How to Fight the High Cost of Living

Standard Cake Contest—Decoration Day Dinner—Need of Rest—Well Planned Rest and Well Planned Work of Equal Value—Recipes.

COTTOLENE CAKE CONTEST

The best cake for the least money is what the Standard is looking for. We are offering a number of prizes for the best cake made according to the following recipe. Of course, Cottolene must be used.

One-Egg Cake.
One-third cup Cottolene, one cup sugar, one egg, one teaspoon vanilla, one-half teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cream tartar, two cups flour, one cup milk.

The above recipe is said to be for the most economical cake that can be made, and be cake, if made according to the following directions:

Rub the Cottolene and sugar to a light cream; add the well-beaten yolk of egg and vanilla. Mix together the soda, cream of tartar and flour, and stir into the sugar mixture alternately with the milk. Add the well-beaten white of egg last. Bake in a shallow pan in a moderate oven about half an hour. Two level teaspoons of baking powder may be used instead of the soda and cream of tartar.

To the ladies that can bake the best cakes from the above recipe we will give:

First prize—One set of 36 pieces dinner set.

Second Prize—One dinner set of 35 pieces.

Third Prize—One porcelain percolator coffee pot, cream and sugar dish.

Fourth Prize—The first twenty-five paid up subscribers of the Standard that will apply at the Standard Business Office on or before May 31st and agree to make a cake according to the above recipe and exhibit it at the Standard office on June 7, 1913, will each receive free, one four-pound can of Cottolene.

There you are, can you afford to try it? A real cake can be made for just about 15 cents and have the best of everything used in the cake. How many wives find it hard work and a drudgery to make a cake? How many cannot make a cake? If you want to make cake-making a pleasure, get in on this contest. It costs nothing to get the four-pound can of Cottolene free and try your luck. You can experiment several times and profit by experience before the exhibit takes place on Saturday, June 7th, at 3 o'clock.

DECORATION DAY DINNER.

There is no "farm dinner" better suited to being made into a company affair than that of Decoration day. The whole outdoor world furnishes its color-scheme, and flowers can be used lavishly, without that haunting fear of expense that comes to the city woman of limited income.

A table with a large shallow glass dish filled with violets, peach and cherry blossoms for the centerpiece and with a tiny "individual" bunch of these blossoms at each place, certainly is symbolic of the red, white and blue of this day of memories. The menu can easily be worked out in red and white, and the following will be found very satisfactory. If the chicken, cakes and gelatin are prepared in the morning this can be served in the evening without very much effort, and without any great pile of cooking things to wash.

(1) Tomato Soup Whipped Cream Stuffed Crackers

(2) Pressed Chicken Potato Puffs Creamed Cauliflower Kidney Beans Buttered Rolls Currant Jelly

(3) Coffee

Beet and Cottage Cheese Salad (Wafers or Sandwiches)

(4) Red Gelatin Snowball Cakes Pink and White Mints

By including the salad with the meat course a three-course dinner may be served. In that case omit the sandwiches served with the salad.

Make the soup and just before serving add a tablespoonful of slightly salted whipped cream to each cup of soup.

The crackers are prepared by using various sandwich fillings between reception flakes or square crackers. For this dinner serve tomato and pimento fillings.

Make a stiff boiled salad dressing; chop just enough pimento and tomato into it to make it red; spread lightly on hot wafers, and serve at once.

The chicken is nicest if molded in a square mold which had slices of hard boiled egg in the bottom. Turn this out on lettuce leaves, and slice at the table.

If cauliflower is not obtainable use a very white cabbage instead. Soak either vegetable in salted water one hour. Parboil in salted water till tender. Drain. Pour over it a white sauce made of one cupful of cream, one tablespoonful of butter and one tablespoonful of flour. Beat this smooth before adding. Let all boil up together a few minutes.

