

Whitecaps beat RSL 4-1 in game with 2 interim coaches

ASSOCIATED PRESS

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Ryan Gauld had a goal and two assists and the Vancouver Whitecaps beat Real Salt Lake 4-1 on Sunday night to give Vanni Sartini a victory over fellow interim coach Pablo Mastroeni in their debuts.

Sartini, Vancouver's director of methodology, took over as coach Friday after Marc Dos Santos was fired following a 4-3 loss to Pacific FC of the Canadian Premier League in the quarterfinals of the Canadian Championship. Mastroeni also was put in charge Friday, with Real Salt Lake firing Freddy Juarez.

Brian White and Florian Jungwirth also scored to help the Whitecaps (6-7-8) extend their unbeaten streak to nine games.

Vancouver took the lead in the 33rd minute on an own goal by Real Salt Lake's Marcelo Silva. White scored in the 53rd, Gauld in the 64th and Jungwirth in the 69th. Anderson Julio scored for Real Salt Lake (7-8-6) in the 90th minute.

The Whitecaps played their first eight home games of the season at Real Salt Lake's Rio Tinton Stadium in Sandy, Utah, because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

US Open

From B1

He will debut Tuesday night as he tries to break a tie for the men's mark of 20 majors with Roger Federer and Rafael Nadal and become the first man since Rod Laver in 1969 to complete a calendar-year Grand Slam.

Monday night's schedule in Ashe included No. 2 Daniil Medvedev and two-time U.S. Open champion Naomi Osaka. She was set to make her return to Slam action after pulling out of the French Open for a mental health break.

Earlier Monday, there were victories for 2017 champion Sloane Stephens, who edged Madison Keys 6-3, 1-6, 7-6 (7) in a rematch of their final four years ago; multiple Grand Slam title winners and former No. 1s Angelique Kerber, Simona Halep and Garbiñe Muguruza; 2020 runner-up Victoria Azarenka and 17-year-old American Coco Gauff.

"I just remember, like, last year, not necessarily being bored, but it was just so quiet for the U.S. Open," the 21st-seeded Gauff said after advancing to face Stephens with a 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 comeback against Magda Linette. "I definitely missed the buzz."

Andy Murray, of Great Britain, reacts after scoring a point against Stefanos Tsitsipas, of Greece, during the first round of the US Open tennis championships Monday in New York.

Some spectators griped about delays getting in, which the U.S. Tennis Association said were largely caused by the time it took to inspect bags at the entry gates.

The USTA added that checking for proof of vaccination required to attend the event this year went smoothly and did not contribute in a significant way to long lines.

Those lucky enough to be in Ashe rose and roared in unison when Murray smacked a forehand winner to claim the third set. He raised his right hand overhead and leaned forward as he shouted, "I'm not ... done! Let's go!"

But it was Tsitsipas who wasn't finished. He got treatment from a trainer on his left foot after that set, then headed off court again a set later for several minutes.

After he got broken right away and fell behind 2-0 in the fifth, Murray offered this observation on court: "It's never taken me that long to go to the toilet. Ever?"

Murray explained later he thought the interruptions played a role.

"It's just disappointing, because I feel it influenced the outcome of the match. I'm not saying I necessarily win that match, for sure, but it had influence on what was happening after those breaks," he said. "You could argue that I shouldn't let that affect me. But genuinely it is difficult, like, when you're playing such a brutal match in those conditions to have those breaks. Physically you can't stop that from affecting you. Mentally, yes, but physically you can't."
