He was early placed upon his own resources, for when he was about two years old his father left home for the western country, never to return, and is supposed to have died in New Orleans.

At the age of eighteen, just a year after the organization of the church, he became somewhat thoughtful on religious subjects. In the spring of 1832, Lyman E. Johnson and Orson Pratt visited the neighborhood where he lived and Amasa believed in their doctrine and was baptised by the former on April 27, 1832, being confirmed the following day by Orson Pratt.

On account of his joining the Latter-day Saints ill feeling arose against him, in his uncle's family where he resided, and for that reason he set off for a journey with only scanty provisions and clothing. He arrived at Lyons, Wayne Co., New York, and hired out to Thomas Lackey, who, by-the-bye, was the man who purchased Martin Harris' farm when he sold it to raise money for printing the Book of Mormon. He only stopped here a couple of weeks, and then made his way to Buffalo, and thence to Cleveland, Ohio, and later to Hyrum, Portage Co., Ohio, where he was received by Father Johnson and family. He soon met the Prophet Joseph Smith and was given a living testimony by the spirit that he was a man of God. He was called on a mission on the 23d of August, 1832, by the Prophet Joseph, who ordained him an elder, and labored during the following winter with Zerubabel Snow in southern Ohio and Cable Co., Virginia. They returned to Kirtland early the following spring having added forty souls to the church.

He filled a second mission with William F. Cahoon, leaving March 21, 1833, and journeying as far as Chautauqua and Cattaraugus counties, New York. During this mission he held 150 meetings and there were about a hundred souls added to the church. While on this mission the call reached him to go to Missouri. Arriving in Kirtland on May 1st, 1834, a few days later he joined Zion's Camp at New Portage, and traveled with this organization to Missouri, suffering all the privations and difficulties of that famous trip. Having attended the dedication of the Kirtland temple, in the spring of 1836, in company with Elder Nathan Tanner he filled another mission that year to the state of New York.

In 1837, he went to Missouri and there experienced all the persecutions to which those of his belief were subjected. His family in the meantime were enabled to move to Illinois and he joined them in March, 1839. During that year he made two dangerous trips to Missouri for the purpose of assisting Elder Parley P. Pratt and his fellow-prisoners and to attend to unsettled business.

He settled in Iowa in the spring of 1840, building a cabin for his family on the half-breed Indian tract in Lee county. In 1841, with his family, he moved to Nauvoo and later was called on a mission to northern Illinois and Wisconsin. He was subsequently directed in company with Peter Haws to go on a mission to secure means to build the Nauvoo temple and Nauvoo House, going as far east as Indiana.

In the spring of 1842 he was sent on a mission to the state of Tennessee with Horace K. Whitney and others. On the 20th of August, 1842, Elder Lyman was ordained to the apostleship, and the following month sent on a mission to southern Illinois in company with Elder George A. Smith, being a part of the time in company with Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball.

He went through many of the privations and trials at Nauvoo and filled many other missions in the states around about. In the spring of 1844 he went to Nauvoo to attend the April Conference, and it was here determined that he should go to Boston. He had proceeded only as far as Cincinnati (remaining until July), when he received the news of the massacre of the prophet and patriarch, Joseph and Hyrum Smith. He was recalled to Nauvoo, arriving there July 31, 1844, and was present at the meeting at Nauvoo on August 8th following when the twelve apostles were acknowledged as the presiding quorum of the church. He rendered efficient aid during the exodus of his people from Illinois in 1846, and was one of the pioneers of Utah in 1847.

In 1848 he led a large company of immigrants to the great Salt Lake valley. In 1850 he went on a mission to California, returning September 30th, of that year, and in 1851 he and Apostle Charles C. Rich were appointed to lead a company of settlers to California. This company left Payson, March 24, 1851, and arrived at San Bernardino the following June. It was a few months later, in September, that the ranch of San Bernardino was purchased, and a settlement was located. This was continued until 1857, when the Johnston army-Echo Canyon hostilities caused it to disintegrate when most of the inhabitants had gone to Utah.

In 1860 he filled a mission to Great Britain, arriving July 27th, and in connection with Apostle Charles C. Rich presided over the European mission until March 14, 1862, when he returned home. It was while on this mission that he delivered the remarkable sermon at Dundee, Scotland, March 16, 1862, in which he denied the atonement of the Savior. Some time later he was summoned to answer the charge of having preached false doctrine, and he acknowledged his error, and signed a document January 23, 1867, in which he asked forgiveness of the authorities. Soon after, however, he again preached in the same strain, and was finally excommunicated May 12, 1870. He died at Fillmore, Millard county, Utah, February 4, 1877.

When Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum were assassinated at Carthage jail, in his native state of Illinois, President Francis M. Lyman was four and one-half years old. Only as a child would know and remember such great personages was it possible for him to know them, but in his mature manhood he has had a thorough knowledge of all their successors and through them a better understanding of those who have gone before. At home and abroad for fifty years, President Lyman has been in the missionary service, beginning the work at the age of twenty. He has officiated in the offices of elder, seventy, high priest and an apostle during the past thirty years of his life. Three missions in Europe, occupying all together seven and one-half years, have been filled by him.

Elder Lyman's childhood was spent in Illinois, Indiana, Nebraska, Utah and California. For six years he lived at San Bernardino, Cal., and he was married there in 1857. During that year he returned to Utah, it being the time of the Echo Canyon imbroglio, and resided later in Cedar City, Beaver, and Farmington. After his first mission in 1860-2, he located with his father and family, under the direction of President Brigham Young, at Fillmore, and it was his home for fourteen years. During this time he engaged enthusiastically in all the activities of the people of Millard county, being much of the time their public and official servant.

On March 23, 1866, he was appointed assistant assessor of internal revenue for District No. 6 of Utah, by Hugh McCulloch, then secretary of the U. S. treasury. He served in this capacity under the following assessors: Col. J. C. Little, A. L. Chetlain, John E. Smith, Richard V. Morris, and Dr. John P. Taggart.

It was in 1866 that Elder Lyman with his father built the O. K. Flour Mills of Fillmore, and he was largely engaged in the flour and grain trade as well as in many more business enterprises.

In September, 1867, he was commissioned by Governor Durkee as lieutenant colonel of the first regiment of militia in the Pauvan military district. Two years later, 1869, he was elected a member of the house of representatives of the general assembly of the state of Deseret for Millard county and subsequently represented that county in the territorial legislature of Utah in the 17th, 18th, 22d and 23d sessions, and Tooele county in the 24th and 25th sessions. In the 25th session (1882), he acted as speaker of the house, while President Joseph F. Smith was president of the council (now senate).

He served as high councilor in Millard stake about six years, and in political activities occupied the positions of district attorney, superintendent of common schools, county and probate clerk and recorder. He was also secretary and treasurer of the county coöperative companies, and did the land business of the county, such as homesteading, preëmpting and the entering of townsites with Probate Judge Edward Partridge and Mayor Joseph V. Robison. It was during the organization of the stakes of Zion by President Brigham Young in 1877 [died Aug. 29 of that year], that Elder Lyman was called to preside over the Tooele stake of Zion when it was organized by [Apostle] President John Taylor and the other apostles on June 24, 1877. Later he was chosen by election of the people as a representative of Tooele county, and county clerk and recorder, serving in those positions about four years. He had a most thrilling experience in the fight with the liberals, and it was during his term of office that the people succeeded in redeeming Tooele county from their unrighteous rule.

With Elders Erastus Snow, Brigham Young, Jr., and eight others, he went on a mission, in 1880, to San Juan county, Utah, and into Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. During this trip they traveled 1,800 miles with teams. It was during this year and while at Orderville, Kane county, on the 10th of October, that he was chosen at the general semi-annual conference of the church, one of the council of the twelve apostles, John Henry Smith being chosen at the same time. Both were ordained by President John Taylor and Wilford Woodruff on the 27th of October, 1880, in the Endowment House.

He filled a second mission to Europe in 1873-4-5, just before moving to Tooele. Since he was chosen an apostle he has been engaged exclusively in the spiritual and temporal welfare of the people of the church. He has visited the stakes of Zion over and over again and given counsel and advice to the people serving towards their spiritual growth and strength. In a temporal way he has served as a director in such institutions as Z. C. M. I., Zion's Savings Bank and Trust Company, Consolidated Wagon and Machine Company, Home Fire Insurance Company, Heber J. Grant & Company, Deseret National Bank, Beneficial Life Insurance Company, Zion's Coöperative Home Building and Real Estate Company, president and director Utah Pioneers Book Publishing Company, etc.