If dry beans are used soak overnight, and cook slowly to make them keep their shape. Add only salt and

ONE 'FRISCO SOCIETY GIRL IS CLEARED OF SMUGGLING CHARGE; ANOTHER FINED

Miss Agnes Tillman.

The case against Miss Agnes Tillman, the San Francisco society girl, charged by United States custom authorities with having smuggled a large amount of wearing apparel and jewelry into this country, has been dropped. She convinced the authorities that her failure to declare on much of the goods which she brought to America from abroad was due to ignorance of the law.

Miss Tillman's aunt, Mrs. Agnes Mangels, also a San Francisco society woman, was less successful. She was required to pay a fine of $2,000. She and Miss Tillman were companions on the same boat.

COMMENCEMENT WEBER ACADEMY

Interesting Program, During Which Diplomas Are Presented to Graduates—Principal W. W. Sanderson Reviews the History of the Academy—Addresses by Graduates—Music a Feature of the Entertainment—Young People Are Congratulated.

The fourth event during the past week in which the class of '13 have been signally honored, and the climax of their school life occurred last night at the Weber academy, when, at the close of the twenty-fifth annual commencement exercises, twenty-seven young men and ladies from Ogden and thirty from outside towns, splendid student types, received their certificates of graduation.

The exercises began at 8:30 when, to the strains of the Kaiser Frederic March, played by the Academy orchestra, and amid the applause of their friends in the crowded auditorium the 57 graduates marched in and occupied the seats reserved for them.

The program was conducted under the direction of Principal W. W. Sanderson and the invocation was offered by President Charles F. Middleton. George Douglas, the popular local tenor, in good voice, then gave a beautiful rendition of the song, "Within Your Eyes, Dear," which was followed by the report of Principal Sanderson. The report was given in a clear and forceful manner and was frequently applauded.

Speaking on the educational advantages possessed by the academy, Principal Sanderson summarized as follows: "The organization and control of the institution. The purpose for which it was founded and the aim which it constantly maintains. The remarkable growth which it has made and its adaptation to the demand for vocational training. The splendid equipment which it possesses. The special activities with which it concerns itself. Its well controlled system of amusements. The lecture course maintained in connection with it. The great number of courses open to the option of the students. The high class faculty of men and women of great character and scholarship. The ever growing popularity of the school as indicated by its rapidly increasing enrollment. Its high efficiency is indicated by its many victories in contest. And the splendid testimonials of the leading educators of the state. Morgan McKay and Pearl Grover of the class of '12, in their respective order, following the principal's address, delivered the following excellent addresses, descriptive of the practical value of the modern system of vocational and normal education: Address by Morgan McKay.

"One of the first tasks our pioneer forefathers undertook after coming to these valleys was the establishment of a school system. In every small community one would find the little one-roomed log school house, where the children of all ages were taught the three R's, Reading, Riting and Rithmetick, as they sat upon hard benches made of upturned slabs. Here the smaller pupils would listen to the recitations of the older ones and in this way learn more than they would out of their own books. Then education consisted of reading from books, principally the Bible, writing upon slates and doing a little simple ciphering. Some of the teachers were severe men who believed in reaching the child through his skin rather than his mind.

"The schools held short sessions and these were held only during the winter months when nobody could work out of doors. As soon as the show began to disappear school would be dismissed and the boys and girls would go back to the farm to help their hard-working fathers and mothers.

"Gradually with the development of the farms the school system developed. The children had more time to attend school, more people came into the valley so that it was necessary to establish more and better schools. In the small towns and cities high schools and academies sprang up. More efficient teachers were secured and the child had a better chance for a broader and more technical education. More difficult subjects were introduced into the schools such as Latin, Greek, high mathematics and all forms of history and literature. Physical education was at first unthought of. All of the boys and girls, when through school, would go back on the farms and work with renewed energy to make it possible to return to school when it opened in the fall.

