderman Simmons, over the mill stream of the Stour, near Abbats mill, at the opening in the city wall, where the three arches had been pulled down in 1769, as has been already noticed above, p. 413, (c)
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 30. The Dunjeon, or Dunjeon, as it is frequently spelt, was improved by Mr. Simmons with immense labour, at the expence of more than 1500l. and he appropriated an annual sum for the support of the fences, walks and plantations; but the Court of Guardians of the Poor of the city having come to a determination, not a very liberal one, to tax Mr. Simmons for these public improvements, to the poor's rates; this unhandsome usage disgusted him so much, that he gave up his lease, and this pleasant and much frequented promenade for the inhabitants, is now going rapidly to ruin, through the wanton spoil and mischief continually made in it
 425, col. 1, note (o), l. 2, for—anniversary solemnity, read solemn anniversary
 Ibid. col. 2, add at the end of note (g). There has been received by benefactions from the first institution of this hospital, the sum of 11,226l. 8s. 7d. of which, including the purchase of land, building, &c. the expences have amounted to 9,620l. 15s. 7d. on December 31, 1798; and there have been admitted to the benefit of the hospital since its first institution, of both in and out-patients, 1627
 427, col. 1, l. 19. Mrs. Lydia Friend is since deceased, and this house now belongs to Mr. Thomas Friend, but it continues to be used as a ladies boarding-school
 429, col. 1, l. 29. The estate of St. Radigund's is now held under a lease from the corporation, by James Simmons, esq; who has greatly improved it, and has rebuilt and enlarged the cold bath
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 21. Mr. John Austen is since deceased, and this house is now occupied by William Hougham, sen. esq; late of Barton-house, who married Mr. Austen's sister Ibid. col. 2, l. 24, after—gentleman's house, read that and the five following lines thus—It was formerly the residence of the family of Wylde, who remained owners of it till John Wylde, knt. then of the archbishop's palace, conveyed it in 1634 to Cheney Ebourne, of St. Martin's, merchant, who in 1653 alienated it to Henry Palmer, late for Henry Palmer, of Howlets, knt. then of Covent-garden in Middlesex, who died possessed of it in 1659, and gave it to Anne his wife, and she, previous to her re-marriage with for Philip Palmer, knt. settled it on her three daughters; Eliza, who married James Smith, gent.; Mabella, who married William Glover, vicar of Burnham, in co. Bucks; and Prijcilla—the two

PAGE

- latter of whom conveyed their shares in it afterwards to Mr. James Smith above-mentioned, who then became entitled to the whole of it, which in 1677 he sold to Thomas Conyers, gent. whose daughter Mary carried it in marriage to John Wilson, of Canterbury, gent. and they in 1694 alienated it to the Rev. Owen Evans, rector of St. Martin's. He died in 1742, having been rector of that church 50 years. He married, first Anne, daughter of John Whitfield, of Canterbury, esq; by whom he had no issue, and secondly Frances, daughter of Dr. Martin Lister, physician to Q. Anne, whom he left surviving, as well as a daughter Frances by her; and they in 1745, joined in the sale of it to Charles Pyott, of Canterbury, esq; who died possessed of it in 1789
 429, note (l), l. 1, for—Robert read Charles Pyott
 430, col. 1, l. 3, after Barton field, add—on the sides of which there have been built several genteel houses, now called St. George's-place
 Ibid. l. 12. Since the commencement of the present war, there have been erected for the accommodation of the military, several ranges of barracks, in and near the city. Near the northern suburbs, on the Margate road, opposite Barton mill, there were erected in 1794, the royal cavalry barracks for a complete regiment, on land purchased of for Edward Hals, by the board of ordnance; they are substantially built of brick, elegant and spacious, forming three sides of a quadrangle, and are said to have cost about 40,000l. The barracks for the infantry are private property, and were built in 1798 by Mess. Baldeck and De Lafaux, to contain about 1000 men. The situation of both is pleasant and healthy, the soil being dry, though well supplied with excellent water. There are besides these, temporary barracks, in different parts of the city, for detachments of the royal artillery, for two regiments of dragoons, and two brigades of grenadier militia, in the whole near 5000 men, under the commander in chief of the south military district, comprising Kent, Sussex, and Surry. The depository for the cannon, ammunition, and ordnance stores of the royal artillery, being in the great barn belonging to Barton-house 433, col. 2, last line but 10. In the autumn of the year 1798, HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS GEORGE PRINCE OF WALES, honoured this city with his presence, passing through it on September 17th in the evening, towards his temporary residence at Charlton-place, near Barham Downs, in the neighbourhood of it, where he was waited on next day by the mayor and corporation, and presented with the freedom of the city, which he most graciously accepted, and afterwards attended by a suite of nobility, general officers and others, rode to Canterbury, where he was received with every degree of loyalty and respect, being welcomed by the discharge of artillery, and the ringing of bells, &c. as he passed through the city, both to and from the royal barracks, where his own regiment, and the rest of the military were drawn up for his inspection; he then visited the cathedral, at which he expressed much admiration; and having condescended to accept of an invitation to dine with the mayor on the 29th, the day of his being sworn into office, his royal highness on that day arrived in the city, where the volunteers lined the street as he passed, and after his alighting fired three volleys; he passed on to the rooms, the mayor and aldermen, the members of the city and county, many of the nobility, general officers and principal inhabitants being in attendance ready to receive him, with whom, in number about 200, he afterwards partook of a most elegant and sumptuous entertainment, which had been prepared for him by the mayor and corporation, and departed in the evening expressing the highest satisfaction at the reception he had met with. After which his highness having patronized a ball assembly, for raising a subscription for the relief of the wives and children of those brave men, who fell, and those who were wounded in the glorious naval victory gained in the Mediterranean, by admiral Nelson, over the French fleet. It was attended on Oct. 15, by a numerous and brilliant company of nobility and gentry, military officers, and principal families and inhabitants of the city and neighbourhood; his royal highness and prince William of Gloucester condescending to be present at it, and to promote by their liberal examples the intention of the meeting; they afterwards partook with the company, of a most elegant supper, provided for the purpose;

