INTRODUCTION.

THE "Foreign" Accounts rendered at the Exchequer consist of accounts other than the normal accounts for the several counties rendered by the Sheriff, and in consequence comprise a large number of very various kinds of accounts, covering almost the whole field of executive and financial administration. These accounts were enrolled upon the Great Roll of the Exchequer, commonly called the Pipe Roll, and also upon the Chancellor's Roll, of the year in which the accountant submitted his account for audit, a date which is often some years later than the date of the termination of the account.

From about the 6th year of Henry III. to the 16th of Edward II., these accounts are scattered among the normal county accounts, although there is an increasing tendency to collect them on certain membranes called Rotuli Comptorum and to place these at the end of the whole roll for the year. As the business of the Exchequer increased, the normal method of audit and enrolment was found to be inconvenient and cumbrous when applied to the Foreign Accounts; and by ordinances of the Exchequer made in the 16th, 17th, and 19th years of Edward II. (Red Book III. pp. 860 and 930,) a separate system of audit was established and the 'pipes,' or membranes, of the Sheriff's normal county accounts and those of the Foreign Accounts were ordered to be made up into separate rolls. Some system of the kind appears, however, to have been introduced for the more voluminous classes of accounts at an earlier date. Thus we find a separate roll for the account of the Keeper of the Household for the period 42-45 Henry III., and similar rolls of aids, customs and subsidies from the reign of Edward I. The separate enrolment of the accounts of all the Wardrobes appears to have been instituted systematically in the 9th year of Edward II., and that of the Escheators' accounts in the 7th year of that King. Separate rolls were also made for the special accounts of the Contrariants' Lands, and of those of the Knights Templars in the reign of Edward II., of the Queen's lands at the periods during which those revenues were in the King's hands, from Edward II. to Edward IV.; of the expenses of the Agincourt expedition in the reign of Henry V.; of certain purveyance accounts during the reign of Edward III.; and of accounts of ulnage from the reign of Edward II. to that of Henry VII. inclusive.

Notwithstanding the ordinances of 16, 17 and 19 Edward II., the 'pipes' of Foreign Accounts, though separately audited, continued to be placed in the roll containing the Sheriff's normal accounts until the 42nd year of Edward III., when a regular series of separate rolls of Foreign Accounts was formed, extending from that year to comparatively modern times.

There is an earlier roll of Foreign Accounts of the reign of Henry III., consisting apparently of the detached foreign membranes of the first five years of that reign, which is referred to in the ancient Repertory of Foreign Accounts as 'Rotulus de diversis computis.'

The present List enumerates the Foreign Accounts from the reign of Henry III. to that of Richard III. inclusive, enrolled on (1) the Pipe Rolls, (2) the Chancellor's Rolls, (3) the Enrolled Accounts relating to the Wardrobe and Household, (4) the Enrolled Accounts of the Escheator, and (5) Separate Rolls of Foreign Accounts.

The following abbreviations are used in the reference column:—

P. = Pipe Roll.

C. = Chancellor's Roll.

E. (W. & H.) = Enrolled Accounts, Wardrobe, and Household.

E. (Esch.) = Enrolled Accounts, Escheators.

F. = Foreign Roll.

The Enrolled Accounts relating to the Contrariants' Lands, Templars' Lands, and Queen's Lands have not been included in this List, as the original documents from which these were transcribed have been already described in the List of Original Ministers' Accounts (Lists and Indexes No. V.).

Certain other Enrolled Accounts relating to special subjects, such as Aids and Subsidies, Customs, Purveyance and Ulnage, are also omitted from this list.

Accounts where the accountant answers that he has received no issues are as a rule omitted; and in the class headed "Sheriffs' seizures" it has not been thought needful to give more than the first account enrolled, of which the subsequent accounts are merely repetitions.

The List has been compiled by Mr. C. G. Crump, of the Public Record Office, under the general supervision of Mr. S. R. Scargill-Bird.