"Later, when it was noticed that some of the pupils became weak and unable to go on with their work, physical education was introduced. Systematic training was given the students to make their bodies strong enough to perform their proper duties while the mind was being so much used. But even this did not remedy the difficulty. These purely intellectual studies did not give the broad development and training which is so necessary in the making of a good citizen. For, as Henry Van Dyke says, 'The final result of true education is not a selfish scholar nor scornful critic of the universe, but an intelligent and faithful citizen who is determined to put all his powers at the service of his country and mankind.' Again, Dr. Woodward says, 'We believe that mental activity and growth are closely allied to physical activity and growth and that each is more readily and fully secured in connection with the other than by itself.' To obtain this development it was found necessary to introduce into the schools industrial education.

"Industrial education includes manual training, domestic science and arts, agriculture and other subjects which tend to develop the physical side of life. But because these things are practical is no reason why they do not develop the mind. Manual training is mental training through the hand and eye, just as history through mind and memory. A boy in order to master a subject, must use his mind. In learning to handle instruments the mind is the first thing which must grasp the problem. Then the hand act according to its direction. In working a boy must first plan everything he does. He must picture it mentally before he can even draw a plan or start a piece of work. The student is always designing and thinking of new things and must necessarily be using his mind every minute else he will make a failure of his work. Accuracy and exactness are the primary requirements along this line, so the hand and eye must be trained to do exactly the right thing at the right time. In the designing of his work new instruments must be used. Every line must be perfect and correspond with the others. The different scales must be worked out. Then the eye must see to it that these things are accurately and perfectly done. The hand must become accustomed to all kinds of instruments from the delicate pen of the designer to the hammer of the blacksmith. All kinds of machinery are used. For example let us consider the wood lathe. The wood is cut into the required lengths, placed in position and the machinery set in motion. Thus far the process is very simple, nearly any unskilled hand can do this part of the work. But when the chisel is being used it requires the utmost skill. The hand must be steady and the chisel must be held in place accurately for the least variation and the piece of work is spoiled. Who is there who would not be better off for this practical training. It makes the careful steady hand so needed by surgeons and offers recreation for the tired lawyer and business man.

"But even this training might have been secured in some other way. So this is not the only reason why industrial training was introduced into our schools. A few years ago manual labor such as farming and other occupations was looked down upon by the so-called upper class. These vocations were thought to be the work of the uneducated. The most substantial boys left the farm for school. They studied the purely intellectual subjects and were gradually weaned away from the farm and its environment. These boys would naturally follow along the business and professional lines. This left only those who were not ambitious for an education to manage and run the farms. Further discouragement was often given by some fathers who said, 'I have had no education and I set along a hired hand, why does my boy need it? Send the most energetic boys left and the less ambitious ones remained.'

"As the young men left the farm for business and professional lines the cities became over crowded. In the last fifty years the population of the cities has increased enormously while the population of the country districts has decreased proportionately. Why is it that men are seen going from house to house in the cities begging for food while in the country the farmers and tradesmen cannot find enough men to run the farms and factories. Someone has said, 'There would be no high cost of living problem to solve if the cities were not so crowded.'

"These are a few of the conditions which confronted the scientists and educators a few years ago. And among those who believed that industrial education would bring about a change in conditions were: Dr. C. Stanleigh Hall, Dr. Calvin M. Woodward, Superintendent F. C. Corral of Worcester, Mass., and Dr. Thomas M. Balliet, who established the first trade school in 1898. These prominent men saw the need of something which would develop the practical side of life along with the mental, and thus give a broader and more perfect view of life. The struggle for its establishment was a long and hard one, for there was great opposition even among prominent men. But the fight was won and it has been demonstrated beyond a doubt that its establishment was the right beginning.