PAGE
 purpose; the whole entertainment of the evening being conducted with such taste and regularity, as to give him the greatest pleasure and satisfaction 438, col. 2, note (c), l. 4, for—Christ church mill read Christ church his mill
 439, col. 1, l. 9. Mr. alderman Simmons is now the sole lessee of Abbas mill
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 13, for—DUNJEON read DUNGEON, and so throughout that page and the next 442, col. 1, l. penult. Mr. Grebell possesses the mansion-house and part of the land, but the lands belonging to it westward of the house, called Wellelofe and Stuppington hill, were sold in 1798, to Mr. Joseph Royle, who now owns them
 445, col. 1, l. 2, for—George-Augustus read Peter-Lewis-Francis Ibid. col. 2, l. 7. Mr. William Kingsford resides in it at present 447, col. 1, note (q), l. 7, for Habita read Habitu
 449, col. 1, l. penult. for—and his will read and by his will Ibid. col. 2, l. 20. Mrs. Byrb died in 1798, and this house came by settlement to Samuel Egerton Brydges, of Denton, esq.; who had married her only daughter and heir, Elizabeth, deceased, and he now owns it, but it is at present untenanted. Note (u), l. penult. for—Jane read Innes 459, col. 1, l. 25, after—for add the 467, col. 1, note (m), l. 7, for—Brodman read Bredman
 470, title at top, after—CHURCHES aēle ST. ANDREWS
 Ibid. col. 1, note (c), l. 16, from the bottom, read thus. Impaling argent and ermine, 3 fer de molins or, a pale countercharged in fess; on a chief or, a lion passant guardant between 2 roses gules
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 14, for—to be read appears to have been 475, note (w), l. 5, for—Francis read Frances
 476, col. 1, l. 22, for—1742 read 1732
 481, col. 2, note (l), l. 34, for—Jebannas read Jobannes
 483, col. 1, note (c), l. 3, for—Pita read Pity. Col. 2, l. 7, for—Leak read Leah
 491, col. 1, note (z), l. 13, for 1383 read 1688
 498, col. 2, l. 3, for—Augustin read Augustine, and l. 5, for—Eihelred read Eihelbert
 499, col. 1, l. 15, for—Augustin, read Augustine 500, note (k), last l. for—thee, read the 501, note (q), last l. for—valued, read value
 503, col. 1, note (v), l. 12, for—1721, read 1726
 506, col. 1, note (p), l. 8, for—fundamentii, read fundamentis
 508, col. 2, l. 4. for—which, read when he 520, col. 2, l. 7 from bottom, for—his being contufed, read his brain being contufed. Note (b), last l. after—see, see below, p. 612, (b); and note (d), for—erga, read ergo
 524, col. 1, note (p), l. 4, for—Pudnor, read Pudner
 526, note (a), l. 8, for—ecclēsiu, read ecclēsiæ
 533, col. 1, l. 6 from the bottom, for—Thomas read Thomas
 535, col. 1, l. 26, for—prebend, read prebendary
 537, col. 2, l. 11. The beautiful monument of archbishop Warham has lately been thoroughly cleaned from the white-wash, with which it was covered, so that it now fully displays all its original beauties and perfect elegance of gothic architecture; and for the future preservation of this and the other monuments in the martyrdom, the dean and chapter, at whose expence the improvement has been made, have inclosed the whole isle with an iron railing
 538, col. 2, l. 4 from bottom, for—monuments a long time, read monuments has for a long time
 546, col. 1, note (l), for—aput, read apost
 548, col. 1, l. 13, for—Suffex, read Suffex
 555, col. 1, l. 16, for—centrum, read centum 561, col. 1, l. 31, for—superior, read sub-prior 567, col. 1, l. 31, for—Jebanno, read Jobanno
 571, col. 2, note (m), for—now Mr. Weston's, read now Mr. Norris's
 574, col. 1, l. 5, for—eujus, read ejus
 575, col. 2, l. 13, after—these, add domitories
 577, note (x), l. 6. for—fo, read to 578, col. 2, l. 21, for—Weston, read Norris
 592, col. 2, l. 18, for—CANTABIRGIENSES, read CANTABRIGIENSES
 593, col. 2, l. 6, for—BAYGRAVE, read BARGRAVE
 596, col. 1, l. 32, for—have signed, read he resigned
 603, col. 2, l. 14, for—eldest, read youngest. Note (t), dele last line and read thus—by whom he has had four sons and two daughters, Caroline and Mary, both deceased; of the sons, the eldest, George, D.D. is prebendary of Canterbury, and rector of Brasted, and married Lady Maria Hay, daughter of the Earl of Errol; Charles the second, is M.P. for Woodstock;

