

BELNAP OBTAINS SOME CLEWS.

Something Sensational Looked for in the Taylor Case.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of J. Henry Taylor, of Plain City, is in a fair way to be solved through the researches of Sheriff Belnap to whom will be due the credit of clearing up a matter which which has created the greatest interest throughout this section of the country in particular and the entire territory in general. The sheriff has taken the greatest interest in the case and yesterday found some most important clues. With them he will be able to accomplish his purpose and within the next three days something sensational may develop. It is still the opinion of the reporter who visited the mountains that Henry Taylor is supposed to be upon, that the missing man deliberately deserted his family and home. Of course it is impossible to induce his relatives and friends to believe such a thing of Henry. Time alone will tell, but Belnap, having once started upon the right track, will solve the problem of the sudden and mysterious disappearance.

Last night a party of searchers returned from the mountains but they brought no news. This afternoon the remainder of the searchers will give up the hunt and return from the mountains.