"It is a well known fact that a man even though he may be highly developed mentally, who cannot control or direct his physical body is not a well educated man. The industrial training, coupled with mental training, makes a perfect education and develops harmoniously the entire body. This training gives one a chance to do practical things. A man's greatest joy comes from producing something which has never before been in the world. What a satisfaction it is to be able to take a piece of iron, wood or clay and mold and fashion it into something useful and beautiful. A boy who has this training will never be looking for something to do. If his mind be tired he can turn his attention to improving things around the house, repairing a shelf, fixing the electric light, or making some useful article. Industrial education has been introduced into the schools. Has it had the effect predicted by the planners who established it? Look at farming and farm life today. It is conducted upon a scientific basis. It is one of the most highly respected occupations a man can have. Boys leave the farm for school, but they nearly always return to apply the practical knowledge which they have obtained. Business and professional men are securing farms on which to rear their families. And everywhere the efficiency of tradesmen is increasing and the wages are increasing with the efficiency.

"The ideal has by no means been reached, for there are great possibilities in this field. Think for a moment of the development of our own manual training department. Six years ago it was started with a few tools and benches but with a man at its head who had perfection for his aim and determination for his motto. Under his direction the shop has grown from a very humble beginning to a modern manual training department in every respect.

"If such a change can come about in six short years how great are the possibilities of the future. Think of the benefit that a vacation school would be to the boy who cannot leave the city for the summer. Those who have nothing to do could work at the bench and thus not only amuse themselves but be of practical benefit to their families. And this is not all. The community would be benefited; for there would be no fire burning and hence no need of fire insurance. Not the mental or the physical alone would be developed but the "whole boy" would be educated and the result would be a true home builder and a perfect man."

Musical Feature.
The musical feature of the program the rendition of the cantata "The Wreck of the Hesperus," followed Miss Grover's address.

This was directed by Director Joseph Ballantyne, of the Weber academy choir, assisted by Professor E. W. Nichols and the Academy orchestra, with Robert Jones as accompanist.

Proceeding the rendition of the cantata, Mrs. Belle Salmon Ross read the poem, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," by Longfellow.

The singing of the composition occupied about twenty minutes and was much enjoyed by all. The choruses, sung by the choir, of 125 voices, were done in a most commendable manner and the solo parts, soprano and alto, were in the capable hands of Miss Elsie Shorten and William S. Wright.

Valedictory Address.
The valedictory address was made by the former president of the student body, Jesse C. Cottle, whose sincere and effective manner of delivery stamped him as one of the school's best public speakers. Mr. Cottle's address follows:

"There comes a time, it seems, in the history of every class when retrospection is due—when acknowledgment of those who are in a measure responsible for its success is proper, and we, the class of '13, feel that that time in our history is now.

"Of the many persons or institutions that have aided us along the pathway of life to the place at which we now stand, I wonder to which of all of them we should show the best gratitude. Should we indeed not be thankful to our kind parents at home for their watchful and tender care over us through all the critical times and periods of our lives? Should we not feel to express our thanks to our many friends who have helped us—who have perhaps spoken a cheerful or an encouraging word in time of depression or discouragement, who have given us a helping hand in time of need or who have in some other way made our course of progression brighter? May not our many teachers in school and church in the fifty years of their work of guidance and appreciation for their work of education? Yes, to all of these we feel that we owe a debt of gratitude.

"But yet, in addition to all these aids, as far as we are concerned, there has been a mightier influence during the past four years deserving of our thankfulness. There has been: an institution moulding our characters and guiding the current of our lives; an institution but for which perhaps we should be developed to a very different degree, socially, morally and intellectually, than we are now; an institution without which we should probably before now have been out in the busy world, striving for ourselves in a lowly, narrow way and never have known the higher culture and the better and more cheerful life. And as the name of this institution, students and teachers, does the class of '13 pronounce with reverence, the Weber academy.

"And, as we are about to leave her, our beloved home, and go out into our several fields of occupation, we feel that it is proper and fitting at this time to express our appreciation of our school—of what she has done for us and of what she is capable of doing for others.

