“To trace lineage,—to love and record the names and actions of those without whom we could never have been, who moulded and made us what we are, and whom the very greatest of us all must know to have propagated influences into his being, which must subtly but certainly act upon his whole conduct in this world—all this is implied in ancestry and the love of it, and is natural and good.”—Westminster Review, July, 1868.

THE AUTHOR DEDICATES THESE

MEMORIALS.

AND HE EARNESTLY DESIRES AND HOPES—

That

EACH ONE MAY OBTAIN ALL THE NECESSARIES AND LUXURIES OF THIS WORLD, WHICH CAN BE SECURED

BY TEMPERANCE, HONESTY, JUSTICE, AND CHARITY—

BY SAGACITY, INDUSTRY, ENERGY, PERSEVERANCE, AND ECONOMY, IN LIFE'S BUSINESS PURSUITS;

AND ALL THE HAPPINESS WHICH RESULTS

FROM STRUGGLING WITH ERROR WITHIN, AND TEMPTATION TO ERROR WITHOUT—WITH THE TRIALS AND VICISSITUDES, WITH THE FORTUNES AND MISFORTUNES OF LIFE;—
FROM OVERCOMING EVIL AND SURMOUNTING DIFFICULTIES IN EVERY STRUGGLE; AND FROM THE PERFORMANCE OF EVERY DUTY IN EVERY STATION:

That

EVERY ONE WILL STRIVE WITH ALL POSSIBLE CARE AND ENERGY TO DO WHATEVER CAN BE DONE—AT ALL TIMES AND UNDER ALL CIRCUMSTANCES—

TO PRESERVE AND TO TRANSMIT THE NAME, UNSTAINED BY CRIME OR ERROR, FROM GENERATION TO GENERATION:

That

AS ONE GENERATION PASSETH AWAY, AND ANOTHER COMETH, EACH MAY ARISE TO A HIGHER AND A STILL HIGHER AND NOBLER POSITION, THAN ITS PREDECESSOR,
IN HEALTH, IN MORALS, IN EDUCATION, IN WEALTH, IN HONOR, AND IN ALL ITS PERSONAL ENJOYMENTS AND SOCIAL RELATIONS; AND CONTRIBUTE MORE AND MORE TO THE IMPROVEMENT AND HAPPINESS OF MANKIND,— MAKING THE WORLD BETTER NOT WORSE FOR THEIR HAVING LIVED:

And That

EVERY SOUL MAY BE PURIFIED AND RESTORED TO THE IMAGE OF ITS MAKER
BY TRUE RELIGION;

AND SO BE PREPARED FOR HIGHER AND MORE PERFECT ENJOYMENTS, WHEN IT ASCENDS UNTO GOD WHO GAVE IT;

AND THUS HAVE A NAME WRITTEN IN THE BOOK OF LIFE, AND WORTHY TO LIVE, WHEN THE PRESENT BODY SHALL RETURN TO THE EARTH AS IT WAS,
AND WHEN THE PLACES THAT KNOW IT NOW
MAY KNOW IT NO MORE FOREVER.

INTRODUCTION.

I. Origin of the Work; and of the Name.

THIS work originated in a desire of the author—a desire in which he will venture to assume that his kindred among the living participate—to acquire information concerning the ancestry and lineage of the Shattuck family. The blood that courses through our veins had flowed through a long succession of generations before it was parted into the drops which make us akin to each other, as well as to those who preceded us on these scenes of life. Who were these, our family progenitors? What were their names? When, and where, and how did they live? What were their occupations? Were their means of subsistence scanty or ample? What were their characteristics, physical, mental, and moral? What position in society did they sustain? What were the incidents of their lives, by which their fortunes and their destiny were influenced? What marriage alliances did they form? And, what influence did these alliances exert upon themselves and their children? Inquiries like these have arisen almost instinctively in the mind of the author; and he has considered it an enterprise worthy of attention to search for the facts by which answers and solutions might be obtained.

All of the author's American ancestors, both paternal and maternal, from their origin in this country, through six or seven generations, were natives or early settlers of Middlesex County, Massachusetts. While collecting materials for the History of Concord and the adjoining towns—the central section of that county—which was published in 1835, he met with many facts, incidents, and traditions, relating to the personal history of these ancestors; and from those materials a brief, imperfect sketch, comprised in a few pages, and relating principally to the direct line of his own descent, was prepared. It was intended for private inspection only, and not for publication. This manuscript has, however, been seen by several persons; and he has been repeatedly requested to print it for the use of the family. In 1853, he consented to yield to this solicitation, provided such further information could be obtained as would enable him to make a work more satisfactory to himself. The whole genealogy of the family has since been reinvestigated; and inquiries have been extended to very many branches, with whose history he was unacquainted, and the result is here presented. The few manuscript pages of the original memoirs have been superseded by an entire new work, so largely increased as to become a volume.

The means of information for a work like this are personal inquiry and oral communications; traditions and recollections of elderly persons; family registers and private papers; inscriptions on monuments and grave stones; public records and documents—society, parish, church, town, county, and state, and of literary and other associations; deeds, wills, and other papers, relating to the transfer and settlement of estates, usually, though not always, found in the offices of the Register of Deeds and Register of Probate; correspondence with living individuals; and works and papers in manuscript, or already printed. These extensive and authentic sources of information have been examined; and they have, as far as practicable, been laid under contribution for these Memorials.

It has been found that traditions relating to the early history of families, like those relating to other matters, are generally vague and uncertain; and such as relate to the same person or event, when given by different narrators, do not always agree. The stories of elderly people should certainly be obtained, but they cannot be depended upon alone as positive evidence of a fact, for they are sometimes incorrect, and are useful only as imperfect indications, which may lead to the truth by further investigation, and by a comparison with other evidence. A large majority of families and individuals leave no memorial, either upon record or in tradition, that they have lived; or, if any be left, it is too indistinct to identify their history, descent, or connections. Though family registers are of obvious utility and importance, yet such registers are made and preserved by few families, and good ones by a still less number. This omission to perform a duty may have arisen from the want of a proper method for making the entries, from negligence, or from some other cause. It has been an immemorial custom, where family records are made at all, to enter them on blank leaves, inserted between the two Testaments in the Bible; but, even in this imperfect form, they have been very much neglected, and comparatively few such records of past generations are now in existence.* For the first hundred years after the settlement of New England the public registration of births, marriages, and deaths, was more generally made than for the last hundred years; and though many of the records have been destroyed by accident, or by the carelessness or negligence of those into whose custody they were placed, yet family history can generally be more fully obtained in the earlier than in the later period. It is difficult, if not impossible, to compile a genealogy from the public records for the last seventy-five years; and future investigators will find this period a hiatus difficult to get over. "An impassable gulf will yawn between those ancient and modern times, spanned only by the treacherous and uncertain bridge of conjecture." The introduction of the new system of registration within the last ten years, if faithfully carried out, will henceforward obviate the difficulty, and render the history of families originating hereafter more easily obtained. This measure will do more for genealogy than all others combined. Sometimes, when public records exist in the offices of town clerks or in churches, they are found to be erroneous. Their errors often arise from the imperfectness of the

* This custom probably originated among those who regarded such records sacred, like the book in which they were contained. Though this may have been a reason for the custom, yet it seems to us that they are now out of place in such an inclosure. In earlier times, when Bibles were more rare than at present, and when they were regarded with greater veneration, and preserved with more care as sacred treasures, it might have been more proper, but they have now become so common that no one more than another can be considered by way of distinction the Family Bible, and as peculiarly the proper one for a Family Register. Besides, they cannot contain the proper forms for the entries; and by frequent use they are exposed to injury and loss. The better method is to have the family record kept in a separate volume by itself, constructed upon such a plan, and containing such blank forms, as will admit of entries being amplified and extended according to the taste and means of information of different individuals. A more comprehensive signification has been given to a perfect register of this kind than the mere entry of the names of one's own immediate family and the dates of their births, marriages, and deaths. These should form an indispensable part of it; but information should, as far as possible, be included in regard to other families immediately connected, and particularly those in the lines of descent from the earliest known ancestor; and they should embrace such facts, incidents and traditions as would illustrate their lives and characters, and the natural history of the race to which they belong. Such a Family Register, designed for general use, has been prepared by the author of these Memorials.

information communicated to the recorder, or from his own carelessness; at other times, though rarely, from a criminal design either to slander the dead, or to falsify statements regarding the living. Frequently deeds are not publicly recorded, notwithstanding such record is necessary to secure a perfect title to the property. A majority of estates are settled without the aid of the Probate Court, and of course the papers relating to them are not public, and if preserved at all can be found only in private collections. Sometimes, when an estate is entered for settlement in the probate office, papers which are very useful to illustrate some points of a person's history, or that of his family, are not recorded with his will, nor with the administrator's accounts, but are found in the files of the court. The author has addressed letters to every one of his name in this country, so far as his knowledge extended, whose history was not previously known to him, or which was not obtained in some other way. From a very large proportion he has received prompt, full, and accurate replies. From others he has obtained less satisfactory information. A very few have made no answer at all, even after repeated solicitation.

The author of genealogical memorials has to rely much upon the assistance and coöperation of others; and he must take the facts as communicated to him, or as presented upon record. Manuscripts, often badly written, have to be deciphered; and all statements received have to be carefully examined and compared with each other; and where errors are discovered in oral or written communications or traditions, or in town, church, or other records, or when one statement or authority conflicts with another, as is often the fact, the author is compelled to make corrections, or to adopt that which seems most probable. In copying dates mistakes are often made. A correspondent was furnished with an abstract of the information which he had communicated relating to his family; and in return he expressed surprise at an error which he discovered. On examination, however, it was found that the error was his own. He had given the wrong date in his first communication. Another writes thus, "I do not know that this information is all correct, but I guess it is near enough for your purpose"! It is believed that few of our correspondents have been of this character. The author has made it a maxim of life, that whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well; and he always regrets to let a work pass out of his hands partly finished. The cases of imperfection, error, and wrong statement that have been presented have embarrassed the progress of the work, and very much increased the labor and expense of obtaining, comparing, and classifying the facts. They are, however, not peculiar to this work, but are presumed to be incidental generally to all enterprises of this kind. Every printed book, too, is liable to editorial and typographical errors; and these Memorials do not claim to be exempt from this liability. Among such a large mass of figures, names, dates, and other facts, it would be strange indeed if errors did not sometimes occur. It would, perhaps, be impossible to avoid them. Completeness and perfection cannot, of course, be attained in relation to currents of life which, in some branches, are ceasing to flow, or which in others are disclosing new beings, or changing the relations of those already in existence, bringing to light new facts and new matters proper to be mentioned. Under all these circumstances the author does not claim to present a work free from imperfections. He does claim, however, to have used all his industry, sagacity and care, and to have spared no labor or expense to render the Memorials as full and as accurate as possible. And it is probable that they are, in the main, nearly correct. As many other matters press upon him, requiring attention, he feels compelled to submit the manuscript to the printer, imperfect though it may be, rather than wait longer for further corrections and additions. Those who are not noticed, or whose families and connections are imperfectly given, or not given at all, must attribute it, in some instances at least, to the imperfection of the information they have communicated, or to their own entire neglect. They should look kindly upon the author's labors, and not criticise too harshly, for some of the defects or blemishes may perhaps be justly chargeable to themselves.

In these Memorials appear notices of the birth of many individuals, about whom no records or traditions have been discovered by us, by which their history, or that of their posterity, if any have existed, could be traced. Some also may have been born whose names are not included with the others of their family here given. Perhaps, however, some of these undescribed persons, should they see these pages, may here find the information by which their own connection with our original progenitor, or some of his descendants or kindred, may be ascertained. We most deeply regret that our ancestors left so few memorials of themselves for the gratification and improvement of their successors. Many facts and incidents of their history, if now known, would greatly interest us. They were, however, too much employed, or did not sufficiently anticipate the desires of their posterity, to place upon record a description of their persons, or of the vicissitudes of their lives—the toils they suffered, the trials through which they passed, or the triumphs they achieved. These can hardly be conceivable by us now, and must forever remain unknown. The few elementary facts which they actually did leave, are fast fading away; and the difficulty of ascertaining them, always great, is constantly increasing. We have endeavored to gather up the few scattered fragments of their history existing in the various sources of information here indicated, fully believing that the work has already been delayed too long, and if not done soon will be impossible to be done at all. We have arranged the information in a systematic and enduring form, accessible and intelligible to all. We most earnestly urge upon existing generations to spare their posterity this regret and this labor, in regard to themselves. The information existing in living minds should now be committed to writing. Every branch of the family, and all persons of the name, and their kindred of other names, before it is too late, should gather up the events of their own history, and trace out and ascertain, as far as possible, their precise connection and relationship to some individual mentioned in these Memorials. If errors are discovered in the accounts here given they should be corrected; and such additional facts, incidents and traditions relating to any person, as may be known, and are worthy of preservation, should be carefully written out on blank leaves inserted in the end of the volume, or in a separate Family Register, which should be kept by every family. And this history should be continued onwards, year after year, from one generation to another. Each one of us should consider it a sacred duty to perform this labor. It is due to our ancestors, and to our posterity. Those that come after us will hold us responsible for its discharge. Difference in wealth and social position, or any disrespect we may entertain from any cause towards any one, will not excuse us. Let us leave to our kindred and to our descendants a memorial of our own existence, and an example worthy of imitation. What legacy could we transmit to our children and our children's children which they would more highly prize ?

To prepare and print a work of this kind involves no inconsiderable labor and expense. It cannot be undertaken as a mere money-making affair, for the demand for it must necessarily be limited to the families of the name, and to their immediate connections. Sometimes liberal subscriptions are obtained towards the cost of such a book ; or it is purchased generally and freely by those interested. At other times, hardly enough are sold to pay the expense of printing, leaving nothing for the cost of collecting the information and of preparing it for the press. It would be a matter of deep regret and mortification to find that a sordid, unworthy motive had induced any one to withhold information from a work prompted by so kind and friendly intentions. The obligations of the contributors and of the author are mutual. If he who furnishes information is entitled to consideration, he who prepares it for the press, and pays the expense of the printed page upon which it appears, has, to say the least, equal claims. The privilege of having an account of a family inserted in the book is generally considered more than an equivalent for the labor of furnishing the facts to the editor. If any one should so far misapprehend the author's motives in this enterprise, as to consider them mercenary, it is hoped that a perusal of the work itself will correct such an error. Though the laborer is worthy of his hire, yet he would not have undertaken it, unless moved to it by other considerations. He desired to make a book which would be acceptable to those for whom it is especially designed ; interesting to be read and referred to ; and useful in suggesting motives to elevate and improve personal character. And he feels some assurance that he has succeeded. Should it be approved and generally sought for by those interested ; and should it be prized, preserved, and have the influence desired, he will be satisfied. But whatever may be the success of the work, or the pecuniary result of the undertaking, he feels conscious of a sincere desire not to wrong any individual, but to promote the honor and respectability of the name, and to confer a real substantial benefit upon the family. He will hope that his intentions and his labors will meet the approbation of his kindred; and that they will all regard with favor his efforts to perpetuate the history of the race. He will at least have the satisfaction of introducing to each other many individuals not hitherto known as cousins or relatives; and of rescuing for preservation the fact, that the persons here named existed, which might otherwise have been forgotten and passed into oblivion. Most persons soon become, in the ordinary history of human life, as if they had never been. The announcement that "he is dead," may create a temporary sensation, but it is soon forgotten. In a few years no one can be found who can say, "I remember him." If otherwise, the cases will be exceptional ones. These more enduring records will be an evidence that we have lived.

This book owes much of its fulness and value to those individuals who have favored our purpose and zealously aided in furnishing information. Posterity will unite with us in feelings of gratitude for their labors. All contributors cannot be mentioned, but it would be injustice to omit special acknowledgments to Geo. O. Shattuck of Andover, who furnished the principal part of the information concerning the posterity of Joseph Shattuck; to Noah Shattuck of Groton; to Lovell Shattuck of Pepperell; to Alvan Shattuck of Hinsdale, N. H., and to Sylvester Judd of Northampton. Some other contributions will be particularly acknowledged in the body of the work.

The name of Shattuck is of doubtful origin. Whether it was assumed as a whole in nearly its present form, or whether it is compounded of parts of other names; or whether it had any specific meaning; or what changes it underwent antecedent to the date of its earliest history known to us, is now entirely hypothetical. Its proper orthography is S h a t t u c k; and its proper pronunciation as if written Shat'-uk, with the accent on the first syllable. This spelling and pronunciation should be insisted upon, and every deviation from it avoided. Few names, however, have been presented in a greater variety of written forms. This has been occasioned, probably, by the different modes of its pronunciation, and by a representation of its phonetic sounds by letters. Sometimes it is written nearly in conformity with the true orthography and pronunciation, as Shatac, Shattauck, Shathooke, Shathauk, and Shatoc, Shattock, Shattocke. At other times the pronunciation is varied by substituting the sounds of d for t, and o for u, and is written Shaddock, Shadock, Shadoc, and Chaddock, Chaddock, Chadock, Chadoc, &c. It is also written Shaddic, Chadwick, Chadwyke, Chadioke, Chadioc. S h a t t o c k e was the spelling in use when our first American ancestors emigrated to this country, and it is still in use in some of the municipal registers in England.

Chaddock, or Chaddock, as a distinct name, has been occasionally, though rarely borne, by persons from the first settlement of New England. Winthrop, in 1643, makes mention of "one Captain John Chaddock, son of him that was governor of Bermuda, a godly gentleman." There was a Thomas Chaddock of Newbury, who married Sarah Walcott in 1674. Elias Chaddock (sometimes written Shaddock and Shadock) died in Windsor, Conn., in 1676, leaving a daughter Hannah, and a widow Hannah who married, in 1678, Benjamin Egelson. James Chaddock was paid, in 1676, by the governor at Hartford, £5 "for his services as commissioner, besides his soldier's pay." Samuel and John Shaddock were taxed in Boston in 1695. What the true name in these cases was, whether Chaddock, Shattuck, or Chadwick, or whether they were, or were not, all one name, is uncertain. Rev. Calvin Chaddock, who was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1791, and afterwards lived in Rochester and Hanover, and died in Virginia, (see Barry's History of Hanover, pp. 70, 93, 263,) was father of E. N. Chaddock, once of New Bedford, and now of Boston. His mother, Malatiah, died in the latter place, October 5, 1854, aged 84. The father of Rev. Calvin was Joseph Chaddock of Brookfield, and his grandfather is said to have been of Reading, and his original name is supposed to have been Chadwick. David "Shaddock," probably a descendant of this Joseph, now of Buffalo, was the son of Isaac Shaddock, and born in Boston.

Chadwick has sometimes been regarded another form of the name of Shattuck, and as originating from the same source. This may have been true as to its origin in England, but it has ever been borne by separate and distinct families from the first settlement of this country. There was a Charles, a John, and a Thomas Chadwick, in Watertown, sons of Charles Chadwick, and contemporary with our ancestor, the first William Shattuck, and, as far as can be ascertained, not his relatives. Their names were, however, occasionally written both ways in the records, the one for the other. Entries of "John Chadwick," April 7th, and "John Shadduck," June 4th, 1685, relating to the same person, are found upon the records of Watertown. The entry of "Mary Shattuck, daughter of John and Mary Shattuck, born the 14th of December, 1678," should be Mary Chadwick, daughter of John and Sarah Chadwick. There was a Samuel Chadwick (sometimes written Shattuck,) in Woburn, in 1675. He had children who lived in Reading, and he was probably the ancestor of Rev. Calvin Chadduck, before mentioned. Joseph Chadwick, who married Mary Jenkins, in Malden, in 1732, is supposed to have been his grandson. Others of this name are found elsewhere in New England. A curious illustration of the variations in its orthography appears upon the records of Worcester County. In 1765, "Henry Shaddick" was appointed administrator on the estate of his father "Joseph Chadwick." In 1767, "John Shaddick" of Worcester, executed a will, mentioning his son "Joseph Chadwick;" while in 1787, "David Shattuck," of the same family, purchased lands. The true name of these cases was undoubtedly Chadwick, but it is curious that such variations should appear in official documents, nearly contemporary, relating to the same family. Thomas P. Shaddick, now of Boston, whose father lives in Middletown, Conn., probably originated from the Chadwicks.

The name of Shattuck, though not very rare, cannot be considered as very common. It occasionally appeared upon the records of Essex County, in connection with Samuel Shattuck and his posterity, from 1641 to 1735; but it afterwards became extinct in that line. It, however, has appeared in that county relating to Joseph Shattuck of Andover, a different branch of the family, and has continued there for the last hundred and twenty-five years. In Watertown, Middlesex County, the residence of our first American ancestor, it often occurred for the first hundred years after its settlement, but for the last hundred years is not found upon the town records. Three of the grandsons of the first William settled in Groton. Descendants of one of them have ever lived in that town, as now constituted. Descendants of the other two were the principal settlers of that part of Groton which is now comprised within the town of Pepperell. This territory, originally a part of Groton, was incorporated, in 1742, as a separate parish, and, in 1753, as a town. The Shattucks and their connections were the largest original proprietors, and owned the largest part of this town. The name is now and ever has been, more common there than any other. In 1761, of the 106 families then in Pepperell, 11, or nearly 11½ per cent., bore the name of Shattuck. In 1853, of 426 legal voters, 36, or nearly 8½ per cent., bore the same name. Rev. Mr. Emerson, the first minister of Pepperell, is said to have remarked, that "he sometimes regretted that he did not marry a Shattuck, for he should then have been related to the whole town"! The name does not appear in the Indices of the Suffolk Records prior to 1800, excepting in connection with William Shattuck, then a distinguished merchant of Boston, or his family. A mortgage deed to Josiah Shattuck of Cambridge occurs, as the only exception. William, just mentioned, is the only instance which appeared in the Boston Directory prior to 1800. Dr. George Cheyne Shattuck is the next in the Directory, and first appeared in 1809, then the only representative of the name. In 1830, five of the name are found in the Directory; in 1835, six; in 1840, ten; in 1845, nineteen; and in 1850, twenty-one. It has not often appeared in the Directories of other cities. In that of New York, for 1853, one only is found; two in Philadelphia, none in Baltimore, two in Buffalo, and two in Cincinnati. It now occurs, however, in nearly every state in the Union. From a statement, presently to be exhibited, it is supposed that four or five thousand of all ages and sexes are now existing who bear the name, all of whom, probably, originated from William Shattuck, the Memorials of whose posterity constitute the principal part of this work.

Thirteen of the name of Shattuck had graduated at the different colleges in New England prior to 1853. Six at Harvard—Benjamin, 1709; Stephen, 1756; Benjamin, 1765; Benjamin, 1797; George C., 1831; George O., 1851. Five at Dartmouth—Caleb, 1794; Nathaniel, 1801; George C., 1803; Cortland W.

1840; Jonathan C., 1842. One at Burlington—Erasmus D., 1848. And one at Middletown—David O. One by the name of Chadduck, at Dartmouth—Calvin, 1791. Five by the name of Chadwick, one at Harvard—Benjamin, 1770; two at Dartmouth—George, 1825; William, 1830; one at Yale—Joseph, 1821; and one at Bowdoin—Edmund, 1840. Dr. George C. Shattuck left a legacy to Harvard College, which has been set apart to constitute four scholarships, and denominated "Shattuck Scholarships." The name is therefore likely to be perpetuated in that institution.

Few attempts have been made to ascertain the European origin and history of the family. Our design has been to trace our ancestors back to that heroic and noble band of Puritan emigrants who first settled New England, and gave it its distinctive character; and to exhibit the different generations of their descendants, Americanized and modified by the circumstances of their existence, and by the peculiar institutions they have aided in founding, and with which they have been connected or surrounded. This has been considered a sufficient gratification for the labor required. The difficulties of authenticating a connection between an American and English ancestor are so great, that we prefer to leave the problem unsolved, rather than to assume any relationship from any cause unsupported by conclusive evidence.* A tradition has existed that the family were of German origin; but if such be the fact, which is not improbable, it must have existed there in a very remote antiquity. It may have been, and probably was, among the Angles and Saxons, or Anglo-Saxons of the northerly part of Continental Europe, who peopled

* After this was written we received the valuable work of the Rev. Joseph Hunter of London on "The Founders of New Plymouth." In a note (p. 6.) the author desires, "in the most friendly spirit, to offer a hint or two to our brethren in New England," and says:—"No genealogy is of the least value that is not supported by sufficient evidence from records or other contemporary writing. The mere possession of a surname which coincides with that of an English family is no proof of connection with that family. Claims of alliance founded on this basis are not the legitimate offspring of laborious genealogical inquiry, but of self love, and the desire to found a reputation for ancestral honor where no such honor is really due. Search out the history of your ancestors by all means: but claim no more than you can show to belong to you. As far as you can prove you are safe, and you are doing a work that is good: but the assumption of the armorial distinctions of eminent English families who happen to bear the same surname with yourselves is not to be approved, and still less to claim alliance with the ancient nobility or gentry of England. When it can be proved, well and good: but no terms can be too severe to reprobate it where there is no proof, or even where there is no show of probability. It may lead to unfounded claims, not only to honor, but to property." And he proceeds to state that Winslow, Brewster, and Bradford are the only passengers in the Mayflower who have been traced to an English birth place. Guided by these wise suggestions, some of our genealogical structures would have to be repaired or remodeled before they would become safe dwelling-places.

England and America with their most shrewd and energetic races. If we adopted terms in common use in our day, we might denominate ourselves Americanized-Anglo-Saxons.

A friend of ours, in making researches for other purposes, incidentally met with some facts, from which it appears that he found the name in Old England more than a hundred years before the settlement of New England. In the year 1525 Samuel Shattocke and Alice Shattocke of Tolland, in Somersetshire, appear upon the Rolls which contain the Assessments of the Subsidies granted by Parliament. At Wells, in that county, are deposited the will of John Shattocke of Beckenaller, proved in 1533, which mentions son Thomas and relative John Grant; and the will of Alexander Shattocke of Bagborough, proved in 1588, which mentions sons Alexander, Robert, and William, daughters Joan and Dorothy, wife Susan, executrix, brother Richard Shattocke, and witnessed by George Shattocke and others. In the Subsidy Rolls for 1597, John Shattuck was assessed for lands, and William Shattocke and Joanna Shattuck of Burland were assessed for goods; Henry Shattocke of Bishops for lands; Isota Shattocke, widow of Elworthy, for lands; Thomas Shattocke of Cumberland, for lands; Robert Shattock of Norton, for goods; Henry Shattocke of Westminster, for goods. In the same Rolls for 1628, Humphrey Shattocke of the same place was assessed for lands. And in 1642, Philip Shattuck of Taunton, Thomas Shattocke of Kingston, the widow Shattocke of Staplegrove, and Henry Shattocke of Norton, were assessed for the same purpose. In the parish register of St. Lawrence in Reading, Berkshire, are found the baptism of the following children of William Shattuck:—William, May 3, 1628; Susan, Sept. 14, 1632; Elizabeth, April 29, 1635. Also, the marriage of Samuel Shattuck and Mary Snell, July 19, 1628; and the burial of Elizabeth Shattuck, Dec. 31, 1636. The name might probably be discovered in other counties, by an examination of the records.* These facts show that the family were owners of lands and other property—evidences of respectability at that time, in that country. The name is still found in some of the counties above mentioned, and in other parts of England. John Shattocke, whose name appears in the London Directory for 1824, and George Shattuck, in that of 1841, are the only instances of its occurrence in those years in that city.

* A Catalogue of a London Bookseller, for 1854, advertises a manuscript almanac, described as "very cleverly written, in exact imitation of printing type, a work of untiring labor, the whole interspersed throughout with verses on the months, chronology, &c. 8vo, neat, £1 1s." Under the title, "Calendarium Astronomicum; a Compleat Ephemeris of the Celestial Motions, for the year of Christ, 1704, with drawings of the Eclipses, 1703 to 1763, exactly calculated from "Astronomina Carolina," by JOHN CHATTOCK, Schoolmaster of Castle Bromwick, in Warwickshire."

In printed works we often find mentioned names which it has been supposed were once synonymous with ours. William Chaddock was one of the "pilgrims from England to Rome," in 1582. Joseph Chaddock, Esq. married Mary Chetham of Derbyshire, in 1703. Thomas Chaddock was of Congleton, in 1831. And this name occasionally, though rarely, occurs elsewhere. In 1570 there was a Chittock who owned a manor in Norfolkshire, but whether this name had an origin similar to the other names we have mentioned is conjectural.

Chadwick is a name of great antiquity in England. In Burke's Landed Gentry, and in his Commoners, (Vol. III, p. 444,) it is stated that William de Chadwyke, said to have been the first of the name upon record, was born about the year 1355, five hundred years ago, and was living in 1413. He had sons William and John de Chadwyke, and perhaps other children. There was also a Nicholas de Chadwyke, nearly contemporary with the above William, but whether a relative or descendant is not positively stated. He was born in the time of Edward III., and died before 1443. He also had a son, John de Chadwick. Alliances were formed between these and other patrician families; and from them have descended a long line of nobility and gentry, some of whom are still existing in England. There were other descendants, who were not entitled to armorial bearings. The family were possessed of large estates in the hamlet of Chadwick, in Lancashire, and elsewhere.

Chadioke is another ancient name, which bears some resemblance to Shattuck, and which, it is conjectured, might have been originally the same. There was a Sir John de Chydeoke (sometimes written Chideoke, and Chadeoke,) who was one of the Barons of Somersetshire, as early as the thirteenth century; and who, in the time of Henry VII., was described as one of the "noble families related to the Blood Royal." From him were descended, in male or female lines, many families of great dis-

tion, and of great wealth, as well as others in the untitled ranks.*

History shows that as great and even greater alterations have been made in process of time in the orthography of names, as would be required to change Chaddock, Chadwick, and Chadioke into Shattuck. And an assumption that some of the families by the name of Shattuck, in Somersetshire and elsewhere, already mentioned, and even our own American ancestor, William Shattuck, were descended from William de Chadwyke, or John de Chadioke, might not be farther from the truth than are some genealogical deductions we have seen published. And yet such an assumption is not proved; and it rests upon probabilities too feeble to be claimed with entire confidence. If any portion of noble blood, derived from these sources, courses in our veins, it is imperceptible, and is too small to remain uncontrolled by larger portions derived from other sources.

II. General Views of the Subject.

It may be asked, Why are these Memorials printed? What is there in the history of this family to render it worthy of being handed down to posterity upon the more enduring records of the press? We answer, nothing which does not belong in common to many other families. We deem it right and proper, however, that such Memorials should be prepared and printed concerning every family, for its own use and benefit, whatever may be its circumstances and social position. And when it is announced upon the title-page as "printed for the family" only, not "published," it is a matter in which the public have no right to interfere, or to criticise and censure if prepared in an unsatisfactory manner. No one, however, can have a stronger dislike than the author to make any such history, whether the family be of patrician or plebeian origin or rank, a cause of family pride, or of egotistic, ostentatious display. Nothing can be more distasteful or absurd. We have had a higher purpose in view. We have desired to preserve an accurate record of persons, classed in generations and families, to assist in obtaining a knowledge of ancestry; and to illustrate the history of men as they are, and as they have been in older times; and of the race to which we belong, and of our own constitution and organization, in particular. From these facts we hope to derive philosophical and moral lessons, which may be useful in practical life. Though there may not be in the history and condition of the Shattuck family much to boast of, yet there is as little, perhaps, as in most other families equally numerous, to be ashamed of. Though they have not been exempt from the common frailties, imperfections and errors of human nature, yet very rarely, indeed, has the name appeared in the criminal calendar. In one instance, which will claim our notice, the offence was rather a political than a moral one. While few have been eminently rich, few have been public paupers.* They have generally belonged to the well-to-do, the neither-riches-nor-poverty class, born happily because they were not born rich, and blessed with the necessity of laboring for their subsistence, and of being the architects of their own fortune, and with a capacity and a disposition to perform what that necessity required. Their industry, energy, and perseverance, and their power of physical endurance under labor, and even under hardship and suffering, will compare favorably with that of any other race. A majority of them have been farmers and mechanics. Some have possessed the restless, changeable character, peculiar to many of the New England population, and have thrown aside their usual occupations, and followed new employments and new pursuits, and in new localities, as the exigencies of life seemed to require. They have formed a fair average specimen of the honest, independent yeomanry of New England—that class of men and women who make the foundation strength and energy of the republic; and who can be relied upon, generally, for its peace, stability, and progress; and, in cases of emergency, for its protection and preservation. They have, in the main, been independent thinkers, stable in their opinions, not afraid to express them on any proper occasion, and unwilling to submit to oppression or unreasonable dictation. Many of the name, possessing strong common sense and great energy of character have existed ; yet too little attention, perhaps, has been paid by the family, generally, to intellectual cultivation and improvement. There have been among them wise and good men in each generation ; but comparatively few have been elevated to posts of social power and influence, or exalted and distinguished in the world's esteem ; nor have they been conspicuous as heroes, statesmen, or men of letters, in the public historical annals of the country. This may be owing partly to the accidental circumstances of their lives, which may have prevented or may not have favored the development of native talent, or called it forth upon great emergencies in public life ; or to their neglect of opportunities which might have been improved for their advancement and promotion. But perhaps it has arisen more frequently from their characteristic love of peace and retirement ; from their preference of honest industry to the strife and uncertainty of public life ; and from their deep hatred of the arts and acts of demagogues to obtain, unasked and undeserving, public station and power. A majority of the existing generations have belonged to the democratic division of the two great political parties of the country, though very many exceptions have been found among the whigs and other parties. They have generally been honest, peaceable, and worthy citizens, respectable and useful in their sphere. A large average proportion of them have been professors of religion, and eminently moral christian men and christian women, careful in the performance of all duty arising from such professions, and mindful of the higher and ultimate purpose of their creation. The Memorials of a family even of this character will not, it is supposed, be without their utility, particularly to those for whom they are especially designed.

It is difficult for us, enjoying our comfortable, peaceful homes, our labor-saving machinery, our means of locomotion, the circulation of printed information, and the other peculiar advantages of the present age, to picture to the imagination the true condition of the early settlers of New England ; to look back upon their living households ; to obtain a clear idea of their every-day interior and exterior life, and to compare their circumstances with our own. Yet such a view, even if it be imperfect, cannot but be interesting and useful.

Then, salt beef and pork, boiled with such vegetables as could be had, constituted the usual dinner. Fresh meat was a great rarity. Potatoes are among comparatively modern eatables, of not more than one hundred years' culture. Bean-porridge, or brown bread and milk when it could be obtained, formed the morning and evening meals. Wheat flour, tea and coffee, were only occasional luxuries. Now, we are fed with a greater variety of food, prepared more nicely, and served in different style, but without producing better health or more enduring constitutions.

Then, the mothers and daughters were all workers. They hired no help, or, if they did, the distinction between the kitchen laborers and the parlor was unknown. They not only performed the ordinary household work, but they were manufacturers and tailors. By their hand cards, their spinning wheels, their looms and their needles, the wool and flax, produced on their farms, were converted into clothing for themselves, for husbands, for fathers, and for children. Fine woollen, linen or silk fabrics were used only by a few of the favored aristocracy. Now, articles made by labor-saving machinery, or imported from foreign countries, have taken the place of the domestic manufactures; and "accomplishments" are substituted for many former useful female employments.

Then, the means of locomotion consisted of an ox-cart, or the back of a horse furnished with saddle and pillion, and designed to carry from place to place, at a slow pace, a father, mother, and several children. A chaise, or even a wagon, was a curiosity. Now, means are provided to "run to and fro." Many of us go every morning from our homes to our places of business, and return again at evening, twenty, thirty, or more miles—an undertaking which would have occasioned our fathers a long period of anxious preparation, and many an earnest petition to Heaven for a prosperous journey and a safe return.

Then, the only means of information concerning passing events were verbal or written communications from one person to another, forwarded by special messengers and by the tardy means of conveyance then in use. Newspapers and periodical literature were unknown. The Bible, the Psalter, and a few religious books, constituted nearly the whole reading. Now, steam and lightning distribute printed accounts of almost everything that occurs, and of some things that do not occur, to nearly every man's door, every day of the year. All are taught to read; and newspapers, periodical works, books and other printed matter, are scattered like flakes in a snow shower over the land, to inform, corrupt, or improve the people.

Then, in fine, the habits and modes of living were simple and frugal. Personal wants were few; and, even with the limited means of supply, few remained unsatisfied. All were workers—few were drones. Boys and girls, as soon as they acquired muscular power, were taught to apply it to some useful purpose. Every one was required to make the most of life, and none were allowed to waste it in idleness. Yet contentment and happiness generally reigned in their humble abodes, and amid all their laborious toil. Their firm and inflexible integrity allowed them to subsist by honest means only. Now, new habits and new modes of life are introduced, in many cases for the better but in others for the worse. Artificial wants have become greatly multiplied. What were once luxuries have now become necessities. But though the means of gratification are indefinitely extended, the supply hardly equals the demand. Life has become too often rather a race for riches, or for fashionable folly, than an earnest desire for happiness; and, in the means to attain the end, crime sometimes overleaps integrity. Sons of wealthy or weak parents are often brought up in idleness and self-indulgence, and daughters in ignorance of the labors and duties of domestic life, essential to render home prosperous and happy. Many thus waste their days, consume the earnings of the more honest and industrious, and contribute nothing to their own higher good and happiness, or to the general welfare and happiness of others.

Some of our ancestors were pioneer settlers in the wilderness; and while subduing the forests and preparing the soil for the dwelling-places of civilization, they were often surrounded by savage men and wild beasts, watching to plunder them of their scanty means of subsistence or to destroy their lives. Yet they braved those dangers with indomitable courage and unyielding wills; endured the toil and trials incident to their situation with fortitude, cheerfulness and hope; and submitted to privations and suffering without murmuring, and in uniform trust in the rectitude of their purpose and in the righteousness of Heaven. They "acted well their part" in introducing new and noble features into the progress of humanity. By their virtues, by their heroic deeds, by their sufferings, by the shedding of their blood, they aided in founding a government recognizing political equality and religious freedom. They left a goodly heritage to their posterity. We ought to be grateful to them for the legacies they have bequeathed to us; and should transmit the great inheritance to our successors, not only unimpaired but improved by our own efforts, stimulated by their wisdom, experience and example. We should remember that our descendants will look back upon us as we do upon our ancestors and compare our merits with theirs. This should be a strong motive to move us to do whatever can be done to elevate our own characters and to render our example and our achievements still more worthy of regard and imitation. We should leave to our heirs some proof "that in our estimate of public principle and private virtue, in our veneration of religion and piety, in our devotion to civil and religious liberty, in our regard for whatever advances human knowledge or improves human happiness, we are not altogether unworthy of our origin."

A few of the early inhabitants of New England were descended from titled families in the Old Country; and it is natural that their posterity should feel some pleasure and pride in tracing their pedigree back to such progenitors. Pictures of coats-of-arms are found in very many families, purporting to have belonged to their ancestors. We have seen several such pictures, under some of which was written our name, or that of an ancestor of some other name. A few of these emblems of gentility, unmeaning though they may be to us simple republicans, are undoubtedly authentic. Some however belonged to collateral branches of the family, and were created after their separation from the particular one to which they profess to belong. Others were given to the same name but not to the same person as our ancestor; others were assumed without authority; and others are mythical in their origin, and have been handed down by tradition without reliable evidence of their authenticity. "It is certain," says Lower, "that comparatively few families of ancient gentry have any record of the date of their arms, or of their being conferred in a legal manner." Very many of the coats-of-arms pictured and found in New England families, are fictions made to order, got up and misapplied by artists for money. About fifty or sixty years since there was carried on a considerable imposition of this kind upon the credulity of our fathers. One of the most prominent actors, now remembered, was a man by the name of Brinton, said to have been a deserter from the British army in Boston during the revolution. He was a man of considerable ability, learning, and artistic skill; had some knowledge of heraldry; and had access to pictures of many different heraldic emblems. For a considerable time he obtained his living by visiting different families and painting what he falsely assured them was their coat-of-arms. He however really copied from those belonging to other families, or invented a fiction for the occasion. This man became exceedingly intemperate and died in the alms-house in Groton—a state pauper. Even now there are in New York, and perhaps elsewhere, offices where coats-of-arms are sold as matters of business. And some of the money-proud, or conceited folks, who are justly untitled, purchase these counterfeit articles to be emblazoned on their houses, their furniture, or their equipage, as ornaments, and to establish their claim to be ranked with the aristocracy and the nobility! Knowing these facts, we have not placed a high value upon these doubtful, mythical evidences of a noble ancestry.

We would not undervalue a descent from the nobility of England, especially if there was nobility of character as well as title; nor the important influence which such an ancestry should have to produce noble traits of character in posterity. It ought to be remembered, however, that a title to nobility, even when proved to be authentic, is not always an evidence of real worth. It is said to have been conferred originally as a mark of distinction upon gentlemen, and to elevate the possessor above the masses, for his birth, his wealth, his office, or his heroic deeds, as one of the leading class of his age. But it has long been a subject of barter and sale; and has often been given, not as a reward of merit, but for other reasons, to base men, and inherited by others still more unworthy. Many a title has been obtained by accident and fraud. "The whole tendency of the creations during the last century was to vulgarize the institution. Of thirty-two Peers whom George II. made, five only are calculated to have been country gentlemen of ancient descent and good estates; and the old titles died almost as quickly as the new ones were made." (Westminster Review, July, 1853.) Every person has two parents, four grandparents, eight of the fourth generation, sixteen of the fifth, thirty-two of the sixth, sixty-four of the seventh, and one hundred and twenty-eight of the eighth, doubling the quarterings, as they are called, in each degree of removal into the past. The eighth generally carries the New Englander back to an English ancestor existing at the first settlement of this country. To boast of a descent from noble blood when one one-hundred-and-twenty-eighth part, or quartering, or a more minute portion, only, is of that character, would be like claiming that a small spring in the Rocky Mountains gave its character to the Mississippi. If it is an honor to be the architect of one's own fortune, and to have a title conferred on that account, the nearer in descent we are to the architect the greater the honor. The influence of the nobility has been constantly decreasing as civilization and intelligence increases; and in no period has it been less than at present. "Germany, the most aristocratic country in Europe, owes her great modern renown in the world of intellect to men who did not belong to her rigid and long-descended and strict-quartering nobility." But whatever estimate may be placed on such an inheritance, authentic or assumed, real or imaginary, it will be found poor capital to live upon. Lord Bacon has remarked that they who derive their worth from their ancestors resemble "potatoes, the most valuable part of which is under ground." It is one of the excellencies of our institutions that the mantle of no man's nobility or distinction descends to his posterity. A man who claims to be aristocratic, and assumes a leadership among his fellows on account of his ancestral antecedents, and does nothing worthy of his position, disgraces himself. Those alone should be distinguished who distinguish themselves. Every man is valued or should be valued according to his own merit. He himself, not his titled ancestors or connections, is the main article in the inventory, and the value of that article he has made chiefly himself. Even wealth itself, into whatever large heaps it may be accumulated, although it often gives a false idea of one's really deserved position in society, soon becomes distributed or annihilated by succeeding generations. Poor descendants have to begin again to work up the hill of life to wealth and eminence as new aspirants. Under the old Colonial and Provincial laws the eldest son had a double portion; but this distinction was very properly abolished in 1780. All children now share alike. The wealth, the character, the nobility of every man now generally depend upon himself. All are not born with equal capacity, but the avenues to excellence and to distinction are open equally to all. Whosoever will may enter therein. Every man, whatever be his condition, can acquire, if he tries, those traits of character and that position among his fellows, which should entitle him to be considered a gentleman.