After the death of President Brigham Young, Jr., in 1903, he was sustained president of the council of the twelve and was blessed and set apart for that presidency in the temple by President Joseph F. Smith and his counselors and the twelve, on the 7th of July, 1904, since which time he has filled another mission to Europe, presiding over the European mission, May, 1901, to January, 1904, besides laboring diligently in his office and calling at home. While on this last mission, he not only visited many of the European countries, including Russia, but also the Holy Land, and Egypt, and wherever he went he turned the keys for the establishment of liberty and the preaching of the Gospel. His traveling companions were Elders Sylvester Q. and Joseph J. Cannon.

Mr. McAllister was born between Third and Fourth South on the west side of State street, Salt Lake City, and has spent his entire life in Utah. He served a carpenter's apprenticeship and worked on the tabernacle; helped to build the pipes for that famous pipe-organ. In the early days of his boyhood, the principal necessaries of life were food and clothes for his mother's family, and he turned his time to any occupation that would produce these necessaries. He followed farming, teaming and carpenter contracting. As he grew older and the mines opened at Park City, he became actively engaged in teaming and freighting, having a contract to haul the machinery for the Marsac mill, which was one of the first mills built at Park City. He served an apprenticeship as a wagonmaker and blacksmith, which occupation he followed for several years. In 1886 engaged in the real estate business; during 1887-88 engaged in mining in Marysvale, Utah, going from there to Ophir and then to Bingham. Provision inspector under Mayor Bascom two years. Head salesman and assistant manager of the Studebaker Bros. Co., 1897-1906. In 1902 organized the McAllister Bros. Sheep Co. (John D. H. and James G. obtained through the Home and Colonial school of London, prior to coming to Utah in 1861, with his parents, by oxteam in the Homer Duncan independent company. They located at Ogden. From October, 1861 to 1866, he was employed on a farm, which his father owned. In 1866 he went to Bear River, Boxelder county, to a place called "Hampton's Bridge," a station on the Wells-Fargo Co. stage line, and remained there 2 years. In 1869 moved from Bear River to Corinne. The town was just started and there he engaged with the construction company for the building of the Union Pacific railroad and remained with it until the completion of the lines at Promontory, Utah. He left Promontory on the morning that Governor Stanford, of California, drove the golden spike. From there following the Union Pacific east into the Bitter Creek country, remaining with that company working on bridges until some time in 1871. From early 1871 to 1879 he was a brakeman and conductor on the Central Pacific railroad running between Ogden and San Francisco and worked between Ogden, Toano and Wells, Nev. In 1879 he went the way of most conductors and determined to enter a commercial life, and started in the produce and commission business on 24th street, Ogden, operating there successfully for a little over 2 years. In 1883 he went to Bullionville, Nev., for the Bullionville Smelting Co., whose interests were safeguarded by Messrs. W. H. Godbe and Benjamin Hampton, and remained there until the winter season of 1883 and 1884, at which time their business in Nevada closed down. In the winter season of 1883 and 1884 he came to Salt Lake City and started with the aid of Messrs. Heber J. Grant and Joshua F. Grant the implement and vehicle business under the title of Grant-Odell & Co.; in a little over a year this was changed to Grant-Odell & Co. (incorporated). In 1885 the business was merged into the Co-operative Wagon & Machine Co. and remained under that title until 1902. In 1902 it was merged with the Consolidated Implement Co., and since 1902 he has been general manager of the Consolidated Wagon & Machine Co., which operates at some 60 points in Utah, Idaho, Wyoming and eastern Nevada, and whose annual sales are about three million dollars. The company's paid up capitalization is two and a half million dollars. He is a director in the Utah State National bank and the Bank of Garland; vice-president and director of the George Romney Lumber Co.; director H. J. Grant & Co., insurance agency; vice-president and director of the board of governors of the Commercial club, Salt Lake City; director of the Pittsburg-Salt Lake Oil Co.; vice-president and director of Rich Lands Irrigation Co.; vice-president and director of the Rexburg Drug Co., Rexburg, Idaho; vice-president and director of the Wright Mercantile Co., Idaho Falls, Idaho; director of the Opex Consolidated Mines Co., of Utah; president and director Odell-Wright Investment Co.; director in the Utah Independent Telephone Co.; director in the Sugar City Hardware & Lumber Co., Sugar City, Idaho; vice-president and member board of directors of the Utah Pioneers Book Publishing Co., and vice-president and director of the Farmers' and Stockgrowers' bank.