PAGE
Robert the third is a student of Christ church, and John the fourth son, born in Lambeth-palace, is now at Eton-school
 608, col. 1, l. 32, for—acant, read vacant
 611, col. 2, l. 14, for—sequestrated, read sequestered
 617, note (p), for—SUSANNEM, read SUSANNAM
 618, col. 2, last l. but 4. Mr. Weston vacated this prebend in December 1798, on being promoted to a canonship residentiary of St. Paul's, and was succeeded in this prebend by the Rev. Charles Norris, A.M. son of the Rev. Charles Norris, LL.B. deceased, vicar of Braborn. He was installed on Jan. 19, 1799, and is the present incumbent of it. Note (e), last line, for—William, read James
 620, col. 2, l. 22, for—Conscionatori, read Conscionatori
 622, col. 1, l. 22, for—quam, read quem
 624, col. 1, l. 23, for—resigned, read resided at. Last line but 5, for—now resides in it, read resided in it for some time, after which it was sold to Mrs. Catherine Knight, widow of Thomas Knight, of Godmersham, esq.; who possesses and resides in it
 625, col. 2, l. 3; for—leger, read ledger
 627, note (o), l. 1, for—itatute, read statutes
 630, col. 1, l. 31; for—MONTAQUE, read MONTAGUE
 631, col. 1, l. 11 from the bottom. Mr. Gregory has resigned his office of six preacher
 632, col. 2, l. last but 4, for—inibi, read inibi; and next line, for—clarici, read clerici
 633, col. 1, l. 15, for—villa, read villæ
 634, col. 1, last line, for—for, read from 635, col. 1, note (t), l. 6, for—this History, read the History of Kent. Note (v), for—Gippes, read Gippe throughout it 636, col. 1, l. 31, for—meteries, read cemeteries 641, col. 2, l. 16, after buried, add—in 643, col. 1, l. 12, for—part, read parts
 649, col. 2, l. 3, for—bishop, read archbishop
 650, col. 1, last line but 5, for—and being formally, read and not being formally 651, col. 1, l. 44, for—Augustinas, read Augustinus. Col. 2, l. 10, for—Edmund, read Edmundbury; and l. 15, after clergy, add—and
 659, col. 1, note (k), l. 5, for—copies, read copies
 664, col. 1, l. 17, for—residence, read damage
 667, col. 1, l. 6, after premises, add—fr Thomas Cheney 671, col. 1, note (v), last line, for—Brafted, read Bersted. Col. 2, note (y), last line, after it, add—by 682, col. 1, l. 4, for—Lambert, read Zambert
 683, col. 1, l. 30, for—ceale, read ceale
 684, col. 1, l. 30, for—Saverus, read Sewerus
 Ibid. note (q), l. 5, for—Atholstan, read Athelstan
 685, col. 1, l. 25, for—Oao, read Elfin
 691, col. 2, note (x), for—shield, read sheet
 692, col. 1, note (x), l. 11, for—omnis, read omnes
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 4 from bottom, after (g), add—and in 1099 he celebrated the feast of Whitsuntide at Mortlake
 697, note (o), for—valdo, read valde
 705, col. 2, l. 35, add—and he obtained a market and fair at his manor of Lambeth. (a) Two years after it had been granted to him by the bishop and church of Rochester. (a) Cart. 1 Joh. m. 4, N. 33
 707, col. 1, last line, dele—the word fore. Note (k), for—Laughton, read Langhton
 710, col. 2, l. 28, for—minister, read master
 712, col. 2, l. 10, for—two the, read the two
 715, col. 2, l. 8, after Wimbleton, add—to which he was instituted in 1298, and quitted it in 1308, on his promotion to the bishopric of Worcester
 716, col. 2, l. 23, after contumacious, add—upon which he retired to Mortlake in great solitude, being the last archbishop who resided there
 721, col. 1, l. 18, after—Wells, place a full stop, and after Canterbury—a comma only 724, col. 1, l. 11, add—having received his pall with great solemnity, in his hall at Croydon palace
 Ibid. col. 2, l. penult. for—effiges, read effigies
 726, note (t), for—decim, read decem
 727, col. 1, l. 17, after—Canterbury, place a comma stop, and next line after—Leeds, a full stop, after l. 20, add—it is probable that king James the 1st, of Scotland, then a prisoner in England, was under the custody of archbishop Arundel at Croydon palace, a charter of that king's being dated from thence, which palace the archbishop repaired, and built the guard chamber there, on which were his arms
 729, col. 1, l. 38, add—at Lambeth palace he built in 1434, the great tower at the west end of the chapel, usually called the Lollard's tower, at the expence of 278l.
 730, col. 2, l. 13, after nine years, add—during which time