But while we throw aside an ancestral title as of little value in itself considered, there are dangers in this country from other sources. Too much sickly sentimentality, and too many false ideas of true greatness, or what should be considered the true glory of the human race, prevail amongst us. Wealth instead of character too often gives a social position undeserved by antecedent respectability, education, moral worth, or personal manners and refinement. It is said that four of the most elegant and costly dwellings in the Fifth Avenue in New York,—the noted residence of millionaires and the aristocracy of wealth,—are owned by a button maker, a candy manufacturer, a sarsaparilla vender, and one made suddenly rich by California steamboating. The accumulation of wealth is most certainly to be commended, if there are combined in its possessors those traits of character which give it its true nobility; and many such instances exist in this country. It increases the bad man's means of self-indulgence and crime and the good man's means of independence and usefulness. But there are to be found some families and individuals, who, from having become suddenly rich or from other cause, strive to assume aristocratic airs and a style of living which does not become them, and in which they do not seem at home. Such persons often indulge a family pride, exhibit a love of ostentatious display, and look with disfavor upon those they consider their inferiors in wealth or station, viewing themselves for an unknown reason as belonging to the better class of people. They have no desire to learn anything of their ancestors or connections because they were poor, or because they suppose them beneath themselves. Their children spend with freedom—their daughters upon useless vanities, and their sons upon something worse—the hard earnings of industry and toil, but for the laborers themselves they have little respect. This class of persons may be said to belong to the upper ten-dom, or the aristocracy, of folly, and are subjects rather for ridicule or compassion than for regard. Others, however, are not of this character. “Charles,” said a certain true nobleman, “you see that little shop; I have brought you here on purpose to show it to you. In that shop your grandfather used to shave for a penny. That is the proudest reflection of my life”! It was once said—“Who amongst us can go back two generations without running his head against a ploughshare or an anvil? And he is somewhat lucky if he can hit anything as genteel as these.” Whether this was said in soberness or in jest, or by one who would forget his progenitors, it is a forcible illustration of the peculiar excellence of our institutions. Almost all our great men, in the general estimation of the world, have had a comparatively humble origin. If we look into Boston, New York, or any other great commercial mart, and see who are and have been the solid men, the opulent merchants, the influential citizens, the “aristocracy,” we shall find that they are generally natives of the country towns—sons of farmers and mechanics, who have been taught the value of a dollar, and how to earn it by their own industry, and how to take care of it and to use it to the best advantage after it was earned. They learned, early in life, that self-reliance is the surest guarantee of individual success and personal independence. Though of moderate possessions, those fathers and mothers taught their children how to live within their means, and how to make the most of those means; and so to economize time, money and self-gratification as to live honestly and happily upon a small and limited income. They impressed upon them their virtues and their characters, which under different circumstances have often been the foundation of great moral worth, commercial or professional success, or colossal fortunes. If there be any just cause of ancestral pride it is for a descent from such progenitors. Who would not prefer it to that of a descent from a nobility or an aristocracy which rests its claim to distinction upon a title, or upon accidental wealth or other circumstances unaccompanied by those traits of physical, intellectual and moral worth without which there is no real excellence? Nature's noblemen and noblewomen are confined to no place or occupation, but are found everywhere—on the farm, in the workshop, in the humble walks of domestic life, as well as in professional ranks, and among the entitled aristocracy, or the aristocracy of money. Many persons—men and women—though they may not have left any visible foot-prints upon their age, may nevertheless have planted the seeds of an influence which may germinate, grow to maturity, and sway the destiny of nations. "One soweth and another reapeth." "It is the strong-handed, intelligent, laborious, independent, and virtuous yeomanry of New England that have made what was once a frowning wilderness, now the smiling abode of plenty, the happy home of contented thousands that own and till her soil, the fruitful mother of other thousands that carry New England hearts and New England principles into every state and section of our great country, modelling their institutions after those of their native land."

" Nil me poeniteat sanum patris hujus ; eoque
 Non, ut magna dolo factum negat esse suo pars,
 Quod non ingenuos habeat clarosque parentes,
 Sic me defendam."*—(Horace, Book I. Satire VI.)

Families, like nations and like individual man himself, are subject to growth and decay. They have their periods of prosperity and adversity. Their circumstances do not long remain the same ; but often vacillate in the ups and downs—the vicissitudes of life. In physical capability, in intellectual capacity, in wealth, in social position, and in moral influence, they rise, culminate, and decline, in successive periods and generations. The history of the changes by which they are marked is an interesting and useful subject of investigation ; and it is abundantly illustrated by instructive examples in almost every one's own experience and observation. A family whose history is now remembered, descended from "noble blood," rose to distinction and were for many years the leaders in an important New England town where they resided ;

* " Nor, while my senses hold, shall I repent
 Of such a father, nor with pride resent,
 As many do, th' involuntary disgrace
 Not to be born of an illustrious race."

but at length their fortunes gradually waned ; and the last of the name in that town died in the alms-house. An off-shoot, however, settled in another locality, renewed its ancestral energies, and again became eminent. Similar changes have occurred in numerous families. It has always been so ; and in the Old Country more than in this. Very few of the families from whom the present nobility of England descend, existed in patrician ranks at the settlement of New England two hundred years ago. The race of nobles is constantly dying out and becoming extinct ; and the vacuum has to be filled by new creations from the plebeian ranks ; or, if sustained at all, by a union with plebeian blood. We learn from the history of these families that they “bud, flower and die. Industry, energy, and perseverance beget wealth and position. These, allied with ability, talent and refinement, produce distinction and eminence ; but prodigality, decay, insanity or annihilation generally follows.”* This series of changes happens in a shorter or longer period according to attendant circumstances. In some cases they are passed rapidly in two or three generations ; in others they may be prolonged to eight or nine as their extreme limit. These facts are familiar to any one who may have paid any considerable attention to the subject. It is said by a recent writer (Westminster Review, July, 1853) that the last male heir of the once great family of Earls of Stafford, allied to the Royal blood, after several generations “died without issue, which was the best thing he could do ; but his sister, Jane Stafford, married a joiner and produced a cobbler ; and the poor fellow had only to step ‘beyond his last’ to claim kin with all that was noblest in England.” Such persons literally descend from a higher to a lower, from a noble to an ignoble, ancestral station. These facts tend greatly to modify existing family pride. Those who choose may indulge it, but we prefer the ascending scale, even should it begin at the “ploughshare,” the “anvil,” or the “last.”

Human history and experience show that there are no declarations more hopeful to the good, or more awful to the bad, and yet more true, than that “the iniquities of the fathers are visited upon the children and upon the children's children unto the third and fourth generation ;" and that "I have never seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." The strength and the weakness, the intellect and the mental imbecility, the industry and the laziness, the energy and the inertion, the morality and the immorality, of the father and the mother, or of either of them, do not end with their lives, but descend to a greater or less extent to their posterity. The prosperity, the fortunes, the destiny of children, too, as well as their physical and mental characteristics, are made the better for the virtues, and the worse for the vices, of their parents. There is scarcely any family in which great diversity of circumstances has not existed, and in which at different periods great changes have not taken place, producing great alterations in relative wealth, social position, and moral influence. At one time it may be comparatively unknown in society ; at another, among the most distinguished. Again, the circumstances of life may change and bring it into obscurity. And in the same family some members attain among their fellows a position in wealth and in social and moral influence, almost enviable ; while others, sometimes with no apparent ill-desert, struggle through life in comparative poverty—almost unnoticed and unknown. Why is it so? Were the causes analyzed, an answer might in most cases be obtained. And is it not of importance to know what produces these great changes—this great diversity of character and circumstances, that in our struggles with our own propensities and with the influences that surround us, to resist evil and temptation to evil, and to acquire competence and respectability, we may avoid the mistakes committed by others, escape the disasters that have fallen upon them ; and that we may acquire all that the most highly favored have enjoyed, and be all the most worthy have been? This is possible notwithstanding any unfortunate antecedents ; and in this way we can come off conquerors over internal and external imperfection and error, and learn to meet with more manliness, energy, and propriety the vicissitudes of life, and be better prepared for its close. We venerate the memory of our ancestors, and like to study their history. We desire to know the physical, mental and moral elements that were combined to form their characters. We would not however hold them up as faultless. They lived in an age of darkness, compared with our own. Like other men they had the faults of their nature and of their age—their blemishes—their sunny sides and their shady sides. If any erred, by knowing how and why they erred we ourselves might be induced to conduct differently. The very record of an error is not without its utility. If any made a wreck of their fortunes or their character, or did not attain the full development of their natures, or failed to leave a favorable mark upon their age or no mark at all, it is well that the rock on which they foundered should be mapped upon the voyage of life, that it may be avoided by future navigators. The superior light of the present age should guide to a more successful result—to a more worthy and honorable position.

We are fully aware that a difference of opinion prevails as to the value and importance of Memorials like these. Some persons regard such matters with indifference. There are those who exist in the supreme selfishness of the present, and have no regard to antecedents and consequences. They live, but how they came to live they know not, and seem not to care; and in regard to the purpose or consequences of their lives they seem to be equally unconcerned. We have met with persons, and some of education too, who could not tell the date of their own birth or marriage, or of that of their children; and with others who could not tell the names, much less the character, of their grandparents or other ancestors; and who seemed to care as little as they knew. "My ancestors left me nothing," say they, "and why should I remember them."—"Posterity has done nothing for me, and why should I do anything for posterity"! Such ignorance and such indifference seem to us unpardonable. Burke uttered a noble sentiment when he said, "Those only deserve to be remembered by posterity who treasure up the history of their ancestors." Another author has remarked that "he who pays no regard to his ancestors is a bad man." Whether this be true or not it may be safely said that such an one is unworthy to have had any ancestors, and does not deserve to be remembered by posterity, if he should happen to have any. If he is not treated with indifference and neglect, or in memory forgotten, it will not be because it was undeserved. We do not belong to this class of persons. But while this matter of ancestry, genealogy, and personal history is regarded as an important object of knowledge, it should be estimated aright, and among other matters it should have its proper place and receive its appropriate share of attention. It should not be exalted above nor sunk below its just value. We would not have it administer to a weak pride nor to a grovelling avarice. While we would not be indifferent to the past and future we would not disregard the present. A knowledge of those who gave us form, brought us into existence, and made us what we are, seems required to satisfy the promptings of our nature. A strong desire exists in the author's own mind, at least, to know something of those who have preceded us in this drama of life, and of the manner in which they have performed their respective parts. We believe with Mr. Webster, (Works, Vol. I. p. 6,) that "there is a moral and philosophical respect for our ancestors, which elevates the character and improves the heart. Next to the sense of religious duty and moral feeling, I hardly know what should bear with stronger obligation on a liberal and enlightened mind, than a consciousness of an alliance with excellence which is departed; and a consciousness too, that in its acts and conduct, and even in its sentiments and thoughts, it may be actively operating on the happiness of those that come after it."

Those who choose may regard the names and dates in these Memorials as dry and uninteresting. In our view they form an essential part of the picture intended to be presented. Without such facts the history and exhibition of no life would be complete. A knowledge of the date of a birth, a marriage, or a death—the three most important epochs in the history of individuals—has been the means of saving, and the want of it of losing an estate. But besides these and other important purposes presently to be noticed, they ought to suggest some useful moral thought. What a day was each of these dates to some human family, or to some circle of loving human hearts like our own! How much of joy or sorrow, of hope or despair, is hidden under these significant facts! Each is a memorial, not of death only, but of life;—of a human heart that once lived and loved, "a heart that kept its steady pulsations through some certain period of time and then ceased to act and mouldered into dust; of an individual human life that had its joys and its sorrows, its cares and its burdens, its afflictions and its hopes, its conflicts and its achievements, its opportunities wasted and improved, and its hour of death."

A distinguished individual now living has said that the reflections of his father at his own birth and baptism which he discovered several years after his parent's death "made an impression upon his mind which was never effaced. It proved, he verily believed, to be that word in season so often efficacious in leading the thoughts too much engrossed by the world to the one thing needful." This certainly should be the effect of discovering the written expression of the desires of a pious parent, anxious for the welfare of his children. A review of the lives and history of virtuous ancestors—those who have lived without reproach and performed useful service in their day and generation, and who have died leaving a good name and a good character as a legacy to their posterity, assuredly should always arouse whatever of good there is in our natures, and lead us to aspire to whatever of good it is possible for us to attain. It should move us onward to more wise and more energetic and persevering efforts, to fill up life with useful and noble deeds; to a more active performance of every duty of our station, whatever that station may be; and to a more earnest desire to preserve and hand down of ourselves a good name and a good character to our posterity. Life may thus be crowned with an honorable success and completeness, instead of being disgraced as a failure. In these Memorials we behold a mirror which reflects our own image,—what we have been, and what we must become—our origin and our destiny. They make us all conscious, whatever may have been our ancestry, that our existence here is only temporary, and that this world is not to be our permanent abode. They show us multitudes of human beings, some of whom are ever in-coming or out-going. Like a moving panorama, they exhibit living individuals, who for brief periods perform their parts and then pass away, leaving their places to be filled by others, who in their turn perform similar parts and have similar exits. Here we see some currents of life that are ceasing to flow; there, others that are sending forth new branches, expanding into other channels of greater magnitude and of more extended capabilities. At one time, we see little ones receding from our view, ere they are able to share in the activities that surround them; at another, others are ceasing their course, just as they are blossoming into manhood or womanhood; then, some in the full vigor of middle age disappear; and again, others laden with the fruits of old age, or the blossoms of second childhood. An exit happens alike to all without distinction of age, sex, or condition. And these scenes are repeated onward and onward, "ever varying, yet ever the same." We ourselves are seen as the present living actors; but soon others will have our places in the exhibition. We also shall have passed out of sight, and be numbered with those who have floated down the stream of time, to be swallowed up in the ocean of eternity! What lessons of life does such a picture teach! With what significance are they impressed upon us! Cold and callous indeed must be the heart of any one who can peruse these pages, and especially those relating to his own kindred, with personal indifference, or without personal improvement. As we look over these Memorials may we be moved to aspire to a higher and nobler position, and to a better type of excellence, in humanity; to struggle constantly to live aright, and so worthily as to be at peace with our own consciences, our fellow men and our Creator; ever to strive while we live, to make ourselves and the world around us better and happier; and may we never cease to remember that to improve our hearts and form our characters, we now enjoy our only time, and that the present is our only opportunity, antecedent to this mortal putting on immortality!

III.

Natural History and Physical Characteristics of the Family.

GENEALOGICAL investigations should have two great objects in view: First, to ascertain and record the most important facts in the history of generations, families and individual persons; and, secondly, to abstract, analyze, and classify these facts so that they may illustrate the Natural History of the race to which they refer. The former may be denominated Historical Genealogy, and the latter Philosophical Genealogy. Hitherto, investigations have been confined almost exclusively to the first department of these inquiries; and the incidents of personal history have possessed sufficient interest to secure attention. Philosophical Genealogy is, however, of much more importance. The great truths it develops might be applied to facilitate our personal improvement, and to increase our happiness in the every-day acts and duties of life. Considered in this light, Genealogy becomes a science of the utmost utility. Though it has as yet received little attention, and been but imperfectly understood or appreciated, it should nevertheless be a popular science, and should take its place among the most important objects deserving attention and investigation:—

“The proper study of mankind is man.”

The general characteristics of a family are perpetuated through successive generations. Modifications and even peculiarities may, however, be introduced, and may be transmitted for shorter or longer periods, though there is a constant tendency in nature to return to the original type. It is well known that different races and different families of the same race, do not uniformly possess the same characteristics; and that they often differ materially from each other. Even the different members of the same family frequently exhibit great diversity in their natural capacities and propensities. Some families and individuals are remarkable for their muscular power, their industry, energy and perseverance; others for their mental superiority; some for other characteristics, physical, intellectual, or moral; and others for opposite or different qualities. Some seem to inherit a predisposition to consumption, apoplexy, fever, insanity, or other disease, which will be developed under circumstances that favor it; while others seem entirely exempt from such tendencies, and can expose themselves to hazards with impunity. The transmission of these characteristics is not uniform. In some cases they affect a part of the progeny only; in others they skip one or two generations to reappear in a grandchild or a great-grandchild. The size, form, complexion, color of the hair and eyes, or other physical, or even intellectual or moral traits of character, may be produced by the peculiarities of the father or of the mother, or by a combination of the peculiarities of both. Offspring often resemble the paternal grandparent more than the father; and the children of a wife by her second husband have been known to bear a greater resemblance to her first husband than to their own father. Sometimes the peculiar circumstances and propensities existing at the time of generation, and especially the condition, association and influences of the mother during gestation, may originate a new trait of character, which may be transmitted to the "third and fourth generation," or until eradicated by other causes and circumstances. The characteristics of a noble and generous, as well as of a mean and grovelling nature, may be perpetuated through many generations. Other elements, however, may be introduced, and other influences may be brought into combination, which may exterminate or modify good or bad qualities, and produce other types of character differing from the originals that have preceded them. The causes of good and evil which often hover over the history and destiny of families, to enlighten or darken the domestic fireside, are often traced to the marriages of individuals, which have an immense influence upon their happiness, prosperity and perpetuity. Many husbands are unworthy of their wives, and many wives are unworthy of their husbands,—the one unfit or uncongenial to the other, either in physical or mental capacity, or in social or moral training; and such alliances should never have been formed. Eminent naturalists have stated, and probably truly, that if they could have the control of marriage connections, and determine what persons should be united, they could produce a race of idiots, or a race of nature's noble-men.

These principles rest upon the well-established fact in nature, that like produces like. They are of the highest importance, and should be well understood. We have already alluded (p. 25) to the rise and fall of families. Many of the causes of these changes lie in this direction. Every one should be aware that in all matters relating to his physical and intellectual, as well as to his moral powers, he can make the good better and the bad worse by his own conduct and by the social connections he forms. And it is well that he should thoroughly study and understand the history and condition of his own constitution, and the causes which have made it what it is, and the means which may be used to make it better, and to transmit it improved to others.

What is the character of the blood that courses in his veins? To what propensities does it lead? What traits of character does it tend to develop? And how can a bad impulse be restrained and a good one enlarged and transmitted? The same information should, as far as possible, be obtained concerning the person with whom a marriage union is proposed, male or female, that the probable results of such a union may be anticipated, and whether they would be likely to improve the physical, mental and moral condition of the race or otherwise. Marriages between relatives of the same family should if possible be avoided. Preference should always be given to an admixture of different blood. If this matter was fully understood it would greatly aid in guarding against those propensities which are opposed to health and happiness and in increasing those that promote them; and be more likely to produce sound minds in sound constitutions in the offspring. This is a practical suggestion. "I know a case," says a recent English writer, "where a besetting weakness in the blood had for four generations prevented the prosperity of the family; the fifth in descent, having penetrated the secret cause of his family misfortunes, resolved to conquer and crush the impulse, which was quite as strong in himself as in his progenitors. He did so and succeeded in establishing his family." Similar results have followed very many other efforts of the kind.

We do not propose, in this place, to discuss this great subject in its various bearings and relations; but we deem it proper to make these brief suggestions, as introductory to a statement of the results obtained by analysis and calculation from several classes of facts, which have been carefully abstracted from these Memorials. They are important illustrations of the Natural History and Physical Characteristics of the family, and will undoubtedly be interesting and useful to them and perhaps to others. If genealogists would publish similar deductions concerning other families, founded on full and accurate data, we might possess, more fully than we now do, the means of ascertaining the laws of human life existing in this country, and the changes, if any, that have taken place in relation to these laws in the different periods of its history. To render such data perfect, the exact date of every birth, every marriage, and every death, in every family, including those who die young as well as others, should always be accurately given.

The personal conformation of our family, where its peculiar type prevails, has some distinctive characteristics. It may be described generally as of the medium height, full chested, thickly set, compactly built, and well proportioned, with rather more than the average weight and athletic or muscular power; the features usually full and regular, and the complexion fair; a constitution capable of enduring hardship and toil, and favorable to health and long life. There have been many males and females of comparatively early maturity and of considerable beauty. Exceptions to this general description, of course, have often occurred, produced by the admixture of different blood, or by other circumstances and causes. Instances are not uncommon of persons slightly built and under the usual size and weight; and of others who have grown upwards above the usual height, and expanded outwards beyond the usual breadth; and of others who have had no traits of beauty to spare. One man writes us that he carries about with him a person weighing two hundred and fifty pounds; and other instances exist of similar corpulency. Another writes that he is six feet four inches high, and in other respects well proportioned. Another, that his four aunts were tall in person and weighed over two hundred pounds each, and yet were well proportioned and handsome women. The height and weight of persons differ from each other in the same stock and in the same families; and the same person may vary in his weight in the different periods of life. The author is five feet nine inches high, and his average weight, until he was over forty years old, was about one hundred and forty pounds; now, at the age of sixty, it is two hundred pounds. If observations were carefully made and recorded in these matters relative to a considerable number of persons, and to the same persons at different ages, as they should always be, interesting comparisons and deductions might be made; but there are unfortunately too few relating to our family to be of very general utility in ascertaining the general law of our physical development and growth.

The sex of 4,121 newly created lives, produced or descended from our first American ancestor and named in these Memorials, has been determined. This number does not include all the descendants of the name, nor very many of those of other names. Several schedules were received after this abstract had been made. If these had been included, the aggregate numbers would be largely increased; but the proportional results would probably be nearly the same as now ascertained. Of these 4,121 lives, 2,157 were males and 1,964 were females; or for 100 females there have been born on the average 109 males. To ascertain how far this difference in the proportion of the sexes prevailed in different periods we have divided them into three groups,—those included in the first four generations, those of the fifth and sixth, and those of the seventh. And it appears that in the first group, of 515 lives, 279 were males and 236 were females; or for 100 females, 118 males were born. In the second group, of 2,073 lives, 1,069 were males and 1,004 were females; or for 100 females, 106 males were born. And in the third group, of 1,533 lives, 809 were males and 724 were females; or for 100 females, 112 males were born. It is a universal law of human life, in all nations, that more males than females are born, but the proportion of males to females here indicated is greater than the general average, and may be considered an evidence of a vigorous race.

Among these births were 72 twin children, or every 57th child was a twin. This is about the proportion that prevails, on the average, throughout the whole population of Massachusetts. It is a remarkable fact that the sexes of those 72 twin children were exactly equal. Several mothers had twins more than once. Two mothers, in two cases of birth, produced twins in each case, the one immediately succeeding the other.

How many of the persons born lived to maturity and were married? To answer this interesting question 1,037 lives in the first six generations have been examined, all the great epochs of whose history are given; and we have obtained the following results. Of these 1,037 lives (561 males and 476 females,) 139, or 13.40 per cent., died under 20 years of age; and 898, or 86.60 per cent., lived over 20. Of 561 males, 76, or 13.55 per cent., died under 20, and 485, or 86.45 per cent., survived that age; and of 476 females, 63, or 13.24 per cent., died under 20, and 413, or 86.76 per cent., survived 20, showing nearly equal tenacity of life in the two sexes. Of the 485 males who lived over 20 years, 442, or 91.13 per cent., were married, and 43, or 8.87 per cent., were unmarried. Of the 413 females who survived 20 years, 380, or 92.01 per cent., were married, and 33, or 7.99 per cent., were unmarried; indicating that the chances of marriage have been less than one per cent. in favor of the males, and that the probabilities of living a single life have been nearly equal in each sex. Of 898 persons of both sexes who lived over 20 years, 822, or 91.54 per cent., were married, and 76, or 8.46 per cent., were unmarried; showing that in our family, to persons who survived 20 years, the chances were 92 nearly in every 100 that they would be married, and only 8 nearly in every 100 that they would live a single life. Of the whole 1,037 persons born, 822, or 79.27 per cent., were married, and 215, or 20.73 per cent., died unmarried. These figures show that a very high probability indeed of living to be married has prevailed. They may be somewhat higher in favor of marriage than all the facts would justify, if the natural history of every life was known and included. We suppose, however, it may be stated with truth that seventy-five per cent., at least, of the persons born in the first six generations were married; and that twenty-five per cent. only died in single life. We have not included all of the sixth, and none of the later generations, because the incompleteness of their lives does not afford the means of doing it correctly. On the most careful estimate that we have been able to make of these later lives it appears evident that a greater proportion die at the present time under 20 years of age, and that of those that survive that age, a less proportion are married. And when a child is born, there is a less probability now, than in the earlier generations of our family in this country, that it will survive and be married. How great this difference is cannot be exactly ascertained, but it is probably not less than ten per cent., and may be more than that. But taking this to be true, two thirds nearly of the existing generations will live to be married, and one third will die unmarried. Even with this reduction in the physical vitality of the race, the remainder is probably greater and shows a higher degree of health, than the families of mankind generally would average.

By deducting the date of birth from the date of marriage, we have calculated the exact ages at marriage, in years, months, and days, of 530 males, and 560 females, selected in course from these Memorials. These are all cases of first marriages, and include none of second marriages. We have divided them into four groups, according to the sexes and the periods of time in which the marriages were solemnized. The aggregates of the whole, for the first and for the last hundred years, are also given. The following statement exhibits the number of cases, and the aggregate age and the average age, in each group, showing the result of the investigation:—

| Sex.   | Period.   | Cases. | Aggregate Age. |      |       | Average Age. |             |
|--------|-----------|--------|----------------|------|-------|--------------|-------------|
| Males, | 1642-1750 | 61 ÷   | 1,517 y.       | 3 m. | 18 d. | = 24 y.      | 10 m. 14 d. |
|        | 1750-1800 | 147 ÷  | 3,702          | 0    | 24    | = 25         | 2 6         |
|        | 1800-1825 | 122 ÷  | 3,012          | 3    | 21    | = 24         | 8 8         |
|        | 1825-1850 | 200 ÷  | 5,068          | 7    | 10    | = 25         | 4 3         |
|        | 1750-1850 | 469 ÷  | 11,782         | 11   | 25    | = 25         | 1 14        |
| Fems.  | 1642-1750 | 66 ÷   | 1,377          | 11   | 7     | = 20         | 10 16       |
|        | 1750-1800 | 150 ÷  | 3,349          | 7    | 13    | = 22         | 3 28        |
|        | 1800-1825 | 120 ÷  | 2,721          | 0    | 4     | = 22         | 8 3         |
|        | 1825-1850 | 224 ÷  | 5,133          | 3    | 11    | = 22         | 10 29       |
|        | 1750-1850 | 494 ÷  | 11,203         | 10   | 28    | = 22         | 8 4         |

From this statement it appears that among the males the average age at marriage for the first hundred years, was 24 years 10 months 14 days, and for the last hundred years, 25 years 1 month 14 days, showing a difference between the two periods of only 2 months 0 days. Between the periods 1800 to 1825 and 1825 to 1850, there is a difference of 7 months 25 days, and between the second and the last period, of 1 month 27 days. Among the females the average age at marriage for the first hundred years, was 20 years 10 months 16 days, and for the last hundred years, 22 years 8 months 4 days, showing a difference of 1 year 9 months 24 days; and it appears that the average age is greater and greater in each group, and that there is a difference between the first and the last group of 2 years 0 months 13 days. An impression prevails that marriages in our country are not contracted now as early as in former periods; and these figures seem to indicate that it is correct, but they do not exhibit so great a difference among males as females, nor so great a difference generally as many have supposed. The youngest person at marriage was a female, aged 13 years 3 months 23 days; another female married at 13 years 5 months 27 days; another at 13 years 8 months 26 days; and another at 14 years 3 months 24 days. The oldest person married was a male, aged 88 years 9 months 17 days—his second marriage.

Of 377 marriages in the first six generations, 318, or 84.35 per cent., were first marriages; 53, or 14.06 per cent., were second marriages; and 6, or 1.59 per cent., were third marriages. Of the 53 second marriages, 29 produced children and 24 were unproductive. The 377 marriages of all kinds produced 2357 children, or 6½ nearly, on the average, for each marriage. The 318 first marriages produced 2,228 children, or 7 on the average for each marriage. Seven may therefore be considered as the average number of children to a family in the first six generations. An exact calculation in regard to the families in the seventh generation cannot be made; but as far as they may be estimated, the average number of children is not quite as great now as in the earlier generations, and probably the families will not average more than 6½ instead of 7 to a family, and 6 to all the marriages. By examining these Memorials it will be found that a large number of families have had nine children each, so much so that that number among the Shattucks seems to have been a favorite. The author's grandparents and great grandparents had each nine children, all of whom in both families lived to be married. His great-great-grandparents had nine children also.

The first female just mentioned, who was married at the age of 13 years 3 months 23 days, became a mother at 14 years 7 months 28 days, and died aged 46. The second, who was married at 13 years 5 months 27 days, became a mother at 14 years 9 months; and she had two grandchildren,—one by the eldest and one by the third child, before the birth of her own youngest child, making the nephews older than their uncle. The interval between the birth of her oldest and youngest child was 26 years 7 months 19 days. The other female, who was married at 14 years 3 months 24 days, was a mother at 15 years 6 months 2 days. She had four children after the marriage of her third child, and had one grandchild by her second and four by her third child before the birth of her own youngest child. The oldest nephew was 5 years 9 months 22 days older than his aunt.

The interval between the birth of her oldest and youngest child was 27 years 7 months 23 days. The two mothers last named are now (1853) living, the first aged 74 and the second aged 60. The first has had eighteen, the other thirteen children, indicating that in these instances, at least, early marriages have not had an unfavorable influence on vitality. Another female married at 13 years 8 months 26 days, but did not become a mother until 17 years 2 months 24 days. These have been all the instances that we have found of females marrying under 16 years of age.

One male, not a descendant but a connection, was the father of a daughter born when he was over 80 years of age. Another had a daughter born when he was 69 years 6 months 8 days. Several births of children by fathers aged from 50 to 60 years, are contained in this volume.

The average intervals between the births of successive children of the same family are found by deducting the date of birth of the oldest from that of the youngest child, and dividing the difference by one less than the whole number of children, twins being considered as one child. To ascertain the law prevailing in this respect in our family we have calculated 313 cases in the first five generations, and 568 in the seventh; and the result is as follows:—

| Period.              | Cases. | Aggregate Intervals. | Average Intervals. |
|----------------------|--------|----------------------|--------------------|
| First 5 generations, | 313    | 791 y. 9 m. 10 d.    | 2 y. 6 m. 10 d.    |
| From 7th generation, | 568    | 1,457 4 6            | 2 6 24             |

From this statement there appears to be a difference of fourteen days only in the averages of the respective periods. There are some families in which the average was less than 2 and others in which it was more than 3 years, but 2 years 6 months may be considered as about the general average in this characteristic of the natural history of the race.

The duration of married life, though it has not hitherto been investigated, is an interesting characteristic in the natural history of man. It is ascertained by deducting the date of its commencement or of marriage, from the date of its termination or of the death of either partner, the husband or the wife. We have selected 204 cases of first marriages from these Memorials, nearly all contained in the first six generations, in which all of the facts were known. None have been selected from the seventh generation, because the lives of the smaller portion already terminated are shorter than those of the larger portion yet to be terminated, and hence a fair average could not be obtained. Some imperfection may be supposed to attach to the number of facts in the early periods, but as a whole they may be considered as data sufficiently ample for authentic and reliable deductions. The average duration of married life in these 204 cases was 31 years 8 months 15 days. The first 80 cases averaged 27 years 8 months 21 days, and the last 124 averaged 34 years 4 months 22 days. Dividing the last 124 cases into three groups, the average duration of married life in these several groups does not vary from each other more than one year. From these facts it appears that during the first 100 years after our ancestor settled in this country, the average duration of married life was not as great, by nearly seven years, as during the last 100 years. That there was a difference appears evident, but whether as great as seven years admits of some doubt. If every case in the early generations were exactly known it would probably produce a different result, though it might not be very considerable. Of the 204 cases, 4 terminated under 1 year, 26 between 1 and 10, 29 between 10 and 20, 33 between 20 and 30, 40 between 30 and 40, 37 between 40 and 50, 29 between 50 and 60, and 6 over 60. The shortest period was 2 months 10 days, and the longest, 65 years 11 months 6 days. The average duration of married life in our family may therefore be considered as about thirty-three years, or one third of a century.

The average interval which elapsed between the first and second marriage in 36 cases of males was 2 years 8 months 3 days. In 20 cases of females it was 4 years 0 months 5 days, showing that it is longer in the female than in the male, which it is believed will be found to be a general law in the population at large. The shortest interval among the males was 2 months 17 days; the longest, 10 years 11 months. In one instance the first husband was the father of a child born after the mother's marriage to her second husband.

The average duration of the marriage relation in 30 cases of second marriages was 23 years 5 months 2 days, which may be considered as nearly a correct estimate. In a majority of these cases one or both of the parties were young; and hence there is not as much difference in duration between first and second marriages, as might be supposed without an accurate knowledge of the facts.

Of 195 cases, 120 husbands, or 62 per cent., died before their wives; and 75 wives, or 38 per cent., died before their husbands. And it has been found generally the fact that more females than males are left in widowhood; but perhaps more extended investigations might show a proportion somewhat different from that indicated by these figures.

The average duration of widowhood, or the length of time which elapses between the death of either husband or wife and the death of the survivor, has been calculated in first or single marriages. In 33 cases of males, it was 12 years 10 months 28 days; in 79 cases of females it was 13 years 5 months 16 days, showing a difference between the sexes of 6 months 18 days only. And it is a remarkable fact, tending to show that this is nearly the average when applied to the race generally, that in dividing these cases into nearly equal groups, the average of each group does not differ one year from the average of the whole. The shortest period of widowhood among males was 5 months, and the longest, 46 years 4 months 21 days. The shortest among females was 9 days; the longest, 46 years 9 months 26 days.

The duration of life of each person is an interesting matter. The period of life it is well known is liable to be terminated at any moment after birth, but may be prolonged and in rare instances has been actually prolonged beyond 100 years. The end comes sooner or later according to the degree of vitality inherent in the constitution, and to the circumstances with which it is surrounded. To assist in ascertaining the laws of life, and the degree of vitality existing in our family, we have calculated the exact duration in years, months and days of each life, in every case where the dates of birth and death were known; and have based our calculations on all the known cases, whether dying young or otherwise, selected in the order in which they occurred in the first five and part of the sixth generations. So many lives are yet unfinished in the seventh and part of the sixth, that to separate these longer lives from the shorter ones already terminated would not give a fair average. The selection comprises 522 lives, (285 males and 237 females,) and the calculation exhibits the following results :—

This statement exhibits the aggregate number of persons of both sexes and of each sex, who died in the respective periods of life, or at the ages specified; the aggregate and the average ages; and the proportion per cent. in each period. The average ages of the 522 persons of both sexes was 53 years 6 months 8 days; of the 285 males, 53 years 1 month 14 days; and of the 237 females, 54 years 0 months 0 days, showing a difference in their ages between the sexes of 8 months 16 days only. The average ages of 270 persons of both sexes who survived 60, was 76 years 10 months 10 days; of the 142 males, 76 years 8 months 15 days; and of the 128 females, 77 years 0 months 10 days, showing a difference of 3 months 25 days only in favor of females. The average ages of the males who died between the ages of 20 and 60, was 43 years 1 month 15 days, being 3 years 6 months 11 days greater than the ages of the females who died in the same period. The proportion of both sexes that died under 5 years of age, was only 11.68 per cent.; and of those that survived 60, it was 51.72 per cent. The proportion that died under 5 and between 20 and 60 years, was greater among the males than among the females; but between the ages of 15 to 20 the proportion was more than double among the females, showing in regard to that sex that this is the most critical period in their lives and should be most carefully guarded. Other interesting comparisons might be drawn from this statement. The law of mortality, thus ascertained to exist in our family, is more favorable to a strong vital force and to longevity than in the average of mankind. The average age of all the males who survived 20 years, was 63 years 5 months 1 day. The average of 21,484 males of all professions, who died in Massachusetts during the last eight years, was 51 years 7 months 27 days; and of 6,747 farmers,—the most favored classes, 63 years 11 months 4 days. This shows that our family lived on the average 11 years 9 months 4 days longer than the average of all the professions, and within 6 months 3 days of the average of the longest lived profession. In England the mean future lifetime of a man aged 60 is calculated to be 14 years 2 months, or according to the foregoing statement, 2 years 8 months less than the mean future lifetime of a man of the same age in our family. The proportion of children that died under 5 years of age has been unusually small, being only 11.68 per cent., whilst in most of the cities 40 to 50 per cent. of all the deaths have been of persons under that age.

It is an interesting fact that nearly the same results as are here presented, are obtained by subdividing the numbers into smaller groups according to the order of time in which they occurred. Dividing the 142 males and the 128 females into four groups each, the average age of each group will not differ 4 years from the average of the whole; and this uniformity prevails with the other ages specified in the statement. How far these favorable results would apply to existing generations—the present living descendants—is a matter of great interest, but one that is not easily ascertained. From the most careful estimate that we have been able to make, we are inclined to believe that the members of our family do not live quite as long on the average, or enjoy quite as strong vital force now, as they did in the generations that have gone before us. This we believe to be true in regard to others. It is frequently said that owing to the great improvements in medical science mankind live longer now than formerly, but investigation leads us to the belief that this statement is erroneous. Numerous facts show that the average length of life is not now as great generally as it was fifty years since.

The diseases and causes of death are most important facts in the natural history of a race, and they should be carefully stated in all Family Registers. The very small number of cases in which they are given in these Memorials, however, does not afford the means of making an abstract of any utility. Consumption, fever, apoplexy, and other diseases have prevailed; but no peculiar liability to any one of these diseases appears to have been a characteristic of the family. In constitutions in which the Shattuck blood, or conformation, has been predominant, consumption seems to have been rare; but in constitutions in which other blood seems to have had the greatest influence, that common but dreadful disease has been often developed and found fatal. Fever and apoplexy have been common in the family. It is important that every one should examine carefully the diseases and causes of death that have prevailed in the branches of the family from which he is descended, and with which he is immediately connected—his parents and his grandparents and each of their families and connections; and if a tendency to consumption, or any other known disease, is discovered, to take all proper measures to guard against its introduction or development.

The number of the descendants of our first ancestor may be estimated by calculations from the data we have already given. If the average number of children to each family was seven, and if two thirds of all the children born lived to be married, as has been stated in the foregoing pages, then, assuming ten to be the number of children in the second generation, as was actually the fact, and calculating the others, we obtain the following results:—

INTRODUCTION.

| Generation.     | Descendants. | Die unmarried. | Live to be married. |
|-----------------|--------------|----------------|---------------------|
| 1st Generation, | 1            | 0              | 1                   |
| 2d Generation,  | 10           | 3              | 7                   |
| 3d Generation,  | 49           | 16             | 33                  |
| 4th Generation, | 231          | 77             | 154                 |
| 5th Generation, | 1,078        | 359            | 719                 |
| 6th Generation, | 5,033        | 1,677          | 3,356               |
| 7th Generation, | 23,592       | 7,864          | 15,728              |
| 8th Generation, | 110,096      | 33,365         | 76,731              |

If half of these numbers be allowed for the increase of an equal mixture of other blood, introduced by marriage, then the number of descendants of the eighth generation would be half of 110,096 or 55,048; and the same proportion of those that die unmarried and of those that live to be married. But there have been intermarriages between descendants of the same blood and of the same name; and this would reduce the number still more. If ten per cent. for these intermarriages be deducted there would still be left nearly 50,000, as the descendants of one man in the eight generations! over 30,000 of whom will survive to be married!

How many of these descendants, bearing the name of Shattuck, are now living? An accurate answer to this question cannot be obtained. It can only be approximated. It has already been ascertained that the persons here noticed have been about equally divided between the sexes. The name can be perpetuated of course only through the male line. By dividing the above numbers in the respective columns and generations into two equal parts, and by deducting ten per cent. for intermarriages between blood relations, we approximate the number that have borne the name in the different classes and generations. By referring to the following Memorials it will be perceived, that many of the sixth generation or children of the fifth, are still living; and a portion only of the seventh are yet in existence. A large number of the eighth, a considerable number of the ninth, and a few of the tenth, are, however, already born. It would be nearly true to assume that the number of descendants of the name now existing is equal to the entire seventh generation as above estimated. Such being the case, we obtain by calculation  $(23,592 \div 2 - 1,177) = 10,594$ , as the whole number of descendants; and  $(15,728 \div 2 - 786) = 7,078$ , as the number that will probably survive and be married. Half of this number, or 5,297, (or 757 families of 7 each,) are descendants; and 3,539 will probably survive and be married, and bear the name of Shattuck. These numbers, obtained by estimation and calculation, are not presumed to be exactly correct, but 5,297 may be taken as an approximation to the actual number of persons of this name of all ages and sexes now existing in the United States.

IV. Plan of the Memorials explained.

It is desirable that Genealogical Memorials should be so arranged that the facts may be presented, as far as practicable, with fulness, accuracy, and perspicuity; and in a readable form. In proportion as this is accomplished the work will be valued by those who are competent to judge of its merits. While such Memorials should contain an entire record of successive generations, families, and individuals, they should not be a mere collection of names and dates, but should also embrace such other incidents relating to the history of separate lives as will illustrate their physical, intellectual, and moral characteristics, and thus provide matters of greater interest and utility for the reader. Many works of this kind have already been printed; and from the great attention paid to the subject they are likely to constitute a distinct department of literature. Dealing as they do, however, principally in facts and figures, they cannot be a medium for a display of the elegances of style, nor a proper basis upon which to found a reputation in authorship. And yet it is quite desirable that a plan might be devised which should embrace the best suggestions of different authors, and be adapted to general use.

We have desired to ascertain concerning every person,—those who die young as well as those who survive to old age:—

I.—1. The place and date of birth; 2. The name of the father and the maiden name of the mother; 3. The occupation or profession of males over 20 years of age; 4. The place or places of settlement and residence, and the date of removal from one to another; 5. The place and date of death; 6. The disease or cause of death; and 7. The exact age at death, in years, months, and days.

II. If married, 1. The place and date of marriage; 2. By whom, and the whole name of the person to whom married; 3. The place and date of birth of such person; 4. The place and date of death; 5. The disease or cause of death; 6. The exact age at death; 7. If a male, the occupation or profession; and 8. The name of the father and the maiden name of the mother, their residence, and any account of their ancestors, and of important incidents in their history.

III. Other information will also be useful to illustrate the history of some lives; such as, 1. The exact place of birth, residence, and death, identified by specifying the present number of the same place and street in a city, or the name of a present resident in the same place in the country; 2. The height and weight of persons, to show physical development and personal appearance; 3. The public offices, either in church, town, county or state, held by males, and the years when in office; 4. The church in which any male or female was a member; 5. The place of interment and exact copies of inscriptions on grave stones and monuments; 6. Copies of family records; 7. Copies or abstracts of wills, inventories and settlements of estates; 8. Copies or references to any printed obituary or biographical notice; 9. The printed books or works of which a person has been the author; and 10. Any other facts or anecdotes of interest and worthy of remembrance to illustrate the history of any one of either sex, or to show their general characteristics.

Though we may not have been always successful, yet we proceed to point out the pathway we have taken to procure the information, and to present it to others; and we offer the results as suggestions for the benefit of those who may not have reflected so much, or may have had less experience than ourselves relating to these matters.

In tracing the history of ancestors the first step to be taken is to ascertain the whole name of the oldest one about whom the date of death and age are known. It may be a parent, a grandparent, or some other more remote ancestor, male or female.

Next, deduct the age of such person from the date of death, and the remainder will be the year of birth. From the traditions of elderly persons, or in some other way, ascertain, if possible, the place of birth, and other matters relating to this person; and consult the records of the town where born, for the particulars of birth, which, if found, may lead to the particulars of marriage and of death also, and perhaps to the names of father, mother, brothers and sisters. In like manner the investigation may be extended to generations of more remote antiquity. If the town records be deficient we must resort to other means. By perseverance in consulting the various sources of information already indicated (pp. 2 and 3,) and by knowing where and how to go to work, the desired facts may generally be ascertained. A properly arranged systematic plan and a little experience will be no disadvantage. Make memoranda of the information and of the sources whence procured in a blank book prepared for the purpose, specifying the name of the person from whom it was derived, or the page of a written or printed book where it is contained. This information should be carefully revised, corrected, and arranged, and afterwards copied into its appropriate place in the Memorials.

General, indefinite terms, should, as far as possible, be avoided in such works. In naming places, instead of saying "he went west," or "to New York," or "to Ohio," or "to Missouri," the name of the post-office address and of the town, as well as county and state where settled or residing, should be given. In these Memorials, where no state is named, Massachusetts is generally to be understood. When an occupation is mentioned it is unsatisfactory to say "mechanic," but the specific work of the mechanic should be stated. So, too, exact dates, whether relating to births, marriages or deaths, or to those who die young, or to others, should be carefully given; and these dates should include the day of the month as well as the year. When it is possible to give the exact date, the word "about," as "he was born, or married, or died, about 1792," or "about" any other year; and the words "died young," or "died in infancy," should not be used. The importance of this exactness in relation to all lives, young and old, will appear from what has already been said under the head of the Natural History of the Family. We have regretted the necessity which compelled us sometimes to insert these indefinite terms in these Memorials.

Prior to 1752 the year commenced on the 25th of March, and March was called the First Month, April the Second, and so on to February, the Twelfth. Two methods of dating were used,—one in which the number of the month, day and year, were given, as “15:11:1645,” or “15th 11 mo. 1645,” and the other in which a double date between January 1st and March 25th was made; as “Jan. 1645–6,” or “164 $\frac{1}{2}$ .” In these Memorials the true or latest date of the year is substituted for the numbers and for double dates, as “Jan. 15, 1646”; but the day is given according to the old style. To make the old style conform exactly to the new style, ten days must be added to the dates prior to 1700, and eleven days to those from 1700 to 1752.

