KETTENBACH SAT ON THE BED AND CRIED

Robnett Tells How He Came to Sign Confession of Looting Lewiston Bank.

of being a party to the abstraction of $137,000 from the Lewiaton National bank followed him to Pittsburg and there in the Fort Pitt hotel broke down and crying be-red for assistance, was the startling statement made this afternoon by Clarence W. Robnett during the trial of the Lewiston bank case.

The legal battle took a sudden change today leaving Frank Kettenbach, former president of the bank, and Robnett, his bookkeeper, to fight out the pentientiary charges staring them in the face, for the government dismissed or nullified the indictants against William F. Kettenbach, the banker, recently convicted here. The dismissal came as a surprise. Fletcher Dobyns, the special prosecution, said he did so because of the court's ruling that the prosecution could not go lack of the dates of the indictment father than three years.

It was after his arrival in Pittsburg and when he found himself blocked in a bond issue. Robnett said, he met Frank Kettenbach on the street. The latter had fellowed him. They held a conference at the Fort Pitt.

"Frank pulled out a lot of papers from his pocket, sat down on the edge of the bed and burst out erving," said Robnett.

"Frank nulled out a lot of papers from his pecket, sat down on the edge of the hed and burst out crying." said Robnett, referring to Kettenbach, "I asked him slat was the matter, and he said that while he was away from the bank at Lewiston bookkeepers had worked on the ledger and discovered the shortage. He wanted me to help him, and I signed a lei of papers Attorney Babb had prepared conveying my holdings and property to him to help make up the shortage. When the Orehard tract was bonded he said re could nav it all back and I would again have the property."

He identified the fore part of the alleged confession as in the handwriting of Keitenbach saving he had skiened it with the understanding that Kettenbach was to give back his property.

O'HARA AND CLORE ARE COMING BACK STOCK IN RESERVOIR

Sheriff Harrison Expects to Success of the South Fork Can-Leave Michigan With Suspects Monday.

Special to The Tribune. OGDEN. April 14.-Bryan O'Hara and Victor Clore, the suspected bandits of Western Irrigation company at Farr the Overland Limited train robbery now for Ogden in the custody of Sheriff E. purchase stock in the South Fork canyon

E. Harrison of Weber county and Pinkerton detectives Monday morning. A telegram to this effect was received at the sheriff's office today. The message was sent from Detroit. It is expected that Sheriff Harrison will take his prisoners out of the state before that time in order to evade any effort to delay their return by habeas corpus proceedings.

To the chain of evidence which already has been woven about the two men has been added another link. It recently developed that a man answering the description of Clore called at the Browning Bros. hardware store at Ogden several days after the train robbery with a riffe which he offered for sale. Henry Williams, a clerk at the store, told the man that he did not want to buy the rifle and referred him to Samuel Browning, president of the Ogden city council and a member of the hardware firm. Mr. Browning purchased the rifle. Members of the train crew called at the store yesterday and were shown a duplicate of the rifle, which they identified as similar to the weapon used by one of the bandits.

A photograph of Clore has been shown the vote in favor of taking stock in the project was almost unanimous.

The Wilson Irrigation company of Kanesville is in need of additional water for irrigation purposes, and a resolution has been adopted authorizing a committee of five to investigate the cost of getting water through Ogden City to the company's irrigation ditch, which is to fed by the Weber river. The Wilson Irrigation ditch is about one-half mile above the mouth of Ogden river. This will necessitate the building of a pipe line through Ogden City, or widening the bench canal in order to convey water to the Wilson ditch from the South Fork canyon project.

A photograph of Clore has been shown to Henry Williams, the clerk, who declares it is an excellent likeness of the man who brought the rifle to the store. This incident does not tally with the other clew obtained by the Pinkerton men, who claim they have evidence to show that Clore and O'Hara went direct from the scene of the robbery to Sait aske City, but it may subsequently declosely traced that one of the men are closely traced that one of the men are closed that are company and s

The charge in the indictments for fraudulent use of the mails was supported, it is claimed, through the literature issued by the American Hardwood company, which was freely circulated and many of the witnesses testified, induced them to invest in the southern Kerns county lands of California.

The indicted men have furnished $2500 bonds to the federal court, guaranteeing their appearance to face the charges when the trial date is set. The many friends of the indicted men here are indignant over the return of the indictments due to the fact, they believe, that the prominence of all of them, their standing in the state as citizens, and the fact that the breath of suspicion was never directed toward them before, make the prospects of their perpetrating a fraud on innocent investors an improbability. The indicted men themselves, however, refuse emphalically to make a statement of any kind whatsoever.