- PAGE
 time he re-built the great hall at Croydon palace, on which his arms were carved 732, col. 1, l. 18, after Edward IV. add-having a few days before his coronation entertained him at Lambeth palace
 734, col. 2, l. 2, after Canterbury, add-in particular at Lambeth palace, he glazed the windows of the chapel richly with painted glass, containing the scripture history of the Old and New Testament, the repairing of which, in after times, was imputed, as a crime, to archbishop Laud. These windows were afterwards destroyed by the Puritans
 736, col. 2, l. 12, after Rochester bridge, add-and he was a principal contributor in 1519, to the church of Lambeth
 738, col. 2, l. 5, after (1), add-the Queen having furnished Lambeth palace for him, at her own expence, and she afterwards honoured him with her presence there several times
 739, col. 1, note (w), last line, add-covering a surface of 50 feet in height and 40 in breadth, they are of the white fort, and bear very fine fruit; the gallery was built at the same time
 740, col. 1, l. penult, after (b), read thus, in that and the two next lines—and having entertained Q. Elizabeth and her whole court for seven days at Croydon, he afterwards entertained her sumptuously in his palace at Canterbury, in her progress through this county in the year 1573, and the Queen's visits to him at Lambeth were afterwards frequent. Col. 1, note (a), l. penult, after York add-in the north isle of Lambeth church is an inscription for Margaret, wife of archbishop Parker, obt. 1570, and for her son Matthew, obt. 1521
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 20, after assigned—add to 741, col. 2, l. 22, after church, add-a reference (m). L. 25, after (k) add-under an altar tomb which he had erected for himself, the inscription on which was written by Dr Hodson. Note (i), col. 2, l. 4, after p. 689, add-the spot being marked by a marble slab and inscription, and archbishop Sancroft placed the old monument at the corner of the vestibule of the chapel, with an inscription said to have been written by himself. Add-at bottom of col. 2, a note (m). The archbishop's bowels were deposited near the remains of his wife, in the Howard chapel in Lambeth church, the inheritance of the house to which it belonged having been purchased
 742, col. 2, l. 28, after church, add-on the south side of the altar, where there is a handsome monument erected to his memory, having his effigies on it, lying at full length in his Doctor's robes
 743, col. 2, note (w), l. 4, for—Camden, read Camden
 744, col. 1, l. 25, after isle add-or bishop's chance!, having his effigies on it lying at length in his robes. His epitaph being composed by his chaplain, Dr Benjamin Chavier. His daughter married Wymond Braubury, esq; who died in 1612, and was buried in the same church. After l. 30, add-archbishop Whitgift resided frequently at Croydon, and more than once entertained Q. Elizabeth there, particularly in the year 1600. The archbishop's hospital at Croydon was begun in 1596, and the building was finished in 1599, and cost the archbishop 2700*l.* the lands with which it was endowed were 184*l.* 4*s.* per ann. the Warden's salary was 20*l.* per ann. and the other members 5*l.* each
 745, col. 2, l. 6 from bottom, after altar, add-where there is a memorial for him
 750, col. 1, l. 2, add-and among others, 10 guineas per ann. to put out poor boys apprentices
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 35, add-and the books of the library having been dispersed by the Fanatics, the archbishop made a demand of them, and they were restored to his successor, who prosecuted the claim 751, col. 2, l. 37. The tomb is of white marble, a fine piece of sculpture made by Latham, the city architect, and Bonne; it is supposed that the head was finished by an Italian artist