Various plans have been devised for Family Genealogies; and it is natural that each author should prefer his own. It is obvious, however, that a plan may seem simple and effective to one who devises and uses it, but not equally so to others. Those that are most readily comprehended, and most easily carried into practice by one unacquainted with such works, should be preferred. The plan after which the Minot family is presented in the first volume of the New England Historic-Genealogical Register has been adopted by several authors. Another plan, presented in the Genealogy of the Farmer family, in the same volume, has also been copied. More reflection and more experience have, however, been bestowed in recent years upon the subject; and it has been found that both of these plans are too much encumbered by numbers and references; and that they may be simplified and improved. The Foot and Nash families are the best arranged genealogies that we have seen, though they do not seem entirely free from imperfections. No more numbering or references should be used than are necessary to exhibit the generations, families and individuals, clearly, and to show their relative connection with each other. By arranging the families in separate generations, with a running title at the head of the page to indicate which one is there described, it becomes unnecessary to affix numbers to individuals to show the generation to which they belong.

In these Memorials we have numbered the different generations, the different families (or the sections or paragraphs in which they are described,) and the children of the same family, each consecutively, and generally either according to seniority, or in the chronological order in which they occur. On the right side of the page, against the name of each child who became a parent, we have affixed the number by which his or her family is designated, referring forward to the subsequent section or paragraph of the same number, which contains the biographical notices of such parent and of the person to whom married, and the names of all their children. And in the biographical accounts is inserted a number referring back to the previous page on which the name, parentage, date of birth, and the number of the family on the right of the name, are first introduced. If a number does not appear on the right of the name, it is to be inferred that no further notice is taken of such child or any descendant. To give a full and connected biography of a person in one place some little repetition may become necessary, but such repetition will occupy far less space than the figures of reference used by some genealogists. This simple plan for the arrangement of the facts, unincumbered by unnecessary figures or references, is sufficient to show clearly and at one glance the generation to which the person belongs, and whether any descendants are given in the book. It will also show the relation which the different generation, families, and persons sustained to each other; and will enable any one to trace a lineage backward or forward easily and readily. The Memorials by this plan acquire a more simple and readable form.*

Some authors give the biographical notice of the person where the name first appears. This is proper when the individuals do not live to adult age, or do not become parents, but in other cases the most appropriate place for such notice seems to be where a person stands at the head of his family as a parent, and immediately preceding and in connection with his children. This plan is followed in these Memorials. And it will be perceived that a separate division, or part of the paragraph, where the facts are sufficient to justify it, is generally devoted to each parent, to include whatever is desirable to be said, or the means of information will allow, in relation to such person; the direct descendant, whether male or female, occupies the first part of the paragraph, and the person whom such person marries, occupies the second. Each husband and each wife, if either marry more than once, is separately noticed. These are believed to be features in such Memorials somewhat new and improved, and they are more perspicuous than the usual mode of presenting the facts. The names of the parents are printed in capitals and the names of their children in italics. Grandchildren, when they are mentioned in the same family or paragraph, are printed in the usual type. We have been more particular than genealogists usually are in stating the birth, residence, and parentage of persons of other names who marry into the family, that those who desire it may be aided in tracing the ancestors of those new relatives; and also for the purpose of illustrating more fully the natural history of the family. The biographical notices should contain copies of wills, inventories of estates, and other documentary illustrations, which are usually separated and thrown into an Appendix. They may be printed in smaller type, but if worthy of publication at all, the proper place for them to appear is in immediate connection with the biographies to which they relate. It is to be regretted that materials for illustrating the lives and characters of so few of our ancestors are preserved. And it should be remembered that the length of a biographical notice is not always an indication of the importance or value of the life, but that it is often owing to accidental circumstances that less or more materials concerning it happened to be found.

* In preparing manuscripts of this kind, paged blank books should be used, and instead of the number referring to the subsequent paragraph a number referring to the subsequent page of the manuscript may be inserted on the right of the name. This will render it convenient to make additions to Memorials imperfectly prepared, without rearranging and copying them until the whole are finished.

In the early periods of the history of New England, a person who held official station, either military, civil or ecclesiastical, was generally designated by the title which it conferred. If a deacon, a captain, an ensign, or even a corporal, we find him frequently so entitled in the records. Entries such as "Corporal Lakin" or "Sergeant" some-other-person, was chosen selectman, or was appointed for the performance of some other duty, are often met with in the public records. Such titles were then considered as important and honorable, and generally as an evidence of real merit; and they were often held for many successive years. The office of constable was conferred only upon persons of an established reputation for high moral integrity and of sterling ability. In more recent and existing generations, however, military and other titles have become so common that their comparative honor has been considerably diminished. Offices now-a-days are unfortunately too often conferred not as a reward of merit but for other causes. In some cases in these Memorials the title possessed by a person is mentioned as a part of his biography, but in very many others it is omitted. If we were to enumerate all who have held military commissions, the number would be sufficient to officer quite a formidable army.

The information contained in this work was obtained principally in 1853; and it was designed to be brought down to that year. In many cases, however, it does not include so late a period, because the necessary facts were not communicated to the author. Some genealogists regard the history of existing or recent generations of little consequence. Any one, they say, who desires may obtain it. We consider this an erroneous opinion. Whoever writes for posterity ought to endeavor to anticipate the judgment of posterity upon his labors, and to conform to its just decisions. Those who come after us, as already intimated (p. 3) will find less information upon the public records in New England relating to the last fifty years, and will find it more difficult to write the history of the lives that existed during that period, than in any other since the first settlement of the country. For this and other reasons it will in future be a matter of deep regret, that information concerning recent or existing lives has been omitted in Genealogical Memorials.

In cases where females of the name have married persons of other names we have designed to give their families only, their children and sometimes their grandchildren, but rarely their more remote posterity, unless for the purpose of naming some distinguished descendant. It is supposed that this will be sufficient to enable persons of other names, who desire it, to trace their maternal descent to this family; and to identify the precise connection which existed.

Additional advantage may be derived from subdividing the generations, and designating the different branches of the family, and their connections and descendants, by the name of the particular place in which they originated or most generally resided. To aid in rendering this work more perspicuous some parts of it are so divided.

The orthography of some christian names varies in different periods and in different families in the same period. In some few cases in these Memorials the spelling used in a particular family, even if it was peculiar, has been followed. But generally the usual orthography in common use has been adopted. First names, particularly those of females, for the first hundred years after the settlement of New England, were generally used as they are at present. Anna and Hannah occasionally were synonymous. The term cousin generally expressed the same relationship as nephew or niece, but sometimes an indefinite degree of kindred. From 1750 to 1800, sometimes a little earlier or later, instead of giving the true names, others considered as synonymous were substituted. Nabby was used for Abigail; Patty for Martha; Polly and Molly for Mary; Sally for Sarah; Betsey and Betty for Elizabeth; Nancy for Anna, &c. Fashion seems to have had its influence in this as in other matters; and the early use of names has been very properly restored. Double names were seldom used before 1800. In Genealogical Memorials these names should not be abridged by initials, but all the names should be given in full.

It has seemed proper to notice some families of the name who were not descended from our first American progenitor, and some by other names who were immediately connected with ours; and as these notices could not with propriety be included in the Memorials, they are placed with other matters in an Appendix.

Two Indices are inserted at the end of the work. One contains most of the different first names given to the Shattucks in these Memorials; the other includes the whole names of other persons who have been connected with the family by marriage, or who for other reasons are inserted. By referring to these Indices any one can easily ascertain any name which is contained in the work.

The abbreviations chiefly used are—b. for born; bap. for baptized; m. for married; unm. for unmarried; d. for died; a. or æ. for age or aged; s. for son; dau. for daughter; p. for page. In dates and ages, y. stands for years; m. for months; and d. for days. In cases in which a parent marries more than once, the different marriages are designated by figures placed immediately after m., the abbreviation of married; as "m. 1" means married first, or for a first wife, or a first husband; "m. 2," married second, or for a second wife or a second husband; "m. 3," married third, and so on. Cases sometimes occur in which the maiden surname of the wife before marriage is inserted in a parenthesis between the christian name and the surname she acquires by marriage; as, Susanna (Randall) Shattuck, shows her maiden surname to have been Randall. In some instances (C) stands for Congregational Church; (B) for Baptist; (M) for Methodist; (U) for Universalist, &c. Persons are occasionally noticed as members of churches, but many who sustained that relationship are not thus characterized for want of the requisite information. The names of towns which are often repeated are sometimes abbreviated; as, Wat. for Watertown; Gro. for Groton; Pep. for Pepperell. Other abbreviations occasionally occur.

The form of the volume is octavo, and it is quite desirable that all Genealogies, whatever may be the amount of matter they may contain, should be printed in the same form, that those who make collections of such works may have them in uniform size. It is also the most convenient and economical size in which to print the materials of such a work.

Blank pages are placed at the end of the volume for the insertion of corrections and additions, and for the continuation of Family Histories.

I. First Generation and Children.

1. WILLIAM SHATTUCK was the most remote ancestor with whom we have been enabled to connect ourselves, in our history, upon satisfactory evidence; and we begin with his, in our classification, as the first, or earliest known generation. From him, as their common progenitor, have descended nearly all, if not every one, of those who now bear his name in America. He was born in England in 1621 or 2, and died in Watertown, Massachusetts, August 14, 1672, aged 50 years. His exact origin and early history are involved in obscurity. Neither the place of his birth, nor the year in which he came to this country, nor the names of his parents, are certainly known. There is no doubt, however, that his immediate ancestors and connections were residents of England; and they were probably among those already mentioned in our introductory observations, either of Lancashire, Somersetshire, or Berkshire, but we are unable to specify the particular persons or locality. He must have emigrated when in or near his minority. It has been conjectured that his father might have died on his passage or soon after his arrival; and also that he might have been the son of widow Damaris Shattuck, who was admitted to the church in Salem, in 1641, and a brother of Samuel Shattuck, noticed in the Appendix to these Memorials; and their ages, the prevalence of similar names in their respective families, and other circumstances, give some probability to these conjectures. But of such a connection, if indeed one existed, we have as yet obtained no conclusive proof. If not a brother he was probably a near relative of Samuel Shattuck.

Massachusetts was first colonized by the English Puritan emigrants, in Boston and its vicinity, in 1630. Watertown was settled in the same year,—ten years later than the founding of Plymouth. This town is in Middlesex County, from four to seven miles westerly of Boston, and has Cambridge, easterly, intervening between the two places. It originally included the present town of Waltham, incorporated separately in 1737. It is thus one of the most ancient, and it was early one of the most important, towns in the Province. The General Court and the Provincial Congress held several sessions in this town. Mr. Shattuck's name appears in an old list of the proprietors of Watertown, made about 1642, twelve years after its first settlement, although he was then only twenty years of age. The first lot of land granted to him is described upon the records as follows:—

“2. Three acres of upland, by estimation, bounded the north wth Joseph Morse, the south wth William Perry, the east wth John Clough & y<sup>e</sup> west wth Commonland in his possession.”

To this estate he made large additions by subsequent grants and purchases. Among other parcels of land the records state that on the 4th July, 1654, he bought of his neighbor John Clough, his house, garden, and thirty acres of land, situated on Common Hill, near his own estate, bounded east by William Payne and E. Goffe, west by the highway, north by Joseph Morse and “south by the highway to the pond;” probably lying in the corner easterly and northerly of the intersection of the two roads, now called Common street and Washington street. Also twenty-five acres of upland; three acres of swamp land; and one third part of twelve acres of meadow land. He also bought a farm at Stony Brook, near the present bounds of Weston, and four acres of meadow in Pond Meadow, which he bequeathed at his death, in equal shares, to his sons, Philip and William. He also bought a dwelling-house and a large farm of Edward Sanderson; but a question having arisen as to his title to some parts of it, the town voted, December 27, 1664, that “William Shattuck shall enjoy the land he bought of Sanders, provided he pay to Sanders twenty bushels of good merchantable Indian corn to spend in his house."

We have found it difficult to ascertain the exact place where Mr. Shattuck resided. It was, however, undoubtedly on Common Hill, near "King's Common" so called—the Common land reserved and owned by the town. This locality was northerly of the celebrated residence of J. P. Cushing, Esq.; southerly of the Wellington Hill Station on the Fitchburg Railroad; and easterly of Common street, leading from that station southerly to Watertown village. Permission was frequently given by the town to make bricks "at the clay pits near William Shattucks." This bed of clay was then considered a rarity; and it was reserved by the town as a public place for brick making. It was on the hill northerly and near Washington street, then an ancient highway leading from Common street to Fresh Pond, and in the vicinity westerly of the residences of Mr. Chenery and Mr. Stone, as laid down on Shield's Map of Boston and Vicinity, published in 1852. And Mr. Shattuck's dwelling-house was on the hill, somewhere on the north side of this highway. The Watertown records, in describing a piece of common land sold by the town, in 1743, to Ebenezer Chenery, "lying above the clay pits," say the bounds run "on a line to a rock at said Chenery's fence, above or west of a spring (commonly called Shattuck's Spring.)" The residences on this hill command a fine view of Fresh Pond, near by, and of Boston and its vicinity in the distance; and are among the most delightful in Watertown. Successors bearing the name of Shattuck occupied the estate for about one hundred years, but for the last hundred years it has been in the possession of others.

Mr. Shattuck is sometimes denominated a weaver; an humble but honorable handicraft of considerable importance in his day, when all articles of clothing were the product of household manufacture. And it is not improbable that he combined his mechanical with other occupations, and wrought in his loom as well as on his farm; for at his death he actually bequeathed his "loom and its appurtenances" to his son William. Agriculture seems, however, to have been his principal employment, as it has been that of the larger part of his posterity. His example of uniting the labors of the farmer and mechanic in one person has been followed by many of his descendants. He resided in Watertown about thirty years; and by his sagacity, industry and economy, though dying in the full vigor of manhood, he acquired, for the times in which he lived, a large property, the inventory of which amounted at his death to £434 19s. 11½*d.* sterling, of which £200 was in real estate, and £234 19s. 11½*d.* in personal estate, including £103 17s. 7½*d.* in money. He appears, so far as can be ascertained from contemporary records, to have sustained the character of a sagacious, energetic, and successful business man; of an honest, upright, and worthy citizen; and of a good and peaceable neighbor. He held a respectable social position among his fellow townsmen; and his family and the families to whom they were allied by marriage were highly respected, and among the most wealthy and influential in Watertown.

He was interred in the ancient burying-ground situated on the old road leading from Cambridge to Watertown, a short distance westerly of Mount Auburn. A simple but substantial marble tablet, resting in a granite base, has recently been erected near the northwesterly corner of this ground, at the turn of the road to Brighton, bearing the following inscription:—

"To perpetuate the memory of
 WILLIAM SHATTUCK,
 who died in Watertown,
 Aug. 14, 1672, aged 50;
 The progenitor of the families that have borne his name in America.
 And of his son,
 JOHN SHATTUCK,
 who was drowned
 in Charlestown Ferry,
 Sept. 14, 1675, aged 28.
 This simple memorial was erected in 1853, by Lemuel Shattuck, who holds in grateful veneration the character of the Puritan Fathers of New England."

William Shattuck was married about 1642, when he was twenty years of age. The christian name of his wife was SUSANNA; but neither her surname, nor her parentage, nor the exact date or place of her birth or marriage, has been ascertained.

She remained a widow about fifteen months after his death, and married, Nov. 18, 1673, Mr. Richard Norcross, who survived her. She died in Watertown, Dec. 11, 1686, fourteen years after the death of her first husband.*

In his will Mr. Shattuck mentions "his ten younger children," as if he had others, but it does not appear that he had more than that number. The births of the second, third and tenth only are entered upon the Watertown records. The remainder are ascertained from other authentic evidence.

A petition, dated June 19, 1683, purporting to be from Philip Shattuck, is on the court files of Middlesex County, in which it is said,—“Our two youngest brothers, Benjamin and Samuel, were left to the care and government of our honored mother, unto whom our honored father did bequeath the most considerable part of his estate; but after our mother did marry againe, she thought it would be beneficial for our youngest brothers to have trades; and she accordingly put them out,—Benjamin to my brother William, and Samuel to myself. But before Benjamin came of age, God was pleased to visit him with a long and lingering sickness, of which he died, being in his 20th year; and by reason of the long time of his sickness, the charges of the doctor, his attendance, and the funeral charges, were considerable.” And he prays that they may be paid out of the estate that was bequeathed to him, which was probably done.

* Richard Norcross was the son of Jeremiah Norcross, who d. in Watertown, in 1657. He was b. in 1621, and educated in England; was admitted a freeman, in 1653, and was the worthy teacher of the grammar school in Watertown about thirty-five years, from 1651 to 1687. His is said to have been the first and for many years the only public school in the town. His salary for teaching Latin, English, writing, and other branches, was £30 per annum. He married for his first wife, June 24, 1650, Mary Brooks, who d. Feb. 24, 1672. By her he had seven children, Mary, Jeremiah, Sarah, Richard, Mary, Nathaniel, and Samuel, of whom Nathaniel m. Susanna Shattuck, dau. of Philip Shattuck, and granddau. of Susanna (Shattuck) Norcross. (See family, 14.)

The will of Wm. Shattuck, executed while he was on a sick bed, is dated August 3d, eleven days before his death, and was proved in court August 29th, fifteen days afterwards. This will and the inventory of his estate were deposited in the office of the Middlesex Probate Court, and still exist in its files. Copies were entered upon its records, (Vol. IV., pp. 24 and 26.) These documents will undoubtedly interest the family, and faithful copies of the original are given below.

“Watertown

The Last Will and Testament of William Shathock, aged 50 years.

I, William Shathock, being under the afflicting hand of God, sick and weak but in perfect memory, not knowing how soone I may end the days of my weary pilgrimage, do constitute this my last will and testament, for y<sup>e</sup> disposal of what I shall leave behind me, as followeth:

Item. I give my ten younger children thirty pound in money to be equally divided amongst them; to them that are married, I will their parts should be payd a month after my disease; that which belongs to the unmarried my will is it shall be in their mothers hand to be kept for them till they come to age capable.

Item. I give to my son Sam: Church six pound in money, to be payd a month after my disease.

Item. I give to my son, Philip Shathock, the one half of my farm and two acres of meadow in pond meadow, to him and his heyers forever.

Item. I give to my sonne, William Shathock, the other half of the s<sup>d</sup> farm and two acres of meadow in pond meadow, to him & his heyers for ever; as also a young horse with all his trooping furniture; also the loome and its appertinances.

Item. I give to my four small children my mare with all her increase.

All the rest of my moveable goods I give to my dear wife, Susanna, for her owne maintenance & bringing up my younger children; and also the use of my hous and land which I now dwell upon with that I bought of Edward Sanderson, till my two younger sons, Beniman and Samuel, arrive to twenty one years of age. If my s<sup>d</sup> wife marry, my will is that she receive four pound p<sup>r</sup> year out of my s<sup>d</sup> hous & lands; if she marry not, I give them to her during her life.

Item. I give to my s<sup>d</sup> Beniman & Samuel my house and land I now dwell upon, with that I bought of Ed: Sanderson, and my half dividend, to them and their heyers forever.

Item. I give to my sonne John twenty pound, to be payd after my wifes decease by my sons, Beniman and Samuel, or their heyers, five pound per year; the whole to be paid in the space of four years.

Item. I give to my grand children living at my disease forty pound, to be equally divided and payd after y<sup>e</sup> death of my wife by my s<sup>d</sup> sons, Beniman & Samuel, within the space of ten years, four pound p<sup>r</sup> year, beginning with the children of my eldest children; alway provided, that if any my legitees dy before marriage my will is that what I have given be divided amongst y<sup>e</sup> rest.

I do father constitute my deare wife, Susanna Shathock, sole exectutor of this my will; requesting my loving friends, John Coolidge, iouner, and Sam: Livermore, assistant my s<sup>d</sup> wife, and to be payd for their pains.

Signed, sealed, & delivered, in presence of us,
John Coolidge,
John Livermore."

Witness my hand,
William Shattuck.

From the following document it seems that the appraisers of his estate did not understand orthography quite as well, or were not quite as careful in the use of it, as the writers of his will and other documents relating to the settlement of his estate. We prefer, however, to give it as written, with the exception of punctuation, which has been added. No description of ours could give a better idea of the domestic arrangements, the household economy, and the interior life, of our ancestor, than is afforded by a careful examination of this inventory. It will aid us in paying an imaginary visit to his "parler," his "ceichen," his "shope," his "dairy," and his farm generally, to ascertain their extent and the various implements in use in his daily life.

Some questions rose as to the proper interpretation of the will of Mr. Shattuck, after the marriage of his widow; and the following bond or order, dated April 8, 1674, was passed by the court at Cambridge, and entered upon its records. This document is given in connection with another, relating to the final settlement of the dowry, to illustrate the manner in which these matters were managed at that early day. It does not appear to be the result of a law suit that had been commenced, but a mutual agreement to avoid any occasion of one.

"For the finishing of all controversy that has or may arise concerning the estate that William Shattuck's widow brought with her to her present husband, Richard Norcross, this court, with the mutual consent of all concerned therein, doe order that the said Richard Norcross shall have the use of the whole part of the estate that was left to her during the time of the younger children's minority, to wit, two boys twenty-one years, and the girl eighteen, or else at marriage, which of either shall first happen. And in case that he decease before his wife, that she shall have y<sup>e</sup> same fully made good to her again besides what he shall have out of his owne good will or the law will give unto him. And in case she decease before him, that then, unless by will she shall bequeath any part thereof to him, the said Richard Norcross, he shall then pay, or cause to be paid, forty-five pound, which is the sum y<sup>e</sup> inventory of her goods came to his hand, and the same he shall pay in full value to the children of his new wife, which shall then be living, as his said wife shall appoint, by her last will or otherwise. To the performance whereof the said Richard Norcross acknowledges himself, exectutors, administrators, to stand fully bound in a bond of ninety pound sterling, to be paid to the treasury of the county.

"And the court do further order that y<sup>e</sup> aforesaid Richard Norcross, performing according to the above said request, all other obligations by him made, in reference to person or estate, shall be null and void, to all intents and purposes in the law; and the said Richard is to bring up the three young children as his own untill they come to age to chose guardians or be put to apprentices.

Sworn to in Court.

Richard Norcross."

"This writing, bearing date this 29th March, 1687, testifieth, that we, Philip Shattuck, William Shattuck, Samuel Shattuck, Jonathan Brown, John Fay, and Abigail Morse, all children, natural or by marriage, of Mrs Norcross, late widow and relict of William Shattuck, deceased, do owne and acknowledge ourselves to be fully satisfied with what we have now received of our father-in-law, Mr. Richard Norcross, being the full of what he was to pay to us of what he received of our father Shattuck's estate, and agreed by bond, given into County Court, at Cambridge, the eighth of April, in the year of our Lord 1674. We say we have each and every of us received our proportion in full, according unto that bond. As witness our hands, the day and year above written.

Witnessed by us,

Vol. X., p. 105.

William Shattuck,
Philip Shattuck,
Samuel Shattuck,
Jonathan Brown,
John Fay,
John Mors, in y<sup>e</sup> behalf of Abigail Mors, late widow."

It will be perceived that neither the heirs of John Shattuck, nor Rebecca (Shattuck) Church, were represented in this last agreement. It is probable that the latter were dead at the date of its execution, but the former were then living in Groton. Why they were omitted does not appear. Perhaps their portion of the estate bequeathed to their father, might have been paid to their mother, at another time, either before or after their removal to Groton.

3. MARY SHATTUCK, dau. of William, (p. 61,) was b. in Watertown, Aug. 25, 1745; and d. in that part of the town now comprised in Waltham. A grave-stone erected to her memory is still standing in the Waltham burying-ground, bearing the following inscription:—"Here lyes buried y<sup>e</sup> Body of M<sup>rs</sup> Mary Browne, Relict of M<sup>r</sup>. Jonathan Browne, who Departed this life Oct. y<sup>e</sup> 23<sup>d</sup> A. D. 1732, in y<sup>e</sup> 89th year of her age. Pious in life: Resigned in Death."†

* Mr Fay, after his marriage to widow Susanna (Shattuck) Morse, took her children by her first husband with him to Marlborough, and this was the cause of the Morses becoming permanent settlers in that town. On the 25th of Dec. 1695, Samuel "Biglo," John Bemis, Joseph Morse, and Samuel Morse, then described as husbandmen of Watertown, bought of Ephraim Hunt, Esq., of Weymouth, for £300, a tract of land in Marlborough, containing 850 acres, formerly granted to Dr. John Alcock, of Roxbury, and called "The Farms." Joanna, the wife of Ephraim Hunt, was the daughter of Alcock, and consented to the sale. (Mid. Rec., Vol. XIII, p. 509.) "Joseph Morse settled in the house said to have been built by Alcock. Samuel built southerly, and their brother Jonathan afterwards bought and settled on a tract of land adjoining to the farm, and built a short distance west of Samuel, so that one garrison might protect the three families." In 1723, John Bigelow, a son of Samuel, sold a portion of the land, inherited from his father, to John Shattuck, a grandnephew of Susanna, (see Family 38,) in exchange for his farm in Shrewsbury, and removed to that town. The posterity of the Morses may be found in the "Memorial of the Morses," pp. 74 to 89, and in the articles in the Appendix, therein referred to. Stephen Morse, Esq., now occupying the old ancestral residence, was descended from Susanna Shattuck, through Joseph, Joseph, Abner and Stephen. The numerous posterity by the name of Fay, in Worcester County and elsewhere, were also descended principally from Susanna Shattuck, through her sons, David and Gershom.

† If the record of her birth is correctly recorded, as it probably is, there appears to be an error here in the statement of her age. It should be 87 y. 1 m. 28 d., not "89th year."

She m. Feb. 11, 1662, JONATHAN BROWNE of Watertown, b. Sept. 15, 1635, s. of Abraham and Lydia Browne. He d. March, 1691, æ. 55½ years. His will, dated Feb. 19th, was proved April 1, 1691. Real estate, £247.

✓ 4. JOHN SHATTUCK, s. of William, (p. 61,) was b. in Watertown, Feb. 11, 1647; and, according to the records of that town, "was drowned as he was passing over Charlestown Ferry, the 14th Sept. 1675," æ. 28 y. 7 m. 3 d. He had lands granted to him in Groton in 1664, but it does not appear that he was an inhabitant of that town for any great length of time, if at all. He was a carpenter, and resided principally in the Middle District—the present village of Watertown; where he was employed by the town, in 1669 and subsequently, to keep the town mill, then situated near the present bridge leading to Newton Corner.

The year 1675 is well known in history as the commencement of the most disastrous war with the Indians that ever occurred in New England. It has been entitled "Philip's" war, from the name given to the notorious Metacom, the principal leader of the different tribes. It was undoubtedly the intention of King Philip to destroy all the white inhabitants; and at one time fears were entertained that he would carry his designs into execution. Many of the frontier towns were burned and deserted by the new settlers. Among other places early attacked were the remote settlements on Connecticut River. As a means of protection a military company was organized under Capt. Richard Beers, a distinguished citizen of Watertown, of which young John Shattuck was appointed sergeant,* and proceeded to Hadley. Hearing that Squawkeage, now Northfield, had been attacked, they marched, on the 4th of September, 1675, to its relief; and while on their route a large force of Indians who lay concealed, suddenly rose and fell upon them with overpowering fury. Of thirty-six men of whom the company was composed, sixteen only escaped death. Capt. Beers was killed. Sergeant Shattuck, one of the sixteen whose lives were preserved, was immediately despatched as a messenger to the Governor of the Colony to announce the result of the expedition. On the 14th of September, ten days after the battle, as he was crossing the ferry between Charlestown and Boston, he was drowned. Gookin, (Trans. Am. Antiquarian Society, Vol. II., p. 466,) describes this event as follows:—

“About this time a person named Shattuck, of Watertown, that was a sergeant under Capt. Beers, when the said Beers was slain near Squakeage, had escaped very narrowly but a few days before; and being newly returned home, this man being at Charlestown, in Mr. Long’s porch, at the sign of the Three Cranes, divers persons of quality being present, particularly Capt. Lawrence Hammond, the Captain of the town, and others, this Shattuck was heard to say to this effect: ‘I hear the Marlborough Indians, in Boston in prison, and upon trial for their lives, are likely to be cleared by the court; for my part,’ said he, ‘I have been lately abroad in the country’s service, and have ventured my life for them, and escaped very narrowly; but if they clear these Indians, they shall hang me up by the neck before I ever serve them again.’ Within a quarter of an hour after these words were spoken, this man was passing the ferry between Charlestown and Boston; the ferry boat being loaded with horses and the wind high, the boat sunk; and though there were several other men in the boat and several horses, yet all escaped with life, but this man only. I might mention several other things of remark here that happened to other persons, that were filled with displeasure and animosity against the poor Christian Indians, but shall forbear, lest any be offended.”

* In the books of the Treasurer of the Colony, now in the possession of the Genealogical Society, are several entries of payments for the services of John Shattuck as sergeant in this expedition.

It is proper to remark, in explanation of this narrative, that a painful suspicion was entertained at the time that some of the half christianized Indians in the settlements were privy to and partners in the conspiracy of Philip. Gookin did not share this suspicion, and he therefore opposed the war and those engaged in it. He had acted as counsel for the Indians then on trial; and he considered it criminal in any one to speak against them, notwithstanding some of them were convicted and were afterwards executed for murder. Whether Mr. Shattuck made the remarks, in "effect," as here given, or whether they were a mere hearsay report, is uncertain; but Gookin seems to have considered his accidental drowning a special Providence, executed upon him as a punishment for his honest but fearless expression of opinions on subjects which he had just discussed with "divers persons of quality"! This judgment, however, if indeed it was one, did not occur alone; others happened to other persons for similar acts. Mr. Shattuck, as an honest, independent young man, having opinions of his own, and not afraid to express them on a proper occasion, would not be very likely to speak in the most mild and friendly terms of an enemy that had, only ten days before, betrayed and killed twenty out of thirty-six of his companions in arms; and he is to be commended for his conduct, and for this exhibition of a characteristic trait of the family.

5. Dr. PHILIP SHATTUCK, s. of William, (p. 61,) was b. in Watertown, and d. within the present limits of Waltham, June 26, 1722, æ. 73. His place of residence was in the vicinity of the Waverley Station on the Fitchburg Railroad, easterly of Beaver Brook; and his estate extended northerly into Cambridge. He was a physician of eminence, and for a long period a leading man in the public affairs of the town. He was often chosen moderator of town meetings, and held the offices of assessor, town treasurer, chairman of the selectmen, and very many other important stations of public trust and responsibility. The gravestone erected to his memory was standing in the Waltham burying-ground, in 1852, bearing the following inscription:—

"Here Lyes Buried
PHILIP SHATTUCK, who dece<sup>d</sup> June y<sup>e</sup> 26th, 1722, in y<sup>e</sup> 74th year of his Age.
Blessed are the Dead that Die in the Lord."

A new marble tablet has recently been erected, to which the above inscription was transferred, with the following appended: "The above record was transferred from a moss-grown crumbling head-stone of slate, to one of more enduring marble, by a descendant of the 5th Generation, A. D. 1853."

His will, dated Jan. 29th, and proved Aug. 30th, 1722, is recorded in the Middlesex Records, Vol. XVI, p. 436. He had two sons by the name of Philip living at the same time, one by each wife; and they were distinguished from each other in his will, as "Philip Shattuck of Saybrook," and "Philip Shattuck, the younger," or as "the youngest son of my present beloved wife." Accounts of two living children of the same name in one family sometimes occur in the early history of this country and in England, but this is the only instance that we have discovered in our family. In his will Mr. Shattuck appoints his son Isaac Shattuck his executor; and bequeaths him "all my wearing apparell," and £20 in money; to son "Philip Shattuck, of Saybrook," 5s.; to son Joseph Shattuck, the "New London Dispensatory, the English Physician, and another book entitled Dr. Williams;" to son Benjamin Shattuck, son-in-law John Underwood, daughter Parkhurst, "each of my daughter Norcross's children," daughter Ann Sanderson, son Joseph Shattuck, each 5s., "to be paid in eight years after my decease;" to granddaughter Rebecca Underwood, one cow; to sons Amos and "Philip Shattuck, the younger," all his books and "instruments of husbandry," and other estate not otherwise disposed of; and they were to pay all his debts and deliver to their mother "annually, during the whole time of her remaining my widow, sixteen bushels of good Indian corn, and four bushels of malt, and one hundred weight of pork, and five barrells of cider, if the orchard produce fruit sufficient for it, and five cords of wood suitable and fit for the fire, at her door; and a suitable beast to carry her to the public worship;" and she was to have the "use of the east end of his mansion house, from top to bottom."

He m. 1, Nov. 9, 1670, DEBORAH BARSTOW, dau. of Wm. and Anna Barstow. She d. Nov. 24, 1679. Wm. Barstow, the father, d. in Dedham, Jan. 1, 1668, leaving a widow and 8 children. On the 29th March, 1671, Michael Barstow, a brother of Wm., deeds to Philip Shattuck six acres of land in Watertown, "for the love and affection I have and do bear unto my loving kinswoman Deborah, the wife of Philip Shattuck."

He m. 2, Feb. 11, 1680, REBECCA CHAMBERLAIN, who survived him, and d. in 1728. She also left a will, dated Dec. 13, 1727, proved Nov. 19, 1728, (Mid. Rec., Vol. XVIII., p. 522,) in which Amos and Philip were appointed her executors. She bequeathed to her sons Benjamin and Joseph, 20s. each; to Isaac, one feather bed; to Sarah Parkhurst, "half my wearing apparell, and half my wearing and housell linnen, my biggest iron pot, one pewter platter, a brass mortar and pestle;" to granddaughter Rebecca Gale, "half my wearing apparell, half my wearing and housel linnen, and one pewter platter;" to daughter Ann Sanderson "my wainscott cobbart that stands in the dwelling room;" to sons Amos and Philip, "all the rest and residue of the estate," to be equally divided between them.

12. Sarah, b. Oct. 26, 1696; m. Samuel Parkhurst, . . . . . 21
13. Theophilus, bap. April 15, 1700; probably d. in infancy.
14. Philip, b. Oct. 19, 1699. He was published in Boston, June 4, 1734, to Jane McClenning, [McLelland?] but we have found no record of marriage, nor of any family, if he had one. Samuel Gale was appointed administrator on his estate, July 29, 1754; and he probably d. in Waltham that year.

6. WILLIAM SHATTUCK, s. of William, (p. 61,) was b. in Watertown in 1653. He lived in the easterly parish upon the old homestead on Common Hill, "on the highway to the pond," where he died Oct. 19, 1732, aged 79. He inherited from his father his "loom and its appurtenances," and like him was called a weaver; but he followed farming, brickmaking, and other employments. In an entry on the Watertown records, Feb. 10, 1685, it is said—"Willyam Shattuck had liberty to dig clay this summer to make bricks at the clay pits near his house, provided that he damify not the highway, and that he pay to the town youse four pens per thousand for all the bricks that he selleth out of town; he having promised to give true account of what he selleth." Subsequently this contract was several times renewed.

In Watertown, as in many other places in former years, the selection of a site for the meeting-house occasioned a long and exciting controversy. It was finally referred for settlement to a committee of the General Court, and in 1694, "Mr. William Shattuck" was chosen with four others to lay the subject before this committee. In a pauper case in litigation in 1695, a committee was instructed by a vote of the town to procure "Mr. William Shattuck to assist them if possible in the town's behalf." He was often chosen "a commissioner" to take the invoice or valuation; and in 1694 was one of a committee "to go down to Boston & pleade the town's case, the town being overrated in the county rates; and they are desired to prosecute the case to the utmost in the towns behalf." These and many other similar evidences of the respect and confidence reposed in him by the inhabitants, and of his high social position and influence, are to be found upon the records. He held at different times the most important public town offices, and was one of the most eminent, wealthy, and useful citizens. In a general subscription raised for repairs on the meeting-house in 1694, he gave 10 shillings, the highest but one on the list of forty persons. In 1712 another subscription was raised by the "piously disposed persons, inhabitants of Watertown," to purchase a parsonage "for the accommodation of Rev. Mr. Gibbs, who is their present minister, and such as shall succeed him in the work of the ministry;" and

William Bond, William Shattuck and Nathaniel Bright were chosen by the subscribers the trustees for the management of the fund. (Middlesex Deeds, Vol. XV., p. 599.) As late as 1723 Mr. Shattuck was chosen by the town, with Col. Jonas Bond and Noble Bright, a committee to obtain from the Province 3,500 acres of land granted to Watertown and Weston, and not then taken up. His grave-stone, still standing, in a good state of preservation, near the northwesterly corner of the ancient burying-ground, by the side of the new tablet recently erected, has the following inscription:—

 y<sup>e</sup> Body of Mr.
 WILLIAM SHATTUCK
 who Departed this Life October y<sup>e</sup> 19th
 80th year of his age."

His will, dated Jan. 11, 1727, and proved Dec. 4, 1732, is entered upon the Middlesex Records, Vol. XIX., pp. 446, 447, and 448. It provides for the distribution of his estate as follows:— He bequeathed "to my beloved son Benjamin Shattuck and his heirs," £80; "to my three grandchildren, the children of my beloved son Robert Shattuck, deceased, the sum of £40, to be divided amongst them, as followeth, viz., to Robert, £20, to Randall, £10, and to Mary, £10; the said respective legacies to be paid to the sons, at their arrival at twenty-one years of age, and to the daughter, at her arrival at eighteen years of age or day of marriage;" "to my beloved daughter Elizabeth Holland and her heirs, £40;" to "my beloved daughter Joanna Holden, £30;" to "my beloved daughter Abigail Holden, £40;" to "my grandchildren, the children of my beloved daughter Susanna Holden, deceased, £30, to be equally divided between them;" to "my beloved daughter Mary Greenleaf, but 5s., I having already taken care for her portion out of my estate." The residue of his estate was divided into five shares, two of which were bequeathed to Benjamin, one to Elizabeth Holland, one to Joanna Holden, and one to Abigail Holden. Mr. Shattuck had loaned money to William Greenleaf, his son-in-law, for which he held his bond, dated Sept. 17, 1724; and a long clause is inserted in his will, providing for the payment of some of his specific legacies from the proceeds of this bond. Andrew Bordman and Joseph Mason were executors.

He m., about 1678, SUSANNA RANDALL. She d. May 8, 1723. Her father, Stephen Randall, m. Dec. 14, 1653, Susanna Barron, and d. Feb. 26, 1708, leaving a will, dated Jan. 13, 1698, and proved April 19, 1708, in which he mentions daughters Elizabeth Codman, Susanna Shattuck, and Mary Randall, (who was b. June 23, 1662, and m. Feb. 28, 1698, Abraham Chamberlain of Brookline.) Stephen was probably the s. of Elizabeth Randall, supposed to have been the widow of John Randall. She d. in Watertown, Dec. 24, 1672, æ. 80, a connection of the Browns. (Bond.) Susanna Barron was the daughter of Ellis Barron, who d. in Watertown, Oct. 30, 1676, and sister to Moses Barron, b. March 1, 1643, who m. Mary Learned, settled in Chelmsford, and was ancestor to Lucy Barron, the wife of Dr. Benjamin Shattuck, subsequently noticed.

9. SAMUEL SHATTUCK, the youngest child of Wm., (p. 61,) was b. in Wat., Feb. 28, 1666, where he lived several years. He probably removed from thence about 1695, since his name does not appear after that date upon its records; and his subsequent whereabouts and history I have been unable to trace. His wife ABIGAIL "owned the covenant" in Watertown in 1687, and her three children named below were born and baptized there. He might have had other children.

III. Third Generation and Children.

ORIGIN OF THE ELDER PEPPERELL BRANCHES.

10. JOHN SHATTUCK, son of John, (p. 71,) was b. in Watertown, June 4, 1666, and was killed by the Indians, in Groton, May 8, 1709, æ. 42 y. 11 m. 4 d. He was a farmer, and occupied the homestead, which had before belonged to his father-in-law, James Blood, and which, after his death, was set off to the widow, as her portion of the real estate, and by her sold to Mr. Shattuck. It was situated on the "Nod Road," so called, which runs north-easterly from the Stony-Ford-Way at Hollingsworth's paper-mills. The Shattucks and Bloods owned large tracts of land on both sides of Nashua River, in the vicinity of these mills. At the time of Mr. Shattuck's death he was one of the selectmen of Groton—an evidence of the respectability of his social standing.

Few persons, now-a-days, can have an accurate conception of the toil, suffering, and danger endured by the early settlers of our frontier New England towns. The workmen as they went forth to their labors were not sure of returning again in safety to their homes, or, if they did, that they should find the loved ones they left there alive. The tomahawk, scalping-knife, and other deadly weapons, were in the hands of foes whose approach was often invisible, and when they were least expected. Groton, a town in Middlesex County, about forty miles northwesterly from Boston—which has ever been the residence of some of our family or their connections—was particularly unfortunate in this respect. It was first settled in 1660, but on the 13th March, 1676, was burnt by the Indians; and such of its inhabitants as escaped death or captivity were compelled to abandon their estates, and seek protection in Concord, Watertown, and other older and more secure towns nearer Boston. In 1678, after the cessation of hostilities, Groton was resettled, and the Indian neighbors remained peaceable for several years. But about 1690 they again began to be troublesome, and for the subsequent fifteen or twenty years continued their depredations, by occasionally murdering the inhabitants, burning their houses, destroying their crops, or killing their cattle. In 1691, as a means of protection and safety, eight houses, in different parts of the town, were fortified and established as garrisons.* Into these houses the neighboring inhabitants gathered at night; and they were guarded by armed men as soldiers, ever wakeful as sentinels to warn the inmates of any approach of danger. One of these houses, situated in what is now the fifth School District, (the precise locality is not known) was occupied by Mr. Shattuck and his relatives and neighbors;

* The author of this work communicated to Caleb Butler, Esq. an account of these garrisons and a considerable amount of other information, published in his History of Groton.

and they seem to have experienced with most crushing force the calamities of the times.

Oct. 13, 1692, James Blood, father-in-law of Mr. Shattuck, was the first victim. "He was killed," says the record, "by the French and Indian enemy."

July 27, 1694, William Longley,—an uncle of Mrs. Shattuck,—his wife and several of his children, were killed, and three others of the family were carried into captivity. At the same time James Parker, Jr., a distant relative, and his wife and children, were killed or captured.

Enoch Lawrence, the step-father of Mr. Shattuck, in an engagement with the Indians, was wounded in the hand, and disabled for life. In consequence of which, in 1702, a pension of £3 per annum was granted him by the Province.

About 1706, three of the children of Thomas Tarbell—John, Zachariah, and Sarah, cousins of Mrs. Shattuck,—were stolen and carried to Canada, where they lived, it is said, the remainder of their lives. Their father, in his will, executed in 1715, makes them the residuary legatees of his estate, "upon their return from captivity."

The period of 1690 to 1710, might well be called the Reign of Terror, and the Dark Age of New England. The inhabitants of Groton became so much wearied out and impoverished, that they petitioned the government several times for relief. In one of these petitions, dated in 1703, the people say: "we spend so much time in watching and warding that we can do little else; and truly we have lived almost two years more like soldiers than otherwise." In another, dated July 9, 1707, the selectmen name several families that had been obliged to leave the town, and others "that are considering of going," being "unable to subsist any longer," on account of the Indian troubles. Among the latter were the three brothers,—John, William, and Samuel Shattuck,—and twenty others of their connections and neighbors, some of whom did actually remove, either for a temporary period or permanently. John Shattuck, however, remained. But on the 8th of May, 1709, two years afterwards, he and his eldest son, then in his 19th year, were both murdered by the Indians. Tradition says that this massacre occurred while they were crossing the Nashua River, in the vicinity of the Stony-Ford-

Way, near Hollingsworth's mills, on the return of Mr. Shattuck from his lands on the west side of the river.

The deaths by accident and violence in two successive generations in this branch of the family, prematurely removing two worthy and respectable men, fathers and protecting guardians of their children, were great calamities, and materially affected their condition, their fortunes, and their history. And these calamities were magnified by the times, and under the circumstances existing when they occurred. If these fathers had lived to the ordinary age of their kindred, how much could they have done for their families!