Was baptized Jan. 28, 1862. Started for Utah April 4, 1862, with his mother, brothers and a sister; his father, sister and youngest brother not coming. They walked the entire distance from the Missouri river to Salt Lake City. Moved to Pleasant Grove in fall of 1862, to Gunnison, San Pete county, April, 1863. Raised a crop and hauled wheat to Camp Floyd for U. S. soldiers on contract of President Brigham Young. This paid their immigration transportation. Moved to Richfield March, 1865. 128 claims of 20 acres each were distributed among the settlers, and they surveyed and built with spade and ahovel a canal, nine miles long and nine to twelve feet wide, to irrigate this land; the first water reached Richfield March 22d. Food was very scarce, the nearest grist mill being at Manti, so wheat was ground in a hand mill. Tea was $15 per pound and money almost unknown, taxes and salaries being paid in produce. In 1866 the Indians started their depredations, killed many settlers, drove the people in from Glen Cove and other outlying settlements, necessitating placing the town under guard, as also the herds, and men had to work together in squads for protection. In April, 1867, Richfield was abandoned, and the settlement moved to Fountain Green.

Missionary to Denmark in 1871, and visited his father. Had charge of Hjorring branch of the church at Osth; traveling elder in Aalborg. Returned to Richfield June 22, 1872, bringing with him his youngest brother. Set apart first counselor to William H. Seegmiller April, 1877; ordained bishop of first ward July 25, 1877, by Erastus Snow, remaining bishop until 1894, when the wards were united, and he was set apart as first counselor to Bishop Theodore Brandley, which position with that of acting bishop he held until March 25, 1899, when he was ordained high councilor, until Sept. 18, 1910. He was made patriarch Sept. 24, 1899; member prayer circle 28 years; superintendent Sunday school first ward three years, released on account of polygamous prosecution; arrested for unlawful cohabitation May 24, 1888, sentenced to four months in state penitentiary and a fine of $200; again arrested August, 1892, and diacharged; again on Oct. 11, 1894, sentenced to 30 days in penitentiary; again Oct. 21, 1899, and fined $150 by Judge W. M. McCarty; all of these offenses were for "unlawful cohabitation." Is the father of 22 children, 14 of whom are living and appear in this genealogy. Was city councilman three years, school trustee two years, treasurer of Sevier stake tabernacle, disbursing $27,000 in its construction. Connected with many co-operative institutions.

Utah (daughter of Orange Warner and Mary E. Tyler, pioneers October, 1851, with Shurtliff part of the way, the remainder alone). She was born July 13, 1852. Their children: Ruby b Aug. 5, 1872, m. John A. Ray and family arrived in Fillmore, Utah, in the spring of 1854, where they found about 20 families who had built a mud wall 10 feet high around 50 acres of ground for the protection of their families against Indians. These Indians were known at that time as the Walker band. After the death of Walker, however, the notorious Black Hawk dominated the tribes for many years. These Indians were very numerous and committed many depredations, stealing stock and killing many people. John A. Ray was the first Indian agent in this part of the country, getting his appointment in 1858. This gave his son, Joseph E. Ray, a splendid opportunity to learn the ways of the red man. He became at a very early date an expert with the bow and arrow and sported with them in all their pastimes; in fact, almost lived with them until he was 15 years of age. He developed into a splendid shot and a good horseman; in fact, was as wild as the Indians themselves. Later he joined the state militia and continued in the service for four years and until honorably discharged.

During these early days the white boys and Indian papooses had many battles, using slings for weapons.

That with his early experience with the bow and arrow, associated with a natural inclination to the use of firearms, was responsible for the fact that he developed into an expert shot, and in later years he killed a great amount of game of all kinds; probably 3,000 deer.

As a young man he was engaged in the cattle business, and he made two trips; one to Abilene, Kansas, in 1870, the other to Cheyenne, Wyo., in 1877.

After he grew to manhood he assisted greatly in ridding the country of many outlaws, among whom were the "Ney" and "Ben Tasker" gangs. Following closely upon the days of Indian outbreaks came a period when the early settlers had nearly as much trouble with the white outlaws. Among some of the thrilling experiences in which he figured conspicuously was the capture of eight highwaymen about Jan. 20, 1883. These outlaws had held up a Southern Pacific train at Montello, Utah, about 100 miles west from Ogden. They first captured the station, stampeding eight Chinese section men who fled into the hills and froze to death. This was one of the coldest periods in the history of the state, the thermometer reaching 40 degrees below zero. These highwaymen flagged the incoming express train and undertook to rob it. The messenger, however, barricaded himself in his car, fought several hours holding the robbers at bay, while they were riddling his car with bullets. When the incoming train came in sight they retreated in a southerly direction. The next day they were pursued by the sheriff with a posse, who were waylaid and captured by the robbers and their horses and firearms, etc., taken away, and they were privileged to return home afoot. On their retreat through the country the robbers committed a number of other crimes. At Deep Creek they robbed the Devine store, and also entered a woman's house and robbed her, who soon after died from fright.