- PAGE
 754, col. 1, l. 9 from bottom, add-in the middle of which is a memorial for him. Anne his wife died on February 12, the same year
 Ibid. col. 2, l. 15, after Croydon, add-which he endowed with two farms of 53*l.* per ann. He gave the burial ground in the High-street in Lambeth, for the burials of the parishioners 755, col. 2, l. 10, add-et. 79. L. 11, after church, add-his tomb being in the chancel there. L. 25, after Croydon, add-in which he built the great gallery. L. 38, after 1731, add-she was buried at Lambeth, but on the archbishop's death, her coffin was taken up and carried to Croydon, and interred in the same vault there with him
 756, col. 1, l. 24, after 1747, add-on October 10, et. 74. and was buried in the vault in Croydon church, in the chancel of which his tomb remains. Col. 2, l. 43, after resided, add-which palace he had repaired and completely fitted up, on March 13, 1757, et. 64. L. 47, after him, add-though there is a tomb for him in the chancel there
 757, col. 2, l. 5, after 27, add-and there is a monument erected for him on the south side of the chancel there, the inscription on it being written by Dr. Lorr. Mary the archbishop's wife, died in 1779, et. 86, leaving two sons, who put up this monument in 1781; the archbishop died et. 65
 759, col. 1, l. 40, after over him, add-but there is a memorial for him there. He gave in his life time 500*l.* towards building a chapel at Stockwell
 760, col. 2, l. 5, for—1758, read 1768, and l. 7, for—five, read fifteen. L. 13. The archbishop died et. 70, and was buried in bishop Thirlby's grave, whose body was found entire, and there has been a monument erected to his memory on the south side of the chancel there, the inscription on the slab being much the same as that on his predecessor Hutton's, just by it. L. 27, for—attention, read alteration. L. 34, add-in 1779 the archbishop improved the palace with two additional rooms; the year after which, Lambeth palace became once more exposed to the fury of a mob. The infatuated rioters, amidst their zeal against Popery, had been prepossessed that the archbishop was a favourer of the Roman catholics, and on June the 6th, a party of several hundred persons, who had been previously assembled in St. George's fields, came to the palace, crying, No Popery. They knocked at the gate which was secured, and receiving no answer, they went away, saying, they would return in the evening; upon this alarm the archbishop was prevailed on to leave Lambeth, with his family, and after removed for greater safety, from place to place, and at last to Lord Hillsborough's at Westerham, where they remained till the disturbances were over. In the mean time, application was made for some soldiers to defend the palace, and a detachment of the guards was immediately sent, and centinels were placed on the tower and at all the avenues, and afterwards a party of the militia was ordered here, where they continued for some weeks, and kept strict garrison duty in the palace. The officers being entertained by the chaplains, and the soldiers having their meals in the great hall, where they remained till August 11, when they quitted the palace, all apprehensions having subsided
 761, col. 1, l. 10. The archbishop at his coming to the see, greatly improved the palace itself, and laid out the gardens and paddock, containing 13 acres, in the modern taste, at no inconsiderable expence. See an account of the archbishop's family, in the additions above, p. 603
 762, col. 1, l. 5, for—tot his, read to this 765, col. 1, l. 15, for—named, read framed
 769, col. 2, l. 2, for—solemnity, read solemnity 770, note (r), l. 4. for—to, read by 777, col. 1, l. 27, for—Bec et. read Becket
 787, col. 2, l. 7, after—suavissimis, dele the stop