Mr. Shattuck m. MARY BLOOD, b. Sept. 1, 1672, dau. of James Blood and Elizabeth Longley, and granddau. of Richard Blood and Wm. Longley.* She remained a widow 47 years, and d. March 4,

* William Longley first settled in Lynn about 1638, where he was one of the selectmen in 1645, and a clerk of the writs in 1655. He removed to Groton, where he was town clerk in 1666. He d. there, Nov. 29, 1680, leaving a will dated 6 days before his death. His widow, Joanna m. Benjamin Crispe. She survived him and d. in Charlestown in 1698. She also left a will, dated April 12th, and proved Dec. 23th of that year. (See Genealogical Register, Vol. VII., p. 188; Mid. Prob. Rec., Vol. IV., p. 231; Mid. Deeds, Vol. XII., p. 77; Vol. XXXII., p. 532, and Vol. XXXVII., p. 702.) Mr. Longley had the following children:—

1. Elizabeth. She m. Sept. 7, 1669, James Blood, and d. about 1677, leaving two daughters. Mary, b. Sept. 1, 1672, and Elizabeth, b. April 27, 1675. Neither the mother nor the daughters are mentioned by Mr. Longley in his will, but his wife Joanna, who styles herself, "relict of Benjamin Crispe of Groton, formerly widow of William Longley," remembers them in her will in 1698, after their marriage to the two brothers, John and Samuel Shattuck, in the following terms:—"I give and bequeath unto two of my granddaughters, viz, Mary Shaddock and Elizabeth Shaddock, three acres of meadow lying and being in New Angle Meadow, joining to Dunstable, and forty acres of upland out of the six score acres lying and being on the other side of Groton River, the said meadow and upland to be equally divided between the said Mary and Elizabeth Shaddock." This proves that Elizabeth, the wife of Samuel Shattuck, was the daughter of James Blood, not Nathaniel Blood, as was once supposed. (See notice of the Bloods in the Appendix.)

2. John. He m. Hannah —; and had, born in Groton, William, b. March 12, 1669; Margaret, b. Oct. 28, 1671; Mary, b. Feb 10, 1674, and perhaps others.

3. Mary. She m. Samuel Leman, probably of Charlestown, and had issue.

4. Sarah. She m. Thomas Rand. His history has not been traced.

5. Lydia. She m. James Nutting of Groton, and had Sarah, b. 1681, Lydia, Joanna, Ruth, Elizabeth, b. 1698, William, and perhaps others.

6. Hannah, or Anna. She m. June 30, 1666, Thomas Tarbell, whose dau. Anna m. John Lawrence, nephew of Enoch. (p. 71,) and ancestor of Hon. Abbot Lawrence.

7. William. He m. May 15, 1673, Lydia —, and settled in Groton. He was town clerk in 1687, and from 1692 until his death. He lived on the east side of the "Hollis Road," on a knoll, a short distance northerly of William Shattuck's, and south of J. Fitch's, as marked on Butler's map. Here, on the 27th July, 1694, he, and his wife, and several of his children, were massacred by the Indians, and three others were carried into captivity, where they remained a number of years. Their grandmother Crispe, in her will, bequeathed to her "three grandchildren that are in captivity, if they return, three books; one of them a bible, another a sermon book treating of faith, and the other a psalm book."

John Longley, one of these captives, was redeemed by his friends in 1700, and afterwards resided in Groton, and was one of its most worthy citizens. He was many years parish and town treasurer; town clerk six years, 1723 to 1726, and 1728 and 1729; representative in the General Court three years, 1729 to 1731; and deacon in the church from 1722 until his death, which occurred May 25, 1750, æ. 67. He m. 1. Sarah Prescott, b. May 3, 1686, dau. of Jonas Prescott. She d. March 8, 1718. He m. 2. Deborah Houghton. He had 5 children by his first wife, and 7 by his last, whose posterity live in Groton, Shirley, and elsewhere. Col. Edmond Longley, who d. in Hawley, Nov. 29, 1842, æ. 96, was a descendant. See Butler's History of Groton, pp. 278, 417.

1756, æ. 83 y. 6 m. 3 d. Her husband joined the church in 1707, and she in 1721. He died leaving her, as his own father had left his own mother, at a dark and perilous period, to rear and provide for a large family of young children, the youngest not then three months old. To her heroic virtues, and to her excellence as a woman and a mother, her posterity owe a large debt of gratitude.

ORIGIN OF THE GROTON BRANCHES.

✓ 11. WILLIAM SHATTUCK, s. of John, (p. 71,) was b. in Wat., Sept. 11, 1670, and d. in Groton in 1744, in his 74th year. His residence was a little southerly of the house built by his grandson Job Shattuck, near Wattle's Pond. The following facts concerning him are derived from authentic and positive evidence, partly from the records of Watertown and Groton, and partly from papers on file, but not recorded, in the Middlesex Probate Office. He lived in Groton with his mother and step-father, Enoch Lawrence, from 1678 until about the time of his marriage in 1688, when he returned to Watertown, where he resided the principal part of the subsequent fourteen years. In 1691 he was impressed into the public military service of the Colony; and on the 4th Dec., 1691, the selectmen of Watertown "Agreed that Mr. William Shattuck should take care to provide for the relieve of the wife and two children of his cosen [nephew] William Shattuck, during the time of his beeing out in the country service from the 18th November, 1691, till he come home, or the town taks furdur order; and that the s<sup>d</sup> William shall be paid for his pains the one part out of the county assessments, as by order of the General Court is allowable, and the other part out of the town rate."

This was undoubtedly the William Shattuck, the subject of this notice; and his two children then born, were William and Hannah hereafter mentioned. After his return from the military campaign, as a consideration for his services, the selectmen voted to give him a lot of land for a dwelling-house, near "Patch Meadow;" and to allow him to cut timber owned by the town, to build it. He probably availed himself of this grant, in part at least; for we find the following entry upon the Watertown records, Nov. 16, 1702. At a public town meeting—

"Voted that if William Shattuck, junior, doth deliver the house & lands & fences to Manings Sawin, Town Treasurer, that he did hold of the town, within eight days next coming, then the s<sup>d</sup> Town Treasurer is to deliver the s<sup>d</sup> four pounds, that he acquired of John Green, to the s<sup>d</sup> William Shattuck, as a gratuity from the town to help him in his removing to Groton."

In 1702 he bought lands in and removed to Groton. In 1707 he was one of those already mentioned in our notice of his brother John, (p. 79,) who "were considering of removing" from Groton on account of the Indian troubles; and his wife Hannah, and probably her children, did actually return to Watertown in 1707, and resided a short time in the family of John Barnard, Jr. They were afterwards, however, permanent inhabitants of Groton. On the 21st Sept., 1716, William Shattuck deeded to his son "in consideration of the paternal love and affection I bear to my son William Shattuck, junior,"—"that he may be settled for the support of his family, and that he and his heirs may be forever debarred of making any further claim or demand of any farther portion out of my estate that I shall die seized of, either personal or real, except what I may hereafter give him," &c. This deed is signed by Wm. Shattuck, the father, and Anna or Hannah Shattuck, the mother. (Midd. Deeds, Vol. XXXVIII., pp. 33, 34.) His son John Shattuck administered on his estate; and in the petition for his appointment the widow Deliverance Shattuck calls him "her son-in-law," step-son, or son of her husband by a former wife. William is called "the eldest son of the diseased," and the others, children and heirs. The inventory of his property was presented June 1, 1744; and Wm. Shattuck's portion of the real estate which he had received from his father, was appraised as land "in his hands." The remainder was divided by commissioners appointed for the purpose in 1747; and the different heirs, and the portions assigned to each, are described in the deed of partition on the files of the court. "1. To Deliverance, the widow of the diseased," &c. "2. To John Shattuck, one of the diseased sons," &c. "3. To Daniel Shattuck, another of the diseased sons," &c. "4. To Hannah Blood, eldest daughter of the diseased, wife to Nathaniel Blood," &c. "5. To Ruth Nutting, youngest daughter of the diseased, wife to Ebenezer Nutting," &c.

William Shattuck m. 1, in Watertown, March 19, 1688, HANNAH UNDERWOOD. He is described in the record as then of Groton, and she of Watertown. There was no other William Shattuck then in Groton, or Watertown, excepting his uncle, (p. 74.) This wife was the mother of his children, and died about 1717.

He m. 2, in Groton, March 24, 1719, DELIVERANCE PEASE, who survived him. His wives were members of the church, and his children were baptized. These facts, and others hereafter to be stated, unquestionably prove a genealogical succession and descent from the first William Shattuck of Watertown to the recent families of the name in Groton. Each consecutive link in the chain is unbroken, and without irregularity.

12. SAMUEL SHATTUCK, s. of John, (p. 71,) was b. in Wat. in 1673, and d. in Groton, intestate, July 22, 1758, æ. 85. Samuel, his eldest s. administered on his estate, valued at £236 14. 7.

He m. ELIZABETH BLOOD, b. April 27, 1675, dau. of James Blood and Elizabeth Longley. (See note, p. 80.) She d. Oct. 20, 1759, æ. 84 y. 5 m. 23 d. One year before her death her son John, at the request of the other heirs, was appointed her guardian, because she was of "great age and under bodily and mental infirmity and not capable of caring for her own subsistence." Her separate estate was then valued at £182 16. 11, and consisted principally in lands, the title to most of which came to her by inheritance from the Bloods and Longleys. She united with the church in 1705, and her husband in 1709.

HIS CHILDREN, BY ELIZABETH BLOOD, BORN IN GROTON.

13. PHILIP SHATTUCK, s. of Philip, (p. 73,) was b. in Wat., Jan. 26, 1673, and settled in Saybrook, Conn. His subsequent history and that of his posterity we have been unable to obtain. A deed from Benjamin Pratt to Joseph Shattuck, dated March 24, 1732, is on record in Saybrook. In 1757 Joseph Shattuck sells lands to Samuel Comstock; and in 1763 William Williams sells lands in the second parish of Saybrook to Joseph Shattuck. These facts show that he or his son was at those periods an inhabitant of that place. The present town clerk informs us that the name has not appeared upon his records for many years past.

He m. in Saybrook, Jan. 6, 1704, Margaret Pratt.

HIS CHILDREN, BY MARGARET PRATT, RECORDED IN SAYBROOK.

17. BENJAMIN SHATTUCK, s. of Philip, (p. 73,) was b. in Wat., March 15, 1685, and settled on a farm where Adolphus Brown, his great-grandson now lives, as marked on Shield's Map of Boston and Vicinity. Here he d. in 1767, æ. 80. Parts of his estate were conveyed to him by his father, in 1708 and 1714; (Reg. Deeds, Vol. XIX., p. 209;) and other parts were purchased from others. He was a constable in Cambridge in 1732, and other years. His will, dated Sept. 28, 1730, contains a codicil, dated Dec. 29, 1754, and proved Dec. 8, 1767. (Midd. Prob. Rec. Vol. XXXIX., p. 340.) He bequeathed all his estate to his wife Rachel, "so long as she remains my widow," and after her marriage or death, to his son Josiah; he to pay to his son Benjamin, 5s.; to daughter Deliverance Fay, 5s.; to Sarah, £30, "at marriage, or when she is of age;" and to Susanna, £30, upon the same conditions. And the last two named daughters "shall have the privilege of a convenient fire room, and a privilege in the cellar, and likewise the liberty of the well at my house, so long as they or either of them shall remain unmarried." Before 1754, when the codicil was executed, Benjamin and Deliverance Fay had died; and he then annulled their legacies; and, instead, he bequeathed to the children of Deliverance, £13 6s. 8d. His estate was prized at £309 5s. 8d.

He m. 1, Feb. 20, 1707, his cousin, DELIVERANCE FAY of Marlborough, b. Oct. 7, 1686, (see p. 67.) She d. in Wat., Jan. 22, 1711, æ. 24 y. 3 m. 15 d.

22. SUSANNA SHATTUCK, eldest dau. of William, (p. 76,) m. SAMUEL HOLDEN, who was b. in Wat., April 28, 1674, and d. about 1726, his wife surviving him. His father, Justinian Holden, m. Mary Rutter, dau. of John Rutter of Sudbury, and d. Sept., 1671, leaving an estate prized at £1,153 17s. He was probably the son of Justinian Holden, who, in 1634, at the age of 23, embarked at Ipswich, England, for America, and was an early proprietor of Watertown, and a freeman in 1657. This family lived near Fresh Pond, and owned the place now occupied by the Fresh Pond Hotel. Three brothers—Samuel, Isaac and Joseph Holden, sons of Justinian Holden and Mary Rutter,—married three sisters, Susanna, Joanna, and Abigail Shattuck, daughters of William Shattuck.

HER CHILDREN, BY SAMUEL HOLDEN, BORN IN WATERTOWN.

1. Lydia, bap. Oct. 8, 1699; m. May 8, 1721, Benjamin Clark.

She m. 3, April 26, 1726, JOHN HOLLAND of Marlborough, and they probably afterwards resided in that town.

24. WILLIAM SHATTUCK, s. of William, (p. 76,) was b. in Watertown in 1686, and settled near his father. He bought of the town a portion of the common land near "King's Common." He d. in the prime of life, without issue, leaving a will, dated Dec. 10, 1723, eleven days before his death; and an estate, which was settled by his father, valued at £436 4s. 6d. His grave-stone, standing near the centre of the ancient burying-ground, says:—"Here lyes y<sup>e</sup> Body of Mr. William Shattuck, Jun<sup>r</sup>. who dec<sup>d</sup>. December y<sup>e</sup> 21st 1723, in y<sup>e</sup> 46th year of his age." He was a worthy man, had held several public offices, and was constable and collector of the town on the year of his death, then a very responsible and respectable office.

He m. Sept. 23, 1708, HEPZIBAH HAMMOND, dau. of Lieut. John Hammond, who, in 1690, paid the highest tax in the town. She m. 2, Sept. 10, 1724, John Robbins of Cambridge.

ORIGIN OF THE LITTLETON BRANCHES.

25. REV. BENJAMIN SHATTUCK, s. of William, (p. 76,) was b. in Watertown, July 30, 1687, and d. in Littleton, about 1763, the precise date not ascertained. On the 17th Jan., 1709, the year in which he was graduated at Harvard College, he engaged to keep the "Grammar and English School," at the rate of £30 per year; and the town agreed to build a new school-house for his accommodation.* He continued the teacher for six years, until 1715; and in the mean time studied divinity. He was ordained the first minister of Littleton, Dec. 25, 1717. On the 13th May, 1719, a committee of the proprietors of Littleton, consisting of Major Jonathan Prescott and Capt. Joseph Bulkley of Concord, Capt. Israel Powers of Littleton, Nathaniel Wilder of Lancaster, and Ebenezer Lawrence of Groton, "for divers good reasons and weighty considerations moving thereto," conveyed to him the "ministerial lot, so called," consisting of about one hundred acres of upland and mowing, lying on both sides of "King Street," now running southerly from the centre of the town to the railroad station. His dwelling-house was the first on the right of that highway south of the burying-ground, where Hayward Hartwell now (1853) lives. His connection with the town, as their minister, was dissolved Aug. 30, 1730, though his salary was continued until May, 1731. No reasons for the dissolution are given upon the records; but it appears to have been done in mutual good will. He continued to reside there until his death, much respected by his townsmen. In 1742, some pews were erected in the meeting-house, and the town "voted that Mr. Shattuck and his wife set in the front seat." A marble monument, erected to his memory in the Littleton burying-ground, bears the following inscription:—"Here sleeps until the resurrection morn, the Rev. Benjamin Shattuck, son of Dr. Philip Shattuck of Watertown, the first ordained minister of Littleton. Born May 15, 1685. Died A. D. 1763, aged 78."*

* According to the Watertown Records, this house was "twenty and five foote in length, and twenty foote in breadth, and six foote & a half between joints." "Mr. Caleb Church, doctour Philip Shattuck, Sam<sup>l</sup> Biglow, Mr. William Shattuck, sen<sup>r</sup> and Mr. Joseph Sherman" were appointed a "committee to cary on the work of building and furnishing the school house." It was furnished with "three tables & all so three foorms." The whole cost was £35. It was situated "within about twenty rods of the middle meeting-house in the town," which, according to Dr. Francis, (Hist. Wat., p. 142.) stood "in one of the angles now (1830) formed by the intersection of the roads near the houses of Charles Whitney and Joel Pierce—a place sometimes called the Four Corners."

He m. MARTHA SHERMAN, bap. Sept. 1, 1689. She d. in Littleton, but at what date is unknown. Her father Joseph Sherman, Esq., a blacksmith by trade, was a noted public man in Watertown. He m. Nov. 18, 1673, Elizabeth Winship, dau. of Edward Winship of Cambridge, and was father of William Sherman, a shoemaker of Watertown, and grandfather to Hon. Roger Sherman, the eminent United States senator from Connecticut. The father of Joseph, Esq. was Capt. John Sherman,† a most distinguished citizen of the Colony. He was b. in 1613, in Dedham, Essex County, England; came to America in 1634; was a freeman in 1637; a selectman many years; town clerk 1648, and in other years; a noted land surveyor; steward of Harvard College in 1662; and was otherwise useful in public life. He m. Martha, dau. of Roger Porter, and Grace Cooledge. He d. Jan. 25, 1691, æ. 76. She d. Feb. 7, 1701.

7. Ebenezer, b. Feb. 22, 1722. A tradition has existed, that he went to the south part of the State, or to Connecticut, but we have been unable to learn his whereabouts. He may have been the one who lived awhile in Oxford.

* A tradition has prevailed that Philip Shattuck was the father of Rev. Benjamin Shattuck, as stated in this inscription, but evidence has recently been discovered which proves a different relationship. The Worcester Registry of Deeds, Vol. XXXV., p. 439, contains a conveyance, dated Jan. 12, 1748, of a lot of land in "Naragansett township, No. 2," (Westminster,) to Abner Holden, from "Benjamin Shattuck of Littleton," belonging to the "heirs of his honored father, Mr. William Shattuck, late of Watertown, deceased." And from old papers in the possession of the late David Kendall of Waltham, it appears that his real estate descended to him from Philip Shattuck through his son Benjamin Shattuck, and grandson Josiah Shattuck. These facts prove that Benjamin the son of Philip, resided in Cambridge, and that Benjamin the son of William was the minister of Littleton. See also the conveyance of the heirs of William Shattuck to William Greenleaf, referred to, on the next page, as additional evidence.

† The American Medical Biography, (Vol. II., p. 76,) states incorrectly, probably founded on tradition, that Martha Sherman was granddaughter of Rev. John Sherman, the first minister of Watertown.

26. MARY SHATTUCK, dau. of Wm., (p. 76,) b. in Watertown, d. in Boston, Aug. 18, 1732, æ. 43, thirty-nine days after the birth of the 9th child.

He m. 2, May 9, 1733, Ruth Ruggles, by whom he had 3 children—2 d. in infancy. Oliver, the youngest, was father to Oliver Cromwell Greenleaf, a bookseller in Boston, who d. Dec. 16, 1843, æ. 66. In 1733 William Greenleaf bought of the other heirs the homestead of Mr. Shattuck, his father-in-law. (Midd. Deeds, Vol. XXXIII., p. 422.)

IV. Fourth Generation and Children.

ORIGIN OF THE ELDER PEPPERELL BRANCHES.

30. JONATHAN SHATTUCK, s. of John, (p. 81,) was b. in Groton, June 29, 1693, and d. in Pepperell, Sept. 18, 1771, æ. 78 y. 2 m. 19 d. After the massacre of his father and elder brother, already mentioned, he was left, at the early age of sixteen, an only son, to take the place of a parent in providing for his mother and his six younger sisters; and he seems to have performed the duty with fraternal faithfulness and affection. His father's estate was finally settled by him in court, March 26, 1719—ten years after his death. The following is an abstract of his account on file in the probate office:—

|  |           |

* These children were residents of Plymouth during their minority. In 1733 Josiah Carver was appointed their guardian. The ancestors of their mother were among the original Pilgrims. Her grandfather, also named Bennajah Pratt, m. Nov. 29, 1655, Persis Dunham. He was probably the son of Phineas Pratt, who d. April 19, 1680, æ. 90, and grandson of Joshua Pratt, one of the third freight of Pilgrims who in 1623 came over in the ships Ann and Little James. Phineas Pratt m. in Plymouth in 1630, a daughter of Cuthbert Cuthbertson,—“an intelligent Dutchman that understood the English tongue,” who had united with the Puritan church in Leyden. Cuthbertson m. Sarah Allerton, a sister of Isaac Allerton, who came in the same ship with Pratt. Ephraim Pratt, said to have been a grandson of Joshua, d. in Shrewsbury in 1804, æ. 116 years, (Ward.) Persis Dunham was the daughter of John Dunham, who d. March 6, 1668, æ. 80; and of whom the church records say, “he was an approved servant of God, and a useful man in his place, being a deacon in the church at Plymouth,” chosen in 1634. His son John d. in 1692, æ. 79.

| To carting stones, . . . . .           | 0 09 00    |
|  | £18 03 00" |

In the meantime he had built a new house near the Stony-Ford-Way, for the accommodation of his mother and her family; and he subsequently bought of the other heirs all their rights in their father's estate. This estate he held until 1751, when he sold it to Abel Parker, his son-in-law. In 1725 he bought a tract of land westerly of the present meeting-house in Pepperell, and built upon "Windfall Plain," where the late Capt. Abijah Shattuck, his great-grandson, lived. He afterwards made several additional purchases, until he possessed 400 to 500 acres, comprising the farm now owned by the town, and those owned by Jonathan Shattuck, Thomas C. Shattuck, Henry Jewett, and others. Here he acquired a considerable estate as a farmer. He was held in high estimation by his fellow-townsmen, and was often chosen into public office. He and his wife were both members of the church.

He m. June 25, 1719, ELIZABETH CHAMBERLAIN, b. May 26, 1700, dau. of Thomas Chamberlain by Abigail Nutting, half sister of John Chamberlain, the hero of Pigwacket fight. (See Appendix.)

DESCENDANTS OF THE GROTON BRANCHES.

34. WILLIAM SHATTUCK, eldest s. of William, (p. 83,) was b. in Watertown in 1689, and d. in Groton, Aug. 1757, æ. 68. He lived near Wattle's Pond, on a farm partly given to him by his father, but enlarged by several purchases made by himself. During his lifetime he gave to his children by his first wife what he considered their proportion of his estate, and took their quit-claim as heirs; but he made a will dated Aug. 13th, and proved Sept. 8, 1757, disposing of his personal property, in which his son Ezekiel was made executor, and he and his brother Job were the principal heirs. The other children received merely a nominal sum. (Midd. Rec., Vol. XXVII., p. 455.) Ezekiel d. without issue soon after, and the estate was settled by Job without the aid of the probate court. He was baptized upon his own profession, April 14, 1717.

He m. 1, March 15, 1711, ABIGAIL SHATTUCK. She was the dau. of his great uncle Samuel Shattuck, (p. 75,) and was b. in Watertown, Oct. 17, 1686, and baptized in that town. She united with the church in Groton, Dec. 2, 1716, and d. about 1727.

* William Lakin, ancestor of the Lakin families, d. in Groton, Dec. 10, 1672, æ. 91. He emigrated in his old age from Redington, England, with two of his grandsons—Wm. and John, (whose father, Wm., Jr., had d. in England,) and their mother, his daughter-in-law, who had m. Wm. Martin for her second husband. They first settled in Reading, but removed to Groton and lived near Martin's pond. The eldest, known as Lieut. Wm. Lakin, d. Feb. 22, 1700. He m. ORIGIN OF THE HINSDALE BRANCHES.

36. Capt. DANIEL SHATTUCK, s. of William, (p. 83,) was b. in Watertown in 1692, but spent the period of his minority chiefly in Groton. From 1719 to 1723 he lived in Worcester, but removed about the latter date to Northfield, and about 1736 to Hinsdale, within the present bounds of New Hampshire, where he d. March 17, 1760, aged, as his grave-stone says, "about 67." He was a large landholder and a wealthy farmer. He had 215 acres in the division of the Northfield Commons,—a larger proportion than a majority of the proprietors. His dwelling-house was in the southerly part of "Mary's Meadow," so called—about one hundred rods east of Connecticut River, one mile south of Fort Hinsdale, one mile southeast of Fort Howe on the west side of the river now within the limits of Vernon, and three miles south of Fort Dummer within the limits of Brattleborough. He b two houses with hewn timbers on either side of a small brook. In the upper part were posts for sentinels, and holes to fire through. These houses were enclosed with a strong palisade, built with timbers and thick plank, surmounted with pickets; and the enclosure was called "Shattuck's Fort." (Doolittle's Narrative.) During the wars in 1745, and subsequently, the whole people of the neighborhood came to this fort to live. When the men labored on their farms or went to church, they carried their guns with them, and were always guarded by sentinels. On the 15th Aug., 1746, during the absence of Capt. Shattuck at Fort Dummer, the Indians fired upon four men near the fort, but hurt none. March 30, 1747, about thirty or forty Indians came to the fort silently in the night, "with fagots of dried spruce with the ends dipped in brimstone, and set it on fire. That part of it which stood on one side of the brook was burnt; but owing to a strong wind the other part was saved." (Doolittle, pp. 8, 10.) The English fired upon and disabled some of the Indians, but they made their escape.

Capt. Shattuck, senior and junior, were large athletic men over six feet high, and of great commanding presence. Their children were also above the medium size. It is said the Indians regarded them with fear, love and veneration, as superhuman beings. They generally lived on friendly terms with the savages, and their influence over them was always very great. The Indians probably did not design to kill them in this attack, but to take them alive and make them chiefs and leaders.

He m. 1, in Marlborough, April 16, 1719, MARTHA SERJENT, then said to have been of Westborough. She d. in Worcester in 1722. She was the dau. of Digory Serjent, the unfortunate pioneer settler of Worcester, who with his wife was killed by the Indians in 1704, while his children were carried into captivity. (Lincoln's Hist. Worcester, pp. 35-38.) Serjent's will, dated in 1696, was proved in 1707, but his estate was not settled until 1721, when parts were assigned to Thomas and John Serjent, to Daniel Shattuck, and to Daniel and Mary Serjent, then in Canada. Mr. Shattuck was allowed £20 for building a house or "hovel,"—as log-houses were sometimes called—on lands set off to John Serjent. On the 20th Dec., 1721, Mr. Shattuck sold his right in the common land in Worcester to Moses Leonard.

He m. 2, in Northfield, May 7, 1724, REBECCA BOLTWOOD, b. Aug. 1, 1691, dau. of Sergeant Samuel Boltwood of Hadley and Sarah Lewis, dau. of Capt. Wm. Lewis of Farmington, Conn. Sergeant Boltwood was killed at the sacking of Deerfield, Feb. 28, 1704. Mrs. Shattuck d. in Hinsdale, March 16, 1757, æ. 65 y. 7 m. 15 d. She was interred with her husband in the family burying-ground located on the old Shattuck farm, where have been buried several successive generations of the race; and where there are now existing several monuments erected to their memory.

CAPT. SHATTUCK'S CHILD, BY MARTHA SERJENT, BORN IN WORCESTER.

1. Sarah, only child by his first wife, was a single woman of Westborough in 1744, and then sold to Benj. Flagg "one fourth part of the land in Worcester set off to her uncle Daniel Serjent, late of Canada deceased, which land descended to my said uncle from my grandfather Digory Serjent, late of Worcester, deceased." (Worcester Deeds, Vol. XVIII., p. 230.)

 of Nashua River, where Walter Spaulding now (1853) lives.
 His brothers and sisters all (with one exception, perhaps,) settled in that town, and were extensive owners of real estate. He was one of the first assessors in Pepperell after its separate incorporation, and was otherwise distinguished in its public affairs. He and his first wife were members of the church in Groton; and from thence were dismissed at the organization of the church in Pepperell, and were amongst its original members. It is stated upon the records that his eldest son was the first white child born on the west side of Nashua River.

He m. 1, Jan. 27, 1726, ANNA WILLIAMS, b. April 1, 1702, dau.

9. Moses, b. Jan. 24, 1752; m. Abigail Woods, . . . . . 93

41. Capt. JEREMIAH SHATTUCK, s. of Samuel, (p. 84,) was b. in Groton, June 11, 1703, and settled in the centre of Pepperell as a blacksmith, where he d. Aug. 2, 1798, æ. 95 y. 1 m. 21 d. He was often chosen a selectman, and to other town offices; commanded a military company; and was otherwise distinguished as a leading public man, and as a valuable citizen.

He m. 1, July 2, 1723, SARAH PARKER, b. April 12, 1705, dau. of Nathaniel and Lydia Parker, granddau. of Joseph, and great-granddau. of Joseph Parker, one of the original proprietors and settlers of Chelmsford and Groton. She d. June 8, 1789, having lived in the marriage state nearly 66 years. Her grave-stone bears the following inscription:—

“In memory of
 Mrs. SARAH SHATTUCK, wife of Capt. JEREMIAH SHATTUCK, who after a lengthy course of industry, prudence and sobriety died June y<sup>e</sup> 8th 1789 in the 85th year of her age.
 From her descended 10 children 60 grandchildren and 54 great-grandchildren.

The days of our years are three score years and ten;
 and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow, for it is soon cut off and we fly away.*

He m. 2, Feb. 28, 1792, RUTH BIXBY. The Columbian Centinel newspaper of March 10th following, chronicles his second marriage thus:—“In Pepperell, Capt. Jeremiah Shattuck, aged 90, to Mrs. Ruth Bixby, aged 75.”

44. JOHN SHATTUCK, s. of Samuel, (p. 84,) was b. Jan. 21, 1711. He was a farmer, and settled on the road leading northerly from the meeting-house in Pepperell, where he d. Dec. 15, 1785, æ. 74 y. 10 m. 24 d. He left a will, and property valued at $997 17. He was one of the selectmen in 1760, 1767, and 1768, and was otherwise useful as a public man, and respected as a private citizen. His house was one of the garrison houses which were maintained even after 1750. Rev. Mr. Emerson, who was ordained in 1747, says, in a manuscript sermon now before us: "This was a frontier place. Since my residence here we have had garrisons and soldiers allowed by government; and have been obliged to carry our arms to the house of God, when we assembled for worship." It is said that Mr. Emerson, in one of his pastoral visits to Mr. Shattuck, urged him to set up family worship, and said "he should not leave him until he began the duty." From this or some other cause it was commenced and continued through life.

He m. 1, Dec. 11, 1739, SARAH HOBART, b. March 4, 1718.

* Mr. Butler, (History of Groton, p. 111,) says, "An Indian had been seen, for several days, lurking about the town, it was conjectured, upon some evil design. Mr. Ames, who lived on the intervale, on the west side of Nashua River, now owned by John Boynton, Esq., went into h's pasture to catch his horse. Discovering the Indian, he ran for his house; the Indian pursued and shot him as he entered his gate. The dead body prevented the gate's closing, as it would otherwise have done of itself, and the Indian pressed in to enter the house, where Ames had a son and daughter. The son seized his gun, and shot at him as he entered the gate. The ball, striking the latch of the door, split, and one part of it wounded the Indian, but not severely. As the son attempted to close the door against the enemy, after the shot, the Indian thrust his foot in, and prevented. The son called to his sister to bring his father's gun from the bedside, and at the same time striking the Indian's foot with the breach of his gun, compelled him to withdraw it, and closed the door. While the Indian was in the act of reloading his gun, the young man found means to shoot through a crevice and killed him. Two men, at work, about a mile distant in a mill, Ezra and Benjamin Farnsworth, hearing the reports of the guns, and suspecting the cause thereof, were soon at the place, and found the bodies of Ames and the Indian both weltering in their blood. This is the last man killed by an Indian in the neighborhood of Groton."

She d. April 6, 1755, 27 days after the birth of her seventh child, æ. 37 y. 1 m. 2 d.

He m. 2, Dec. 28, 1757, LYDIA HOBART, b. Nov. 12, 1729. She d. May 29, 1814, æ. 84 y. 6 m. 17 d. These two wives were cousins, the former the dau. of Peter Hobart and Sarah —; and the latter the dau. of Gershom Hobart and Lydia Nutting, (dau. of James Nutting and Lydia Longley, page 80,) and both granddaus. of Rev. Gershom Hobart, minister of Groton, and great-granddaus. of Rev. Peter Hobart of Hingham. Both were members of the church.

ORIGIN OF THE ANDOVER BRANCHES.

48. JOSEPH SHATTUCK settled upon a farm which he bought partly in 1728 of Stephen Barrett, and partly in 1731 of Zebadiah Chandler, in the west parish of Andover, near the Merrimac River, where he resided during the remainder of his life. His parentage is involved in some doubt. Some have conjectured that he might have been descended from Samuel Shattuck of Salem; but a more careful examination has showed that the name in that line became extinct, and that this conjecture is not well founded. The similarity of family names and other facts render it highly probable that he descended from William Shattuck, our own progenitor, though we have been unable from records to prove the exact relationship. He might have been the son of Samuel of Watertown, (p. 77,) or more probably of Samuel of Groton, (p. 84,) though his birth in either case may not have been recorded. According to his age at death, if stated correctly upon the records, he must have been born about the beginning of the year 1707. There was an interval of four years from 1705 to 1709, between the births of Elizabeth and Ruth, daughters of Samuel Shattuck, during which this Joseph was born. Upon this probability we have placed his family and descendants in this connection, as part of these Memorials. He d. March 21, 1772, in the 66th year of his age, leaving a will, dated June 6, 1761, and proved April 7, 1772. Estate appraised at £232 10. (Essex Records, Vol. XLVII., p. 189.)

He m. June 3, 1728, JOANNA CHANDLER, dau. of Zebediah and Sarah Chandler. She was b. in Andover in 1710, and d. there, Aug., 1792, æ. 82.

49. JOSIAH SHATTUCK, only surviving s. of Benjamin, (p. 86,) was b. in Watertown, Feb. 20, 1715, and d. in West Cambridge, about 1779 or 80, æ. 64. He was a farmer, and become possessed by inheritance or purchase of the real estate of his father north-erly of the Waverley station on the Fitchburg Railroad, now occupied by Adolphus Brown, David Kendall, and others. He was also extensively engaged in the business of a butcher. In these different occupations he acquired a large estate in this neighborhood and elsewhere.

4. Susanna, b. Dec. 2, 1756; m. Joshua Kendall, . . . . . 120

50. REBECCA SHATTUCK, dau. of Dr. Joseph, (p. 86,) was b. in Boston, Jan. 10, 1711, and m. Oct. 6, 1724, at the early age of 13 y. 8 m. 26 d., ALEXANDER SAMPSON. Tradition represents her to have been of a precocious development and of remarkable beauty.

“Twice seven consenting years had shed
Their utmost bounty on her head.”

Mr. Sampson is said to have been a reputable gentleman from London, who had visited this country for the benefit of his health, with an intention of a speedy return; but meeting with the beautiful Miss Shattuck, her attractions were too irresistible to allow him to carry out his purpose. He married and remained here; but while upon a pleasure excursion in Boston harbor, his boat was attacked by a shark, and he was tipped overboard and devoured.

HER CHILDREN, BY ALEXANDER SAMPSON, BORN IN BOSTON.

1. Elizabeth, b. April 9, 1728; m. Oliver Richards of Providence, R. I.
2. Alexander, b. April 29, 1729; m. May 23, 1754, Hepzibah Hastings, b. April 1, 1737; dau. of Samuel Hastings of Newton. He first settled in Cambridge, but removed to Providence. He had eight children, whose baptisms are entered upon the records of Christ Church in Boston; of whom Stephen, b. March 7, 1767, m. Nov. 19, 1787, Mehitable Morse, and had nineteen children. George Sampson of Cincinnati is one of them.*
3. John, b. . . . .; d. leaving two daughters. One m. — Skinner of Roxbury and Dedham; the other m. — Tyler of Foxborough.
4. . . . .; m. — Billings of Providence.

* Mr. Sampson of Cincinnati supposes himself to be one of the heirs to a large property in London, once called Sampson's Gardens. This estate was appropriated by Act of Parliament to the London Dock Company; and the payment therefor deposited in the Bank of England for the absent heirs. But it cannot be obtained unless they can legally trace their ancestry, and show an exact connection with the last possessors of the property. This evidence he attempted to obtain in London in 1843, but without success. “Mr. Wm. Thompson, a merchant of London, formerly paying clerk of the London Dock Company, told me when I was in London,” says Mr. Sampson, “that he had paid into the bank in instalments the amount of the appraisal for the heirs of the property—that the amount was large; and, continued he, it is there now for you with forty years’ interest attached to it.” It is very probable that the descendants of the beautiful Rebecca will be none the richer for this estate. So far as they are concerned it may be a “castle in the air,” like most other similar traditional legacies. But if there be really any substance to it, and there seems to be a strong presumption in its favor, they had better be content as they are; for the longest life is hardly long enough, and the largest purse is hardly rich enough, to commence and to terminate a chancery suit at law in the English courts for its recovery. Every one should be assured that no estate can be obtained from England except in a legal way, and upon legal proof; and the difficulty or impossibility of obtaining this evidence should prevent such claims being made.

ORIGIN OF THE DEERFIELD BRANCHES.

51. SAMUEL SHATTUCK, s. of Dr. Joseph, (p. 86,) was b. in Watertown, May 29, 1716, and d. in Montague, Dec. 29, 1760, æ. 44 y. 7 m. He was probably the Samuel Shattuck who was a proprietor of Petersham at its first incorporation, (Wilson's Address, pp. 15, 88.) He afterwards settled in Deerfield. His eldest son served a campaign in the French war; and on his return brought home the small pox, and gave it to both his parents. The mother and son recovered, but the father died. So far as the information contained in this volume shows, the name of Shattuck, among the descendants of Dr. Philip, his grandfather, has been preserved only in the line of this Samuel. In the other branches it appears to have become extinct.

He m. Dec. 4, 1740, SARAH CLESSON, b. Jan. 10, 1722, dau. of Joseph Clesson and Hannah Arms of Northampton, and granddau. of Matthew Clesson and Mary Phelps, who were m. in 1670. Her will, dated Sept. 14, 1785, appoints her kinsman Eliakim Arms her executor, and leaves legacies to 10 children or their representatives.

56. TIMOTHY SHATTUCK, s. of Rev. Benjamin, (p. 90,) was b. in Watertown, about 1715. He first settled in Middletown, Ct., where he bought and sold real estate from 1740 to 1762. The last transaction recorded was at the latter date, and his name does not subsequently appear upon the records of that town. The date and place of his death have not been ascertained. In the records of New Haven, now North Haven, his son, in 1773, is styled "Timothy Shattuck, Jr.," and in 1777, "Timothy Shattuck, late Timothy Shattuck, Jr.," from which it is inferred that Timothy, sen., d. about 1775 or 6.

57. WILLIAM SHATTUCK, s. of Rev. Benjamin, (p. 90,) was b. in Littleton, Jan. 1, 1718, and first settled in Middletown, Ct., where he owned considerable real estate. He returned to his native town about the time of his marriage, and there united with the church, and became a leading man in its public affairs; was chosen for several years one of the selectmen, often moderator of town meetings, and held other public positions. The following very unusual, but highly complimentary vote, appears upon the records of Littleton, passed March 6, 1769, when he declined a reëlection to public office:—"Voted, That the thanks of the town be given to Mr. William Shattuck for his past services as town officer." In 1769 he removed to New Ipswich, N. H., and settled on a farm near the south burying-ground, beyond the "Mill Village." It is said that a sister of his wife married Capt. Eleazer Cumming, who had previously settled in New Ipswich, which might have induced his removal. He became there, as he had been in Littleton, one of the most prominent citizens. In 1774, he paid the highest tax except three of 111 persons in the "South List" of the town. He was an ardent, influential patriot, and spent much time and money in the revolutionary struggle. He was chosen one of the selectmen in 1770, '72, '73, '75, '76, '78, '79, and '86; moderator of town meeting in 1775; member of the Committee of Correspondence in 1775, and the same year a Delegate to the Provincial Congress; a representative in the Legislature in 1776; and was otherwise distinguished as a public man and worthy citizen. About 1794 he bought a farm in Jaffrey, N. H., and removed to that town, where he d. Jan., 1806, æ. 88. His farm was sold after his death for $700, which went to his heirs.

He m. in Littleton, Nov. 20, 1750, ABIGAIL REED, dau. of Peter and Abigail Reed of that town. She was b. in 1733, and was nearly 16 years younger than her husband. She d. at her son Sherman's in Bethlehem, N. H., Feb., 1820, æ. 87. No record of their children has been found, but as far as they can be ascertained they were as follows:—

ORIGIN OF THE CONNECTICUT BRANCHES.

61. ROBERT SHATTUCK, s. of Robert, (p. 92,) was b. in Plymouth, June 3, 1721, and settled as a cooper and farmer in East Hampton parish, Chatham, Ct. He d. in Middletown, Feb. 12, 1802, æ. 80 y. 8 m. 9 d.; the records of Dr. Crane's church say, "in the morning suddenly at Oliver Prout's," probably while he was on a visit to that town. His numerous descendants have the satisfaction of tracing their ancestry through their father Shattuck to the founders of the Massachusetts Colony, and through their mother Cook, and their grandmother Pratt, (note, p. 92,) to the founders of the still older Colony of Plymouth—the Pilgrims of the May Flower. The blood that once flowed through the good old Puritan stock of both Colonies, which were united in 1692 to form the Old Bay State, still courses through their veins. May they ever strive to maintain the principles of their forefathers, and render themselves worthy of their origin!

He m. 1, in Plymouth, Sept. 9, 1744, RUHAMAH COOK.*

She and her husband were both exemplary members of the church. She was a woman of remarkable intelligence, industry, and excellence of character; performed the usual household labors and duties; brought up her family of nine children respectably, without a death before their marriage; and spun and wove the cloth for their clothing, without assistance. Girls and wives of our day, look at this picture!

* Near his house was a shallow pond or swamp, the waters of which were raised to kill the bushes. When drained the miasma that arose was supposed to have been the cause of the great fever in 1755 to 1758, known, from its peculiar severity, as the "Pepperell Fever." Rev. Mr. Emerson, in a sermon in reference to this fever, says, that in four years 540 persons were sick, 103 died, of whom 48 were heads of families, 64 grown persons, 21 (including 3 deacons) members of the church; and all this in a population of about 700!

73. Capt. JOB SHATTUCK, s. of William, (p. 96,) was b. in Groton, Feb. 11, 1736, and d. at the residence of his son Noah Shattuck, Esq., Jan. 13, 1819, æ. 82 y. 10 m. 2 d. His name has been handed down in the historical annals of the country in connection with the insurrection of 1786, known as "Shays' Rebellion;" and since he was one of the greatest sufferers in that movement, it is deemed proper in this place to give more in detail the leading facts of his life and character. Many of these facts are not now matters of published history, or have been unfairly presented or imperfectly understood.

He was bred a farmer, and came into possession, by inheritance or purchase, of the real estate previously owned by his father. To this he made large additions, until he acquired more than 500 acres of land bordering on Nashua River. For several years prior to 1786 he was the largest farmer in Groton. In 1779 he had 40 acres of rye in one field, which was then of unusual extent. On his father's farm were two dwelling-houses. The one which he first occupied stood a little south of the house which he built about 1782, now standing near Wattle's Pond, and occupied by H. Holmes; the other stood on the high ground west-erly towards the river, and was occupied by his brother Metcalf.

He was one of the selectmen of Groton in 1778, 1779, and 1781; often chosen on important committees; and otherwise received public evidence of his respectable social standing among his fellow-townsmen.

His first public military service was in 1755, at the age of 19, as a soldier in a company of Col. Monkton's troops in the French War in Nova Scotia. He was one of the Minute Men under Capt. Asa Lawrence, engaged on the 19th of April, 1775, at Concord and Lexington, and on the 17th of June at Bunker Hill. He was afterwards first Lieutenant in a Groton company, of which Josiah Sawtell was Captain, and Shattuck Blood was second Lieutenant, (p. 96.) In 1776 he commanded a company which went to Boston, when that town was evacuated by the British troops. In 1777 he commanded a company raised in Groton and its vicinity, which marched to Ticonderoga at the surrender of Burgoyne. In 1779 he was appointed Captain of the military company in Groton, and continued in office until after peace was declared. He was at the head of the committee to raise men and money for the war. During the whole period of the revolution he spent much time and money, performed very important public services, and at all times exhibited great bravery, energy, and self-sacrificing patriotism. On one occasion, in 1780, finding it difficult to obtain men, he consented that his two sons should volunteer for the service, notwithstanding the demand for labor upon his farm. Ezekiel went to Rhode Island; Job, Jr. went to West Point, and was there when Arnold deserted and André was executed. The father's conduct on this occasion was so highly approved, that his townsmen "made a bee," by which some thirty men reaped and gathered about 400 bushels of rye in one day.