"As the paramount tribute we wish to pay to Weber, we say, thanks for her training in character building. As I interpret the spirit and importance of school training, character is uppermost and should be given foremost attention. The first twenty years of a person's life is the all-important character forming period. So important is this period that what one will think and do for the remainder of his life will be determined very largely by what he has thought and done in his youth. If this be the fact, should it not be the duty of the schools to guard morals and develop character?"

"And are not the young people badly in need of such training? Why, everywhere the young people are growing up and reaching maturity without regard for respect and morals. Notice the boys of our town. Walk down 25th street and you will not need to go far to find young boys smoking using profane language or doing something else worse. Investigate for yourselves and you will find moral conditions among Ogden's young people that will astound you.

"Did you notice the report in the Herald-Republican of May 6 of our own capital city? Big headlines read thus: 'Special investigators find vice in many of Salt Lake's cafes and rooming houses.' According to the social service commission of the Episcopal church of that city, nine disorderly resorts are in operation which have been exposed and the names of eighteen more places are being checked over again before publishing.

ishing. This report was corroborated a few days later by the county officers, who desired to ascertain for themselves the moral conditions of the young people of their city.

"Here are a few statements taken from their report: 'Deploable conditions of moral depravity exist under the very noses of the police and city administration in Salt Lake; children are being lured to ruin in the worst type of dives, and immorality is spreading riot in child parlors, cafes and like resorts throughout the city. In these places children from one to 15 years of age were seen accompanied by persons who appeared to be their parents. In one resort a little girl not more than five or six years of age was out on the floor dancing around with half-drunken young fellows while the child's mother sat at a table drinking and applauding. Over in another corner sat a party of young men and women, all drunk, howling along to the tune of a rag-time piano player.

"Why, students and friends, if such conditions continue to exist and grow, what will eventually become of us? Not far in the future, I fear, I see the awful fate of the great Rome awaiting us—as when she by forgetting the higher duties of life and the noble position of women, fell from the splendor and power of the victor to the sorrow and degradation of the fallen and vanquished.

Benefited Many Who Had Lung Trouble

Those who suffer from Lung Trouble are generally troubled with night sweats, fever, loss of strength and little or no appetite. Eckman's Alternative is a medicine which has been most successful in stopping night sweats, reducing fever and promoting appetite, and many who have used it declare it saved their lives. Investigate what it did in this case:

"Dear Sir: For four years I was troubled with cough, which gradually became worse. I had night sweats and pains in my chest. I was losing my appetite and had become so thin and weak I could not attend to my household duties. A physician pronounced my disease Consumption. Not being satisfied, I was examined by the physicians of the Polyclinic Hospital. They also confirmed my trouble and I was ordered away for treatment. My nephew would not allow me to go until I had tried Eckman's Alternative. Before I had taken the medicine three weeks, I had marked relief, night sweats ceased, pain in the breast relieved, cough became loose and easy, fever left me and I commenced getting well. My health became normal. I am in excellent health now and have been for twelve years. I strongly recommend it."

THE STORY OF PANAMA

"Learn One Thing Every Day"

No. 2. AT WORK IN CULEBRA CUT

Copyright, 1913, by The Associated Newspaper School, Inc.

Lookout for the dirt train! This is heard all over the isthmus. No matter what else may be on the rails, it must "sidedrack" to let the dirt trains by. If a passenger train of the Panama railroad stops between stations, the reason given for the delay is usually, "We have taken a siding to let the dirt train by."

Whether these important trains are moving over the many miles of tracks built especially to enable them to reach the various dumping grounds, or running over the main line of the Panama railroad, it is all the same. Nothing can stop them, not even Colonel Goehals' private car. They have absolute right of way. All through the hot day, until the tropical sun has sunk behind the horizon of silhouetted palm and cocconut trees, the dirt trains are constantly rushing along from the great excavation to the dumping grounds. They are not even still when being loaded; for as the great gleams shovele pile on the dirt, the train slowly moves along, in order that the next dipper filled with earth can be dumped upon an empty part of the car, and when the last car is loaded, off to the dump it goes, at a speed that would do credit to an American train.