F I N I S:

P L A T E S,

V O L. IV.

	PAGE
1. Coat of Arms, on the Title	I
2. Map of Cornilo and Bewsborough Hundred, &c.	ibid.
3. Ichnography of the antient Fortification at Coldred	19
4. Seal of Langdon Abbey	58
5. View of the Church, the Roman Pharos and the Entrance of Dover Castle	82
6. Plan of Dover Harbour in the reign of Queen Elizabeth	107
7. Seal of the Prior and Convent of St. Martin's Priory in Dover	108
8. View of the Ruins of the same Priory	134
9. Remains called Dane Pits near Ripple	165
10. View of Deal Castle	179
11. Map of Eastry Hundred, &c.	ibid.
12. View of the Mount and Church of Woodnesborough	190
13. Waldershare House	201
14. Barfreston Church	207
15. Figures in the Window of Knowlton Church	211
16. Knolton House	212
17. Effigies of Langley in Knolton Church	226
18. View of Eastry Church	246
19. The Roman Burial Ground at Ash	288
20. Map of the Hundred of Ringflow and Island of Thanet	ibid.
21. Chart of the Rutupian Ports, &c.	324
22. The Monument of Edila de Thorn	353
23. Roman Urn found at Margate	388
24. The Arms of the City of Canterbury, the Archbishopric, and of the Dean and Chapter	389
25. Plan of the City of Canterbury and the Suburbs	409
26. View of the Castle, the antient Worthgate and of the Dungeon Hill in Canterbury	414
27. View of Riding Gate	417
28. Chart of the Coasts of England and France in the time of the Romans	434
29. A Parhelion seen at Canterbury in 1696	494
30. The Font in St. Martin's church	495
31. Marble Stone on the Pavement of the same church	505
32. Ichnography of the Church of Canterbury built by Lanfranc, the Choir of Conrad and the Crypt as at the dissolution of the Priory in 1540	509
33. Eadwin's Drawing of the Cathedral and Priory	519
34. Plan of the Cathedral, Cloysters and other Buildings adjacent as in 1787	557
35. A View of Christ Church Gate	635
36. View of St. Gregories Priory in Canterbury	654
37. Drawing of the High Altar in St. Augustine's Monastery	658
38. East View of the Gateway of the same Monastery	659
39. Seal of the Convent	660
40. North View of the Ruins and of K. Ethelbert's Tower	695
41. Second Seal of the Priory of Christ Church in Canterbury	701
42. Ruins of St. Thomas's Chapel in Canterbury	720
43. Stone Coffin found in the Cathedral, and a Leaden Seal of Pope Gregory XI.	761
44. The Arms of his Grace Archbishop Moore

☞ THE MAP of the Hundreds of Worth, Newchurch, St. Martin's Pountney, Aloesbridge and Langport, in which are contained Romney, Walland and Denge Marshes, with the Towns and Liberties of New Romney and Lid, is given, as promised, with this volume, to be inserted in volume III, p. 421.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
GRADUATE LIBRARY

DATE DUE

1973
-------------	--	--

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

3 9015 03958 7186

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
LIBRARY

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
LIBRARY

Digitized by Google

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

3 9015 03958 7186

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
LIBRARY

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
LIBRARY

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN
LIBRARY