About this time, J. E. Ray was making a farm at Deseret. One day six men, heavily armed, rode into the town of Deseret, and from their general demeanor it was immediately assumed by the citizens that there was something unusual in their visit. W. A. Ray, an older brother, was at that time running a store in the small settlement, and he informed his brother Joseph that these strangers were buying large quantities of cartridges, and that this action on their part looked very suspicious. These men made arrangements with the people of Deseret, by which they were to take care of their horses on the range. This, however, was only a ruse, and given for the purpose of hiding their identity. It developed later that they had prepared a strong fortification in the top of the mountain range which lay to the northwest of this community. John Sharp was a leading railroad man in the territory, and knowing that J. E. Ray and G. W. Crapper had at different times captured outlaws, wired them to be on the alert, and described these strangers. Messrs. Ray and Crapper knew immediately that he had reference to the suspicious men in question. They at once organized a party to go out and intercept them or attack them in their mountain fortification.

This party left Deseret at one o'clock on the morning of Jan. 20, 1883, and rode about 70 miles in a northwesterly direction. As they approached the mountains they stopped and sent two of their men, Edward Craft and Charles Webb, on a scouting expedition. These scouts were captured by the outlaws and held until the next day, when they were relieved by a rescuing party. "The party" traveled until sunset in a northerly direction when they saw two men riding up a long draw or hollow. Upon the first sight of these men they dropped back under cover, hitched their horses and cautiously slipped over the hills to a point of advantage. As "the party" came to the hill top they looked down into the hollow below, and at a distance of 250 yards again saw these two men. The pursuing party was then directly south from, and above them. They called to them to throw up their hands. Instead of surrendering, however, they slipped off their horses, dropped their guns across the saddles and opened fire. There was a lively exchange of shots for a few minutes, the result being that both robbers were badly wounded and their horses killed. At this juncture two more outlaws came in sight, and they also were captured. The posse was then about seven miles from the fortification, and the weather extremely cold, it being 20 degrees below zero. They could not make a fire, for fear the four uncaptured men now in the stronghold might see the smoke and escape. They waited until twelve o'clock at night for a detachment from their party, to get a wagon and return so that the wounded men might be sent to the railroad. At three o'clock in the morning, the pursuing party was reenforced by 15 other fighting men from all over the country. They then proceeded to the fortification, seven miles distant, and there they captured the remainder of the gang. These men were all sent to Carson City prison for from 12 to 15 years.

He was one of the pioneer movers in the opening up of lands by means of reservoir irrigation systems, and took an active part in purchasing and cultivating large tracts of dry farm land. He has also assisted in developing mines at Rico, Colo., and in other places.

It has always been claimed and tacitly acknowledged by authorities, that he was really the first of the advance party of "Mormon" pioneers to gaze upon the beauties of the great Salt Lake Valley, on the 23d day of July, 1847. He was hunting for some of their driving stock that had strayed away during the night. Arriving on the top of the mountain, which afterward was called Little Mountain, he beheld that strange and wonderful body of water, Great Salt Lake. On looking back toward the camp, he is said to have discerned Orson Pratt coming up toward his view-place on the crest of the mountain. When Pratt came up, the two stood and gazed upon and admired the exquisite panorama spread out in a marvelous scenic expanse. He then went on and drove in the stock, and with them returned to camp. He afterward found that Pratt had had Thomas Bullock record him as the first to see the valley. The characteristic of the man was duty before glory or notoriety, and the incident seemed forgotten, as proper credit was never rendered. It was always said that Heber Chase Kimball acknowledged that Redden was the first of the advance company of "Mormons" to see the valley.

He staked and laid the overland route from Salt Lake City to California, and the Overland Stage Company "got away" with the road, but retained the same names he had christened the rivers, creeks, peaks, hills, fords and loitering places in that vast overland expanse until then practically unknown. The commerce of a great nation now rolls over this highway. He was at one time justice of the peace in Tooele county, and three times at Summit county. He was U. S. deputy marshal under Leonard Phillips and was known in all the pioneer camps as a bold and fearless man. He possessed and exhibited those traits of character which were essential to blazing a trail or performing the miracle of reclamation now greeting the tired eye of the traveler. He was a member of the 35th quorum seventies at the time of his demise, and had joined the church when very young. He was private detective and bodyguard to Joseph Smith, saving him from many serious and threatened troubles. He returned in 1847 to Winter Quarters. Justice of the peace in Tooele county, and in Summit county, Utah; deputy marshal under Leonard Phillips. Died Aug. 30, 1891, Hoytsville, Utah.