The five years immediately succeeding the close of the revolutionary war was a most gloomy and trying period in the history of Massachusetts. A great amount of personal service, of treasure, and of blood, had been expended in the war to gain independence; the soldiers who had served their country long and faithfully had returned home penniless; the continental paper money issued to pay continental debts had become worthless; the public credit was destroyed; the State, and every town in the State, were deeply in debt; and contracts between individuals, entered into on the basis of paper money, had to be executed on that of silver or its equivalent—then an article of extreme scarcity. These and other causes produced embarrassments unparalleled in the history of the country, and threatened universal bankruptcy and ruin. The fond anticipations of those who had pledged everything for liberty had not only not been realized, but a worse state of affairs was produced than had ever before existed. "The hearts of all were filled with dismay." At this juncture too a State tax of £140,000 was imposed in one year, equal to nearly $500,000, and payable in currency valued as silver—a tax enormously large at any period, and particularly at that time, when the State contained only about one third of its present inhabitants, and those were comparatively poor. To fulfil private contracts and satisfy public demands was to all inconvenient, and to many impossible; and the burdens fell with their most crushing weight upon farmers and mechanics. The consequence was a great multiplication of lawyers and expensive lawsuits, and the additional burdens they imposed; and the attachment and sacrifice, by public sales of property, to discharge heavy, distressing executions. Many were reduced to utter destitution. The last acre of land, the last cow, and the last necessity of life, were often taken to satisfy the demands of the public tax-gatherer. Often, too, the body itself was incarcerated for unsatisfied debts. It was then thought by many persons that the measures of the government and of its executive officers were arbitrary, oppressive, and an "infringement of injured rights and privileges;" as well as unwise, impolitic, and unnecessary. Town-meetings and county conventions were held, and earnest petitions from individuals and from public bodies, for relief from their "grievances" as they were then called, went up to the Executive and to the Legislature, but with unsatisfactory results.

As early as the 27th of June, 1786, a town-meeting was held in Groton, called at the written request of sixty-eight—a very large majority of its legal voters—to take into consideration the condition of the country. The warrant for the meeting contained fifteen articles to be acted upon;* and they were all referred to a Committee, chosen for the purpose, consisting of Dr. Benjamin Morse, Capt. Job Shattuck, Ensign Moses Childs, Capt. Asa Lawrence, and Capt. Zachariah Fitch, to whom "discretionary powers" were given to act as they pleased; and "to correspond with other Committees of any towns in the Commonwealth relative to our public grievances; and to draw up a petition to lay before the General Court for a redress of the same."

At length the people in the western counties of the State met, organized under Daniel Shays,† and resolved to resist, under arms if need be, the further issue and the legal enforcement of executions originating under the circumstances to which we have referred. The Court of Common Pleas, the principal source from which these executions were derived, had become particularly obnoxious; and it was determined to prevent its sessions, until some relief could be obtained; and the courts in Hampshire and Worcester counties were actually stopped. The excitement was not, however, confined to those counties, but extended to every other part of the Commonwealth. Many of the suffering people everywhere sympathized in the movement. In Middlesex, the discontent was particularly manifest in Groton and its neighborhood. A considerable number of persons organized under Capt. Nathan Smith of Shirley and Benjamin Page of Groton, and on the 12th of September proceeded to Concord, partly under arms, to prevent the usual September session of the Court. The number at 11 o'clock was about seventy, but increased in the afternoon to about two hundred and fifty, by the arrival of others from Worcester county; and from other towns in Middlesex, among whom Col. Robinson of Westford was conspicuous. Capt. Shattuck, who had been chosen their principal leader and commander, drew up and presented to the Court the following paper:—

* Four of these articles ran thus:—"6. To see if the town will vote not to have any Inferior Court. 7. To see if the town will vote not to have more than one attorney in a county to draw writs, and that he be paid the same as the State's Attorney. 8. To see if the town will vote that there be a stop put to all law suits of a civil nature, until there is a greater circulation of money than there is at present.—15. To see if the town will vote to choose a Committee of Safety, to see that there are no more infringements made on our injured rights and privileges, and transact any thing relative to the above articles, or any other things which may be necessary for the good of the public at large."

† Gen. Shays, the leader in this rebellion, died in Sparta, N. Y., Sept. 29, 1825, æ. 84. Notwithstanding the prominent part he acted, he was never arrested, having fled from the State. He, however, received a general pardon, and was afterwards a pensioner of the United States Government. Several others, convicted of "Treason" and under sentence, were also pardoned.

“To the Honorable Justices of the Court of General Sessions of the Peace and the Court of Common Pleas for the County of Middlesex.

“The voice of the people of this County is that the Court of General Sessions of the Peace and Court of Common Pleas, shall not enter this court-house until such time as the people shall have a redress of a number of grievances they labor under at present, which will be set forth in a petition or remonstrance to the next General Court.

Job Shattuck.

“Concord, September 12th, 1786.”

A “Pacific Committee,” composed of delegates from several towns in the county, were then in session in Concord, and a consultation took place between the different parties and the Court, which resulted, by way of compromise, in entering upon the back of this paper the following endorsement:—

“ $\frac{1}{4}$  past 3 o'clock.

“Since writing the within, it is agreed that the Court of Sessions may open and adjourn to the last Tuesday of November next, without going into the court-house.

Job Shattuck.”

The Court was accordingly opened and adjourned. Having accomplished their object; and stayed the further issue of executions by this Court to be levied upon property and to increase the general distress, the people returned peaceably to their homes, to await the result of their petition to the General Court. Some plans were devised to prevent the adjourned session of the Court in November, at Cambridge, but they were never executed. This act, then, constituted Capt. Shattuck's principal, if not his only public offence.

Two months and a half later, on the 28th of November, Oliver Prescott of Groton—from what cause does not appear—presented a paper to the Governor and Council, certifying that Job Shattuck, Oliver Parker, and Benjamin Page, of Groton, and Nathan Smith and John Kelsey (town clerk) of Shirley, “have been active in the late rebellion, and stirring up the people to oppose government, and are therefore dangerous persons, and pray a warrant may be issued to restrain them of their personal liberty." In consequence of this communication, an Executive warrant for their arrest was issued the same day to Aaron Brown and Wm. Scott. For their assistance a volunteer company of horse-men, under command of Col. Benjamin Hitchborn, left Boston the next day, Nov. 29th, and were joined at Concord by another party under Capt. Henry Woods of Pepperell, and proceeded immediately to Groton. The whole numbered about one hundred men. They searched Capt. Shattuck's house, but did not succeed in finding him. They however took Parker and Page, and sent them to Boston jail. The search was renewed the next morning, but being again unsuccessful they were about to return, when twelve men under Sampson Reed of Boston went to the house of Samuel Gragg, where it was supposed Capt. Shattuck had spent the night, and by threats and the offer of money, ascertained that he had been there, but had just left. By tracks in a light snow, which had fallen the previous night, he was traced about two miles to the river in sight of his own house. Here, while hesitating whether to go home, he discovered the twelve men on horseback, in full speed, near him. He retreated to the river, and they pursued and overtook him. Some resistance having been made, F. C. Varnum of Boston gave Capt. Shattuck a terrible blow with his sword, making a wound about twelve inches long, diagonally, across his knee and leg, dividing the knee-pan into two parts. His own sword was not arrested from his strong muscular grasp until his pursuers had cut the fingers of the hand in which it was held nearly off. These acts effected his surrender and capture.

He was taken, delivered to Loammi Baldwin, sheriff of the county; and the next day, Dec. 1st, was committed to prison in Boston, with Parker and Page. The governor gave directions to the jailer "not to suffer any person to speak to them or to have any communication with them, and not to permit them the use of pen, ink, or paper, without the special leave of the governor." He continued in jail over four months, during the winter and spring; his wounds in the meantime, owing to their severity, to bad accommodations and bad attendance, threatened the extinction of his life. They made him so lame for the remaining thirty-three years of his life as to require the use of crutches to assist his locomotion. On the 2d of April, 1787, he petitioned "to be admitted to bail," saying, "his wounds have never been healed, and his bodily health is greatly impaired for want of exercise and fresh air; and he is fearful of the consequences, if he is not soon liberated." On the back of this petition the selectmen of Groton, on the 3d of April, indorsed—"We have no objection to the prayer of the within petition being granted, as we believe the public will not be injured thereby." He was liberated April 6th, under bonds of £200, with two sureties of £100 each, for his appearance at Court, and returned to his family in Groton.

At the term of the Supreme Court, commencing at Concord, Tuesday, May 9, 1787, he was indicted for the "Crime of Treason." The Governor had previously instructed the several towns to permit the name of no man who had spoken against the government to be put into the jury box! The consequence was, a packed jury was empaneled. On his trial, feeling conscious of the integrity of his purpose, and of having committed no intentional crime, and certainly not the one charged upon him, he employed no counsel himself, and made no defence. The Court, however, directed that Christopher Gore and Thomas Dawes, Esqrs., attorneys, should appear in his behalf. He was tried on the 23d of May, and convicted, of course, under the circumstances; and his offence being by law a capital one, the sentence of death was pronounced upon him. He was remanded to the jail in Concord. Five days later, on the 28th of May, the proceedings of the Court were laid before the Governor and Council, and an Executive warrant, dated the same day, was issued for his execution, to take place "on Thursday, the twenty-eighth of June next, between the hours of twelve and three o'clock"!—In one month!! This was one of the last acts of Bowdoin's administration; and he seems to have made haste to accomplish it before the term of his official life expired, which took place two days afterwards. On the 27th of June, Capt. Shattuck was reprieved to the 26th of July; on the 25th of July, to the 20th of September; and on the 12th of September, he received from Governor Hancock an unconditional, "full, free and ample pardon" for all his offences.

Whatever opinion may be entertained as to the conduct of Capt. Job Shattuck in the movement of 1786, there is no doubt that he was moved by conscientious, honest and patriotic motives. He was a man of great physical abilities, possessed more than usual strength and athletic power, had strong common sense, sagacious, energetic business habits, and was highminded and just in all his dealings. He was independent in his feelings; relied upon himself; and made others feel that they might rely safely upon him. Though his educational privileges had been scanty, yet he could express his ideas effectively before an assembly of his townsmen, and was well qualified to be conspicuous and influential as a popular leader. In political principles he was thoroughly democratic. He was also a member of the church, and an habitual attendant on religious worship. His offence, so far as it was an offence, was a political, not a moral one; and it was not more nullifying, revolutionary, or treasonable, than many that are committed with impunity in our own day, and in our own State. He felt that the crisis and the occasion justified what he did; and he never regretted it himself, but often said he looked upon no act of his life with more satisfaction. Honest, respectable and patriotic men were on opposite sides on questions which then engaged public attention. Each party thought it was doing the very best thing it could for the good of the country; but either might have been mistaken in some of its measures. Much might have been said at the time and under the circumstances in favor of both. A very large majority of the citizens of Groton agreed with Capt. Shattuck in opinion, and advised to the course he took. He acted as their agent to carry into effect their wishes, expressed in public town meeting. Though more prominent, he was not more guilty than Parker and Page who were acquitted, nor than many others who were not arrested; but he was convicted under the forms of a legal trial; and made a victim to be held up under sentence, by the Executive of the State, as a warning to others, until tranquillity should be restored. Though his family were apprehensive, owing to the highly excited state of public opinion, and the animosity that existed between the different parties, that extreme measures might be resorted to, yet we can scarcely believe that even Bowdoin and his advisers, much less Hancock and his advisers, ever entertained a serious determination to push them so far as his execution. Capt. Shattuck, however, ever felt that he was greatly indebted to Hancock for the preservation of his life.

The harsh and brutal treatment he received was justly condemned by a large majority of the people; and, combined with other causes, produced a great popular excitement. Parties were formed of "Bowdoin Men," and "Opposition;" and a political tornado, such as never swept over the Commonwealth, and has scarcely any counterpart even in modern party changes, completely revolutionized the government.

In 1786, the whole vote of the State was 8,234; and Bowdoin was reëlected by 6,001, or 72 per cent. of these votes. In the next year, 1787, the whole vote of the State was 24,588, of which Bowdoin received 5,395, only, or 21 per cent.! and Hancock, the candidate of the "Opposition," was elected by 18,459 votes! In the aggregate votes of Groton, Pepperell, and Shirley, Bowdoin received 30 and Hancock 159 votes! A most emphatic demonstration that public opinion was in condemnation of the policy and measures of Bowdoin's administration, and in favor of the party that sympathized with Capt. Shattuck, coincided in his views, and approved his doings. The returns to the Legislature were equally decisive. Three fourths of the House of Representatives, and two thirds of the Senate and Council were new members, and belonged to the Opposition, "some of whom," says Minot, the historian of the Insurrection, "had been thrown into prison as dangerous to the Commonwealth, or had fled from State warrants into neighboring states, or had presided at county conventions, or otherwise manifested their opposition to the ruling authority." Dr. Benjamin Morse was chosen a Representative from Groton, though eleven individuals—a very small minority indeed of the voters—were found in town who entered their protest against his election, on account of the prominent part he had acted as Chairman of the Committee of Correspondence in the Insurrection. Even Capt. Shattuck, himself, at the first public town meeting held after his conviction and pardon, was chosen the grand-juryman of the town, then an elective officer of honor and responsibility. This is an additional evidence that his acts were not disapproved by the citizens of Groton; and it was highly complimentary to him, especially under the circumstances in which it was conferred.

The peculiar crisis in the affairs of Massachusetts which originated the movement here referred to, was an extraordinary one in the history of the State; and it was not without its influence upon the country generally. It impressed upon the people many useful lessons. While it taught the hazards and futility of resisting public law and authority, it taught also the necessity of administering this law and authority wisely for the welfare and happiness of the people. And that this might be done effectually, it taught, furthermore, the necessity of a more efficient national government. The State Constitution adopted six years before, though excellent in itself, was insufficient for the general protection. Public tranquillity was soon, however, restored; and the people became more and more contented under returning individual prosperity, milder and wiser State measures, a better understanding of the mutual rights and duties of the governed and the government, and the adoption, in 1787, one year later, by the several United Colonies, of the Federal Constitution.*

elected Mrs. Wright as their commander; and resolved that no foe to freedom should pass that bridge. Soon Whiting appeared, and he was immediately arrested and searched; and despatches from Canada to the British in Boston were found in his boots. He was taken to the house of Solomon Rogers in the neighborhood, and there detained, securely guarded by the women over night. He was afterwards conducted to Groton, and the treasonable correspondence was forwarded to the Committee of Safety. Mrs. Wright had named her son, born in 1774, "Liberty." It had just then died; but, to perpetuate the noble sentiments she entertained, she gave the same name to another son born three years later.*

107. SIMEON SHATTUCK, s. of David, (p. 103,) was b. in Pepperell, Sept. 12, 1738, and d. in Fitchburg, April 6, 1832, æ. 93 y. 6 m. 24 d. He was bred a farmer, but in consequence of fracturing his leg, by the falling of a tree, he became lame, and afterwards learned the shoemaker's trade, which he followed until the year before his death. He first settled in his native town, where the births of his six eldest children are recorded. About 1778 he went to live with the Shakers under elder Whitaker, at his special solicitation; and a short time afterwards his wife joined the same association. But not liking their mode of life she soon left them, and not long subsequently Mr. Shattuck followed her example. About 1780 he bought a tract of 200 acres of wild land in Fitchburg, on the road now leading from thence to Ashby, where his grandson Samuel Shattuck lives. He agreed to pay $400 for it in Continental money, then current, being nearly all he was then worth. Before taking his deed the money became depreciated in value; and in consequence, the person from whom he purchased unjustly refused to give him a deed of more than 100 acres, half the amount of his purchase. This, combined with the state of affairs at that time, (see p. 123,) was the occasion of great embarrassment and trouble. In the beginning of his new settlement he struggled with many privations and difficulties; in the first winter, living in a shanty of the most primitive construction, principally upon potatoes and salt. He, however, after awhile succeeded in obtaining a comfortable home, and in extending the bounds of his possessions. In opinions and habits he sustained a character eminently worthy, religious and patriarchal.

He d. in Westport, June 20, 1823, æ. 80 y. 10 m. 3 d. In 1784 he bought the water-power at that place, and in company with his brother Jonas, erected the tide grist-mills and saw-mills, since known as the "Shattuck Mills." These mills are still owned by the family—Levi's part by David and Thomas Shattuck, father and son; and Jonas's part by the brothers Jonas and Robbins Heal. An extensive business in the manufacture and sale of lumber has been transacted at these mills.

114. JONAS SHATTUCK, s. of David, (p. 104,) was b. Dec. 2, 1756, and d. at Westport, Me., Jan. 27, 1847, æ. 90 y. 1 m. 25 d. He was a revolutionary pensioner, and the extraordinary circumstances of his military service are worthy of being stated more in detail. In the fall of 1774 he enrolled himself with Abijah Shattuck, John Shattuck, Oliver Shattuck, David Shattuck, Josiah Shattuck, Jeremiah Shattuck, Jr., and others of their connections and fellow patriots in Pepperell, in a company of "minute men," under Capt. John Nutting, in Col. Prescott's regiment; and on the 19th of April, 1775, marched to Concord, and followed the retreating enemy to Cambridge, where they remained during the summer, and were in the battle of Bunker Hill, (p. 141.) He was a volunteer in Capt. Wm. Goodrich's company, under Gen. Arnold, in the expedition which left Cambridge, Sept. 13, 1775, and went to Quebec by way of the Kennebec river, and through the forests of Maine and Canada, suffering intensely from cold, fatigue, and hunger. After the unsuccessful termination of that expedition he was one of the retreating party under Lieut. Bixby. At Beaufort, Canada, he was discharged, and afterwards returned to Pepperell, where he remained a few months. In Dec., 1776, he enlisted in Capt. Holden's company under Col. Thatcher, and served until he was discharged in Aug., 1777. He then enlisted as a corporal in Capt. Jewett's company, Col. Bullard's regiment, and was in the attack on Drummond's Island in Lake George on the 24th of September. While with a party in a boat he was severely wounded in his left leg. Several shot holes were made in the boat by the firing of the enemy; and to prevent it from sinking, notwithstanding his wounds, he stripped off his clothes with which he made plugs and stopped the leaks, and thus saved the lives of the crew. He was taken prisoner and carried to the fort. After remaining four days in the open air, suffering intensely, his leg was amputated four inches above his knee. In November he was removed to St. Johns, in January, 1778, to Montreal, and in May to Quebec, where he remained three weeks in the hospital. He was then put on board the old prison ship Maria, and carried to Halifax. He remained on board this ship and in the garrison at Halifax about eighteen weeks; and on the 8th of October, 1778, was, with 700 other prisoners, exchanged for British subjects. They were sent to Boston crowded together in a small ship, and suffered very severely from filth and disease. About one hundred died before their arrival. He entered a hospital in Boston, where he remained until Jan., 1779, when he was able to return to his home in Pepperell. A report had been circulated that he was dead; and the joyful surprise that his arrival produced can better be conceived than described. Being thus disabled for active labor he learned the shoemaker's trade, which he subsequently followed until within six months of his death. In 1784 he removed to Squam Island, Me., and, in company with his brother Levi, erected the mills already described, (p. 146.) He received a pension from government of $60 per annum, from 1790 to 1816; of $96, from 1816 to 1832; and of $180, from 1832 to his death.

He m. in Edgecomb, Me., March 16, 1786, ANNA ROBBINS, b. Nov. 14, 1745, in Ipswich, Mass., a sister of his brother Levi's wife. She d. in Westport, April 28, 1816, æ. 70 y. 5 m. 14 d.

122. Maj. WILLIAM SHATTUCK, s. of Samuel, (p. 107,) was b. in Deerfield, Aug. 31, 1767. He was a blacksmith, and lived successively in Ashfield, Mass., Halifax and Guilford, Vt., Hinsdale, N. H., and Dummerston, Vt. From the latter place he removed in 1795 to Romulus, Seneca Co., N. Y. While resident in Guilford he was Senior Major of a regiment of Militia, of which Timothy Church was Colonel and Henry Edwards, Junior Major, raised by the state of New York for the protection of her rights in the long contested and exciting controversy with New Hampshire in relation to the jurisdiction over the territory now comprising Vermont. In the civil war that followed they were captured by the "New-States men," under Col. Ethan Allen, imprisoned at Bennington, and their property confiscated. In March, 1786, an act was passed by the legislature of New York, granting Major Shattuck and others a township of land eight miles square on Chenango River, (now Bainbridge,) as a remuneration for their losses and sufferings. Of this grant 3,200 acres were assigned to Mr. Shattuck for his portion. (Doc. Hist. of New York, Vol. IV., pp. 1014 to 1018.) As early as 1791 or 2, he obtained from the government of Canada West a grant of land, but, not complying with the settling duties, it became forfeited. About 1809 or 10 he petitioned for a renewal of the original title, and while his petition was pending he made a tour of exploration through Ohio and Kentucky, when he wrote to his family the last letter they ever received from him. It is said that he returned to Canada to ascertain the result of his petition, and that he was there accidentally thrown from a horse and killed, in 1810.

DESCENDANTS OF THE LITTLETON BRANCHES.

126. Doct. BENJAMIN SHATTUCK, s. of Stephen, (p. 108,) was b. in Littleton, Nov. 11, 1742; and d. of consumption in Templeton, Jan. 14, 1794, æ. 51 y. 2 m. 3 d. He was fitted for College by Jeremiah D. Rogers, son of the clergyman of Littleton, and graduated at H. C. in 1765. He studied medicine with Dr. Oliver Prescott of Groton, and settled in Templeton at the special invitation of the people of that town, where he continued in extensive practice about twenty-five years; and became one of the most eminent of his profession. His industry and frugality secured a comfortable provision for his family.

"His death," says Thatcher's American Medical Biography, (Vol. II., p. 79,) "was deeply lamented by the whole community to which he was known; but this loss was more poignantly felt by his townsmen, the people of Templeton. He had settled with them by invitation, had lived in their affection and confidence for nearly a quarter of a century, and had identified himself with their joys and sorrows. At his funeral all classes crowded around his bier to pay the last sad and mournful tribute of respect to their physician and friend. The pious pastor of the flock poured out his heart in an honest eulogy in commemoration of his virtues, and spake of the 'sense, skill, and philanthropy' of their departed physician and friend. This was said in the presence of those who knew the deceased, and knew too that the words flowed in truth and sincerity: such praises from the mouth of discriminating affection, have a lasting unction in them, and are sweet in the remembrance of ages, when the cold stone and the proud entablature are defaced or forgotten."

He m. April 12, 1772, LUCY BARRON, b. in Chelmsford, Dec. 19, 1753, dau. of Jonathan Barron and Rachel Howard, and a descendant of Ellis Barron of Watertown, (p. 76.) 133. TIMOTHY SHATTUCK, s. of Timothy, (p. 110,) was b. in Middleton, Ct., April 9, 1750. He first settled in North Haven, then a part of New Haven, and several of his transactions in real estate are entered upon its records between 1770 and 1782. About the latter date he removed to Durham and lived first in the south part of the town, and subsequently in its centre, where he carried on an extensive business as a cooper, principally for the New Haven market, by which he accumulated a handsome property. He had large business transactions with a Mr. Spelman, a merchant of his neighborhood, who failed, and involved Mr. Shattuck to the amount of his entire property; and he was obliged to fail himself. He afterwards, about 1795, removed to Catskill, N. Y., where he died previous to 1807; the precise date is unknown to us.

He m. about 1770, DEBORAH BARNES of North Haven. After the death of her husband, she returned to New Haven and lived with her children, where she died. She was interred in the cemetery of that city. A monument erected to her memory bears the inscription—"Deborah, widow of Timothy Shattuck. Died Dec. 9, 1831, aged 83 years. She possessed a meek and quiet spirit, which in the sight of God is of great price." Her father, Capt. Joshua Barnes, d. in North Haven, Jan. 7, 1790, æ. 69, said to have been a descendant of Thomas Barnes, one of the earliest settlers of Hartford. Her mother Deborah ——— d. Dec. 20, 1782, æ. 57.

He commanded a company in the army of the revolution, and was killed with 20 of his men, near Ticonderoga, in 1777.

He m. MARY DUSTIN, b. about 1754, a descendant, and probably a great-granddau. of Hannah Dustin, whose capture by the Indians in Haverhill, March 15, 1697, and whose remarkable escape from her captors by killing and scalping them, entitle her to be considered one of the greatest heroines of any age. (See Myrick's Hist. Haverhill, pp. 86, 100.) She m. 2, April 9, 1779; Simeon Hildreth of New Ipswich, and they removed to Bradford, N. H., and subsequently to Meriden, N. H., where she d. Aug. 6, 1832, æ. 78. Mr. Hildreth d. Sept. 28, 1843, æ. 85, without issue. He was in the battle of Bunker Hill. An anecdote relating to his conduct on that occasion is told of him to the following effect: "See," says he to his fellow-companion in arms, "how I do it;" and drawing a ball from his pouch, and first wetting it in his mouth, let it fall into the muzzle of his gun; and taking a deliberate aim at a particular person in the enemy's ranks, he sent it through his heart. "There," said he, "this is the sixteenth that I have fixed in like manner!"

155. JOHN SHATTUCK, s. of John, (p. 117.) was born in Pepperell, July 7, 1757, and d. in New Ipswich, N. H., Saturday, April 26, 1816, æ. 58 y. 9 m. 19 d. He was a farmer and shoemaker, and first settled in 1783, in the northwesterly part of Ashby, near his two elder sisters. He brought a portion of the farm, since known as the Bedlow farm, under cultivation, and erected on it a dwelling-house and other buildings. This dwelling-house was burned in 1807. Suffering inconvenience from its remoteness from public worship and other town privileges, he sold this estate in 1794, and bought another southerly of the present meeting-house in New Ipswich, N. H., now partly occupied by Mr. Willard. This farm was enlarged by subsequent purchases, additional buildings were erected, and other improvements were made; but though it contained some good land, and yielded a comfortable subsistence to its owner, yet it was generally rocky and unproductive, and gave a comparatively poor return for the labor expended. The same amount of toil and good management would have produced on some farms a considerable fortune. He and his wife united with Rev. Mr. Farrar's church in New Ipswich in 1786, and he bore the character of an intelligent, industrious, honest, upright, Christian man, eminently a peacemaker in his family and among his neighbors. He was often known to perform the usual day's work on his farm, and in the evening to enter his shop, and earn enough before retiring to rest to pay his hired man the next day; and to repeat this labor day after day. He was often solicited to take public office in the town, but uniformly declined. Private life was more congenial to his unobtrusive, amiable, and excellent temperament.

DESCENDANTS OF THE GROTON BRANCHES.

174. JOB SHATTUCK, s. of Job, (p. 131,) was b. in Groton, Dec. 10, 1758, and d. upon the old homestead, May 4, 1827, æ. 68 y. 4 m. 24 d., by a "decay of nature," brought on by excessive labor, and over-exertion of body and mind to accumulate property. When he entered the Continental Army in 1780, (p. 122,) he was described as "21 years old, 5 feet 8 inches high, and dark complexion." About 1790 he came into possession of a large part of the real estate of his father, on condition that he should support his parents during life, and pay a specific sum in money to each of his brothers and sisters. These conditions were subsequently altered, and in 1791 he received a full title to a portion of the estate, and instead of the bond he relinquished the farm known as the "William Green Place," since owned by his brother Noah. On the 2d March, 1812, he bought of the town of Groton the estate bequeathed by Josiah Sartell, Esq.,* for "the support of the Gospel Minister," on condition that he should maintain the poor of the town for five years, the whole expense of which was estimated at $4,000 or $800 per annum. This contract was executed between April 13, 1812, and 1817, and proved to be a good one for Mr. Shattuck. This estate was the subject of a long controversy, first between the inhabitants of the town, and subsequently in the Supreme Court. The heirs of Col. Sartell brought an action of ejectment against Samson Shattuck, to whom the estate was conveyed by his father in 1821. The case was assumed by the town, and finally resulted in its favor; and it was the occasion of settling important legal questions having a general bearing upon parochial affairs. (See Pickering's Reports, Vol. X., p. 306.) By his sagacity, energy, untiring industry, and perseverance, Mr. Shattuck added farm after farm to his possessions, until he became the largest owner of real estate, and paid the highest tax, of any person in Groton. His lands consisted of more than 1200 acres, bordering on Nashua River, and extending easterly between three and four miles to Baddacook Pond. He was able to give a good farm to each of his nine surviving children at their marriage. The old homestead was settled upon Warren and Merrick, which, after the death of their father, was divided. Warren took the central portion, and Merrick the outlands, which were divided into lots and sold in 1829. The old place, after being owned by the name more than 125 years, thus passed from the family. Mr. Shattuck, towards the close of his life, regretted most deeply, that, instead of laboring so earnestly to lay up wealth for his children, he had not educated them more thoroughly, and taught them how to earn and take care of property themselves; and thus impress upon them a character for self-reliance, which would be more likely to secure success in life. "A family properly educated is a family provided for."

* The names given to these children, geographically speaking, are rather comprehensive. The parents certainly could not be accused of being partial or "sectional" in their feelings, for they took in the whole world. But the taste of persons in regard to names differs; and in looking over this volume a great diversity will be perceived. In some families a plain outspoken taste appears, and in others a more fanciful one. Some would not have selected Shadrach, Mesach, and Abednego; others would object to Sobieskie; and others to Serepta Syneda. Singularity of taste, however, is not peculiar to our family. We once had under our instruction in Detroit a family whose sons were named One Stickney, Two Stickney, Three Stickney; and whose daughters were named First Stickney, Second Stickney, and so on. How far on, either in the cardinal or ordinal enumeration, the parents finally arrived we have never learned. The three elder children of a family nearer home were named Joseph, And, and Another; and it has been supposed, that, should they have had any more, they might have named them Also, Moreover, Nevertheless, and Notwithstanding. Another family actually named their child Finis, supposing it was their last, but they happened afterwards to have a daughter and two sons, whom they called Addenda, Appendix, and Supplement. Another parent set out to perpetuate the names of the twelve patriarchs, but the mother wept because she had not the wherewithal to bear the last two names. The familiar example of Mr. New, who named his first child Something, and his second Nothing, stated a fact which might have been true at the birth of each, but not afterwards. Mr. Chase of Boston named his child Wild Goose, but whether its pursuits finally resulted as the name imports, we are uninformed. These eccentric and amusing illustrations might be greatly extended, but these specimens will suffice our present purpose, and show that singularity of taste in this matter is not confined to our family.

218. NATHANIEL SHATTUCK, s. of Jeremiah, (p. 140,) was b. in Pepperell, April 3, 1749, and d. at the place of his residence in Temple, N. H., Jan. 30, 1828, æ. 78 y. 9 m. 27 d. He was a farmer. He was one of fifty-three men, who, on the 7th of September, 1773, fell at the raising of the old meeting-house in Wilton, N. H. Three were killed instantly, two more died soon after, others were crippled for life, and most of them were more or less injured. Mr. Shattuck received a wound in his head, and had three of his ribs broken. Rev. Mr. Peabody, in his Centennial Address, delivered in that town, says—"Among other things, which might in part account for the accident was, the town voted to provide one barrel of West India rum, five barrels of New England rum, one barrel of brown sugar, half a box of good lemons, and two loaves of loaf sugar, for framing and raising the meeting-house"! Temperance does not seem to have been considered then, as it is now, and should always be, one of the necessities for the preservation of life, and for success in life. It is not strange that intemperance should prevail when it was thus sanctioned by public and private example; nor that disaster should happen, and thousands of lives should be sacrificed or ruined thereby.

He m. in 1773, CATHARINE ANDREWS, b. in Ipswich, Mass., Feb. 16, 1753, dau. of Jeremiah Andrews, then a resident of Concord, Mass. She d. in Temple, Nov. 19, 1845, æ. 92 y. 9 m. 3 d. At her decease she had 208 descendants—13 children, 78 grandchildren, 115 great-grandchildren, and 2 of the fifth generation, of whom 150 were then living—7 children, 51 grandchildren, 90 great-grandchildren, and 2 of the fifth generation. The aggregate ages of the 58 children and grandchildren was 2026 years, or about 35 each. She could say, "Arise, daughter, and go to thy daughter, for thy daughter's daughter hath a daughter."

293. Dr. GEORGE CHEYNE SHATTUCK, s. of Dr. Benjamin Shattuck, (p. 157,) was b. in Templeton, July 17, 1783; and d. of a disease of the heart, at his residence in Boston, corner of Cambridge and Staniford streets, March 18, 1854, æ. 70 y. 8 m. 1 d.,—eminent for his professional skill, and for his munificent public and private charities.

He was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1803; and received from that institution, in due course, the degree of Master of Arts, and in 1806 that of Doctor of Medicine. He also received a medical degree from Harvard College, and one from the University of Pennsylvania in 1807. Immediately after, he settled in Boston, where he soon obtained an extensive practice in his profession. In 1853 the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon him by Dartmouth College.

Public office was distasteful to Dr. Shattuck, yet he was chosen one of the consulting physicians of the city of Boston at the first creation of the office in 1833, and was reëlected annually until his death. He was president of the Massachusetts Medical Society four years—1836 to 1839 inclusive; and he presided over the American Statistical Association six years—1845 to 1851.

In 1806 he wrote a Dissertation on Mortification; and, in 1807, two other Dissertations, one on the Structure and Pathology of the Skin, and the other on Biliary Concretions. Each of these dissertations obtained one of the Boylston Medical Prizes, and aided much in establishing his reputation as a scholar and a learned physician. In 1808 they were published together in a volume. In 1828 he delivered the Annual Address before the Massachusetts Medical Society, which was published in their Transactions. These were his most important printed works. He did not aspire to authorship, yet he was willing to encourage others in their literary labors. In 1836 he published at his own expense a volume of original medical dissertations by distinguished physicians, and gave a copy to each member of the Massachusetts Medical Society. And in various other ways he was a most liberal patron of literature and science. The following extracts from an interesting letter of Ira Young, Professor of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy in Dartmouth College, dated July 13, 1854, relate to his benefactions to that institution:—

“His contributions to the College in various ways have been frequent, and very liberal, amounting in the aggregate to a sum probably not less than $12,000. On the subscription list of 1827 for raising $50,000, his name stands against $500, and in the endeavor in 1842 to raise $30,000, he gave $500 more.

“In 1835–6 he presented the portraits of the defenders of the College Charter,—Hon. Jeremiah Mason, Jeremiah Smith, Daniel Webster, and Joseph Hopkinson; and a few days before his decease, added that of the Hon. Rufus Choate. These portraits are all by distinguished artists, and are conspicuous ornaments to our College Library.

“His donations of books to the Library have been numerous, and many of them highly valuable. In addition to occasional presents of single volumes, and the writings of such men as John Adams and Daniel Webster, he gave in 1822, (in connection with Stephen Beane, Esq.,) several volumes of Foreign, Mathematical, and Astronomical works, including some of the more important writings of Euler, Lagrange, Lacroix, Lalande, and Laplace. In 1852 and 1853 he gave for the purchase of books, to be used by the officers of the College, the sum of $2,050, of which $1,200 was for the department of Natural Philosophy and Astronomy, and $850 for that of the Latin Language and Literature. This donation was in connection with a similar one from the Rev. Roswell Shurtleff, D. D., of $1,100 for the department of Intellectual and Moral Philosophy, and Political Economy. In addition to this, he also contributed $100 for the payment of books previously purchased for the Library, in Europe.

"In the autumn of 1852 he made the munificent donation of $7,000, on the condition that the Trustees of the College would furnish the additional means of fully carrying out the objects which he proposed, requiring, according to estimate, an expenditure of about $11,000. These were, the erection of an Astronomical Observatory, the furnishing it with the requisite instruments, the purchase of additional Philosophical Apparatus, and the sending an agent to Europe to procure the books and instruments above mentioned.

"Of the Observatory, he is the founder, inasmuch as the $7,000 just covers the estimated expense of the building and instruments, excepting the Equatorial Telescope, with its appurtenances, which had been previously purchased. Although he peremptorily refused to have it named the Shattuck Observatory, still, as may be seen by one of the accompanying resolutions of the Trustees, his name will be permanently associated with the building, its instruments, and, I may add, with its Library.*

"It is worthy of remark, that all the above donations, with the exception of the two subscriptions of $500 each, were unso-

* All of these donations were duly acknowledged in the Proceedings of the Trustees. The following is a copy of their Resolves, passed Dec. 23, 1852, relating to the donation for the Observatory:—

"Resolved, That the Board of Trustees receive with profound gratitude the donation of Dr. George C. Shattuck of Boston, of seven thousand dollars, for the purpose of erecting an Observatory and the purchase of Instruments; and also a donation of one thousand dollars, in addition to his previous donation, for the purchase of books for the Library; and that they tender to him their warmest acknowledgments for this renewed evidence of his devotion to the interests of science, and of his attachment to his Alma Mater.

"Resolved, That a suitable tablet be placed in a conspicuous part of the Observatory, with an inscription which shall show by whose bounty it was erected, and serve as a public record of the munificence of the distinguished donor; and that his name be inscribed upon any instruments that may be purchased with the balance of his donation.

"Resolved, That the Trustees hereby engage fully to carry out the objects of the donations as specified in the letter of the Hon. John Aiken to President Lord, and the Letters of Professor Young to Dr. Shattuck:—That the Prudential Committee make such preparation as may be necessary for the erection of the Observatory as directed by Dr. Shattuck; and that Professor Young be requested to proceed to Europe as soon as arrangements can be made to purchase the instruments, and such books as Dr. Shattuck and Dr. Shurtleff shall direct."

licited by the College, being the spontaneous offerings of the munificent donor."

His donations to Harvard College at different times were over $26,000. In 1844 he gave $100 for the purchase of the Mineral Cabinet; in 1846 and 1851, $200 to the Observatory; in 1847, $500 for the New Medical College; in 1853, $500 for Professor Agassiz' Collection; and other sums at other times. In 1853 he gave seven shares in the Stark Mills in Manchester, N. H., and seven shares in the Atlantic Mills in Lawrence, both together valued at $14,000, the income of which is to be appropriated for the support of a Professor of Pathological Anatomy in the Medical Department of the College. And in his will he bequeathed to the Trustees of the College twenty shares in the Coheco Manufacturing Company, valued at over $10,000, "for the benefit of such persons of superior merit, pursuing their studies at said College (graduates or undergraduates,) as in their opinion may require and deserve assistance in the study of Mathematics or any of its branches, or in the study of Languages, or either of them." This bequest has been set apart by the Trustees to constitute four Scholarships, and denominated "Shattuck Scholarships."*

To aid the Boston Athenæum in placing it upon its present foundation he paid at different times $5,500. The cost of the shares in that institution is $300 each. He subscribed for one share for himself, and for four shares which he presented to other persons. Jan. 17, 1854, he gave five shares to the town of Littleton, and five to the town of Templeton, in token of his remembrance of the birth-places of his father and himself. These shares are to be forever held in trust for the following purposes:—"That the selectmen of said two towns respectively, and their successors for the time being, shall permit the use of their five shares respectively, from year to year, by any one five persons resident in said towns respectively, to be selected by them from the classes of clergymen, physicians, lawyers, teachers, and scientific farmers and mechanics, it being understood that the said shares themselves are to be forever inalienable." In addition to the cost of the shares, he anticipated the annual assessment of $5 on each share by the payment in advance of an additional $1,000, thus securing the permanent right to each of those shares to take books from the library. Dr. Shattuck had previously offered to found a library in each of these towns, provided a fire-proof building for its accommodation should be erected. This not meeting with the ready concurrence of the inhabitants, the alternative above described was adopted.

In his will he bequeathed one share of the Cocheco stock, or over $500, to each of the following eleven objects, amounting in the aggregate to more than $5,500:—Howard Benevolent Society; Boston Female Asylum; Boston Asylum and Farm School; Boston Children's Friend Society; American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions; Benevolent Fraternity of Churches; American Education Society; American Statistical Association; American Academy of Arts and Sciences; West Boston Religious Society; and the Roman Catholic Bishop of Boston. The last item is expressed to be "in token of my sense of the great injustice done by the unindemnified destruction of the Ursuline Convent at Charlestown, a charitable institution, which was devoted to objects of benevolence and the cause of education." He also bequeathed the income of his other manufacturing stocks for three years, in equal shares, to the three following societies, supposed to be worth to them more than $30,000, or $10,000 each:—One third to the Massachusetts Medical Society; one third to the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic Association; and one third to the Massachusetts Agricultural Society. These are specimens of his more public charities. Very many other institutions were also the recipients of his bounty in his life-time.

From a brief Memoir of Dr. Shattuck by Dr. Edward Jarvis of Dorchester, once a student in his office, read before the American Statistical Association, and published in their Transactions, we make the following extracts as illustrations of his character:—

"He commenced the active practice of his profession in Boston in 1807. He immediately gained acquaintances, and these soon became friends. He was early admitted to the confidence of many families, and was employed by a circle of warm supporters. These multiplied year after year, until, at an earlier period than usually falls to the lot of even the favored, he found himself on the high tide of professional success. He was then established in full employment, and was among the most extensive and laborious practitioners of medicine in Boston. Being incessantly called upon, he gave all his powers of body and mind to the visitation and care of the sick; and through every season, by day and by night, he was at the service of the world, of every class and grade of society,—among the favored of fortune, among the cultivated and the high-minded, among the beloved of many friends, among the poor, the destitute, even among the abandoned and dissolute, those who had none to love them, and whose worst enemies were their own selves,—among all these he went about doing good, healing their diseases, administering comfort, and relieving want where that existed.

“Dr. Shattuck was a very popular physician in this city, and had an extensive reputation in the country. Very many sought his advice from other and distant towns, and his success in the management of disease sustained the good name which drew so many to him. He was a student of books, when he had leisure to attend to them. He had large opportunities of observing the phenomena of the disordered system. He did not, however, aim at the highest scholarship in the science of his calling, nor at the most thoroughly disciplined exactness in his investigations of morbid symptoms; but he had a rare tact and great knowledge of mankind, and seemed to see through difficulties and arrive at his conclusions by shorter processes than most men are accustomed to use. Having quick perceptions, he looked at once to the end. His conclusions, therefore, were rather the results of a sort of intuition than the cautiously drawn deductions of reason.

“Beside his professional knowledge and success, which secured the confidence of his employers in his management of disease, there was such an affectionate kindness of manner, so much gravity and wisdom in his conversation, such a rare sincerity of speech, and he manifested so much interest in the persons with whom he had intercourse, that he won the strong attachment of those who put themselves under his care; and when they had trusted him once, they desired to confide in him more and more, and to lean upon him again and again.

“Dr. Shattuck was ever giving, and giving liberally and discreetly. He was no mere lavish and careless giver. He gave to do good, and always, if possible, a greater and more permanent good than the mere temporary supply of a want. He would not minister to extravagance or folly. He would not encourage idleness. He offered no bounty to impracticable objects or unsuitable plans of life. But he was remarkable for the fitness and utility of his gifts.

“He sought no publicity in his charities; the private channels and objects of generosity were more agreeable to his taste. He loved most to aid men to eke out their means—to add a little more power to complete an almost accomplished but staggering purpose. To those who honestly and faithfully put forth all their energies to do a good and suitable work, which was a little beyond their strength or means, he was a friend at hand just at the time when they began to need, and when, without such a coadjutor as he was, they might have faltered and perhaps failed. He was more pleased in dispensing his means in this way than in any other. Thus the aged minister, who had saved more souls than money, and whose friends had gone down to the grave before him—the scantily sustained but industrious waiter on professional success—the struggling, industrious student in college—the straitened widow, the poor laborer, the wood-sawyer, whose earnings and capital would not enable him to replace his broken or exhausted tools—all these, and such as these, everywhere within his wide range, were subjects of his observation and recipients of his aid, in private ways, and oftentimes in ways so secret as to elude all search for the source of the blessings which had been received.” Many mechanics have stated to us that it had been their good fortune to work for many liberal-minded men, but of all such men Dr. Shattuck was the most liberal.

“One anecdote will illustrate the manner of giving which pleased him most. While I was a student in his office, on the 1st of January, Mr. K., his tailor, called with his bill. Dr. Shattuck was out, and I was alone in the office. As I was well acquainted with Mr. K., he showed me the Doctor’s bill, which, he said, he did not feel at liberty to show to or speak of to others. There was a bill against Dr. Shattuck for clothing received within a single year, of over four hundred dollars! Dr. Shattuck dressed economically. It was impossible that the clothing of himself and his son, could cost more than a fraction of this bill.

Mr. K. explained. He said that every little while there came men, gentlemen, laborers, children, into his store, with an order from Dr. Shattuck, almost always in these words: 'Please give this man a coat, or vest, or pair of pantaloons, or greatcoat, cloak, or a suit of clothes suited to his condition.' The last phrase was the only condition prescribed; and Mr. K. gave such clothing as the man's occupation, station and age seemed to require. In this way Mr. K. said that his clothing bill amounted to about four hundred dollars every year, and had for a long time.