All through the years of yellow fever epidemics and the annual floods during the rainy season the dirt trains have never stopped. The men who operate them seem to be inspired by the greatness of the undertaking. Nothing short of death can stop them in their fierce efforts to keep the dirt moving.

Hundreds of these trains leave Culebra Cut every day, and a great many more receive their loads from various other excavations along the canal. Yet so perfect is the system of operating that an accident rarely occurs. In addition to the block system in use on the Panama railroad and some sections of the improved roads, flagmen are placed at all crossings and sidetracks. One colored flag controls the loaded trains, and one of another color the empties.

The greatest credit must be given the operators of these trains; for they have been on the job day in and day out, through periods of yellow fever, malaria, and other tropical diseases, to say nothing of the many times they have kept the trains moving when floods during the rainy season had completely covered the tracks.

DAY OF MISERY IN POLICE COURT

Frank Jones, J. J. Ryan, and Thomas Randolph had their names written upon one complaint read by Clerk Fulton in police court this morning. Vagrancy was the charge and each pleaded guilty after slight hesitation. It was alleged that the three had been living idly, and were making a living in a small way by begging, or selling cheap jewelry. In their personal effects were found begging cards and a cheap ring made to look like a wedding ring.

Thomas Randolph appeared lame and walked with a cane. When asked as to his trouble, Randolph stated that he had been run over by an automobile. The driver, he said, had run the wheel of the auto on his ankle and then stopped the car. Instead of backing, Randolph stated that the driver continued on over. He could not explain what difference it would have made in the injury sustained. Although the recent lameness did not coincide with the finding of the begging card, Judge W. H. Reeder took the man's case under advisement.

Jones was given 10 days after he stated that he had sold a ring for 35 cents and Ryan was given an opportunity to leave for Salt Lake where he said he had a job.

From the appearance of W. J. Wilson in court this morning the onlookers were expecting at any moment to see the man launch off into the ravings of a victim of delirium tremens. He could hardly stand and shook so he could scarcely speak.

Wilson was charged with begging and the patrolman stated that the begged whiskey instead of money. The man confessed that he had been on one hilarious spree for several days. When Judge Reeder sentenced him to serve five days in order to receive medical treatment, he tried to walk, but had to be assisted by Jailer Anderson.

The case against Seth Smith, charged with disturbing the peace, was dismissed when John Van Namee, charged with the same offense, pleaded guilty and took all the blame. Van Namee was given a sentence of 15 days, or $15, and told to report to the judge each week.

LON ROMNEY IS TO COACH THE HIGH SCHOOL

Lon Romney, star football player and athlete of the University of Utah, has been engaged by the board as coach for the Ogden High school and he will take up his duties next fall.

Upon invitation of Superintendent Mills, Coach Romney came to Ogden from Salt Lake this morning and was introduced to the students of the High school at a general assembly. The new coach was received with an ovation by the students who have read of, and witnessed, his ability in athletic lines. Mr. Romney was introduced to the school by Supt. Mills and Principal Henry Peterson also gave a short talk.

The new member of the High school faculty is a senior in the University of Utah and will receive his A. B. degree at the commencement exercises next week.

Immediately after his introduction to the students of the school, Mr. Romney returned to the University where he is completing his final examinations.

"THE TWO GLASSES"

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX
There sat two glasses filled to the brim
On a rich man's table, rim to rim:
One was ruddy and red as blood,
And one was as clear as the crystal flood.
Said the Glass of wine to his paler brother,
"Let us tell tales of the past to each other—"

"I can tell of a banquet, and revel and mirth
Where I was king, for I ruled in might;
And the proudest and grandest souls
On earth
Fell under my touch, as the' struck with blight.
From the heads of kings I have torn the crown;
From the heights of fame I have hauled men down.