Left without a father at an early age, he helped to support his mother and a large family, but married at 18 years of age. By insistent economy became the owner of two small sailing vessels, which were used for fishing expeditions. These, with his other belongings, he sold, and with the funds he and his wife came to America to become a part in building up the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which faith they had embraced, having previously been allied with the Presbyterian sect. Immediately after arriving in Salt Lake he located in Davis county, where he lived until March 24, 1880, dying at the age of 84.

SEWELL, JOSEPH (son of Joseph Sewell and Sarah Stevens). Born Nov. 13, 1819, Norfolk, Eng. Came to Utah Sept. 8, 1861.

Family home Weber Co., Utah.

Began working as apprentice in shipyard at fifteen years of age after having received common school education and continued at this trade seven years. His father had preceded him to America and he, likewise, turned his all into money and on March 21, 1860, set sail for New York City. Reached St. Louis May 15, 1861. Joined a company of immigrants who were starting to Utah, arriving in Salt Lake City Sept. 8, 1861, and locating at Ogden the same year. There, after much hard labor, with the characteristic energy for which he was noted, he placed his family in comfortable circumstances. Soon after arriving there he decided the teachings and principles of the Mormon faith were so entirely contrary to his idea and belief that he withdrew from this church and never had anything further to do with it. However, he took an active part in developing and building up that section of the west. He took up a homestead just west of Ogden, making this his permanent home. Helped to erect the first schoolhouse built in this section, and labored incessantly in the upbuilding of the industrial life of Ogden. He died in September, 1894, and his wife passed away four years later. His son, George B. Sewell, was drowned Nov. 30, 1861, while fording the Weber river with a yoke of oxen. Of the three remaining sons none ever had any connection with the Mormon church, and like their father, were opposed to the teachings of that faith.

His early training was amid the scenes and vicissitudes incident to his father's martyrdom and the driving of the Latter-day Saints to the Rocky mountains from Nauvoo, Ill. With his mother he left Nauvoo in 1846 when only 8 years old and drove an oxteam across the state (then territory) of Iowa to Council Bluffs. The following year he drove an oxteam from the Missouri river to Salt Lake valley, enduring all the hardships of the journey over the plains and barren country intervening, and performing much labor that was required of the men. His opportunities for schooling were limited, and his early education was chiefly acquired from his mother. She left him an orphan at the age of 14 years. In 1854 he went to the Hawaiian Islands on a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, where he remained four years, mastering the native tongue. After returning in 1858 he officiated as sergeant-at-arms in the Utah territorial legislature (1858-59), and upon its adjournment went to England with his cousin, Samuel H. B. Smith, there laboring in the ministry. In 1864, after his return from England, he again went to Hawaii and continued his ecclesiastical labors. Upon returning to Utah he served as a member of the Salt Lake City municipal council and as a member of the territorial legislature, and in 1882 was president of the legislative council. He presided over the constitutional convention held in Utah in 1882, but was debarred as a legislator by the Edmunds law. He served eight years as a clerk in the historian's office and was active in church work, serving as a missionary for the church and in various positions in Davis and Salt Lake stakes of Zion. He went on a second mission to Great Britain in 1874, and on a third mission in 1877. He was ordained an apostle July 1, 1866, and became a member of the council of the twelve in 1867. In 1880 he was chosen to be second counselor to President John Taylor and also served as counselor to President Wilford Woodruff and later to President Lorenzo Snow. Following the death of the latter he was sustained as president of the church, which office he now holds.

STEWART, DR. WILLIAM MITTON (son of Isaac Mitton Stewart and Elizabeth White). Born Sept. 5, 1859, Draper, Utah.

Married Sarah E. Vincent Dec. 17, 1884, Salt Lake City. She was a young woman of strong character, with a remarkable educational insight, and one who has been a great factor in his educational career.

He spent his early boyhood working on his father's farm, and while the plow was being guided by his youthful hands upturning the fertile soil, his thoughts soared upward in primitive aspirations toward an ethical ideal of life and education.