"Many invalids, of every class, were in the habit of calling on Dr. Shattuck for professional advice, especially in cases of chronic disease. Among these were frequently the students of theology, at Andover and Cambridge, and young men in college, men in apparently straitened circumstances, and poor women with their children. He very kindly heard all their tales of suffering, gave his advice for their self-management, and then wrote a prescription for medicine; all the while surveying his patients' outer man as carefully as he had inquired into their inner man. After writing the prescription, he wrote a note and sealed and directed it to his tailor, and then he very courteously said: 'Now, sir, will you be good enough to carry this prescription to the apothecary, 134 Washington street, and while they are putting up the medicine, will you do me the favor to carry this note to Mr. K., No. 5, Congress street?' There was no fee to be paid for his professional advice. The grateful patient, wishing to make some return for the good physician's kindness, gladly consented to carry the note as he wished. When they delivered the note to Mr. K., in Congress street, they learned to their surprise, that, instead of diminishing their debt of gratitude, they increased it by so doing; for they were to receive clothing in addition to healing, from the hands of Dr. Shattuck, and without cost to themselves." A gentleman who had been a student in his office, being attacked with a disease which was likely to terminate fatally, was advised by his physician to return to his friends in the country, live generously, and take wine occasionally as a stimulant. Not long afterwards a messenger called at his residence and left a quarter-cask of the best old Madeira wine, but declined to give the name of the person from whom it was sent. It was not, however, difficult to identify the generous benefactor as Dr. Shattuck.

The North American Review (Jan., 1855, p. 33,) selects Dr. Shattuck as the type among physicians of a "Finished Life"—"A life," says the writer, "so filled with useful and generous deeds, with such devotedness to his profession, which he held more and more in honor, and to all the best interests of man and society, that it is a comfort and a privilege to be permitted to dwell upon it in our recollections."

As further illustrations we make the following extracts from a Discourse on the occasion of his death, by Rev. C. A. Bartol, preached in the West Boston Church, where he worshipped, and where he was a communicant:—

"He began his career, as perhaps it is best every young man should, having nothing in particular to trust to but his own talent and fidelity, with, as he said, 'the healthy stimulus of prospective want;' and waiting quietly for his first patients, attending slowly to case after case, he laid silently, stone by stone, the foundation of his fame. Every truly noble building rests on just such a basis of deep and secret diligence; and, as a great merchant once said, that the making of the first thousand dollars cost him more perplexity than all the rest of his immense fortune, so it is with the first achievement, by manifest, undeniable, and unmistakable power of all professional success."—"Extraordinarily distinguished for insight into the soul as well as body; reading character as he did health and disease; leaping through obstructions to his point, with an electric spark of genius that was in him; clothing his conclusions sometimes with a poetic color, and sometimes with the garb of a quaint phraseology; employing now a pithy proverb, and now a cautious and tender circumlocution, to utter what could scarce have been otherwise conveyed, in a method of conversation, which in its straight lines, or through all its windings, I never found otherwise than very instructive,—an intuitive sagacity and perfect originality marked all his sayings and doings. He could never be confounded with any other man. Borrowing neither ideas nor expressions, he was always himself. Yet there was nothing cynical or recluse or egotistical about him. I never heard him boast himself or despise another. He had a large and warm heart, with room in it for many persons and all humanity. Though he was so peculiar, much of his heart was the common heart, as the most lofty mountains have in them most of the common earth. He had this precious singularity, that he never seemed to belong to any one class or little social circle, but to stand well and beneficently related to all. While not a few are absorbed in some single relation, he observed and acted well in the multitude of his relations to his fellow-men. He was remarkable for his broad look and observance of all the interests, material or moral, mechanical or spiritual, of the world, and was equally at home in a question of finance or an enterprise of religion. I know not where, in any individual, to look for a larger amount of sterling treasure."

He was a firm believer in the Christian religion. He loved the church and revered its pastors. And in dying he threw himself humbly upon the mercy of God, who had so long blessed him, and upon Christ, through whom he hoped to obtain immortal life. As a Christian he was catholic, in the enlarged and liberal sense of the term. He belonged to no one sect or denomination of Christians. He extended his sympathy and hand of friendship to all the faithful preachers of the Gospel. "I regard ministers," he said, "not of one name, but of all." Once being examined under oath, as to some records he might have made, he said that, "by the grace of God, the name of a minister was never entered with a charge upon his books"! "But a reverence for the Most High was in him distinct from all other principles. His will towards men was strong. But he seemed to have no will towards God. His will vanished before the Supreme; and he would have none but the First and All-presiding, and seemed to think there was none beside. As a physician, he looked not to his medicines alone but to God, for success, and prayed before he prescribed. So it was with him, with ever-increasing interest to the last. 'Pray with me,' was commonly his first salutation as I entered his sick chamber. 'I want your prayers: they are a great comfort and consolation to me.' 'Pray not for my recovery.' 'I am going to God.' 'I wish, in your prayer, to go as a sinner.'—And, at the last, having spoken his love to those most closely related to him, just before he went, 'Time, Eternity, Eternity, Eternity,' were his expiring words; knowing, as he retained possession of his mind, that he was just stepping over that mysterious causeway, hid from mortal eyes, the sight of which no fleshly vision could bear, which separates one from another."

309. JARED SHATTUCK, only s. of Timothy, (p. 160,) was b. in New Haven, now North Haven, Ct., April 27, 1773, and d. in Meadville, the county seat of Crawford Co., Pa., July 16, 1837, æ. 64 y. 2 m. 19 d. He first entered the store of Mr. Spelman in Durham (p. 160) as an apprentice and clerk, and after that gentleman's failure, and when about fifteen years of age, he went to Philadelphia, and soon after to St. Thomas, one of the West India Islands, where he became a successful merchant and ship owner.

On the 13th of May, 1800, one of his ships, called the Mercator, with a cargo, bound from St. Thomas to Jacmel and Port Republican, was captured while endeavoring to enter Jacmel, by the United States armed vessel of war, called the Experiment, William Maley, commander; and under direction of a prize master was ordered to Cape François. Before arrival she was captured as a prize on the high seas by the British private armed vessel of war, the General Simcoe, sent to Jamaica, and there condemned by the Court of Admiralty, on the 28th of June following. Mr. Shattuck brought an action against Maley in the district court of Pennsylvania, for the recovery of the damages he had sustained. It is stated in the detailed report of the case, (3 Cranch's Reports, 458,) that Mr. Shattuck "was born in the state of Connecticut in the year 1774, and when he was between fifteen and sixteen years of age, viz., about the end of 1789 or beginning of 1790, he emigrated to the island of St. Thomas, one of the dominions of the king of Denmark and Norway, with a view to settle and establish his permanent residence in that island; that he served his apprenticeship there with a mercantile house for about six years, and from his first arrival has constantly and permanently, and now continues to reside there; that on the 10th of April, 1797, he became a naturalized Danish subject and burgher of said island, and shortly afterwards intermarried with an inhabitant of that place, by whom he has several children, all living in that island; and that he did acquire, and now holds real estate there, and is there permanently settled and established, and carries on the trade and business of a merchant." Upon these facts the District Judge decided the case against Mr. Shattuck. From this decree he appealed to the circuit court of the United States, and this court reversed the decree of the district court, and decided that he was entitled to restitution, with damages and costs. The case was remitted to the district court for further proceeding, when the clerk, with the assistance of two merchants, audited the claim, and returned an estimate of the value of the Mercator and cargo, and the damage sustained by Mr. Shattuck, amounting to $41,658 67. It was carried to the supreme court of the United States, where it was decreed in his favor on the 8th of March, 1806. Chief Justice Marshall delivered the opinion of the court. The final award, however, amounted to $25,017 44 only. This claim, even as awarded by the court, was not immediately settled; and in 1810 Mr. Shattuck returned to the United States, and brought the subject before Congress; and after three years more delay an act was passed on the 2d of February, 1813, authorizing the payment to him of $33,864 55, as the principal and interest then estimated to be due. (United States Statutes, Little & Brown's edition, Vol. VI., p. 116.)

The wife and family of Mr. Shattuck, in the mean time, resided in New Haven; and preferring that city to the place of her nativity, they continued there a few years afterwards. During this period he purchased of the Holland Land Company over 50,000 acres of land in Western Pennsylvania, and in 1817 removed to Meadville, where he subsequently resided as a merchant and a dealer in lands. He was elected auditor for the county, and held a very respectable social position among his fellow citizens. Capt. Gad Peck, a noted man in New Haven, was associated with him in some of his business transactions.

351. GILBERT SHATTUCK, s. of David, (p. 165,) was b. in Colchester, Ct., Feb. 1, 1793. He learned the carpenter's trade in Hebron, Ct., and in 1816 removed with his elder brother to Middlebury, N. Y. In 1818 he bought a farm in Avon, Livingston Co., where he lived until 1831, when he removed to Ypsilanti, Washtenaw Co., Mich., where he resided upon a farm until 1845. He then settled in the adjoining town of Ann Arbor, where he now resides, and keeps a boot and shoe store. In 1835 he was a delegate to the convention to form the constitution of the new state of Michigan; in 1844 was a representative in the legislature; and in 1845 and 1846 was sheriff of the county of Washtenaw.

He m. in Colchester, Jan. 9, 1817, HANNAH LANNYSSA POST, b. Oct. 31, 1798, dau. of Ezekiel A. and Hannah Post of Hebron, Ct., and has had,

352. REV. ARTEMAS SHATTUCK, s. of David, (p. 165,) was b. in Colchester, Ct., March 10, 1795, and was first a farmer with his brothers in Middlebury, N. Y. He was naturally a man of the most remarkable energy and perseverance. While here, an extraordinary event occurred which subdued his energy, and affected the whole subsequent history of his life. A correspondent remarks, in communicating the following facts, "You can judge whether there was any Shattuck blood in him."

While he was cutting some forest trees one fell upon a high stump, and became entangled with other trees. In endeavoring to cut, disengage, and bring it to the ground, it suddenly fell, and the trunk upon which he stood split, and his foot was caught in the cleft. As it fell over the stump he was raised several feet from the ground and suspended with his head downwards; and in such a position that he could not touch the ground, nor get upon the top of the trunk of the tree for support. His axe in the mean time had fallen, and was not within his reach; he was thus without means to extricate himself. In this condition he cried for help, but cried in vain, until his voice failed him and he could cry no longer. He soon began to suffer extreme pain, not only in his foot, which remained clenched in the cleft of the tree, but also from headache and general exhaustion, caused by his unnatural position and the great exertion he had put forth to make himself heard and to obtain relief. He was in the woods, three fourths of a mile from any human being, and the weather was extremely cold. What was he to do? Unless he could be immediately extricated death seemed inevitable. There appeared no alternative. Summoning all his fortitude he resolved upon an act, which if he should succeed in performing there would be a feeble hope, and only a feeble one, of saving his life. He might perish if he did it, he must if he did it not. He took from his pocket an old Barlow knife, and first cut off the leg of his boot and stocking, and with a piece of quality which he had in his vest pocket he bound his ankle as tightly as possible, to stop the current of blood. Then, with his knife, he unjointed his own ankle, and left his foot cut and separated from his leg in the cleft of the tree! By the trunk of the tree he reached the ground, and crawled to his dinner-basket, and bound up the stump with a napkin. He cut a stick and hobbled or crawled upon his hands and knees through the snow towards home. When he had arrived within a few rods of his house he was discovered by his family; and, exhausted and fainting, was brought to his room and resuscitated. A surgeon was obtained from Batavia, a distance of fifteen or eighteen miles, by whom his limb was again amputated, and in due time he recovered. Three of his brothers, Josiah, Gilbert, and Giles, were with him during his illness.*

Mr. Shattuck afterwards turned his attention to study; emigrated to North Carolina in 1819; joined the Baptist church in * Some account of this event, unassociated with any name, was published in the Presbyterian newspaper of Philadelphia, in the winter of 1850-51, under the title of "A curious fact." This fact was stated to be, that when Mr. Shattuck "became conscious, he said, 'Go immediately to the woods and cut out my foot, for it is suffering most excruciating pain.' They did so, and brought the foot to the house. He then said it was cold, and wished it put into warm water. This request was also granted. It was not, however, done in the room in which he lay, yet as soon as the foot touched the water he exclaimed, 'it burns me—the water is too hot.' And upon examination it was found to be so. The water was then made cooler, and he was satisfied." We have great doubts as to the authenticity of this statement, or of the correctness of its philosophy. We have read considerably in medical literature, and have conversed with many scientific surgeons on the subject; and have yet to learn a well-authenticated case in which an application to an amputated limb has sensibly affected the living individual from whom it was taken.

1820, and commenced preaching in 1821. We have not a full account of his subsequent history. In the Baptist Register for 1835 his name appears as minister of the Friendship and Mechanic's Hill Church in Moore Co., N. C. It is said "he lived in a very poor county, and worked for a very poor living on poor land." In 1842-3 he removed to Carrollton, Miss., upon the invitation of his brother, who gave him a farm, from which he made one good crop; but losing his wife and youngest child he sold his place, and started on his return to North Carolina. Meeting with some Baptist friends in Georgia he accepted their invitation to a pastoral charge.

He m. 1, in 1824, in Moore Co., N. C., "a most amiable and industrious wife," by whom he had a son Alvin, b. in 1826. He had also another son, b. in Carrollton in 1843. She and her youngest son d. in Carrollton in the fall and winter of 1843-4. It is said that he married again, and that he and his son now reside in Georgia, but we have been unable to obtain their history or location. The American Baptist Register for 1852 gives the names of "A. Shadock" (probably Shattuck) as pastor of the "Eight Mile Creek" Church in Mobile, Alabama; and of "A. P. Shattuck," pastor at Villanow, Walker Co., Geo. They may be the father and son abovementioned, though we have been unable to obtain answers to letters of inquiry on the subject.

354. HON. DAVID OLCOTT SHATTUCK, s. of David, (p. 165,) was b. in Colchester, Ct., March 21, 1800. He improved the advantages of education afforded by the common schools of his neighborhood; and in 1824 removed from his native town to North Carolina, and became a preacher in the Methodist church.

In 1825 he was stationed at Black River in the Neuse District, in connection with the Virginia Conference, residing principally in Dupin County, N. C. In 1829 he removed to Brownsville, Haywood Co., Tenn., and in 1833 to Carrollton, Carroll Co., Miss. He was Judge of the District or Circuit Court of the Second District of Mississippi four years, 1837 to 1841, and during the same time was presiding elder of the extensive district of Greene, in the Methodist Church. In 1841 he was the whig candidate for governor of Mississippi, but belonging to the political party then in the minority in that State, he failed of an election. In 1843 he was elected professor of law of the Centenary College in Jackson, Louisiana, and from 1845 to 1849 was president of that institution. In 1845 he had the honorary degree of LL. D. conferred upon him by the Wesleyan University of Middletown, Ct. In 1849 he resigned his office as president of the Centenary College, and emigrated to California with three of his sons; and the remainder of his family followed him in 1852. In the fall of 1850 he was elected one of the judges of the Superior Court of San Francisco, but resigned in 1851, and became a farmer in Sonoma. In 1853 he reopened a lawyer's office in San Francisco, where he still resides. In 1854 he was reëlected judge of the Superior Court, which office he now holds. A correspondent with great propriety remarks, that "the few stations he filled prospered under his administration, and he retired from all regretted by the people. He never sought office. He never had any other ambition to gratify than a strong and ardent desire to be useful to his countrymen. He practised law to support his family—he preached to do good, without being burdensome—he succeeded in both these professions beyond his expectations at first, but in doing good he did not equal his desires."

He and his wife united with the church, Feb. 2, 1812, and he was ever active and influential in the various benevolent and religious movements of the day.*

* A funeral sermon was preached on the occasion of his death by Rev. Mr. Burnap, the pastor of the Appleton Street Church, where he worshipped, from which we make the following extract:—“Mr. Abel Shattuck was born in Ashby, June 14, 1788, but was removed to New Ipswich in childhood, where his early life was spent. There, in 1812, he became a subject of renewing grace and publicly professed his faith in Christ. He immediately assumed the responsibilities of an active Christian, and was among the first to engage in labors of the Sabbath School in our country. He was ardent, courageous and persevering in his Master's work, and never seemed to lose sight of the great object for which the Christian lives.

“In 1826 he removed to Lowell, then a little village almost destitute of religious privileges, and was one of a little band to establish prayer meetings, and to commence that holy system of effort which has resulted in the salvation and glory of so many thousands. In the formation of the first church he was one; and when that was filled to overflowing he was one of the colony to form this church. While his health permitted he was one of its active and devoted members. He was always an attentive hearer of the word; and the great truths of the gospel kindled living fire in his soul. He was habitually spiritually minded, and his soul seemed always to sympathize with words of the Holy Ghost. To him they were spirit and they were life. Like other men he was subject to the errors and infirmities of our nature; but he had a tender conscience, and easily melted into penitence when he was sensible of aberration. He was far from viewing himself as a perfect man, or from being puffed up with self-complacency. He expected to be saved as a lost sinner, and was ever ready to extol that grace by which the guilty could be pardoned, and sanctified, and saved. God manifest in the flesh was his salvation and his joy, and the history of redeeming grace was his delightful theme. His soul seemed ready to unite in the song of Heaven: ‘Unto him that loved us and washed us in his own blood be glory forever.’ Our departed brother was always deeply interested for the church. ‘Though for a long time he has not been permitted to unite with us in our social devotions or public solemnities, he has never forgotten his covenant with God and with his brethren. In the many interviews which I have had with him, he has expressed deep solicitude and warm attachment. Zion was engraven on his heart, and some of his last expressions were in our behalf. He was faithful unto death, and forsook not his brethren until his Lord called him away. Let his name be engraven on our hearts until we meet him again.’”

He m. Oct. 22, 1811, MARY BEDLOW, b. April 17, 1790, dau. of Stephen Bedlow of Ashby, and granddau. of Stephen Bedlow and Ellen Webb of Weymouth.

7. Elmira, b. Oct. 23, 1830; m. April 19, 1855, Moses Allen Johnson, b. in Lynn, April 2, 1826, s. of Daniel J. and Comfort Allen. He is Assistant Superintendent of the Lowell Company.

376. Cpl. DANIEL SHATTUCK, s. of John, (p. 172,) was b. in Ashby, July 10, 1790, and for the last forty-nine years has resided in Concord. It was a favorite wish of his father and himself, that he should receive a public education, and be qualified for professional life; and in his early youth he went through, at the New Ipswich Academy, the studies preparatory to his admission to college. Circumstances, however, transpired, which led to a relinquishment of their original design. In 1806 he left home, and entered the store of Messrs. J. and J. H. Davis in Concord, as an apprentice and clerk, and continued there six years. In 1812 he purchased, entirely on credit, in company with Bela Hemmenway, the stock and stand of Dea. John White, who had long been a trader in that town, and commenced business for himself, under the firm of Hemmenway & Shattuck. Mr. Hemmenway died Jan. 17, 1816, and Mr. Shattuck afterwards conducted his business either alone, or in company with Dea. White, or his brother, under the style of Daniel Shattuck &

Co., until 1844, when he retired from its active management. By his integrity, sagacity, and strict attention to business he has been distinguished for his success as a merchant, and for his skill as a financier. Although in politics a uniform and consistent whig, and belonging to the party generally in the minority in the town and county, he has been considered one of the leading citizens, and has often been selected to execute various important public trusts. He was a representative in the legislature in 1831, and a member of the senate in 1834 and 1836, and has held a commission of justice of the peace. He was chosen treasurer of the Middlesex Agricultural Society in 1821, and many subsequent years, and was afterwards three times elected its president. He has been a director or president, and the principal business manager, of the Middlesex Mutual Fire Insurance Company, from its first foundation in 1826; and during his administration has introduced several improvements in the general regulations of such institutions. He has been president of the Concord Bank from its first incorporation in 1832. He procured the act of incorporation of the Middlesex Institution for Savings in 1836, and has since been one of its trustees and principal managers. He was chairman of the committee for the erection of the Concord Monument, to commemorate the events of the 19th of April, 1775, and was the author of the inscription on its tablet. These are some of the public stations he has held. His motto of life has been, to "consider well and then execute faithfully all matters entrusted to him."

He m. April 23, 1816, SARAH EDWARDS, b. Sept. 28, 1794, dau. of Abraham Edwards, Esq. and Rebecca Houghton of Ashby.

377. LEMUEL SHATTUCK, s. of John, (p. 172,) was b. in Ashby, Oct. 15, 1793; removed with his parents, before completing his first year, to New Ipswich, N. H., and resided there and in the adjoining towns during his minority and until 1815, as a farmer, manufacturer, and school teacher. In 1817 he resided in Troy and Albany, New York, and in 1818 to 1822 in Detroit, Michigan, as a teacher; in 1823 to 1833, in Concord, Massachusetts, as a merchant; in 1834 in Cambridge, as a bookseller; and since 1834, in Boston, as a publisher and bookseller, until his retirement from a regular business. He never had the benefit of much public instruction. The common school in the district to which his father belonged was at a considerable distance from his dwelling-house, and was generally very imperfectly taught, and continued only a part of the year. He seldom attended more than five or six weeks in one season. The chief educational privileges which he enjoyed in his youth, were in the school of mutual instruction, composed of his elder brothers and his sisters, kept in intervals of leisure in an industrious and a laborious early life-time, in his father's own household. Two quarters in the academy completed his public education. Whatever knowledge he has possessed besides has been acquired almost entirely in his private study, by his own unaided efforts, at such times as could be spared from active labor and business, or from sleep. And he has great satisfaction in stating as the result of his own experience, that any person, by having a judicious plan for saving the odd moments of life and appropriating them to reading good books or the acquisition of useful information, may obtain a large fund of knowledge, which will be a qualification for greater usefulness in any station, and be the source of great gratification and happiness in more mature and declining life.

If he was to allude to the events of his life some reader might perhaps consider it as savoring too much of egotism, which is as distasteful to him as it can be to any one else; and yet there may be many of his kindred with whom he is not personally acquainted, who may desire to know something more of the author of these Memorials than the mere mention of his existence and connections. And since his name has been intimately associated with several printed works, and with some measures of general interest, he hopes to be justified if he should briefly refer, for this purpose, in these Family Memorials, to a few only of those which have attracted the most public attention. Several other works, the production of his pen, and some measures which he originated, or with which he has been connected, less publicly known, will be passed unnoticed.

Besides other offices to which he has been chosen, he was a member of the City Council of Boston for 1837, and the five subsequent years, until he declined a reelection. He has held a commission of a justice of the peace, and has been several years a representative from Boston in the State Legislature. In 1830 he was chosen a member of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and about the same time a member of the American Antiquarian Society; and he was one of the original founders both of the American Statistical Association and of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society. He has also been a member of various literary, benevolent, and other associations. In all the public positions in which he has been placed, he has never shrunk from the performance of any labor that seemed to be required, with or without emolument; and he never hesitated to propose new measures, or a modification of old ones, if in his judgment, after being maturely examined, they promised to be of utility. In carrying these measures into execution he has often been a laborer for the public, and sometimes to the sacrifice, perhaps to too great an extent, of his own personal interest. He has often sowed the seed, cultivated the field, and reared the fruit for others to harvest. He has been willing to do good for the sake of doing good; and if others appropriated his labors to themselves, and any honor or profit that might be attached to them, he has seldom complained. He would never stoop to intrigue for, or solicit office, how well soever he might be qualified for it by natural endowment, or educational capability, or how much soever it might be merited by personal services already rendered. In this respect he has differed from many others. He has looked with great disapprobation, and not without apprehension for the future welfare of our country, upon the corrupt practices by which unworthy men and unworthy measures have often been pushed by unworthy means into public favor.

In 1818, he organized at Detroit the first Sabbath School ever opened in Michigan; and superintended it during the four subsequent years of his residence in that city. He afterwards organized and superintended for many years a similar school in Concord.

While a member of the School Committee in Concord he re-organized the public schools in that town, introduced a new system for the division of the public school-money, and prepared and printed a new code of school regulations. One of these regulations required that school registers, prepared under such forms as he prescribed, should be furnished to the teachers at the commencement, to be returned at the end of each successive school term; and another, that the committee should make written reports annually to the town concerning the schools; and in 1830 he prepared, presented, and published their first report. These measures were original with him; and, so far as his knowledge extends, this was the first Annual School Report of that description ever presented in a public town meeting in Massachusetts. Before that time it had not been considered one of the duties of such committees to make a report of their doings concerning the matters entrusted to them. A similar regulation was subsequently introduced in Cambridge, Northborough, and other places; and it operated so well that at his suggestion, while a member of the Legislature, the law of April 13, 1838, requiring its adoption throughout the State, was passed. And it may with perfect confidence be said, that no measure, aside from the establishment of the Board of Education itself, has done so much for the improvement of the public schools of the State.

In preparing some articles relating to the important historical incidents for which Concord is celebrated, for the newspaper then published in that town, he met with so much matter, not only of local but of general interest and value, that he conceived the idea of preparing a separate work on the subject. And this idea was matured in his publication, entitled—

“A History of the Town of Concord, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, from its earliest settlement to 1832; and of the adjoining Towns, Bedford, Acton, Lincoln, and Carlisle; containing various notices of County and State History not before published. Boston: Russell, Odiorne & Co., 1835. 8vo. pp. 400.”

This work was one of the pioneer histories of its class ; and in plan and execution had some original features.* It was prepared in hours snatched from active business and from sleep, during the last four years of the author's residence in Concord.

While making the investigation necessary for the preparation of this volume he became acquainted with the condition of the public records in many towns, and learned to his regret that the registration of births, marriages and deaths, was generally neglected ; and that comparatively few public or private registers of the kind were made. Viewing it as a matter of general interest and importance, he called public attention to the subject by communications in the newspapers ; and in 1841 published a work under the title :—

"A Complete System of Family Registration. Part First, containing charts, forms, and directions for registering, on a new and simple plan, the birth, marriage, and death of the several members of the family, and for ascertaining and exhibiting their connections, relative situation, heirs at law, ancestors, descendants, and generation. Part Second, containing forms and suggestions for registering other particulars, proper or useful to be retained in remembrance, relative to any member of a family." 4to.

After several editions of this work had been published the stereotype plates were destroyed by fire. Another work, upon a new and more simple plan, has been prepared, and will soon appear, under the following double title :—

"Blank Book Forms for Family Registers, devised and constructed upon a new, simple, and comprehensive Plan, and designed for general Use in every Family ; including Suggestions and Directions for an improved System of Family Registration." 4to.

The page following this general title contains another title, partly blank, for a specific family, to be filled out by the name of the one who may use it for its own records, thus expressed :—

"The Family Register of the Ancestors, Connections, and Descendants of _____, first compiled and arranged by _____, and continued by _____."

The registration laws of the State were first brought under the consideration of the Legislature at the request of Mr. Shattuck, and resulted in the passage of the act of March 3, 1842. He furnished some of the materials for the First and Second Reports * William Lincoln, Esq. in his History of Worcester, says, "The general plan of arrangement has been imitated from Mr. Shattuck's History of Concord. It would have been greatly desirable that the excellency of this model could have been more generally copied." A favorable review of the work appeared in the North American Review for April, 1836, and in other periodicals.

under this act. The Fourth Report, on a new plan, was prepared entirely by him; and the Appendix contained some general views on the subject, also published in a separate form, entitled:—

“Letter to the Secretary of State on the Registration of Births, Marriages, and Deaths in Massachusetts.” 8vo. pp. 42.

While a member of the Legislature in 1849, a revision of the laws was made agreeably to his recommendations as chairman of a committee, in his report, entitled:—

“Report of the Joint Special Committee of the Legislature of Massachusetts, appointed to consider the expediency of modifying the Laws relating to the Registration of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, presented March 3, 1849.” pp. 58. House Document, No. 65.

At the special request of the Secretary of State he designed and prepared the blanks to carry this new law into execution, and wrote the pamphlet entitled:—

“Instructions of the Secretary of State to Town and City Clerks, Registrars, and others, relating to the Registration of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, embracing the Laws of the Commonwealth on the subject.” 8vo. pp. 32.

The plan of the Reports made under these new regulations was devised by him, though the execution of this plan, having been intrusted to others, has not been entirely such as he desired. He also originated the plan, and drew the ordinance, which was passed by the city of Boston, for carrying the laws into operation in that city, and for creating the office of City Registrar.

The system of public registration here described, though it at first met with some opposition, has since become generally popular, and is now considered a necessity. Similar systems have more recently been introduced into other States, and are likely to become general throughout the whole Union. If faithfully carried out, henceforward the rights of property will be more securely guarded, the natural history and laws of human life will become more generally known, and genealogists and biographers will have a more easy and sure pathway to the information they may desire.

In 1837 he devised the plan for arranging, printing, and preserving the “Documents of the City of Boston, printed by order of the several Departments of the City Government,” which was begun in 1838, and has since been continued in one or more annual volumes upon the same plan. And he then introduced a resolution, which was passed, providing for exchanging such documents for those of other cities, intending that they should form a nucleus for the commencement of a city library. At the same time he collected and caused to be bound a few sets of such documents as could be found of the four previous years, which had been printed without system, and left to chance for their preservation. He also prepared a "Municipal Register, containing the Rules and Orders of the City Council, recent Ordinances and Laws, and a List of the Municipal Officers of the City of Boston for 1841." This was the first publication of its kind, and has since been continued annually, under the same general title, and upon a similar plan. He also obtained the passage of the Resolve by the State Legislature of April 25, 1838, providing for international exchanges of State documents and publications, for those of other states and governments. In 1849, as a member of the Legislative Library Committee, he wrote the Report, (House Document, No. 71,) recommending a modification of the plan for enlarging and managing the State Library.

During his connection with the city government of Boston he labored with others to reduce the public debt, and to secure an economical administration of its affairs; and the condition of the finances in 1842 and the three following years, as compared with the then previous and the now existing debts, will show with what results. When the great question of introducing water into the city was discussed, honestly believing that the specific measure then proposed for the acceptance of the citizens would not be expedient, he wrote, at the request of others, two pamphlets in opposition to it. The first was entitled:—

"Letter from Lemuel Shattuck, in answer to Interrogatories of J. Preston, in relation to the Introduction of Water into the City of Boston Boston: Samuel N. Dickinson, Printer, 1845." 8vo. pp. 40.

The second, which appeared anonymously, was entitled:—

"How shall we vote on the Water Act?" 8vo. pp. 24.

These pamphlets were extensively circulated among the people, and the defeat of the measure was attributed mainly to their influence. Another act, less objectionable, was afterwards passed and accepted by the city, without opposition.

Among various other matters which received his careful examination while connected with the city government, were the then existing Bills of Mortality. The result of this examination appeared in his publication, entitled:—

“The Vital Statistics of Boston, containing an Abstract of the Bills of Mortality for the last twenty-nine years, and a General View of the Population and Health of the City at other periods of its History. Philadelphia: Lea & Blanchard.” 8vo. pp. 36. Extracted from the American Journal of Medical Sciences for April, 1841.

In 1845 he was employed to superintend the taking of the census of Boston; and he then originated and introduced, for the first time in this country, a new plan for the enumeration—that of taking the name and description of every person enumerated; and among other characteristics specifying the birthplace of each, and thus distinguishing the native from the foreign population. The elementary facts thus obtained were afterwards abstracted in a variety of statistical tables and statements, giving much new information of value which had not and could not be obtained under the old method of taking a census before in use. The result of his labors appeared in a volume entitled:—

“Report to the Committee of the City Council, appointed to obtain the Census of Boston for the year 1845, embracing Collateral Facts and Statistical Researches, illustrating the History and Condition of the People, and their Means of Progress and Prosperity. Boston: John H. Eastburn, City Printer, 1846.” 8vo. pp. 280, with Maps and Plates.

This report has been highly commended; and it served as a model for similar reports in Charleston, S. C., New Orleans, and other cities.

As Chairman of the Legislative Committee he wrote their report, recommending for the State census a modification of the plan followed in Boston, entitled:—

“Report on the Subject of the State Census of 1850, by the Special Committee of the Legislature of Massachusetts, presented April 7, 1849.” 8vo. pp. 46. House Document, No. 127.

In November, 1849, he was invited by the Census Board at Washington to visit that city, to assist in preparing the plan for the National Census of 1850; and the first, second, third, fifth, and sixth (five of the six) blank schedules used in that census, with the accompanying instructions, were designed and prepared principally by him. The act of Congress, also, relating to the census, was passed, with a few modifications, substantially as he drew it.*

* See Compendium of the Seventh Census of the United States, for 1850, p. 13. The plan for taking the census of the States of New York and Massachusetts for 1850, has been copied substantially from that he prepared for the National Census of 1850.

In 1849 he wrote the Report of the Committee to whom was referred the Memorials of the Massachusetts Medical Society, relating to a Sanitary Survey of the State, (House Document, No. 66,) and, during the same year, he was appointed by the Governor and Council, Chairman of the Commissioners under a Resolve of the Legislature, passed by the recommendation of this Committee. This appointment was entirely unsolicited and unexpected, and was not accepted without doubt and hesitation. At the request of his associates on the commission, he collected the materials for their report, and it was designed and written entirely by him. It appeared in a volume, entitled:—

“Report of a General Plan for the Promotion of Public and Personal Health, devised, prepared, and recommended by the Commissioners appointed under a Resolve of the Legislature of Massachusetts, relating to a Sanitary Survey of the State, presented April 25, 1850. Boston: Dutton & Wentworth, State Printers, 1850.” 8vo. pp. 544. Maps and Plates.*

A copy of this volume was distributed to each town clerk's office, and most of the public libraries in the State. The Ap-

* From a printed legislative report, (House Document, No. 212, for 1852,) recommending the payment of the expenses of this Commission, we make the following extracts relating to the value of this work:—

“The report of the Commissioners has been noticed in many of the leading periodical publications, and we infer that no document ever emanated from the State that has been more generally commended. The following extracts from some of the most important medical reviews in other States indicate the opinions of those who have read the work and are competent to judge of its merits:—

“The book before us, although under the uninviting title of a ‘report,’ is yet, in truth, an epitome of sanitary science. * * * We will not say the duty of the Commission has been well discharged; this would be far too feeble praise; for, although expecting much, the report far exceeds our expectations. * * * We doubt if there has appeared any work for many a year in our country that is of more real interest to the community than this, whether we regard it as replete with suggestions for the promotion of personal health, or as a great political document intended to show the mode whereby the physical and intellectual powers of a people may be fully developed. Its being the first of the kind ever published in this country, imparts to it an interest of more than ordinary notice; its being the best of the kind ever published, adds greatly to this interest and to the reputation of the author, and we feel assured that the objects aimed at must ultimately be attained when so presented.”—N. Y. Journal of Medicine, March, 1851.

“This report is the result of that enlarged policy which characterizes the action of the legislatures of some of our older States, and which we hope soon to see infused among the western legislatures upon the subject, particularly of public health. * * * It is the fullest document yet issued on this side the Atlantic on the subject of sanitary regulations; it is worthy of the noble State from which it emanated, and the Commission has cause to congratulate itself upon the manner its duties have been performed.”—Western Lancet, Cincinnati, March, 1851.

“We have thus given, at considerable length, the substance of this able and valuable report. After all that has been done by the people and governments of some countries of Europe, and after all that has been done by individuals and societies in America, this report is the first approach to legislation from any government in this country. * * * We commend this report with all its plans and details, its facts and arguments, to the careful consideration of physicians and philanthropists, of political economists and legislators, with the confident belief that the condition of man will be improved and the interests of humanity advanced, as well as public and private wealth increased, by its adoption.”—American Journal of Medical Sciences, April, 1851.

A commendatory review of the report is contained in the London “British and Foreign Medico-Chirurgical Review” for January, 1852, the leading quarterly medical review of the world.

Reviews, commending this work, appeared also in other medical journals, and in the North American Review, Christian Examiner, New Englander, and in various other periodical publications and newspapers.

pendix to this Report contains various illustrations of its most important principles, and among others three papers relating respectively to Lawrence, Attleborough, and Lynn, embracing an historical view of the population, sanitary condition, and statistics of those places, and their means of health, wealth, and prosperity. They were designed to show the manner in which such reports might be made concerning every town in the Commonwealth. Each of these papers was published in a separate pamphlet, and extensively circulated in those towns, under the following titles:—

1. "Sanitary Survey of the Town of Lawrence. By the Chairman of the Commissioners appointed under a Resolve of the Legislature of Massachusetts relating to a Sanitary Survey of the State. Reprinted from the Report of the Commissioners." 8vo. pp. 24. Maps and Plates.

2. "Sanitary Survey of the Town of Attleborough. By the Chairman of the Commissioners," &c. 8vo. pp. 32.

3. "Annual Report of the Board of Health of Lynn. By the Chairman of the Commissioners," &c. 8vo. pp. 30.

It may be proper to give the titles of two of his other works, which have been useful in the respective places for which they were designed. One is entitled:—

"The Domestic Book Keeper and Practical Economist: Suggesting how to live independently, and how to be independent while we live: Containing Directions and Forms for a new method of keeping an account of the receipts and expenditures of Individuals and Families. Designed for those who are willing to know how they live, and who desire to live better. Boston: 1843." Small 4to. pp. 36, besides blank forms.

The other is entitled:—

"The Scholar's Daily Journal, containing simple Forms for recording each day's Lessons, and for exhibiting, at one view, the Attendance, Character, and Intellectual Progress, during each Month: embracing Introductory Suggestions and Rules of Behavior for Good Scholars, designed for Public Schools, Academies, Colleges, and Home Instruction. Boston: Published by Lemuel Shattuck. 1843." Small 4to, pp. 12, besides forms for records, &c.

These comprise a part of his publications. All which have borne his name, or which purport to be written by him, have been wholly his own works, and he alone has been their author. None were written by others and assumed by himself as his own. He might specify more particularly the circumstances under which they appeared, and some of their most important contents; but this would be inconsistent with his present purpose. They must be left to speak for themselves. He might also go into further details concerning the history of his somewhat changeable and eventful life—his successes and his failures, his struggles and his achievements; and exhibit some of the incidents and causes which have been influential in making him what he has been, and in placing him in the different positions which he has occupied. Many of these incidents have been topics of interest in the home circle, and among his immediate connections and friends, and might perhaps be so to his other kindred; but if further publicity is given to them, it would be more congenial to his feelings that it should be done through some other medium than in this volume. He has no disposition to make himself too conspicuous even here. Lessons of usefulness might be derived from the history of almost every life, how humble soever it may have been; and in the proper place and at the proper time they should be imparted for the benefit and improvement of others. If any one should consider what is here presented as egotistical and offensive to good taste, let him pass these pages unread. He trusts, however, that no such one will be found among his kindred. They will probably agree with him in believing that the author of these Memorials is as well qualified as any one else to speak of his own labors, and will approve of this brief sketch which he has written concerning some passages of his own history. He might have said more, but, in justice to himself, he could scarcely have said less.

The matters here noticed came under his consideration incidentally, amid other occupations; and he endeavored to give them, as he endeavors to give all matters intrusted to him, the thought and study which they seemed to require for their full comprehension, and to ascertain their utility in practical life. And he has great satisfaction in knowing that the results of the few measures he has proposed, so far as they have been tested by experiment, have already equalled his original expectations. They relate to the health, education, elevation, progress, and history of man; and though they may not seem to the superficial observer to be of great importance, nor to have had the temporary popularity of some measures inflated into undue importance often by demagogues for political purposes, yet their permanent good effects will be apparent years hence, when others shall have been forgotten.

5. Sarah; m. in 1652, Richard Gardner, and had Richard, Deborah, James, Damaris, Hope, and Levi. He and his wife were excommunicated from the church in Salem for attending Quaker meetings; and they removed in 1666 to Nantucket, where their two youngest children were born.

Second Generation and Children.

(2.) SAMUEL SHATTUCK, s. of Widow Damaris Shattuck, (1) was b. in England about 1620. He was a felt-maker or hatter, in Salem, where he died. A stone, still standing over his grave in Salem, bears the following inscription:—"Here lyeth buried y<sup>e</sup> body of Samuel Shattuck, aged 69 years, who departed this life y<sup>e</sup> 6th day of June, 1689." He was admitted to the church in Salem in 1642, and was described as "a man of good repute;" but for reasons presently to be stated, he was excommunicated. He left a will, dated April 6, 1689, which appoints his wife HANNAH executrix, and directs that his sons Samuel and Retire should each have a double portion of his estate; and that the remainder should be divided equally between his six daughters. His estate was not settled and distributed until Nov. 1, 1701. His son Retire, and his daughters Return and Patience, died after their father and before the distribution. They left no issue, and are not mentioned in the settlement. The husbands of Hannah, Damaris, and Priscilla had also died, and they are then described as widows. Samuel, the only surviving son, received a double portion, and the four daughters received each £37. 7. 4. (Essex Records, Vol. VII., pp. 111-114.) His children, b. in Salem, were,—

1. Samuel, b. Oct. 7, 1649; m. Sarah Bucknam. (See below.)
  2. Hannah, b. Aug. 28, 1651; m. John Soames, s. of Morris Soames of Gloucester. He resided in Boston. Left a will, dated Nov. 13, 1687, proved Nov. 8, 1700. He left several children, but Benjamin was the only survivor at the final settlement of his estate.
  3. Damaris, b. Nov. 11, 1653; m. Benjamin Pope of Salem. His estate was appraised May 6, 1702, at £408. 12. 10, and divided between the widow and 4 sons, Benjamin, Samuel, Ebenezer, and Jerome.
  4. Mary, b. March 14, 1655; m. Benjamin Trask of Beverly.
  5. Priscilla, b. May 1, 1658; m. April 26, 1694, Hugh Nichols of Salem.
  6. Return, b. Aug. 16, 1662; m. Sept. 14, 1688, John Saunders.
  7. Retire, b. March 28, 1664; d. unm. A stone erected in Salem to his memory, has the epitaph:—"Here lyeth buried y<sup>e</sup> body of Retire Shattuck, aged 27 years, departed this life y<sup>e</sup> 9th day of September, 1691."
  8. Patience, b. Nov. 18, 1666; m. July 29, 1689, John Smith of Salem.
- Return and Retire are supposed to have been named to commemorate his remarkable retiring and returning from England.

Third Generation and Children.

(3.) SAMUEL SHATTUCK, only surviving son of Samuel, above mentioned, (2.) was b. in Salem, Aug. 7, 1649, and followed the occupation of his father in his native town, where he d. in 1723, æ. 74. His will, dated Dec. 22, 1722, and proved March 25, 1723, mentions John, "his only son" and executor. (Essex Records, Vol. XIII., pp. 311-313.) He was taxed in Boston several years. He m. July 24, 1676, SARAH BUCKNAM, sister of William and Josee Bucknam of Malden. Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Whittemore, Mary, wife of Benjamin Webb, and Mehitable, wife of Samuel Waite, were also his sisters. They had,—

1. Samuel, b. Sept. 7, 1678; probably d. young, or before his father.
2. John, b. Mar. 13, 1680; m. Mary Crowley. (See below.)
3. Margaret, b. ; m. Daniel Bacon of Salem.

Fourth Generation.

(4.) Capt. JOHN SHATTUCK, only surviving son of Samuel, (3) b. in Salem, March 13, 1680, was a master mariner. He m. in Salem, Nov. 11, 1708, MARY CROWLEY, but no record of any children has been found. On the 21st Feb., 1731, he sold his real estate in Salem to Samuel and Mighill Bacon, and probably removed from the town, since his name is not afterwards found. In him the name of Shattuck in this line appears to have become extinct.

Samuel Shattuck, senior, son of widow Damaris Shattuck, above mentioned, was one of those who suffered persecution for "being called a Quaker." The circumstances relating to his connection with this extraordinary persecution are detailed in Besse's "Collection of the Sufferings of the People called Quakers," Vol. II., pp. 184 to 198; in "Bishop's New England Judged;" in Fox's Journal, and elsewhere; and they are so intimately connected with the history of that period that they deserve preservation in this connection. Some allowance should perhaps be made for the partisan character of these authors; but their statements may be considered reliable and true, in the main, since they are confirmed by other coexisting official documents.

Several orders in relation to the Quakers were passed by the General Court of Massachusetts, between July 11, 1656, and Oct. 14, 1657, one of which enacted that any person who embraced their sentiments, or harbored those that did, should be liable to fine, imprisonment, or other punishment. Under these laws Lawrence Southwick and his wife Cassandra, then members of the church in Salem, were imprisoned for entertaining Christopher Holder and John Copeland, supposed to be Quakers. Lawrence was soon discharged, but his wife was detained seven weeks, and fined forty shillings for "owning a paper of exhortation," written by Holder or Copeland. Soon after this happened Holder attempted to speak on a certain occasion, at the close of public worship; but he was, says the account, "pulled backward by the hair of his head, and had a glove and handkerchief thrust into his mouth, and so was turned out, and, with his companion, carried to Boston next day, where each of them received thirty stripes with a knotted whip of three cords, the executioner measuring his ground and fetching his strokes with all his strength, which so cruelly did cut their flesh that a woman at the sight of it fell down dead." They afterwards suffered other punishment.