"I have blasted many an honored name—
I have taken virtue and given shame;
I have tempted the youth with a sip, a taste,
That has made his future a barren waste—
For greater than any king am I,
Or than any army under the sky.

"I have made the arm of the driver fall,
And sent the train from its iron rail;
I have made good ships go down at sea,
And the shrieks of the lost were sweet to me.
Fame, strength, wealth, genius, before me fall,
And my might and power are over all.

"Ho! ho! pale brother," laughed the wine,
"Can you boast of deeds as great as mine?"
Said the glass of water: "I cannot boast
Of a thing dethroned or a murdered host.
But I can tell of hearts that were sad
By my crystal drops made light and glad.

er and pain;
I have made the parched meadows grow fertile with grain;
I can tell of the powerful whirl of the mill,
That ground out the flour and turned at my will
I can tell of manhood debased by you,
That I have lifted and crowned anew.

"I cheer, I help, I strengthen and aid,
I gladden the heart of man and maid,
I set the chained winc captive free,
And all are better for knowing me."

These are the tales they told each other—
The glass of wine and its paler brother—
As they sat together, filled to the brim
On the rich man's table, rim to rim.

LUCKY SURVIVOR
Dura—That charming Miss Peach seems to have quit a number of eligible young men in her train.
Dick—Yes, and one of these days there's going to be a smash-up to that train, with only one survivor.

KILLS BAD MOROS; IS GIVEN A MEDAL

Captain Louis J. Van Schaick.

Captain Louis J. Van Schaick, U. S. A., has just been awarded the congressional medal of honor for distinguished gallantry in action, the highest mark of honor that the government can bestow on its soldiers.

The occasion for which he was rewarded was in the Philippines when at the head of a detachment of sixteen men they came upon a large band of Moros. Realizing that if he gave the order to retreat his men would be shot down, Van Schaick ordered them to charge and led them to a successful encounter. Three natives fell as a result of his valorous deed.

HAIL STORM TO THE NORTH OF OGDEN

A freak of the storm of yesterday afternoon was a downpour of hail in the north part of the city, extending from Seventeenth street to Five Points, considerable damage being done to garden stuff.

The hailstones were not firm, but that they were sufficiently hard and heavy to beat down and tear to pieces tender plants. No damage was done in the orchards.

Former Councilman J. B. Dana, who has an extensive garden on Eleventh street, says that had the hailstones been as hard as last year, nothing would have been left of gardens, orchards or any other crop. He says that the hail was wet and soft, yet that it cut into shreds some of the tender plants, such as cabbage and lettuce.

DIRECTORS OF CLUB ARE PRESENT

H. M. Rowe, I. L. Reynolds, W. D. Brown, J. W. Abbott and E. W. Manson, directors of the Ogden Baseball association, went to Salt Lake yesterday and had the satisfaction of seeing the Ogden team trim the arrogant Salt Lakers.

The pleasant sensation gave favorable opportunity for the growth of the baseball bugs in their systems. Consequently, when the time came to day for the train to leave Ogden for Salt Lake shortly before the game, those gentlemen were on hand to purchase tickets for the trip to Lucas park. There were several other fans on the 1 o'clock Hamberger.

The average man fears a storm almost as much as he fears his wife.

"The conditions of the future depend upon the training of the young today. And so, parents, send your boys and girls to a church school, where the soul as well as the mind and the hand will be guided. Ever since we entered here we have found that character building is distinctive of church school work. If you send your children here you will not need to fear for their proper development, for we know that they will be guided daily, as we have been, along the path of righteousness. I care not what you may intend to bequeath to your children, you can leave them nothing so precious, so sure to bring returns of the most value, as a clean upright character, for if character be fashioned rightly the course of the future of your children is clear, and you will never have cause in the future to be ashamed of them.

"Here at Weber we have our devo-