He attended the University of Deseret at the age of 20 and came in direct and intimate contact with some of Utah's pioneers of education—Karl G. Maeser, John R. Park, J. B. Toronto and others. Graduating in 1883, he took up the profession of teaching and his school became noted throughout the state. Instrumental in organizing literary societies, he finally accumulated an enormous library. Elected county superintendent of schools in 1885, which then included the schools of Salt Lake City.

In 1888 he became a member of the Utah University faculty, and for 25 years his labors were untiring in building up its departments of education. He had the utilitarian idea of education and worked it out in his everyday life. Regent of the university four years, he later was placed at the head of the normal school and it became the School of Education. Under his deft direction the training school became world-famed and the prominent educators of the country have marveled at its thoroughness and the material it has turned out of its halls.

In 1899 he did post-graduate work at the University of Chicago, working with Dr. John Dewey, Colonel Parker and Dr. Harper. While there he presented many papers that received marked recognition.

In 1897 the University of Utah conferred upon him the degree of Master of Didactics, a title well-earned by his devotion to the university and his marked ability.

Having traveled throughout the United States, attending the meetings of the National Education Association, delivering lectures and presenting papers before national conventions and meetings of the national superintendents, he was just completing a new course of study and had worked out an entirely new scheme of industrial work for Utah, when his exemplary life closed June 26, 1913, mourned by thousands throughout the United States.

He was baptized into the Mormon Church May 9, 1836, at Toronto, Canada, and ordained an elder by Apostle Parley P. Pratt; shortly afterward he was set apart to preside over the Church in Upper Canada. In March, 1837, he visited Kirtland, where he first met the Prophet Joseph Smith, and was his guest while sojourning there. He attended a meeting in the temple, at which Warren Parrish made a violent attack upon the Prophet. Elder Taylor defended the absent Prophet and endeavored to pour oil upon the troubled waters. He was ordained a high priest Aug. 31, 1837. In 1838 he removed to Kirtland, proceeding thence in the general exodus of the Saints to Missouri. At DeWitt, Carrol Co., Mo., he and his party, numbering twenty-four, were confronted by an armed mob of one hundred and fifty, led by Abbott Hancock and Sashiel Woods, the former a Baptist, the latter Presbyterian minister, who, after some parleying, retired and permitted them to continue on to Far West. He was a witness to the outrages perpetrated by the Missourians upon the new settlers, and a participant in the scenes of peril and disaster ending in the imprisonment of the Prophet and other leaders and the expulsion of the Mormon community from the state. That he bravely and unflinchingly bore his part of the general burden of sorrow and trial we may be sure. John Taylor knew no fear, and shirked no responsibility or sacrifice that his duty entailed.

In the fall of 1837 he was told by the Prophet that he would be chosen an apostle, and at a conference in Far West, October, 1838, it was voted that he fill the vacancy occasioned by the apostasy of John S. Boynton. The High Council at Far West took similar action on the 19th of December, and on that day John Taylor was ordained an apostle by Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball. He was one of the committee appointed to memorialize the Missouri Legislature for redress of grievances, and was also appointed with Bishop Edward Partridge to draft a similar petition to the general government. He assisted President Young to superintend the exodus of the Saints from Missouri, and was with him and others of the Twelve when they made their famous ride from Quincy to Far West, prior to starting upon their mission to Great Britain. He started upon this mission Aug. 8, 1839. At Nauvoo he was joined by Wilford Woodruff, and these two were the first of the Twelve to sail. They landed at Liverpool on Jan. 11th, 1840, and at a council held at Preston, it was decided that John Taylor should labor in Liverpool, with Elder Joseph Fielding. He was appointed a member of the committee to select hymns and compile a hymn book for the Latter-Day Saints. In July, 1840, he passed over to Ireland, and preached in the court house at Newry, County Down. This was the introduction of Mormonism in the Emerald Isle, the first convert being Thomas Tate. He next went to Glasgow, and after preaching to the Saints in that city, returned to Liverpool and delivered a course of lectures at the music hall in Bold street. On September 16th, he, with elders Hiram Clark and William Mitchell, sailed for the Isle of Man. He delivered a course of lectures, baptized a goodly number, organized a branch, and then returned to Liverpool. He returned to America with President Young and other apostles, arriving at Nauvoo, July 1, 1841.