Samuel Shattuck, above described, as "an inhabitant of Salem of good repute," was present at the meeting when Holder attempted to speak; and he "endeavored to prevent their thrusting the handkerchief into Holder's mouth lest it should have choked him; for which attempt he also was carried to Boston and imprisoned till he had given bond to answer it at the next court, and not to come to any Quaker meeting."

In 1658, while attending a meeting at the house of Nicholas Phelps, about five miles from Salem, Samuel Shattuck, with Lawrence Southwick and his wife, Josiah their son, Samuel Gaskin, and Joshua Buffum, were apprehended by "one Butter;" and after being kept confined in a house two days, were taken before the magistrates, when the following examination took place, as reported by Bessé. "One of the prisoners asked, 'How they might know a Quaker?' Simon Bradstreet, one of the magistrates, answered, 'Thou art one of them for coming in with thy hat on.' They replied, 'It was a horrible thing to make such cruel laws, to whip, cut off ears, and bore through the tongue, for not putting off the hat.' Then one of them said, 'That the Quakers held forth blasphemies at their meetings.' To which they replied, 'They desire that they would make such a thing appear, if it were so, that they might be convinced;' and that 'they would do well to send some to their meetings, that they might hear and give account of what was done and spoken there, and not conclude of anything they knew not.' But, said Major-General Dennison, 'If ye meet together and say anything, we may conclude that ye speak blasphemy.'" The result of this examination was that they were sent to Boston. After being in close confinement three weeks they addressed a letter to the magistrates at Salem, dated "From the house of bondage in Boston, wherein we are made captives by the wills of men, although made free by the Son of God. John viii. 36. In which we quietly rest this 16th of the fifth month, 1658." This able and appropriate letter is printed in full in Bessé, Vol. II., pp. 177, 178; and in Bishop, pp. 74, 75. It resulted in the release of Shattuck and Buffum. It appears, however, from an original document in the handwriting of Shattuck, that he was in prison with Nicholas Phelps, three months afterwards. It runs thus:—

“Sirs: We whose names are underwritten are kept prisoners in Ipswich, it being y<sup>e</sup> second time of our imprisonment upon y<sup>e</sup> account of y<sup>e</sup> law titled quakers. The Gen<sup>l</sup> Court have made laws against such persons; y<sup>e</sup> laws expressing it y<sup>e</sup> they are a cursed sect of blasphemous heretics who hold diabolical doctrines. We being sufferers under this law in our bodies, estates and families; and not being conscious to ourselves of any such thing that is justly charged upon us, do only request this much according to conscience, law and equity; y<sup>e</sup> we might have a fair and legal hearing and tryal according to law and justice; and y<sup>e</sup> we might only upon true tryal beare y<sup>e</sup> weight of w<sup>t</sup> is justly charged upon us; either by the Gen<sup>l</sup> Court, or a jury of indifferent, rational men, whose charges we shall willingly beare. Desiring y<sup>e</sup> our cause & y<sup>e</sup> state of our families might be seriously and conscientie weighed by you all, to whome we acknowledge ourselves subjects in all lawful things in y<sup>e</sup> Lord.

Samuel Shattuck.
Nicholas Phelps.

“Written from the prison in Ipswich this 19th 8 mo 1658.”

What action was taken upon this reasonable petition does not appear. On the 11th of May, 1659, the petitioners were taken before the Court with Lawrence, Cassandra, and Josiah Southwick, and Joshua Buffum, before mentioned, when the following trial took place, as described by Besse, Vol. II., pp. 197, 198.*

“They asked the Governor [Endicot] ‘what it was they required of them, whether the honor of God or themselves?’ He answered, ‘They who honor those whom God sets over them honor God.’ They replied, ‘It was true, but in obedience to the law they suffered,’ and farther asked, ‘Whether it were for that fault they were committed to prison, before the law had a being, and were banished, or what was it.’ But the court answered them not. One of them desired the governor ‘That he would be pleased to declare before the people the

* It was at this time that the petition of his sister, already alluded to, was presented. The following is a copy of the petition:—

“The petition of Mary Hams.

To the honored Court now assembled at Boston your petitioner Doth Humbly crave so much favour of you that she may have liberty to goe along with her brother Samuel Shaddak to the Rev Mr. Norton. She hears her brother is sent for to the Court. If it may seem good to the honored Court to grant that when he comes into the towne he may goe along with me from my house to the Rev. Mr. Norton’s house, I am persuaded that if it please God to set it home to his soule that Mr. Norton may convince him by som arguments that he may use So I doe earnestly desire that the Lord would be pleased abundantly to be seen in the mount to give his Blessing to what labors have bin used with him already in a Church way & that the Lord would be pleased to help to sanctifie what he may meet withal, further I doe very much and earnestly desire that the Lord would be pleased to help my Dear Brother to see wherein he hath swerved away from y<sup>e</sup> Rule of the word & I doe humbly beseech the honorable assembly now assembled that they will pity them that are so farre left at present, methinks I am not quite out of hope so long as there is life.

real and true causes of the proceedings against them.' He answered, 'It was for contemning authority in not coming to the ordinances of God.' He also added, that 'They had rebelled against the authority of the country in not departing according to their order.' They answered, 'They had no place to go to, but had their wives, children, families and estates to look after; nor had they done anything worthy of death, banishment, or bonds, or any of the things for which they had suffered, though they had taken from them above one hundred pounds for meeting together.' Major General Dennison replied, that 'They stood against the authority of the country in not submitting to their laws: that he should not go about to speak much concerning the error of their judgment;' but, added he, 'You and we are not able well to live together, and at present the power is in our hands, and therefore the hardest must fend off.' After this they were put forth awhile, and being called in again, the sentence of banishment was pronounced against them, and but a fortnight's time allowed for them to depart, on pain of death, nor would they grant them any longer time, though desired. Samuel Shattuck, Nicholas Phelps, and Josiah Southwick, were obliged to take an opportunity that presented four days after, to pass to England by Barbadoes. The aged couple, Lawrence and Cassandra, went to Shelter Island, where shortly after they died within three days of each other. Joshua Buffum departed to Rhode Island." The power of attorney given by Shattuck to his wife to transact his business during his absence, is dated May 19, 1659, and is recorded in the Essex Registry of Deeds.

After Shattuck's arrival in England he immediately laid the subject of their sufferings before King Charles II.; and by the assistance of Edward Burroughs he obtained, on the 19th September, 1661, a "mandamus," commanding the magistrates and ministers in New England "to forbear to proceed any farther" against the people called Quakers. Shattuck was appointed the King's Deputy to carry this mandamus to New England. An agreement was made with Ralph Goldsmith, a master of a good ship, for £300, for his conveyance. "He immediately prepared for the voyage," says Besse, "and in about six weeks arrived in Boston harbor, on a first day of the week. The townsmen seeing a ship with English colors, soon came on board, and asked for the captain. Goldsmith told them he was the commander. They asked him whether he had any letters. He answered yes; but withal told them he would not deliver them that day. So they returned on shore again, and reported that there were many Quakers come, and that Samuel Shattuck (who they knew had been banished on pain of death,) was among them. But they knew nothing of his errand or authority. Thus all was kept close, and none of the ship's company suffered to go on shore that day. Next morning Ralph Goldsmith, the commander, with Samuel Shattuck, the King's Deputy, went on shore, and sending the boat back to the ship, they went directly through the town to the governor's house, and knocked at the door. He sending a man to know their business, they sent him word that their message was from the King of England, and that they would deliver it to none but himself. Then they were admitted to go in, and the governor came to them, and commanded Samuel Shattuck's hat to be taken off; and having received the deputation and the mandamus he laid off his own hat, and ordering Shattuck's hat to be given him again, perused the papers, and then went out to the deputy governor's, bidding the King's Deputy, and the master of the ship to follow him.

Being come to the Deputy Governor, and having consulted him, he returned to the aforesaid two persons, and said, 'we shall obey the King's command.' After this the master of the ship gave liberty to his passengers to come on shore, which they did, and had a religious meeting with their friends of the town, when they returned praises to God for his mercy manifested in this wonderful deliverance."

In consequence of these events an order was passed by the General Court on the 27th Nov., 1661, that "the execution of the laws in force against Quakers as such, so far as they respect corporeal punishment or death, be suspended until the court take further order." And the jailers were directed "to release and discharge the Quakers who are at present in your custody. See that you don't neglect this." The magistrates were evidently alarmed. They sent Col. Temple to England to inform the King that his order had been obeyed, and that the Quakers were at liberty. Very soon after, Rev. John Norton and Simon Bradstreet visited England in relation to the same matter.

Thus was stayed, principally through the instrumentality of Samuel Shattuck, one of the most extraordinary persecutions this country ever witnessed. Attempts were afterwards made to renew this persecution, but it was in a comparatively mild form, and it soon ceased entirely. Mr. Shattuck, notwithstanding the prominent part he had acted in these events, was thenceforward permitted to live in Salem in peace, except in a few instances. In 1663, he was imprisoned a few days for charging the country with shedding innocent blood. In 1663, he was slightly fined for absence from public worship; and in 1669, he was confined for not paying one of these fines. These are all the public notices of him which we have found upon record in connection with these events. He seems to have possessed that independence of opinion, and that unwillingness to submit to oppression, which has ever been characteristic of the Shattuck family.

II. William Shattuck of Boston.

WILLIAM SHATTUCK, a shoemaker, was an inhabitant of Boston, from about 1650 to 1658. Like his namesake of Salem he appears to have suffered persecution for his Quakerism. Besse, in his History, (Vol. II., p. 184,) says, because he was "found on the first day of the week at home in the time of public worship, he was sent to the house of correction, and there cruelly whipped, and thus kept at hard labor, the deputy governor appropriating the proceeds of his labors to himself, while his wife and children were in want. At length he had three days' time assigned him to depart that jurisdiction, which he, in regard to his wife and children, was necessitated to accept. Bellingham the deputy governor having terrified the woman with threats of keeping him still in prison, because he was poor and not able to pay the fine of 5 shillings for his weekly absence from their places of public worship." Bishop says, Bellingham "tried to produce a separation between Shattuck and his wife, under a promise that he should be banished and heard of no more, and that she and her children should be provided for;" but this proposition she spurned and detested.

He was banished in 1658, and first went to Rhode Island; and afterwards to New Jersey, and resided in Shrewsbury, Monmouth County. He was elected a member of the Assembly from that town in 1675, but declining to swear or take the oath of office required, he did not take his seat. The Collections of the New Jersey Historical Society (Vol. I. p. 77,) erroneously print his name William Shatluck instead of Shattuck.

We cannot learn that William Shattuck had any male issue. The name probably became extinct in his family at his death. He had two daughters born in Boston. 1. Hannah, b. July 8, 1654; and 2. Exercise, b. Nov. 12, 1656; of whom Hannah married Restore Lippincott. The following is a copy of their marriage certificate, which is the first entered in the Records of the Friends in Shrewsbury, N. J. It has been kindly furnished by Mr. James S. Lippincott of Philadelphia.

“Att a meeting of the People of God & Lord gathered together for that end and purpose before whom Wm Shattock father to Hannah Shattock give his daughter Hannah to wife unto Restore Lippencott son of Richard and Abigail Lippincott in these words as followeth: I desire you all to take notice that I do give my daughter Hannah to Restore Lippencott to be his wife. The words of Restore Lippencott as followeth: I desire you all to take notice that accordingly I freely receive her to be my wife. The words of Hannah Shaddock as followeth: I desire you all to take notice that I do take Restore Lippencott to be my Husband in the fear of the Lord. And they were published 2 or 3 times and they had Friends Consent to take each other. And we whose names are under written are witnesses of this thing, &c.

Restore Lippincott was the s. of Richard and Abigail Lippincott who resided several years in Boston, about the same time with Mr. Shattuck. He was b. in Plymouth, Old England, July 3, 16—[48 to 53, record obscure,] removed with his parents to Shrewsbury, N. J., about 1668, and d. near Mount Holly, Burlington Co., N. J., July 22, 1741. He was a member of the Council of N. J. in 1703, and of the Assembly in 1704. A useful and active member of society. He had 9 children:—

1. Samuel, b. June 12, —; 2. Abigail, b. Feb. 16, 16—; 3. Hannah, b. Oct. 15, 167—; 4. Hope, b. Sept. 15, 1681; 5. Rebecca, b. Oct. 24, 1684; 6. James, b. June 11, 1687; 7. Betty, b. March 15, 1690; 8. Jacob, b. Aug. 15, 1692; 9. Rachel, b. Jan. 8, 1695. The descendants of these children at their father's death were over 200. Many of their descendants are now residing in Philadelphia, in the possession of wealth.

III. Blood Memorials.*

(1.) JAMES BLOOD, who came to Concord about 1638, and d. there intestate, Dec. 17, 1683, is supposed to have been the ancestor of the families in New England that have borne his name. It is said by tradition that he was from Cheshire, England, though two of his sons, in 1649, then in Concord, sold an estate in Puddington, Northamptonshire, which might have been their place of nativity. He was a contemporary, and is said (with how much truth we are unable to say,) to have been a brother or near relative of Col. Thomas Blood, who d. Aug. 24, 1680, distinguished in history, during the reign of Charles II., as one of the most remarkable characters of his age. (See note in Scott's novel—Peverill of the Peak, near the end. See also, Pictorial History of England, Vol. III., p. 708.) The family possessed large wealth. Ellen, the wife of James Blood, d. in Concord, Aug. 1, 1674. The following are supposed to have been their children:—

1. James, was a deacon in the church in Concord, where he d. Nov. 26, 1692. He m. Oct. 26, 1657, Hannah Purchis, dau. of Oliver Purchis of Lynn. She d. Jan. 7, 1677. Sarah, their only surviving child, m. Capt. William Wilson of Concord, and had several children.
2. Richard of Groton, (noticed below.)
3. John, found dead in Concord, with gun in hand, Oct. 30, 1692, unmarried.
4. Robert, d. in Concord, Oct. 27, 1701. He, in company with his brother John, owned "Blood's Farms," so called, consisting of about 2000 acres, now comprised within the town of Carlisle. He m. April 8, 1653, Elizabeth Willard, dau. of Major Simon Willard. She d. Aug. 29, 1692. They had:—1. Mary, b. March 4, 1655, m. John Buttrick, settled in Stow, and had a large family; 2. Elizabeth, b. June 14, 1656, m. Samuel Buttrick, a brother of John, and was the ancestor of the Concord families of that name; 3. Sarah, b. Aug. 1, 1658, m. Daniel Colburn of Dunstable; 4. Robert, b. Feb. 10, 1660, m. Dorcas Wheeler, and d. in South Carolina before his father; 5. Simon, b. Feb. 6, 1662, d. unmarried, April 4, 1692; 6. Josiah, b. April 6, 1664, m. 1. Mary Barrett, 2. Mary Thomas, and had 10 children, b. in Concord; 7. John, b. Oct. 29, 1666, d. unm.; 8. Ellen, b. April 14, 1669, d. unm.; 9. Samuel, b. Oct. 16, 1671, m. Hannah Davis, and was drowned in Merrimack river, leaving a family; 10. James, b. Nov. 3, 1673, m. Abigail Wheeler, whose father was killed at Lancaster; 11. Ebenezer, b. July 4, 1676, d. young; 12. Jonathan, b. 1679, d. Jan. 5, 1758, leaving a family.
5. Mary, b. in Concord, July 12, 1640, m. in 1660, Lt. Simon Davis, who d. June 14, 1713, æ. 77. They had Simon, Mary, Sarah, James, Ellen, Ebenezer, and Hannah, the ancestry of a numerous posterity in New England and elsewhere.

IV. Chamberlain Memorials.

(1.) The name of Chamberlain was borne by several of the early inhabitants of Massachusetts. THOMAS, Edmond, and Samuel, first of Charlestown and afterwards of Woburn, were among the petitioners and first settlers of Chelmsford. THOMAS, probably the ancestor of all of the name who are mentioned in this volume, was one of those persons who purchased 1500 acres of land lying on both sides of Concord River; granted to Thomas Dudley. He settled in Chelmsford, but the precise date of his death is unknown. His first wife, Mary —, d. about 1670. He m. 2, April 19, 1674, in his old age, Mary Parker, who d. Feb. 7, 1692. By his first wife he had, b. in Woburn, Thomas, (noticed below,) Samuel, b. Oct. 7, 1645, Mary, b. June 11, 1649, and perhaps other children.

Second Generation and Children.

(2.) THOMAS CHAMBERLAIN, s. of Thomas, (1) above mentioned, settled in Chelmsford, where he d. May 28, 1727. He m. Aug. 10, 1666, SARAH PROCTOR, daughter of Robert Proctor, and had the following, and perhaps other children. 1. Thomas, b. May 30, 1667, (noticed below;) 2. Sarah, b. Jan. 11, 1679; 3. Jane, b. Jan. 19, 1682; 4. Elizabeth, b. July 25, 1685.

Third Generation and Children.

(3.) THOMAS CHAMBERLAIN, s. of Thomas, (2) b. May 30, 1667, was a carpenter and miller, first settled in Chelmsford, but removed to Groton, and lived about a quarter of a mile northerly of Wattle's pond, on the left hand side of the road to Hollis, where he d. about 1709. His widow sold her portion of the estate, and the remainder was divided in 1713 between eleven children, each receiving £2. 17. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ , besides the widow's thirds. (Probate Records.) He m. 1, ELIZABETH——. She d. June 13, 1699. He m. 2, in Concord, Aug. 16, 1699, ABIGAIL NUTTING of Groton. He had 7 children by each wife:—

1. John, b. March 29, 1692, (see below;); 2. Joseph, b. Oct. 11, 1693; 3 and 4, Moses and Aaron, twins, b. July 3, 1695; 5. Gershom, b. Oct. 18, 1697, d. March 20, 1707; 6. Elizabeth, d. June 13, 1699; 7. Sarah, b. March 23, 1699, d. Oct. 14, 1699; 8. Elizabeth, b. May 26, 1700, m. Jonathan Shattuck, (p. 93;) 9. Abigail, b. June 21, 1702, m. April 13, 1723, Thomas Woods; 10. Thomas, b. Feb. 3, 1704, father to Azubah and Abia Chamberlain, (pp. 118, 167;); 11. Mary, m. April 9, 1732, John Scott; 12. Jane, b. Feb. 2, 1706; 13. Dorothy, m. Nathaniel Lawrence, Feb., 1729, (p. 71;); 14. Sarah, b. Aug. 4, 1709, m. James Shattuck, (p. 100.)

Fourth Generation and Children.

(4.) JOHN CHAMBERLAIN, (known as "Paugus John,") s. of Thomas, was b. March 22, 1692, and settled in Groton, where he owned a mill. The location of this mill is not precisely known, but it is supposed by some to have been near School House No. 9, on the small stream running from Martin's Pond. Butler says, a deep hole in this brook still bears the name of "Paugus Hole," into which it is supposed the body of young Paugus was thrown. He is supposed to have d. about 1758. Jeremiah Lawrence, administrator on his estate, presented his account in 1759. He m. Oct. 13, 1713, ABIGAIL WOODS, by whom he had 6 children. 1. Elizabeth, b. Oct. 27, 1714, m. March 23, 1736, Jeremiah Lawrence, (p. 71); 2. Hannah, b. Jan. 18, 1716; 3. John, b. March 24, 1720, (m. Dec. 3, 1746, Rachel Lawrence, who d. Oct. 6, 1756, dau. of Zachariah L., (p. 71,) and had Rachel, b. July 10, 1747, d. Oct. 13, 1756; Abigail, b. Sept. 8, 1748, m. June 7, 1770, Edmund Shattuck, (p. 158); John, b. Feb. 27, 1752; Edith, b. Oct. 9, 1754; 4. Sarah, b. April 27, 1727; 5. Abigail, b. Jan. 8, 1732; 6. Thomas, b. Sept. 2, 1735.

John Chamberlain, senior, father of these children, was one of Capt. Lovell's company, whose fight with the Indians in 1725, near Pequawket, now Fryeburg, Me., forms one of the most interesting events in the history of New England. His encounter with Paugus, the chief who led the Indian forces on that occasion, places his name among the most heroic men of his age, and has distinguished him from the others of his name as "Paugus John Chamberlain." The story of the fight has often been told, as handed down in tradition and written history. It was drawn up, amplified with a little fiction, perhaps, but substantially correct, and was published in the Philadelphia Album for 1828. From that work the subjoined extract is taken. In the general engagement of the contending parties, Chamberlain's gun had become foul, and he went to the edge of the pond to wash it out. While there he discovered Paugus, whom he personally knew, engaged in the same act:—

"They slowly and with equal movements cleansed their guns, and took their stations on the outer border of the beach. 'Now Paugus,' said Chamberlain, 'I'll have you;' and with the quickness and steadiness of an old hunter sprung to loading his rifle. 'Na—na—me have you,' replied Paugus, and he handled his gun with a dexterity, that made the bold heart of Chamberlain beat quick, and he almost raised his eye to take his last look upon the sun. They rammed their cartridges, and each at the same instant cast his ramrod upon the sand. 'I'll have you, Paugus,' shouted Chamberlain, as in his desperation he almost resolved to rush upon the savage, with the breech of his rifle, lest he should receive his bullets before he could load. The woods across the pond echoed back the shout. Paugus trembled as he applied his powder-horn to the priming; Chamberlain heard the grains of his powder rattle lightly upon the leaves beneath his feet. Chamberlain struck his gun breech violently upon the ground—the rifle primed herself; he aimed, and his bullets whistled through the heart of Paugus. He fell, and as he went down, the bullet from the mouth of his ascending rifle touched the hair upon the crown of Chamberlain, and passed off without avenging the death of its dreadful master."

The children and successors of Paugus, long after this event, indulged a determination to avenge his death upon Chamberlain; and it is said that frequent unsuccessful attempts were made to carry their designs into execution. A current opinion prevailed among the Indians, that whoever should kill Chamberlain would be considered the greatest chief of the nation. On more than one occasion, if tradition be true, was Chamberlain obliged, for the preservation of his own life, to take the life of another. The following account of one of these instances was published in the Atlantic Souvenir for 1829. Though somewhat embellished, its truth is substantially confirmed by tradition:—

"In the year——, towards the close of one of those fair days in autumn, which make up the 'Indian summer,' a number of the villagers of P—— had gathered into their one-story tavern, to talk over their little politics, as they were wont, when they were surprised and startled by the entrance of a young Indian among them. An Indian, at that time, had got to be a rarity in P——. He was tall, over six feet, and finely formed, after the fashion of the forest. He had a belt of wampum around his waist, and from it hung his tomahawk. A long gun was in his hand, and he stood in moccasins, with the grace and dignity of the son of a chief. He placed his gun behind the door, and silently took his seat by himself. A little before sunset the farmers left the inn and returned to their homes. One old hunter remained with the landlord and the young savage. The hunter eyed the Indian with keen attention,—his suspicions were awakened at the sight of this warrior, armed, so remote from the residence of the nearest tribe, and in a time of peace. He was acquainted with the Indians in the old wars, and his suspicions were heightened and confirmed, when he heard the young chief ask the landlord, in a low and indifferent tone, if 'one Chamberlain dwelt in the village.' The landlord pointed out to him the mill, where the old man labored, and the cottage where he dwelt. The Indian took his gun and went out.

"Some of the blood of old Paugus," said the hunter, "and, I'll venture my life, come to avenge the death of that chief upon Chamberlain. I'll give the old man warning." He hastily stepped out, and following a winding path, that led down to the saw-mill, where the old man was still at his toils, he reached the mill, and told Chamberlain, that young Paugus, from Canada, had come with his rifle and tomahawk to avenge upon him the death of that chief. Chamberlain's cheek turned ashy pale, and he sternly replied, "tell young Paugus I have the gun that slew his father, and he had far better return to his forest than molest me in my old age;" as he spoke, he pointed to the long gun as it hung upon prongs of the moose horn, driven into the saw-mill plate, and near it was suspended the bullet-pouch and powder-horn of Pequawket. The hunter had given his warning and retired. The sun was setting to the south of Mooschillock. Chamberlain took down his gun,—tried his flint,—charged it,—took the pouch and horn and flung them upon his side,—hung up near the saw-gate the old garment he had worn at work through the day,—hoisted the gate of the mill and set it rapidly agoing, looked keenly around him, in every direction, and retired to an eminence a few rods distant, crowned with a clump of thick bushes, and crouched down to await the approach of his mysterious enemy. He was not, however, mysterious to Chamberlain. The old man remembered every trait in the Indian character, and calculated with great accuracy as to the time and manner of Paugus's advance. Just as it was growing too dusky to distinguish a human form, except towards the west, the old man descried him creeping cautiously from a bunch of bushes, eight or ten rods above the mill, by the torrent, with his cocked rifle before him, and his hand upon the lock. The young savage heard the noise of the saw-frame, and could discern it in rapid motion, and shrunk back into the thicket. He came out again, a little distance from where he went in, and, with the wary motions of the ambush, reconnoitered the mill. Chamberlain marked him all the while, as the catamount eyes the fox. Young Paugus came out of the bushes the third time, and in a new quarter, and was stealthily advancing, when something seemed to catch his eye in the form of his father's slayer—he stopped short—brought his rifle to his eye, and, with quick aim, fired. The report rung sharp and low upon the still air, as if the gun itself were muffled, or afraid to speak above its breath. Young Paugus crept out upon a mill log, that extended over the rapid, and stretched himself up to his full height, as if to ascertain, without advancing, the success of his shot. The old man could spare him no longer. He saw the well-remembered form of the old Pequawket chief, as the young savage stood against the sky of the west, which was still red with the rays of the sunken sun. He levelled the fatal gun—it blazed—young Paugus leaped into the air six feet, as the ball whistled through his heart—and his lifeless body fell far down into the rapid, that foamed below him, while his vengeful spirit fled and mingled with that sterner one, which parted long before at Lovewell's pond, in 'The land where their fathers had gone.'

Chamberlain returned slowly and gloomily to his cottage.

"The next morning a bullet hole through the centre of the old garment he had hung at the saw-frame, admonished him, that the aim, as well as the vengeance of old Paugus, had descended to his sons; and as he mused upon those he had slain, and reflected, that although he was old, he still might have again to lift his gun against the blood of Paugus, or himself fall by their avenging hand, he wished bitterly, that some other bullet than his own had slain that renowned chief, and that they had never met to quench their battle thirst, and scour out their foul guns, upon the shore of Lovewell's pond."

v. Parker Memorials.

(1.) The name of Parker has ever been very common in New England, and has been borne by more families than any other in Groton and its vicinity. James and Joseph, who first settled in Woburn, and were among the original grantees of Billerica, Chelmsford, Dunstable, and Groton, were ancestors of the most numerous families, though some were descended from Jacob, Abraham, and perhaps John, also early inhabitants of Woburn and Chelmsford.

(2.) Capt. JAMES PARKER owned a fifty acre right in Groton, and resided there from its first settlement until his death in 1701. He was a distinguished and extraordinary man, and a leader in the municipal, military, ecclesiastical, and other affairs of the town. A copy of his will and a notice of his life, which we furnished Mr. Butler, are published in his History of Groton, (pp. 281, 421.) He m. 1, in Woburn, May 23, 1643, Elizabeth Long. He m. 2, Eunice ———. He had ten children by his first, and one by his second wife, the last b. when the father was over 80 years of age! 1. Elizabeth, b. April 12, 1645, m. William Gary of Roxbury; 2. Hannah, b. Jan. 5, 1647, m. Nathaniel Blood, (p. 369;) 3. John, b. Feb. 28, 1649; 4. Joseph; 5. James, m. Mary Parker, dau. of Abraham P. of Chelmsford. He was one of 20 persons killed by the Indians in Groton, July 27, 1694. His family were carried into captivity, one of whom—Phineas, afterwards escaped and resided in Groton. 6. Josiah, m. Elizabeth Saxon and lived in Cambridge; 7. Samuel, m. Abigail Lakin, (p. 95.) He was father of Samuel, grandfather of Lemuel, and great-grandfather of Lucinda, (p. 293;) 8. Joshua, b. March 13, 1658, m. Abigail (Shattuck) Morse, (p. 77;) 9. Zachariah, b. Jan. 14, 1659; 10. Eleazer, b. Nov. 9, 1660; 11. Eunice, b. Dec. 12, 1697.

(3.) Capt. JOSEPH PARKER was the ancestor of the most numerous branches of the Parker families in Groton and its vicinity. He is supposed to have been a brother of James above mentioned. He owned a large estate in Groton, but he was considered an inhabitant of Dunstable, probably in that section of the town, which was originally a part of Chelmsford, and subsequently included within the bounds of Pepperell. The official seal of Groton, or "town's brand marke" was adopted by the State on his petition. (Massachusetts Records, Vol. IX., Part II., p. 301.) In 1675 he and his son were attacked by the Indians. (N. H. Hist. Col., Vol. III., p. 91.) He was constable of Dunstable from 1675 to 1682. In the latter year the town voted "Yt Joseph Parker have 20 shillings allowed him for his seven years' service as constable." He was chosen one of the selectmen and a member of the "committee for managing town affairs." In 1681 he bought of the town of Groton 300 acres of the common land for £15, a part of which was in the vicinity of Babatasset Falls. He died intestate in 1690, leaving a large property. About 700 acres of his land, lying in Chelmsford and Groton, was valued in 1698 at £178 sterling. (Probate Records.) Six of his children by MARGARET, his wife, are entered upon the Chelmsford Records:—

 1. Joseph, b. March 30, 1653, (noticed below); 2. Anna, b. Feb. 2, 1655, d. young;
 3. Mary, b. Oct. 28, 1657; 4. John, b. Nov. 4, 1660, d. Oct. 8, 1661; 5. Anna, b.
 Nov. 16, 1663; 6. Sarah, b. Nov. 16, 1666, d. Sept. 15, 1704.

Second Generation and Children.

(4.) JOSEPH PARKER, probably the only surviving s. of Joseph, b. March 30, 1653, (stated above.) was first an inhabitant of Dunstable, where he succeeded his father as constable in 1683, but was subsequently considered as of Groton, where he d. about 1725, leaving a large estate. He m. 1, ELIZABETH ———. He m. 2, Nov. 19, 1684, HANNAH BLOOD. The names of 3 of his children by his first, and 4 by his second wife (who survived him and administered on his estate,) have been ascertained:—1. Elizabeth, b. Aug. 31, 1679; 2. Nathaniel, (5); 3. Isaac, (6); 4. Simon, b. Aug. 27, 1687; 5. Joseph, b. March 1, 1689, (7); 6. Benjamin, b. Dec. 3, 1691, (8); 7. John, b. Aug. 26, 1695, (9.)

Third Generation and Children.

(5.) NATHANIEL PARKER, s. of Joseph, (4) d. in Groton, July 6, 1716. He owned a large real estate in the vicinity of Babatasset Falls, appraised at £305, which was divided among the heirs in 1731. His brother Benjamin was administrator and guardian to his children, (Probate Records.) His widow LYDIA ———, m. 2, Feb. 10, 1718, Capt. Josiah Sawtell of Lancaster. She had by Mr. Parker, 1. Sarah, b. April 12, 1705, m. Jeremiah Shattuck, (p. 100); 2. Nathaniel, b. May 9, 1707, m. Dec. 6, 1733, Joanna Stevens; 3. William, b. May 28, 1709, d. June 18, 1712; 4. Lydia, b. Oct. 30, 1711, m. Oct. 27, 1729, John Lakin, (Butler, p. 411); 5. Deliverance, b. July 28, 1714, m. Feb. 28, 1734, William Blanchard of Dunstable; 6. William, b. Nov. 14, 1716. Supposed to have d. in Shrewsbury.

(6.) ISAAC PARKER, s. of Joseph, (4) lived in Groton, and had by RUTH ———, 1. Isaac, b. March 7, 1709, m. Mary ———, and had a large family, (Butler, p. 423); 2. William, b. Aug. 19, 1710, m. March 30, 1736, Susanna Kemp, grandfather of Abbott Lawrence; 3. Thomas, b. Sept. 24, 1712; 4. Esther, b. Sept. 24, 1714, m. Jan. 7, 1739, Shebual Hobart; 5. Ruth, b. July 2, 1716; 6. Nathaniel, b. Feb. 25, 1718, m. May 25, 1741, Eleanor Walker, (see page 154); 7. David, b. Feb. 20, 1720; 8. Anna, b. Nov. 9, 1721; 9. Abraham, b. Sept. 24, 1726, m. Lois Blood, (p. 370.)

(7.) JOSEPH PARKER, s. of Joseph, b. March 1, 1689, m. Jan. 24, 1716, ABIGAIL SAWTELL, lived in Groton, where he d. in 1753. His widow Abigail was appointed administrator, Jan. 3, 1754. His estate was divided in 1756, between 4 sons and 6 daughters:—1. Mary, b. Oct. 12, 1716, m. Jan. 4, 1733, William Longly; 2. Josiah, b. Jan. 3, 1717; 3. Obadiah, b. Sept. 11, 1719; 4. Joseph, b. April 16, 1721, d. young; 5. Abigail, b. Feb. 27, 1723, m. John Blood, (p. 378); 6. Hannah, b. Oct. 14, 1724, m. Josiah Holden; 7. Timothy, b. June 5, 1726; 8. Nehemiah, b. Dec. 2, 1727; 9. Joshua, b. Jan. 25, 1730; 10. Ephraim, b. March 25, 1732, m. Azubah Farnsworth; 11. Sarah, b. June 15, 1734; 12. Tryphena, b. April 15, 1736, m. Isaac Woods; 13. Sybil, b. March 5, 1737, m. Nathaniel Lakin; 14. Zachariah, b. and d. 1740.

(8.) BENJAMIN PARKER, s. of Joseph, b. Dec. 3, 1691, (5) was a carpenter in Groton. He d. Oct. 29, 1769, leaving a will. He m. Oct. 23, 1718, MARY SAWTELL, who d. Jan. 18, 1766. Had, 1. Benjamin, b. Aug. 19, 1719; 2. Nathaniel, b. July 17, 1721, m. Dec. 28, 1748, Eunice Lakin, (father of Jacob Lakin Parker, whose only child, Sarah, m. William Shattuck, p. 319;) 3. Amasa, b. Nov. 12, 1722; 4. Mary, b. May 7, 1728, d. 1736; 5. Sarah, b. Jan. 27, 1732, m. Dec. 19, 1750, Eleazer Green, Jr.; 6. Mary, b. Jan. 30, 1737, m. Feb. 10, 1768, Dr. Thomas Marshall of Chelmsford; 7. Anna, b. July 12, 1748, m. Dec. 15, 1763, Asa Worcester.

(9.) JOHN PARKER, s. of Joseph, b. Aug. 26, 1695, lived in Groton. He m. Nov. 29, 1715, MARY BRADSTREET, probably the widow of Rev. Dudley Bradstreet, and had, 1. Gideon, b. May 11, 1719; 2. Mary, b. April 7, 1722; 3. Abel, b. Jan. 17, 1724, m. Esther Shattuck, (p. 117;) 4. Sarah, b. April 14, 1726; 5. John, b. Oct. 13, 1728.

(10.) JACOB PARKER appears from the Chelmsford Records to have had, b. in that town, by his wife SARAH ———, 1. Sarah, b. Jan. 14, 1653; 2. Thomas, b. July 28, 1756, m. Oct. 21, 1678, Mary Fletcher, and had a large family; 3. Tabitha, b. Feb. 28, 1658; 4. Rebecca, b. May 29, 1661; 5. Rachel, b. May 9, 1665; 6. Mary, b. Sept. 8, 1667. He probably had other children.

(11.) ABRAHAM PARKER was made a freeman in 1645, then of Woburn. He afterwards removed to Chelmsford, where he d. Aug. 12, 1685. His wife ROSE ———, d. Nov. 13, 1691. He had, 1. Anna, b. 1645; 2. John, b. 1647, m. Mary ———, and had a large family; 3. Abraham, m. July 15, 1682, Martha Severance, and had 5 children; 4. Moses, (noticed below;) 5. Mary, b. Nov. 15, 1655, m. James Parker, (p. 375;) 6. Isaac, b. Sept. 13, 1660, m. Esther Fletcher; 7. Elizabeth, b. April 10, 1663; 8. Lydia, m. John Kidder; 9. Jacob, b. March 24, 1669.

(12.) Moses Parker (above mentioned,) m. Abigail Hildreth, dau. of Richard, and had, 1. Moses, (killed by lightning;) 2. Abigail, b. May 8, 1685; 3. Elizabeth, b. Dec. 26, 1691; 4. Aaron, b. April 9, 1689; 5. Joseph, b. March 25, 1694; 6. Benjamin, b. April 14, 1696; 7. Mary, b. Sept. 6, 1698.

(13.) AARON PARKER, b. April 9, 1689, was father of Samuel and grandfather of Abel Parker, who m. Edith Jewett, (p. 115.) Since that account, furnished by one of the family, was printed, we have perused the valuable Memoir of Judge Parker, by Jacob B. Moore, published in the New Hampshire Historical Collections, (Vol. III., p. 258,) and find there much valuable additional information.

VI. Names of Kindred and Relationship.

The following article is a new version of one which was published by the author in the New England Genealogical Register, (Vol. I., p. 355.) It is now altered, rewritten, and illustrated by references to relationships actually found in this volume, instead of by the diagram and illustrations inserted in the original article. If the information it contains shall be the means of defining more accurately, and of introducing a more correct use of the names of the different degrees of consanguinity and relationship, it will not be without its utility, and will be worthy of forming an appropriate part of this Appendix.

1. Husband and Wife.

A man who marries a woman is the husband of that woman, and she is the wife of that man. If it be her first marriage he is her first husband; if it be her second marriage he is her second husband. If it be his first marriage she is his first wife; if it be his third marriage she is his third wife; and so on for the fourth or fifth marriages. The history of families shows that the second wife has a first husband more often than the second husband has a first wife. When either party dies the other is left in a state of widowhood; and if a male, the person is called a widower; and if a female, a widow. When a husband and wife are separated by a process of law, and the marriage contract is legally annulled, the separation is called a divorce. When a husband or a wife leaves the other voluntarily, it is called a desertion, and it may or may not be alleged as a cause of divorce.

By reference to page 185 it will be perceived that Daniel Shattuck became the first husband to his first two wives, and the second husband to his third wife; that he was twice left a widower, and that he left his third wife a widow, in her second state of widowhood, until she became the second wife of her third husband. She is now in her third state of widowhood.

2. Father and Mother.

When a child results from the marriage union of a husband and wife, such husband is the lawful father, and such wife is the lawful mother of such child. The term parent is synonymous with father and mother; and in a familiar sense, papa and pa are sometimes used for father, and mamma and ma for mother. We, however, dislike these terms, and much prefer father and mother. Fifty or more years ago sir was sometimes used for father. The father and mother, not married, who have a child, are the natural-parents or the natural-father and the natural-mother of such child. One who is reported or supposed to be the father is called the putative-father. A man who adopts the children of another as his own, and makes them heirs with his other children, if he has any, is the adoptive-father, and a woman who does the same thing, is the adoptive-mother of such children. A person who takes a child to bring up, merely, should not be considered the adoptive-father or mother of such child. Foster-father is a term which describes one who takes the place of a father in providing for and educating a child which is not adopted as his own; and foster-mother is one who acts as mother in nursing and educating a child which is not her own or adopted as such. From these definitions the meaning of foster-son and foster-daughter, foster-brother and foster-sister, may be ascertained. One who is appointed to take charge of the estate and education of an orphan who is a minor, or of any person who is not of sufficient discretion to manage his own concerns, is called a guardian; and the person committed to the care of such guardian is called the ward.

A father is father-in-law to the person whom his child marries; and the mother is mother-in-law to the same person. A man who marries a woman having children by another man is step-father to such children, and a woman who marries a man having children by another woman is step-mother to such children. Sometimes the terms father-in-law and step-father are used as synonymous, but this is incorrect. It is also erroneous to use step-father as the father of an orphan. It may or may not be so. A step-father whose step-child marries a person is step-father-in-law to such person, and a woman under similar circumstances is step-mother-in-law.

3. Grandfather and Grandmother.

The father of one's father is his grand-father, and the mother of one's father is his grand-mother. The father and mother of one's mother are also his grand-father and grandmother. The father of one's grandfather is called his great-grand-father, and the mother of one's grandfather his great-grand-mother. In more remote degrees, the word great is added to each preceding generation, as great-great-grand-father. The ancestor of the father is called the paternal-ancestor, and that of the mother the maternal-ancestor. Instead of great-grandfather or great-grandmother the term paternal or maternal ancestor of the second degree, third degree, or more remote degrees, may be used. There may be also a step-grand-father, and a step-grand-mother.

4. Son and Daughter.

The male child of a father or mother is called the son, and the female child is called the daughter, of such father or mother. A son or daughter, born after the death of the father, is called a posthumous-son, or a posthumous-daughter. If single a posthumous child, and if twins posthumous children. Sons or daughters, born of parents not married, are called natural-sons, or natural-daughters, illegitimate sons, or illegitimate daughters, or bastards. The sons or daughters who are taken by persons not their parents, as their own children, are adopted-sons, or adopted-daughters. The husband of a daughter is her father's or mother's son-in-law; and the wife of a son is his father's or mother's daughter-in-law. A son or daughter of one and the same parent (the other being dead) who marries another man or woman, is a step-son or step-daughter to such man or woman. They are not sons or daughters-in-law; they are not always, though they sometimes may be, orphans. A man who marries a step-child is the step-son-in-law of such child's father or mother; and the woman who marries a step child is the step-daughter-in-law to such child's step father or mother. The children of sons or daughters are grand-sons, or grand-daughters, or grand-children; and the children of grand-children are great-grand-sons, or great-grand-daughters, or great-grand-children; and in more remote generations the degree of kindred is expressed by the word great repeated for each generation, or by the number prefixed to the degrees or generations of removal from the common ancestor.

5. Brother and Sister.

The male children of one parent, or of the same parents, are brothers, and the female children of like parents are sisters. Male children, having the same father but a different mother, or the same mother but a different father, are half-brothers, and female children having like parents are half-sisters. The man who marries a woman is a brother-in-law to her brother or sister, and the woman who marries a man is a sister-in-law to his brother or sister. A man who marries a sister of one's wife, or husband, is not, strictly speaking, a brother-in-law, but the wife's or husband's brother-in-law; and the woman who marries a brother of one's wife or husband, is not, strictly speaking, a sister-in-law, but the wife's or husband's sister-in-law, though these terms are not unfrequently thus loosely used. The male children by one marriage, if one parent dies, and the surviving parent marries again to a widow or widower having children, are step-brothers to the children of such widow or widower, and the female children having like parents are step-sisters.

Many of these relationships may be illustrated by referring to the family and connections of Susanna Shattuck, (p. 66,) who married successively Joseph Morse, John Fay, and William Brigham. She was the step-mother of Mr. Fay's children, (sons and daughters by his first wife,) and they were her step-children and step-brothers and sisters of her children by Mr. Morse, and the latter were step-children of Mr. Fay, and he was their step-father. Her children by Mr. Morse were half brothers and half-sisters to her children by Mr. Fay; and the latter were half-brothers and half-sisters to Mr. Fay's children by his first wife. John Fay, born Nov. 30, 1669, was a step-son of Mrs. Susanna (Shattuck) Morse, and a step-brother of Joseph Morse born Nov. 11, 1667, and a half-brother of David Fay, born April 23, 1679; and David Fay was half-brother to both of the others, John Fay having been the father of each by different mothers, and Susanna having been the mother of each by different fathers; and their grand-children, the children of each, were either half-cousins or step-cousins to each other, and the other children of Mr. Fay and Mrs. Morse, step-uncles, and step-aunts, or half-uncles and half-aunts. Joseph Morse, Jr., was step-uncle to the children of John Fay, Jr., and half uncle to the children of David Fay. Tabitha Ward, who married Samuel Fay, (p. 66,) was step-daughter-in-law of Mrs. Susanna Morse. Other combinations may be made of the different members of these families, illustrating other degrees of kindred.

6. Cousins.

The children of one brother or sister, or grand-children of the same ancestor are cousins to the children of another brother or sister, and are called first-cousins, or cousins-german. Cousin was sometimes used in ancient wills and other legal instruments as synonymous with nephew and niece, and in a loose sense for any relationship more remote than brother or sister. The term kinsman is often found also in similar ancient legal papers, and is sometimes used as synonymous with cousin, nephew, or niece; but its meaning is not sufficiently definite to designate any particular relationship. It is used indiscriminately for various degrees of kindred, but generally for those of a remote degree. The children of a half-brother or half-sister are half-cousins to each other; and the children of one or more brothers or sisters who marry sisters or brothers, having three quarters of the same blood, are double-cousins to each other. The children of cousins or great-grand-children of the same ancestor are second-cousins. It is erroneous to say that the children of first cousins are second cousins to first cousins, as it is sometimes loosely done. The children of second-cousins or great-great-grandchildren of the same ancestor are third cousins. The children of more remote and the same degree of descent or generation from the same ancestor are fourth, fifth, sixth, or more remote, cousins, as the fact may be. There may be also half-second-cousins or double-second-cousins, or more remote cousins of similar kind. There may be also cousins-in-law, and step-cousins of the various degrees.