At Nauvoo he was a member of the city council, one of the Regents of the University, Judge Advocate with the rank of Colonel in the Nauvoo Legion, associate editor and afterwards chief editor of the "Times and Seasons." He was also editor and proprietor of the "Nauvoo Neighbor," in the columns of which paper, in February, 1844, he nominated Joseph Smith for the Presidency of the United States.

He, with Willard Richards, voluntarily shared the imprisonment with the Prophet and Patriarch. While in prison he sang a hymn to raise their drooping spirits, and soon after the jail was assaulted by the mob who shot to death the Prophet and Patriarch. In the midst of the melee the apostle stood at the door with a heavy walking stick, beating down the muskets of the assassins that were belching deadly volleys into the room. After Joseph and Hyrum were dead, he himself was struck by a ball in the left thigh, while preparing to leap from the window whence the Prophet had fallen. Another missile, from the outside, striking his watch, threw him back into the room, and this was all that prevented him from descending upon the bayonets of the mob. In his wounded state he dragged himself under a bedstead that stood near, and while doing so received three other wounds, one a little below the left knee, one in his left hip, and another in the left fore-arm and hand. The Prophet's fall from the window drew the murderers to the yard below, which incident saved the lives of John Taylor and Willard Richards, the latter the only one of the four prisoners who escaped unharmed. As soon as practicable Apostle Taylor, who had been carried by Doctor Richards for safety into the cell of the prison, was removed to Hamilton's hotel in Carthage, and subsequently to Nauvoo.

He accompanied the exodus, February 16, 1846, to Council Bluffs, from where he was sent with Parley P. Pratt and Orson Hyde to set in order the affairs of the British mission. After accomplishing their purpose they returned, arriving in 1847. Apostle Taylor brought with him a set of surveying instruments, with which Orson Pratt, a few months later, laid out Salt Lake City.

After the departure of President Young and the pioneers, in April, Parley P. Pratt and John Taylor exercised a general superintendency over the affairs at Winter Quarters, and with Isaac Morley and Newel K. Whitney organized the immigration that crossed the plains that season. It was about the 21st of June when these apostles, with six hundred wagons and upwards of fifteen hundred souls, began the journey from the Elk Horn. John Taylor's division arrived at Salt Lake City Oct. 5, 1847.

In 1849 he was called to head a mission to France, and in company with Lorenzo Snow, Erastus Snow and Franklin D. Richards, who were on their way to Italy, Denmark and England, respectively, he set out on the 19th of October to re-cross the plains. After a very successful mission, where he organized a branch and made arrangements for translating the Book of Mormon into the Gallic tongue, he returned; arriving at Salt Lake City Aug. 20, 1852. He brought with him the machinery for the beet sugar plant, manufactured in Liverpool at a cost of twelve thousand five hundred dollars; also the busts of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, prepared under his personal direction by one of the first artists of England. Two years later he was called to preside over the Eastern States mission and to supervise the emigration. Resigning as a member-elect of the legislature, he, accompanied by his son, George J. Taylor, and by Elders Jeter Clinton, Nathaniel H. Felt, Alexander Robbins and Angus M. Cannon, set out in the fall of 1854 for New York City, where the first number of "The Mormon" was issued Feb. 17, 1855. In 1857, at the outbreak of the "Utah War," John Taylor returned to Salt Lake City.

He was a member of the Utah legislature 1857-76, and for the first five sessions of that period, speaker of the house. From 1868 to 1870 he was probate judge of Utah county. In 1869 he held his celebrated controversy with Vice-President Colfax through the columns of the New York press, and from 1871 to 1875 he published a series of letters in the "Deseret News," reviewing the situation in Utah, denouncing territorial government as un-American and oppressive, but warning the people against violent resistance to Judge McKean's high-handed and exasperating course. In 1877 he was elected territorial superintendent of schools, and served as such for several years.

The next important event in his history was his elevation to the leadership of the Church, to which he virtually succeeded at the death of President Young, August 29, 1877. He had been for some years President of the Twelve Apostles. He continued to act in that capacity until October, 1880, when the First Presidency was again organized, with John Taylor, George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith as its personnel.

President Taylor's last appearance in public was on Sunday, Feb. 1, 1885, when he preached his final discourse in the tabernacle at Salt Lake City. He had just returned from Mexico and California, after a tour through the settlements of the Saints in Arizona. That night he went into retirement and was never again seen in life except by a few trusted friends. He died July 25, 1887, at the home of Thomas F. Rouche, in Kaysville, Davis Co., Utah. His funeral was held four days later, at the tabernacle in Salt Lake City.