7. Uncle and Aunt.

The brother of the father or mother of a child is the uncle of that child, and the sister of such father or mother is that aunt; or half-uncle or half-aunt, or step-uncle or step-aunt, as the case may be. The brother of the grandfather or grandmother of a child is the great-uncle of that child, and the sister of such grandfather or grandmother is the great-aunt, or half-great-uncle or half-great-aunt, or step-great-uncle or step-great-aunt. So on in more remote degrees of kindred, by adding great to each preceding degree, or by saying, after each specific relationship, of the third degree or the fourth degree, as the fact may be. Nephews and nieces of uncles and aunts are cousins to each other, or second-cousins, third-cousins, &c., as the degree of kindred may be. There may also be uncle-cousins and aunt-cousins of the different degrees.

8. Nephew and Niece.

The male children of a brother or sister are nephews, and the female children of a brother or sister, are nieces to such brother or sister. The same descendants of half-brothers or half-sisters, are half-nephews and half-nieces. There may be also step-nephews or step-nieces. The male children of cousins are cousin-nephews, and the female children of cousins, are cousin-nieces to such cousins. They are sometimes called cousin's sons or cousin's daughters. The same children are grand-nephews or grand-nieces to brothers or sisters; or half-cousin-nephews, or half-cousin nieces, half-grand-nephews, or half-grand-nieces, as the fact may be. The male children of second cousins are second-cousin-nephews, and the female children are second-cousin-nieces to such second cousins; or the same children are great-grand-nephews or great-grand-nieces to brothers and sisters, or half of each, as the fact may be. The same may be said of more remote degrees of kindred. The children of one's great-uncles and great-aunts are great-uncle-nephews or great-uncle-nieces, or great-aunt-nephews, or great-aunt-nieces to such one; or the same individuals are cousins to his father or mother.

These terms might be extended to other, or more remote degrees of kindred; but those already given will suggest others, and are deemed sufficient for our present purposes.

If it is desired to ascertain the relationship which any person or descendants sustain to any other person or descendants named in this volume or elsewhere, it can be done by tracing each upwards to a common ancestor, and afterwards downwards to the person or descendants designated. This may be illustrated thus: Suppose it is desired to know the relationship which existed between the late Dr. George C. Shattuck, (p. 244,) and Col. Daniel Shattuck, (p. 300.) In tracing each back it will be found that the line of ascent does not meet until we arrive at William Shattuck, the common ancestor of the family. From him the line of descent may be exhibited as follows:—

|-----------------|-----------------------------|---|
| 1st Generation. | William Shattuck, (p. 57.)  | Common Ancestor.                              |
| 2d Gen.         | John Shattuck, (p. 68.)     | William Shattuck, (74.) Brothers.             |
| 3d Gen.         | John Shattuck, (p. 77.)     | Benjamin Shattuck, (p. 89.) Cousins.          |
| 4th Gen.        | Jonathan Shattuck, (p. 92.) | Stephen Shattuck, (p. 108.) 2d Cousins.       |
| 5th Gen.        | John Shattuck, (p. 116.)    | Benjamin Shattuck, (p. 155.) 3d Cousins.      |
| 6th Gen.        | John Shattuck, (p. 171.)    | George C. Shattuck, (p. 244.) 4th Cousins.    |
| 7th Gen.        | Daniel Shattuck, (p. 300.)  | Geo. C. Shattuck, Jr., (p. 254.) 5th Cousins. |

From this statement it appears that the late Dr. Shattuck was fourth cousin to Col. Shattuck's father, and his own fourth-cousin-uncle, and that he is fifth cousin to George C. Shattuck, Jr.; that Benjamin Shattuck, (p. 155,) was his 3d cousin-great-uncle; and that John Shattuck, his father, was Benjamin Shattuck's 3d cousin-nephew.

If it be desired to know the relationship which Judge Joel Parker of Cambridge and his brothers sustain to the author, it may be found by tracing each back to their common ancestor, and forward to the present generation, thus:—

|                 |                               |                            |                   |
|-----------------|-------------------------------|----------------------------|-------------------|
| 4th Generation. | Jonathan Shattuck, (p. 92.)   | Common Ancestor.           |                   |
| 5th Gen.        | Elizabeth Shattuck, (p. 115.) | John Shattuck, (p. 116.)   | Brother & sister. |
| 6th Gen.        | Edith Jewett, (p. 115.)       | John Shattuck, (p. 171.)   | Cousins.          |
| 7th Gen.        | Joel Parker, (p. 116.)        | Lemuel Shattuck, (p. 302.) | 2d Cousins.       |

By this it appears that these brothers are 2d cousins of the author, and that they bear the same relationship as he does to Dr. Shattuck, (p. 254,) both being his 5th cousins and descendants of the 7th Generation from William Shattuck, their common ancestor. Dr. Edmund Parker of Pepperell, son of Edmund of Nashua, (p. 116,) is 3d cousin of Dr. J. C. Shattuck of Brookline, (p. 293,) and sustains the same relationship to other descendants of Jonathan Shattuck, (p. 92,) of the same generation.

In like manner the relationship between Hon. Judge Shattuck of California and Hon. John A. Dix of New York may be ascertained. By tracing each back it will be found that their common ancestor is William Shattuck, Jr., (p. 74,) and that their descent from him is as follows:—

|----------------|-----------------------------|---------------------------------|-------------|
| 2d Generation, | William Shattuck, (p. 74.)  | Common Ancestor.                |             |
| 3d Gen.        | Benjamin Shattuck, (p. 89.) | Robert Shattuck, (p. 92.)       | Brothers.   |
| 4th Gen.       | Sarah Shattuck, (p. 111.)   | Robert Shattuck, (p. 114.)      | Cousins.    |
| 5th Gen.       | Timothy Dix, (p. 112.)      | David Shattuck, (p. 165.)       | 2d Cousins. |
| 6th Gen.       | Timothy Dix, (p. 112.)      | David O. Shattuck, (p. 288.)    | 3d Cousins. |
| 7th Gen.       | John A. Dix, (p. 112.)      | Francis Wm. Shattuck, (p. 289.) | 4th Cous.   |

It thus appears that David O. Shattuck is 3d cousin to the father of John A. Dix, or his own 3d cousin-uncle; and that Francis William Shattuck is his 4th cousin. Both being of the same generation in descent from a common ancestor as the author, are his 5th cousins. These illustrations will be sufficient to enable any one to ascertain the exact relationship which any descendant sustains to any other descendant.

VII. Two Beloved Sisters.

The author devotes this page to the more particular Memorials of two beloved sisters, the dates of whose births and deaths have already been given, (p. 172.) If an apology to his readers for so doing be considered needful by any one, he trusts that fraternal affection for real worth will be a sufficient one. These sisters seemed possessed originally of good constitutions; their persons were well formed; and they enjoyed good health until a severe cold began to develop a tendency to that fearful disease which takes away the lives, and destroys the hopes of many New England families. The progress of the disease in the elder sister was slow, and did not perform its perfect work until nearly three years after its first appearance; but in the younger sister it was rapid, and terminated in as many months. Just as they were maturing into womanhood, and were about to take their stations as heads of families, and as useful members of society, their career was arrested, and they were numbered with that great multitude of similar cases, in which Providence seems mysteriously to select the most meritorious, and those of the greatest promise of usefulness in this world, for another sphere of existence. And yet we trust they did not live entirely in vain; and that even their short lives were not useless lives. Nature endowed them both respectably, but Rebecca especially with more than common intellectual powers. They, however, enjoyed imperfect advantages for their cultivation and development. The common school which they might legally attend was too remote, and the old fashioned New Ipswich winters were too severe, to allow them to derive therefrom much benefit. To their home education, to which we have already alluded, (p. 302,) they were principally indebted for the knowledge they possessed. One or two terms in the academy elicited from their preceptor a certificate of "ample qualifications for teachers" themselves, and they afterwards spent several seasons in this employment.

They were early taught both by precept and example, by one of the kindest and best of fathers, to respect religion, and to consider it as the "one thing needful" to prepare them for a useful life and for a happy death. Yet their attention was not called especially to the subject, as their own personal matter, until the great awakening in New Ipswich in 1811. A change was then wrought in their views; and on the 3d of May, 1812, they both made a public profession of religion, and united with the church then under the pastoral care of Rev. Richard Hall. Betsey was then twenty years of age, and Rebecca fifteen.

They were two of eleven young ladies in New Ipswich who, on the previous April, had formed themselves into a society "for the promotion of religion and charity." This society met once a fortnight, and spent the season in labor for charitable purposes, and in efforts for mutual improvement in female excellence and in religion. It was one of the early associations of its kind, and in many of its useful purposes it has hardly been excelled or equalled by those of more modern date and of similar design. The proceeds of their labors and their annual contributions were partly devoted to the education of a pious and talented young man for the ministry; and his subsequent history showed that their charity was well and usefully bestowed. Rebecca, although seven years younger than the oldest member, and three years younger than any other one, was chosen its presiding officer in the second year after its formation, and was afterwards reelected during her lifetime. Her associates have often spoken of her great usefulness generally, and in that association in particular; and of the happy influence of her example and conversation in their social intercourse.

Rebecca commenced a regular journal, Jan. 1, 1812, and continued it at intervals during the remainder of life. Betsey also kept a journal, but less regularly and full. The advantages of such a record to the person who keeps it, and for the pleasure and improvement it affords to survivors, are too obvious to need specification. Many of the manuscripts of these sisters—their journals, letters and papers—have been preserved, and are now in our possession. These writings, beside the information they afford concerning the current events of their lives, exhibit a deep and constantly abiding tone of religious feeling, and a conscientious desire to perform every duty, and to be useful in life in whatever station they happened to be placed. They are esteemed by their immediate relatives as invaluable memorials of their authors. It is scarcely proper, however, to obtrude any of these private thoughts even upon the limited circle of our readers, yet we will venture to make two extracts, faithfully copied, from Rebecca's journal, one expressed in rhyme and the other in prose, to exhibit the characteristics of her mind and the style of her composition. The first does not aspire to be considered as poetry, yet both are given as specimens of thoughts which grew almost spontaneously in her young mind; and which, if they had been cultivated with the more modern advantages of education, might have matured into poetry, and perhaps into literary excellence. The first extract is six of ten stanzas, written December, 1814, in commemoration of her pious and most excellent mother, who died when she was one and a half year old, and the other relates to an event never to be forgotten by those who witnessed it:—

- "3. O! may I never more complain,
Nor charge my God with counsels vain,
Or dare dispute his love.
No! I'll fall down before his throne,
And praise his merits, not my own,
And all his ways approve.
- "4. Pleased to obey her Saviour's call—
Her dearest friends—she left us all,
And bid us all farewell!
With smiling face and lifted eyes
Her willing soul did mount the skies,
And now with God doth dwell.
- "5. I trust beyond these mortal shores
Her eye the eternal world explores,
And praise is her employ.
Ten thousand, thousand are the tongues
Which chant with her those rapturous songs,
Which fill all heaven with joy.
- "6. Your aged father* now may join
You, mother! in your songs divine
To God and to the Lamb!
For he I trust—O blessed hope!
Made Christ's eternal arm his prop,
And trusted in his name.
- "7. Dear parent! may you ever see
Your fond Rebecca following thee
In virtue's happy road.
That when I quit this vale of tears,
So full of sorrow, grief and fears,
I may ascend to God.
- "8. There may my soul forever dwell,
And taste those joys which none can tell,
But such as feel his love.
There Jesus, my dear Saviour, is!
There shall the songs of joy and praise
My noblest passions move."

"April 27, 1816. O how shall my hand perform its office while I attempt to record the most affecting scene I ever witnessed! The kindest and best of parents is gone! my dear beloved father is no more! Yesterday I was called home by my brother L., who entered my place of residence in tears. But, oh! how affecting the scene! My affectionate father in the agonies of death!! He lay upon his back—his mouth, from the difficulty of breathing, open—his eyes shut—his heaving lungs pressed with phlegm, which rattled in his throat at every breath! My feelings can better be conceived than described. He was struck by death about two o'clock in the afternoon. Twelve, including myself, passed a sleepless night, watching around the bed of this beloved man. He sometimes opened his eyes and looked upon his dear family. Although unable to speak, his countenance expressed the greatness of his affection. About eleven he revived a little. My mother, standing by him, took his hand,—he exerted all his dying efforts, and, looking upon her with inexpressible tenderness, clasped her hand in his. He tried to speak, but utterance was denied him. He likewise took the hands of all his beloved children, (except brother D., who was absent,) and looked upon us with paternal love and regard. He fain would have spoken the language of his heart, which seemed to be,—“Farewell, my children—I leave you—but I trust I am going to be with Jesus—prepare to follow—be kind one to another, and love one another—live in peace, and to the glory of your Heavenly Father.” He lay in great distress during the whole night; now and then a deep sigh, accompanied with a feeble groan, escaped him, while obstructing phlegm continually rattled with every breath. He retained his reason so long as he had strength to manifest it—he appeared to know us all. We asked him if Christ still appeared precious. He squeezed our hands and tried to speak, as if in the affirmative. The morning came. A serene stillness reigned throughout all nature—no clouds obscured the sky—all was calm and pleasant. The little songsters tuned their notes of praise and adoration to the Author of all Good. All conspired to solemnize my mind, and make me submissively adore The sun had just illumined our world with its bright beams, and shone into the apartment with peculiar lustre, where lay the dying saint, about to abandon forever his clayey tenement, and (I trust) enter that blissful region where they have no need of the sun, for Jesus the Lamb of God is the light thereof. In a few minutes he turned his eyes upward, as if he viewed the indescribable glories of the upper world—his mouth closed—and a few feeble gasps released his laboring soul from its prison of flesh, and I have much reason to believe, he entered into the joy of his Lord. Methinks he is now united to the blessed assembly above, and is renewing there his former connections with virtuous friends, which had been dissolved by death. Lovely in death, I discern the features of a fond father still.

“On the cold cheek of death smiles and roses are blending,
And beauty immortal awakes from the tomb.”

VIII. Corrections, Additions, and Notes.

Corrections.

1. We have already stated, (p. 5,) that it is difficult, if not impossible, to avoid errors in a work of this kind. And, in reviewing our printed pages, notwithstanding our careful endeavors, some errors have been discovered which escaped correction during the passage of the work through the press. The reader is requested to make the following corrections:—

Additions.

2. SUSANNA SHATTUCK Morse, Fay, (p. 66,) m. 3, May 30, 1695, Thomas Brigham of Marlborough. She d. there March 16, 1716, æ. 72. He d. Nov. 15, 1717.

3. SYBIL SHATTUCK, (p. 87,) m. Jonas Child, May 20, 1742; and her sister Mary m. Ebenezer Kimball of Hopkinton, Nov. 24, 1743.

4. WILLIAM SHATTUCK's heirs are described in the deed of conveyance of his estate to William Greenleaf, dated Dec. 18, 1732, already referred to, (p. 91,) as follows:—"Benjamin Shattuck of Littleton, County of Middlesex, clerk, John Holland of Watertown, in said County, husbandman, and Elizabeth, his wife; Isaac Holden of Cambridge, yeoman, and Joanna, his wife; Joseph Holden of Watertown, yeoman, guardian to his four children, namely, Joseph Holden, Stephen Holden, Abigail Holden, and Abner Holden, minors, under the age of twenty-one years, by Abigail, his wife, lately deceased;" and they sell all their rights unto a "certain piece of land, situate, lying, and being in the easterly part of Watertown, part upland and part meadow, lying on the south side of the highway which leads down to the Fresh Pond, so called, being bounded easterly and southerly by lands belonging to Joseph Bright, and westerly and northerly with the highway, with the dwelling-house on said land; also, that part or parcel of land lying on the north side of the said highway leading to said Fresh Pond, being planting, pasture, orchard and meadow, and bounded easterly with Joseph Breck, southerly, partly with the highway, and partly with land of Wm. Greenleaf, westerly with land of Wm. Greenleaf, and partly with land of William Goddin, and northerly with the Cambridge line."

Dr. Bond, in his "Map of the Original Allotments of Land and Ancient Topography of Watertown," accompanying his valuable "Genealogies of the Watertown Families," just published, locates the estate of William Shattuck, senior, on both sides of Washington street, near Mr. Stone's, where School Street enters it from the south, about half the distance from Common Street to Fresh Pond. If this was his original residence the estate must have been greatly enlarged before 1732, as it then extended northerly to Cambridge line, and westerly to "King's Common." William Shattuck, 3d, (p. 88,) owned a portion of that Common. Abigail Shattuck, wife of Joseph Holden, (p. 91,) and her two youngest children, were then dead. Isaac Holden, (p. 76,) was b. May 28, 1677, lived in Cambridge, northerly of Fresh Pond, where he d. May 8, 1772, æ. 95. He had several children, and was ancestor of Dr. Holden and others, of Dorchester. The Four Corners, (see note, page 89,) was southerly of the Waverley Station, on the Fitchburg Railroad, on the highway leading westerly from J. P. Cushing's, then the main road from Cambridge to Sudbury. Dr. Philip Shattuck lived northwesterly of these Four Corners, just within the present limits of Waltham.

5. SARAH SHATTUCK, only dau. of Daniel Shattuck and Martha Serjent, (p. 98,) m. Elijah Rice of Westborough, b. June 26, 1719. They removed to Upton, where she d. Nov. 1761. They had, 1. Daniel, b. April 27, 1745, m. Feb. 27, 1766, Sarah Childs of Grafton; 2. Martha, b. Oct. 1, 1747, m. April 16, 1667, Solomon Childs, a brother of Sarah; 3. Elijah, b. July 6, 1750, m. 1779, Peggy Patterson; 4. Elisha, b. Nov. 7, 1752, d. 1758; 5. Sarah, b. Oct. 22, 1760, m. Oct. 14, 1777, Capt. Benjamin Whitcomb. The father m. 2, Aug. 12, 1762, Prudence Hardy, and had 6 more children:—Thankful, Prudence, Elisha, Charles, Noah, and Lydia. He removed to Henniker, N. H., where he d. April 19, 1785, æ. 85. Solomon Childs, now of Henniker, a grandson of Sarah (Shattuck) Rice, in a letter to Andrew H. Ward, Esq., relates many interesting traditions concerning the captivity of his great-grandmother, Martha (Serjent) Shattuck. She was the eldest child of her father Digory Serjent, and must have been born as early as 1695, or earlier. She was captured in 1704, when, as is supposed, she was about 9 years old, and was redeemed after 7 years residence with the Indians in Canada, when about 16 years of age.

6. JOSIAH SHATTUCK, (p. 105,) in his will, dated March 22, 1771, (not signed,) "gave all his moveable estate to his wife Mary; also, the use and improvement of that part of my real estate which was my late father's, Mr. Benjamin Shattuck, late of Cambridge, deceased, during her natural life; to daughter Susanna the reversion and residue of my estate; if Susanna should die without heirs, the real estate is to go to the town of Watertown, not to be sold, but the profits or income to go for the support of English schools."—Bond's Genealogies, p. 933.

7. In Holland's History of Western Massachusetts, (vol. ii., p. 389,) it is stated that "Lieut. REUBEN SHATTUCK" and Charles Packer were chosen on the first board of selectmen of Leyden, in 1784. We have learned that he was s. of John, (p. 134,) b. June 25, 1749. He lived in Leyden several years near his cousin Ezra, but removed first to Warwick, and thence to Montague, at the Falls, where he d. He m. Ruth Davis of Guilford, but had no children.

8. BETSEY SHATTUCK, probably a daughter of Ephraim, (p. 135,) m. Moses Leland of Holliston, (see Leland Magazine, p. 197,) and settled in Peru, Berkshire Co., about 1795, and had Leonard, Eda, Ezra, Mary, Clarissa, Emeline, and Moses. She d. in 1810. He d. in 1831.

9. THOMAS BURTON SHATTUCK, (p. 140,) b. Aug. 17, 1802, m. in Boston, May 14, 1823, and now resides in Burlington, Vt. Has had, 1. Sarah Anne; 2. Mary Bird; 3. Olive Amey, m. June, 1853, Daniel Bradbury of Lowell; 4. Helen Deodama; 5. Nancy Augusta; 6. Burton Bradbury; 7. Eliza Jane; 8. Minerva O.; 9. Mindwell Victoria; 10. Moses.

10. LAKIN.—Lydia Lakin, the first wife of Jeremiah Shattuck, (see p. 141 and note, p. 95,) was the dau. of Ebenezer Lakin. She was b. Aug. 5, 1732, and consequently her age at death was 34 y. 6 m. 14 d., not 33 y. 1 m. 16 d., as stated. Ebenezer Lakin, b. July 19, 1707, s. of Abraham Lakin, b. Sept. 11, 1667, and grandson of Lieut. William Lakin, m. Jan. 31, 1732, Lydia Lakin, b. March 15, 1707, dau. of Joseph Lakin, b. April 14, 1670, and grandson of En. John Lakin. Joseph Lakin, (who d. April 1, 1757,) m. May 25, 1695, his cousin Abigail Lakin, dau. of William, and had, 1. Joseph, b. May 3, 1696; 2. Abigail, b. July 20, 1698; 3. Jacob, b. Dec. 7, 1700, m. Jan. 28, 1730, his cousin Eunice Lakin, dau. of Josiah; 4. Mary, b. April 12, 1703, m. Benjamin Bennett; 5. Lydia, b. March 15, 1707, as above stated. Her children were, 1. Lydia, b. Aug. 5, 1732, m. Aug. 10, 1749, Jeremiah Shattuck, 2. Abigail, b. Sept. 5, 1736, m. Nov. 8, 1752, Peter Hobart; 3. Phebe, b. Sept. 12, 1738, m. April 13, 1758, Gabriel Lakin, s. of Abraham.

Doubts exist as to the entire accuracy of the family record of Lieut. William Lakin given in Butler's History of Groton, (p. 410,) and copied in our note. (p. 95.) He had, 1. William, b. May 6, 1655; 2. John, b. Jan. 3, 1658; 3. Jonathan, b. June 28, 1661, (entered upon the Reading Records); 4. Abraham, b. Jan. 10, 1664; 5. William, b. May, 1665; 6. Abraham, b. Sept. 11, 1667; 7. Eliab, b. Jan. 8, 1669, (entered upon the Groton Records;) and 8. Abigail, not recorded. It is doubtful whether the William who m. Elizabeth ———, and was father of Isaac, was the s. of John or of William. Mary, the widow of Ensign John Lakin, m. for her second husband, Henry Willard of Lancaster.

11. NATHAN KINSMAN, (p. 157,) while in Concord, was a hatter, but after his removal to Landaff was a farmer and physician. He was known in that region as Dr. Kinsman, and had an extensive medical practice. His wife d. June 6, 1798, æ. 54 y. He d. Feb. 8, 1822, æ. 80 y. They had:—

Jan. 1, 1827, m. Margaret H. Magill, live in Cambridgeport; 11. Stephen, b. May 3, 1828, d. in 1833; 12. Lydia B., b. March 9, 1831, d. in 1833. These children d. of the scarlet fever.

2. Eleanor Kinsman, the 4th child of Nathan Kinsman, Esq., and her nephew Oliver Dorrance Kinsman, s. of John, Esq., b. Feb. 16, 1835, the only survivors of this family, are now living in Portland, Me.

3. Peter d. in East Landaff, about 1836 or 7. He m. Polly Raymond, and had Polly and Eliza, who m. Bemsley Edwards.

4. Martha, b. in Landaff, Oct. 9, 1782, m. Feb. 14, 1810, Nathan Robbins. She d. Aug. 27, 1831, æ. 48 y. 9 m. 18 d. Had, 1. Eliza Kinsman, b. Aug. 14, 1812; 2. Huldah, b. Feb. 7, 1815, d. June 14, 1852, æ. 36 y. 8 m. 7 d.; 3. Nathan Kinsman, b. Aug. 23, 1822.

5. Timothy, b. in Landaff, Aug. 17, 1784, m. March 17, 1808, Lucy S. Abbott of Bedford, Mass., b. Feb. 11, 1792. He d. Feb. 26, 1826, æ. 41 y. 6 m. 9 d. She is now living in Brookline, Mass. Had, 1. George Shattuck, b. Aug. 5, 1809, m. March 15, 1832, Nancy S. Holden, and d. in Galveston, Texas, Feb. 10, 1844,—had 3 children, d. in infancy; 2. Lucy Angeline, b. Sept. 8, 1811, m. Dec. 22, 1831, Alfred Mudge of Boston, (and have, 1. Lucy Ann Angeline, b. Oct. 13, 1831; 2. Alfred Augustine, b. Nov. 10, 1832.) 3. Alice Eliza, b. July 24, 1813, m. Nov. 1832, Benjamin Bradley of Boston, d. April 7, 1844; 4. Martha Maria, b. April 20, 1815, m. Benjamin Bradley, just mentioned; 5. Moses Abbott, b. March 5, 1817, d. Oct. 24, 1842, æ. 25 y. 6 m. 19 d.

12. JOHN SHATTUCK, probably s. of Edmund, (p. 158,) entered the United States Navy, Dec. 2, 1799, was appointed Lieutenant, March 20, 1807, and furloughed March 27, 1809; but his name does not afterwards appear upon the Navy Register.

13. REBECCA SHATTUCK, dau. of Ebenezer, (p. 169,) m. 1, Zadock Bass, Jr., and had, 1. Charles, b. in Jerusalem in 1822, d. in Jersey Village, Bradford, Steuben Co., æ. 10 y.; 2. Emily Ann, b. in Jerusalem in 1827, m. George Washington Howe of New York. They lived in Porto Rico. She m. 2, in 1831, Calvin Cole of Jerusalem, and had, 3. Calvin, b. March 12, 1833; 4. Jane, b. in 1835, d. in Jerusalem, æ. 3 m. The mother d. in Porto Rico, May 11, 1851.

14. CALVIN SHATTUCK, (p. 242,) d. in Springfield, July 28, 1855, two days before the 65th anniversary of his birth. A correspondent in furnishing this information states that Mr. Shattuck had "lived in Springfield nearly forty-three years, having been employed a part of the time in the United States Army. The latter part of his life was devoted chiefly to the pursuits of agriculture. He possessed, naturally, a good constitution, enjoyed good health, and exhibited a freshness, vigor, and activity, unusual for a person of his age, until about two months before his death. He was then attacked with a disease of the heart, from which he never recovered. There was in his character a happy combination of good qualities. His industrious, energetic, and efficient business habits, and his uniform uprightness and manly bearing in all his transactions, obtained the respect and confidence of his associates, and secured to him a sufficient worldly competence. In his family he was amiable, kind, and consistent, as a husband and father; in the community he was sociable, neighborly, obliging, generous, and hospitable. He readily obtained friends, and worthy friendships were preserved unbroken. To the poor and lowly he was a true, practical friend. In religion he was a serious, humble, and conscientious Christian, for many years a reputable member of a Congregational Church, and a worthy representative of the good old puritan stock of his ancestry. His death was most deeply deplored by his family, his kindred, and a wide circle of friends."

Notes.

23. We have given, (p. 36,) a computation, based upon 4121 names of persons who were descended from our first American ancestor, then contained in our manuscript. Since that statement was prepared, and during the progress of the work through the press, accounts of many additional families have been obtained, so that the number now in the volume, not including either those numbered but not named, or those marrying into the family, amounts to 5121, being 1000, or nearly one quarter increase. We present the results of this last enumeration in the subjoined Statement. It contains the whole number of descendants named in each generation, distinguishing the males from the females, and the number that have borne the name of Shattuck, separated from those of other names.

| Generation. | Whole number. | Males. | Females. | Bore the nameof Shattuck. | Bore othernames. |
| 2d Gen.     | 10            | 5      | 5        | 10                            | .                    |
| 3d Gen.     | 59            | 30     | 29       | 32                            | 27                   |
| 4th Gen.    | 133           | 71     | 62       | 59                            | 74                   |
| 5th Gen.    | 244           | 142    | 102      | 145                           | 99                   |
| 6th Gen.    | 687           | 353    | 334      | 421                           | 266                  |
| 7th Gen.    | 1749          | 905    | 844      | 1027                          | 722                  |
| 8th Gen.    | 1863          | 983    | 880      | 925                           | 938                  |
| 9th Gen.    | 364           | 174    | 190      | 176                           | 188                  |
| 10th Gen.   | 11            | 6      | 5        | 7                             | 4                    |
| Totals,     | 5121          | 2670   | 2451     | 2803                          | 2318                 |

From this Statement it appears that, in the aggregate, for every 100 females 109 males have been born, corresponding with the result before obtained. We have given, (p. 46,) a theoretical calculation as to the probable number of descendants from our first ancestor, which, if compared with the above statement, may be thought to exceed the actual number. But since so many families are omitted in our printed Memorials it is impossible to say how much the numbers obtained in those calculations exceed the true numbers, or whether they exceed them at all. Persons are now living belonging to six different generations; of whom are Benjamin Dix, (p. 113,) Polly (Shattuck) Spencer, (p. 114,) and others of the fifth, or children of the fourth generation; and of course great numbers of the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, and a few of the 10th generations. It is curious to notice how soon some branches outrun each other in the same generation, and cease to be contemporaneous. To illustrate this idea we have compiled the following Statement from the Memorials. It contains the names of the eldest and youngest known child in each generation, the page where found, and the difference in time between the dates of their births:—

| Gen.     | Eldest.              | Date of Birth. | Youngest.              | Date of Birth. | Years Difference. |
|----------|----------------------|----------------|------------------------|----------------|-------------------|
| 2d Gen.  | Susanna, (p. 66,) b. | Jan. 11, 1663. | Moses, (p. 76,) b.     | Nov. 1, 1703.  | 40                |
| 4th Gen. | William, (p. 83,) b. | 1689.          | Susanna, (p. 87,) b.   | Jan. 1738.     | 49                |
| 5th Gen. | William, (p. 96,) b. | Dec. 13, 1711. | Jonathan, (p. 114,) b. | July 12, 1776. | 64                |
| 6th Gen. | Ruth, (p. 120,) b.   | Feb. 1, 1739.  | Mary C., (p. 169,) b.  | Jan. 19, 1822. | 83                |
| 7th Gen. | Lurana, (p. 175,) b. | 1762.          | Harvey, (p. 290,) b.   | May 30, 1850.  | 88                |

These facts show that the oldest and youngest child in each of the 6th and 7th generation were not contemporaneous one with the other, there having been a difference of nearly 83 years in one, and 88 in the other. The youngest child of the 4th generation was born only one year before the oldest child of the 6th, and the youngest child of the 5th was born 14 years after the oldest child of the 7th, making these persons, respectively, contemporaneous with each other, though one was two generations ahead of the other. These are interesting facts in the natural history of the race.

The number of twin children mentioned in the printed Memorials, is 94, or 22 more than already stated, (p. 36,) of whom 48 were males and 46 were females, making every 54th child, nearly, a twin, varying a trifle from the original statement.

A careful analysis of the facts on the plan given in our Introduction, and in this note, is interesting and useful; and it is strongly recommended that all genealogists should present similar results relating to any family whose memorials they may compile. It is preferable, however, that these results should be obtained from the full and corrected pages, after they are printed, rather than from a more imperfect manuscript.

24. The following facts concerning the military service of some of our family in the Revolution are worthy of preservation. The Pension Rolls printed by Congress, in 1835, contain the names of the Pensioners subjoined:—

| Name.               | Residence.             | Pension began.  | What service.      | See page |
|---------------------|------------------------|-----------------|--------------------|----------|
| Jonas Shattuck,     | Lincoln Co., Me.,      | March 4, 1790,  | Invalid Pens'ner,  | (148.)   |
| Samuel Shattuck,    | Niagara Co., N. Y.,    | Feb. 16, 1821,  | Mass. Line,        | (152.)   |
| William Shattuck,   | Litchfield Co., Ct.,   | June 18, 1818,  | Continental Line,  | (163.)   |
| David Shattuck,     | New London Co., Ct.,   | Mar. 31, 1818,  | Connecticut Line,  | (165.)   |
| Stephen Shattuck,   | Hillsboro' Co., N. H., | April 3, 1818,  | Mass. Line,        | (195.)   |
| Eben. L. Shattuck,  | Middlesex Co., Ms.,    | April 9, 1818,  | Mass. Line,        | (203.)   |
| Abraham Shattuck,   | Sullivan Co., N. H.,   | April 11, 1818, | Mass. Line,        | (204.)   |
| Joseph Shattuck,    | Essex Co., Mass.,      | April 9, 1818,  | Mass. Line,        | (220.)   |
| John Shattuck,      | Worcester Ct., Mass.,  | June 25, 1815,  | 4th Reg. U. S. In. | (134?)   |
| Abiel Shattuck,     | Washington Co., Vt.,   | March 4, 1831,  | Mass. Line,        | (221.)   |
| Nathaniel Shattuck, | Windham Co., Vt.,      | March 4, 1831,  | Mass. Cont. Line,  | ( ? )    |

The following additional names appear in the Census of the Pensioners, taken in 1840. Desire Bangs, in the family of Oliver Shattuck of Springfield, Mass., (p. 238.) Mary Shattuck, in the family of Silas Davis, Londonderry, Vt. Mary Shattuck, in the family of Maria Walker, Londgrove, Vt. We have been unable to identify the precise connection which John and Nathaniel Shattuck, and the two Marys, last mentioned, had with the family.

These pensioners comprise a small part only of those bearing our name who were engaged in the military service of the Revolution. It is due to all those patriotic soldiers, that authentic information should be obtained and recorded by their relatives or descendants, concerning the services of each. The Muster Rolls, preserved in the office of the Secretary of State of Massachusetts, contain the following names, and description of the service:—Abel Shattuck, (p. 190;) Abiel, (p. 221;) Asa, (p. 144;) Daniel, (p. 192;) Ebenezer, (p. 169;) Eleazer, (p. 168;) Ephraim, (p. 135;) Ezekiel, (p. 192;) Jeremiah, (p. 140;) Job, (p. 131;) Job, Jr., (p. 180;) John, (p. 171;) John, (p. 192;) John, "Captain of the marines of Brigantine Hawke, commanded by Capt. Dikes, under Commodore Manley," May 3, 1777, (uncertain as to the family connection;) Jonas, (p. 148;) Joseph, (p. 139;) Joseph, (p. 153;) Joseph, (p. 220;) Makepeace, (p. 188;) Moses, (p. 140;) Moses, (p. 166;) Nathan, (p. 199;) Nathaniel, (p. 223;) Oliver, (p. 154;) Reuben, (pp. 134, 390;) Samuel, (p. 152;) Silas, (p. 135;) Somers, (p. 159;) Thaddeus, (p. 189;) Thomas, (p. 100;) Thomas, (p. 135;) Timothy, Jr., (p. 120;) William, (p. 152.) Most of those served in several campaigns. It is undoubtedly a very imperfect list; for many others who are known to have been engaged are not included. We have already alluded to the patriotic spirit which moved that portion of the race that lived in Pepperell and the vicinity. (See pp. 130, 141.) Capt. John Nutting's company of minute men, in 1775, contained Abijah Shattuck, John Shattuck, (p. 171;) Oliver Shattuck, (p. 101;) Daniel Shattuck, (son of David, p. 142;) Jeremiah Shattuck, (p. 140;) Jonas Shattuck, (p. 148;) Jeremiah Shattuck, Jr., (p. 171.) Capt. John Sawtell's company that marched from Pepperell on the 19th April, 1775, and pursued the enemy to Cambridge, contained Moses Shattuck, (p. 140;) Philip Shattuck, (p. 138;) Reuben Shattuck, (p. 139;) Joseph Shattuck, (p. 139;) David Shattuck, (p. 142;) Josiah Shattuck.

James Barrett, muster-master for Middlesex County, on the 4th June, 1777, returned the following names of persons from Pepperell, mustered for the Continental Army, in Col. Jackson's battalion, Capt. Benj. Brown's company:—James McConner, Jonas Green, Ebenezer Shattuck, (p. 169,) Abraham Shattuck, (p. 204,) Daniel Shattuck, (p. 142,) Benjamin Green, Sampson Woods, William Scott, John Gilson, Thomas Lawrence, (p. 195,) William Lakin. "John Shattuck, 3d," (p. 171,) and Lemuel Parker, (p. 293,) with 22 others, were returned Sept. 18, 1777. They served a campaign in Rhode Island. This account might be greatly extended.

25. We have just received the "Catalogue of the Officers and Students of the Centenary College of Louisiana, for the Academic Year, 1847-8," and find in it the following names:—"Rev. David O. Shattuck, LL D., President and Professor of Moral Science and International Law;" Francis W. Shattuck of the Sophomore Class; David O. Shattuck, and John S. Shattuck of the Freshman Class; and James W. Shattuck, and Albert G. Shattuck of the Primary Department, (See pp. 289, 290.)

The General Catalogue of the Lawrence Academy at Groton, published this year, contains the following names, and the year in which they first entered the institution. The males from Groton were:—

Also, from Pepperell, 1818, Elizabeth Shattuck; 1827, Catharine Shattuck, and 1838, Sarah E. Shattuck; from Andover, 1853, Lucy B. Shattuck, (p. 353;) and from Leominster, 1854, Helen M. Shattuck.

The "Semi-Centennial Catalogue of Bradford Academy," published in 1853, contains the names of "Charles Chattuck," from Boston, 1820, and Charles Shattuck, from Boston, 1835. Also, Sarah W. Shattuck, (p. 312,) who entered in 1841, went through the course of study, and graduated in 1844. Miriam S. Shattuck, (p. 312,) in 1852; and Mary Louisa Shattuck, (p. 337.)

The Catalogues of other literary institutions contain also several of our name. Amos F. Shattuck, s. of Amos, (p. 318,) entered as Freshman at Amherst College in 1855. We are pleased to observe that so many of our name are thus enrolled; and that increasing attention is paid to education. The history of the families in this volume confirms the uniform testimony of other similar histories, that the influence of an intelligent, well-educated parent, and especially a mother, upon the welfare, happiness, and social elevation of children, is of the highest importance, and is a sufficient cause why some families are more distinguished than others. We hope that constant efforts will be made to increase the number of such mothers. It should be the great study of every female head of a family, or one who aspires to that honorable station,—the appropriate sphere of Woman's Rights,—to qualify herself so to conduct the domestic management of her household as to approach as near perfection as possible, and thereby to secure the greatest possible amount of prosperity and happiness to the inmates.

26. An allusion is made, (p. 307,) to the first inception of the idea of forming a City Library in Boston. Since that page was printed the proceedings at laying the corner stone of the library building have been published. It appears that several persons claim the honor of originating this noble Institution, but while so many have been active and influential in the measures preliminary to its final accomplishment, it would perhaps be unjust to assign the award wholly to any particular one. The author of this work does not claim the honor of originating this library, but he does claim, that he was the first person to bring to the notice of the City Council, officially, the idea of a City Library. The Boston Journal of March 22, 1854, publishes some history of the proceedings of the City Council in relation to this matter, from which we make the following extract:—

"On the 17th of January, 1839, on motion of Mr. Shattuck,—

"Ordered, That Messrs. Shattuck, Chapman, and Thayer, with such as the Board of Aldermen may join, be a committee to consider the expediency of organizing a Library of such books as may be in the several city offices, and such others as may be deemed expedient to add, adapted to the purposes and for the use of the City Government."

"The mover of this order stated his intention to be to obtain, in exchange for the documents printed by the city, collections of all the documents of other cities, for the use of the proposed City Library; and he urged the importance of making such a collection of documents a nucleus to serve as a foundation for a more extended collection of books for a more general and public use. The project, however, met with opposition, and failed. The opposing arguments principally relied upon were, that there was no convenient place for such a library—that it would create considerable expense to take care of it—that we were not a reading people—and that our City Government did not need the experience of other cities."

These proceedings were not, however, forgotten. The idea of a library came up at various times afterwards, before it assumed its final definite form.

The system of exchanges alluded to in the Journal, and page 307 of this work, originated with him, entirely independent of any other person. He had not then heard of M. Vattermare, and it was several years afterwards before the State or City made any exchanges with him.

27. In reviewing our labors it may perhaps be observed, that we have given more prominence to some persons, and less to others, than their respective merits would justify. If cases of this kind should be discovered the author begs his readers to consider it entirely unintentional on his part. He has all along desired to present such facts as came into his possession impartially, whatever relation they may have had. Accidental circumstances, as we have already stated, (p. 52,) must be assigned as the cause why some persons have a more prominent notice than others. We have been compelled, by the already unexpected magnitude of our work, to restrain an inclination to enlarge upon the history and characteristics of several persons whose biography is imperfectly given.

28. BLOOD.—The following document, containing some definite information concerning the family of Richard Blood, was discovered just as this sheet was going to the press :—

The Humble petition of Joseph Parker of Grotton is as followeth. May it please yo<sup>r</sup> Hon<sup>rs</sup> to take notice of y<sup>e</sup> suffering estate of Issable Blood widow & Relict of Richard Blood of s<sup>d</sup> Towne (who dyed intestate) he had three sons & one daughter who I marryed unto, two of which sons dyed & left small Children and the other, living being decriped and unable to manage his own affairs & sustaine his family, were not able to keep his s<sup>d</sup> mother : so y<sup>t</sup> I was, as it were, constrained to take the whole care of her, & the lands being situate out of town I could make little Improvement of them. S<sup>d</sup> widow being about 99 y<sup>m</sup> of age, & having lost her sight & unable to doe any thing towards a livelyhood I have kept now about 14 y<sup>m</sup>: She always intending to make me Recompence out of her lands desired me to goe to y<sup>e</sup> Judge of probate y<sup>t</sup> she might be allowed to sell the land her husband dyed seized of for y<sup>t</sup> end : s<sup>d</sup> Judge informed y<sup>t</sup> her sail would not be valled without an act of this Court allowing and empowering thereof: whereupon s<sup>d</sup> widow desired me in her behalf to petition y<sup>e</sup> Hon<sup>rs</sup> for liberty to sell s<sup>d</sup> land for to satisfie for her keeping hitherto; and what further she may still need; as also for her funeral expenses; she having noe other way to discharge the same; or be kept from becoming a town charge.

Most Humble Serv<sup>ts</sup>

Joseph Parker.

In answer to this petition the General Court passed the following Resolve, June 13, 1706 :—

“Resolved, That the Justices of the Superior Court at the next session in the County of Middlesex summon all persons concerned to appear before them and examine into the matter of this petition, and report the same to this court at their next session.”

We have discovered no account of the final action of the court in this matter. The names of the three sons given, (p. 369,) were obtained from the records of the Superior Court in Middlesex, (vol. iv., p. 97,) and are the same as here stated. Joseph was probably the oldest son, and had either been murdered like his brother James, or died early from some other cause. Nathaniel, also, appears to have been wounded and disabled. Their sister Hannah m. Joseph Parker, Jr., (p. 376,) and if she was the only daughter as here intimated, Elizabeth, who m. Thomas Tarbell, (p. 369,) was not a daughter of Richard, but a granddaughter, and probably the daughter of Joseph. This family seemed to have suffered very severely in their persons and property from the Indian depredations.

☞ SPECIAL REQUEST.

All persons of the name of Shattuck, and all of their relatives of other names, and their descendants, are particularly requested to examine this volume carefully, especially that part of it relating to the branches of the family with which they are more immediately connected; and if any error in name, date or otherwise, should be discovered, or if any name or facts have been omitted, they are desired to correct the errors, and supply the omissions. Others, whose connections are not definitely stated, are also requested to give their history, and, if possible, to trace their ascent to some one here given. It is desired, also, that all relatives, whether given in this volume or not, should continue their history, on the plan here given, (see pages 47, 48.) to later generations. It is the intention of the author to prepare an interleaved copy of the work, in which all additional information received may be entered, and to place it in some library where it shall be accessible to any one who may wish to consult it. Letters on the subject, addressed to "LEMUEL SHATTUCK, 79 Harrison Avenue, Boston, Mass.," will be gratefully received, and have due attention.

* Part First of this Index is designed to contain the principal christian names of persons surnamed Shattuck; and Part Second the whole names of persons other than Shattuck. Those that died young or unmarried, and children young or unmarried of existing generations, are not included in either part. These, and other persons, may be found by referring to the father, mother, brother, sister, or some other relative. The number on the right refers to the page of the volume. Where two or more numbers are joined with a hyphen they refer to the same person; and an account of the family may be found on the page referred to, by the first or highest number.
